INTRODUCTORY HISTORY AND SYNOPSIS

OF

THE BOOKS OF THE BIBLE.

OF THE SACRED SCRIPTURES GENERALLY.

TITLES.

THE BIBLE is the only authentic source from which instruction can be derived, in relation to the knowledge of God; His various dispensations to mankind, and the duties required of men by their Creator. As it claims to be regarded as the book of God, a Divine authority, so it claims to be the only authority. It is not a rule, it is the rule both of faith and practice.

The names by which this volume is distinguished are not wanting in significance. It is called the BIBLE, or the book, from the Gr. word biblos, book, a name given originally (like liber in Latin) to the inner bark of the linden, or teil-tree, and afterwards to the bark of the papyrus, the materials of which early books were sometimes made. The terms: "The Scripture," "The Scriptures," and "The Word of God," are also applied in the Bible itself to the sacred books, as is the expression: "The Oracles of God," though this last is sometimes used to indicate the place where, under the old dispensation, the will of God was revealed (1 K. viii. 6; 2 Chr. 11, 20; Ps. xxviii. 2). "The Law" and "The Prophets" are each employed, and sometimes unitedly, by a common figure of speech, to designate the whole of the O. T. The sacred writings were sometimes called the canon of Scripture from a Gr. word signifying a straight rod, and hence a rule or law (Gal. vi. 16; Phil. iii. 16). This term was employed in the early age of Christianity with some indefiniteness, though generally denoting a standard of opinion and practice. From the time of Origen, however, it has been applied to the books which are regarded by Christians as of Divine authority. The Bible, therefore, is the canon; that is, the authoritative standard of religion and morality.

Of all these titles "The Word of God" is perhaps the most impressive and complete. It is sufficient to justify the faith of the feeblest Christian, and it gathers up all that the most earnest search can unfold. It teaches us to regard the Bible as the utterance of Divine wisdom and love.

DIVISIONS.

The most common and general division of the canonical Scriptures is, into the OLD and NEW TESTAMENTS, the former containing those revelations of the Divine will which were communicated to the Hebrews, Israelites, or Jews, before the birth of Christ, the latter comprising the inspired writings of the Evangelists and Apostles. This distinction is founded on 2 Cor. iii. 6, 14; Matt. xxvi. 28; Gal. iii. 17; Heb. viii. 8, ix. 15–20); where the ancient Latin translators have rendered diatheke (which signifies both a covenant and a testament, but in Biblical usage always answers to the Hebrew, berith, a covenant), by Testamentum, a testament, "because," says Jerome, (Comment. on Mal. Ch. ii. 22), "they by a Græcism attributed to this word the sense of fœdus, a covenant." Were such the usage, therefore, there would be no impropriety in terming the two main portions of the Scriptures the Old and New Covenant, implying thereby not two distinct and unrelated covenants, but merely the former and the latter dispensation of the one grand covenant of mercy, of which the Prophet Jeremiah (xxxi. 31–34), as expounded by the apostles (Heb. viii. 6–13), gives so ample a description. The books of the O. T. are usually further subdivided by the Jews into the Law, the Prophets and Hagiographa, that is the Holy Writings, which latter division comprehended the Psalms, Proverbs, Job, Song of Solomon, Ruth, Lamentations of Jeremiah, Ecclesiastes, Esther, Daniel, Ezra, and Nehemiah (reckoned as 1), and the 2 books of Chronicles, also reckoned as 1. These were designated "Holy Writings," because they were not orally delivered as the law of Moses was, but the Jews affirm that they were composed by men divinely inspired.

The subordinate division into chapters and verses is of comparatively modern date. The former is attributed to Hugo de Sancto Caro, a Roman Catholic Cardinal, who flourished about A. D. 1240, the latter to Rabbi Mordecai Nathan, a celebrated Jewish teacher, who lived A. D. 1445. The author of the verse-division in the N. T. was Robert Stephens, a distinguished printer of Paris, who lived in the 16th century. "The verse-division of the O. T.," says Dr. Smith, "was adopted by Stephens in his edition of the Vulgate, 1555, and by Frellon in that of 1556; it appeared for the first time in an English translation, in the Geneva Bible of 1560, and was thence transferred to the Bishops' Bible of 1568, and the authorized version of 1611. With the N. T. the division into chapters, adopted by Hugh de St. Cher, superseded those that had been in use previously, appeared in the early editions of the Vulgate, was transferred to the English Bible by Coverdale, and so became universal. As to the division into verses, the absence of an authoritative standard left more scope to the individual discretion of editors or printers, and the activity of the two Stephenses caused that which they adopted in their numerous editions of the Greek Testament and Vulgate, to be generally received. In the Preface to the Concordance, published by Henry Stephens, 1594, he gives an account of the origin of this division. The whole work was accomplished 'inter equitandum' on his journey from Paris to Lyons. While it was in progress, men doubted of its success. No sooner was it known than it met with universal acceptance. The edition in which this division was first adopted, was published in 1551. It was used for the English version published in Geneva in 1560, and from that time, with slight variations in details, has been universally recognized."

GENUINENESS OF THE OLD TESTAMENT.

It is an inquiry of considerable importance, what books were contained in the canon of the Jews. The O. T., according to our Bibles, comprises 39 books, viz.: The Pentateuch, or 5 books of Moses, called Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers, and Deuteronomy; the books of Joshua, Judges, Ruth, 1 and 2 Samuel, 1 and 2 Kings, 1 and 2 Chronicles, Ezra, Nehemiah, Esther, Job, Psalms, Proverbs, Ecclesiastes, the Song of Solomon, the Prophesies of Isaiah, Jeremiah with his Lamentations, Ezekiel, Daniel, Hosea, Joel, Amos, Obadiah, Jonah, Micah, Nahum, Habakkuk, Zephaniah, Haggai, Zechariah, and Malachi. But among the ancient Jews they formed only 22 books, according to the letters of their alphabet, which were 22 in number, reckoning Judges and Ruth, Ezra and Nehemiah, Jeremiah and his Lamentations, and the 12 minor prophets (so called from the comparative brevity of their compositions), respectively, as one book. Josephus says: "We have not thousands of books, discordant, and contradicting each other; but we have only twenty-two, which comprehend the history of all former ages, and are justly recognized as divine. Five of them proceed from Moses; they include as well the laws as an account of the creation of man, extending to the time of his (Moses) death. This period comprehends nearly 3000 years. From the death of Moses to that of Artaxerxes, who was king of Persia after Xerxes, the prophets who succeeded Moses committed to writing, in 13 books, what was done in their days. The remaining 4 books contain hymns to God (the Psalms) and instructions of life for man." The three-fold division of the O. T. into the Law, the Prophets, and the Psalms, mentioned by Josephus, was expressly recognized before his time by Jesus Christ, as well as by the subsequent writers of the N. T. We have, therefore, sufficient evidence that the O. T. existed at that time; and if it be only allowed that Jesus Christ was a teacher of a fearless and irreproachable character, it must be acknowledged that we draw a fair conclusion when we assert that the Scriptures were not corrupted in His time: for when He accused the Pharisees of making the law of no effect by their traditions, and when He enjoined His hearers to search the Scriptures, He could not have failed to mention the corruptions or forgeries of Scripture, if any had existed in that age. About 50 years before the time of Christ were written the Targums of Onkelos on the Pentateuch, and of Jonathan Ben-Uzziel on the Prophets (according to the Jewish classification of the books of the O. T.), which are evidence of the genuineness of these books at that time.

We have, however, unquestionable evidence of the genuineness of the O. T., in the fact that its canon was fixed some centuries before the birth of Jesus Christ. Jesus, the son of Sirach, author of the book of Ecclesiasticus, makes evident references to the prophesies of Isaiah, Jeremiah, and Ezekiel, and mentions these prophets by name: he speaks also of the 12 minor prophets. It likewise appears from the prologue to that book, that the law and the prophets, and other ancient books, were extant at the same period. The book of Ecclesiasticus, according to the best chronologers, was written in the Syro-Chaldaic dialect, A. M. 3772, that is, 232 years before the Christian era, and was translated by the grandson of Jesus into Greek, for the use of the Alexandrian Jews. The prologue was added by the translator; but this circumstance does not diminish the evidence for the antiquity of the O. T., for he informs us, that the Law and the Prophets, and the other books of their fathers, were studied by his grandfather; a sufficient proof that they were extant in his time. 50 years, indeed, before the age of the author of Ecclesiasticus, or 282 years before the Christian era, the Greek version of the O. T., usually called the Septuagint, was executed at Alexandria, the books of which are the same as in our Bibles, whence it is evident that we still have those identical books which the most ancient Jews attested to be genuine. The Christian fathers, too, Origen, Athanasius, Hilary, Gregory, Nazianzen, Epiphanius, and Jerome, speaking of the books that are allowed by the Jews as sacred and canonical, agree in saying that they are the same in number with the letters in the Hebrew alphabet, that is, 22, and reckon particularly those books which we have already mentioned. Nothing can be more satisfactory and conclusive than all the parts of the evidence for the authenticity and integrity of the canon of the O. T. Scriptures.

It may be added that the books of the O. T. have been always allowed, in every age and by every sect of the Hebrew church, to be the genuine works of those persons to whom they are usually ascribed, and they have also been universally and exclusively, without any addition or exception, considered by the Jews as written under the immediate influence of the Divine Spirit. Those who were contemporaries with the respective writers of these books, had the clearest evidence that they acted and spoke by the authority of God Himself; and this testimony, transmitted to all succeeding ages, was in many cases strengthened and confirmed by the gradual fulfilment of predictions contained in their writings. The Jews of the present day, dispersed all over the world, demonstrate the sincerity of their belief in the Authenticity of the Scriptures, by their inflexible adherence to the Law, and by the anxious expectation with which they wait for the accomplishment of the prophesies. "Blindness has happened to them" only "in part" (Rom. xi. 25), and the constancy with which they have endured persecution, and suffered hardships, rather than renounce the commands of their lawgiver, fully proves their firm conviction that these books were divinely inspired, and that they remain uninjured by time and transcription. Handed down, untainted by suspicion, from Moses to the present generation, they are naturally objects of their unshaken confidence and attachment. But suppose the case reversed: destroy the grounds of their faith, by admitting the possibility of the corruption of their Scriptures, and their whole history becomes utterly inexplicable. "A book of this nature," says Dr. Jenkin, speaking of the Bible, "which is so much the ancientest in the world, being constantly received as a Divine revelation, carries great evidence with it that it is authentic; for the first revelation is to be the criterion of all that follows, and God would not suffer the ancientest book of religion in the world to pass all along under the notion and title of a revelation, without causing some discovery to be made of the imposture, if there were any in it, much less would He preserve it by a particular and signal Providence for so many ages. It is a great argument for the truth of the Scriptures, that they have stood the test, and received the approbation, of so many ages, and still retain their authority, though so many ill men in all ages have made it their endeavor to disprove them; but it is a still further evidence in behalf of them, that God has been pleased to show so remarkable a providence in their preservation."

But the most decisive proof of the authenticity and inspiration of the ancient Scriptures is that (already hinted at) which is derived from the N. T. The Saviour of the world Himself, even He who came expressly "from the Father of Truth to bear witness to the Truth," in the last instructions which He gave to His Apostles just before His ascension, said: "These are the words which I spake unto you, while I was yet with you, that all things must be fulfilled which were written in the Law of Moses, and in the Prophets, and in the Psalms, concerning me" (Luke xxiv. 44). Our Lord, by thus adopting the common division of the Law, the Prophets, and the Psalms, which comprehended all the Hebrew Scriptures, ratified the canon of the O. T. as it was received by the Jews, and by declaring that these books contained prophesies which must be fulfilled; He established their divine inspiration, since God alone can enable men to foretell future events. At another time Christ told the Jews that they made "the word of God of none effect through their traditions" (Mark vii. 13). By thus calling the written rules which the Jews had received for the conduct of their lives, "the word of God," He declared that the Hebrew Scriptures proceeded from God Himself. Upon many other occasions Christ referred to the ancient Scriptures as books of divine authority; and both he and his Apostles constantly endeavored to prove that "Jesus was the Messiah" foretold in the writings of the Prophets. Paul bears strong testimony to the divine authenticity of the Jewish Scriptures when he says to Timothy, "From a child thou hast known the Holy Scriptures, which are able to make thee wise unto salvation, through faith, which is in Christ Jesus" (2 Tim. iii. 15); this passage incontestably proves the importance of the ancient Scriptures, and the connection between the Mosaic and Christian dispensations; and in the next verse the Apostle expressly declares the inspiration of Scripture: "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God." To the same effect Luke says that "God spake by the mouth of his holy prophets" (i. 70). And Peter tells us that "prophesy came not in old time by the will of man, but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost (2 Pet. i. 21). In addition to these passages, which refer to the ancient Scriptures collectively, we may observe that there is scarcely a book in the O. T. which is not repeatedly quoted in the N. T. as of Divine authority.

It appears from the different styles in which the books of Scripture are written, and from the different manner in which the same events are related, and predicted by different authors, that the sacred penmen were permitted to write as their several tempers, understandings, and habits of life, directed, and that the knowledge communicated to them by inspiration, upon the subject of their writings, was applied in the same manner as any knowledge acquired by ordinary means. In different parts of Scripture we perceive that there were different sorts and degrees of inspiration: God enabled Moses to give an account of the creation of the world. He enabled Joshua to record with exactness the settlement of the Israelites in the land of Canaan. He enabled David to mingle prophetic information with the varied effusions of gratitude, contrition, and piety. He enabled Solomon to deliver wise instructions for the regulation of human life. He enabled Isaiah to deliver predictions concerning the future Saviour of mankind, and Ezra to collect the sacred Scriptures into one authentic volume: "But all these worketh that one and the self-same Spirit, dividing to every man severally as He will" (1 Cor. xii. 11). In some cases inspiration only produced correctness and accuracy in relating past occurrences, as in writing the words of others; in other cases it communicated ideas, not only new and unknown before, but infinitely beyond the reach of unassisted human intellect; and sometimes inspired prophets delivered predictions for the use of future ages, which they did not themselves comprehend, and which cannot be fully understood till they are accomplished. But whatever distinctions we may make with respect to the sorts, degrees, or modes of inspiration, we may rest assured that there is one property which belongs to every inspired writing, viz.: that it is free from error, and this property must be considered as extending to the whole of each of those writings, for we cannot suppose that God would suffer any errors tending to mislead our faith or pervert our practice, to be mixed with those truths which He Himself has mercifully revealed to His rational creatures as the means of their eternal salvation. In this sense it may be confidently asserted, that the sacred writers always wrote under the influence, or guidance, or care of the Holy Spirit, which sufficiently establishes the truth and Divine authority of all Scripture.

THE PENTATEUCH.

The Pentateuch, the name by which the first five books of the Bible are designated, is derived from two Greek words, pente, five, and teuchos, a volume, thus signifying the five-fold volume. Originally these books formed one continuous work, as in the Hebrew manuscripts they are still connected in one unbroken roll. At what time they were divided into five portions, each having a separate title, is not known, but it is certain that the distinction dates at or before the time of the Septuagint translation. The names they bear in our English version areborrowed from the LXX, and they were applied by those Greek translators as descriptive of the principal subjects—the leading contents of the respective books. In the later Scriptures they are frequently comprehended under the general designation, The Law, The Book of the Law, since, to give a detailed account of the preparations for, and the delivery of, the Divine code, with all the civil and sacred institutions that were peculiar to the ancient economy, is the object to which they are exclusively devoted. They have been always placed at the beginning of the Bible, not only on account of their priority in point of time, but as forming an appropriate and indispensable introduction to the rest of the sacred books. The numerous and oft-recurring references made in the later Scriptures to the events, the ritual, and the doctrines of the ancient church, would have not only lost much of their point and significance, but have been absolutely unintelligible without the information which these five books contain. They constitute the groundwork or basis on which the whole fabric of revelation rests, and a knowledge of the authority and importance that is thus attached to them, will sufficiently account for the determined assaults that infidels have made on these books, as well as for the zeal and earnestness which the friends of the truth have displayed in their defense.

The books of the Pentateuch, of which Moses was the author, contain the history of the creation of the world and its inhabitants, the fall and curse of man, the destruction of all the human race save one family of eight souls, the dispersion of the nations, the deliverance of the chosen people of God from oppression, and the introduction of that wonderful dispensation of which the Divine Being Himself was the author and executor, and under which the civil and ecclesiastical government of these nations was administered for so many ages.

And whence did Moses receive the knowledge which philosophy has been so long in reaching through the paths of geology? Was the generation in which he lived more learned than any which succeeded for thousands of years? There is not the slightest shadow of evidence to sustain so incredible a position. It could not be through the slow processes of geological investigation, either of himself or his contemporaries, that Moses learned the sublime truths which were hidden from Aristotle and Pythagoras. The superior wisdom which distinguishes the Hebrew prophet from all his contemporaries, and renders his simple narrative a standard of truth in all ages, was from above. It was from Him who made the world that Moses learned the history of its creation; and in no other way could his successors on the inspired page be possessed of the truth and wisdom which shines as brightly in their pages as in his.

The inspiration of the author of the Pentateuch is one of "the things most surely believed among us." Messiah Himself was a prophet like unto Moses. The Pentateuch is the foundation of Scripture; all the subsequent books of revelation are full of allusions to these early documents. The books themselves claim Moses for their author, and there is no reason to doubt their statement. Their style and composition show them to have been written "at sundry times:" narrative and legislation are naturally interspersed. Laws are given in various forms; for, according to the growing exigencies of the time, did earlier statutes require modification. (Compare, for example, Ex. xxi. 2–6, with Deut. xv. 12–17, Num. iv. 24–33, with Num. vii. 1–9, Num. iv. 3, with Num. viii. 24, Lev. xvii. 3, 4, with Deut. xii. 5, 6, 21, Ex. xxii. 26, with Deut. xxiv. 6, 10–15, Ex. xxii. 16, 17, with Deut. xxii. 29). Had these books been a modern compilation, the laws would have been classified and arranged under separate heads; but they are given by Moses in the simple form in which they were originally enacted. The Hebrew nation has always received these treatises as the books of Moses, and they were read to the assembled tribes at stated periods. It is impossible that the nation could have received such publications at any period later than Moses. And so we find, from the time of Moses downwards uninterrupted witness to the existence and genuineness of the Pentateuch. (See Josh. i. 7, 8, xxiii. 6; compare Josh. xxiv. 26, with viii. 32, 34, 1 K. ii. 3, 2 K. xxii. 8, 2 Chr. xxxiv. 14). To prove that these references are made to the very same books of Moses which we now possess, nothing more is necessary than to make a careful comparison of the passages in the historical books with the passages alluded in the Pentateuch (2 K. xiv. 6, with Deut. xxiv. 16, 2 K. xxiii. 2–25, and 2 Chr. xxxv. 1–19, with Lev. xxvi. 3–45 and Deut. vii. 11, xxviii. 68, Ezr. iii. 2–6, with Lev. vi. vii., Ezr. vi. 18, with Num. iii. 6–45, viii. 11, 14, Neh. i. 7–9, with Lev. xxvi. 41, and Deut. iv. 26, 27, xxviii. 64, xxx. 3–5). All these multiplied references may be verified by consulting the places referred to in the books of Moses.

The same thing occurs in the Prophets. Israel and Judah separated after the death of Solomon, but the 10 tribes preserved the law of Moses, the only religious book in circulation among them; and it is still known to the learned as the Samaritan Pentateuch. The prophets who labored among these 10 tribes often allude to the Pentateuch. (Compare Hos. ix. 10, with Num. xxv. 3, Hos. xi. 8, with Deut. xxix. 23, Hos. xii. 4, 5, with Gen. xxxii. 24, 25, Hos. xii. 12, with Gen. xxviii. 5, xxix. 20, Amos ii. 9, with Num. xxi. 21, 24, Amos. iv. 4, with Num. xxviii. 3, 4, Amos iv. 10, with Ex. vii.-xi., Amos iv. 11, with Gen. xix. 24, 25, Amos ix. 13, with Lev. xxvi. 5). The prophets, also, who flourished in Judah, are full of varied references to the law and early literature of their people. The history and character of the Jewish nation are a perpetual monument of the ancient existence, the veracity, and authenticity of the books of Moses, the man of God. The prophesies contained in the Pentateuch have also been strikingly and minutely fulfilled; and Jews, in their present condition, dispersion, and degradation, are living witnesses of their truth.

Let not the evidence adduced be deemed defective because we cannot produce testimonies that Moses was the author of the Pentateuch from contemporary writers. If there were any at that remote period, their works and their memory have perished. "The Jews, as a nation," says Sumner, in his Treatise on the Records of Creation, "were always in obscurity, the certain consequence, not only of their situation, but of the peculiar constitution and jealous nature of their government. Can it, then, reasonably be expected that we should obtain positive testimony concerning this small and insulated nation from foreign historians, when the most ancient of these, whose works remain, lived more than 1000 years posterior to Moses? Can we look for it from the Greeks, when Thucydides has declared that even respecting his own countrymen he could procure no authentic record prior to the Trojan war? or from the Romans, who had scarcely begun to be a people when the empire of Jerusalem was destroyed and the whole nation reduced to captivity? Such profane testimony as can be produced, serves only to show what was the prevailing opinion among heathens, and when we find them not only recording many of the facts in the narrative of Moses, but speaking of him by name, and referring to his law, we conclude that no doubt was entertained that he was the lawgiver of the Jews, or that his writings were genuine. Diodorus Siculus, Strabo, Tacitus, Juvenal and Longinus, make mention of him and his writings, in the same manner as we appeal to Cicero and his works. The truth is, no ancient book is surrounded with such evidence of its genuineness, authenticity, and inspiration, as the Pentateuch. Venerable in their age, sublime in their natural simplicity, overpowering in their evidence, and mighty in their results, are the five books of Moses.

RULES FOR READING THE BIBLE.

I. RULES OF INTERPRETATION.

1. Put yourself, as it were, in the times, places, and circumstances of the sacred writers.

2. Form as correct a view as you can of the geography of Scripture, of the simplicity of ancient manners, of the arts and habits that existed in those times. The Psalms abound with allusions to hunting wild beasts. Many passages in Job are clear to him who has a correct view of judicial matters.

3. Ascertain, as far as it is possible, the plain, literal and primary meaning of Scripture. Exercise sound common sense. A right use of reason will supersede much criticism, and prove a valuable substitute for it.

4. Beware of mystical and ingenious refinement; do not aim to spiritualise every passage. Real spirituality and fanciful spirituality are different things. The former is real, deep, sublime, and satisfactory, the latter is ideal, shallow, specious and delusive.

5. Seek the literal before the spiritual meaning.

6. The true spiritual sense of a passage is that which is to be most highly esteemed.

7. Avoid ingenious conceits and far-fetched interpretations.

8. Make all allowance for idiomatical and figurative diction, especially when an absurdity would follow from adhering to the literal sense.

9. Always distinguish between plain and figurative language.

10. Never press a metaphor too far.

11. Carefully consider the context before you draw a conclusion from a separate passage.

12. Consider the circumstances of a passage as far as you can; that is, the occasion of it, to whom it was written, by whom it was written, and with what design.

13. Compare spiritual things with spiritual. Never be weary of referring to what are called parallel passages; that is, to illustrate passages: for Scripture is the best interpreter of Scripture.

14. Explain what is difficult by what is plain and easy.

15. Never expect fully to understand all things in the Scriptures; yet remember that wise, humble, devout, and persevering study will be always adding something to our knowledge.

16. When words and phrases are of doubtful meaning consider them well.

17. Do not always fix the same meaning to the same word, for the same word is frequently used in Scripture in various senses.

18. Endeavor to form clear and distinct ideas of the great and peculiar words of Scripture, such are faith, repentance, redemption, justification, sanctification, grace, righteousness, etc. [N. B.—It is to be deeply lamented that there is so little agreement among serious Christians about the ideas to be attached to such words. In vain do we look for peace and unanimity among Christians, while the sacred vocabulary remains so undefined as it is at present.]

19. Consider (see 12) the character of a writer, the state and character of those to whom he wrote, the errors which he opposed, the truths which he inculcated and established.

20. The New Testament is the fulfilment of the Old. Carefully compare them with each other.

21. The historical and prophetical books of the Old Testament mutually illustrate each other.

22. The Epistles of the New Testament are the comment of the Holy Spirit on the four Gospels.

23. The Epistle to the Hebrews is the key to the Jewish ritual, as contained in the last four books of Moses.

24. In order to form a just view of any book of Scriptures, read the whole of it, consider its parts, their relation to each other, and their formation of a whole.

25. Never form opinions from detailed parts and passages.

26. Be content to remain in ignorance, rather than plunge into error, where difficulties are before you.

27. Admit no doctrine as part of the Gospel which is not agreeable to the general tenor of the whole.

28. Interpret all that is said concerning God, after the manner of men, in a way that is agreeable to the infinite perfection.

29. Make no types and allegories which Scripture does not directly warrant.

30. Do not compel the whole of a parable to bear a spiritual meaning.

31. The whole is sometimes put for a part, and a part for the whole.

32. General terms are to be sometimes limited, particular terms are sometimes put for general, definite numbers are often put for indefinite.

33. Sometimes things by the figure hyperbole are magnified or diminished beyond or below ther limits.

34. Negatives are often put for a strong affirmation of the contrary as "not guiltless," i. e. exceedingly guilty "shall not be moved," i. e. shall be firmly established.

35. Questions are frequently put for strong affirmations or negations (Jer. v. 9; St. Mark viii. 36).

36. In reading the poetical books remember the nature of Hebrew verse.

37. Interpret Prophesy by History, not by speculation, conjecture, and fancy.

38. The sacred writers, and especially the prophets, often change persons and tenses.

39. Many truths, delivered in the form of absolute and universal propositions, are to be interpreted under certain limitations and conditions.

40. One principle, or one duty, is frequently spoken of as implying the presence of all religion, for where it is, there all other essential things co-exist with it.

41. Promises made to particular persons in Scripture may be applied to all true believers.

42. Never separate promises from duties. The mind, heart, and conduct of man—the truth, power and commands of Scripture—study them in their inseparable relations.

43. Though Scripture was primarily addressed to particular people, yet its truths, laws, and spirit are of universal extent and perpetual duration. Hence, whatever we read in the Bible, we read that which God addresses to us as individuals.

II. PRACTICAL RULES.

Read and search the Scriptures—

1. With the deepest reverence, as the Word of God.

2. With humility and teachableness, not to cavil, but to learn.

3. With a devout mind, with heartfelt dependence on the various influences of the Holy Spirit.

4. With reflection, as a creature endowed with intelligence and reason. Reading without reflection will communicate no solid knowledge; it can, at the most, only fill the mind with crude, superficial, partial, and unconnected notions.

5. With patience, not expecting to know in a day all that they reveal, or to be in a day all that they require.

6. With a direct reference to personal improvement in the universality of Christian godliness; in Holiness of mind, or its effectual illumination in Christian doctrine; in holiness of heart, of purity of principles and affections; and in holiness of conduct, or walking with God, and before God, in obedience to His laws.

7. With a proper recollection of what we read; as whether it be a doctrine, command, promise, warning, character, event, etc.

8. With so much attention as at least to remember something. Let something, whenever the Bible is opened, be impressed on the mind for subsequent meditation.

9. With a freedom from all bias to systems of human device. Let the one and only desire of your soul be—to be taught of God, to be cast into the pure mold of the Gospel of Christ.

10. With a due recollection that you have always much to learn, much to correct, etc.

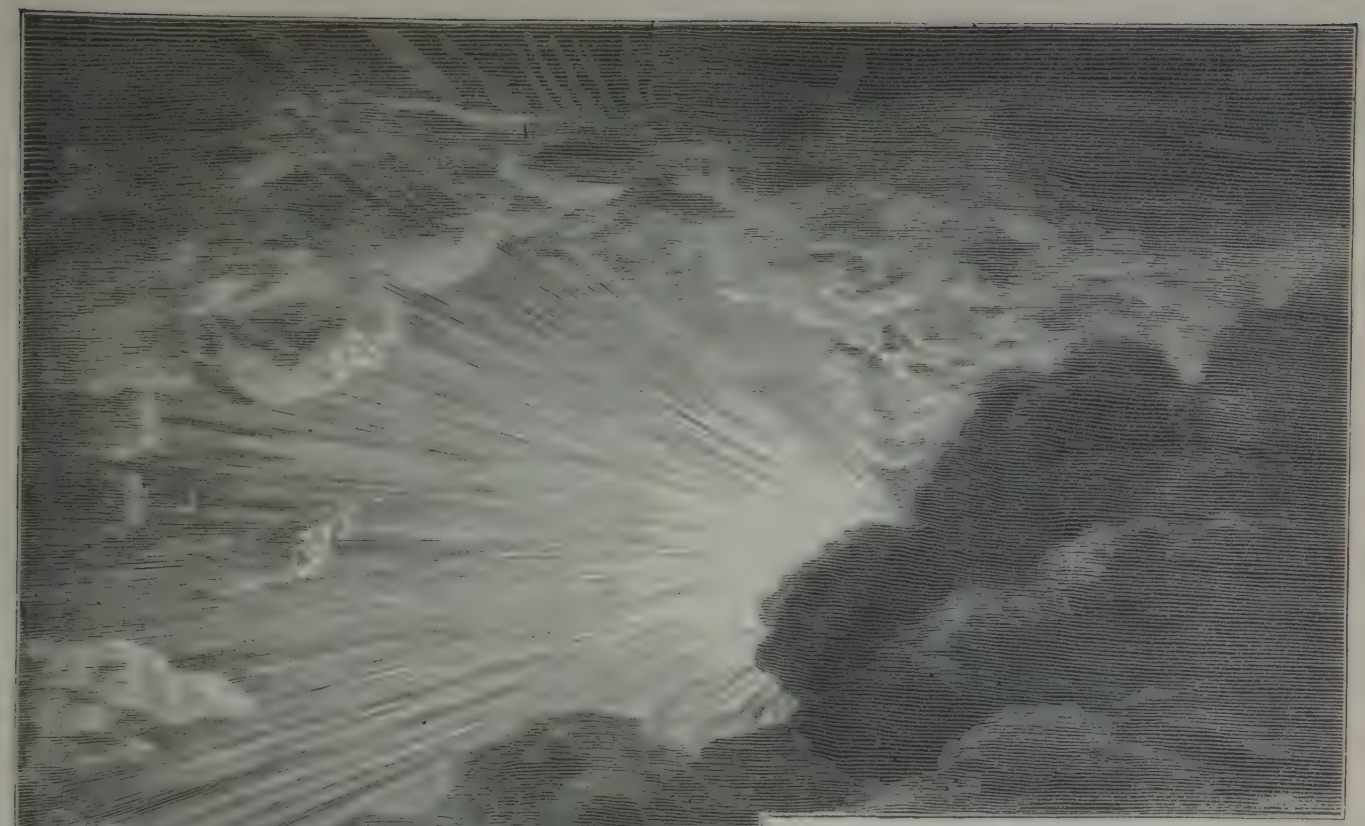
11. With constant interrogation and self-application; what do I know of this truth—feel of this principle or affection—enjoy of this promise—fear of this threat—perform of this duty—avoid of this evil?

12. With meek and fervent prayer to the Father of Light. Make what you read the ground-work of your supplication.

13. With a grateful heart. Always bless God for giving you the rich treasure of His Word.

14. With a just sense of responsibility. God demands of us a due improvement of his gifts.

15. With constancy; not by fits and starts, not at wide intervals of time, but habitually, daily, through the whole of life.



GENESIS.

THE first book of Moses is called "Genesis," because it gives an account of the "generation" or origin of all things (ii. 4). It may be divided into two parts—the history of the world to the call of Abraham, and the history of four patriarchs. It is the record of a period of 2369 years:

From the creation to the deluge, 1656 years.

From the deluge to the call of Abraham, 427 years.

The remainder of the life of Abraham, 100 years.

From the death of Abraham to that of Isaac, 105 years.

From the death of Isaac to that of Jacob, 27 years.

From the death of Jacob to that of Joseph, 54 years.

This book records the history of the world from the commencement of time, the introduction of sin, the origin of the Church, and its state under the patriarchal dispensation. It may be viewed, indeed, as being in an especial manner the history of the Church. The Church and the world have always been distinct. The patriarchs were the heads of the ancient Church, who, surrounded with idolatry and iniquity, worshipped the true Jehovah, and adorned religion by their piety and virtue. We look with delight on Abel, Enoch and Noah, on Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and Joseph—examples for the study and imitation of the good of all ages. Inspecting this sacred record more closely, we see that its great topics are—The creation, the first condition of man, the fall, the promise of a deliverer, the prevalence of sin in the world, the deluge, the preservation of Noah, the confusion of tongues, the call of Abraham, the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah, the lives of Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and in part of Joseph, and the descent into Egypt. Such is the general outline, but there are in this book subordinate agents and incidents which demand attention. In every page we see the wonderful works and ways of that God who, gracious and merciful, just and holy, rules over all things, and is especially mindful of his faithful people. The characters of the pious are here drawn with truth and impartiality; and while we behold in them that excellence which we ought to admire and to seek, we also behold in them those faults and defects which we ought to lament and shun. We look to the groves and bowers of Eden, but these only form a lovely vision that quickly fades from our view. Iniquity prevailed, and in the waters of an awful deluge we see the proof of the Divine displeasure on account of it. The earth is repeopled by the descendants of Noah, but sin was soon the triumphant cause. Abraham is called to the knowledge and service of the true God; and in his history and in that of his descendants we have the history of the Church, then confined to narrow limits. Here we see the patriarchs in private as well as in public life, and while we contemplate with joy their faithfulness to God, their general excellence, we also contemplate with regret their display of weakness and folly, which was productive of much evil and misery. While, then, we see in this book the discovery of the character of God, and the nature and state of man, let every truth, character and event, every development of sacred principle and of human passion and perverseness, be made the subject of close consideration, for we ought always to remember that all Scripture is given us "for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness."

Dr. Thomas J. Conant says in regard to Genesis:

"The book of Genesis (with the first chapters of Exodus) describes the steps which led to the establishment of the theocracy. In reading it we must remember that it is but a part of a more extended work; and we must also bear in mind these two prominent ideas, which give a characteristic unity to the whole composition—namely, the people of God, and the promised land.

"We shall then observe that the history of Abraham holds the same relation to the other portions of Genesis which the giving of the Law does to the entire Pentateuch. Abraham is the father of the Jewish Nation: to Abraham the Land of Canaan is first given in promise. Isaac and Jacob, though also prominent figures in the narrative, yet do but inherit the promise as Abraham's children, and Jacob especially is the chief connecting link in the chain of events which leads finally to the possession of the land of Canaan. In like manner the former section of the book is written with the same obvious purpose. It is a part of the writer's plan to tell us what the Divine preparation of the world was in order to show, first, the significance of the call of Abraham, and next, the true nature of the Jewish theocracy. He does not (as Tuch asserts) work backward from Abraham till he comes in spite of himself to the beginning of all things. He does not ask, Who was Abraham? answering, of the posterity of Shem; and who was Shem? a son of Noah; and who was Noah? etc. But he begins with the creation of the world, because the God who created the world and the God who revealed himself to the fathers is the same God. Jehovah, who commanded his people to keep holy the seventh day, was the same God who in six days created the heavens and the earth, and rested on the seventh day from all his work. The God who, when man had fallen, visited him in mercy, and gave him a promise of redemption and victory, is the God who sent Moses to deliver his people out of Egypt. He who made a covenant with Noah, and through him with 'all the families of the earth,' is the God who also made himself known as the God of Abraham, of Isaac and of Jacob. In a word, creation and redemption are eternally linked together. This is the idea which in fact gives its shape to the history, although its distinct enunciation is reserved for the New Testament. There we learn that all things were created by and for Christ, and that in him all things consist (Col. i. 16, 17); and that by the Church is made known unto principalities and powers the manifold wisdom of God. It would be impossible, therefore, for a book which tells us of the beginning of the Church, not to tell us also of the beginning of the world.

"The book of Genesis has thus a character at once special and universal. It embraces the world; it speaks of God as the God of the whole human race. But as the introduction to Jewish history it makes the universal interest subordinate to the national. Its design is to show how God revealed himself to the first fathers of the Jewish race, in order that he might make to himself a nation who should be his witnesses in the midst of the earth. This is the inner principle of unity which pervades the book. Its external framework we are now to examine. Five principal persons are the pillars, so to speak, on which the whole superstructure rests: Adam, Noah, Abraham, Isaac and Jacob.

"I. Adam.—The creation of the world, and the earliest history of mankind (ch. i.–iii.). As yet no divergence of the different families of man.

"II. Noah.—The history of Adam's descendants to the death of Noah (iv.–ix.).—Here we have (1) the line of Cain branching off, while the history follows the fortunes of Seth, whose descendants are (2) traced in genealogical succession and in an unbroken line as far as Noah, and (3) the history of Noah himself (vi.–ix.), continued to his death.

"III. Abraham.—Noah's posterity till the death of Abraham (x.–xxv.).—Here we have (1) the peopling of the whole earth by the descendants of Noah's three sons (xi. 1–9). The history of two of these is then dropped, and (2) the line of Shem only pursued (xi. 10–32) as far as Terah and Abraham, where the genealogical table breaks off. (3) Abraham is now the prominent figure (xii.–xxv. 18). But as Terah had two other sons, Nahor and Haran (xi. 27), some notices respecting their families are added. Lot's migration with Abraham into the land of Canaan is mentioned, as well as the fact that he was the father of Moab and Ammon (xix. 37, 38), nations whose later history was intimately connected with that of the posterity of Abraham. Nahor remained in Mesopotamia, but his family is briefly enumerated (xxii. 20–24), chiefly no doubt for Rebekah's sake, who was afterward the wife of Isaac. Of Abraham's own children, there branches off first the line of Ishmael (xxi. 9, etc.), and next the children by Keturah; and the genealogical notices of these two branches of his posterity are apparently brought together (xxv. 1–6, and xxv. 12–18), in order that, being here severally dismissed at the end of Abraham's life, the main stream of the narrative may flow in the channel of Isaac's fortunes.

"IV. Isaac.—Isaac's life (xxv. 19–xxxv. 29), a life in itself retiring and uneventful.—But in his sons the final separation takes place, leaving the field clear for the great story of the chosen seed. Even when Nahor's family comes on the scene, as it does in ch. xxix., we hear only so much of it as is necessary to throw light on Jacob's history.

"V. Jacob.—The history of Jacob and Joseph (xxxvi.–l.).—Here, after Isaac's death, we have (1) the genealogy of Esau (xxxvi.), who then drops out of the narrative in order that (2) the history of the patriarchs may be carried on without intermission to the death of Joseph (xxxvii.–l.).

"Thus it will be seen that a specific plan is preserved throughout. The main purpose is never forgotten. God's relation to Israel holds the first place in the writer's mind. The history of that chosen seed who were the heirs of the promise and the guardians of the Divine oracles is the only history which interprets man's relation to God."

EXODUS.

This is the second book of the Pentateuch: the name by which we commonly distinguish it is that attached to it in the Septuagint version, being a Greek word significant of the principal transaction recorded—viz., the departure of Israel from Egypt. The Jews generally designate it by the two initial words, or, more shortly, by the second of them.

In Hebrew Bibles it is divided into 11 perashioth, or chapters, and 29 sedarim, or sections. In our own it is distributed into 40 chapters.

The contents of the book of Exodus may be regarded as comprising (1) historical and (2) legislative matter; the first may be considered as extending from i. 1 to xix. 2—the second from xix. 3 to xl. inclusive. But there is some legislation intermixed with the former, and some narrative with the latter part; we may, therefore, note some subdivisions: I. In the first part we have (1) the condition of Israel in Egypt before their departure (i.), with the events preparatory to that deliverance, such as the birth of Moses and his settlement in Midian (ii.), the commission given him to liberate the people, and his announcement of this to them (iii. iv.), the negotiations with Pharaoh and infliction of the plagues, together with the institution of the Passover (v.–xii. 30); (2) the thrusting out of Israel by the Egyptians, the departure, the passage of the Red Sea, with the song of victory, and the march under the Divine protection to Sinai (xii. 31; xix. 2). II. In the second part we find the preparation for the establishment of the theocratic covenant (xix. 3–25), the promulgation of the moral law (xx.), ordinances chiefly of a judicial kind (xxi.–xxiii.), the ratification of the covenant, with the summoning of Moses to receive directions for ceremonial worship (xxiv.), the orders for the construction of a sanctuary, with things pertaining to it, and the selection of a priestly caste (xxv.–xxxi.), interrupted by the apostasy of Israel, and Moses' intercession for them (xxxii., xxxiii.), with the resumption of the Divine directions, and the construction of the tabernacle in obedience thereto (xxxiv.–xl.).

The book of Exodus is closely connected with that of Genesis, yet it has a distinct character. Through the former book the large history of the human race was continually narrowing into that of a family to be separated from other nations as the chosen depository of Divine truth, whose fortunes should exhibit the outlines of the Divine dealings, to be filled up in the future trials and triumphs of the Church. And branch after branch of that family is divided off, till a single nucleus is reached, to whom the promise of extended blessing was committed. The book of Exodus takes up the narrative of that family so circumscribed, and follows out its development in the increase of a household into a people, in the consolidation of vague promises into an orderly covenant, with its sanctions, and its regulations, and its priesthood, all pointing forward again to something still more substantial and more sufficient, when the teachings of a long minority should have ended, and the shadows of a tedious night have been succeeded by the bright rising of the Sun of Righteousness. Taken by itself, without reference to what preceded and what followed, the book of Exodus would be a riddle; viewed in its right proportion as but a part of the great counsel of God, it is luminous with instruction and encouragement.

The time comprised in this book is generally believed to be about 145 years, from the death of Joseph to the erection of the tabernacle. This is of course on the supposition that the sojourn of Israel in Egypt was for 215 years, the 430 (Ex. xii. 40) being computed from the giving of the promise to Abraham (Gal. iii. 17). The authorship of Exodus has, through long ages, been ascribed to Moses. (See on PENTATEUCH.)

LEVITICUS.

THIS book is called "Leviticus" because it contains the laws respecting religion, or more particularly respecting the ceremonial ordinances which were committed to Aaron and to his sons, who were of the tribe of "Levi." Strictly speaking, it is a continuation of the book of Exodus, in ch. xxv. of which book the ceremonial law begins, and it is continued through this book. Here we have an account of the different sorts of sacrifices and offerings; of the consecration of priests; of various sorts of uncleanness, with their purifications; of festivals, vows, tithes, and devoted things. Ch. x. is historical, and xxvi. is hortatory. The period of time which the book comprises is about one month. Here, then, we have the Jewish ritual minutely unfolded to us. Such was the worship which God appointed for the descendants of Abraham until Shiloh should come, the subject of the prophecies and the substance of the types. In viewing the several sacrifices we do not pretend to assert in what particular or specific manner each of them referred to Christ. All of them, undeniably, did refer to him. The burnt-offering was that which prevailed during the patriarchal period; and probably the eucharistical offerings existed under that part of the Divine economy. The burnt-offering and the peace-offering were of a general character, while the sin-offering and trespass-offering would seem to have been of a more particular nature; but all the sacrifices taught the great lesson that without the shedding of blood there is no remission of sin; and all of them pointed to Him who was to appear in the end of the world, "to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself" (Heb. ix. 26). The ritual sacrifices could not expiate sin as moral evil (Heb. x. 1–4). "They were commemorative acknowledgments of guilt, and typical pledges only of a sufficient sacrifice. They were ordained as an atonement of the breach of the ritual laws, and delivered the people from those civil and ecclesiastical punishments to which they were exposed from the wrath of God, considered as a political governor. They sanctified to the purifying of the flesh, washed away legal defilements, but were never intended to wipe off the stains of moral guilt, or to avert God's anger against sin, except as figurative of that perfect atonement, at the coming of which sacrifice and oblation should cease." On the subject of uncleanness and purification (xi.–xv.), it may be sufficient to observe, in general, that whatever other purposes it might have served (as restraining the Israelites from idolatry, keeping them a distinct people, and teaching them to revere God and to respect themselves), it undoubtedly had a reference to moral purity. Here material things, according to the genius of the whole economy, shadowed out immaterial things. The several offerings, the consecration of Aaron, the leprosy, the great day of atonement, the chief festivals, and the year of jubilee, will particularly arrest the attention of the serious mind, recollecting always "that the whole service, like the veil on the face of Moses, concealed a spiritual radiance under an outward covering;" and taking from the Epistle to the Hebrews the true principle of interpreting this book, the reflecting reader cannot fail to compare the high priest of the Jewish with the High Priest of the Christian dispensation; the sacrifices offered on the Jewish altar with the one sacrifice of Christ upon the cross, the Jewish leper with depraved and morally polluted man, the splendid festivals of the Jewish Church with the simple but expressive ordinances of the gospel, and the Jewish jubilee with the whole period of evangelical constitution (Isa. lxi. 1, 2). If we study the Jewish ritual in the light of the gospel, we shall learn invaluable lessons of piety. God was once worshipped with a shadowy service; but the shadows exist no longer, and he is to be "worshipped in spirit and in truth." We are polluted with sin; the leprosy of moral evil pervades our nature, and the just and holy God can only be approached by sacrifice, only served by holiness and obedience. Let us look, then, to our High Priest, to his blood and intercession, and let us implore the influences of his Spirit; and then we shall be justified, pardoned, sanctified, and made obedient; our Sabbaths will be days of holy rest, our festivals will be seasons of religious joy, and our life will be the jubilee of grace, preparatory to the jubilee of glory.

NUMBERS.

THIS book occupies the fourth place in the Pentateuch. It has several names among the Jews, the most common of which are the first and the fifth words in the first verse, which signify, respectively, "And he spake," and "In the wilderness." The name which we give it is taken from the fact that twice it records a numbering of Israel. By the Jews it is divided into ten perashioth.

We may, for convenience, distribute its contents into three parts: I. Comprising the events and regulations during the continuance of the Israelites at Sinai (Num. i. 1; x. 10). In this we have the account of the first census. II. Transactions in the wilderness, from their quitting Sinai till the beginning of the fortieth year (x. 11; xix. 22). III. The occurrences and commands given in the first ten or eleven months of the fortieth year (xx., xxxvi.). The second census is here detailed, also the deaths of Aaron and Miriam, and the arrival of the people in the plains of Moab, on the eastern bank of the Jordan. A list of their various stations through the whole of their wanderings is given in xxxiii.

One direct quotation only from this book (ch. xvi. 5) is made in the New Testament (2 Tim. ii. 19); but indirect references to it by the later sacred writers are very numerous.

DEUTERONOMY.

THE book of Deuteronomy contains a repetition of the law, with some additions and explanations. It contains, also, a recapitulation of the several events which had befallen the Israelites since their departure from Egypt, with severe reproaches for their past misconduct, and earnest exhortations to future obedience. The Messiah is explicitly foretold in this book; and there are many predictions interspersed in different parts of it, particularly in chs. xxviii., xxx., xxxii., and xxxiii., relative to the future condition of the Jews. The book of Deuteronomy includes only the short period of about two months, and finishes with an account of the death of Moses, which is supposed to have been added by his successor, Joshua.

As to the internal evidence that Moses wrote Deuteronomy, Rosenmuller argues it from very many places in the book, which show that Canaan was not yet attacked, but was shortly to be occupied by the Israelites, as vi. 1, 10, 11, 18, 19; vii. 1–5, 16–26, and xx. 16, 17. That this book is of divine authority need not be questioned, when the several quotations out of it are observed as made by the apostles of Christ in Acts iii. 22; Rom. xii. 19; Heb. x. 30; Gal. iii. 10, out of chs. xviii. 15, xxxii. 35, 36, and xxvii. 26, and by our Lord himself, Matt. xviii. 16, from ch. xix. 15. All Christ's answers to Satan's temptations are from this book, and the voice from heaven directing the apostles to hearken to him refers to a prophecy of him in ch. xviii. 15.

The whole book may be considered as the last address of an aged parent to an undutiful race of children, and the earnestness and affection which prevail render it peculiarly interesting. It abounds with the finest models of oratory and poetry, which show that the mind of Moses, like his body, retained its full vigor. "This book and the Epistle to the Hebrews," says Dr. A. Clarke, "contain the best comment on the nature, designs and use of the law; the former may be considered as an evangelical commentary on the four preceding books, in which the spiritual reference and signification of the different parts of the law are given in such a manner as none could give who had not a clear discovery of the glory which was to be revealed. It may be safely asserted that very few parts of the Old Testament can be read with greater profit by the genuine Christian than Deuteronomy."

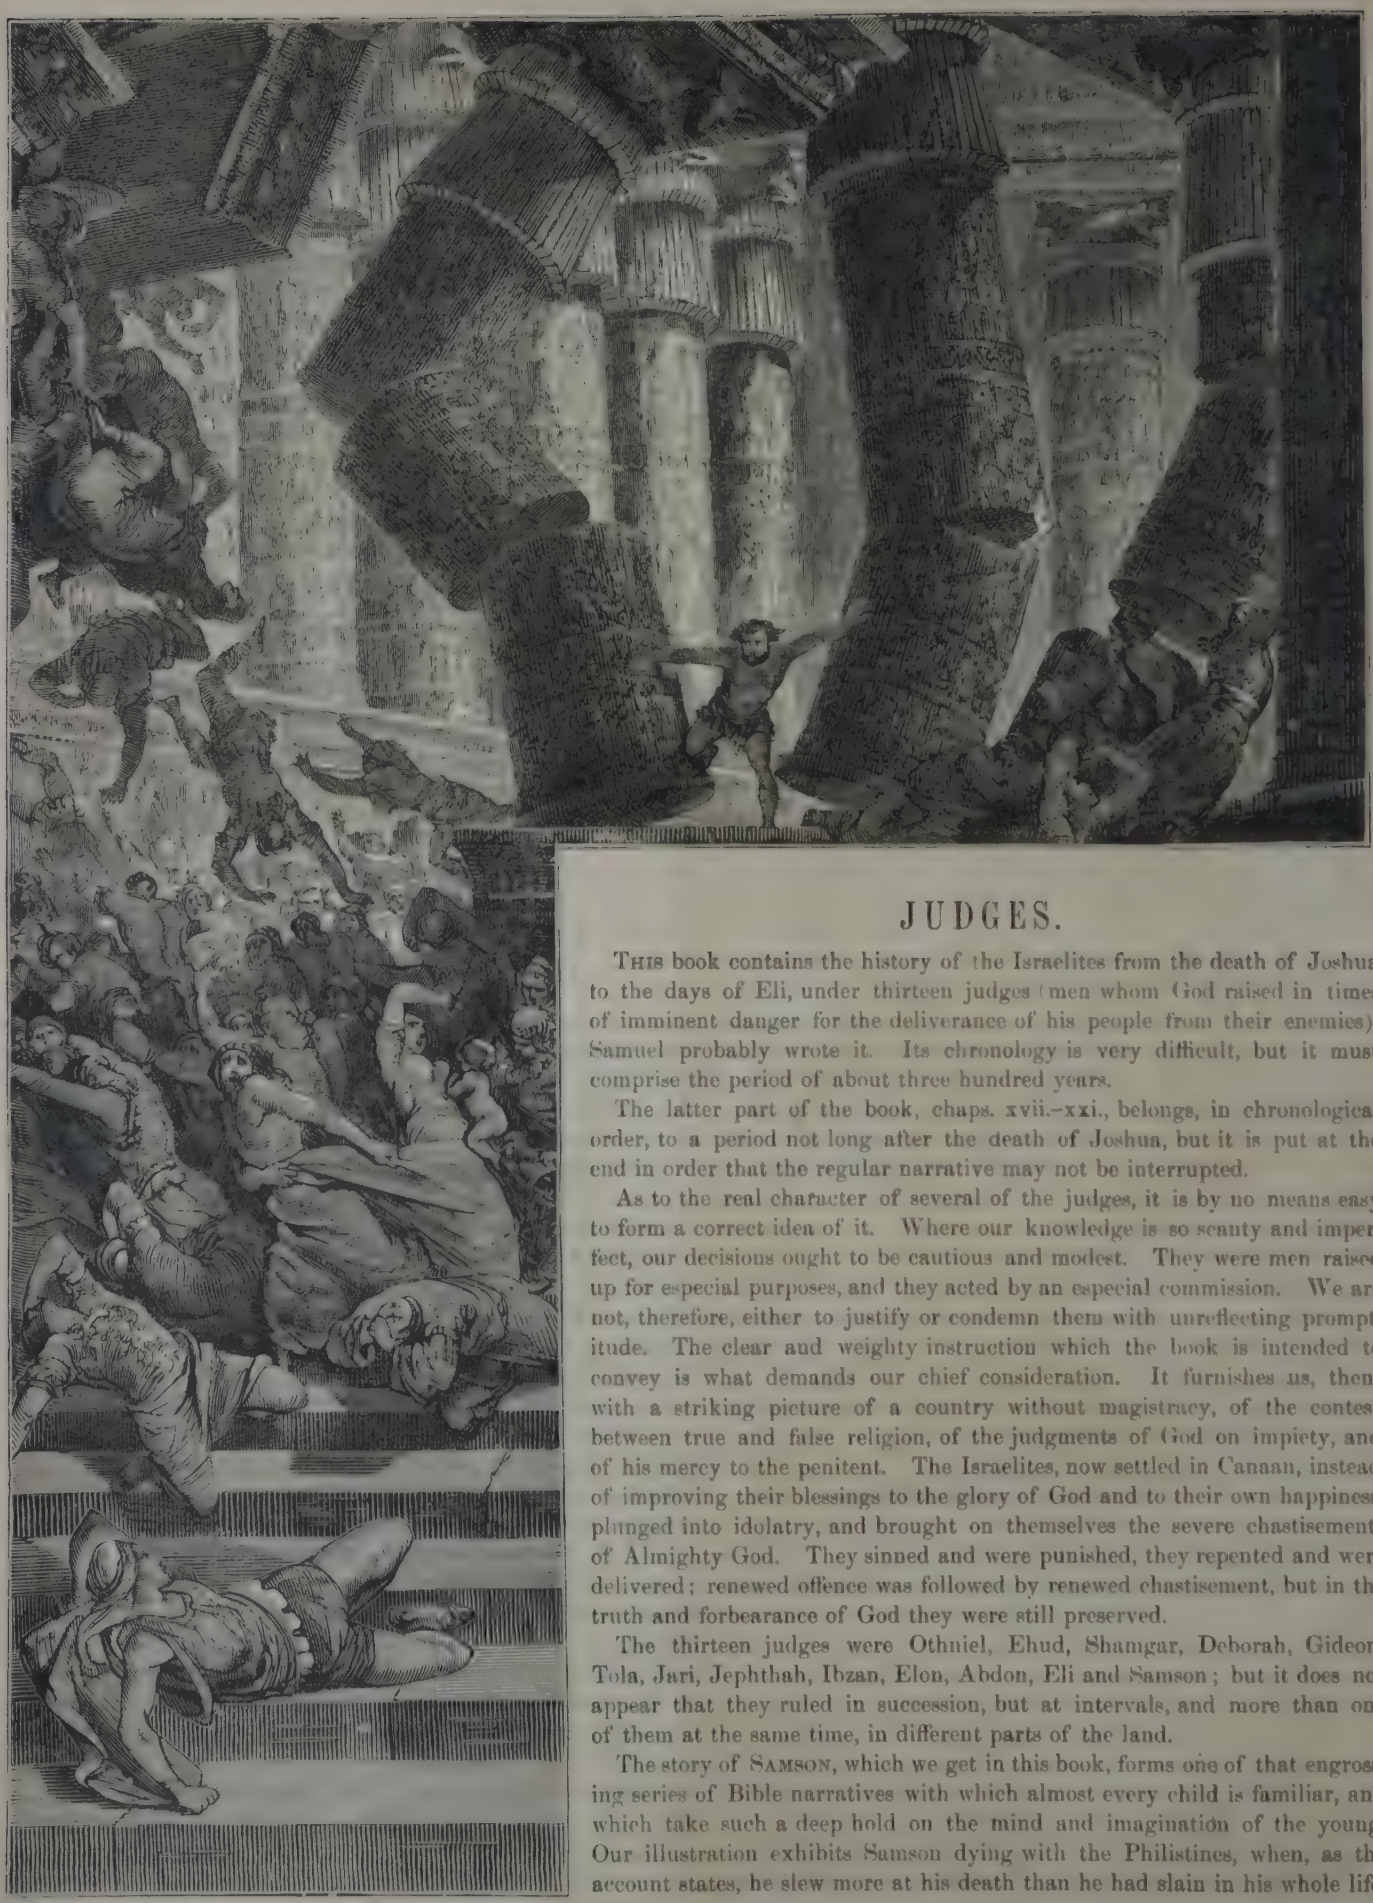
Deuteronomy has seven parts, giving—

1. A summary of privileges and history of the Israelites (i.–iv. 40).
2. A summary of their laws, moral, civil and ceremonial (iv. 40–26).
3. Directions as to what is to be done after crossing Jordan, including the blessings and curses (xxvii., xxviii.).
4. Exhortations to obedience (xxix., xxx.).
5. A narrative of events subsequent, with the song of Moses (xxxi., xxxii.).
6. The benediction of Moses (xxxiii.), and
7. An account of his death (xxxiv.), a period of five or eight weeks.

JOSHUA.

THIS is the first book in the sacred canon called after the name of an individual. Of the books thus distinguished, some bear the names of their authors, as all the books of prophecy; and others, those of persons who act a conspicuous part in the transactions recorded, as Ruth, Job and others. The present book might well be called "the Book of Joshua" on the latter ground, as it exclusively relates to the proceedings of that great leader, in fulfilment of the high commission entrusted to him, and terminates with his death. If, however, as many critics suppose, Joshua himself was the author of the book, it has a twofold claim to be distinguished by his name. But the true authorship and date of the book have never been, and probably never can be, satisfactorily ascertained, and it would be to little profit to canvass the different hypotheses which have been advanced on the subject. The sum of the matter seems to be—(1.) That the book was either written by Joshua toward the close of his life—the five last verses being added by a properly authorized person after his death—or, (2.) That it was wholly written after his demise, from documents penned by him or under his direction. These are the substantial alternatives. and it cannot be very material which of them is adopted, as the genuineness and canonical authority of the book are in either case left entirely unaffected. If it were not written by Joshua himself, a comparison of ch. xv. 63 with 2 Sam. v. 6–8, respecting the capture of a part of Jerusalem, will make it quite evident that it must have been written before the seventh year of David's reign. But it may be safely admitted that even on the supposition that the substance of the book was indited by Joshua, there are, in addition to the five last verses, several others interspersed which could not have been written by him, but were inserted by a later hand, and the above, for aught that appears, may have been of the number. But passages of this description are few and brief, and do not materially affect the plausibility of the opinion which ascribes the authorship of the book to the personage whose name it bears. This opinion is confirmed, though not established, by the fact that the general voice of Jewish tradition assigns to the book the same author.

The book relates to the history of Israel while under the command and government of Joshua, the entrance of the Hebrews into Canaan, their conquest of the greater part of the country, the division of the territory by lot among the several tribes, and the provision made for the settlement and establishment of the Jewish Church in that country. The length of time embraced in this history is variously stated by chronologists at seventeen, twenty-seven and thirty years. Between twenty-six and twenty-seven years is the usually-received and most probable period. The leading drift of the writer is to demonstrate the faithfulness of God in the perfect accomplishment of all his promises to the patriarchs, Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and Joseph, and also to Moses, that the children of Israel should obtain possession of the land of Canaan. Viewed in this light, it is an invaluable appendage to the preceding five books of Moses, and indeed bears to them very much the same relation as does the Acts of the Apostles to the Gospels of the four Evangelists. The inspired historian relates, with all the animation of one who was an actual eye-witness and participator of the scenes described, the successive miracles that favored and secured the conquest of the country, the general zeal, activity and obedience of Israel in prosecuting their wars, with the occasional lapses and transgressions that interrupted the career of their victories. We see the Divine power and faithfulness conspicuously displayed in guiding, cherishing and defending the chosen people amidst all the trials to which they were exposed; and while the general tenor of the narrative affords a striking emblem of the warfare of the Christian in gaining possession of his heavenly inheritance, it ministers the most abundant encouragement to those who, in sincerity and faith, throw themselves upon the superintending care of that Being who keepeth covenant and mercy for ever, and who bids the Christian soldier to "be strong and of good courage."



JUDGES.

This book contains the history of the Israelites from the death of Joshua to the days of Eli, under thirteen judges (men whom God raised in times of imminent danger for the deliverance of his people from their enemies). Samuel probably wrote it. Its chronology is very difficult, but it must comprise the period of about three hundred years.

The latter part of the book, chaps. xvii.–xxi., belongs, in chronological order, to a period not long after the death of Joshua, but it is put at the end in order that the regular narrative may not be interrupted.

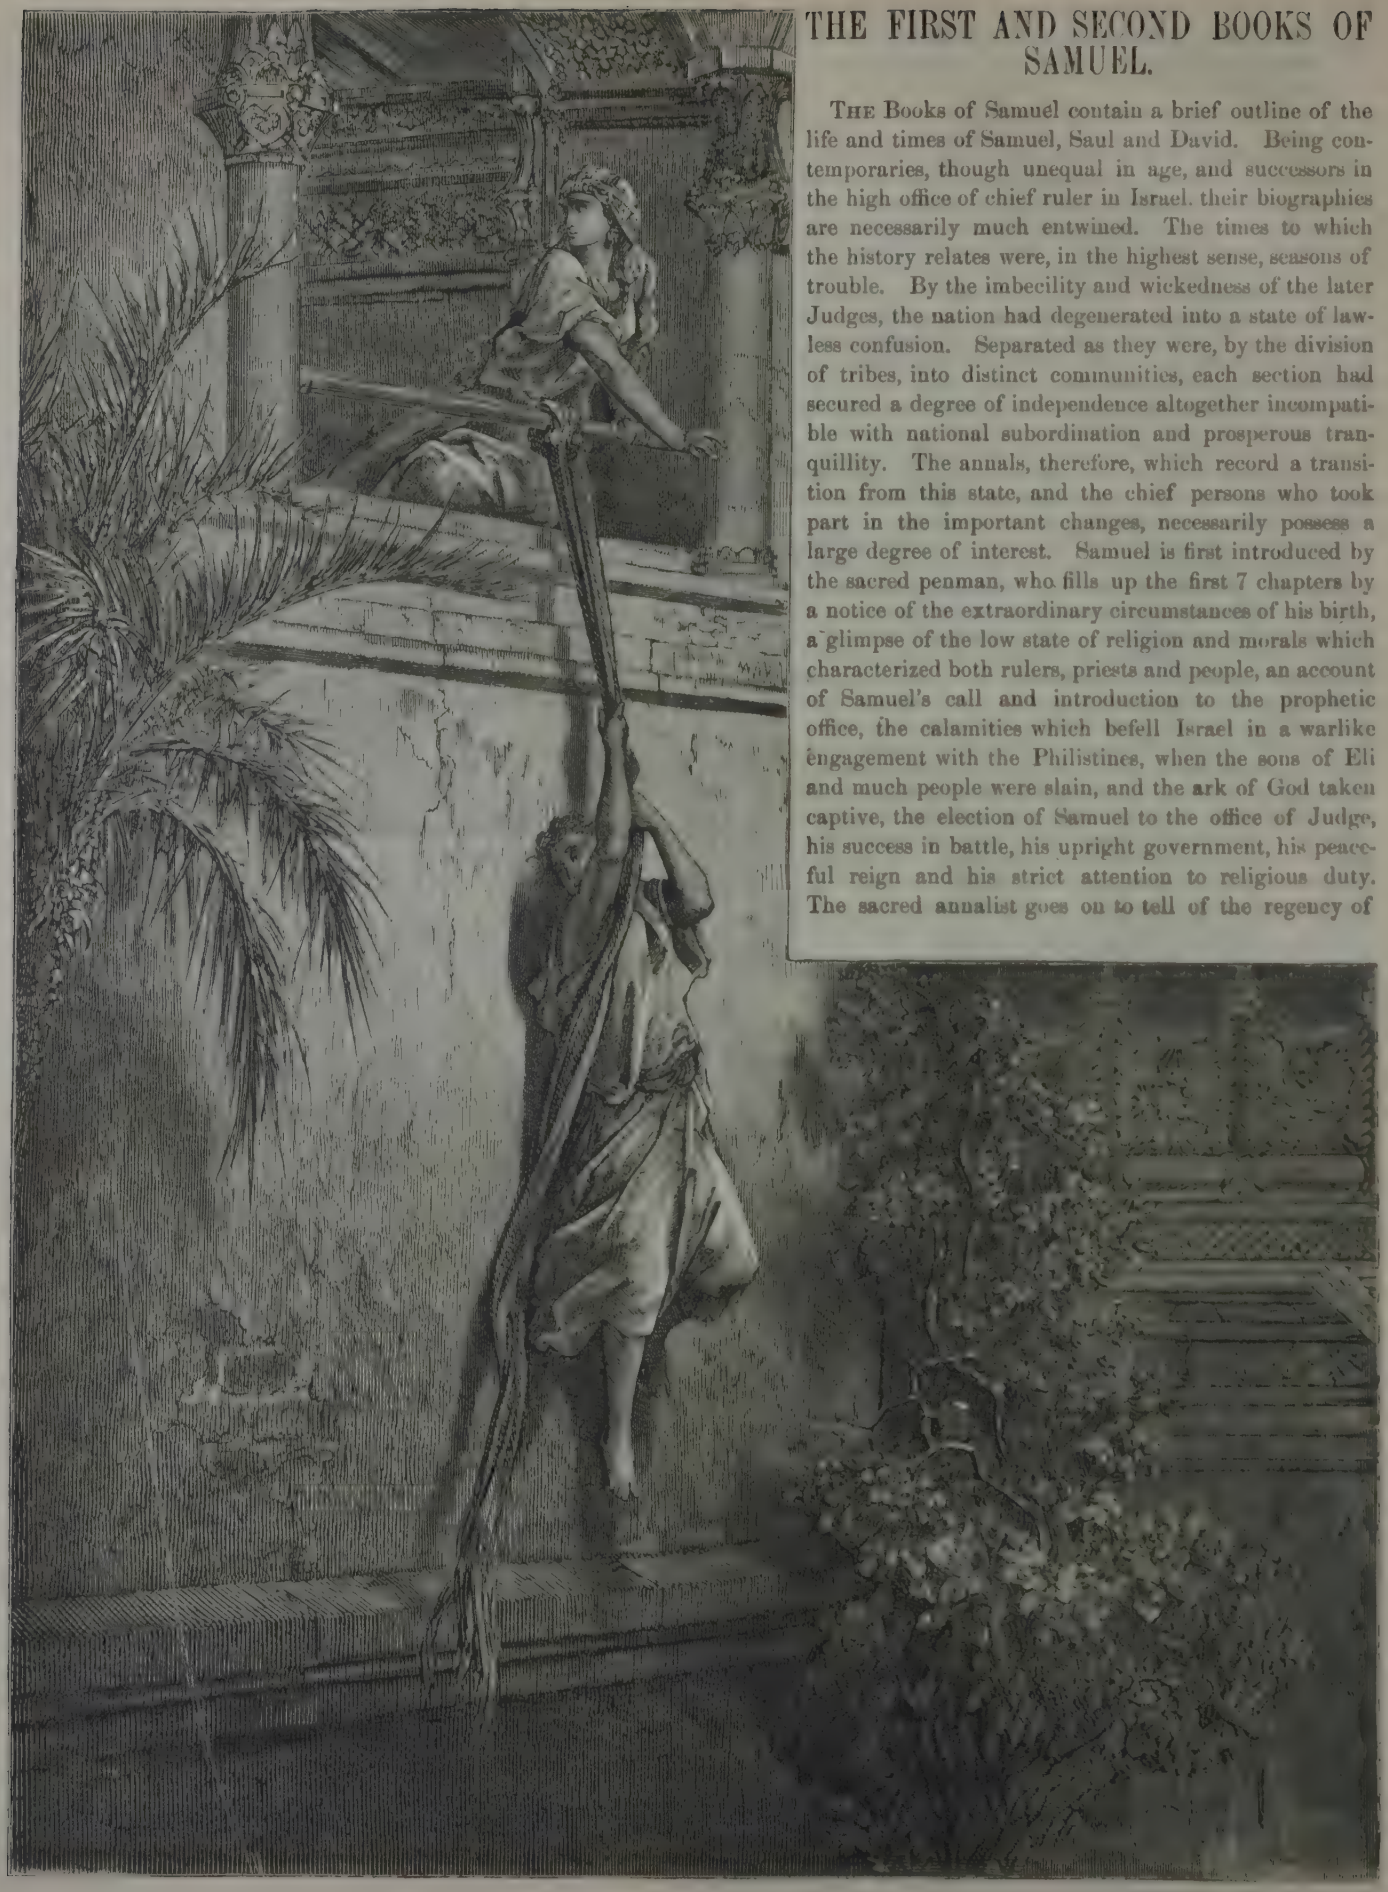
As to the real character of several of the judges, it is by no means easy to form a correct idea of it. Where our knowledge is so scanty and imperfect, our decisions ought to be cautious and modest. They were men raised up for especial purposes, and they acted by an especial commission. We are not, therefore, either to justify or condemn them with unreflecting promptitude. The clear and weighty instruction which the book is intended to convey is what demands our chief consideration. It furnishes us, then, with a striking picture of a country without magistracy, of the contest between true and false religion, of the judgments of God on impiety, and of his mercy to the penitent. The Israelites, now settled in Canaan, instead of improving their blessings to the glory of God and to their own happiness, plunged into idolatry, and brought on themselves the severe chastisements of Almighty God. They sinned and were punished, they repented and were delivered; renewed offence was followed by renewed chastisement, but in the truth and forbearance of God they were still preserved.

The thirteen judges were Othniel, Ehud, Shamgar, Deborah, Gideon, Tola, Jari, Jephthah, Ibzan, Elon, Abdon, Eli and Samson; but it does not appear that they ruled in succession, but at intervals, and more than one of them at the same time, in different parts of the land.

The story of Samson, which we get in this book, forms one of that engrossing series of Bible narratives with which almost every child is familiar, and which take such a deep hold on the mind and imagination of the young. Our illustration exhibits Samson dying with the Philistines, when, as the account states, he slew more at his death than he had slain in his whole life.

RUTH.

RUTH is the eighth in order of the books of the Old Testament, and is regarded as a kind of supplement to the book of Judges. In the old Jewish canon Judges and Ruth formed but one book. The precise period when the events related in it occurred cannot be accurately determined. The book itself refers in general to the epoch of the Judges, but it does not determine under what judge these interesting scenes took place. Perhaps the government of Gideon may be regarded as an approximation to a correct chronology. Salmon, the father of Boaz, was married to Rahab. Between Salmon and David there were at least three hundred years; and yet Boaz, Obed, and Jesse are the only intervening individuals; so that, if no other names are omitted from the catalogue, the progenitors of David are examples of remarkable longevity. Jesse went "among men for an old man in the days of Saul." 1 Sam. xvii. 12. If Samuel was the author of this book, the genealogy found at the conclusion may have been added by a later hand, as David's accession to the kingdom is evidently implied in it. The Jews now place it among the Hagiographa. The book contains a biography of the individual above named and her family. It has only four chapters; and, though there are at its close some highly important genealogical facts, its prominent design is to prove the watchful care of God's providence over such as fear and trust him. It showed that heathen blood was not unworthy at all times of a Hebrew alliance. The details of the book authenticate themselves. The simplicity of rural life is beautifully depicted—not by a shadowy fiction, but in the homely records of affection and virtue. Ancient manners were frank, truthful, and undisguised. This prose idyl far excels those labored songs and artificial delineations which grace the pastoral poetry of Greece and Rome.



THE FIRST AND SECOND BOOKS OF SAMUEL.

THE Books of Samuel contain a brief outline of the life and times of Samuel, Saul and David. Being contemporaries, though unequal in age, and successors in the high office of chief ruler in Israel. their biographies are necessarily much entwined. The times to which the history relates were, in the highest sense, seasons of trouble. By the imbecility and wickedness of the later Judges, the nation had degenerated into a state of lawless confusion. Separated as they were, by the division of tribes, into distinct communities, each section had secured a degree of independence altogether incompatible with national subordination and prosperous tranquillity. The annals, therefore, which record a transition from this state, and the chief persons who took part in the important changes, necessarily possess a large degree of interest. Samuel is first introduced by the sacred penman, who fills up the first 7 chapters by a notice of the extraordinary circumstances of his birth, a glimpse of the low state of religion and morals which characterized both rulers, priests and people, an account of Samuel's call and introduction to the prophetic office, the calamities which befell Israel in a warlike engagement with the Philistines, when the sons of Eli and much people were slain, and the ark of God taken captive, the election of Samuel to the office of Judge, his success in battle, his upright government, his peaceful reign and his strict attention to religious duty. The sacred annalist goes on to tell of the regency of Samuel's sons, their misrule, the disaffection and fears of the people, their resolute demand for a king to reign over them, Samuel's fidelity to the theocracy, and reluctance to yield to the popular clamor, and the anointing, selection, and proclamation of Saul as the first monarch in Israel. These things fill up the next five chapters. Saul now occupies the foreground of the history for a considerable space. There are briefly noticed his early degeneracy, the expostulation of the prophet, and his announcement that the kingdom would be wrested from the son of Kish, and given to another; the choice and consecration of David, the melancholy and distress of Saul, his frequent wars with his neighbors, his enmity against David and frequent attempts to take away his life, and the inglorious death of himself and Jonathan, his son, in Mount Gilboa, where Israel had been vanquished by the Philistines. This last event is recorded at the end of book first. Much of the preceding annals, however, is taken up with the history of David, where he plays an extensive though only a secondary part. The inspired historian tells of David's introduction at court as a skilful musician for the purpose of soothing the troubled spirit of Saul, his encounter with Goliath, his consequent fame throughout all Israel, his subsequent exploits, his dangers and his escapes while "hunted like a partridge" on the mountains by his inveterate persecutor. The sacred annalist proceeds in the second book to give the details of David's history. There are recorded his gradual progress to the summit of power, his taking of Jerusalem and constituting it the capital of the kingdom, his bringing up the ark from Gilboa to the metropolis, his resolution and preparation to build a temple to Jehovah, his various wars and singular successes, and his enlargement and settling of all the borders of Israel. David's respect for the principles of the Divine government, his attachment to religious matters, and his eminent piety are set forth with due prominence, and his faults and misfortunes are not overlooked. No attempt is made to conceal his distrustfulness in equivocating to Achish, his wickedness toward Uriah and Bathsheba, or his haughtiness in numbering the people. The domestic trials of the royal Psalmist arising from polygamy—that bane of Oriental households—are noticed with sufficient minuteness, and the multifarious evils which accrued to the kingdom and the monarch from Absalom's unnatural rebellion are preserved in graphic and striking colors. A specimen of the divine songs of David, corresponding almost entirely with the eighteenth in the book of Psalms, and the last inspired effusion which "the sweet singer" penned, is given toward the close, and the history terminates abruptly, after mentioning the numbering of the people, the judgment which followed, and the becoming penitence of the king and his smitten subjects. Throughout the narrative is varied and enlivened by fragments of Hebrew poetry, such as Hannah's song (1 Sam. ii. 1–10), the "Song of the Bow" (2 Sam. i. 19–27), and David's thanksgiving (2 Sam. ii. 17)—poetry at once beautiful in composition and interesting and elevated in the sentiments it breathes.

The authorship of the books of Samuel and the date of their compilation are matters involved in considerable obscurity. An old opinion ascribes the work to the pen of Samuel, but it was impossible for him to have written it in its present form, otherwise he not only recorded his own death, but very much that occurred after that event. The notion is founded on the words in 1 Chron. xxix. 29: "Now, the acts of David the king, first and last, behold, they are written in the book of Samuel the seer, and in the book of Nathan the prophet, and in the book of Gad the seer." These words by no means prove Samuel to be the author of the books which bear his name, but they are fitted to suggest a very probable solution of the difficulty. It was customary with the prophets to keep a register of all the leading events of the times in which they lived (1 Sam. x. 25), and to such records the passage quoted from Chronicles may refer. Samuel, Nathan, and Gad lived and occupied prominent stations as prophets during the most important periods of the time of David. In addition to the changes in the government and events of Saul's reign, the register of Samuel would naturally contain the chief points of David's early history. The narrative of the prophet Gad, who attended the son of Jesse in his wanderings (1 Sam. xxii. 5), would embrace the leading points in this section of his life, and the writings of Nathan would fill up what was lacking of the events of David's reign and the occurrences of his more advanced years. The works of these three seers, therefore, would contain all the materials of the books of Samuel; and, seeing that the history closes before the king's death, the conclusion is most probable that Gad was the person who put the compilation into its present form. Besides the manuscripts already mentioned, the compiler had before him the book of Jasher, a collection of national odes, from which the "Song of the Bow," and, it may be, most of the other poetic fragments were extracted. It is impossible to say by what name Gad would designate his work when completed, but the great reason for the present appellation, "Books of Samuel," seems to be in the fact that the son of Elkanah occupies the most prominent and interesting place in the early parts of the history. If it be admitted that the prophet Gad compiled the books as they now stand, their authenticity and credibility will, of necessity, demand our assent. The production of an inspired prophet has no need of further witness to commend it to our faith. But, although the genuineness of the history be a doubtful point, its credibility rests on a most sure word of testimony; this is the authority of the New Testament. Acts xiii. 22, Heb. i. 5 are respectively quoted from 1 Sam. xiii. 14, 2 Sam. vii. 14.

In relation to the much-disputed question of the authorship of these books, a contributor to Smith's Dictionary says:

No mention of the author's name is made in the book of Kings, nor, as will be hereafter shown, in the Chronicles, nor in any other of the sacred writings. In like manner, it is not mentioned either in the Apocrypha or in Josephus. The silence of Josephus is particularly significant. He published his Antiquities about eleven hundred years after the death of David, and in them he makes constant use of the book of Samuel for one portion of his history. Indeed, it is his exclusive authority for his account of Samuel and Saul, and his main authority, in conjunction with the Chronicles, for the history of David. Yet he nowhere attempts to name the author of the book of Samuel or of any part of it. There is a similar silence in the Mishna, where, however, the inference from such silence is far less cogent; and it is not until we come to the Babylonian Gemara, which is supposed to have been completed in its present form somewhere about 500 A. D., that any Jewish statement respecting the authorship can be pointed out, and then it is for the first time asserted (Baba Bathra, fol. 14, c. 2) that "Samuel wrote his book," i. e., as the words imply, the book which bears his name. But this statement cannot be proved to have been made earlier than fifteen hundred and fifty years after the death of Samuel—a longer period than has elapsed since the death of the emperor Constantine; and unsupported as the statement is by reference to any authority of any kind, it would be unworthy of credit, even if it were not opposed to the internal evidence of the book itself. In our own time the most prevalent idea in the Anglican Church seems to have been that the first twenty-four chapters of the book of Samuel were written by the prophet himself, and the rest of the chapters by the prophets Nathan and Gad. This is the view formed by Mr. Horne, in a work which has had a wide circulation, and which amongst many readers has been the only work of the kind consulted in England.

THE BOOKS OF KINGS.

THE two Books of Kings are closely connected with those of Samuel, carrying on the history of the chosen people from the point where the preceding record leaves it. They are not separate compositions; in fact, in the Hebrew canon they formed but a single book, in which the author has exhibited the progressive development of the theocracy, according to the principle of God's promise to David (2 Sam. vii. 12–16). This promise is the connecting thread, and its fulfillment is illustrated in the way in which God preserved an inheritance to David's family. In the kingdom of the ten tribes the sceptre is seen passing from one to another, seized by bold usurpers, whose descendants retained it rarely above two or three generations; but David wanted not a man to sit upon his throne continually, a pregnant fact, a gracious assurance being therein conveyed of that everlasting kingdom which should be fully established in the person of David's greater Son, who was to have the heathen for his inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for his possession (Ps. ii. 8).

It is to the illustration of this great principle that the Books of Kings are dedicated. We also have here a full account of the acts of Elijah and Elisha, in which occurs that beautiful narrative of the raising to life of the widow's son.

The sources from which the author drew his materials are exactly indicated. Thus at the close of Solomon's history he refers to the Book of the Acts of Solomon (1 K. xi. 41); for every king of Judah to the Books of the Chronicles of the kings of Judah (xiv. 29; xv. 7, 23; xxii. 45; 2 Kings viii. 23; xii. 19; and elsewhere); and for every king of Israel to the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Israel (1 Kings xiv. 19, xv. 31, xvi. 5, 14, 20, 27, xxii. 19; 2 Kings i. 18, x. 34, and elsewhere). The book of the Acts of Solomon has been thought identical with the book of Nathan the Prophet (2 Chron. ix. 29); it was more probably a comprehensive history compiled from, or at all events comprehending all that was recorded in, the three books named in the same place. The book of the Chronicles of the kings of Israel is cited for the last time in 2 Kings xv. 31, that of the kings of Judah last in xxxiv. 5; possibly these Chronicles did not come down to a later point than the reigns of Pekah and Jehoiakim respectively. We can only conjecture that these works may have been part of a complete history, cited as the book of the kings of Judah and Israel in 2 Chron. xxxii. 32, and with slight variations of title in xx. 34, xxiv. 27, xxxv. 27. Some have imagined that these were annals duly kept by the "recorders," of whom we frequently hear as officers of state, but this is very unlikely. It is more probable that prophetic men from time to time wrote the leading events of their own days (hence, maybe, the full account of the acts of Elijah and Elisha), not perhaps in a regular succession, but still so as to furnish a number of memoirs from which the history of the nation might be compiled before the exile. It is some corroboration of this conjecture that "the book of Jehu, the son of Hanani," is said to be incorporated (such is the meaning of the text) with "the book of the kings of Israel," 2 Chron. xx. 34.

The composition of the books of Kings may be dated between the death of Jehoiachin (the exact time of which we not know) and the return from captivity. The author cannot be identified. These books have always had a place in the Jewish canon, and the history they contain is authenticated by the references we find in the New Testament (Luke iv. 25–27; Acts vii. 47; Rom. xi. 2–4; James v. 17, 18). Modern research is also adding fresh evidence to the truth of the narrative.

These books may properly be distributed into three different parts: I. The narrative of Solomon's reign (1 Kings i.–xi.). II. The contemporary history of the two kingdoms of Israel and Judah from the division of the nation (xii.; 2 Kings xvii.). III. The account of the kingdom of Judah while it stood alone to the period of the Babylonish captivity (xviii.–xxv.). The length of time embraced is about four hundred and fifty-three years. It may be observed that the first book would end better at xxii. 50 than at 53; verses 51–53 more properly belong to 2 Kings i.

CHRONICLES.

The thirteenth and fourteenth books of the Old Testament are called the first and second books of Chronicles, or Annals. In the Hebrew they are called Books of Days—that is, diaries. By the Septuagint translators they are named paraleipomena, things omitted, or supplements, because they seem to be in some sense supplemental to the two books of Kings which precede them. They appear to have been compiled from the national diaries or journals, but it does not satisfactorily appear who compiled them.

The probability is that Ezra was the author, as the history is brought down to his period. The books of Chronicles which we are now considering are not to be confounded with those public records so often referred to as the Chronicles of the kings of Israel and Judah. The compiler of the canonical books of Chronicles had before him all the available sources of Jewish history. He has made use of the Pentateuch, of the books of Samuel and Kings, and of many other public annals no longer in existence. He refers his readers to the book of Nathan, the vision of Iddo, the book of Gad the seer, and of Samuel the seer, the prophecy of Ahijah the Shilonite, the vision of Isaiah, book of Jehu and of Shemaiah the prophet, the Chronicles of King David, and the Lamentations for Josiah. All these were sources of information patent to the inspired compiler. None seem to be identical with any of our canonical books, but were in use and circulation when Ezra flourished. The style, too, in which the books of Chronicles are written, corresponds with the mixed and degenerate Hebrew in common currency after the captivity. It employs many words peculiar to the language of that country, in which the Jews had lived seventy years. In the Hebrew Bibles the books of Chronicles are placed last, and form the conclusion of the inspired volume.

The principal object of the author of these books seems to have been to point out from the public records the state of the different families before the captivity, and the distribution of the lands among them, that each tribe might, as far as possible, obtain the ancient inheritance of their fathers at their return. So that this portion of the Old Testament may be considered as an epitome of all the sacred history, but more especially from the origin of the Jewish nation to their return from the first captivity, embracing a period of nearly thirty-five hundred years. The first book traces the rise and propagation of the children of Israel from Adam, together with a circumstantial account of the reign and transactions of David; the second continues the narrative, relates the progress and dissolution of the kingdom of Judah (apart from Israel), to the year of the return of the people from Babylon.

This book (for both were originally reckoned but one in the Hebrew Scriptures), therefore, in its construction and design, differs from Samuel and Kings. Samuel is more biographical in its nature, while Kings is a theocratic history—a history of the nation as the people of God, and yet forming a human commonwealth. Chronicles is more ecclesiastic in its structure—is more concerned with the Jews as a Church than the Jews as a State. The order and arrangement of the public worship occupy a prominent place. David's wars and victories are in this book subordinate to the peculiar ordinances which he enacted for the national service of God. His preparations for building the temple are minutely detailed and fully dwelt upon, and the only portions of Solomon's life rehearsed at length are those in connection with the erection and dedication of that magnificent sanctuary which formed the most glorious epoch of his reign. The brief accounts of the other sovereigns have generally some relation to the religious element of the government. This is continually kept in view. Under Rehoboam, and after the schism, we are told, "And the priests and the Levites that were in all Israel resorted to him out of all their coasts. For the Levites left their suburbs, and their possession, and came to Judah and Jerusalem, for Jeroboam and his sons had cast them off from executing the priests' office to the Lord" (2 Chron. xi. 13, 14). Again, when Ahijah and Jeroboam were met on the field of battle, the former is reported to have delivered this address: "And now ye think to withstand the kingdom of the Lord in the hand of the sons of David, and ye be a great multitude, and there are with you golden calves, which Jeroboam made you for gods. Have ye not cast out the priests of the Lord, the sons of Aaron and the Levites, and have made you priests after the manner of the nations of other lands? so that whosoever cometh to consecrate himself with a young bullock and seven rams, the same may be a priest of them that are no gods. But as for us, the Lord is our God, and we have not forsaken him, and the priests which minister unto the Lord are the sons of Aaron, and the Levites wait upon their business; and they burn unto the Lord every morning and every evening burnt-sacrifices and sweet incense;

the shew-bread also set they in order upon the pure table, and the candlestick of gold, with the lamps thereof, to burn every evening; for we keep charge of the Lord our God, but ye have forsaken him" (1 Chron. xiii. 8–11). Asa's reformation is fully described, as well as his religious homage and his gifts to the house of God: "And they offered unto the Lord the same time of the spoil which they had brought, seven hundred oxen and seven thousand sheep. . . . And he brought into the house of God the things that his father had dedicated, and that he himself had dedicated, silver, and gold, and vessels" (2 Chron. xv. 11, 18). The ecclesiastical deeds of Jehoshaphat are also brought out: "Moreover, in Jerusalem, did Jehoshaphat set of the Levites, and of the priests, and of the chief of the fathers of Israel, for the judgment of the Lord, and for controversies, when they returned to Jerusalem. . . . . And, behold, Amariah the chief priest is over you in matters of the Lord; and Zebediah the son of Ishmael, the ruler of the house of Judah, for all the king's matters; also the Levites shall be officers before you. Deal courageously, and the Lord shall be with the good" (2 Chron. xix. 8, 11). "And the Levites, of the children of the Kohathites, and of the children of the Korhites, stood up to praise the Lord God of Israel with a loud voice on high. . . . . And when he had consulted with the people he appointed singers unto the Lord, and that should praise the beauty of holiness, as they went out before the army, and to say, Praise the Lord, for his mercy endureth for ever" (2 Chron. xx. 19, 21). The part which the priests and Levites took in the proclamation and coronation of Joash occupies a considerable space, and this king's desire to repair the temple is almost the only incident of his life recorded, though he reigned forty years. In Kings it is told that God smote Uzziah or Azariah with leprosy, but the reason is not stated. In Chronicles, however, you find a full account of his sin and punishment. The crime which brought upon him this penalty was an invasion of the priest's office (2 Chron. xxvi. 16–19). A long account is given of the life of Hezekiah, who had much of David's spirit within him, in reforming and reinstituting the public worship, and in afterward keeping a solemn passover. The period was a revival, not unlike the first dedication of the temple, and so it is copiously and minutely narrated: "And thus did Hezekiah throughout all Judah, and wrought that which was good, and right, and truth, before the Lord his God. And in every work that he began in the service of the house of God, and in the law, and in the commandments, to seek his God, he did it with all his heart, and prospered" (2 Chron. xxxi. 20, 21). The reign of Josiah has, for similar reasons, a special prominence given to it: "So all the service of the Lord was prepared the same day, to keep the passover and to offer burnt-offerings upon the altar of the Lord, according to the commandment of King Josiah. And the children of Israel that were present kept the passover at that time, and the feast of unleavened bread seven days. And there was no passover like to that kept in Israel from the days of Samuel the prophet; neither did all the kings of Israel keep such a passover as Josiah kept, and the priests and the Levites, and all Judah and Israel that were present, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem" (2 Chron. xxxv. 16–18). Now, these sections of Jewish history are either omitted altogether, or but slightly referred to, in the books of Kings, and this peculiar construction of the book of Chronicles, this peculiar selection of materials, proves that it is to a great extent a Church history, and that it was meant to impress the Jews returning from Babylon with the necessity of establishing and organizing anew the national ritual. This purpose is kept constantly in view throughout the entire narrative, and gives it its distinctive form and aspect. Still Samuel, Kings and Chronicles should be read and compared together, as they relate substantially the same records, though with different degrees of particularity, and with different means of information; so that the whole contains but one history, and what is obscure or defective in one part may be explained or supplied in another.

The authenticity of the Chronicles is placed beyond dispute by a vast variety of collateral evidence. There are some discrepancies, it is true, especially in numbers, for as the letters of the Hebrew alphabet were employed in enumeration, and many of them are so like, the copyist was in such matters peculiarly liable to introduce variations. The Jewish history, though reaching back to so remote a period, is precise and minute, and the abundance of correct registers, preserved by families and tribes, and incorporated in these annals, leaves us in no doubt of the great truth that Jesus, according to prophecy, was the seed of Abraham and son of David.

The object of the writer of Chronicles cannot be fully understood, unless we bear in mind that his purpose was to teach by writing history—to illustrate by the past experience of the nation certain important and fundamental truths connected with their progress and destiny. His grand theme is this: religion is the basis of national prosperity—a great fact, to the certainty and importance of which the annals of a thousand years bear constant and thrilling testimony. If these books are read in the light of this idea, their wise and benignant aim will be warmly admired. Let the reader as he studies them prefix to them this motto: "Righteousness exalteth a nation, but sin is the reproach of any people;" and he will find them not a dry detail and dull catalogue, but verily "profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction and for instruction in righteousness."

The following useful table, taken from De Wette's Introduction, may facilitate the study and collation of these three books:

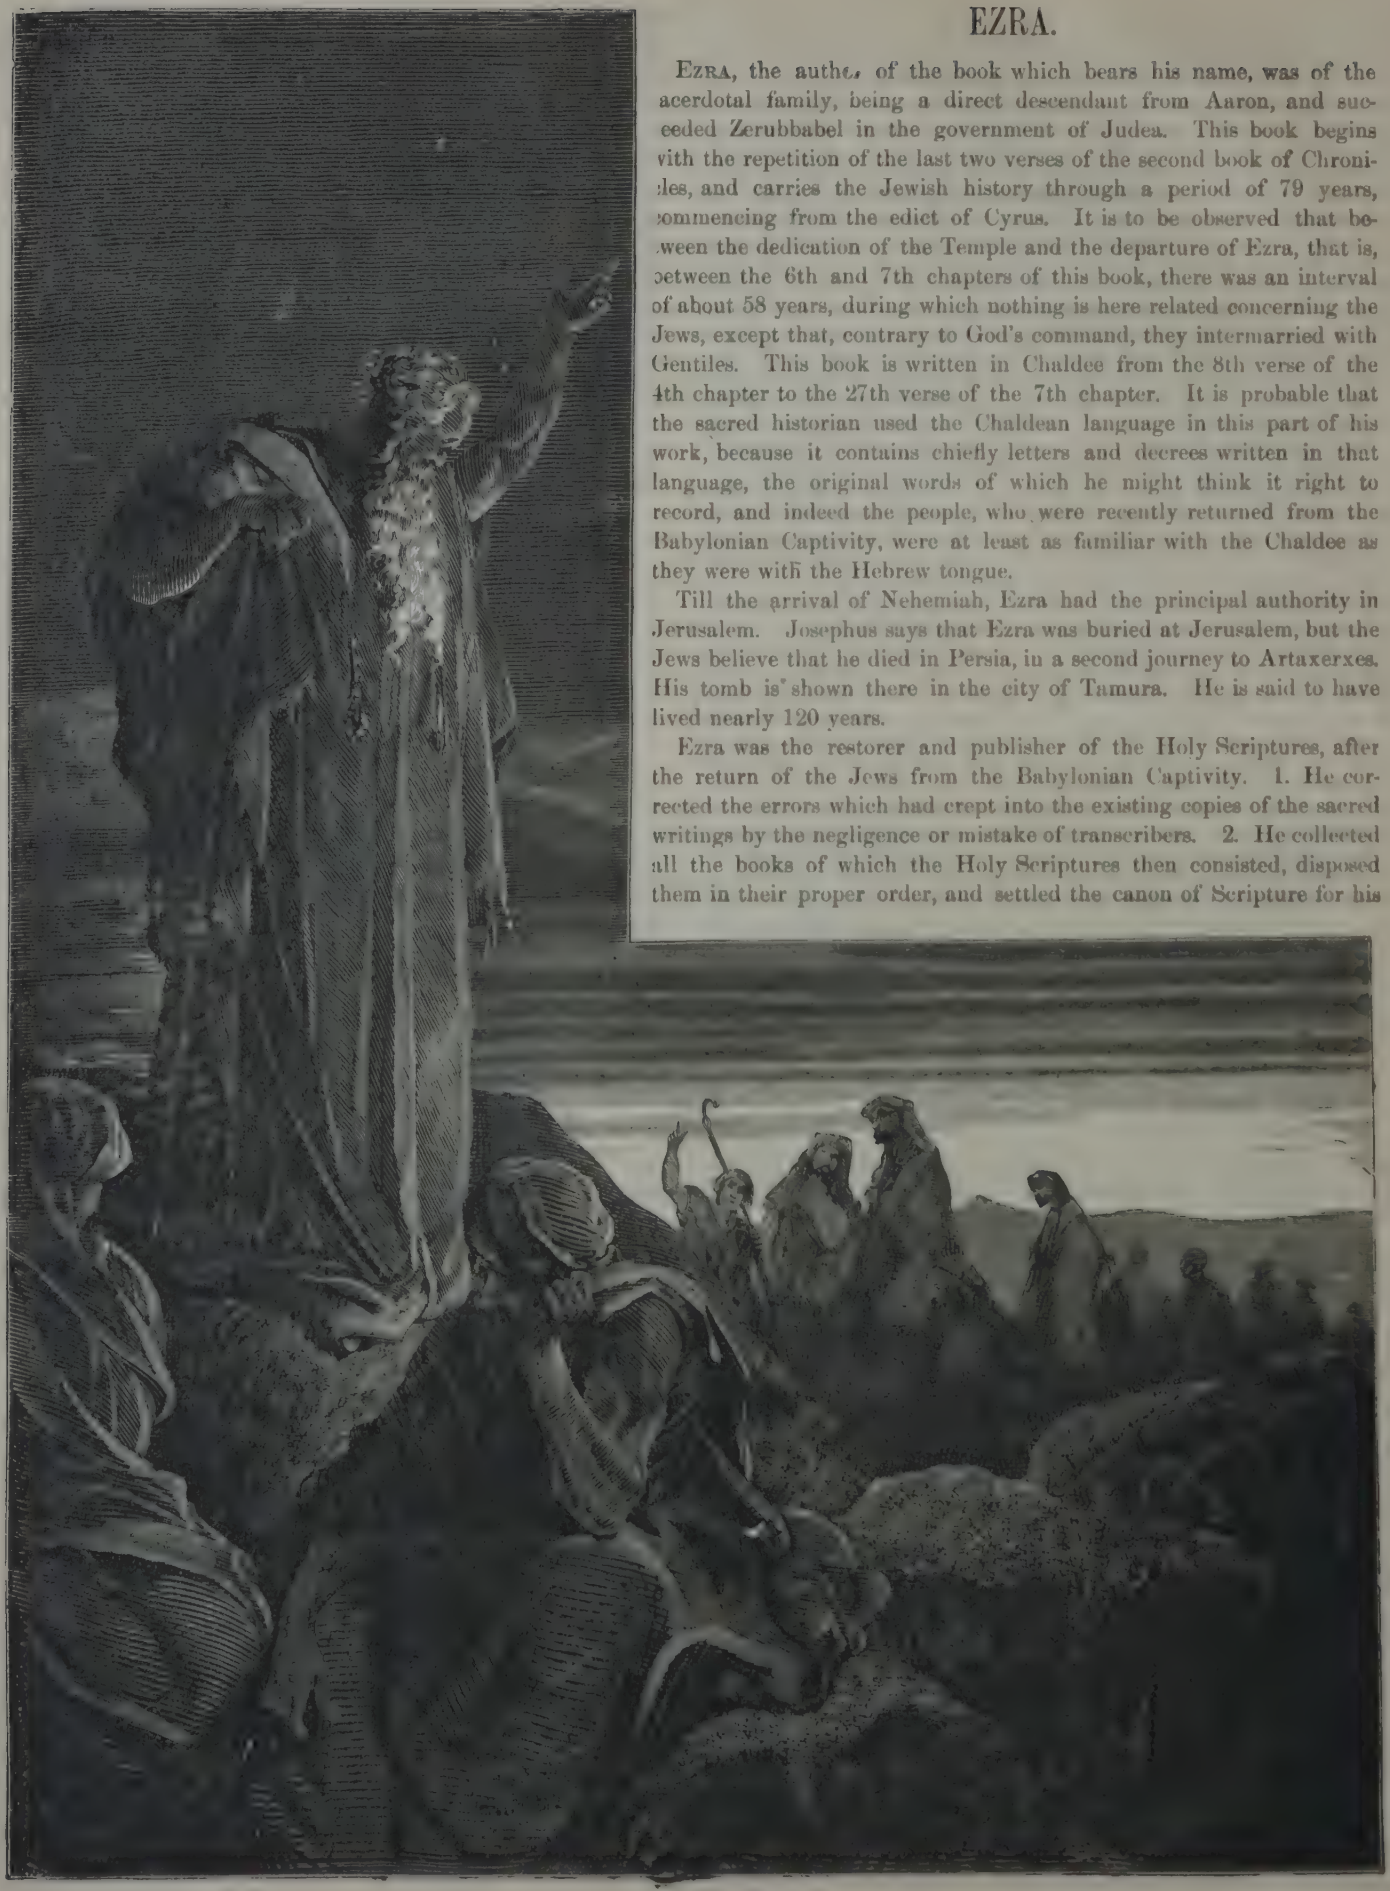
EZRA.



Ezra, the author of the book which bears his name, was of the sacerdotal family, being a direct descendant from Aaron, and succeeded Zerubbabel in the government of Judea. This book begins with the repetition of the last two verses of the second book of Chronicles, and carries the Jewish history through a period of 79 years, commencing from the edict of Cyrus. It is to be observed that between the dedication of the Temple and the departure of Ezra, that is, between the 6th and 7th chapters of this book, there was an interval of about 58 years, during which nothing is here related concerning the Jews, except that, contrary to God's command, they intermarried with Gentiles. This book is written in Chaldee from the 8th verse of the 4th chapter to the 27th verse of the 7th chapter. It is probable that the sacred historian used the Chaldean language in this part of his work, because it contains chiefly letters and decrees written in that language, the original words of which he might think it right to record, and indeed the people, who were recently returned from the Babylonian Captivity, were at least as familiar with the Chaldee as they were with the Hebrew tongue.

Till the arrival of Nehemiah, Ezra had the principal authority in Jerusalem. Josephus says that Ezra was buried at Jerusalem, but the Jews believe that he died in Persia, in a second journey to Artaxerxes. His tomb is shown there in the city of Tamura. He is said to have lived nearly 120 years.

Ezra was the restorer and publisher of the Holy Scriptures, after the return of the Jews from the Babylonian Captivity. 1. He corrected the errors which had crept into the existing copies of the sacred writings by the negligence or mistake of transcribers. 2. He collected all the books of which the Holy Scriptures then consisted, disposed them in their proper order, and settled the canon of Scripture for his time. 3. He added throughout the books of his edition what appeared necessary for illustrating, connecting or completing them, and of this we have an instance in the account of the death and burial of Moses, in the last chapter of Deuteronomy. In this work he was assisted by the same Spirit by which they were at first written. 4. He changed the ancient names of several places become obsolete, and substituted for them new names, by which they were at that time called. 5. He wrote out the whole in the Chaldee character, that language having grown into use after the Babylonish captivity. The Jews have an extraordinary esteem for Ezra, and say that if the law had not been given by Moses, Ezra deserved to have been the legislator of the Hebrews.

NEHEMIAH.

NEHEMIAH professes himself the author of the book which bears his name, in the very beginning of it, and he uniformly writes in the first person. He was of the tribe of Judah, and was probably born at Babylon during the captivity. He was so distinguished for his family and attainments as to be selected for the office of cupbearer to the king of Persia, a situation of great honor and emolument. He was made governor of Judea, upon his own application, by Artaxerxes Longimanus, and this book, which in the Hebrew canon was joined to that of Ezra, gives an account of his appointment and administration through a space of about thirty-six years to A. M. 3595, at which time the Scripture history closes; and consequently these historical books, from Joshua to Nehemiah inclusive, contain the history of the Jewish people from the death of Moses, A. M. 2553, to the reformation established by Nehemiah, after the return from captivity, being a period of ten hundred and forty-two years.

Nehemiah presents a noble example of true patriotism, founded on the fear of God (v. 15) and seeking the religious welfare of the state. His respect for the Divine law, his reverence for the Sabbath (xiii. 18), his devout acknowledgment of God in all things (i., ii. 2, 18), his practical perception of God's character (iv. 14, ix. 6–33), his union of watchfulness and prayer (iv. 9, 20), his humility in ascribing all good in himself to the grace of God (ii. 12, vii. 5), are all highly commendable. In the ninth chapter we have an instructive summary of the history of the Jews, in its most important light, showing at once what God is and what men are. Few books, indeed, of the Bible contain a richer illustration of divine philosophy—that is, of true religion taught by example.

"Nehemiah's great work was rebuilding, for the first time since their destruction by Nebuzar-adan, the walls of Jerusalem, and restoring that city to its former state and dignity as a fortified town. It is impossible to over-estimate the importance to the future political and ecclesiastical prosperity of the Jewish nation of this great achievement of their patriotic governor. How low the community of the Palestine Jews had fallen is apparent from the fact that from the sixth of Darius to the seventh of Artaxerxes there is no history of them whatever, and that even after Ezra's commission, and the ample grants made by Artaxerxes in his seventh year, and the considerable reinforcements, both in wealth and numbers, which Ezra's government brought to them, they were in a state of abject 'affliction and reproach' in the twentieth of Artaxerxes—their country pillaged, their citizens kidnapped and made slaves of by their heathen neighbors, robbery and murder rife in their very capital, Jerusalem almost deserted and the temple falling again into decay. The one step which could resuscitate the nation, preserve the Mosaic institutions and lay the foundation of future independence was the restoration of the city walls. Jerusalem being once again secure from the attacks of the marauding heathen, civil government would become possible, the spirit of the people and their attachment to the ancient capital of the monarchy would revive, the priests and Levites would be encouraged to come into residence, the tithes and first-fruits and other stores would be safe, and Judah, if not actually independent, would preserve the essentials of national and religious life. To this great object, therefore, Nehemiah directed his whole energies without an hour's unnecessary delay. By word and example he induced the whole population, with the single exception of the Tekoite nobles, to commence building with the utmost vigor, even the lukewarm high priest Eliashib performing his part. In a wonderfully short time the walls seemed to emerge from the heaps of burnt rubbish and to encircle the city as in the days of old. The gateways also were rebuilt and ready for the doors to be hung upon them. But it soon became apparent how wisely Nehemiah had acted in hastening on the work. On his very first arrival as governor, Sanballat and Tobiah had given unequivocal proof of their mortification at his appointment, and before the work was even commenced had scornfully asked whether he intended to rebel against the king of Persia. But when the restoration was seen to be rapidly progressing, their indignation knew no bounds; they not only poured out a torrent of abuse and contempt upon all engaged in the work, but actually made a great conspiracy to fall upon the builders with an armed force and put a stop to the undertaking. The project was defeated by the vigilance and prudence of Nehemiah, who armed all the people after their families, and showed such a strong front that their enemies dared not attack them. This armed attitude was continued from that day forward. Various stratagems were then resorted to to get Nehemiah away from Jerusalem and, if possible, to take his life; but that which most nearly succeeded was the attempt to bring him into suspicion with the king of Persia, as if he intended to set himself up for an independent king as soon as the walls were completed. Accordingly, a double line of action was taken. On the one hand, Sanballat wrote a letter to Nehemiah in an apparently friendly tone, telling him, on the authority of Geshem, that it was reported among the heathen (i.e., the heathen nations settled in Samaria and Galilee of the nations) that he was about to head a rebellion of the Jews, and that he had appointed prophets to aid in the design by prophesying of him, "Thou art the king of Judah," and that he was building the walls for this purpose. This was sure, he added, to come to the ears of the king of Persia, and he invited Nehemiah to confer with him as to what should be done. At the same time he had also bribed Noadiah the prophetess and other prophets to induce Nehemiah, by representations of his being in danger, to take refuge in the fortress of the temple, with a view to cause delay and also to give an appearance of conscious guilt. While this portion of the plot was conducted by Sanballat and Tobiah, a yet more important line of action was pursued in concert with them by the chief officers of the king of Persia in Samaria. In a letter addressed to Artaxerxes they represented that the Jews had rebuilt the walls of Jerusalem with the intent of rebelling against the king's authority and recovering their dominion on 'this side the river.' This artful letter so far wrought upon Artaxerxes that he issued a decree stopping the work till further orders. The sequel, however, shows that his perfect integrity was apparent to the king, for after a delay, perhaps of several years, he was permitted to return to Jerusalem, and to crown his work by repairing the temple and dedicating the walls. What, however, we have here to notice is, that owing to Nehemiah's wise haste and his refusal to pause for a day in his work, in spite of threats, plots and insinuations, the designs of his enemies were frustrated."

ESTHER.

This book is so termed because Esther is the principal figure in it, not from any notion that she wrote it. It has generally been held in high estimation among the Jews, who class it with Ruth, Ecclesiastes, Solomon's Song and the Lamentations, as the five megilloth or rolls, and solemnly read it at the feast of Purim.

With regard to the writer of this book nothing certain can be said. Some have ascribed it to Mordecai, or to Mordecai and Esther jointly, grounding their notion on Esther ix. 20, 23, 32; but the statements there made refer not to the authorship of the book, but to the circular letter sent to the Jews. That it was written by a resident in Persia may very well be allowed. There is a thorough acquaintance evinced with Persian customs (see i. 1, 10, 14, 19; ii. 9; iii. 7, 12, 15; iv. 11; viii. 8). The diction closely resembles that of Ezra and Nehemiah, mixed with some Persisms, just such as we might suppose a contemporary of theirs likely to use. The arguments employed by some critics to bring the composition down to a late date, grounded on the language, are therefore of little weight. Neither is the alleged spirit of revenge pervading the narrative, nor the supposed formalism in religion, worth mentioning. The spirit of revenge is not in the writer, but, if anywhere, in the persons whose deeds are chronicled; and as revengeful deeds have been committed in all ages, the occurrence of them cannot be taken as a chronological mark. Neither is more stress laid on fasting than in other times of Hebrew history. Comp. Judg. xx. 26; 2 Sam. xii. 16, 17, 21, 22. The composition, therefore, of the book may most reasonably be placed about or soon after the time when the facts occurred. But there is one great peculiarity of the history; the name of God does not occur in it. Various hypotheses have been devised to explain this fact. A very probable one is that, as the history of the reigns of Persian kings was duly chronicled (Esth. ii. 23, vi. 1, x. 2), and the events here narrated were of course recorded in the annals of the empire, this book may be a translated extract from those annals. There would be nothing more strange in such an extract being preserved in the sacred canon than in Dan. iv., being, as it is, a decree of Nebuchadnezzar.

The contents of this book may be thus stated:

It relates to the royal feast of Ahasuerus and the divorce of Vashti, ch. i. The elevation of Esther to the Persian throne, and the service rendered to the king by Mordecai in detecting a plot against his life, ii. The promotion of Haman and his purposed destruction of the Jews, iii. The consequent affliction of the Jews and the measures taken by them, iv. The defeat of Haman's plot against Mordecai through the instrumentality of Esther, the honor done to Mordecai, and the execution of Haman, v., vi., vii. The defeat of Haman's general plot against the Jews, the institution of the festival of Purim in commemoration of this deliverance, and Mordecai's advancement, viii., ix., x.

The book of Esther shows how these Jews, though scattered among the heathen, were preserved, even when doomed by others to destruction. Though the name of God is not found in the book, his hand is plainly seen, anticipating threatened evil, defeating and overruling it to the greater good of the Jews, and even of the heathen, i. 2, 4–10. Nor was it the safety of the Jews in Babylon only that was in peril: if Haman had succeeded, as the power of Persia was then supreme at Jerusalem and throughout Asia, the Jews throughout the world must have perished, and with them the whole of the visible Church of God.

Mark and admire the providence of God, using what seems the most trifling circumstance to accomplish his will (vi.). Mark also the faith of Mordecai, whose fear of the unalterable Persian decree was less than his trust in the faithfulness of God, iv. 14. Though he knew not how, he foresaw indemnity to Israel, and he asks the aid of Esther, rather for her honor than for their deliverance.

THE BOOK OF JOB.

It has been supposed by some that the book of Job is an allegory, not a real narrative, on account of the artificial character of many of its statements. But the sacred numbers, three and seven, often occur. He had seven thousand sheep, seven sons, both before and after his trials; his three friends sit down with him seven days and seven nights; both before and after his trials he had three daughters. So also the number and form of the speeches of the several speakers seem to be artificial. The name of Job, too, is derived from an Arabic word signifying repentance.

But Ezra (xiv. 14) speaks of "Job" in conjunction with "Noah and Daniel," real persons. James (v. 11) also refers to Job as an example of "patience," which he would not have been likely to do had Job been only a fictitious person. Also the names of persons and places are specified with a particularity not to be looked for in an allegory. As to the exact doubling of his possessions after his restoration, no doubt the round number is given for the exact number, as the latter approached near the former: this is often done in undoubtedly historical books. As to the studied number and form of the speeches, it seems likely that the arguments were substantially those which appear in the book, but that the studied and poetic form was given by Job himself, guided by the Holy Spirit. He lived one hundred and forty years after his trials, and nothing would be more natural than that he should, at his leisure, mould into a perfect form the arguments used in the momentous debate, for the instruction of the Church in all ages. Probably, too, the debate itself occupied several sittings, and the number of speeches assigned to each was arranged by preconcerted agreement, and each was allowed the interval of a day or more to prepare carefully his speech and replies: this will account for the speakers bringing forward their arguments in regular series, no one speaking out of his turn. As to the name Job, repentance—supposing the derivation correct—it was common in old times to give a name from circumstances which occurred at an advanced period of life, and this is no argument against the reality of the person.

Eusebius fixes the age when Job lived two ages before Moses, i.e., about the time of Isaac—eighteen hundred years before Christ and six hundred after the Deluge. Agreeing with this are the following considerations: 1. Job's length of life is patriarchal—two hundred years. 2. He alludes only to the earliest form of idolatry, viz., the worship of the sun, moon and heavenly hosts, called Saba, whence arises the title Lord of Sabaoth, as opposed to Sabeanism, ch. xxxi. 16–28. 3. The number of oxen and rams sacrificed, seven, as in the case of Balaam. God would not have sanctioned this after the giving of the Mosaic law, though he might graciously accommodate himself to existing customs before the law. 4. The language of Job is Hebrew, interspersed occasionally with Syriac and Arabic expressions, implying a time when all the Shemitic tribes spoke one common tongue and had not branched into different dialects—Hebrew, Syriac and Arabic. 5. He speaks of the most ancient kind of writing, viz., sculpture. Riches also are reckoned by cattle. The Hebrew word translated a piece of money ought rather to be rendered a lamb. 6. There is no allusion to the exodus from Egypt and to the miracles that accompanied it, nor to the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah (Patrick, however, thinks there is), though there is to the Flood (ch. xxii. 15); and these events, happening in Job's vicinity, would have been striking illustrations of the argument for God's interposition in destroying the wicked and vindicating the righteous, had Job and his friends known of them. Nor is there any undoubted reference to the Jewish law, ritual and priesthood. 7. The religion of Job is that which prevailed among the patriarchs previous to the law—sacrifices performed by the head of each family; no officiating priesthood, temple or consecrated altar.

Respecting the author of the book a difference of opinion prevails. Some ascribe it to Job, others to Elihu, and others to Moses. Whoever was its author, its canonical authority is proved by its place in the Jewish Scriptures and the recognition of the whole collection by our Lord and his apostles.

The book may be divided into three parts:

I. The historical introduction in prose, i., ii., giving a narrative of sudden and severe affliction borne with exemplary patience.

II. The argument or controversy, in poetry, in five divisions:

1. The first series of discussions, composing Job's complaint, iii.; the speech of Eliphaz, iv., v., and Job's answer, vi., vii.; of Bildad, viii., and Job's answer, ix., x.; of Zophar, xi., and Job's answer, xii.–xiv.

2. The second series, comprising the speech of Eliphaz, xv., and Job's answer, xvi., xvii.; of Bildad, xviii., and Job's answer, xix.; of Zophar, xx., and Job's answer, xxi.

3. The third series, comprising the speech of Eliphaz, xxii., and Job's answer, xxiii., xxiv.; of Bildad, xxv., and Job's answer, xxvi.–xxxi.

The question discussed thus far is, whether great suffering be not an evidence of great guilt. Job's friends affirm it, and exhort him to repent and reform. Job denies it, appeals to facts, and complains bitterly of his friends for aggravating his distress by false charges.

4. The speech of Elihu, xxxii.–xxxvii. Elihu maintains that afflictions are meant for the good of the sufferer, even when not properly the consequences of sin; he reproves Job for justifying himself, rather than God, and vindicates the Divine character and government.

5. The close of the discussion, by the address of the Almighty, not condescending to explain his conduct, but illustrating his power and wisdom, xxxviii.–xli., and Job's response and penitential confession, xlii. 1–6.

III. The conclusion in prose, xlii. 7–17, giving an account of Job's acceptance and prosperity.

The exact meaning and design and object of this book has not always been clearly apprehended. Dr. Hengstenberg considers that the question is, "how the afflictions of the righteous and the prosperity of the wicked can be consistent with God's justice. But it should be observed," he proceeds, "that the direct problem exclusively refers to the first point, the second being only incidentally discussed on occasion of the leading theme. If this is overlooked, the author would appear to have solved only one-half of his problem; the case from which the whole discussion proceeds has reference merely to the leading problem." But he regards it as an error to refer the whole solution to the doctrine of retribution after death. God's moral government is always in exercise—not inactive at present to make up hereafter. It is to be shown not merely that the ultimate result of a good man's affliction is happy, but that, while these afflictions are needful, there is present consolation under them as they work their due effect. In the earlier dispensation such consolations depended more on external circumstances; in the New Testament they have more of a spiritual cast.

Little need be said as to the nature of the poetry of this book. Some will have it an epic, some a dramatic poem, while others class it with lyric compositions. It matters not what name be given it; it is poetry of the highest order. There is a wonderful glow of fancy and power of description, so that even if it had no higher merit it must be regarded as one of the most admirable productions of the pen. The language, it may be added, has much in it of an archaic cast.

PSALMS.

The Hebrew name of this book signifies "Praises," but in the actual superscriptions of the Psalms the word praise is only applied to one (Psalm cxlv.), which is indeed emphatically a praise-hymn. The LXX. entitled them "Psalms," using the word as a translation of a Hebrew word signifying strictly a rhythmical composition, and which was probably applied in practice to any poem specially intended, by reason of its rhythm, for musical performance with instrumental accompaniment. But the Hebrew word is, in the Old Testament, never used in the plural; and in the superscriptions of even those psalms known to be written by David it is applied only to some, not to all; probably to those which had been composed most expressly for the harp. The notice at the end of Psalm lxxii. has suggested that the Psalms may in the earliest times have been known as "Prayers;" and in fact "Prayer" is the title prefixed to the most ancient of all the psalms, that of Moses, Ps. xc. But the same designation is in the superscriptions applied to only three besides. Nor have all the psalms the character of prayers. The other special designations applied to particular psalms are the following: "Song," Ps. xxx.; Maschil, "Instruction" or "Homily," Pss. xxxii., xlii., xliv., etc.; Eduth, "Testimony," Pss. lx., lxxx.; and Shiggaion, "Irregular or Dithyrambic Ode," Ps. vii. The strict meaning of these terms is in general to be gathered from the early superscriptions. Once made familiar to the psalmists, they were afterwards employed by them more loosely.

We cannot now ascertain all the psalms written by David, but their number probably exceeds seventy; and much less are we able to discover the authors of the other psalms or the occasions upon which they were composed. A few of them were written after the return from the Babylonian captivity. The titles prefixed to them are of very questionable authority, and in many cases they are not intended to denote the writer, but refer only to the person who was appointed to set them to music. David first introduced the practice of singing sacred hymns in the public service of God, and it was restored by Ezra, who is supposed to have selected these Psalms from a much greater number and to have placed them in their present order. It is to be presumed that those which he rejected were either not inspired or not calculated for general use. The authority of those, however, which we now possess is established not only by their rank among the sacred writings and by the unvaried testimony of every age, but likewise by many intrinsic proofs of inspiration. Not only do they breathe through every part a divine spirit of eloquence, but they contain numberless illustrious prophecies that were remarkably accomplished, and that are frequently appealed to by the evangelical writers. The sacred character of the whole book is established by the testimony of our Saviour and his apostles, who, in various parts of the New Testament, appropriate the predictions of the Psalms as obviously apposite to the circumstances of their lives and as intentionally preconcerted to describe them.

PROVERBS.

Proverbs are short aphorisms and sententious moral and prudential maxims, usually expressed in numbers, rhythm or antithesis, as being more easily remembered, and of more use, than abstruse and methodical discourses.

Proverbs, in the Hebrew language, are called meshalim, which is derived from a verb signifying both "to rule," "to have dominion," and "to compare," "to liken," "to assimilate:" hence the term denotes the highly figurative and poetical style in general, and likewise those compendious and authoritative sentences in particular which are commonly denominated proverbs. This term, which our translators have adopted after the Vulgate, denotes "a short sentence frequently repeated by the people, a saw, an adage," and no other word can, perhaps, be substituted more accurately expressing the force of the Hebrew, or if there could, it has been so long familiarized by constant use, that a change is wholly inadmissible.

The Meshalim, or Proverbs of Solomon, on account of their intrinsic merit, as well as of the rank and renown of their author, would be received with submissive deference, in consequence of which they would rapidly spread through every part of the Jewish territories. These, either preserved in writing or handed down by oral communication, were subsequently collected into one volume, and constitute the book in the sacred canon entitled "The Proverbs of Solomon, the son of David, king of Israel."

The genuineness and authority of this title, and those in ch. x. 1 and xxv. 1, cannot be disputed: not the smallest reason appears for calling them in question. One portion of the book, from the 25th chapter to the end of the 29th, was compiled by the men of Hezekiah, as appears from the title prefixed to it. Eliakim, Shebna, Joah, Isaiah, Hosea and Micah, personages of eminence and worth, were contemporary with Hezekiah; but whether these or others executed the compilation it is now impossible to determine. They were persons, however, as we may reasonably suppose, well qualified for the undertaking, who collected what were known to be the genuine proverbs of Solomon from the various writings in which they were dispersed, and arranged them in their present order. Whether the preceding twenty-four chapters, which, doubtless, existed in a combined form previous to the additional collection, were compiled by the author or some other person is quite uncertain. Both collections, however, being made at so early a period, is a satisfactory evidence that the Proverbs are the genuine production of Solomon, to whom they are ascribed, for, from the death of Solomon to the reign of Hezekiah, according to the Bible chronology, was a period of 249 years, or, according to Dr. Hales, 265 years, too short a space to admit of any forgery or material error, as either must have been immediately detected by the worthies who flourished during the virtuous reign of Hezekiah.

ECCLESIASTES.

THE name of this book, Ecclesiastes, is derived from the Septuagint version, it being a Greek word signifying a preacher, one who addresses a public assembly. The Hebrew title, Koheleth, conveys nearly the same idea, intended to intimate preaching wisdom. The book has generally been ascribed to Solomon as the author.

The scope of Ecclesiastes is indicated in i. 2 and xii. 13. It is an inquiry into the chief good of man, and is distributed by Keil into four discourses. The first (i., ii.) exhibits (1) the vanity of theoretical wisdom directed to the knowledge of things, and (2) the nothingness of practical wisdom which aimed at enjoying life; the result being that man with all his striving can attain no lasting good. The second (iii.–v.), following the idea thrown out in ii. 21, 26, begins with a description (iii. 1–8) of man's entire dependence on a higher unchangeable Providence, and, in reply to the question of the chief good, shows that there can be no higher (iii. 9–22) than self-enjoyment and benevolence, which, however (iv.), it is not easy to attain; still one must, in the fear of God and a conscientious fulfillment of duty, seek trustingly and contentedly to use earthly goods. In the third discourse (vi. 1–viii. 15) is shown the vanity of grasping riches (vi.); practical wisdom is then described (vii. 1–22), and the mode of attaining it indicated, spite of the incongruities of earthly life (vii. 23–viii. 15). The last (viii. 16–xii. 7) further discusses these incongruities, lays down rules for the conduct of a happy life which may please God, and brings us to the conclusion of the whole (xii. 8–14), that a future judgment will clear up all present uncertainties. This is the great object the author intends to develop; he argues at first on lower principles to show their imperfection, not prematurely expressing the whole truth (comp. iii. 21), but reserving that till he has raised by degrees the view to that high tribunal where every wrong will be redressed. The style of this book is loose and unconnected, with little practical character. It was one of the megilloth read, we are told, by the Jews at the feast of tabernacles.

THE SONG OF SOLOMON.

"FEW poems have excited more attention or found more translators than the Song of Songs, but the learned are not yet agreed respecting its arrangement and design. Whether the poem be strictly one piece, or whether, as some have supposed, it be composed of several poems or idyls, it is certainly one as to its subject, and the speakers are the same from the beginning to the end."

As to this poem, "the whole of it," Dr. Gray remarks, "is a thin veil of allegory thrown over a spiritual alliance, and we discover everywhere, through the transparent types of Solomon and his Bride, the characters of Christ and his personified Church portrayed with those graces and embellishments which are most lovely and engaging to the human eye."

"The scope of this song," says Dr. Roberts, "is, under the allegory of lovers upon contract and intending marriage, to shadow out to us that sublime, spiritual and happy union and communion betwixt Christ and his Church which is inchoate in this life, and shall be consummate in the life to come. This is carried on dialogue-wise betwixt Christ and his Church, his friend and her damsels, who are the chief speakers, especially the first."

The following quotation from Scott's preface to this book in his Commentary is all that we judge further necessary to advance respecting this divine and exquisitely beautiful poem: "This song is a divine allegory in the form of a pastoral, which represents the reciprocal love betwixt Christ and his Church, under figures taken from the relation and affection which subsist betwixt a bridegroom and his espoused bride; an emblem continually employed in Scripture. It has some reference to the state of the Jewish Church, as waiting for the coming of the promised Messiah; but it likewise accords to the fellowship betwixt Christ and the true believer in every age. In order properly to understand it, we must consider the Redeemer as loving and as being loved by his Church. The marriage contract is already ratified, but the completion of this blessed union is reserved for the heavenly state. Here on earth the believer loves and rejoices in an unseen Saviour, and seeks his happiness from his spiritual presence. Christ manifests himself to him as he doth not to the world, and these visits are earnests and foretastes of heavenly joy. But they are interrupted, suspended or varied on many accounts: they are often lost by negligence or other sins, and can only be recovered by humble repentance and renewed diligence; yet the love on both sides remains unchanged as to its principle, though varied in the expression of it." "The varying experience and corresponding duties of the believer are delineated in a very animating and edifying manner."

THE BOOK OF THE PROPHET ISAIAH.

OF Isaiah and his family we know nothing but what is said in the first verse. His name signifies "the salvation of God." He is supposed to have been of royal descent. He prophesied at least during a period of forty-eight years. The tradition that he was put to death by Manasseh is very uncertain. He is a prophet of the highest dignity, and was contemporary with several other prophets.

The scope of Isaiah's prophecies is threefold: 1. To detect, reprove and condemn the sins of the Jews in particular, also those of Israel, and of several surrounding nations, denouncing the severest judgments on all offenders. 2. To invite persons of every rank and condition, Jews and Gentiles, to repentance and reformation. 3. To comfort all the truly pious with prophetic promises of the Messiah.

His prophecies are supposed to have been written as follows: 1. In the reign of Uzziah, ch. i.–v. 2. Of Jotham, ch. vi. 3. Of Ahaz, ch. vii.–xiv. 4. Of Hezekiah, ch. xv., to the end.

Isaiah has been styled "the Evangelical Prophet," on account of the number and variety of his prophecies concerning the advent and character, the ministry and preaching, the sufferings and death of Messiah, and the extension, permanence and glory of his kingdom.

"This prophet," says Bishop Lowth, "abounds in such transcendent excellencies that he may be properly said to afford the most perfect model of prophetic poetry. He is at once elevated and sublime, forcible and ornamented: he unites energy with copiousness, and dignity with variety. In his sentiments there are uncommon elevation and majesty; in his imagery the utmost propriety and elegance, dignity and diversity; in his language uncommon energy and beauty, and, notwithstanding the obscurity of his subjects, a surprising degree of clearness and simplicity."

THE BOOK OF THE PROPHET JEREMIAH.

JEREMIAH was the son of Hilkiah, a priest of Anathoth, in Benjamin. He was called to the prophetic office about seventy years after the death of Isaiah, in the thirteenth year of King Josiah, whilst he was very young (i. 6) and still living at Anathoth. It would seem that he remained in his native place for several years; but at length, probably in consequence of the persecution of his fellow-townsmen, and even of his own family (xi. 21; xii. 6), as well as under the Divine direction, to have a wider field for his labors, he left Anathoth and came to Jerusalem. He also visited the cities of Judah, and prophesied altogether upward of forty years (xi. 6).

During the reign of Josiah he was doubtless a valuable coadjutor to that pious monarch in the reformation of religion. From his notice of Jehoahaz (xxii. 10–12) he probably prophesied without hindrance during his reign. But when Jehoiakim came to the throne he was interrupted in his ministry, "the priests and prophets" becoming his accusers, and demanding, in conjunction with the populace, that he should be put to death (xxvi.). The princes did not dare to defy God thus openly; but Jeremiah was either placed under restraint or deterred by his adversaries from appearing in public. Under these circumstances he received a command from God to commit his predictions to writing; and having done so, sent Baruch to read them in the temple on a fast-day. The princes were alarmed, and endeavored to rouse the king by reading out to him the prophetic roll. But it was in vain: the reckless monarch, after hearing three or four pages, cut the roll in pieces and cast it into the fire, giving immediate orders for the apprehension of Jeremiah and Baruch. God, however, preserved them, and Jeremiah soon afterward, by Divine direction, wrote the same messages again, with some additions (xxxvi.).

In the short reign of the next king, Jehoiachin, we find him still uttering the voice of warning (see xiii. 18; compare 2 Kings xxiv. 12 and ch. xxii. 24–30), though without effect.

In the reign of Zedekiah, when Nebuchadnezzar's army laid siege to Jerusalem, and then withdrew upon the report of help coming from Egypt, Jeremiah was commissioned by God to declare that the Chaldæans should come again and take the city and burn it with fire. Departing from Jerusalem, he was accused of deserting to the Chaldæans, and was cast into prison, where he remained until the city was taken. Nebuchadnezzar, who had formed a more just estimate of his character, gave a special charge to his captain, Nebuzar adan, not only to provide for him, but to follow his advice. The choice being given to the prophet either to go to Babylon, where doubtless he would have been held in honor at the royal court, or to remain with his own people, he preferred the latter. He subsequently endeavored to persuade the leaders of the people not to go to Egypt, but to remain in the land, assuring them, by a Divine message, that if they did so God would build them up. The people refused to obey, and went to Egypt, taking Jeremiah and Baruch with them (xliii. 6). In Egypt he still sought to turn the people to the Lord (xliv.), but his writings give no information respecting his subsequent history. Ancient historians, however, assert that the Jews, offended by his faithful remonstrances, put him to death in Egypt; Jerome says at Tahpanhes.

The style of Jeremiah is peculiarly marked by pathos. He delights in expressions of tenderness, and gives touching descriptions of the miseries of his people.

The prophecies of this book do not appear to stand in respect to time as they were delivered. Why they are not so arranged, and how they are to be reduced to chronological order, it is not easy to say. Blayney proposes the following arrangement: The prophecies delivered (1) in the reign of Josiah, comprising i.–xii.; (2) in the reign of Jehoiakim, xiii.–xx., xxii., xxiii., xxv., xxvi., xxxv., xxxvi., xlv.–xlviii., xlix. 1.—xxxiii.; (3) in the time of Zedekiah, xxi., xxiv., xxvii.–xxxiv., xxxvii.–xxxix., xlix., xxxiv.–xxxix., l.–lii.; (4) during the administration of Gedaliah, and in Egypt, xl.–xliv. Ch. lii. seems made up from the latter chapters of Kings (see xxiv., xviii.–xxv.), and repeats parts of chs. xxxix. and xl. From ch. li. 34, and the later date of some of the facts, the whole chapter may be regarded as the work of a later writer, and probably of Ezra.

THE LAMENTATIONS OF JEREMIAH.

THIS book has generally among the Jews for an appellation its first word, signifying how. It is also called by a name implying, as that we use does, the nature of its contents. In the Hebrew canon it is one of the five megilloth usually placed between Ruth and Ecclesiastes.

The Lamentations are expressly ascribed to Jeremiah in a verse prefixed to the Septuagint translation. This has been adopted in some other versions, but there is no reason to suppose that it was ever in the Hebrew original. It may be taken, however, as a valuable witness to the early belief of the Jeremiah authorship; and this authorship there is no valid reason for doubting. The writer is evidently an eye-witness (see ii. 11; iv. 17–20; v.): the diction is very similar, characteristic words and expressions being found in Jeremiah's prophecies and also in this book. It is the deliberate judgment of Bleek that there is an observable relationship between the Lamentations and the prophetical book, not only in style, but in entire character and spirit, in contents and in tone of thought. And he points out how exactly Lam. iii. 52, etc. answers to Jer. xxxviii. 6, etc.

The book comprises five separate poems, each distinct and complete in itself, but yet connected by the same leading idea. The third describes the personal sufferings of the writer, the others the fate of the city. It is a nice point to determine with exactness the time of the composition. But, as we learn from history (comp. Jer. xxxix. 2 and lii. 12, 13) that an interval of about a month elapsed between the capture of the city and its actual destruction by fire, some have imagined that they see indications in i., ii., iv., v. pointing to that interval; the king and the nobles were in captivity (ii. 9, iv. 20); the temple was profaned and the observance of the ritual service at an end (i. 4, 10, ii. 6, 7, 20); but yet it is not distinctly said that the temple was burned or the city quite destroyed.

Still, it cannot be denied that there are expressions which can hardly be fully understood except as intending that final catastrophe (as ii. 2, 3, iv. 11, v. 18). Perhaps, therefore, the date may be more justly fixed to that time when Jeremiah appears to have been carried with the rest of the captives to Ramah, where Nebuzar-adan released him and sent him to Gedaliah (Jer. xl.). And no time would seem to suit better with the personal lamentation of ch. iii.

The composition of these elegies is remarkable. Each consists of twenty-two periods or stanzas, and in the first four every one of these periods begins with words the initials of which are letters of the Hebrew alphabet in order. In ch. iii. the three verses of each period commence with the same letter. In ii., iii., iv. the verses beginning with the letter pe precede those beginning with ain. In the Vulgate and some other versions ch. v. is entitled the Prayer of Jeremiah. It is only necessary to add that these elegies must not be considered the lament which (2 Chron. xxxv. 25) Jeremiah is said to have made for Josiah.

THE BOOK OF THE PROPHET EZEKIEL.

Ezekiel, like his contemporary Jeremiah, was of the sacerdotal race. He was carried away captive to Babylon with Jehoiachim, king of Judah, B. C. 598, and was placed with many others of his countrymen upon the river Chebar in Mesopotamia, where he was favored with the Divine revelations contained in his book. He began to prophesy in the fifth year of his captivity, and is supposed to have prophesied about twenty-one years. The boldness with which he censured the idolatry and wickedness of his countrymen is said to have cost him his life, but his memory was greatly revered, not only by the Jews, but also by the Medes and Persians.

The book which bears Ezekiel's name may be considered under the five following divisions: the first three chapters contain the glorious appearance of God to the prophet, and his solemn appointment to his office, with instructions and encouragements for the discharge of it. From the fourth to the twenty-fourth chapter inclusive he describes, under a variety of visions and similitudes, the calamities impending over Judea, and the total destruction of the temple and city of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar, occasionally predicting another period of yet greater desolation and more general dispersion. From the beginning of the twenty-fifth to the end of the thirty-second chapter, the prophet foretells the conquest and ruin of many nations and cities which had insulted the Jews in their affliction; of the Ammonites, the Moabites, the Edomites and Philistines, of Tyre, of Sidon and Egypt, all of which were to be punished by the same mighty instrument of God's wrath against the wickedness of man; and in these prophecies he not only predicts events which were soon to take place, but he also describes the condition of these several countries in the remote periods of the world. From the thirty-second to the fortieth chapter he inveighs against the accumulated sins of the Jews collectively, and the murmuring spirit of his captive brethren, exhorts them earnestly to repent of their hypocrisy and wickedness upon the assurance that God will accept sincere repentance, and comforts them with promises of approaching deliverance under Cyrus, subjoining intimations of some far more glorious but distant redemption under the Messiah, though the manner in which it is to be effected is deeply involved in mystery. The last nine chapters contain a remarkable vision of the structure of a new temple and a new polity, applicable in the first instance to the return from the Babylonian captivity, but in its ultimate sense referring to the glory and prosperity of the universal Church of Christ.

Jerome observes that the visions of Ezekiel are among the things in Scripture hard to be understood. This obscurity arises, in part at least, from the nature and design of the prophecies themselves; they were delivered amidst the gloom of captivity, and though calculated to cheer the drooping spirits of the Jews, and to keep alive a watchful and submissive confidence in the mercy of God, yet they were intended to communicate only such a degree of encouragement as was consistent with a state of punishment, and to excite an indistinct expectation of future blessings upon conditions of repentance and amendment. It ought also to be observed, that the last twelve chapters of this book bear a very strong resemblance to the concluding chapters of the Revelation. The middle part of the book is in some measure poetical, and contains even some perfect elegies, though his thoughts are in general too irregular and uncontrolled to be chained down to rule or fettered by language.

THE BOOK OF DANIEL.

Daniel is said to have been a descendant from the family of David. He was taken captive to Babylon, B. C. 606, probably about his eighteenth or twentieth year. In the vicissitudes of his life, and in the virtues which he displayed, he has been thought to have resembled Joseph. Piety, wisdom, courage and fidelity strongly mark his character, and he largely contributed to spread the knowledge of God among the Gentile nations. His last prophecy was given B. C. 534, when he must have been above ninety years old. Of his death nothing is known; it is probable that he died in Persia.

"What an amazing prophecy is this," says Bishop Newton, "comprehending so many various events, and extending through so many successive ages, from the first establishment of the Persian empire, upward of five hundred and thirty years before Christ, to the general resurrection! What a proof of Divine providence and of a Divine revelation! For who could thus declare the things that shall be, with their times and seasons, but He only who has them in His own power, whose dominion is over all, and whose kingdom endureth from generation to generation?"

This book is written in prose. We shall only add the chronological dates of the commencement and end of the four empires.

I. The Babylonian empire. Its symbol is a lion with eagle's wings (Dan. vii. 4). So far as the prophecies of Daniel are concerned, this empire began with Nebuchadnezzar, B. C. 606, and ended B. C. 538, its duration being sixty-eight years.

II. The Persian empire. Its symbol (Dan. vii. 5) was a bear. This empire was founded by Cyrus, B. C. 538, and it continued until Alexander the Great defeated Darius at Arbela, B. C. 331. Its duration was two hundred and seven years.

III. The Grecian empire. Its symbol (Dan. vii. 6) was a leopard with four wings of a fowl. This empire continued from the battle of Arbela, B. C. 331, to the defeat of Perseus by the Romans in the battle of Pydna, B. C. 168. Its duration was one hundred and sixty-three years.

IV. The Roman empire. Its symbol (Dan. vii. 7) is only stated in general terms as being "a beast dreadful and terrible and strong exceedingly." If we date the Roman empire from the battle of Pydna, and proceed to the reign of Augustulus, A. D. 475, we have six hundred and forty-three years for the duration of the Western Empire, and if we again proceed to A. D. 1453, when Constantinople was taken by Mohammed II., we have an additional period of nine hundred and seventy-eight years for the duration of the Eastern Empire; but if we date the Eastern Empire from the dedication of Constantinople by Constantine, A. D. 330, its duration was eleven hundred and twenty-three years.

To the four great empires we may add, since much is spoken of them in the book of Daniel—

1. The Syrian kingdom. This was founded after the death of Alexander the Great, by Seleucus, B. C. 312, and it continued till B. C. 65. Antiochus Asiaticus was its last king. It then became a Roman province.

2. The Egyptian kingdom. This also was founded after the death of Alexander the Great, by Ptolemy Lagus, B. C. 304, and it continued till B. C. 30, when it became a Roman province.

HOSEA.

Hosea, son of Beeri, was first of the minor prophets. The title of the book gives for the beginning of Hosea's ministry the reign of Uzziah, king of Judah, but limits this vague definition by reference to Jeroboam II., king of Israel; it therefore yields a date not later than B. C. 783. The pictures of social and political life which Hosea draws so forcibly are rather applicable to the interregnum which followed the death of Jeroboam (712–772), and to the reigns of the succeeding kings. It seems almost certain that very few of his prophecies were written until after the death of Jeroboam (783), and probably the life, or rather the prophetic career, of Hosea extended from 784 to 725, a period of fifty-nine years.

Most of Hosea's prophecies are directed against the people of Israel, whom he reproves and threatens for their idolatry and wickedness, and exhorts to repentance with the greatest earnestness, as the only means of averting the evils impending over the country. The principal predictions contained in this book are the captivity and dispersion of the kingdom of Israel, the deliverance of Judah from Sennacherib, the present state of the Jews, their future restoration and union with the Gentiles in the kingdom of the Messiah, the call of our Saviour out of Egypt, and his resurrection on the third day.

The style of Hosea is peculiarly obscure; it is sententious, concise and abrupt, the transitions of persons are sudden, and the connexive and adversative particles are frequently omitted. The prophecies are in one continued series, without any distinction as to the times when they were delivered or the different subjects to which they relate. They are not so clear and detailed as the predictions of those prophets who lived in succeeding ages. When, however, we have surmounted these difficulties, we shall see abundant reason to admire the force and energy with which this prophet writes, and the boldness of the figures and similitudes which he uses.

JOEL.

This prophet opens his commission by announcing an extraordinary plague of locusts, accompanied with extreme drought, which he depicts in a strain of animated and sublime poetry under the image of an invading army. The fidelity of his highly-wrought description is corroborated and illustrated by the testimonies of Shaw, Volney, Forbes and other eminent travellers, who have been eye-witnesses of the ravages committed by this most terrible of the insect tribe. It is also to be observed that locusts are named by Moses as instruments of Divine justice (Deut. xxviii. 38, 39), and by Solomon in his prayer at the dedication of the temple (1 Kings viii. 37). In the second chapter the formidable aspect of the locusts, their rapid progress, their sweeping devastation, the awful murmur of their countless throngs, their instinctive marshalling, the irresistible perseverance with which they make their way over every obstacle and through every aperture, are delineated with the utmost graphic force.

The prophet, after describing the approaching judgments, calls on his countrymen to repent, assuring them of the Divine placability and readiness to forgive (ii. 12–17). He foretells the restoration of the land to its former fertility, and declares that Jehovah would still be their God (ii. 18–26). He then announces the spiritual blessings which would be poured forth in the Messianic age (ii. 28–32). This remarkable prediction is applied by the apostle Peter to the events that transpired on the day of Pentecost (Acts ii. 16–21). In the last chapter (iii.) the Divine vengeance is denounced against the enemies and oppressors of the chosen people, of whom the Phœnicians, Egyptians and Edomites are especially named.

The style of Joel unites the strength of Micah with the tenderness of Jeremiah. In vividness of description he rivals Nahum, and in sublimity and majesty is scarcely inferior to Isaiah and Habakkuk.

AMOS.

Amos was a native of Tekoa in Judah, about six miles south of Bethlehem, and was originally a shepherd and dresser of sycamore trees. He was called by God's Spirit to be a prophet, although not trained in any of the regular prophetic schools (i. 1, vii. 14, 15). He travelled from Judah into the northern kingdom of Israel, or Ephraim, and there exercised his ministry, apparently not for any long time. His date cannot be later than the fifteenth year of Uzziah's reign (B. C. 808), for he tells us that he prophesies "in the reign of Uzziah king of Judah, and Jeroboam the son of Joash, king of Israel, two years before the earthquake." But his ministry probably took place at an earlier period, perhaps about the middle of Jeroboam's reign.

The book of the prophecies of Amos seems divided into four principal portions closely connected together: (1) From i. 1 to ii. 3 he denounces the sins of the nations bordering on Israel and Judah as a preparation for (2), in which, from ii. 4 to vi. 14, he describes the state of those two kingdoms, especially the former. This is followed by (3), vii. 1–ix. 10, in which, after reflecting on the previous prophecy, he relates his visit to Bethel, and sketches the impending punishment of Israel, which he predicts to Amaziah. After this era (4) he rises to a loftier and more evangelical strain, looking forward to the time when the hope of the Messiah's kingdom will be fulfilled, and his people forgiven and established in the enjoyment of God's blessings to all eternity.

The chief peculiarity of his style consists in the number of allusions to natural objects and agricultural occupations, as might be expected from the early life of the author. See i. 3, ii. 13, iii. 4, 5, iv. 2, 7, 9, v. 8, 19, vi. 12, vii. 1, ix. 3, 9, 13, 14. The references to it in the New Testament are two: v. 25, 26, 27 is quoted by Stephen in Acts vii. 42, 43, and ix. 11 by James in Acts xv. 16.

OBADIAH.

Of Obadiah's history nothing certain is known. Some have inferred, from verse twentieth of his prophecy, that he lived and wrote while Jerusalem was under the power of the Chaldeans, and after the deportation of its inhabitants to Babylon, and that he was probably himself one of the exiles; but this inference rests on an assumption which is questionable.

The prophecy of Obadiah consists of three parts. In the first (1–9) the certainty of Edom's overthrow is asserted; in the second (10–16) the cause of this, in Edom's enmity and violence to his brother Jacob, is set forth; and in the third (11–21) the establishment of the kingdom of God, and its triumph over all opposition, are announced. In the concluding words, "And the kingdom shall be Jehovah's," we have the dominant idea of the book, the key-note of the prophet's song. And the assertion of this is made with peculiar force in contrast with the overthrow of Edom, because that people, though allied to Israel by natural ties, were among its bitterest and most inveterate enemies.

The style of Obadiah is animated and his elocution rapid. He deals much in appeal and interrogation. The language is pure and idiomatic, and his utterances are often highly poetic.

JONAH.

Jonah, son of Amittai, the fifth of the minor prophets, was born at Gath-hepher in Galilee. He is generally considered as the most ancient of the prophets, and is supposed to have lived B. C. 840. The book of Jonah is chiefly narrative.

Upon the repentance of the Ninevites under his preaching, God deferred the execution of his judgment till the increase of their iniquities made them ripe for destruction, about one hundred and fifty years afterward. The last chapter gives an account of the murmuring of Jonah at this instance of Divine mercy, and of the gentle and condescending manner in which it pleased God to reprove the prophet for his unjust complaint.

The style of Jonah is simple and perspicuous, and his prayer, in the second chapter, is strongly descriptive of the feelings of a pious mind under a severe trial of faith. Our Saviour mentions Jonah in the Gospels (Matt. xii. 41; Luke xi. 32).

MICAH.

Micah was a native of Mareshah—hence called the Marasthite—a village in the south of the territory of Judah (Josh. xv. 44). It is supposed that a reference to one of his predictions saved the life of Jeremiah (Jer. xxvi. 18–24). Such a reference vouches for the genuineness of the oracles ascribed to Micah.

The prophecy of Micah is the thirty-third in the order of the books of the Bible. It was uttered within the space of fifty years—viz., from the commencement of the reign of Jotham, A. M. 3245, to the close of the reign of Hezekiah, A. M. 3306, or nearly contemporary with Isaiah. The prophecies of Micah which are recorded in the sacred canon make but seven chapters, and are divided into three sections:

1. Prophecies in the reign of Jotham, full of denunciation for sin—sin for which there could be no apology in a land of divine illumination—foreshowing also Samaria's overthrow and Sennacherib's march against Jerusalem (ch. i.).

2. Prophecies in the reign of Ahaz, somewhat similar in texture and design, menacing Israel and foretelling destruction to Judah, conveying heavy censure and woes to such as could not bear to have the truth spoken to them, and who, full of spiritual indolence themselves, exercised a hateful tyranny over the people, ending, however, with a glorious prediction of blessings and of the extension of Messiah's kingdom (ch. ii.–iv. 8).

3. Prophecies in the reign of Hezekiah, containing, among other oracles, one of great beauty and precision in reference to the Saviour's birth (ch. iv. 9; v. 1–5; vii.).

The remarkable feature of this last prophecy is, that it is very explicit respecting the birthplace and prominent characteristics of the Messiah, and the blessings of his reign upon earth. The passage now referred to is found in the fifth chapter.

The style of Micah approaches in many sections to that of Isaiah, as in ch. vii. 18–20, and it also bears some resemblance to the rapid transitions of Hosea. The rhythm is in general round and full, with an occasional play upon words. His use of figurative language is beautiful and appropriate, and his oracles sometimes assume the form of a dialogue. Micah was a contemporary of Isaiah, and their nearness of age and similarity of theme may account for the remarkable coincidences of thought and style to be found in various portions of their writings.

NAHUM.

The book of Nahum is a striking illustration of the moral use of prophecy, of its fitness to console (so the name of the prophet implies) the believer, and strengthen him for present duties.

Of Nahum himself nothing is known, except that he belonged to Elkosh, a place now unrecognized, but which Jerome (who lived a thousand years afterward) asserts to have belonged to Galilee.

He probably prophesied in Judah, after the ten tribes had been carried captive, and between the two invasions of Sennacherib. At this period of perplexity, when the overthrow of Samaria must have suggested to Judah many fears for her own safety, when Jerusalem had been drained of its treasure by Hezekiah in the vain hope of turning away the fury of Sennacherib, and when distant rumors of the conquest of part of Egypt added still more to the general dismay, the prophet is raised up to reveal the power and tenderness of Jehovah (i. 1–8), to foretell the subversion of the Assyrian empire (i. 9–12), the death of Sennacherib and the deliverance of Hezekiah (i. 13–15). The destruction of Nineveh is then predicted in the most glowing colors and with singular minuteness, and profane history tells us that these predictions have been literally fulfilled.

This book is surpassed by none in sublimity of description. It consists of a single poem, which opens with a solemn description of the attributes and operations of Jehovah (i. 2–8). Then follows (i. 9–14) an address to the Assyrians, describing their perplexity and overthrow, verses twelve and thirteen being thrown in parenthetically to console the Israelites with promises of future rest and relief from oppression. Ch. ii. depicts the siege and capture of Nineveh and the consternation of the inhabitants. Ch. iii. describes the utter ruin of the city and the various causes contributing to it. The example of No-Ammon (or Thebes), a great and strong city of Egypt which fell under the judgments of God, is introduced (iii. 8–10) to illustrate the similar punishments coming on the Assyrians.

HABAKKUK.

This prophet was of the tribe of Simeon. He is said to have prophesied about B. C. 605, and to have been alive at the time of the destruction of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar. It is generally believed that he remained and died in Judea. The principal predictions contained in this book are the destruction of Jerusalem and the captivity of the Jews by the Chaldeans or Babylonians, their deliverance from the oppressor "at the appointed time," and the total ruin of the Babylonian empire. The promise of the Messiah is confirmed, the overruling providence of God is asserted, and the concluding prayer, or rather hymn, recounts the wonders which God had wrought for his people when he led them from Egypt into Canaan, and expresses the most perfect confidence in the fulfilment of his promises. The style of Habakkuk is highly poetical, and the hymn in ch. iii. is perhaps unrivalled for sublimity, simplicity and power.

ZEPHANIAH.

Of Zephaniah nothing is known but what is said in the first verse. He probably prophesied in the early part of Josiah's reign, or about the time when Jeremiah entered on the prophetical office, when those abuses prevailed in Judah which Josiah reformed. In method and subject he greatly resembles Jeremiah. He is poetical, but not characterized by any remarkable beauties. He teaches, like the other prophets, the hateful and ruinous nature of sin, the righteous government of God, and his gracious purposes toward his Church. We find here, as in all other parts of Scripture, what may awake our fears, animate our hopes and direct our steps.

HAGGAI.

Haggai was the tenth of the minor prophets, and was probably born at Babylon, whence he accompanied Zerubbabel. The captives, immediately after their return to Judea, began with ardor to rebuild the temple, but the work was suspended fourteen years, till after the death of Cambyses. Darius Hystaspes succeeding to the empire, Haggai was excited by God to exhort Zerubbabel, prince of Judah, and the high priest Joshua, to resume the work of the temple, which had been so long interrupted (B. C. 521). The remonstrances of the prophet had their effect, and in the second year of Darius and the sixteenth year after the return from Babylon they resumed this work (Hag. i. 14; ii. 1). The Lord commanded Haggai to tell the people that if any one recollected the temple of Solomon, and did not think this to be so beautiful and magnificent as that structure was, he ought not to be discouraged, because God would render the new temple much more august and venerable than the former had ever been, not in embellishments of gold or silver, but by the presence of the Messiah, the Desire of all nations, and by the glory which his coming would add to it.

ZECHARIAH.

This prophet was the son of Berechiah and the grandson of Iddo, Zech. i. 1. The expression in Ezra (v. 1) is consonant to the Jewish usage of calling a descendant son or daughter, and an ancestor father or mother, though they might be removed two or three degrees from these relations. Zechariah returned from Babylon with Zerubbabel, and prophesied contemporaneously with Haggai.

The book of Zechariah has been variously divided into two, three or four parts. Perhaps we may most conveniently distribute it into two principal sections, in each of which are some minor divisions: 1. The first comprises i.–viii., in which we have, after an introductory message (i. 1–6), a series of visions closely connected with the then state of Jerusalem, symbolically describing the four great Gentile empires, and exhibiting with comfortable promises the establishment of a new theocracy; also pointing onward to the future glory of God's people under the great King and Priest, the Messiah, who would purge away iniquity and rule his chosen. 2. A response of happy prediction delivered in the fourth year of Darius to certain inquirers, showing how times of mourning for past calamities should be turned into seasons of joyful praise, vii., viii. 2. In the second part (ix.–xiv.) there are far-reaching prophecies which, leaving present events, stretch on to Messianic times. Included here we have—1. The struggle of worldly powers with God's chosen people, while Messiah's office is foreshadowed (ix.–xi.); 2. The last onset of foes upon Jerusalem, the repentance of the Jewish nation for their rejection and murder of Messiah, with the final glory of that new kingdom of righteousness which shall never pass away, xii.–xiv. Several references to Zechariah occur in the New Testament—e.g., Matt. xxi. 4, 5, xxv. 31; John xii. 15, xix. 37.

MALACHI.

The book of Malachi (B.C. 436–420) is rightly placed last of the productions of the minor prophets. Chronologically considered, and also from its contents, it appropriately closes the Old Testament canon, and is the last solemn utterance of the prophetic Spirit under the earlier covenant.

After the return from Babylon, when the Jews had repeopled their city and rebuilt the temple, abuses crept in. The priests were negligent, the people were worldly and complaining. Accordingly, Malachi was commissioned to reprove both priest and people, and to invite them to reformation by promises of blessing and warnings of awful judgment. His book is not marked out into distinct messages or sections. It has been supposed, therefore, that the prophet has collected and compressed it in the substance of his various utterances. Be this as it may, we can properly separate it into three parts, in the first of which there is set forth the loving, fatherly, forbearing and pitiful mind of God toward the covenant-people, the character of Jehovah in the second as the only God and Father, in the third as the just and final Judge of his people. More particularly in i. (i. 2, ii. 9) the prophet, contrasting the state of Judah with that of Edom, which then lay waste, shows how groundless were the murmurings of the Jews against the Lord, as though he loved them not. He next reproves them, priest and people, for their neglect of God's service and for the blemished offerings they brought, and then, reminding the priests of the grace of their original appointment, he threatens them with shame and punishment. In ii. (ii. 10–16) he censures intermarriage with strangers and divorce of lawful, i.e., Hebrew, wives. In iii. (ii. 17, iv. 6), against complaints, as if God did not regard men's conduct and would never arise to judgment, the prophet foretells the coming of Messiah and his forerunner, to purify the sons of Levi and inflict a curse unless they repented. Reproofs and consolatory promises are interspersed. He concludes with enjoining the strict observance of the law, since no fresh prophet should arise till the forerunner already spoken of, who should go before Messiah in the spirit and power of Elijah.

THE NEW TESTAMENT.

REMARKS ON THE FOUR GOSPELS.

THE mere circumstance that the four Gospels record the life and instructions of our blessed Lord is sufficient to induce us to look upon them with the deepest veneration, and to study them with the most lively interest and diligent care. They reveal evangelical truth in a more general form. Such was the method which God was pleased to adopt. Our Lord cannot be said to have made a full development of the gospel; that was left for the Holy Spirit to accomplish after his ascension, after his redeeming work was finished. But the great truths, facts and principles of religion—the lost state of man, repentance, faith in Christ, spiritual influence, obedience, the resurrection, final judgment and eternal happiness or misery—were explicitly stated by our Lord.

The peculiar manner in which the Gospels are written demands our notice. We are here made familiar, so to speak, as far as such documents would admit, with our Saviour himself. We hear his words, we see his actions, we know his conduct, we feel his spirit. His biographers seem only solicitous to set him forth to our view. Other persons are brought forward, but it is only that his words may be related and that his conduct may be described.

Two advantages, amongst others, arise from this mode of writing. In the first place, we are led to contemplate our Lord, in his holy, peaceful, laborious, patient and benevolent life, as our Example. This is the great practical lesson. He was holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners, and went about doing good. In the second place, we see him in the fulfilment of the prophecies of the Old Testament; for let us compare his history, as it is recorded by the Evangelists, with the various predictions of the prophets, and we behold in him that exact accomplishment, and thus our faith in him as the Messiah, "as the only Mediator between God and man," is confirmed.

We may add a third advantage arising from this mode of recording the life of our Lord: we see how he conducted himself in his ministry, addressing different sorts of people in different ways. He observed moral proportions. He taught doctrine and he also taught practice. He descended to the particulars of the Christian character. He did not teach the higher doctrines of religion in a cold, speculative and systematic manner. Whatever he taught, he brought it home to the heart and to the life of man.

The miracles of our Lord should always be viewed—1, as proofs of his Divine mission and of his Deity; and, 2, as sources of spiritual instruction. As to the latter view of them, they may be considered as a visible delineation of the invisible operations of the Redeemer's power and grace on the souls of men. It is this spiritual application of them that gives them a peculiar and universal interest. They are, if we may so speak, redemption rendered visible.

The parables of our Lord will not be rightly understood unless we view them in the universality of their meaning and application. Many of them refer to the whole counsel of God, to the whole history of the Church, to men collectively, while at the same time they are applicable to individuals. We put a parable before us: we admire the propriety of its imagery and the simplicity of its language. This is comparatively nothing. Let us examine how it unfolds the purposes and proceedings of God, the nature and state of the Church, and the character and condition of each of its members, and then we shall find in it instruction of the highest order, both as to others and as to ourselves.

Human nature is accurately unfolded in the Gospels; not merely in the discourses of our Lord, but also in the various characters with which they make us more or less familiar. We see it in the perverseness of most of the Jews, and we see it in the mingled character of the disciples. Hence the proper study of these books will assist us in becoming acquainted with ourselves.

Let us read these sacred pages with such views, and we shall read them with reflection, intelligence and ample benefit, provided that we implore, and rely upon, the sanctifying power of the Holy Spirit, without which all the rules that we can observe, and all the labor that we can employ in our study of sacred things, will, as to our salvation, be vain and fruitless. When we read the discourses, the miracles and the parables of our Lord, when we contemplate his devotion, humility, benevolence and unwearied labors, let us pray that we may believe in him as our Saviour, hear him as our Prophet, obey him as our King, and follow him as our Example.

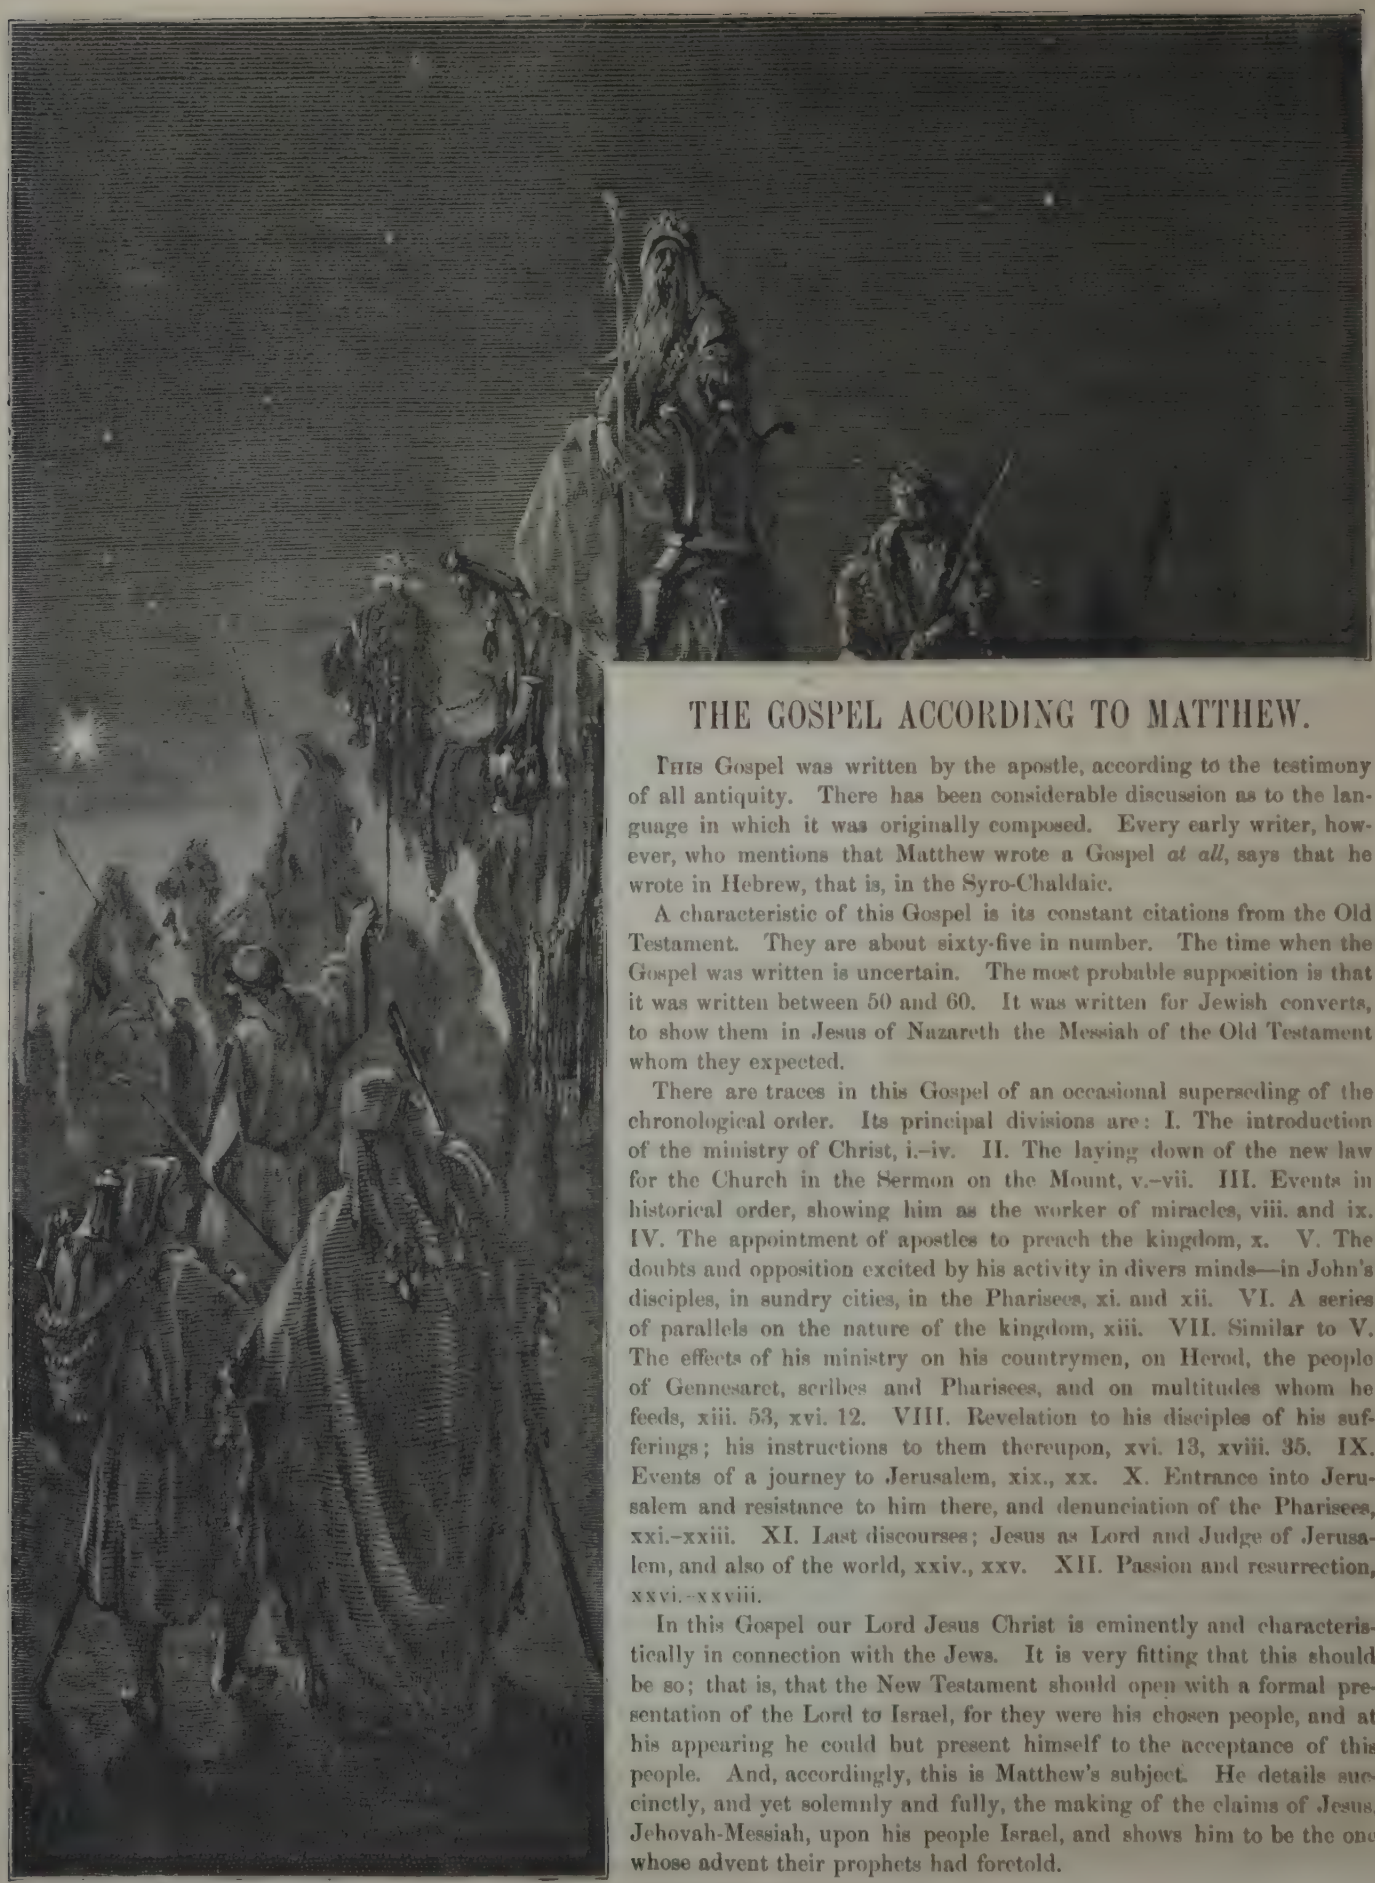
A writer in the "Christian Witness" (London) makes some very excellent remarks on the four Evangelists. He says:

"The four Gospels are coincident testimonies to the Lord Jesus Christ, and valuable as such. But we are not to read them merely as explanatory or supplemental. We get a complete view of our Lord Jesus Christ only by discerning their distinctness in character and purpose.

"Even in the histories of men we may perceive this. One biographer may give us the man in his domestic, another in his political, life; but in order to our being fully acquainted with him, we must see him in both of these, and perhaps in many other connections. And one of such biographers will not only select particular facts, but notice distinct circumstances in the same facts. The same thing we see in the four Gospels. And if we know, if not the necessity at least the desirableness of this, when a mere man is the theme, how much more may we expect to find it so when we have rehearsed to us the ways of One who fills such a blessed variety of relationships, both to God and man, as the Lord Jesus Christ!

"The Holy Ghost, who spake by the prophets and other ancient and holy penmen of Scripture, had done this before the times of the Evangelists. In the first book of Chronicles, for instance, we see David in a light different from that in which we see him in the books of Samuel. In the books of Samuel we get his history generally, but in the first book of Chronicles we see him, not in all the events of his life as in Samuel, but in those scenes and actions which constitute him a type of the Lord who is David's Son.

"All this is only fulness and variety, and not incongruity. And as to the ways of the blessed Lord which are in this variety given to us, I need not say that all is perfection. Whether it be this path or that which he takes before us, whatever relationship he sustains, whatever affection fills his soul, though different, all is perfect. He may pass before us in the conscious elevation of the Son of God or in the sympathies of the Son of man; we may see him in Jewish connection, in St. Matthew, or more widely abroad, as among men, in St. Luke; as the servant of the varied need of poor sinners, in St. Mark, or as the solitary stranger from heaven, in St. John; still, all is perfection. And to discern and trace this is at once the disciple's profit and delight. 'Thy testimonies are wonderful, therefore doth my soul love them.'".



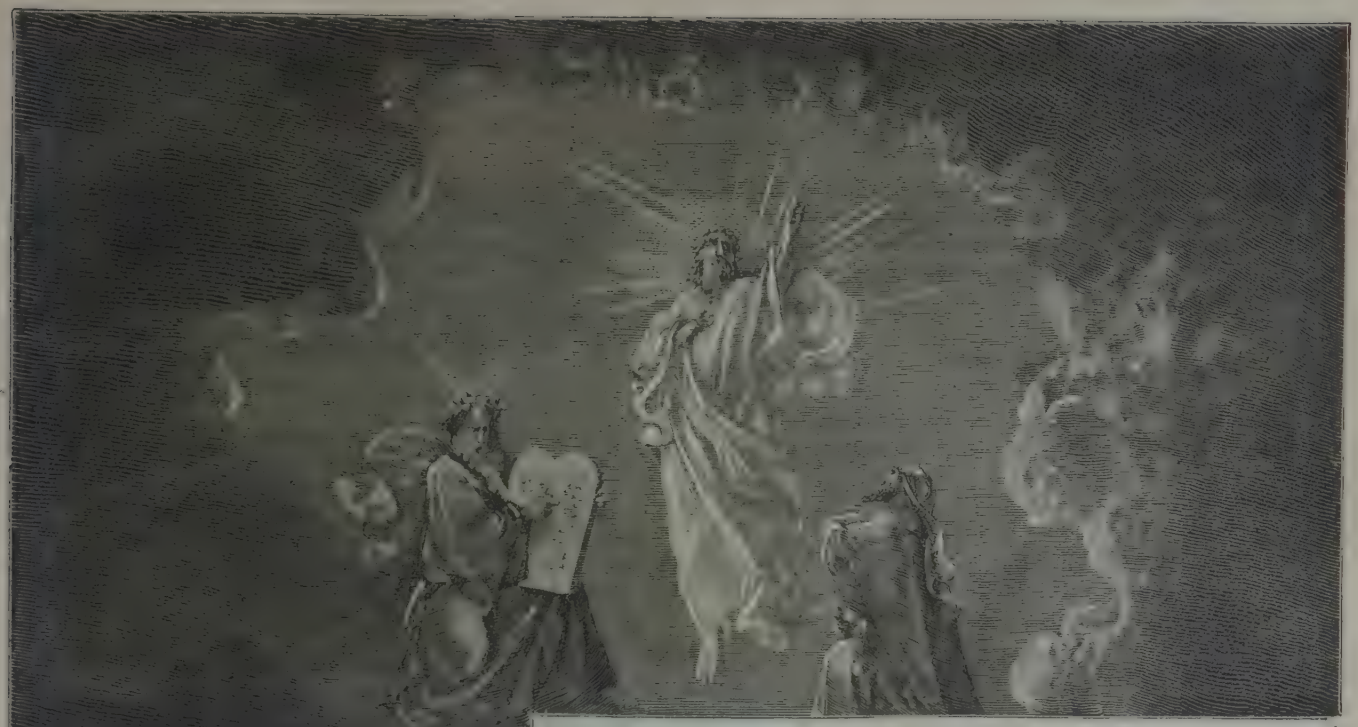
THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO MATTHEW.

This Gospel was written by the apostle, according to the testimony of all antiquity. There has been considerable discussion as to the language in which it was originally composed. Every early writer, however, who mentions that Matthew wrote a Gospel at all, says that he wrote in Hebrew, that is, in the Syro-Chaldaic.

A characteristic of this Gospel is its constant citations from the Old Testament. They are about sixty-five in number. The time when the Gospel was written is uncertain. The most probable supposition is that it was written between 50 and 60. It was written for Jewish converts, to show them in Jesus of Nazareth the Messiah of the Old Testament whom they expected.

There are traces in this Gospel of an occasional superseding of the chronological order. Its principal divisions are: I. The introduction of the ministry of Christ, i.–iv. II. The laying down of the new law for the Church in the Sermon on the Mount, v.–vii. III. Events in historical order, showing him as the worker of miracles, viii. and ix. IV. The appointment of apostles to preach the kingdom, x. V. The doubts and opposition excited by his activity in divers minds—in John's disciples, in sundry cities, in the Pharisees, xi. and xii. VI. A series of parallels on the nature of the kingdom, xiii. VII. Similar to V. The effects of his ministry on his countrymen, on Herod, the people of Gennesaret, scribes and Pharisees, and on multitudes whom he feeds, xiii. 53, xvi. 12. VIII. Revelation to his disciples of his sufferings; his instructions to them thereupon, xvi. 13, xviii. 35. IX. Events of a journey to Jerusalem, xix., xx. X. Entrance into Jerusalem and resistance to him there, and denunciation of the Pharisees, xxi.–xxiii. XI. Last discourses; Jesus as Lord and Judge of Jerusalem, and also of the world, xxiv., xxv. XII. Passion and resurrection, xxvi.–xxviii.

In this Gospel our Lord Jesus Christ is eminently and characteristically in connection with the Jews. It is very fitting that this should be so; that is, that the New Testament should open with a formal presentation of the Lord to Israel, for they were his chosen people, and at his appearing he could but present himself to the acceptance of this people. And, accordingly, this is Matthew's subject. He details succinctly, and yet solemnly and fully, the making of the claims of Jesus, Jehovah-Messiah, upon his people Israel, and shows him to be the one whose advent their prophets had foretold.



THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO MARK.

MARK is generally supposed to be the same with "Marcus" (1 Pet. v. 13), but whether he was the same with John Mark (Acts xv. 37–39; Col. iv. 10; 2 Tim. iv. 11) is not clear. The identity is, however, probable.

Mark's Gospel, the second in the order of the books of the New Testament, is supposed to have been written A. D. 56 and 65. Mark records chiefly the actions of our Saviour. It is Jesus acting and not Jesus discoursing, that he portrays. His object is to show how He discharged the duties of the Messiahship. If it was written at Rome and for the Romans, its composition and selection of striking facts is wisely calculated to arrest the attention of such a people—it was suited to their taste and temperament. Fact, and not argument, most deeply impressed them. It is often supposed, and it has also been asserted, that Mark's Gospel is an abridgment of Matthew's. The idea has no foundation. Mark is shorter than Matthew as a whole, but is longer relatively. It omits many scenes in Matthew, but in detailing those which are found in the record of the first Evangelist it is more minute, more graphic, more circumstantial, and therefore longer in such sections. Had it been an abridgment, there would have been more appearance of harmony in arrangement and chronology.

The old tradition is that Mark wrote this Gospel at Peter's request or dictation. Thus it is said by Papias, an early disciple: "Mark, being the interpreter (amanuensis) of Peter, wrote exactly whatever he remembered, but he did not write in order. . . . . Mark committed no mistake when he wrote down circumstances as he recollected them." Irenæus says, "Mark, the disciple and interpreter of Peter, has given us, in writing, the things which had been preached by Peter." Origen and Clement agree in this opinion.

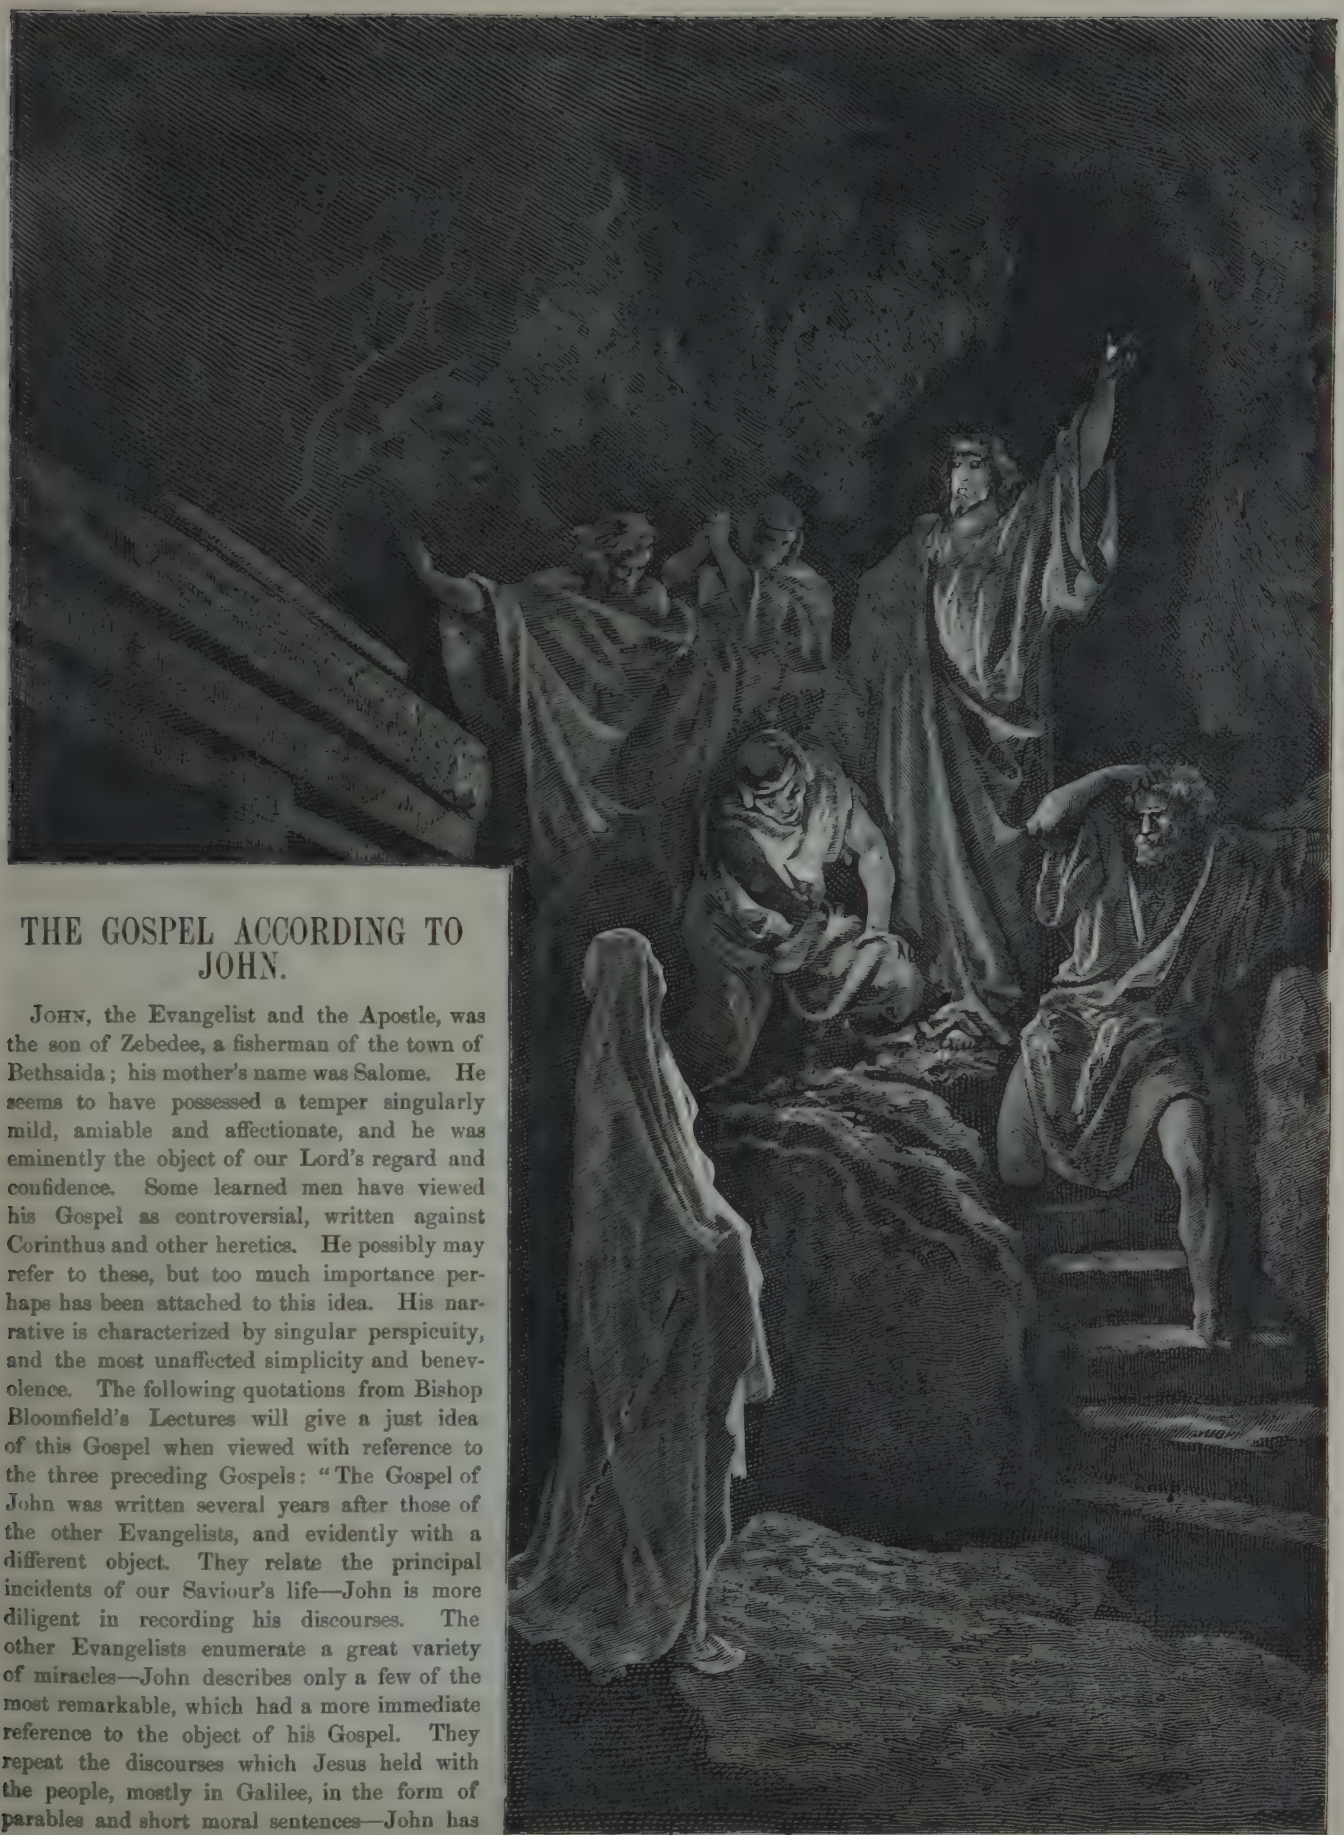
The city of Rome was probably the place of this Gospel's composition. We find some Latin words in it, only disguised by being written in Greek characters. He explains several of the Jewish customs. The Jewish phrase, "defiled hands," he explains by saying, "that is, unwashen hands." The Gospel of Mark is an independent, original publication. There are a sufficient number of important differences between this Gospel and the other three to show that this is not an abridgment or compilation from them, or either of them, and among these we may mention two miracles which are not recorded in any other Gospel, and yet there are but twenty-four verses in Mark which contain any important fact not mentioned by some other Evangelist.

THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO LUKE.

THE third Gospel is ascribed by the general consent of ancient Christendom to "the beloved physician," Luke, the friend and companion of the apostle Paul. From Acts i. 1 it is clear that the Gospel described as "the former treatise" was written before the Acts of the Apostles, but how much earlier is uncertain. Perhaps it was written at Cæsarea during Paul's imprisonment there (A. D. 58–60). The preface contained in the first four verses of the Gospel describes the object of its writer.

The Evangelist professes to write that Theophilus "might know the certainty of those things wherein he had been instructed" (i. 4). On comparing the Gospel with the Acts, it is found that the style of the latter is more pure and free from Hebrew idioms.

This Gospel contains—1. A preface (i. 1–4). 2. An account of the time preceding the ministry of Jesus (i. 5 to ii. 52). 3. Several accounts of discourses and acts of our Lord common to Luke, Matthew and Mark, related for the most part in their order, and belonging to Capernaum and the neighborhood (iii. 1 to ix. 50). 4. A collection of similar accounts referring to a certain journey to Jerusalem, most of them peculiar to Luke (ix. 51 to xviii. 14). 5. An account of the sufferings, death and resurrection of Jesus, common to Luke with the other Evangelists, except as to some of the accounts of what took place after the resurrection (xviii. 15 to the end).



THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO JOHN.

JOHN, the Evangelist and the Apostle, was the son of Zebedee, a fisherman of the town of Bethsaida; his mother's name was Salome. He seems to have possessed a temper singularly mild, amiable and affectionate, and he was eminently the object of our Lord's regard and confidence. Some learned men have viewed his Gospel as controversial, written against Corinthus and other heretics. He possibly may refer to these, but too much importance perhaps has been attached to this idea. His narrative is characterized by singular perspicuity, and the most unaffected simplicity and benevolence. The following quotations from Bishop Bloomfield's Lectures will give a just idea of this Gospel when viewed with reference to the three preceding Gospels: "The Gospel of John was written several years after those of the other Evangelists, and evidently with a different object. They relate the principal incidents of our Saviour's life—John is more diligent in recording his discourses. The other Evangelists enumerate a great variety of miracles—John describes only a few of the most remarkable, which had a more immediate reference to the object of his Gospel. They repeat the discourses which Jesus held with the people, mostly in Galilee, in the form of parables and short moral sentences—John has preserved the longer and more argumentative conversations of our Saviour with the learned Jews on the subject of the Messiah, and those in which he explained to his disciples the nature of his mission and office." "Whatever other objects John may have had in view, this was one—to convey to the Christian world just and adequate notions of the real nature, character and office of that great Teacher who came to instruct and redeem mankind. For this purpose he studiously selected for his narrative those passages of our Saviour's life which most clearly displayed his divine power and authority, and those of his discourses in which he spoke most plainly of his own nature and of the efficacy of his death as an atonement for the sins of the world." "The real difference between the other Evangelists and John is, that they wrote a history of our Saviour's life, but John of his person and office." Whoever, then, desires to form a just notion of the real office and dignity of the Saviour of the world, let him study the representations which Jesus has given of himself in the discourses recorded by John. The apostles speak of him in their Epistles, it is true, in noble and characteristic expressions, but here the Saviour speaks of himself, and in language which no ingenuity can pervert.

The book of Genesis opens with creation, but the Gospel by St. John opens with Him who was before creation and above creation. It is to Him that we are immediately taken. Creation is passed by, and we get to "the Word," who was with God, and was God. Matthew gives us Christ as the Son of David, but John presents him to us as the Son of God.

THE ACTS OF THE APOSTLES.

This book is an inspired history of the actions and sufferings of the apostles at or after the ascension of their adored Master. It chiefly relates those of Peter, John, Paul and Barnabas. It gives us a particular account of Christ's ascension; of the choice of Matthias in the place of Judas; of the effusion of the Holy Ghost at the feast of Pentecost; of the miraculous preaching of the gospel by the apostles, and the success thereof, and their persecutions on that account (ch. i. to v.); of the choice of the deacons, the persecution and murder of Stephen, one of them (ch. vi., vii.); of a more general persecution and dispersion of the Christian preachers into Samaria and places adjacent; of the baptism and baseness of Simon the Sorcerer, and the conversion and baptism of the Ethiopian eunuch (ch. viii.); of Peter's raising Dorcas to life, preaching to and baptizing the Gentiles of Cornelius's family, and vindication of his conduct herein (ch. ix. 32–43; x.; xi. 1–18); of the spread of the gospel among the Gentiles by the dispersed preachers, and the contributions for the saints at Jerusalem in the time of a dearth (ch. xi. 19–29); of Herod's murder of James, imprisonment of Peter and fearful death (ch. xii.); of the council held at Jerusalem, which condemned the imposition of Jewish ceremonies and advised, to avoid offence of the weak, to forbear eating of meats offered to idols or of things strangled, or blood (ch. xv.). The rest of the book relates the conversion, labors and sufferings of Paul (ch. ix. 1–31, xiii., xiv., xvi. to the end). It contains the history of the planting and regulation of the Christian Church for about thirty years. Nor have we any other for two hundred and fifty years after. This large gap between inspired history and that of human authority Providence no doubt ordered for wise reasons.

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE ROMANS.

This Epistle is put the first, though it is the fifth or sixth in the order of time, either from the pre-eminence of Rome, as being then the mistress of the world, or because it is the largest and most comprehensive of Paul's Epistles. It is not known by whom the Gospel was first preached at Rome. The Christians there being partly Jews and partly Gentiles, the former had strong prejudices about their peculiar privileges, and the latter claimed equal privileges with them; hence contentions arose. Paul wrote this Epistle to compose their differences, and in it he unfolds the nature of the gospel and shows the purposes and measures of God respecting the Jewish and Gentile world. He shows the guilty state of all men, confutes the objections of the Jews, explains the doctrines of justification and sanctification, dwells on the happiness of true believers, asserts the calling of the Gentiles into the Christian Church, and inculcates moral and civil obedience.

While this Epistle contains the fullest and most systematic exposition of the apostle's teaching, it is at the same time a very striking expression of his character. Nowhere do his earnest and affectionate nature and his tact and delicacy in handling unwelcome topics appear more strongly than when he is dealing with the rejection of his fellow-countrymen, the Jews.

THE FIRST AND SECOND EPISTLES OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE CORINTHIANS.

Corinth was the metropolis of Achai proper. It abounded in riches and elegance, in luxury and voluptuousness, so that its inhabitants became infamous to a proverb. Christianity was planted there by Paul himself (Acts xviii. 1–11), and he was succeeded by Apollos. Acts xviii. 27, 28; xix. 1. The Church consisted partly of Jews and partly of Gentiles, but chiefly of the latter; hence, in this Epistle, Paul combats with Jewish superstition and heathen licentiousness. Soon after he had quitted the Church its peace was disturbed by false teachers. Two parties were formed, the one contending for Jewish ceremonies and the other misinterpreting Christian liberty and indulging in shameful excesses. Hence his object in this Epistle is twofold: to apply suitable remedies to the disorders and abuses which had crept into the Church, and to answer those points in which (ch. vii. 1) they had requested his advice and information. This has been called "the most elegant of the Epistles." It undeniably is a most masterly and accomplished composition, displaying the great dexterity of the writer in a very difficult case; and though much refers to customs and practices no longer in existence, yet the whole is of universal application and of perpetual use.

The first Epistle produced different effects. Some of the Corinthian Christians had been brought to repentance and to an amendment of their ways, to submission to the apostle's orders, and to a good disposition toward him. Some still adhered to the false teacher and denied the apostolical authority of Paul. He was charged with lenity and irresolution of conduct, with pride and severity on account of his treatment of the incestuous person, with arrogance and vainglory in his ministry, in which he lessened the authority of the law, and with being personally contemptible. Hence he vindicates himself and his conduct against all the arguments of his adversaries; and the different circumstances of the Church account for the tenderness and severity which he exhibits. Conscious of the goodness of his cause, he speaks of himself more freely and justifies himself more boldly, and confutes his opponents with solid arguments. The whole work is strongly impressed with meekness and modesty, decision and energy, firmness and kindness, with affection the most pure and irony the most keen. He accounts for his not having come to them; he declares his sentence against the incestuous person to have been neither rigid nor tyrannical, but necessary and pious; he intimates his success in preaching the gospel, and shows the superiority of the gospel, the ministration of righteousness, to the law, the ministration of death; he stirs them up to a holy life; he excites them to finish their contribution for their poorer brethren in Judea; and he apologizes for himself with respect to the contemptibleness imputed to him, asserting his authority, enumerating his labors and appealing to "visions and revelations." Though this Epistle was thus limited and temporary with respect to its primary object, yet it abounds throughout with invaluable instructions, whether it refers to the character of good or wicked men or to the development of the nature and spirit of the gospel, which will never be obsolete.

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE GALATIANS.

Galatia was a large province in the centre of Asia Minor. It derived its name from the Gauls, who conquered the country and settled in it about 280 B. C.; it was called also Gallo-Grecia, on account of the Greek colonists who afterward became intermingled with them. About 189 B. C. it fell under the power of Rome, and became a Roman province 26 B. C. The inhabitants were but partially civilized, and their system of idolatry was extremely gross and debasing. Paul and Silas travelled through this region about A. D. 51, and formed churches in it, which Paul visited again in his second journey, three years afterward. This Epistle was probably written soon after his first visit. See Acts xvi. 6, xviii. 23; Gal. i. 6, 8, iv. 13, 19.

The Epistle may be divided into three parts:

1. After his usual salutation, Paul asserts his full and independent authority as an apostle of Christ. He relates the history of his conversion and introduction into the ministry, showing that he had received his knowledge of Christian truth, not by any human teaching, but by immediate revelations, and that the other apostles had recognized his Divine commission and treated him as their equal, i. 2.

2. In support of his doctrine, that men are accepted of God by faith alone, and not by the rites and ceremonies of the law, he appeals to the experience of the Galatians since their conversion to Christianity, and to the case of Abraham, who had been justified and saved by faith, and shows that the design of the law was not to supersede the Divine covenant of promise previously made with Abraham, but to prepare the way and to exhibit the necessity for the gospel, iii. He draws a contrast between the state of pupilage and the subjection of the people of God under the law, and their happier condition under the gospel, when, by the redemption of the Son of God, they were put into possession of the privileges and blessings of sonship; and addressing that portion of the Galatians that had been heathens, he reminds them that, having been rescued from the far more degrading bondage of idolatry, it was especially deplorable that they should fall back into the slavery of superstition, iv. 1, 2. He tenderly appeals to them as his spiritual children, reminding them of their former attachment to him, and then, addressing those who relied upon the law and the letter of the Old Testament, shows them that the history of Abraham's two sons afforded an emphatic illustration of the relative position and spirit of the two contending parties, and of the rejection of the one and the blessedness of the other, iv. 2–31.

3. He exhorts the believers to stand firm in their Christian liberty, but not to abuse it, shows them that holiness of heart and life are secured under the gospel by the authority of Christ and the grace of the Holy Spirit (v.), and enjoins upon them mutual forbearance, tenderness, love, and liberality, and, after again condemning the doctrine of the false teachers, closes his Epistle with a declaration which may be regarded as the sum of the whole.

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE EPHESIANS.

Ephesus was the chief city of Asia on this side Mount Taurus, and was celebrated for the temple of Diana. Acts xix. 27. The gospel was first planted here by Paul. Acts xviii., xix. He wrote this Epistle during his imprisonment at Rome, to establish the Ephesian converts in the faith, giving them the most exalted views of the love of God and the dignity and excellency of Christ. He shows that, miserable as their state had been, they now had equal privileges with the Jews, and he urges them to walk in a manner becoming their profession. This has been pronounced the richest and noblest of the Epistles, and certainly in variety and depth of doctrine, sublimity of metaphor, and animated fervor of style, occasionally rising to what has been called rapture, and apostolic earnestness and exhortation, both as to doctrine and as to a life becoming the Christian profession, it stands unrivalled. The apostle has no rebukes to utter, no controversy to engage in, and therefore, with a noble mind and a warm heart, he expatiates freely, with sublime thought and copious expressions, on his subject, the unsearchable wisdom of God in the redemption of man, and his love toward the Gentiles in making them through faith partakers of the benefits of the death of Christ.

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE PHILIPPIANS.

A tie of peculiar affection seems to have existed between the apostle Paul and the Philippian church. In their city he had suffered grievous wrong at the hands of the heathen magistrates, and from the disciples there he had, contrary to the general custom, twice accepted gifts soon after his departure from them. Phil. iv. 15, 16; comp. 2 Cor. viii. 1–6. Nor when the apostle was far away, a prisoner at Rome, did the Philippians forget him. They sent him a present by Epaphroditus (Phil. iv. 18), on whose return he despatched this letter, pouring out his heart in warm affection toward those who had so tenderly shown their love to him.

We may arrange this Epistle in three sections. I. After an affectionate introduction (i. 1–11), the apostle gives an account of his condition at Rome (12–26), and then exhorts to unanimity and Christian humility (27; ii. 16), adding an expression of his hope of visiting them, with a notice of Epaphroditus' sickness and recovery, 17–30. II. The apostle cautions the Philippians against Judaizing teachers, and confirms his warning by a special reference to his own experience; and thence, having shown how he renounced all self-dependence, he takes occasion to exhort to heavenliness of mind, iii. 1; iv. 1. III. He gives various admonitions (2–9), then expresses his thanks for the present sent him (10–20), and concludes with salutation and a benediction, 21–23.

This Epistle is referred to by Polycarp, and cited by Irenæus and Clement of Alexandria and other early writers. The style is animated and affectionate, occasionally abrupt, but in a strain of almost unqualified commendation. By reason of the influence of certain Judaizers there, there were, indeed, some tokens of disagreement, and therefore the apostle earnestly presses unity upon them, but his admonitions are conceived and expressed in the tenderest spirit. They were, we may trust, not ineffective.

THE EPISTLE TO THE COLOSSIANS.

Colosse was one of the chief cities of Phrygia, which, at the date of this Epistle, was a very rich and fertile country, though now under the Moslem yoke and in a great measure uncultivated. Phrygia was twice visited by Paul (Acts xvi. 8; xviii. 23), but whether he reached Colosse is doubted. The tenor of the Epistle favors the conclusion that he did not (see especially ii. 1); but it is certain that he knew several of the Colossian Christians, of whom Archippus, their minister, and Philemon are expressly named. The Colossians, having heard of Paul's imprisonment, sent to him Epaphras, their minister, to comfort the apostle, and to inform him of their state. Epaphras, shortly after reaching Rome, was also imprisoned (Philemon 24). This Epistle was written during Paul's first imprisonment at Rome (i. 24; iv. 18).

It is evident that there is a very close connection between this inspired treatise and the Epistle to the Ephesians. They are twin productions, written about the same period. Many similar expressions occur in both, showing that the condition of both churches was somewhat alike. Epaphras had come to Rome and given the apostle information as to the state of the Christian communities in Asia Minor; and seeing the immediate danger of the Colossian church, Paul wrote this letter. The apostle begins by a reference to his own high office, and to the character and destiny of the Christians whom he purposed to address. Then the mention of Christ's name suggested to him the exalted glory and Divine dignity of the Redeemer, who is himself Creator, Preserver and Lord of the physical and spiritual universe, whose death is our reconciliation, and the knowledge of which is the prime mystery at last revealed to the world. The writer then passes on to theories which are endangering the purity and stability of the Colossian church, and warns the Colossians against the seduction of a proud philosophy and vain asceticism, which were selfish in their origin and ruinous in their consequences. Then follow exhortations suited to their circumstances, and cautions against sins too prevalent in the ancient world. The Epistle closes with many salutations, showing the deep interest which the writer cherished for their spiritual welfare.

The spirit of the great apostle of the Gentiles breathes in every sentence of this pithy and earnest composition. Ardor undamped by imprisonment, interest unchilled by distance, zeal for the purity and simplicity of the gospel, uncompromising to all who introduce rash speculation or vile and unscriptural vagaries, whether under the shape of higher wisdom or superior sanctity, are indubitable traits of Paul's character, and unmistakable features of the Epistle to the Colossians.

THE FIRST AND SECOND EPISTLES OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE THESSALONIANS.

When Paul was obliged to quit Thessalonica he went to Athens. Anxious to visit the Thessalonians again, he found himself unable (1 Thess. ii. 18), and in consequence sent Timothy, iii. 1, 2. When Timothy rejoined him at Corinth (Acts xviii. 1–5; 1 Thess. iii. 6), he wrote the first Epistle. It is distinctly cited by Irenæus, Clement of Alexandria and Tertullian.

This Epistle consists of two main parts. I. After an inscription (i. 1), Paul celebrates the grace of God in their conversion and advancement in the faith (2; ii. 16), and then expresses his desire to see them and his affectionate solicitude for them, 17; iii. 13. II. In the hortatory part he calls to holiness and brotherly love (iv. 1–12); he speaks of Christ's advent (13; v. 11), and adds various admonitions, 12–24. He then concludes with a charge that the Epistle be generally read, with greetings and a benediction, 25–28.

This is the earliest of Paul's letters, and may be dated at the end of 52 or beginning of 53 A. D.

The second Epistle was written not long after the first, for Silas and Timothy were still with him (2 Thess. i. 1)—probably in 53 A. D., and from the same place, Corinth. The evidence for it is even yet more conclusive than for the first. It is alluded to by Polycarp, cited by Irenæus, Clement of Alexandria and Tertullian. This letter is supplementary to the first. That had been in some measure misapprehended, and the coming of Christ was taken to be close at hand. Moreover, an unauthorized use had been made of the apostle's name. He therefore wrote to correct the mistake and to check the evil results which had flowed from it in disorderly conduct.

This Epistle comprises, besides the inscription and conclusion, three sections. I. A thanksgiving and prayer for the Thessalonians, i. 3–12. II. The rectification of their mistake, and the doctrine of the man of sin, ii. III. Sundry admonitions—(1) to prayer, with a confident expression of his hope respecting them (iii. 1–5); (2) to correct the disorderly, 6–15. He then concludes with salutation and apostolical benediction, adding a remarkable authentication of his letters, 16–18.

The style of these Epistles is for the most part plain and quiet, save, as might be expected, in the prophetic section, iii. 1–12.

THE FIRST AND SECOND EPISTLES OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO TIMOTHY.

These are the fifteenth and sixteenth in order of the books of the New Testament. The first is supposed to have been written about the year 60, and contains special instructions respecting the qualifications and the duties of sundry ecclesiastical officers and other persons, and the most affectionate and pungent exhortations of faithfulness. The second Epistle was written a year or two later, and while Paul was in constant expectation of martyrdom (2 Tim. iv. 6–8), and may be regarded as the dying counsel of the venerable apostolic father to his son in the Lord. It contains a variety of injunctions as to the duties of Christians under trials and temptations, and concludes with expressions of a full and triumphant faith in the Lord Jesus Christ and in all the glorious promises made to his true followers.

These two Epistles are full of interesting matter, not only to pastors of churches, but to all members of the Christian community. What peace, harmony and spirituality would characterize the Church if the affectionate counsels of these Epistles were fully acted on!

In ch. iii. of the first Epistle there is an appropriateness not always perceived in the last two verses. The Church is styled by the apostle the pillar of the truth, and as inscriptions were written on pillars, so the last verse of the chapter is composed of stichoi, to suit such an inscription:

GREAT IS THE MYSTERY OF GODLINESS.
GOD WAS MANIFESTED IN THE FLESH, JUSTIFIED IN THE SPIRIT,
SEEN BY THE ANGELS,
PROCLAIMED AMONG THE GENTILES, BELIEVED ON IN THE WORLD, RECEIVED UP INTO GLORY.

Ephesus was famous for its pillars and inscriptions. The reading, "God," in the above quotation, has been controverted and often examined. The manuscript, versions and quotations are all in favor of the reading God. If the reading "who was manifest" be adopted, the meaning is the same, for the antecedent is "God," in the preceding verse.

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO TITUS.

It is by no means certain from what place Paul wrote this Epistle; but as he desires Titus to come him at Nicopolis (iii. 12), and declares his intention of passing the winter there, some have supposed that when he wrote it he was in the neighborhood of that city, either in Greece or Macedonia; others have imagined that he wrote it from Colosse, but it is difficult to say upon what ground. It was probably written in the year 64, after Paul's first imprisonment at Rome.

The principal design of this Epistle was to give instructions to Titus concerning the management of the churches in the different cities of the island of Crete, and it was probably intended to be read publicly to the Cretans, that they might know on what authority Titus acted. Paul, after his usual salutation, intimates that he was appointed an apostle by the express command of God, and reminds Titus of the reason of his being left in Crete; he describes the qualifications for bishops, and cautions him against persons of bad principles, especially against Judaizing teachers, whom he directs Titus to reprove with severity (i.); he informs him what instructions he should give to people in different situations of life, and exhorts him to be exemplary in his own conduct; he points out the pure and practical nature of the gospel (ii.), and enumerates some particular virtues which he was to inculcate, avoiding foolish questions and frivolous disputes; he tells him how he is to behave toward heretics, and concludes with salutations, iii.

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO PHILEMON.

This Epistle was written by Paul from Rome, where he was detained as a prisoner. Onesimus, a servant of Philemon, had fled to that city, and was there converted to the faith of the gospel. Paul had begotten him in his bonds. Being about to return to Philemon, Paul wrote this letter, chiefly with a design to conciliate the feelings of Philemon toward his penitent servant and now fellow-disciple. The slave may have apprehended the infliction of such a penalty as in slave countries is usually inflicted on runaways. Paul sent him back, not because Philemon might claim him, but to show the altered position in which Christianity had placed him. The apostle pleads for his reception, though he might have enjoined it—pleads from his old age and suffering, the personal friendship of Philemon, and his instrumentality in his conversion, and held himself bound for any debt which Onesimus might be owing his master. The letter has been regarded by learned critics as a masterpiece of epistolary composition. An eminent critic of ancient days says of it: "The apostle craves pardon in behalf of a fugitive and pilfering slave whom he sends back to his master, but while pleading his cause he discourses with so much weight respecting the rules of Christian kindness that he seems to be consulting for the whole Church, rather than managing the business of a particular individual. He intercedes for the humble man so modestly and submissively as to show, more clearly than almost anywhere else, the gentleness of his nature, which is here drawn to the life."

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE HEBREWS.

Who the Hebrews were is not agreed among the learned, but most probably they were the Jewish Christians resident in Palestine. Though the author of the Epistle is not mentioned, the evidence of its having been written by Paul is so strong that we cannot reasonably doubt of its being with justice ascribed to him. It is directly opposed to the peculiar errors and prejudices of the Jews, proving with great solidity of argument, and by such arguments as were well understood by the Jews, that the religion of Jesus is far more excellent and perfect than that of Moses. Its object is to show the deity of Jesus Christ, and the superior excellence of the gospel when compared with the Mosaical institution, to prevent the Jewish converts from relapsing to abolished rites and ceremonies, and to exhort them to perseverance in the faith after the example of the ancient believers. The whole is interspersed with warnings and exhortations to different sorts of persons. This Epistle connects the Old and New Testaments in the most convincing manner, and elucidates both more fully than any other Epistle. There, too, the great doctrines of the New Testament are stated, proved and adapted to practical purposes in the most impressive manner. We often speak of the offices of Christ under a threefold division of them—the kingly, prophetical and sacerdotal offices. It is the last of these which is particularly unfolded in this Epistle, in which we are principally led to consider the sacrifice and atonement which he made, his dignity and sufficiency as priest, and the prevalence of his intercession. These matters are elucidated by being put in contrast with the Levitical ordinances, of which they were the antitype. It is by careful study of this Epistle, with an immediate examination of the different facts to which Paul refers in the Old Testament, that we form a right view of the great doctrine of the Atonement, that we rightly understand the nature and design of the great dispensations of God, the ritual and the spiritual, and that we rightly estimate our privileges under the Christian dispensation.

THE EPISTLE OF JAMES.

The author of this Epistle, if not James the son of Zebedee, which is very unlikely, must be that prominent James who was most probably the son of Alpheus and the Lord's brother. He addressed it to Hebrew Christians of the dispersion (James i. 1), to those primarily that were scattered throughout Judea (Acts viii. 4), but with a further purpose of reaching generally those of Abraham's seed who anywhere had embraced the faith of Christ. His object was to fortify the minds of the disciples against the trials to which, for their faith, they were exposed, and to warn them against the sins of which, as Jews, they were especially in danger.

Bengel divides this Epistle in three parts: 1. The inscription (i. 1). II. The exhortation (i. 2–v. 18), enforcing (1) patience against external trials and inward temptations (i. 2–15), (2), and then, from regard to the divine goodness (16–18), the importance of being "swift to hear, slow to speak, slow to walk" (19–21); the special admonitions for each being that hearing must be accompanied by doing (22–25), in silence (26), with compassion and self-denial (27), without regard to persons in public assemblies (ii. 1–13), so that generally faith must not be separated from works (14–26), that speech be bridled (iii. 1–12), that wrath, with other swelling passions, must be restrained (13–iv. 17); (3) patience again, which the coming of the Judge, with the consequent destruction of the wicked (v. 1–6) and the deliverance of the just (7–12), should encourage, and which prayer will cherish (13–18). III. The conclusion, in which the apostle, having shown his care for the spiritual welfare of those he addresses, would have them diligent for the salvation of others (19, 20).

The time when this Epistle was composed is uncertain; some place it early, A. D. 45, others think its date later, perhaps 61 or 62, A. D. Some persons think that this Epistle does not harmonize with the Epistles of Paul. On this topic little can be here said. The two apostles had each his own aspect of a cardinal truth, and their expressions have reference to the special need of those they respectively addressed. Paul vindicates the power of a living faith, James shows that if it be not a living faith it is worthless. The two are not at variance. The style of this Epistle is earnest, the Greek comparatively free from Hebraisms.

THE FIRST EPISTLE GENERAL OF PETER.

It is doubted whether this Epistle was written only to the dispersed Hebrew Christians afflicted on their dispersion or to Christians in general, whether Jews or Gentiles. It was written from Babylon, but whether by Babylon he meant Rome, figuratively so named, or ancient Babylon, or a city of that name in Egypt, does not seem to be a point of easy determination. The Christians, it seems, were exposed to severe persecutions, and the design of the Epistle is to support them under afflictions and trials, and to instruct them how to behave in the midst of opposition and cruelt with which they were treated, submissive to civil authority, attentive to their duties in their several stations, and leading blameless and exemplary lives. It has been said of this Epistle that it is sparing in words, but full of sense, majestic and one of the finest books of the New Testament. Peter writes in it with such energy and rapidity of style that we can scarcely perceive the pause in his discourses or the distinction of his periods. Little solicitous about the choice of words or the harmonious disposition of them, his thought and his heart were absorbed in the grand truth which he was divinely commissioned to proclaim, and the indispensable obligation of Christians to adorn their profession with a holy life.

THE SECOND EPISTLE GENERAL OF PETER.

I. Clement of Rome and Hermas refer to this Epistle, it is mentioned by Origen and Eusebius, and has been universally received since the fourth century, except by the Syriac Christians. II. It is addressed to the same persons as the former Epistle, and the design of it was to encourage them to adhere to the genuine faith and practice of the Gospel. It was written when the apostle foresaw that his death was at no great distance, and he might hope that advice and instruction given under such circumstances would have the greater weight. As he is supposed to have suffered martyrdom in the year 65, we may place the date of this Epistle in the beginning of that year. It was probably written from Rome. III. Peter, after saluting the Christian converts and representing the glorious promises of the gospel dispensation, exhorts them to cultivate those virtues and graces which would make their calling and election sure; he expresses his anxiety to remind them of their duty at a time when he is conscious of his approaching end; he declares the divine origin of the Christian faith, which was attested by a voice from heaven and by the sure words of prophecy; he foretells the sure rise of heresies and false doctrines, and denounces severe judgments against those who shall desert the truth, while they who adhere to it will be spared, as Noah and Lot were in former times; he assures his Christian brethren that the object of this and of his former Epistle was to urge them to observe the precepts which they had received; he cautions them against false teachers, represents the certainty of the day of judgment, reminds them of the doctrines which he and Paul had inculcated, and exhorts them to grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. Some learned men have thought that the style of the second chapter of this Epistle is materially different from that of the other two chapters, and have therefore suspected its genuineness. We must own that we observe no other difference than of the subjects. The subject of the second chapter may surely lead us to suppose that the pen of the apostle was guided by a higher degree of inspiration than when written in a didactic manner. It is written with the animation and energy of the prophetic style, but there does not appear to us to be anything, either in phrase or sentiment, inconsistent with the acknowledged writings of Peter. Bishop Sherlock was of opinion that in this chapter Peter adopted the sentiment and language of some Jewish author who had described the false teachers of his own times. This conjecture is entirely unsupported by ancient authority, and it is in itself very highly improbable.

THE FIRST EPISTLE GENERAL OF JOHN.

At what place the three Epistles of John were written cannot be accurately determined. The first of them is not, properly speaking, an Epistle, but rather a didactic discourse upon the principles of Christianity in doctrine and practice, opening sublimely with the fundamental topics of God's perfection, and man's depravity, and Christ's propitiation, perspicuously propounding the deepest mysteries of our holy faith, maintaining the sanctity of its precepts with energy of argument, and exhibiting in all its parts the most dignified simplicity of language; artless simplicity and benevolence blended with singular ardor and modesty, together with a wonderful sublimity of sentiment, are the characteristics of this treatise. The sentences considered separately are exceedingly clear, but when we search for the connection we frequently meet with difficulties. The principal object seems to be to inculcate brotherly love, and to caution Christians against erroneous and licentious tenets, principles and conduct. An affectionate spirit pervades the whole, but when the writer exposes false teachers and hypocrites we discern a Boanerges. This treatise abounds more than any other book of the New Testament with criteria by which Christians may soberly examine themselves whether they be in the faith.

THE SECOND EPISTLE OF JOHN.

It is uncertain to whom this Epistle was addressed. The most probable opinion is, that it was addressed to the lady Electa, who is supposed to have been some eminent Christian matron. It is an epitome of the first Epistle. The lady Electa is commended for the religious education of her children, is exhorted to abide in the doctrine of Christ, and to avoid the delusion of false teachers, and is urged to the practice of Christian love and charity.

THE THIRD EPISTLE OF JOHN.

This Epistle, probably written about the same time as the preceding, is addressed to a converted Gentile, but it is uncertain who Gaius was. The object of the Epistle was to commend his steadfastness in the faith and his hospitality, to caution him against the ambition and turbulent practices of Diotrephes, and to recommend Demetrius to his friendship. It is not known who Diotrephes and Demetrius were.

THE GENERAL EPISTLE OF JUDE.

Jude, or Judas, surnamed Thaddeus or Lebbeus, was son of Alpheus, brother of James the Less, and one of the twelve apostles. The only particular incident related of him is in John xiv. 21–23. The time when and the place where this Epistle was written are uncertain. The coincidence between it and chapter ii. of Peter's second Epistle renders it likely that it was written soon after that Epistle. There is much diversity of opinion about the persons to whom it was addressed; it probably relates to all who had received the Gospel. The design of it was to guard believers against false teachers, of whom he gives an awful description, laboring for words and images to impart to the reader an adequate idea of their profligate character. His expressions are strong, his language animated, and his figures and comparisons bold, apt and striking. The whole shows how deeply the apostle was grieved at the scandalous immoralities of those wicked men, who, under the mask of religion, were most abandoned persons.

THE BOOK OF THE REVELATION.

This is the last in the order of the books of the Bible, and is commonly called the Apocalypse, from a Greek word which signifies revelation. It is supposed to have been written about the years 95, 96. It is the design of this book to present a prophetic history of the Church. It is called the Revelation of St. John the Divine, because to him was more fully revealed the divine counsels than to any other prophet under the Christian dispensation. It has been observed that hardly any one book has received more early, more authentic and more lasting attestations to its genuineness than this. But its canonical authority has sometimes been called in question. The fanatical rhapsodies of the ancient millenarians led many to call in question the authority of that book on which their reveries were based. This was wrong. If the Chiliasts misinterpreted the Apocalypse, their opponents should have shown the absurdities of their expositions, and not have thrown discredit on the Apocalypse itself. The current of external evidence is wholly in its favor. Ignatius, Polycarp, Melito, Origen, Clement and Tertullian refer to it as a portion of inspiration. That John the apostle was its author was fully believed in ancient times. There is a great similarity of style between the Apocalypse and the fourth Gospel.

It seems to have been written to comfort the early churches under persecution, and its keynote is the success of the new religion over every opposition. It is but an expanded illustration of the first great promise, "The seed of the woman shall bruise the head of the serpent." Its figures and symbols are august and impressive, and remind us of Isaiah, Ezekiel and Daniel. It is full of prophetic grandeur, awful in hieroglyphics and mystic symbols: seven seals opened, seven trumpets sounded, seven vials poured out; mighty antagonists arrayed against Christianity; hostile powers full of malignity against the new religion, and for a season oppressing it, but at length defeated and annihilated; the darkened heaven, tempestuous sea, convulsed earth fighting against them, while the issue of the long combat is the universal reign of peace and truth and righteousness; the whole scene being relieved at intervals by a choral burst of praise to God the Creator and Christ the Redeemer and Governor. The book must have been so far intelligible to the readers for whom it was first designed, or it could not have yielded them either hope or comfort. It is also full of Christ. It exhibits his glory as Redeemer and Governor, and describes that deep and universal homage and praise which the "Lamb that was slain" is for ever receiving before the throne. Either Christ is God, or the saints and angels are guilty of idolatry. It would far exceed our space to recount the many and opposing interpretations that have been given of this book in ancient and modern times. Some are simple and some are complex; some looking upon it as almost fulfilled, and others regarding the greater portion of it as yet to be accomplished. Between Mede, Faber and Elliot on the one hand, and Lucke and Stuart on the other, there stretches a wide gulf. In the hand of its expositors it resembles a musical instrument, there being no variation or fantasia which may not be played upon it. Some authors find its fulfilment in Constantine's elevation, others in Luther's Reformation. One discerns its completion in the French Revolution, and another sees in it a portraiture of the principles and struggles of the voluntary controversy. Woodhouse and Mede, Bicheno and Croly, Faber and Elliot, Newton and Stuart, have constructed opposite systems with equal tenacity of purpose and ingenuity of conjecture. In the mean time, we can only add that the year-day theory requires defence; that the purpose of the Apocalypse needs to be more clearly defined, and that a fortuitous similitude of events is not to mould our interpretation of prophetic symbols. We have only room to exhibit one of the simpler views of the Apocalypse.

Two cities are mentioned as overthrown, and a third is established on their ruins. By Sodom is meant Jerusalem, as is evident from the mention of the "temple" and "holy city." By Babylon is meant Rome. These two cities are overthrown, and the New Jerusalem is established. Jerusalem is the symbol of Judaism, and Babylon of paganism, both of which systems are at length overthrown by the spread and power of Christianity. The whole prophecy may be arranged thus: 1. Introduction of the seven Epistles to the seven churches. 2. Preparation for the great events to follow—seven seals. 3. Sodom or Jerusalem, representing Judaism, destroyed by a series of calamities—seven trumpets. 4. Birth of Christianity, the child of uncorrupted Judaism, and preservation of the infant from destruction by the special interposition of Heaven. 5. Babylon, or Rome (in its first form as a marine monster—i. e., persecuting paganism), destroyed by a series of calamities—seven vials. Under this part there is a distinct allusion to Mohammedanism, a compound of Judaism and Paganism, which, under the Saracenic power, overthrew Christianity in the East, etc. 6. Babylon in another form—the papal despotism, a compound of paganism and Christianity; Babylon finally and completely destroyed—conflicts and victories succeeding the Reformation. 7. The millennium—another hostile power still future; or post-millennium, the last judgment and final victory. 8. Final and complete triumph of Christianity, and the consummation of its glory in the heavenly world.

AAR'ON. Eldest son of Amram and Jochebed, brother of Moses and Miriam, of the tribe of Levi, and the first high priest of the Jews (Ex. i). Born, B. C., 1574. His wife was Elizabeth, of the tribe of Judah, by whom he had four sons, Nadab, Abihu, Eleazer and Ithamar (vi). Moses made him Priest and Prophet of Israel, and his assistant in the great work of liberating the nation from Egypt (vi). While Moses was engaged in the mount (forty days,) Aaron made a calf of gold, in imitation of the Apis (bull) of Egypt (xxxii). He was jealous of the power of Moses, and joined Miriam in murmurs against him; but when he saw his sister's leprosy he repented and begged forgiveness for both (Num. xii). He also showed a want of faith in God at Meribah (xx.), and as a punishment was denied entrance into Canaan, and died at Mosera, on Mt. Hor, aged 123 (Ex. xx). A tomb called Aaron's is shown on a summit of Mt. Hor.

AB (father). Absalom, makes peace; Abner, causes light. ABBA, father, as used by Jesus (Mark xiv. 36), and Paul (Rom. viii. 15; Gal. iv. 6).—2. The name of the fifth (sacred) month, as used after the captivity.

ABAG'THA (father or cause of fortune). An officer of the presence before King Ahasuerus (Esth. i. 10).

ABA'NA (perrenial). Amana. The main river of Damascus, now called Barada. It has several channels, and irrigates the whole city and suburbs. Rises in Anti-Lebanon, near Zebedany (and a tributary at Ain-Fijy), 23 miles N. W. of Damascus, and 2300 feet higher. It empties into the lake and marsh of Ateibeh, 15 miles E. of the city. See 2 K. v. 12.

AB'ARIM (beyond). A mountain range east of the dead sea and the Jordan. Nebo is its highest peak, and Pisgah is the top of Nebo. Average height 2,000 to 4,000 feet.

AB'BA. Father. The ancient Aramaic word. The peculiar term for the father-God used by Jesus.

AB'DI. Ancestor of Ethan the singer (1 Chr. vi. 44).—2. Father of Kish (2 Chr. xxix. 12).—3. One of the sons of Elam (Ezr. x. 26).

AB'DIEL (servant of God), Abdallah in Arabic. Son of Guni (1 Chr. v. 15). The name is noted for its use by Milton, in his Paradise Lost, for an angel,—"Among the faithless, faithful only he."

AB'DON (servile). BEDAN in 1 Sam. ii. 11. A judge of Israel.—2. Son of Shishak.—3. Eldest son of Jehiel, son of Gibeon.—4. Son of Micah, also called Achbor. Had forty sons and thirty nephews.

ABED'NEGO (servant of Nego—that is, Mercury the god). The name given by the Chaldeans to Daniel's companion Azariah (Dan. i. 3).

A'BEL (weakness, breath). In Hebrew HEBEL. Second son of Adam; killed by his brother Cain (Gen. iv).

A'BEL (meadow). Several places so named.—1. A'BEL-BETH-MAA'CHAH or ABEL-MAIM; a strong city on the slope of Mt. Hermon, near the Jordan, where Joab besieged Sheba (2 Sam. xx. 14).—2. A'BEL-KERA-MIM (of the vineyards). Near Rabbath, and even now famous for its wines (Judg. xi. 33).—3. A'BEL-MEHO-LAH (of dancing). South of Bethshan near Jordan. The birth-place of Elisha (1 K. xix. 16), and noted for Gibeon's victory over Midian (Judg. vii. 22).—4. ABEL-MIZRAIM (of the Egypts). Near Hebron, where Joseph, his brethren, and the Egyptians mourned for Jacob (Gen. l. 11). Lost.—5. ABEL-SHITTIM (of the acacias). In Moab, near the head of the Dead Sea. The last camping ground of the Exodus (Num. xxxiii. 49). Acacia trees are now found wherever there is water in that region.

A'BEZ. Town in Issachar (Josh. xix. 20). Now Tubas, near Shunem.

A'BI (father). Abijah. Mother of King Hezekiah (2 K. xviii. 2).

ABI'ASAPH (the gatherer). Head of a family of Kohathites (Ex. vi. 24). Noted persons of this family were Samuel the prophet, and Elkanah his father, and Heman, the singer. The family lived in Mount Ephriam (1 Sam i).

ABI'ATHAR (abundance). The only son of Ahimelech the priest, who escaped Saul's massacre at Nod (1 Sam. xxii.), and who joined David in his flight, and was afterwards priest with Zadok in David's reign. "Solomon thrust out Abiathar from being priest unto the Lord," fulfilling the doom of Eli's house.

ABI'DAH (wise). Grandson of Abraham by Keturah (Gen. xxv. 4; 1 Chr. i. 33).

CITY OF JERUSALEM.

AB'IDEN (father of the judge). Chief in Benjamin at the Exodus (Num. i. 2).

A'BIEL. Abi'el (strong). Father of Kish, grandfather of Saul and Abner.—2. One of David's thirty "mighty men."

ABIE'ZER (helper). Eldest son of Gilead (Josh. xvii. 2), formerly of the east of Jordan, later of Ophrah, a lost place, which was near the south border of Esdraelon. Gideon was of this family (Judg. vi. 34).—2. One of David's "mighty men." ABIEZRITES, the family title.

AB'IGAIL (maker of joy). Nabal's beautiful wife, who saved her husband from David's anger—Nabal having died ten days after, David made her his wife (1 Sam. xxvi. 14).—2. A sister of David, mother of Amasa.

ABIHA'IL (mighty). Father of Zuriel, Chief of the Merari (Num. iii. 35).—2. Abishur's wife (1 Chr. ii. 29).—3. Son of Huri of Gad (1 Chr. v. 14).—4. Rehoboam's wife (2 Chr. xi. 18), a descendant of Eliab, David's elder brother.—5. Father of Esther, and uncle of Mordecai (Esth. ii. 15).

ABI'HU (God is father). Second son of Aaron by Elizabeth. He was consecrated with his father and brothers for the ministry. Abihu and his brother Nadab lost their lives for an error in the altar service, while intoxicated. (?)

ABI'JAH (father God). A son of Samuel, whose misconduct gave the Israelites the occasion to demand a change of government to a monarchy. (1 Sam. viii. 1).—2. Son and successor of Rohoboam (B. C. 958). He followed the idolatries of his father (1 K. xiv. 23).

ABĬ'LA, ABILĒ'NE (grassy meadow). On the E. slope of Mt. Hermon. Mentioned by Josephus (Ant. 14, 13, 3). The name is derived from Abel, the first martyr (by tradition). ABILA was the capital city of the district, under the Romans, and its ruins are now seen on the banks of the Barada ravine, 12 miles N. W. of Damascus. The district is well watered by the Abana, and by many other streams from Anti-Lebanon; is fertile and affords good pasture. When Luke wrote (iii. 1) the tetrarchy was divided between Lysanias and Philip. There is a coin bearing the name and title of Lysanias of Abilene.

ABIM'AEL (father of Mael). Of Joktan (Gen. x. 28). A supposed trace of the name is in Mali, a town in Arabia (the Minæans).

ABIM'ELECH (father-king). A title of the kings of Philistia.—1. King of Gerar in the time of Abraham, B. C. 1898 (Gen. xx.). The kings of those days had the right (or power) of choosing the fairest unmarried women for themselves (Gen. xii.; Esther ii. 3).—2. King of Gerar in Isaac's time, B. C. 1804 (Gen. xxvi).—3. Son of Gideon, and king of Shechem (Judg. ix.). He was the first who attempted to make himself a king in Israel.

ABIN'ADAB (princely). A Levite of Kirjathaim, in whose house the ark "rested" for 20 years (1 Sam. vii. 1).—2. Second son of Jesse (1 Sam. xvi. 8).—3. Son of Saul, killed on Mt. Gilboa (1 Sam. xxxi. 2).—4. Father of one of Solomon's cabinet officers (1 K. iv. 11).

ABRAHAM GIVING LOT HIS CHOICE OF COUNTRY.

AB'ĬNER. Hebrew form of ABNER.

ABĬN'OAM (gracious). Barak's father (Judg. iv. 6).

ABĬ'RAM (high). Reubenite and conspirator. See KORAH—2. Eldest son of Hiel, who died because his father undertook to rebuild Jericho (1 K. xvi.; Josh. vi.).

ABISĒ'I. Son of Phinehas (2 Esd. i. 2).

AB'ĬSHAG (cause of error). The beautiful Shunemite wife of David in his old age.

ABĬSH'AI (gift-maker). Son of David's sister Zeruiah, brother of Joab, and one of David's chief and best officers.

ABISH'ALOM (peaceful). Father of Maachah, wife of Rehoboam and mother of Abijah (1 K. xv. 2). Same as Absalom.

ABISHU'A (of happiness). Son of Bela (1 Chr. viii. 4).—2. Son of Phinehas, father of Bukki (1 Chr. vi. 4). High-priest after Phinehas and before Eli. Iosepos, in Josephus (Ant. 8, 1, 3).

AB'ISHUR (upright). Son of Shammai (1 Chr. ii. 28).

AB'ISUM. Son of Phinehas (1 Esd. viii. 2).

AB'ITAL (protection). Wife of David (2 Sam. iii. 4).

ABĬ'TUB (goodness). Son of Shaharaim by Hushim (1 Chr. viii. 2).

ABĬ'UD. Grandson of Zerubbabel by Shelomith (Matt. i. 13).

ĂB'NER (light-maker). Cousin of Saul and commander-in-chief of his army. After Saul's death he made Ishbosheth, Saul's son, king, but betrayed him to David, and was killed by the friends of Asahel, in blood revenge (Num. xxv. 19). David mourned his untimely loss, following his bier.

ABRAHAM'S OAK, NEAR HEBRON.

ABOMINĀ'TION. Any thing or custom detested or disliked for religious reasons. The Egyptians would not eat with any foreign people, or eat anything touched by them; and the Hebrews adopted a similar rule. The ABOMINATION OF DESOLATION (Matt. xxiv. 15; Dan. ix. 27), is a reference to an idol worship (of images) on or near the sacred altar on Moriah. See ANTIOCHUS EPIPHANES.

Ā'BRĂHĂM (father of a multitude). First named ABRAM (of elevation). His name was changed, and he received from God the PROMISE of the blessing to all nations in his posterity, when he was 99 years old. Son of TERAH, born in UR, "of the Chaldees," B. C. 1996; had two elder brothers, HARAN and NAHOR, and a half sister, SARAH, (Iscah), who was his wife and the mother of Isaac. The spiritual element in the life of Abraham is the chief topic in the Bible narrative, very few incidents of his natural life being recorded. He was 60 when his father's family left Ur and went to Haran (where Terah died, aged 215), and 75 when the promise was first made, when, as directed, he entered Canaan, and fixed his camp under a sacred oak near Shechem, where he built an altar and worshiped God, receiving a promise of the inheritance of the land by his descendants.

Abraham is the first recorded worshiper of the one true God. The promise made to him was two-fold—temporal and spiritual: that his descendants should be many and prosperous, and that by him all the families of the earth should be blessed. The promise has been fulfilled in both ways: his descendants, both Jews and Arabs, have been and are now countless, and the spiritual blessings, by the rapid distribution of the Bible through the world, are reaching all the "families."

Besides Sarah he had a wife named KETURAH, who bore him several sons; and also a handmaid, Hagar, whose son, Ishmael, was the head of a great family (see ISHMAEL).

Before Isaac was born, Lot, his nephew, was regarded as his heir, and lived with him. He built an altar between Bethel and Hai. From here he went south "going and pulling up" his tent-pins, towards Beersheba, whence a famine drove him into Egypt.

Pharaoh hearing of the beauty of Sarai, according to the kingly privilege, took her into his family, but soon returned her to Abraham with presents—"a blessing" of cattle and servants, so that when Abram returned into Canaan he was much richer in cattle, silver and gold. Lot had been with him, and again they camped near Bethel.

HEBRON.

Their cattle having increased to a great number, and contentions among their servants arising, Abram and Lot separated, one choosing the plains of Jericho and the other the hills of Judea. After this time the promise was again repeated; and Abram pitched his tent in the oak grove near Mamre, where he built another altar.

He is first called THE HEBREW on the rescue of his nephew Lot from Chedorlaomer; but his language is supposed to have been Chaldaic, rather than the Hebrew of the Old Testament.

At this time he could arm 318 of his trained servants, showing that his family must have been very large. The Bedawins of Syria are now exact representatives of the ancient patriarch, in their manner of living in tents, by keeping flocks, in habits and religion, and in being ready on the shortest notice to make a raid for defence or reprisal. At Mamre his faith was made stronger by having the promise once more repeated, and by the prophesy of the bondage in Egypt, with the deliverance.

Ishmael was born of Hagar when Abram was 85 years old, and Sarah 75, and was to have been considered a son of Sarai, but the childless woman could not restrain her envy and jealousy of the favored mother, Hagar. When Abram was 99 the promise was renewed, a distinction being made—of temporal blessings for Ishmael and spiritual for Isaac who was promised to Sarai. Abram's name was changed to Abraham and his wife's to Sarah, and the covenant of circumcision was renewed to all the family and servants.

A few days after he entertained "three men," who appeared at his tent door in the dress and manner of the natives. This is one of the most beautiful instances on record of ancient customs. The patriarch and his wife, with their own hands, prepared refreshments, and stood by while their guests ate. Travelers in Syria meet with such attentions now among Abraham's descendants. When the promise of a son to Sarah was renewed, and the destruction of the cities of the plain announced, Abraham discovered that he "had entertained angels unawares." He begged to save his nephew Lot and his family, and the next morning, when offering the daily sacrifice, as he saw the ascending smoke from the plain, he probably felt sure of Lot's safety.

During the next few months he practiced the same deception on the Abimelech of Gerar that he had 23 years before on the Pharoah of Egypt. The king was warned of his danger in a dream, and dismissed Sarah with presents.

Isaac was born B. C. 1896, and Ishmael (with his mother) was dismissed at the time Isaac was weaned (at 3 years), because Ishmael mocked at the child (probably offered pretended worship to the child of the promise).

Isaac was 25 when he was laid on the altar, and saved from burning by the angel's voice, Abraham's faith having proved true. His mother died at Hebron 12 years after, at the age of 127, and was buried in Machpelah, which Abraham bought of the sons of Heth. This legal conveyance of land is the oldest on record.

Abraham sent Eliezer to renew family ties with his family in Haran, and get a wife for Isaac, when that beautiful and touching incident of "Rebekah at the Well" occurred. This brilliant picture includes all the requisites of a perfect marriage—the sanction of parents, favor of God, domestic habits of the wife, her beauty, modest consent, kindness, and her successful hold on her husband's love even while living in the same tent with her mother-in-law.

Abraham's descendants occupy the land from Egypt to the Euphrates, besides those that are "scattered and peeled" all over the world.

He died aged 175, and was buried in the cave of Machpelah by his sons Isaac and Ishmael. To this day he is called the "friend of God," and is reverenced alike, as the Father of the Faithful by Jew, Mohammedan and Christian.

ABRAHAM'S BOSOM. Meaning a place of peace, repose and happiness. See LORD'S SUPPER.

ABRŌ'NAH (passage). Station in the desert near Eziongeber.

ABRŌ'NAS. Torrent near Cilicia, perhaps NAHR-ABRAIM, the ancient Adonis. Arbonai in Judg. ii. 24.

ĂB'SALOM (peacemaker). Third son of David, only son of his mother, Maachah, daughter of Talmai, king of Geshur, born at Hebron. He is described as a very handsome man, having a very heavy head of hair. Absalom killed his half-brother, Amnon, for an outrage on his sister Tamar, and fled for security to his grandfather, king Talmai, where he stayed 3 years. Joab, by the help of a talented woman of Tekoah, induced David to pardon Absalom and recall him, but kept him two years longer out of his presence. By the death of Amnon, and it may be of Chilead also, Absalom was the oldest son of the king living, and he was ambitious for the throne, plotted for the place of power, "stole the hearts of the people" by flatteries and promises, and proclaimed himself king at Hebron. His father, David, was obliged to fly to Mahanaim, and Absalom took possession of Jerusalem. The crafty Hushai, whom David sent to advise and assist Ahithophel in counseling Absalom, gained time for the true king, and the forces of Absalom were defeated in the wood of Ephraim, and Absalom himself, having entangled his hair in a tree, was killed by Joab, David's general, and buried under a heap of loose stones as a mark of contempt. David waited in the gate of Mahanaim for the news of the battle, and mourned bitterly when he knew his son was dead.

ADORATION—MODERN EGYPTIAN.

Absalom raised a pillar "in his lifetime," in the king's dale, but the pillar and its place have disappeared, leaving no trace. The monument called Absalom's tomb, in the Kidron valley, is a modern structure, nearly all cut from the solid rock, and on a side hill, not in a dale.

AB'SALON. Ambassador to Lysias (2 Macc. xi. 17).

ABŪ'BUS. Father of Ptolemeus, son-in-law to Simon Maccabeus (1 Macc. xvi. 11).

ĂC'CĂD. In Shinar, built by Nimrod. Akkerkoof (Arabic name) is 9 miles E. of the Tigris. A ruined brick mound 400 feet around, 125 high, cemented by bitumen, and divided into layers of 12 to 20 feet by reeds, and remains of canals, reservoirs, and other works, show the size and importance of the ancient city.

ĂC'CHŌ. ĂCRE. (hot sand?). PTOLEMAIS. St. John D'Acre. Seaport 8 miles north of Carmel, by the bay of Acre. The ancient port is filling with sand, and large ships must land at Hepha, near Carmel. The plain of Acre is 6 miles wide, to the hills of Galilee, and is one of the most fertile in Palestine. It was given to Asher by Joshua, but never conquered (Judg. i.). Paul stayed here one day. Very few antiquities are to be found in the modern town, except such as have been used in rebuilding the walls and houses. Napoleon failed to capture Acre in 1799. During the crusades it was an important city, next to Jerusalem. It has been taken by many people, Egyptian who named it Ptolemais; Antiochus the Great; the Maccabees (?); Alexander Balas; Alexander Janneus failed, but Cleopatra succeeded; Tigranes; the Romans; Crusaders; Mohammedans; Ibrahim Pasha; and is now ruled by the Turks. Pop. 5,000 to 10,000.

ĂCEL'DĂMA (field of blood). Bought for the 30 pieces of silver that Judas received for betraying Jesus and returned. Potter's Field. On the steep south slope of Hinnom, opposite the Siloam pool. A few old olive trees grow near an old ruin called the house of Ananus. The hill side is full of rock-hewn tombs. Ship-loads of earth have been carried away from this spot as holy earth, and the Campo Santo (holy field) at Pisa is filled with it.

ĂCHĂ'IĂ. Province of Rome in Greece. Gallio was proconsul when Paul was there (Acts xviii. 12).

A'CHAN (troubler). Stoned at Jericho for stealing public property (Josh. vii.).

A'CHAR (trouble). Variation of Achan.

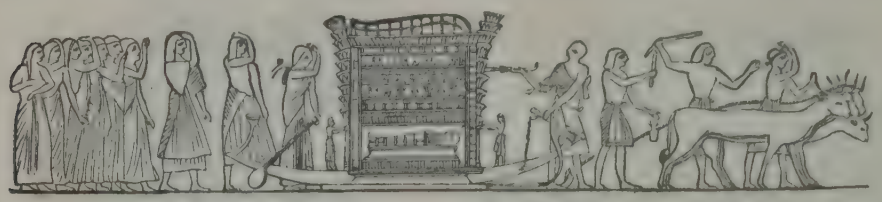
ACH'BOR (mouse). Father of Baal-hanan, king of Edom (Gen. xxxvi. 38).—2. Son of Michaiah, in Josiah's time (2 K. xxii. 12).



ANCIENT EGYPTIAN FUNERAL PROCESSION.

AHCIÀCH'ARUS. Keeper of the seal of Esarhaddon, king of Nineveh (Tobit i. 21). Nephew to Tobit, son of his brother Anael. Supposed to be the Hebrew for Mordecai.

ACHI'AS. Son of Phinees, high-priest (2 Esd. i. 2). AHIJAH?

A'CHIM. Son of Sadoc, father of Eliud. In Hebrew JACHIN (Gen. xlvi. 10; Mat. i. 14).

A'-CHIOR (fighter). A general in the army of Holofernes (Judg. v.), after, a convert to Judaism (Judg. xiv.).

A'CHISH. King at Gath (Ps. xxxiv. Abimelech). David fled twice to him from Saul. (1 Sam. xxvii. 3-12, etc.)

ACHI'TOB. AHITUB, high-priest (1 Esd. viii. 2).

A'CHOR (valley of trouble). Near Jericho, in Wady Kelt. Where Achan was stoned.

ACH'SA. Daughter of Caleb (1 Ch. ii. 49).

ACH'SAH (anklet). Daughter of Caleb, given to his nephew, Othniel, in reward for leading the attack on Debir. The "upper and lower springs" that were given her as a dower, with the south land (Negeb), are located 6 miles S. W. of Hebron.

EARTHEN LAMP. 1.

AÇH'SHÀPH (incantation). Royal city of Canaan (Josh. xi.). HEPHA on the bay of Acre.

AÇH'ZIB. Judah in the Shefela.—2. In Asher, from which the Canaanites were not driven out. Ecdippa. Now Es Zib, 7 miles N. of Acre. After the return from captivity this was the most northern limit of Israel.

ACTS OF THE APOSTLES. The similarity of words and forms of sentences between the ACTS and LUKE leads to the belief that Luke wrote both. The book repeats a part of Christ's history, especially the ascension and what attended that event, and the advent of the Holy Spirit at the Pentecost, with the wonderful success of their preaching. The Church in Jerusalem is then noticed; its persecutions, and the conversion of one of its most violent enemies (Paul); and then the narrative includes the efforts made to spread the Gospel by Peter and by Paul. The chief interest in the book, after the introduction, is the activity, success, sufferings and teachings of the great apostle. The book seems unfinished. The author was a companion of Paul, and a witness of most of the acts he records. His design was to show the co-operation of God in spreading Christianity, and to prove the perfect equality of right and privilege in the new Church of Gentile and Jew, and to give illustrations of the power and working of the religion of Jesus. Written after A. D. 63. The place is not known. Perhaps in fragments as they traveled or lived in different cities, finishing the work at Rome. See HISTORY OF THE BIBLE.

There are several spurious books called Acts; of Christ, of Paul, and others. See APOCRYPHA.

AD'AH (beauty). First wife of Lamech, mother of Jabal and Jubal.—2. Daughter of Elon the Hittite, one of the three wives of Esau, mother of Eliphaz, and so of the Edomites (Gen. xxxvi.). BASHEMATH in Gen. xxvi.

ADÀ'IAH (adorned by Jehovah). Maternal grandfather of Josiah (2 K. xxii. 1).—2. Gershonite, ancestor of Asaph (1 Ch. vi. 41). Iddo in v. 21.—3. Son of Shimhi, a Benjamite (1 Ch. viii. 21).—4. Son of Jeroham.—5. Of the descendants of Bani (Jedeus in Esd. ix. 30; Ezr. x. 29).—6. Son of another Bani—both 5 and 6 took foreign wives.—7. Of the line of Pharez.—8. Ancestor of Maaseiah (2 Ch. xxiii. 1).

ADA'LIA. Son of Haman (Esth. ix. 8).

AD'ÀM (the man; or reddish tint). The peculiar work of the 6th day of the creation, the crown of the whole fabric, was man, made in the divine image, he alone of all animals having a spritual life. Adam was made male and female, and the two were placed in the garden Eden (EDEN), where proper food abounded. Some believe that a pair of each race were made, black, brown, red, yellow, white, and many others, because there are such great differences in complexion and figure among mankind.

The original state of man was one of activity and enjoyment. God assumed form and speech, and instructed His children how to dress and keep the garden, and exercised their faculties in naming the animals that He had made; and taught them something of the qualities and relations of vegetable, earths, the heavens, and external objects to which they were related.

The forming of the woman from a rib of Adam has been declared a poetic myth; but the lesson is just as surely taught, whether it is a fact or a fable, that woman stands in a peculiarly close relation to man. The "tree of the knowledge of good and evil," and the "tree of life," were tests of obedience, and as such might have been of any kind. The serpent is described as if it had been a special agent—perhaps one of those spirits that are believed to be superior to man, invisible to his eyes, good and bad, powerful, and always contending for his soul (2 Cor. ii. 11).

Woman was sentenced to endure the pains of child-bearing, and the humiliating dependance on a husband; and man to labor, with or without reward, and both to be subject to death (spiritual?). The sentence of the serpent is hard to interpret. The serpent is not CURSED literally, but rather blessed in having an extra means of protection in the dread of all other animals; he does not suffer by crawling on his belly because he is especially made to go in that way; and he does not eat dust. The denunciation of the serpent was symbolical, and is by some said to be the first gospel promise. "I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed; he will attack thee on the head, and thou wilt attack him at the heel." The serpent was the spirit of lying and cruelty, as opposed to God, holy, good and wise.

It is probable that the first garments were made of the skins of animals, offered in sacrifice.

Cain was born the year after the expulsion; Abel a few years later, and Seth at least 130 years after Cain. Other sons and daughters were born to them of whose history nothing is recorded.

Adam's death at the age of 930 is stated, but that of Eve is not given.

ÀD'AM (red earth). City on the Jordan near Zarthan (Josh. iii. 16).

AD'AMAH. N. W. of the Sea of Galilee (Josh. xix. 36). Lost.

AD'AMI. DAMIN.

À'DAR. Name after the captivity of the 6th month. The holy days in it were: 7th, a fast for the death of Moses; 9th, a fast for the memory of the School of Hillel; 13th, Fast of Esther, and for the death of Nicanor; 14th and 15th, the fast of Purim (Esther ix. 21).

AD'ASA. Ephraim near Beth-horon (Jos. Ant. xii. 10, 5; 1 Macc. vii. 40, 45).

AD'BEEL (Sign of God). Son of Ishmael (Gen. xxv. 13).

AD'DAN (strong). ADDON (Ezra ii. 59).

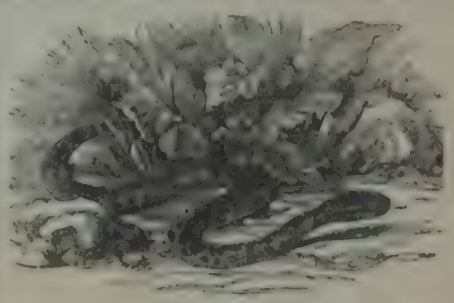
AD'DAR. Son of Bela (1 Ch. viii. 3). ARD in Num. xxvi. 40.

ADDER. There are four Hebrew names translated adder.—1. Acshub, in Ps. cxl. 3, quoted by Paul in Rom. iii. 13. The original (coiled and hiding) would apply to any kind of serpent.—2.



ADDER.

Pethen, the cobra.—3. Tsepha, in Prov. xxiii. 32, adder; in Is. xi. 8; Je. viii. 17, cockatrice. The original means to hiss. In the Septuagnit, basilisk—which is a fabulous serpent.—4. Shephiphon, only in Gen. xlix. 17, of Dan, "a serpent by the way." Probably the horned viper, the asp of Cleopatra, found in great numbers in the deserts. Arabia Siffon. It is extremely venomous, only 15 inches long, but fatal even in slight scratches.

AD'DI. Son of Cosam, father of Melchi (Luke iii. 28). 2. See ADNA (1 Esd. ix. 31).

AD'DO. Grandfather of Zechariah (Esd. vi. 1). IDDO.

ADDUS. His sons returned with Zerubbabel (1 Esd. v. 34). 2. A priest removed for losing his family record (1 Esd. v. 38). Called Barzillai, in Ezra and Nehemiah, whose daughter Augia he married.

A'DER. Son of Beriah, of Aijalon (1 Chr. viii. 15). EDER.

MODERN EGYPTIAN FUNERAL PROCESSION.

ÀDIAB'ENE. The chief of the six provinces of Assyria, watered by the great and little Zab, which flow into the Tigris.

AD'IDÁ. In the Shefela, fortified by Simon Maccabeus against Tryphon.—2. Mentioned by Josephus near Jordan. HADID. ADITHAIM.

A'DIEL (ornamental). Prince in Simeon (1 Chr. iv. 36).—2. Priest (1 Chr. ix. 12).—3. Ancestor of Azmaveth (1 Chr. xxvii. 25).

A'DIN. 454 of his family returned with Zerubbabel (Ezr. ii. 15), and 51 with Ezra (viii. 16).

AD'INA (pliant). Son of Shiza, David's captain east of Jordan (1 Chr. xi. 42); next in rank to the "30 mighty men."

AD'INO, THE EZNITE. JASHOBEAM.

AD'INUS. JAMIN (1 Esd. ix. 48).

AD'LAI. Ancestor of Shaphat, David's Shepherd (1 Chr. xxvii. 29).

luded to the Roman custom (Gal. iv.), where the law gave the adopted son equal rights with a real son. Abraham did not adopt Hagar's son, nor Jacob the sons of the maids of Leah and Rachel, nor the sons of Joseph; Moses was not adopted by Pharaoh's daughter according to law, but as an exception.

The idol represented the male power of the sun-god, ANAMMELECH, the female.

AD-RA-MYT'-TIUM (named after Adramys, brother of Crœsus, king of Lydia). Seaport in Asia Minor, where the ship belonged in which Paul was wrecked. The gulf of the same name was opposite the island of Lesbos. Pop. 1500, with some commerce.

WAY TO JERICHO. WADY KELT. ADUMMIM.

ADMAH (fort). In the vale of Siddim, always with Zeboim (Gen. x.). It had a king (xiv.), and was destroyed with Sodom and Gomorrah.

ADMA'THA. One of the 7 princes of Persia.

AD'NA (pleasure). Returned with Ezra (x. 30), and married a gentile wife.—2. Priest in Joiakim's reign (Neh. xii. 15).

AD'NAH (pleasure). A Manassite; deserted Saul for David (1 Chr. xii. 20).—2. General of 300,000 in Jehoshaphat's army (2 Chr. xvii. 14).

ADO'NAI (Lord, Master). Hebrew word for Lord, God, and Lord of Hosts.

The Hebrews did not pronounce the sacred name J. A. H. which we now call Jehovah, and its true pronounciation is supposed to be lost; instead of doing so, they said ADONAI when J. A. H. occurred in the text.

ADO'NI-BE'-ZEK (lord of Bezek). Canaanite king of Bezek, 17 miles E. of Shechem. He was head of the Canaanite and Perizzite bands, and was beaten and taken prisoner, maimed and died in Jerusalem, B. C. 1449 (Judg. i.).

ADONI'JAH (my lord is Jehovah). Fourth son of David, born of Haggith at Hebron (2 Sam. iii.). After the death of Amnon and Absalom he made pretensions to the throne of David, supported by Joab and Abiathar, the high priest; but David caused Solomon to be proclaimed and crowned, and invested with authority. Adonijah was pardoned; but after David's death he renewed his attempt on the throne and was executed by Solomon's order (1 K.).

ADONI'RAM (lord, high). Adoram. Chief of the tribute receivers in the reigns of David, Solomon and Rehoboam. He became hateful to the people and was stoned to death (1 K.).

ADONIZE'DEK (lord of justice). King of Jerusalem when Joshua entered Canaan. He joined with four Amorite kings to punish the Gibeonites for their league with Joshua. Being beaten by Joshua, they fled to a cave in Makkedah, where they were taken; had their necks trod upon as a sign of subjection, and were killed and buried in the cave (Josh. x.).

ADOP'TION. Placing as a son one who is not so by birth. Never done by the Hebrews. Paul al-

ADORA'-IM. SHEFELA. Built by Rehoboam (2 Chr. xi.). Dura, a large village 5 ms. S. W. of Hebron, marks the site.

ADORA'TION. The acts and postures in worship are similar in all Oriental nations, and have come down to the present from remote antiquity unchanged. It is believed that the Hebrews in all their prayers used all the forms of posture and prostration that the modern Arabs have grouped into one prayer, which are nine positions. All of these are found on the monuments of Egypt and Assyria. Prayer is made standing, with the hands lifted or crossed or folded; this is the posture before kings or great men. The hands are also stretched forth as in supplication; one hand only is lifted in taking an oath (Gen. xiv.). Kneeling is a common mode (1 K. vii.; Ezra ix.; Dan. vi.; Luke xxii.); prostration of the body, resting on the knees and arms, the forehead touching the ground, and the whole body lying along, the face being down. The monuments show figures kneeling on one knee and smiting the breast; sitting on the heels, the hands being folded, is a very respectful attitude (1 Chr. xvii. 16; 1 K. xviii. 42). Among the Romans prostration was the peculiar act of adoration and worship (Acts x. 26), but Orientals do so in respect or reverence only. Kissing the head (1 Sam. x.), the hand, the hem of the garment, or the earth near the object of respect, and kissing one's own hand (Job xxxi. 27; Hosea xiii. 2), to persons or idols. Holding the hand on the mouth as in kissing it is the highest act of respect and adoration.

A-DRAM'-ME-LECH (fire king). An idol worshiped by the colonists from Assyria in Samaria (2 Kings xvii. 31), by sacrificing children by fire.

A'-DRIA. A'DRIAS. Sea named from Adria on the Po, Italy. At first the name was given to the upper end of the Gulf of Venice; afterwards to the whole gulf; and in Paul's time to the Mediterranean as bounded by Sicily, Italy, Greece and Africa (Acts xxvii. 27).

AD'-RI-EL (God's flock). Son of Barzillai, to whom Saul gave his daughter Merab, who had been promised to David (1 Sam. xvii. 19).

A-DUL'-LAM (people's justice). Judah, in the Shefela (Josh. xvi. 35). A place of great antiquity. Fortified by Rehoboam.

The CAVE OF ADULLAM is located 6 miles N. of Beit Jibrin, and now called Deir Dubban. There are many caves in this region. Some think the cave must have been nearer the Dead Sea, among the mountains, 6 miles S. W. of Bethlehem, in Wady Khureitun.

A-DUL'-TERY. Crime of a married woman with a man not her husband. Or of either man or woman who is bound, with any other person not their mate. Orientals do not include the man in the condemnation. ADULTERY in the O. T. means symbolically idolatry and apostasy from the Hebrew church. In the N. T. "an adulterous generation" (Matt. xii. 39), means a faithless and impious generation—who did not worship the true God, but did worship false gods.

ADUM'MIM (red pass). BENJ. (Josh. xv. 7). On the road from Jericho to Jerusalem, in Wady Kelt. It was always noted for robbers, and was therefore selected for the locality of the parable of the Good Samaritan. (Luke x.) Eight miles E. of Jerusalem there are ruins of a convent and a khan, on opposite sides of the road.

AD'-VENT, THE SECOND. The second coming of Jesus Christ, often foretold by Jesus, and frequently mentioned by the apostles. This event has been looked for and expected in every age and every year since the ascension. Some hold that Christ reigns now, at the right hand of the Father, and must reign until all enemies are put under his feet. They hold that the judgment is now going on; the wicked are passing away; and that men become consciously the subjects of this judgment as they pass into the invisible world.

A'DVŌCATE (Greek Paraclete). The name given to the Holy Spirit by Jesus (John xiv. 16); and to Jesus by John (1 John ii.).

Æ'NEAS. A paralytic healed by Peter (Acts ix. 33), at Lydda.

Æ'NŌN. Enon. (Springs). Near Salim, where John baptized (John iii. 22). Six miles S. of Bethshan, at Tell Redgah. A tomb near is called Shekh Salim. The brook in Wady Ohusneh runs near, and many rivulets wind about in all directions. Here is "much water."

AG'ABUS (locust). One of the 70 disciples. Two prophesies of his are recorded, and their fulfilment (Acts xi. 27–30; xxi. 10). The famine through "all the world" was only through the world in Palestine—the Jews' world. It is mentioned by Josephus (xx. 2, 5), about A. D. 42, 14 years after Agabus met Paul at Cæsarea, and warned him of his sufferings at Jerusalem if he went up there.

A'GAG (burn). A title of the king of the Amalekites, like Pharaoh of the Egyptians, Cæsar of the Romans, and Abimelech of the Philistines (Num. xxiv. 7; 1 Sam. xv. 8). AGAGITE for Amalekite in Esther iii. 1, 10; viii. 3, 5.

AG'A-PE (Gr. agape, to love). The Church perpetuated the commemoration of the death of Jesus by certain symbols at meals; a custom most beautiful and most beneficial; for it was a supporter of love, a solace of poverty, a moderator of wealth, and a discipline of humility. Tertullian, speaking of the Agape does not mention the Eucharist as distinct from the meal. "The nature of our supper may be gathered from its name, the Greek term for love. However much it may cost us, it is real gain to incur such expense in the cause of piety; for we aid the poor by this refreshment; we do not sit down to it till we have first tasted of prayer to God; we eat to satisfy our hunger; we drink no more than benefits the temperate; we feast as those who recollect they are to spend the night in devotion; we converse as those who know that the Lord is an ear-witness. After water for washing hands, and lights have been brought in, every one is required to sing something in the praise of God, either from the Scriptures or from his own thoughts. By this means, if any one has indulged in excess, he is detected. The feast is closed with prayer." Pliny mentions this custom of the Christians, and says they eat common food (not such as was used for idol worship). Paul speaks of the abuse of this custom in 1 Cor. xi. 21; and, perhaps to avoid such abuse, the Eucharist was celebrated apart from any meal from about the year A. D. 150.

AG'ATE. Second precious stone in the high-priest's breastplate (SHEVO in Ex. xxviii. 19). In Is. liv. 12, and Ez. xxvii. 16, CADCOD, meaning a ruby. The same word is also translated chrysoprase and emerald. See PRECIOUS STONES.

ĀGE. Old age. Peculiar respect to old age is a general custom in the Orient, and has been from most remote times. The Scriptures record many instances of such respect and honor. The young rose and stood up in their presence (Lev. xix. 32); and even old men before one especially honored (Job xxix. 8). They were privileged to give the first words of counsel (Job xxxii.; Eccl. xxxii.); and old men, ELDERS, became a class, such as the FATHERS, and SENATORS in Rome, and were regarded as the depositaries of knowledge and experience (Job xv.). The attainment of old age was set forth as a blessing (Gen. xv.; Job v.), in prolonging the enjoyment of life, and a sign of peaceful times (Zech. viii.; Is. lxv.); a reward for piety, and a token of God's favor. Of all marks of respect, that to age is most willingly paid; because we may ourselves become aged, and receive such homage.

AGŌ'RA. A public place, broad street, market-place, forum; where goods are sold, meetings held for debate, and trial, and to idle away the time. See AREOPAGUS.

a, Plow. b, yoke. f, goad &c. e, points.

AG'RICULTURE. The earliest records are of the best men engaged in this pursuit. Laws regulating its affairs formed the chief code of the Hebrews, and tended to produce an equality in interest, binding the son and elevating the slave to a common servitude. The earth was the Lord's, and all were tenants to him, payable in the rent of the Sabbatical year. The family possession was inherited, and if sold must be returned on the year of Jubilee to the original owner, and wealthy owners of many fields were denounced (Is. v. 8). IRRIGATION was always needed for the best results in Palestine—being neglected now, the soil is dry and sterile—although the rains of Canaan distinguished the country from the rainless Nile valley. There is in Palestine almost every variety of climate. Perpetual snow on Mt. Hermon and Mt. Lebanon; at Jericho, 60 or 80 miles distant, there is tropical heat, and snow is never seen. The hills of Bashan, Gilead, Galilee, Samaria, and Judea are the homes of forests, vines, fig-trees, and all kinds of fruit trees and vegetables; the plains produce bananas, oranges, lemons, besides all these, and frost is almost unknown. Palms formerly grew all over the country, as far north as Beirut and Baalbek. The greatest heat at Jerusalem is 90° (Fah.), and the cold 30°. Damascus is in a cooler latitude, and the record is 88° and 29°. The sky is almost cloudless for a large part of the year; the variations of sunshine and rain affecting only the autumn and winter months. The autumnal rains begin in the latter part of October, and gently; continuing through November and December; and rain is rare after March, seldom or never so late as May. The ground is not often frozen in winter; snow lying during the night only; and in the plain of Jericho no snow or frost is ever seen, but there is on the hills around a spring-like temperature and air. The summer heat is oppressive, and fatal on exposure, but not on the higher hills, where heavy dews fall, and the nights are cool. The winter is the season of green fields and foliage, the summer heat destroying the grass. The HARVEST begins in the plain early in April; in Esdraelon in May, and on the hills in June.

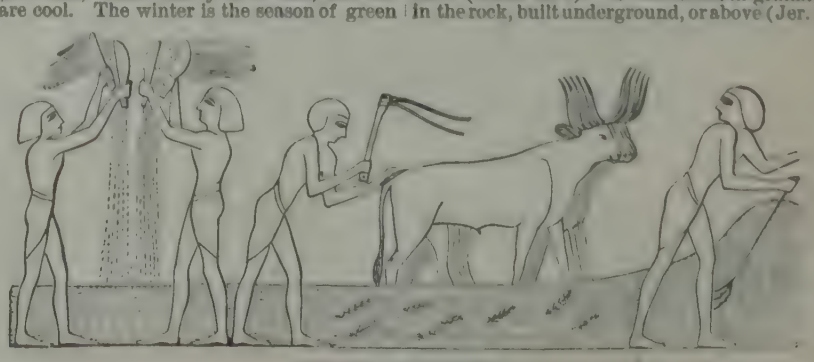
PLOWING AND SOWING.

PLOW. EGR.

The seasons were usually counted as two in the Scriptures, but we find six terms altogether (used by the Rabbins):—1. SEED-TIME, Oct. to Dec.; 2. WINTER, Dec. to Feb.; 3. COLD, Feb. to April; 4. HARVEST, April to June; 5. HEAT, June to Aug.; 6. SUMMER, Aug. to October.

The terraces, formed by stone walls along the hillsides, are a constant feature, and a necessity, in the hill country. On these narrow levels the vines, fruits and crops were raised, and frequent reference to fertilizers show a high state of culture, probably when the population was the greatest. Fences were not used, but watchmen guarded the ripening products, and the view was variegated by their different colors. The boundaries were marked by trees or piles of stones (Job xxiv.; Deut. xix. 14), and about gardens, orchards and vineyards there were walls (or hedges), having towers for watching and defense.

The monuments bear the sculptured figures of many implements, and pictures of the modes of using them in field and garden work. The PLOW is a kind of heavy hoe, used in the hand or drawn by animals or men (Job i. 14). It was made of a crooked root, shod with iron and fitted with one or two handles. The yoke was a straight or bent stick with rope or bent bows. The ox goad was a pole six or eight feet, sharp at one end, and fitted with a spade at the other for clearing the plow, or for breaking clods (Is. xxviii. 24; Hosea x. 11; Job. xxxix. 10, where "harrow the valleys" should be "break the clods," as in the Hebrew). Seed was sown and hoed (harrowed) or plowed in, in drills or broadcast. Moses alluded in Deut. xi. 10 to the mode of sowing during the inundation, or by irrigation, in Egypt by using the foot (to open or stop the little rills of water). Reaping was of several modes: pulling up by the roots (as barley and doora are now in Egypt); and as wheat and barley do not grow very high (20 to 30 inches), it is pulled for convenience; by the sickle, at the ground, or just under the heads, as the straw may be wanted or not. Ears were carried in baskets; the whole stalk in sheaves (Gen. xxxvii. 7), and a cart is mentioned in Micah ii. 13. Camels or other animals are used to carry the produce. The poor were allowed to glean (Ruth ii. 7; Lev. xix. 9). Threshing was done on level places made in the field, called floors, about fifty feet across, circular. The grain was trodden out with cattle, arranged three or four abreast, and driven around, and the cattle were not to be muzzled (Deut. xxv. 4). Sticks and flails were used to thresh out small quantities (Ruth ii. 17; Is. xxviii. 27). Threshing machines were made of frames filled with sharp stones or pieces of iron set in holes, or fitted with circular saws (Land and Book ii. 315), which were drawn over the grain (Is. xxviii. 27; xli. 15; Amos i. 3). Winnowing was done, and is now, by tossing the grain against the wind with a fork or fan (Matt. iii 12; Jer. iv. 11), and then passing it through a sieve (Amos ix. 9). It was stored in granaries cut in the rock, built underground, or above (Jer. xli. 8).



THRESHING AND WINNOWING.

A'GUR (one of the assembly). Author of the sayings in Prov. xxx. Native of Massa, East Arabia, and lived about B. C. 600. Some have supposed that this was an assumed name of Solomon, such as was "Koheleth," translated "preacher."

A'HAB (father's brother). Son of Omri, king of Israel, and reigned 22 years, B. C. 918 to B. C. 897. His wife was JEZEBEL, daughter of Ethbaal, king of Tyre, a woman of strong character, and an idolatress. She succeeded in introducing the worship of Baal into Israel, a temple being built at Samaria for the worship. Elijah, the prophet, pronounced the judgment of God on Ahab's house, and he died of wounds received in battle (see 1 Kings).—2. A false prophet, son of Kolaiah, who deceived the Jewish exiles in Babylon (Jer. xxix. 21).

AHAR'AH. Third son of Benjamin (1 Chr. viii. 1).

AHAR'HEL. The family (in Judah) traced its descent from Ashur, a posthumous son of Hezron, through Coz (1 Chr. iv. 8).

AHAS'BAI (refuge in God). Father of Eliphelet (2 Sam. xxiii. 34).

AHASUĒ'RUS (Achashverosh). The title of the Persian king, and means lion-king. Four persons are mentioned by this title, who were, 1. ASTYAGES (Dan. ix.); 2. CAMBYSES (Ezra iv.); 3. The husband of Vashti and Esther, the same who was called XERXES by the Greeks; the marriage with Esther is assigned to his 7th year, in which he returned to Shushan from his disastrous expedition to Greece; 4. Mentioned in Tobit xiv. 15, who was Cyaxares I.

AHĀ'VA (river). River in Babylonia, on whose banks Ezra collected the Jewish exiles for the return to Jerusalem (Ezra viii. 15, 31). Hit.

GLASS LAMP.

A'HAZ (possessor). Son and successor of Jotham, and 11th king of Judah. Reigned 16 years, B. C. 714 to 729. He respected neither God, the law nor the prophets.

AHAZĪ'AH (holden of Jehovah). Son and successor of Ahab, and 8th king of Israel. B. C. 897 to 896.—2. Son of Jehoram, 6th king of Judah. B. C. 885.

AHĪ'AH (friend of God). AHIJAH.

AHĪ'AM (father's brother). One of David's 30 heroes (2 Sam. xxiii. 33).

AHĪ'AN. Of Shemida, Manasseh (1 Chr. vii. 19).

AHĪ'EZER (helper). Chief in Dan, in the Exode (Num. i. 12).—2. Chief of a band of bowmen with David (1 Chr. xii. 3).

AHĪ'HUD (brother of Jews). Chief in Asher; one of Joshua's assistants in the allotment (Num. xxxiv. 27).—2. Chief in Benjamin (1 Chr. viii. 7).

AHĪ'JAH, or AHIAH (friend of Jehovah). Son of Ahitub; grandson of Phinehas (1 Sam. xiv. 3, 18). He was a priest at Shiloh, in care over the ark; giving oracles by the aid of the ark and the ephod. It is not known what caused the neglect of the ark in the latter day of Saul's reign. Saul's rash curse, Jonathan's danger, the failure to get an answer from the oracle, the peoples' rescue of Jonathan, led to coolness between the king and the high priest, which ended in a terrible revenge, after Ahimelech's favor to David. Ahimelech may have been Ahijah's brother.—2. Son of Bela. ACHIA (1 Chr. viii. 7).—3. Son of Jerahmeel.—4. One of David's 30 (1 Chr. xi. 36).—5. Levite in David's reign; treasurer in the temple (1 Chr. xxvi. 20).—6. AHIAT. Son of Shisha, an officer of Solomon's (1 K. iv. 3).—7. AHIAS. Prophet in Shiloh (Shilonite), in the time of Solomon and Jeroboam (1 K. xiv. 2), who prophesied the breaking loose of the ten tribes from Soloman's kingdom in punishment for his idolatry (1 K. xi. 31–39); and the death of Ahijah, the king's son, and at the same time the captivity of Israel (1 K. xiv. 6–16). See 2 Chr. ix. 29, for a reference to work by Ahijah, now lost.—8. Father of Baasha, king of Israel (of Issachar), (1 K. xv. 27).—9. A chief who signed the covenant with Nehemiah (Neh. x. 26).

AHĪ'KAM (enemy's brother). Son of Shaphan the scribe (2 K. xxii. 12). He has one of the delegates sent to Huldah, the prophetess, by the king. He protected Jeremiah, the prophet, after he was taken out of the pit (Jer. xxxix. 14).

AHĪ'LUD (maker). Father of Jehoshaphat the recorder (2 Sam. viii. 16).—2. Father of Baanā (1 K. iv. 12).

A-HĪ-MA'-AZ (choleric). 1. Father of Saul's wife, Ahinoam.—2. Son and successor of Zadok, high priest, in David's reign.—3. Son-in-law of Solomon, and one of his 12 chief purveyors, or tax collectors; whose district was Naphtali.

AHĪ'MAN (giver). One of three famous giants. Anakim of Hebron (Num. xiii. 22).

AHIM'ELECH (king's brother). Great grandson of Eli, priest at Nob, who gave David some of the sacred bread from the presence-table, and the sword of Goliath, which had been in safe keeping there.

AHĪ'MOTH (deathly). Kohathite in David's reign (1 Chr. vi. 25).

AHIN'ADAB. One of 12 officers who gathered monthly supplies for Solomon's household at Mahanaim, in Manasseh (1 K. iv. 14).

AHĪ'O (brotherly). Son of Abinadab. Ahio went before and his brother behind the ark, when it was carried from their father's house (2 Sam. vi. 3).—2. Benjamite, a son of Beriah (1 Chr. viii 14).—3. Benjamite, son of Jehiel, founder of Gibeon (1 Chr. viii. 31).

AHĪ'RAM (exalted brother). Son of Benjamin; Ehi in Gen. xlvi. 21. AHI'RAMITES. Descendants of Ahiram.

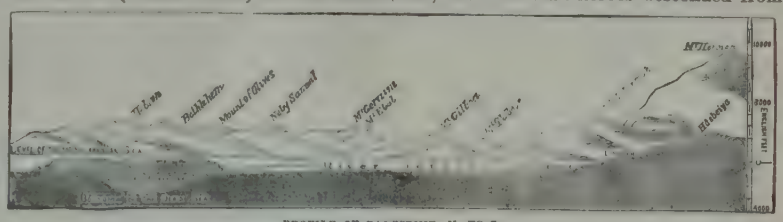
AHIS'AMACH (supporter). Danite, father of Aholiob, architect on the tabernacle (Ex. xxxi. 6).

AHISH'AHAR (morning dawn). Son of Bilhan, grandson of Benjamin (1 Chr. vii. 10).

AHĪ'SHAR (upright). Controller of king Solomon's household. Always an office of great trust and influence in the east (1 K. iv. 6).

AH'LAB (fertility). City in Asher (Judg. i. 31). Gush Caleb in after times, and now El Jish, near Safed.

AH'LAI (a wish). Daughter to Sheshan, wife of Jarha an Egyptian slave (1 Chr. ii. 31, 35). Zabad, one of David's heroes descended from her (1 Chr. xi. 41), and Azariah, one of Joash's captains (2 Chr. xxiii. 1).



PROFILE OF PALESTINE, N. TO S.

AHŌ'AH (friend of God). Son of Bela, of Benjamin (1 Chr. viii. 4). Ahoite in 2 Sam. xxiii. 9.

AHŌ'LAH (her own tent). AHOLI'BAH (my tent in her). Two fictitious names used by the prophet Ezekiel for Israel (Samaria) and Judah. Describing their neglect of the true worship of Jehovah, and their consequent disgrace and ruin.

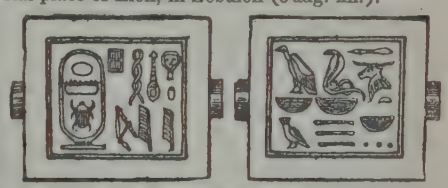
AHŌ LĬ-AB (father's tent). Skilful artizan of the tribe of Dan, who, with Bezaleel, constructed the Tabernacle.

AHŪ'MAI. Son of Jahath, Judah (1 Chr. iv. 2).

AHŪ ZAM. Ahuzzam. Son of Ashur, founder of Tekoa (1 Chr. iv. 6).

AHUZ'ZATH (possession). The "friend" or "favorite" who was with Abimelech II on his visit to Isaac (Gen. xxvi. 26). Some interpret the word ahuzzath to mean a company, or a retinue.

A-I (heap of ruins). Benj. (Gen. xii. 8). HAI. E. of Bethel. The second city taken by Joshua in Canaan. Eight miles N. of Jerusalem.—2. Burial place of Elon, in Zebulon (Judg. xii.).



THOTHME'S RING.

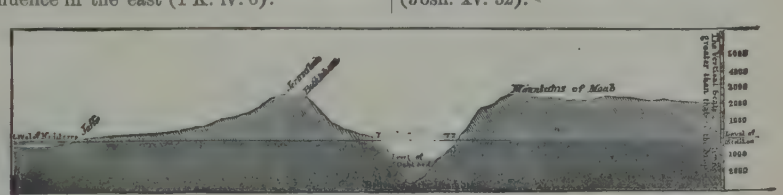
A'IAH (clamor). Son of Zibeon. Ajah in Gen. xxxvi. 24 (1 Chr. i. 40).

A'IATH (Is. x. 28). AI. AI'JA.

AI'JALON (gazelle place). A city of the Kohathites (Josh. xxi. 24), in Dan. (xix. 42); fortified by Rehoboam (2 Chr. xi. 10). Celebrated in the poem on the battle of Joshua in the "Book of Jasher" (Josh. x. 12). Now Ain Yalo, 12 miles N. W. of Jerusalem.—2. City of Zebulun; birth-place of Elon, and his burial-place. JALUN, east of Acre.

AI'JELETH. AYELETH HAS-SHACHAR (hind of the dawn). Only in Ps. xxii. in the introduction, as the name of the tune in which that psalm might be ckanted.

A'IN (fountain). En. Prefix to many names, as Engedi, Enrogel.—1. Num. xxxiv. 11, a source of the Jordan, or a town near.—2. City in Judah (Josh. xv. 32).



PROFILE ACROSS—JAFFA TO MOAB.

AHITH'OPHEL (foolish). A statesman of brilliant talents in David's time. His counsels were regarded as oracles (2 Sam. xvi.). When his counsels to Absalom were neglected for those of Hushai (whom David had sent), he went home and hanged himself at Giloh. The only suicide mentioned in the O. T., except those engaged in war.

AHĪTUB (goodness). Father of Ahimelech.—2. Son of Amariah, grandfather of Zadok, the high priest (1 Chr. vi. 7).

Ā'JĀLON (stag). Valley and town in Benj. noted in Joshua's exploits (Josh. x. 12). Several other towns of the same name, in Dan, Ephraim and Zebulun.

A'KAN (keen-sighted). Descendant of Esau (Gen. xxxvi. 27). Jakan in 1 Chr. i. 42.

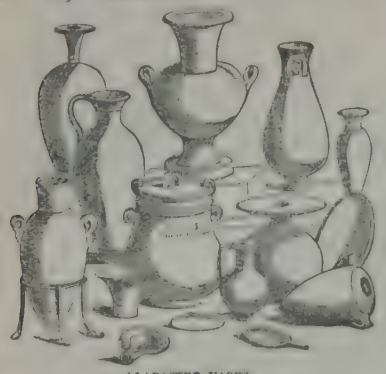
AK'KUB (insidious). Descendant of Zerubbabel; one of the 7 sons of Elioenai (1 Chr. iii. 24). 2. Doorkeeper at the east-gate of the temple. His descendants are reported among the returned from Babylon (1 Chr. ix. 17). Dacobi in 1 Esd. v. 28.—3. A Nethinim (Ezr. ii. 45). Acub in 1 Esd. v. 30.—4. A Levite (Neh. viii. 7). Jacubus in 1 Esd. ix. 48.

AK-RAB'-BIM (scorpions). Maa'leh Akrab'bim, scorpion pass, in the mountains south of the Dead Sea.

AL'EMA. City in Gilead, large and strong (1 Macc. v. 26). BEER-ELIM?



ALABASTER VASES.

ALABÁS'TER. So named from the town of Alabastron, in Middle Egypt, where there are quarries of this fine-grained, pink-colored gypsum. It is not clear, but is colored in stripes, much varied in width and tint—very near the tint of their finger-nails, including the crescent light place at the upper end of the nails. It was made into cups, boxes, etc. for holding perfumes, ointments, and other precious articles. Boxes for the same uses of any substance—wood, glass, stone, metal—were also called alabasters (Matt. xxvi. 7; Mark xiv. 3; Luke vii. 37).

ALEXAN'DER (men helper). King of Macedon. Called the Great. Born at Pella B. C. 356, son of Philip and Olympias. Educated by the famous philosopher Aristotle. Alluded to in Daniel's prophesy. He destroyed the Persian empire and placed Greeks in power there; conquered Asia, TETRADRACHM OF ALEXANDER THE GREAT. B. C. 350.

Egypt, Syria, and founded the city of ALEXANDRIA (B. C. 332), which may be said to have been built on the ruins of Sidon and Tyre, for it grew rich and powerful on the Oriental trade which formerly fed those cities, and was then diverted from the Euphrates to the Red Sea route. Alexander's toleration of Oriental customs and religions, guaranteeing to all people (and especially the Jews, who were exempted from tax on the 7th year,) the free observance of their hereditary laws, showing the same respect to their gods as to the gods of Greece, thus combining and equalizing the West and the East, weakened all the nationalities of his empire, and tended to dissolve the old religions. The Greek and Hebrew learning of Alexandria greatly influenced the planting of Christianity there, as well as in Asia. He married Roxana and Parysatis, Eastern princesses, an example followed by 80 generals and 10,000 soldiers of his army, who married Oriental wives. Josephus gives an account of a visit of Alexander to Jerusalem, and his reception by the high priest, which has been called fabulous (Ant. xi. 8). He died at Babylon B. C. 323, only 32 years old, of intemperance.

ALEXAN'DER BĀLÁS. A pretended son of Antiochus Epiphanes. He reigned four years over Syria (1 Macc. x. 11; Jos. Ant. xiii. 2).

ALEXAN'DER JÁNNÆUS. The first prince of the Maccabees, who called himself king.

ALEXAN'DER. Four persons so named in the Gospels.—1. Son of Simon the Cyrenean, who bore the cross part of the way (Mark xv.).—2. A powerful opponent of the apostles, related to the high priest (Acts iv. 6).—3. Son of Herod the Great and Marianne.—4. A Jew of Ephesus, who took part in the uproar in the temple of Diana, against Paul.—5. A coppersmith, excommunicated by Paul for errors.

ALEXAN'DRIA. Greek, Roman, and Christian capital of Egypt, founded by Alexander, B. C. 332, by the help of the same architect who rebuilt the Temple of Diana, at Ephesus. For centuries this was the largest city in the world. Pop. 600,000 (Diodorus). The lighthouse of its spacious port was famous in the world of commerce as the PHAROS, one of the 7 wonders. The great library is said to have had 700,000 volumes (Strabo), even after losing 400,000 by fire (B. C. 47), and was finally destroyed by the Saracens, A. D. 642. Among the learned men were Philo, a Jew (author of works which contain the best array of Hebrew Platonism—almost an imitation of Christian ethics), and Origen and Clement, Christians, whose writings have influenced and directed religious men in all Christian nations to the present. Ptolemy Philadelphus favored the translation from Hebrew into Greek of the Holy Scriptures (Old Testament), and the work was called the SEPTUAGINT, finished about B. C. 280. It is now the oldest known version, and is called the Codex Alexandrinus (Jos. c.; Apion ii. 4). See WRITING.

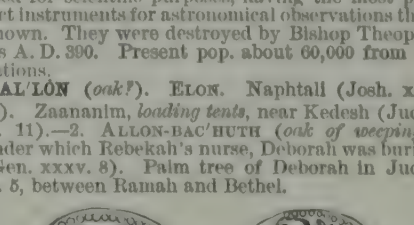
The Museum was the means of spreading a knowledge of Aristotle through the civilized world, and at one time it gathered 14,000 students from all the world. Modern astronomy arose there, under the direction of Eratosthenes, who taught the globe shape of the earth, its poles, axis, equator, arctic circles, equinoctial points, solstices, horizon, eclipses, and the distance of the sun. Callimachus (poet) wrote a treatise on birds; Apollonius one on mathematics and geometry, and invented a clock. Hipparchus was the great astronomer of the age, and discovered the precession of the equinoxes, gave methods of solving all triangles, and constructed tables of chords, tables of latitude and longitude, and a map of more than 1000 stars. The Almagest of Ptolemy (A. D. 138), was for 1500 years the highest authority on the phenomena and mechanism of the universe. The same author described the world from the Canaries to China.

These systems were supplanted by the discoveries of Newton of the law of gravitation, and of Columbus of the New World. There was a very extensive botanical and zoological garden, and a school for the study of Anatomy and dissection. The temples of Isis and Sarepis were among the finest ever built, and were partly used for scientific purposes, having the most perfect instruments for astronomical observations then known. They were destroyed by Bishop Theophilus A. D. 390. Present pop. about 60,000 from all nations.

AL'LÓN (oak!). ELON. Naphtali (Josh. xix. 33). Zaananim, loading tents, near Kedesh (Judg. iv. 11).—2. ALLON-BAC'HUTH (oak of weeping), under which Rebekah's nurse, Deborah was buried (Gen. xxxv. 8). Palm tree of Deborah in Judg. iv. 5, between Ramah and Bethel.



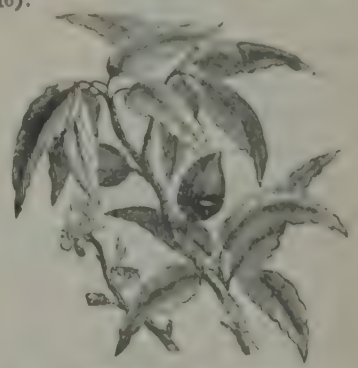
ALEXANDER BALAS.

AL'MOND. Nut tree, larger than a peach tree; thrives from China to Spain, and on both sides of the Mediterranean, and nowhere better than in Syria. It is the earliest to blossom in spring (February), the pink-white blossoms appearing some weeks before the leaves.

ĀLMS. The Hebrews had no word for a free gift to the poor, such as alms, but used righteousness for such acts, as in Job xxix. 10–16; Prov. x. 2; Deut. xiv. 29; xxiii. 24, 25; xxiv. 19; xxvi. 12; Lev. xix. 9, 10; xxiii. 22; xxv. 5. The laws of Moses made ample provision against poverty, and if they had been strictly kept, in letter and spirit, there could not have been any destitution. The gospel recognizes the duty of alms-giving and enforces it, and this virtue was a peculiar mark of a Christian in the early age. This was not made a definite rule, but was left to the constraint of inward principle and feeling, "to prove the sincerity of their love." Encouragement of idle vagrancy was denounced as wrong, and such idlers were scorned (2 Thess. iii. 10–12). The Jews, since the destruction of Jerusalem, have regarded their poor as the people of God, and those who give to them are credited with as much virtue as if they kept all the commandments, and they teach that alms-giving atones for their sins. As Jesus sought the needy and the sick, and kindly ministered help and consolation, so it is his will that his Church shall show the same spirit towards the poor and afflicted.

AL'MUG. ALGUM. Fragrant sandal-wood, white and yellow, found in the mountains of Malabar. The trees are 9 to 12 inches through, 25 to 30 feet high. Its uses were for perfume, incense, beads, rosaries, fans, elegant boxes, and cabinets, and for musical instruments. Solomon used it for pillars in the houses he built, and for musical instruments (1 K. x. 12; 2 Chr. ix. 10).

AL'NATHAN. ELNATHAN (1 Esd. viii. 44; Ezr. viii. 16).



ALMOND TREE AND BLOSSOMS.

AL'OE. An ordoriferous, precious tree of Siam, where it is worth its weight in gold, and is used for perfuming garments and rooms, and as a medicine. It is not our gum aloes.

AL'PHÆUS (Alpheus, exchange). Father of the lesser James (Matt. x. 3). Called Cleopas in John xix. 25. Alphæus and Cleopas are synonymous in Hebrew and Greek.

ALPHABET. WRITING.

AL'TAR. The central point of religious worship, as a mount, table or structure of turf, wood, stone or metal, on which sacrifice was made to some deity. The first one mentioned in the Bible is that built by Noah. Moses restricted the building of altars to those for the temple service only; but the law was often broken (Lev. xvii.; Deut. xii.; Judg. vi.; 1 Sam. vii.; 2 Sam. xxiv.; 1 K. iii.). Moses directed two kinds to be made: 1. ALTAR OF BURNT-OFFERING, the table of the Lord (Ex. xxvii. 8), having horns to which the animal to be sacrificed might be bound (Ps. cviii. 27); and a ledge half way up, on which the priests could stand, which was fenced below with a net work of metal: —2. ALTAR OF INCENSE, the golden altar, Ex. xxxix. 38, (the other being the brazen) (Ex. xxxviii. 30). This was not strictly an altar, as no sacrifice was offered on it. Both had rings for carrying by poles.

ALTAS'CHITH (destroy not). In the introduction to Psalms lvii., lviii., lix., lxxv., indicating the melody to which the psalms were to be sung.

AL'VAN (thick). Horite, son of Shobal (Gen. xxxvi. 23). ALIAN (1 Chr. i. 40).

A'MAD (station). In Asher, lost (Josh. xix. 26).

AMAD'ATHA. AMADATHUS. (Est. xii. 6; xvi. 10.) HAMMEDATHA.

EARTHEN LAMP. 2.

A'MAL. Descendant of Ashur, son of Jacob (1 Chr. vii. 35).

AM'ALEK (to lick up). Son of Eliphaz, grandson of Esau, and a Shekh of Edom (Gen. xxxvi.).

AMAL'EKITES. An ancient nomadic race, found from Petræa to the Persian Gulf, and may have been descendants of the grandson of Esau. The mention of this country in Gen. xiv. 7, does not imply that they were a people at that early time, but that they were a people in that country when the history was written. They were doomed to extinction because they opposed the Hebrews; and they were fewer and weaker from age to age up to the last mention in David's time (1 Sam. xxvii.; xxx. 17), who destoyed their remnant.

AM'ANA. Mt. near the S. end of Anti-Lebanon, where the Abana rises (Cant. iv. 8).

AMARĪ'AH (whom Jehovah promised). 1. Father of Ahitub.—2. High priest in the reign of Jehoshaphat.—3. A Kohathite Levite.—4. Priest in Hezekiah's time.—5. Son of Bani (Ezr. x.).—6. Priest with Zerubbabel.—7. A descendent of Pharez.—8. Ancestor of Zephaniah the prophet.

AM'ASA (burden). Son of Ithra, by David's sister Abigail. Was general to Absalom, and was defeated by Joab, but pardoned by David, and appointed Joab's successor as general. Joab killed him treacherously (2 Sam.).

AMA'SHAI. Son of Azareel, priest in the time of Nehemiah (xi. 13). Amash'sai, correctly.

AMASĪ'AH (whom God bears). Son of Zichri, Jehoshaphat's general of 200,000 in Judah (2 Chr. xvii. 16).

A'MATH. HAMATH.

AMATHĒ'IS (1 Esd. ix. 29). ATHLAI.

AM'ATHIS (the land of). HAMATH. (1. Macc. xii. 25).

AMAZĪ'AH (whom Jehovah strengthens). Son of Joash and 8th king of Judah. Began to reign at 25, B. C. 838, and reigned 29 years. He was the first to hire men to fill his army. He conquered Edom and carried home the idols for worship, and so brought on his own ruin, and was killed by conspirators at Lachish.—2. Priest of the golden calf at Bethel, under Jeroboam II, in the time of the prophet Amos (vii. 10).

AMEDA'THA. (Esth. iii. 1) HAMMEDATHA.

A'MEN' (truth). Hebrew word, usually translated verily; or at the end of sentences not translated, but meaning so be it. In Rev. iii. 14 it is used as a name of the Lord, "the Amen, the faithful and true witness." It is used as a word of confirmation, binding a saying, or an oath (Num. v. 22, Deut. xxvii. 15; Neh v. 13; Ps. cvi. 48), and as a response or closing of a prayer (Matt. vi. 13; Rom. xi. 36).

AM'MI (my people). The name of Israel when they shall have been restored to God's favor (Hos. ii. 1).

AM'MIDOI. Returned with Zerubbabel (1 Esd. v. 20). Humtah in Josh. xv. 54. AMMIDIOI.

AM'MIEL (people of my God). Spy from Dan, in the Exodus (Num. xiii. 12).—2. Father of Machir of Lodebar (2 Sam. ix. 4).—3. Father of Bathshua, wife of David (1 Chr. iii. 5); ELIAM in 2 Sam. xi. 3. Son of Ahithophel.—4. Sixth son of Obed-edom (1 Chr. xxvi. 5), a doorkeeper of the temple.

AMMĪ'HUD (people of Judah). Father of Elishama; chief in the Exodus; an Ephraimite (Num. i. 10); ancestor of Joshua (1 Chr. vii. 26).—2. Simeonite chief in the allotment; father of Shemuel (Num. xxxiv. 20).—3. Father of Pedahel, chief in the allotment (ib. 28).—4. Father of Talmai, king of Geshur (2 Sam. xiii 37).—5. Descendant of Pharez (1 Chr. ix. 4).

AMMIN'ADAB (bounteous people). Son of Aram, father of Elizabeth, wife of Aaron; an ancestor of Jesus (Matt. i. 4).—2. Kohathite Levite in David's time.—3. One of the most noted charioteers of his day (Cant. vi. 12). If this last is read ammi-nadib, it will mean my loyal people.

AMMIN'ADIB. (Cant. vi. 12).

AMMISHAD'DAI (people of the Almighty). Father of Ahiezer, chief in Dan in the Exodus (Num. i. 12).

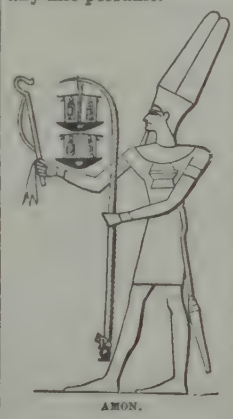
AMMIZ'ABAD (people of the giver). Son of Benaiah, and his father's lieutenant over the 3d division of David's army, in the 3d monthly course (1 Chr. xxvii. 6).

AM'MON (son of my relative). AMMONITES. Ben Ammi in Gen. xix. 38. Descended from Lot. The people occupied the territory afterwards given to Reuben and Gad, after driving out the Zamzummim (Deut. ii. 20). Jabbok was their border on the N. They were nomadic, restless and predatory, as the Moabites were settled, civilized and industrious. They opposed the march of Israel to Canaan, and although favored by Moses (Deut. ii. 9), yet they were hated and warred with always. They worshipped Moloch, also called Milcom, and Malcham. Saul was made king (the second time) on account of his relief of Jabesh from the Amalekites (1 Sam. xi.). Women of this people were in Solomon's house. The last mention of them is in 1 Macc. v. 6, 30–43.

AM'NON (faithful). Eldest son of David by Ahinoam, born at Hebron B. C. 1056. Killed by Absalom 1032.

A'MOK (deep). Priest; returned with Zerubbabel (Neh. xii. 7).

AM'OMUM. An aromatic plant growing in India, Armenia, Media, and Pontus, described by Pliny, but not identified in our day. In Rev. xviii. 13 of the Hebrew—not in the A. V. The oily extract was used for the hair; and the name given to any fine perfume.



AMON.

A'MON (builder). Son of Manasseh, and king of Judah. An idolater, and reigned only two years, B. C. 644–2 (2 K. xxi.).

A'MON (multitude). Egyptian deity. The name is translated generally in the O. T., which confuses the meaning. In Jer. xlvi. 25 "multitude of No" should be "Amon of No." And in Nahum iii. 8 "populous No" means No-Amon. The Greeks called this god Jupiter Ammon. On the monuments the name is Amunre—Amon the son. He was supposed to be in the form of man, and was the supreme god of Egypt—king of gods.

AM'ORITE (mountaineers). On both sides of Jordan (Num. xxi.; Gen. xv. 16; Deut. i. 20). From Emor, 4th son of Canaan. Og and Sihon, their kings E. of Jordan, opposed Moses, but were beaten, and their land was given to Reuben, Manasseh, and Gad. This district was good pasture, and is now. Five Amorite kings on the W. of Jordan opposed Joshua, and were defeated. The Jebusites were a branch, who held Zion 400 years after Joshua, until David took it (2 Sam. v. 6). Solomon imposed a tribute on the remnant of the people (1 K. ix. 20).

A'MOS (burden). Prophet in the days of Isaiah and Hosea. Native of Tekoa, and was a dresser of sycamore (fig) trees. He prophesied at Bethel. His book is one of the finest in style, being full of pure language, vivid pictures, and often sublime thoughts; most of his imagery is taken from rural life. B. C. 780. See HISTORY.

A'MŌZ (strong). Father of Isaiah.

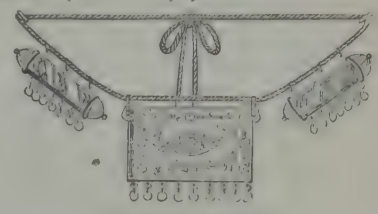
AMPHIP'OLIS. Capital of a district in Macedonia (Acts xvii). On a height on the east bank of the river Strymon, 3 miles from the sea. The gold mines of Mt. Pangæus made the city famous. Now Newtown. Xerxes sacrificed nine young men and maids, and several white horses, on the bank of the Strymon (Herod. vii. 113).

AMPLĪ'AS. Disciple at Rome, beloved of Paul in the Lord (Rom. xvi. 8).

AM'RAM (high ones). Son of Kohath, father of Moses and Aaron.

AM'RAPHEL (keeper of the gods). Hamite king of Shinar (Gen. xiv. 1, 9).



MODERN EGYPTIAN AMULET.

AM'ULET (pendant). Any object carried as a magical protection against evil or danger. Tickets with writing; stones and metal with pictures and writing. Moses tried to turn the practice to good use by directing his laws to be written on them (Ex. xiii. 9, 16; Deut. vi. 8; xi. 18). They are now very common in oriental countries, and not unknown in our own land. Jacob found some worn as earrings (Gen. xxxv.).

AM'ZI. Merarite; ancestor of Ethan the singer (1 Chr. vi. 46).—2. Ancestor of Adaiah, priest in Nehemiah's time (xi. 12).

A'NAB (grapery). Judah (Josh. xi. 21), from which Joshua expelled the Anakim. A tower marks the site near Maon (Rob. ii. 195).

A'NAH (answer). Son of Zibeon, father of Esau's wife, Aholibamah (Gen. xxxvi. 24). He discovered the hot springs of Callirohoe. He was a Horite, that is, a mountaineer. He is also called BEERI (fountains) the Hittite, in honor of his finding the springs.

ANAHĀ'RATH (pass). Place in Issachar (Josh. xix. 19). ARANEH, 2 miles E. of Jenin (Rob. ii. 316, 319. Hackett).

ANA'IAH (whom God answers). Who stood at Ezra's right hand during the reading of the law (Neh. viii. 4). ANANIAS in 1 Esd. ix. 43.

A'NAK. AN'AKIM (neck-chain). Name of a race of tall people, who lived at Hebron, and vicinity (Num. xiii. 33; Josh. xv. 14), descended from ARBA. They appear on the monuments of Egypt as tall and light colored, and are called Tammahu, from the Hebrew Talmai.

ĀNAM'MELECH (kingly image). The Assyrian Moloch, in whose worship the people passed their children through the fire. This was the female power as ADRAMMELECH was the male power of the sun-god.

A'NAN (cloud). 'A chief who signed the covenant with Nehemiah (x. 26).

ANĀ'NI (protected). Seventh son of Elioenai, of the royal line of Judah (1 Chr. iii. 24).

ANANĪ'AH (protected by Jah). Priest; ancestor of Azariah; assisted in rebuilding the wall (Neh. iii. 23).

ANANĪAH. Place between Nob and Hazor (Neh. xi. 32).

ANANĪ'AS. A disciple at Jerusalem who, with his wife, Sapphira, tried to impose on Peter and the brethren, and defile the house of God, died suddenly, and was buried at once (Acts v).—2. Made high priest (Acts xxiii.) about A. D. 477 by Herod, king of Chalcis (Ant. xx. 5, 2). He made himself great wealth out his office. Paul when before the Sanhedrin called him a white wall, and prophesied his ruin, which came in a time of trouble, and he fell by an assassin (Wars ii. 17; vi. 69).—3. Disciple at Damascus, who was directed (by the Lord) to go to Saul and lay hands on him, to ordain him to the ministry (Acts ix. 10–17). Tradition makes him bishop of Damascus, and a martyr.

A'NATH (answer). Father of Shamgar (Judg. ii. 31).

ĀNĀTH'EMA (suspended). When said of things given to God, it is pronounced anathema (Luke xxi. 5). It was also the religious curse of the Hebrews. It means also devoted—any person or thing devoted to God. Paul means devoted where he says accursed, in Rom. ix. 3. Those Jews devoted themselves to the work of killing Paul (Acts xxiii. 12). Anathema maranatha (the Lord comes), means that the curse (as well as a blessing) has its operation in Christ's kingdom, and rises to its highest power at his coming, and he will surely come to bless as well as to curse (1 Cor. xvi. 22). It was used as the church censure, or final excommunication, and it is so used now, of those who are excluded from the company of the believers.

ĂN'ATHOTH (echoes). Ben., near Nob and Hazor (Neh. xi. 32). Anata, 3½ ms. N. E. of Jerusalem, where there are remains of walls and buildings in the midst of orchards of figs and olives. The quarries still supply Jerusalem.

ANDREW (strong man). Brother of Peter, and native of Bethsaida in Galilee (John i. 44). He was first a disciple of John the Baptist, but followed Jesus on John's testimony, and informed his brother Peter of what he had found—that Jesus was the Christ (verses 35, 36, 41). He did not leave his business of fishing until some time after (Mark i. 14). He was present at the feeding of the 5000 at Jerusalem, when the Greek Jews wished to see Jesus (John vi. 8); and, with others, on Olivet, asked privately of Jesus what he meant by his strange words about destroying and rebuilding the temple. Of his after-life and death nothing is recorded. Tradition says he preached in Scythia, or Achaia, and was crucified on a cross, now called St. Andrew's, which is of a peculiar shape, and still bears his name. The early writers mention the "Acts of Andrew," and the "Gospel of St. Andrew," but they were rejected, and are lost.

ANDRŌ'NICUS (man conquerer). Fellow-prisoner of Paul, and his kinsman, and a disciple before Paul's conversion. The allusion in Romans xvi. 7 probably has reference to some part of Paul's history, now lost.

Ā'NEM (two springs). In Issachar (1 Chr. vi. 37). ENGANNIM.

Ā'NER (boy). A Canaanite sheikh who joined Abram, Eshcol and Mamre in pursuit of Chedorlaomer (Gen. xiv).—2. Town of the Levites in Manasseh (1 Chr. vi. 70).

AN'ETHOTHITE, THE. Resident of ANATHOTH. ANTOTHITE (2 Sam. xxiii. 27).

ANGAREU'O (compel). From the Tartar language, meaning forced service (as a mounted courier) without pay (Matt. v. 41; Mark xv. 21).

ĂN'GEL (messenger). Whatever God employs to do his will. In Ps. civ. 4 (quoted in Heb. i. 7), the wind (spirit) is His angel. Haggai was called the Lord's angel (i. 13), as was John the Baptist by Malachi (iii. 1). Israel was God's angel, sent to enlighten the world (Is. xlii. 19), as well as the priests (Mal. ii. 7), meaning the priests as a body. Jesus spoke of angels of God, who were neither married nor given in marriage, but were spirits, not in the flesh, but above, more free, more powerful, more wise (Matt. xxii. 30; xxvi. 53; Gen. xvi. 7; Heb. xii. 22). There are angels of light (of heaven), and angels of darkness, "that kept not their first estate." Isaiah speaks of the angel of the presence (lxiii. 9), and Moses of the angel that went before Israel (Ex. xxiii. 21), who has the whole world as his heritage (Rev. viii. 3), and who is believed to be the Lord Jesus, whom the Father sent to reveal Him to men.

JEWISH HIGH PRIEST.

ĂNK'LET. Ornament of gold, silver, brass iron or glass, for the ankles, worn in ancient and modern days in the East by women. Isaiah (iii. 16) says they made a tinkling with the feet; that is, the women tinkled them together when they walked in a mincing way. A string of little bells is worn by some Arab girls.

AN'NA. Prophetess of the tribe of Asher, daughter of Phanuel. She was 84 when in the temple, as mentioned by Luke (ii. 36), she recognized the Messiah.

AN'NAS. High priest for 15 years (appointed by Quirinus), and then deposed by Valerius Gratus. Father-in-law to Caiaphas, who was high priest when Jesus was crucified (John xviii.; Acts iv. 6). The office of high priest was judicial, in addition to the temple service, and Annas for a long period held this honored place, his term having been 20 years. Five of his sons succeeded each other to the same office, and then his son-in-law; and in all these changes he had exercised the highest judicial authority. He might have been a member of the Sanhedrin, and possibly was its president or vice-president.

ANNUN'CIĀTION. This word means the announcement of the selection of the Virgin Mary as the favored mother of Jesus. About the year 800 the church decreed (council of Trullo) a day for celebrating the event.

ANNŪ'US. Error in 1 Esd. viii. 48; "with him" in A. V. Ezra viii. 19.

ANOINT. Anointing. Use of oil on the head or any object to be honored. Jacob poured oil on his stone pillow at Bethel, consecrating it to God. Guests were honored by having their hair oiled. The monuments have pictures of the act. It was a common custom among the Hebrews, and is often referred to in the O. T. (Ps. xxiii. 5; xlv. 7; Prov. xxi. 7; xxvii. 9). To omit the use of this perfumed oil was a sign of grief and mourning (Dan. x. 3; Is. lxi. 3). It was also used as a medicine (Is. i. 6; Mark vi. 13; James v. 14). Kings were called "the anointed of the gods," and both kings and priests were confirmed in their office by the anointing of oil, both in Egypt and Palestine. Anointing the eyes denoted a spiritual recovery of sight—knowledge of divine truth. The Holy Spirit descended on the head of Jesus, like a spiritual anointing, a divine confirmation of his office of Messiah.

The bodies of the dead were also anointed, or embalmed, with spiced oil. See PERFUMES.

A'NOS. Son of Bani (1 Esd. ix. 34). VANIAH.

ANT. The Hebrew word for this insect was namal, cut off (Gen. xvii. 11). The males and females have four wings, which soon fall off. The workers are wingless. They feed on vegetables, animals and insects. They will rob a granary in a few days, or even hours. Solomon alluded to the ant as an instance of the use of proper seasons for collecting provisions (Prov. vi. 6).

ANTĪ'AM (sighing of the people). Son of Shemidah, Manasseh (1 Chr. vii. 19).

AN'TI-CHRIST (against Christ). Unbelievers, heretics, and persecutors (1 John ii. 18, 22). Some understand this term to mean all men (or an organized body), who oppose Christ, and whom he will overcome or destroy (Rev. xi. 13, 17).

AN'TIOCH in Syria. On the Orontes, 30 miles from the sea, 300 from Jerusalem. Founded by Seleucus Nicator (conqueror), B. C. 300, and named in honor of his father, Antiochus. It was the capital of the Greek and Roman governors of Syria for nearly 1000 years. Its suburb Daphne was famous for its sanctuary to Apollo and Diana (2 Macc. iv. 33); the sacred grove extending its cool shades and brooks of water for ten miles around. It was a sensual paradise, where pleasure, under the disguise of religion, dissolved the firmness of manly virtue. The first GENTILE CHURCH was founded here by Paul, and the disciples were here first called CHRISTIANS in derision by the pagans (Acts xi. 21-26). Ignatius who suffered martyrdom under Trajan, at Rome, was bishop of Antioch 40 years. In the time of Chrysostom (born here A. D. 344), the pop. was 200,000, one half being Christians. The city had a street colonnade from end to end, built by Antiochus Epiphanes, and paved with granite by Antoninus Pius; most sumptuous marble baths, built by Caligula, Trajan and Hadrian; a marble palace of Diocletian, and was the finest and largest city in Western Asia. It lost greatly in wealth and population in several earthquakes: one in A. D. 526, destroying 250,000 people, at the time of the festival of the Ascension, when many strangers were gathered; and in 1822 one-fourth of the city and people, about 5000. It was of great importance during the Crusades, and is often mentioned for its sieges, battles, and the brilliant exploits of both Christian and Moslem in and about its walls. Am. Prot. missionaries began to preach there in 1856. Pop. now about 20,000. Ar. name Antakia. Ruins of aqueducts, marble pavements, columns, and other evidences of its ancient splendor are often found buried under rubbish.

AN'TIOCH in Pisidia. Founded by the same king (who built 10 or 15 others of the same name), and peopled them by hired immigrants from Magnesia on the Mæander. On the S. side of Mt. Parorela, on the boundary between Pisidia and Phrygia, overlooking a broad plain. Recent discoveries of ancient inscriptions prove the site correct. There are ruins of several churches, temples, a theatre, and an aqueduct of which 21 arches are now entire. The ancient city was often visited by Paul (Acts), with Barnabas, Silas, and Timothy who was a native of this district.

ANTIOCHĪA (2 Macc. iv. 33), for Antioch.

ANTIŌCHIANS. Partizans of A. Epiphanes, or Jason (2 Macc. iv. 9). "Sinful men" in Doway.

ANTIOCH IN PISIDIA.

ANTĪOCHIS. In the family of A. Epiphanes (2 Macc. iv. 30).

ANTĪOCHUS (who lasts out). There are several of this family name. 1. ANTIOCHUS II. THEOS (the god). Son of A. Soter (savior.) He succeeded his father B. C. 261. He was the "king of the north" of Daniel (xi.), who joined "the king of the south" (Ptolemy) by marrying his daughter Berenice.—2. ANTIOCHUS III, THE GREAT, succeeded his brother Seleucus Keraunus (thunderer, who was poisoned after ruling 3 years), and was the first really strong man since Seleucus, who founded the family and empire in Syria. He was only 15 when he began to rule, and his great rival, Ptolemy IV, Philopator (father loving), of Egypt, was crowned only two years later. Ptolemy began his reign by murdering nearly all of his relations, including his mother and father. Antiochus did no violence to his friends, but planned how to increase the wealth and power of his people, and passed his whole life in war. One part of his policy was to put a great trust in the Jews as a people, and especially as soldiers (Ant. xii. 3, 4). At one time he moved 2000 families of Jews from Mesopotamia to Lydia and Phrygia for garrison service. He increased the honors and privileges of the Jews in Palestine, when he became master there, and they were very near to the actual enjoyment of social and religious liberty. He is also mentioned by Daniel (xi. 41), as one who should stand "in the glorious land which by his hand was to be consumed." His own daughter, Cleopatra, whom he gave to Ptolemy Epiphanes as a wife, opposed him in favor of her husband. Hannibal influenced him to war against Rome, and he was beaten finally at Magnesia in Lydia, B. C. 190. He lost his life B. C. 187, in an attempt to plunder the temple of Belus in Elymais.—3. ANTIOCHUS IV EPIPHANES (illustrious), youngest son of A. the Great, succeeded to his brother Seleucus Philopator, who reigned 10 years, chiefly as "a raiser of taxes" (Dan. xi. 20). Epiphanes gained the kingdom by flatteries (s. 21), that is, by a system of lavish bribery. These and other acts caused the Greeks to call him Epimanes (crazy), a very sharp and sarcastic pun on his title. He wished to plunder the Jewish temple, because he needed money, and to do this it was his policy to make the Jews hateful, and destroy their nationality. But he raised up the Maccabees who, after many years of war and suffering, delivered their people (B. C. 143), as is recorded on the coins of that period (MONEY). He was a type of Antichrist, so made by his want of respect to God and religion, and the disregard of every higher feeling among men. He worshiped the Roman war-god, whose forts were his temples.—4. ANTIOCHUS V EUPATOR (of noble descent), succeeded his father A. IV, B. C. 164, while a child, and was under the guardian Lysias, and they were killed by Demetrius Soter, when the rule fell to Antiochus VI, son of Alexander Balas and Cleopatra, who while a child was under the care of Tryphon, B. C. 145, who contended for the throne against Demetrius Nicator. Tryphon, by treachery and success in war, gained supreme power, killed Antiochus, and assumed the throne. The coins bear his head as Antiochus and Trypho, and on some the title of Theos is added. The books of Daniel and the Maccabees give a large space to the life and deeds and bad character of this king.—5. ANTIOCHUS VII SIDETES (from Side in Pamphylia). Called also EUSEBES (pious). This was the last king of the Seleucid family, who ruled B. C. 141—128. There were some who assumed the name Antioch as a title until the Romans made Syria a province, B. C. 63.

ANTOTHĪJAH (Jah's answers). Son of Shashak (1 Chr. viii. 24).

ANTIPĀTRIS (against father). Built by Herod the Great, on the edge of Sharon, now Kefer Saba, 12 ms. N. E. of Joppa. Capharsaba in Josephus. Dr. Eli Smith found and identified the place while on a journey expressly to follow Paul's night march from Jerusalem to Cæsarea (Acts xxiii. 31). There are remains of the Roman road, which led by Gophna.

ANTONIA. Fort built by Herod on the N. W. corner of the temple site, and named after his friend. JERUSALEM.

ANUB (bound). Son of Coz, of Judah (1 Chr. iv. 8).

ANUS. A Levite (1 Esd. ix. 48). BANI?

APĀME. Of Darius' family; daughter of Bartacus (1 Esd. iv. 29).

ANTIOCHUS TRYPHON.

ĀPE. Brought by Solomon's ships (1 K. x. 22) from India or Malabar, where they are now found, called KAPI (Heb. KOPH). They were prized as curiosities then as now.

APELLES (Apollo's gift). A disciple saluted by Paul (Rom. xvi. 10). Tradition says he was bishop of Smyrna.

ĀPHARSACHITES. Persians transplanted into Samaria (Ezr. iv. 9). Fars—Persia.

ĀPHEK (firmness or strength). 1. Issachar (Josh. xii. 18; xv. 53). APHAKAH.—2. Asher (Josh. xix. 30; Judg. i. 31). APHIK. (Josh. xiii. 4). W. of Baalbek 15 ms., on the E. slope of Lebanon. AFKA. A temple to Venus made this city famous.—3. Where the Philistines encamped before the battle in which the sons of Eli were killed and the Ark was taken (1 Sam. iv. 1). In the mountains N. W. of Jerusalem.—4. The site of another battle, where Saul was killed (1 Sam. xxix. 1), near Shunem, or Jezreel.—5. Aphik, now called Fik, E. of the sea of Galilee 6 ms.; the site of several battles with the Syrians (1 K. xx. 26; 2 K. xiii. 17). Ben Hadad was defeated here; and Joash at the word of Elisha drew a bow at a venture, and afterwards gained several battles over the Syrians. The houses occupy a crescent-shaped cliff, at the base of which are three fine fountains, which send a stream into the lake below the hill on which Gamala stood.

ĀPŌCHRYPHA (hidden). The name of a certain class of books, offered as genuine, but not received as of divine origin, and of equal authority with the other books of the Bible. These are as they stand in the A. V.:

1. Esdras, 1 and 2.
2. Tobit.
3. Judith.
4. Addition to Esther.
5. Wisdom of Solomon.
6. Wisdom of Jesus, Son of Sirach.
7. Baruch, and Jeremiah's Epistle.
8. The Song of the Three Holy Children.
9. The History of Susanna.
10. Bel and the Dragon.
11. Prayer of Manasseh.
12. Maccabees, 1 and 2, and the Book of Enoch, accepted in Abyssinia.

Besides these there are a number that never were admitted to a position among the Sacred writings, such as, The Assumption of Moses, Testament of the Twelve Patriarchs, and many others attributed to Abraham, Eldad, Modad, etc.

The original meaning of apochrypha was hidden, but it is now used to mean spurious.

The real value of these books is in their being specimens of Jewish literature, and books of their history, throwing light on their religion and theological opinions, although more or less colored by fancy or fable. They are assigned to a period dating since 300 B. C., the latest, Esdras, dating about 30 B. C., or even later. The books themselves do not assert the use of the prophetic gift, but do say that this gift had departed from Israel (1 Macc. ix. 27), but it was hoped that prophets would again appear (iv. 46; xiv. 41). The style and power of the writing is inferior, and especially so is the poetry, excepting only the Song of the Three Children, which may be the reproduction of some ancient sacred service. There are many blunders and anachronisms in their historical allusions. The books of the New Testament era that have been regarded as doubtful are, 2d Ep. of St. Peter; Ep. of St. James; Ep. of St. Jude; 2d and 3d Eps. of St. John; the Apocalypse, and the Ep. to the Hebrews. Those condemned as spurious: Acts of Paul; Shepherd of Hermas; Revelation of Peter; Ep. of Barnabas, and Instructions of the Apostles. Those denounced as impious are, Gospels of Peter, Thomas, Matthias, and the Acts of Andrew, John, and the other apostles.

Some of these books were read in the churches for instruction, but not for a rule and guide. The Westminster Confession says, "The books called Apochrypha, not being of divine inspiration, are no part of the canon of Scripture, and therefore are of no authority in the Church of God, nor to be any otherwise approved, or made use of, than other human writings." See HISTORY OF THE BOOKS.

APOLLŌNIA (from Apollo). Macedonia. Visited by Paul and Silas (Acts xvii. 1; Pliny iv. 10, 17).

APOLLOS (Apollonius). Jew from Alexandria, who had some errors corrected by Aquila and Priscilla at Ephesus, and afterwards preached in Achaia and in Corinth (Acts xviii. 27), seconding the work of Paul, whom he very much resembled in his teaching, character and attainments. He is mentioned as bishop of Corinth.

APŌSTLE (sent forth). The Jews so called those who carried about letters from their rulers. There were but few who had this honor, and to whom Jesus entrusted the organization of his APE.

Church. There were twelve originally whom he ordained, that they should be with him; and he gave them power over unclean spirits, and to heal all manner of diseases; commissioning them to preach the kingdom of God (Mark iii.; Matt. x.; Luke vi.), saying, "As the Father hath sent me, so send I you." It seems to have been essential to this high office, 1. That they should have seen the Lord, and have been eye and ear witnesses of what they testified to the world (John. xv. 27; Acts i. 21). Paul claims equal authority from having seen Jesus in a vision (1 Cor. ix. 1; xv. 8).—2. Called and chosen by the Lord Himself (Acts i. 24).—3. Infallible inspiration (John xvi. 13; 1 Cor. ii. 10), because it was their office to explain the O. T., and to set forth the New (Luke xxiv. 27).—4. The power of working miracles (Mark xvi. 20; Acts ii. 43).—5. To these were added the power to settle points of faith, and determine all controversies. Jesus is once called "the apostle of our profession"

BEDAWIN.

(Heb. iii. 1). THE APOSTLE'S CREED is not of their own making, but contains their doctrine as set forth by Christian men in later times. THE APOSTOLIC AGE dates from the day of Pentecost, and is usually divided into two periods, before and after the destruction of Jerusalem A. D. 70, the latter period ending at the death of John A. D. 99. There was not a revelation of the Lord's commands and the duties they involved complete as final at one time, but rather a progressive illumination—a peculiar succession and combination of events—from the first call to be apostles, the day of pentecost, the visions at Cæsarea and Joppa, the conversion and call of Paul—by which the five heralds of the Gospel were instructed, and enabled to teach its free and comprehensive spirit. The first Christian church was composed of Jews only, and they observed the Mosaic ritual strictly, and were continually in the temple (Luke xxiv. 53; Acts ii. 46; iii. 1); and the Jews spoke of them as the SECT of the Nazarenes, as the Pharisees and Sadducees and Essenes were sects within the Jewish church (Acts xxiv. 5; xxviii. 22; xv. 5; xxvi. 5; v. 17). A community of goods was required at first, but was soon abandoned. The Greeks (and other Gentiles) were admitted and elevated the tone of the society, and increased its power for diffusion, for the Gentiles so outnumbered the Jews at Antioch as to require a new name—which was given by their scorners—Christian. Shortly before the destruction of Jerusalem the members of the church found a refuge in Pella, east of Jordan, away from the power of the Sanhedrin, which held its sessions at Jamnia on the Great Sea, and this ended the connection of the new church with the old—Moses was to be thereafter second to Jesus in authority, and from that time an enmity grew up between them which has not yet been healed—and can never be (2 Cor. iii). The second period is almost a blank, since there is no account of any of the apostles except John, and with his death the age closes. Since then the church has been left to the guidance of man only, assisted by the invisible spirit, towards its spiritual maturity.

APOTHECARIES. Hananiah, one of the rebuilders of the wall, was a perfumer, or maker of ointment (Neh. iii. 8).

APPĂ'IM (nostrils). Son of Nadab, of Judah (1 Chr. ii. 30).

APPHĬ'A. Disciple (Philemon 2); member of Philemon's household. Appii in Acts xxviii. 15.

AP'PHUS. Surname of Jonathan Maccabeus (1 Macc. ii. 5).

AP'PĬI-FŌ'RUM (market place of Appius). On the Appian bay, between Naples and Rome, 43 ms from Rome. Appius Claudius, who built the famous road from Rome to Brundusium, had a statue in his honor here (Acts xxviii. 15).

AQ'ŬĬLĂ (eagle). Jew at Corinth, tent maker and friend of Paul (Acts xviii. 2). He and his wife Priscilla had been banished from Rome with all Jews, by Claudius. They became zealous promoters of the cause, as Paul says "helpers in Christ Jesus," "who have for my life laid down their own necks" (Rom. xvi. 3, 4). The Greek church honor Aquila as a bishop, on July 12. The Romans call him bishop of Heraclea, and the festival of Aquila and Priscilla is on July 8.

AR. Capital of Moab, on the Arnon (Num. xxi. 15–28). The place is still called Rabba, and is 17 miles E. of the Dead Sea, 10 S. of the Arnon, and its ruins occupy a low hill overlooking a plain, where are found the remains of two Roman temples and some water-tanks. It was burnt by King Sihon (Is. xv. 1). Rabbath Moab.

A'RA (lion). Son of Jether, of Asher (1 Chr. vii. 38).

ĂR'AB. Judah. (Josh. xv. 52). Near Hebron. Lost.

AR'ABAH (waste—sterile). The valley of depression from Mt. Hermon to the Red Sea at Ezion Geber (Akabah). (Deut. i. 1; Job xxiv. 5; Is. xxxiii. 9). Now restricted to the valley from the Sea of Galilee to the S. end of the Dead Sea, and called El Ghor. It is 150 miles long by 1 to 10 or 12 miles wide. ARBOTH, the plural of Arabah was the name given to the plain of Jericho (Josh. v. 10; Num. xxii. 1; 2 Sam. xv. 28). The region is called KIKKAR in Gen. xiii. 10. From the Dead Sea to Akabah the Arabs name the valley Wady el Arabah. The desert of TIH bounds the A. on the west, by long walls of limestone, 1500 to 1800 feet above its floor. The mts. of Edom form the E. wall, and are of granite, basalt, and porphyry, 2,000 to 2,300 ft. in elevation, and covered with vegetation. Mt. Hor, the highest peak, is 5,000 ft. above the sea. A line of chalk cliffs, 150 ft. high, 6 ms. S. of the Dead Sea, running E. and W., divides the A. from El Ghor. W. EL JEIB is the principal water-course—flowing only in winter. The A. is a desert of sand, gravel, low hills, and cut by numberless water-courses. The sirocco blows almost constantly. There are a very few shrubs and plants, as rushes, tamarinds, oleanders, anemones, lilies, and palms. The water-shed is 40 ms. N. of Akabah, from which the water flows both N. and S. The pass up out of the A. near Akabah, upon the plateau of Tih, is now used by pilgrims on the route from Suez to Mecca, and is called NUKB, the pass. From this plateau to 1000 ft. above it is another pass, on the route from Mt. Hor to Hebron, called es Sufah, where Israel was repulsed by Canaan (Deut. i. 44; Num. xiv. 43–45). On the E. side Wady Ithm leads through the mts. near Akabah, where there are remains of a Roman road, leading to the country E. of the Dead Sea, over the same route traversed by the Exodus, when Edom was compassed (Num. xxi. 4).

ĂRĂ'BIA (east country). E. of Palestine, including all the descendants from Ishmael and Keturah (Gen. x. 30; xxix. 1; Judg. vi. 3.) Sons of the East (Num. xxiii. 7; 2 Chr. ix. 14). Sons of Kedem (s. xxi. 13). "Forest in A." (Ex. xii. 38; Neh. xiii. 3; 1 K. x. 15), "Mixed multitude" are Arabians. Now called by the Arabs BILAD EL ARAB—country of the Arba. Bedawin are people of the open country, not living in towns. Extends from the Euphrates and the Persian Gulf to Egypt and the Red Sea; and from the Indian Ocean to the Mediterranean, or Great Sea. The ancients divided it into ARABIA FELIX, A. DESERTA, and A. PETRÆA. The modern divisions are the Peninsula of Sinai, Arabia, and North A. (See Sinai, Edom, Petra, Mt. Hor, Arabah, Syria, Aram.) The original settlers were the sons of Shem and Ham (Gen. x. 21, 15). There are many ruins in Arabia of a more ancient people than any known to history—(Marib, Sana, Reydan, Riam, Inen, Rien).

There are many allusions in the Bible to the Arabs; and the manners and customs of the modern people are a help to the interpretation of those texts that refer to the ancients, and especially in Job. The Bedawin constantly remind us of the accounts of the patriarchs, or later Israelites. Respect to age (Lev. xix. 32); deference to superiors (2 K. v. 13); engravings on signets of sentences having the name of God (Ex. xxxix. 30; John iii. 33). As a pledge, the ring is given (Gen. xli. 42); they wear an inkhorn in the girdle (Ezek. ix. 2, 3, 11). Many of the most obscure passages are explained by a knowledge of the present customs.

The people have in all ages been active, enterprising, restless; ambitious in commerce, conquest, and religion.

The country of A. was never conquered.

ARĂ'BIANS (2 Chr. xvii. 11). Nomades, east and south of Palestine, a part being descended from Keturah. The Sheikh (king) was called Aretas (2 Macc. v. 8).

A'RAD (wild ass). Son of Beriah, a Benjamite (1 Chr. viii. 15).

Ā'RAD. S. of Judah (Num. xxi. 1; King of A., Josh. xii. 14; Judg. i. 16). Tell Arad, 20 ms. S. of Hebron. (R.)

AR'ĂDUS. ARVAD (wandering). Phœnicia (Ezek. xxvii. 8; Gen. x. 18). An island 3 ms. from the coast, near the river Eleutherus, Nahr el Kebir; and opposite to it is the site of Antaradus, now called Ruad (1 Macc. xv. 23). The island was settled by fugitives from Sidon. High and rocky, about a mile in extent, near Tripoli.

A'RAH (traveler). Son of Ulla, of Asher (1 Chr. vii. 39).—2. 775 of the "sons of Arah" returned with Zerubbabel (Ezr. ii. 5). Ares (1 Esd. v. 10).

Ā'RAM (high). N. E. of Palestine. Called also Syria—which see (Gen. xxxi. 18; xxxiii. 18). 1. A. Dammesek, Syria of Damascus (2 Sam. viii. 5, 6).—2. A. Naharaim (two rivers), the country of Abraham (Gen. xxv. 20).—3. Padan A., Aram at the foot of the mountains.—4. A. Zobah (2 Sam. x. 6, 8).—5. A. Beth Rehob.—6. A. Maachah (1 Chr. xix. 6). Geshur (2 Sam. xv. 8; 1 K. xi. 25). Aram was a son of Shem, and his brethren were Elam, Asshur, Arphaxad. Aram is also Assyria (2 K. xviii. 26; Is. xxxvi. 11; Jer. xxxv. 11; 2 K. xvi. 6).—2. Aram, of whose family was Elihu who visited Job (xxxii. 2).

A'RAMITESS. Woman of Aram (1 Chr. vii. 14).

ARAM-NAHARAIM. Mesopotamia. (Plain of Damascus?)

A'RAM ZOBAH. Aram and Zobah (Ps. lx.).

A'RAN (wild goat). A Horite (Gen. xxxvi. 28).

AR ARAT (holy land). A mountainous district, or lofty plateau, nearly 5000 ft. above the sea, between the Black and Caspian seas, where rise the Euphrates and Tigris, which flow into the Persian Gulf; the Araxes and Cyrus, into the Caspian; and the Acampsis, into the Black Sea. The range of Mt. Taurus begins at the N. E. end of the Great Sea, near Antioch in Syria, runs N. E., meeting the range of Abus, from the head of Persian Gulf running N. W., at the Mt. Ararat, which is 17,750 feet high. It is alluded to in Scripture as—1. Ararat

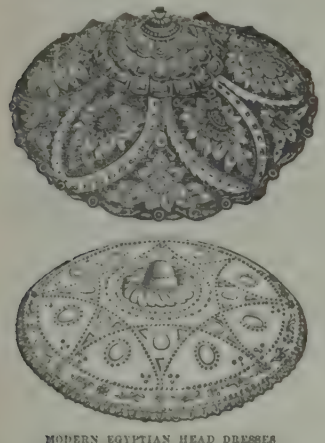
MT. ARARAT ARMENIA.

(Gen. viii. 4), the land on which the Ark rested; and where the sons of Sennacherib fled after killing their father (2 K. xix. 37).—2. Minni (Jer. li. 27). Josephus says there is a great mountain in Armenia called Baris (Ant. i. 3, 6).—3. Togarmah. In Gen. x. 3, this is the name of the youngest son of Gomer. Ezek. (xxxviii. 6) says, "the house of Togarmah of the north." Tyre traded in horses with Togarmah (Ezek. xxvii. 14).

AR'ARATH. ARARAT (Tobit i. 21).

ĀRAU'NAH (jah is strong). The Jebusite who sold his threshing-floor to David for a place for an altar to God (2 Sam. xxiv.). He was one of the royal family of the Jebusites (2 Sam. xxiv. 23). David bought the whole hill Moriah for 600 shekels of gold, and the treshing-floor and oxen for 50 shekels (1 Chr. xxi. 25).

AR'BA. See HEBRON.



MODERN EGYPTIAN HEAD DRESSES

AR'BA (hero-baal). Ancestor of the Anakim—named Hebron Kirjath-arba (city of Arba. Josh. xiv. 15; xv. 13). Arbah in Gen. xxxv. 27.

AR'BATHĪTE. Resident in the Arabah, the Jordan valley (2 Sam. xxiii. 31).

ARBAT'TIS. Error for Acrabattine; or meaning Ard el Butihah in Galilee (1 Macc. v. 23).

ARBE'LA (1 Macc. ix. 2), Arabella, near Maisaloth. Beth Arbel, or what is now called Irbil, a few miles W. of Magdala. (Hos. x. 14.)

AR'BĪTE THE. Resident of Arab (2 Sam. xxiii. 35). Paarai, the Arbite, one of David's guard; Naarai, the son of Ezbai in 1 Chr. xi. 37.

ARBŌNAI (Judg. ii. 14, Mambre). See ABRONAS.

ARCHELĀ'US (leading the people). Son of Herod by Malthace, a Samaritan, brought up at Rome. Appointed by Augustus Ethnarch after his father's death. Banished to and died in Gaul at Vienne. He had a bad reputation (Matt. ii. 22) for cruelty and oppression.

AR'CHEVĪTES. People from Erech(?) living in Samaria (Ezr. iv. 9).

ARCHIP'PUS (driver of horses). Disciple in Colossæ, "our fellow soldier" (Philemon 2). He is supposed to have been a teacher, one of the 70 sent out, as well as deacon, in Colossæ and Laodicea, and to have suffered as a martyr at Chonæ.

ARCHĪTE. Hushai, the Archite in 2 Sam. xv. 32. No town of Arca is known in Palestine; the one north of Tripoli is in Phœnicia. Josh. xvi. 2 has "the borders of Archi" near Bethel and Luz.

ARCTŪ'RUS. Heb. ASH, AYISH, in Job ix. 9; xxxviii. 32. The Arabians name the cluster of four stars in the body of the "Great Bear" en nash, and those in the tail el Benat, the daughters.

ĀRD (descent). Son of Benjamin, the youngest (Gen. xlvi. 21).—2. Son of Bela (Num. xxvi. 40). Addar in 1 Chr. viii. 3. Ardites, from him.

AR'DATH. The field in 2 Esd. ix. 26, meaning that all Palestine was but a field or waste (Arboth?) to the Jews.

AR'DON (fugitive). Son of Caleb by Azubah (1 Chr. ii. 18).

ARĒ'LI (hero's son). ARIEL. Son of Gad (Gen. xlvi. 16). Arelites (Num. xxvi. 17).

ĀREŌP'AGUS (hill of Ares). Mars Hill. Athens. A rocky height opposite the west end of the Acropolis, used from the earliest times as a place of assembly for the honorable men who had held the office of Archon. On this hill Paul stood, in the midst of these august men, when he said, "Whom ye ignorantly worship, Him declare I unto you." Dionysius, the Areopagite (Acts xvii. 23–34). "In the market daily." The AGORA, or market, was a public place, surrounded on three sides by the architectural glories of Athens. It may be described thus: To the northeast was the Acropolis, a rocky height 150 feet above the street below, crowned with the Parthenon and other temples; north the Areopagus; west the Pnyx (pulpit); and south the Museum, with other buildings. (See plan of Athens.)

At the time of Paul's visit, Athens was a magnificent city, ornamented in every quarter with memorials sacred to religion and patriotism, showing the highest achievements in art. The famed Academy had its groves of plane and olive trees, retired walks and cooling fountains, altars and statues and temples, near which was the house of Plato, the great teacher.

The Acropolis had clustered on its summit memorials and monuments of religion and art, such as were never seen on an equal space. Pericles had adorned it with a flight of steps and a Propylæa, with five entrances and two flanking temples of Pentelican marble, where were placed the equestrian statues of the Roman emperors Augustus and Agrippa, the temple of the Wingless Victory; a picture-gallery; and there still stands the ruin of the unequaled Parthenon, which was then adorned with the masterpieces of the sculptor Phidias.

The Erechtheium, containing the holy olive-tree, sacred to Minerva, the holy salt-spring, and other sacred things. A colossal bronze statue of Pallas Promachus, by Phidias, stood near, the plume of whose lofty helmet was visible from the sea between Sunium and Athens.

Pausanias gives an account of a great number of statues on the Acropolis, so that we wonder how there could be any space left for the people.

It is no wonder, however, that Paul, with his natural genius and vast experience, should have been inspired by the surroundings. (See Life of Paul.)

AREOP'AGĪTE. A member of the council at Athens (Acts xvii. 34). DIONYSIUS.

AR'ETAS (graver). Title of the kings of Arabia, as Ptolemy of Egypt, and Augustus of Rome.—1. In the time of Antiochus Epiphanes, B. C. 170 (2 Macc. v. 8).—2. Father-in-law of Herod Antipas, whose Ethnarch ruled in Damascus when Paul escaped in a basket (2 Cor. xi. 32).

ARE'US. King of the Lacedemonians, whose letter to the high-priest Onias is given in 1 Macc. xii. 20–23; about 300 B. C.

THE AREOPAGUS, OR MAR'S HILL AND ACROPOLIS.

Bashan. Had sixty fortified cities (Deut. iii. 4, 13, 14; 1 K. iv. 13), called Trachonitis, a translation of the Hebrew name. The Samaritans called it Rigobaah=stony. The Arabs named it Mujeb=stony, and it is now El Lejah. It lies fifteen miles south of Damascus, is triangular, twenty-two miles from north to south, and fourteen from east to west. The region is elevated above the surrounding country, and is very rocky, like an ocean of basaltic rocks and boulders; thickly studded with deserted cities and villages, in all of which the houses are solidly built and of remote antiquity. A Roman road runs through the district, probably leading from Damascus to Bosra. Kenath and Edrei are on the border, to the southwest. The Hauran presents the utmost contrast to the Lejah, in being a country of the richest agricultural soil, in rolling downs, from the Sea of Galilee to the desert, far beyond the Lejah.

AR'GOB. The two princes, Argob and Ariel, were killed with Pekahiah, in the palace at Samaria, by Pekah.

ARIARĀ'THES. Mithridates, king of Cappadocia, B. C. 163–130.

ARĪDAI. Son of Haman (Esth. ix. 8).

ARIDA'THA. Son of Haman (Esth. ix. 8).

ARĪ'EH. ARJEH (the lion). See ARGOB. ARIEL.

Ā'RĪEL (lion of God). Poetical name of Jerusalem (Is. xxix. 1, 2, 7).

Ā'RIEL (lion of God). Chief under Ezra (viii. 16), in his caravan. One of the Gileadite chiefs killed by Pekah. See ARGOB. The same word occurs in 2 Sam. xxiii. 20, where it is rendered "two lion-like men"—and might be "two sons of Ariel." 2. Isaiah (xxix. 1) so names Jerusalem.—Lion of God, or hearth of God; the same word in Ezekiel xliii. 15) translated altar, means hearth of God.

ARIMATHĒ'A. A city of Judea (Luke xxiii. 51). King Demetrius writes (1 Macc. xi. 34): "We have ratified unto them the borders of Judea, with the three governments of Aphereum, Lydda, and Ramathaim, that are added unto Judea from the country of Samaria." Joseph of Arimathea (Matt. xxvii. 57; Mark xv. 43; John xix. 38). The place has been identified as the village of Renthieh, ten miles east of Joppa, on the road from Lydda to Antipatris, but this is doubted on the authority of Josephus. See RAMLEH.

Ā'RIOCH (lion-like). 1. King of Ellasar (Gen. xiv. 1).—2. Captain of the guard (Dan. ii. 14).—3. King of the Elymæans. In Judith i. 6, Erioch king of the Eliceans; in DOWAY, Delioces, king in Media.

ARĪ'SAI. Son of Haman (Esth. ix. 9).

ARISTAR'CHUS (excellent ruler). A Thessalonian, companion of Paul; with him at Ephesus (Acts xix.), and on the voyage, and at Rome, a fellow-prisoner and laborer (Col. iv. 10; Philem. 24). Tradition makes him bishop of Apamea.

ARISTOBŪ'LUS (best advised). 1. Jewish priest in Egypt in the reign of Ptolemy VI, B. C. 165. Judas Maccabeus addressed him as a counsellor of the king (2 Macc. i. 10). He wrote and dedicated to Ptolemy an allegorical exposition of the Pentateuch. Eusebius and Clement of Alexandria preserve fragments of his works.—2. A resident at Rome, whose household is the subject of a salutation in Rom. xvi. 10.—3. Son and successor of John Hyrcanus.—4. Second son of Alexander Jannæus.—5. Grandson of No. 3, and the last of the Maccabæans; murdered by the designs of Herod, B. C. 34.—6. Son of Herod the Great by Mariamne.

ARITH'METIC (numbering). The Hebrews were not a scientific, but a religious and practical people; but it must be inferred from what they did, in certain trades and arts, that they had the needed skill, and reckoning by numbers was not an exception. For figures, after the captivity, they used their letters, as is seen on the Samaritan coins; and this may have been their earliest custom also.

ARK. A word adopted from the Egyptian. A chest. The word for Noah's ark is TEBAH, the same as used for that of Moses (Gen. vi.; viii.; Ex. ii.) ARK OF THE COVENANT. An oblong chest of acacia wood, gilded, 45 inches long, 27 wide, and 27 deep. Ex. xv. 10; Num. vii. 9. It was to contain (or by its side), the book of the law, the covenant, and perhaps also the pot of manna, and Aaron's rod (Heb. ix. 4). When Solomon's temple was dedicated the ark contained only the "two tables" of stone (1 K. viii. 9). It was to be kept in the most holy place, excluding all idols, and itself be the centre of regard, as denoting the presence of God, on the Mercy Seat, which was on the lid, overshadowed by two images with wings. Jeremiah predicted (iii. 16), that it should be finally abandoned as a sacred object. It "rested" at Shiloh until the superstitious warriors took it into battle and lost it to the Philistines. Not long after its recovery it was placed in the temple. It is believed to have been burnt when the Babylonians destroyed Solomon's temple.

NOA'H'S ARK. The form and size cannot be learned from the text. The figures are given as 300 cubits long, 50 wide, and 30 high. The cubit was of several kinds, 18, 19, and 21 inches in length. The present opinion (among some), is that the Deluge was a local inundation, extending only far enough to destroy the human race, which is supposed to have dwelt in the valley of the Euphrates and Tigris. The form of the ark may be seen in that of the great rafts on those rivers, which have a flat-roofed cabin on them, like a rude house. The Apameans had a tradition that the ark rested near their city, in Phrygia, of which the coin here shown, dating from A. D. 150, is a memorial, now in Paris.

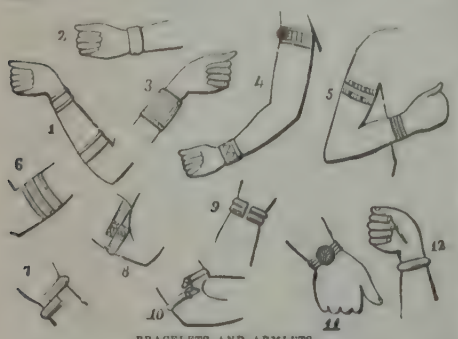
ĂR'KITE. Canaanite people living at Arka, under Mt. Lebanon on the sea (Gen. x. 17). Alexander Severus was born there, and it was then named Cæsarea Lebani. The ruins are on a hill looking over a fine plain, the sea, and mts.

ARMAGED'DON. A name for the plain of Jezreel. ESDRAELON. Mount Megiddo (Rev. xvi. 16). There is a symbolical meaning attached to this name and place which it is impossible to explain in this limited space. It may be interesting to recount the several great battles fought on the plain, which have given it a solemn importance in history. The great victory of Barak over the Canaanites (Judg. iv., v.), and of Gideon over the Midianites (Judg. vii); and two great disasters—the death of Saul (1 Sam. xxi. 8) in the invasion of the Philistines, and the death of Josiah in the invasion of the Egyptians (2 K. xxiii. 29). See JEZREEL.

ARMĒ'NIA. ARARAT. Christianity was established here in the 4th century. The whole number of the Armenians is about two millions. They have a rich convent on Zion (See Jerusalem). The ARMENIAN VERSION of the Bible was made in A. D. 410 by (the patriarch Isaac and) Miesrob, aided by his pupils Joannes Ecclensis and Josephus Palnensis, from the Syriac. It was afterwards corrected from the Greek, and was finished in the year 431.



BRACELETS AND ARMLETS.

ĂRM'LETS. Ornaments worn by men, as bracelets are by women.

ARMS. ARMOR. Offensive. 1. Club, mace, bar, hammer, or maul (shevet-barzel, Ps. ii. 9). At first of wood, then of metal.—2. Throw-stick (muphietz) figured on the monuments, and called by Arabs lissan. The Australian boomerang is an instance. —3. Dirk or sword, of flint, a deer's horn (chereb, now used in the East), of wood as now in Nubia, or of metal. The sword is carried in a belt or slung (girded, 1 Sam. xvii. 39).—4. Spear (romach), a short blade of a deer's horn straightened, or of metal, on a pole of wood. The horn of the oryx is about 40 inches long. Some were very heavy (chanith, 1 Sam. xvii. 7).—5. Javelin (cidon), a light spear for throwing; a dart (shelach, 1 Sam. xiii. 22). SHEBET, baton, or sceptre, with which Joab killed Absalom, (2 Sam. xviii. 14).—6. Bow (keshuth), and arrow (hitz), of a reed, branch, rib of palm, wood and horn, ivory, iron or brass. There were cases for the bow and for the arrows. —7. Sling (kela), for throwing stones; of plaited thongs. Stones were cast 400 feet and lead bullets 600. Balista were strong bows or springs rigged to throw stones (1 Chr. xii. 2).—8. Ram (car), a loaded car with a heavy pole shod with iron, sometimes shaped like a ram's head. Some were large towers on wheels, holding soldiers. Defensive. 1. Shield (tsinnah), buckler, (magen) roundel, (parma) target, (shelet), made of wood, or wickerwork, covered with hide, bordered with metal; kings and chiefs had them made of gold, silver or brass.—2. HELMET (koba); of rushes, osiers, skins, wood, cloth (turban), and metal.—3. ARMOR for the body; of leather, iron, brass. Shown on the monuments, covering the breast, or breast and back, or the whole body, with separate pieces for the arms and legs (Goliath wore them). Armor was also placed on the horse.

ĂR'MY. The Hebrews began, continued, and ended their national life in war. The law of Moses enrolled in the army every male from 20 to 50 years (Num. i. 3; 2 Chr. xxv. 5; Ant. iii. 12, 14), except the Levites. The divisions were 10, 50, 100, 1000, with proper officers (1 Macc. iii. 56; Num. xxxi. 14; 1 Sam. viii. 12). Messengers with trumpets summoned to the camp (Judg. iii. 27). The head of the nation was leader, as Moses, until the time of David, when the office of "captain of the host" was made distinct from that of king. Foot soldiers were the only kind at first used (Num. xi. 21), even while the Canaanites had chariots of iron (Judg. i. 19). David introduced horses and chariots contrary to the divine direction (Deut. xvii. 16), and was followed by his successors. The soldiers had to provide their own arms and food (1 Sam. xvii. 17), until a STANDING ARMY was made by the kings (1 Sam. viii. 11, 12; xiii. 2; 1 Macc. xiv. 32). David had 600 chosen men (2 Sam. xv. 18), "mighty men," perhaps his body guard (1 K. xiv. 28). A division served in each month, changing through the year. Foreigners were admitted to the service, and even advanced to high places (1 Sam. xv. 19; Ant. xiii. 13, 5).

AR'NA. Forefather of Ezra (2 Esd. i. 2).

AR'NAN (active). Son of Rephaiah (1 Chr. iii. 21, "sons of").

ĂR'NON (swift—noisy). River forming the boundary between Moab and Ammon, east of the Dead Sea (Num. xxi.; Judg. xi.). Fords of Arnon (Is. xvi. 2). Near the Dead Sea the stream is eighty-two feet wide, four feet deep, and flows between almost perpendicular walls of red, brown, and yellow sandstone. Now the Wady Mojeb (Josh. xiii. 9). "Aroer that is upon the bank of the river Arnon, and the city that is in the midst of the river." There is a ruin at the junction of the Lejum with the Arnon, name not known.

A'ROD (wild ass). Son of Gad (Num. xxvi. 17). ARODI (Gen. xlvi. 17). ARODITES.

ĂR'ŌER (ruins). Name of several places east of Jordan. 1. On the Arnon, north bank, ten miles from the Dead Sea, now in ruins. A Roman road connected it with cities north and south (Deut. ii. 36; iii. 12; iv. 48; Josh. xii. 2; xiii. 9; Judg. xi. 26; 2 K. x. 33; 1 Chr. v. 8).—2. Gad, facing Rabbah (Num. xxxii. 34; Josh. xiii. 25). Ayra, six miles east from the Jordan, two miles north of W. Sheriah.—3. The cities of Aroer (Is. xvii. 2). Supposed to be in Bashan.—4. Judah (1 Sam. xxx. 28). Ararah, on the road from Gaza to Petra, eleven miles southwest of Beer-sheba (Rob).

COIN OF APAMEA.

AR'ŌERITE. Hothan, father of two of David's captains (1 Chr. xi. 44).

A'ROM. 32 sons of Arom returned with Zorobabel (1 Esd. v. 16). ASOM? HASOM in Ezr. ii. 19.

ARPHAX'AD (region of the Chasdim). Third son of Shem, born B. C. 1658, and lived 438 years (Gen. x. 22; xi. 12—). Arrapachitis in N. Assyria was the original home of the Chaldeans.—2. King of the Medes (Deioces) who founded Ecbatana. Another account says he was Astyages, their last king.

ARSA'CES (prince of the noble). Title of the kings of Parthia and Media. Mithridates I took Demetrius II, of Syria, prisoner B. C. 139 (1 Macc. xiv. 2), and treated him with respect, giving him his daughter in marriage. Persians now call their king SHAH.

ĂR'SARETH. Region beyond the Euphrates (2 Esd. xiii. 45).

ARTAXERX ES (great king). Artachshast. 1. One who hindered the rebuilding of the temple (Ezr. iv. 7), from his time to that of Darius. He is believed to be the Magian imposter Smerdis, B. C. 521). —2. Artaxerxes Longimanus in whose 7th year Ezra led the second colony of exiles back to Judea (c. 7). He was son of Xerxes who was defeated in Greece.—3. Who allowed Nehemiah, in the 20th year of his reign to go to Jerusalem on civil business, and to remain in office there 12 years, B. C. 425. Some think that 2 and 3 were the same person.

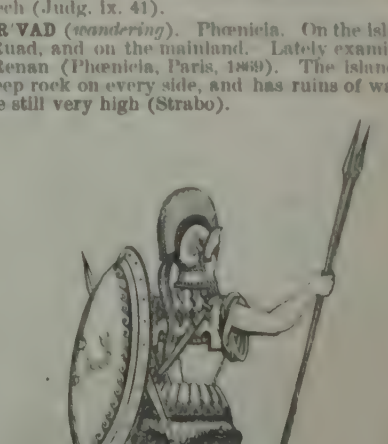
AR'TEMIS. DIANA (Acts xix. 24).

ART'LERY. Bows and arrows, slings, etc., in 1 Sam. xx. 40.

ĂR'ŪBOTH. Commissariat district of Solomon (1 K. iv. 10). Probably Shefelah.

ARŪ'MAH. Near Shechem. Residence of Abimelech (Judg. ix. 41).

AR'VAD (wandering). Phœnicia. On the island of Ruad, and on the mainland. Lately examined by Renan (Phœnicia, Paris, 1869). The island is a steep rock on every side, and has ruins of walls, some still very high (Strabo).



HEAVY ARMED WARRIOR.

ĂRVĂDĪ'TES, descendents of Arvad, son of Canaan (Gen. x. 18). They lived on the island, and mainland (above, and were described as a colony of Sidon, and as noted mariners (Ez. xxvii. 8; Strabo 16, p. 754), and had a king of their own (1 Macc. xv. 23).

AR'ZA (earth). King Elah's prefect at Tirzah (1 K. xvi. 9). In the Targum, Jonathan, "idol of Beth-Arza."

Ā'SĀ (physician). Son of Abijah, grandson of Rehoboam, and 3d king of Judah, from B. C. 955 to 914, 41 years. "He walked in the steps of his ancestor David" (1 K. xv. 11).

ASĀDĪ'AS. HASADIAH (Baruch i. 1; 1 Chr. iii. 20).

ASHDOD.

AS'AEL. Ancestor of Tobit (i. 1). JAHZEEL?

ĀS'AHEL (made by God.) Son of David's sister Zeruiah, brother to Joab and Abishai. Noted as a swift runner, and so lost his life (2 Sam. ii. 18).

ASAHĪ'AH (God-made). One of Josiah's messengers to Huldah the prophetess, to inquire about the newly found book of the law of Moses (2 K. xxii. 12). ASAIAH.

ASĀ'IAH (God-made). Chief in Hezekiah's reign (1 Chr. iv. 36).—2. Levite in David's reign (ib. vi. 30).—3. First-born of the Shilonite (ib. ix. 5).

AS'ANA (1 Esd. v. 31). ASNAH in Ezr. ii. 50.

Ā'SAPH (choir leader). Levite, son of Barachias (1 Chr. vi. 39), and David's choir leader. The "sons of Asaph" succeeded him as leaders (1 Chr. xxv.; 2 Chr. xx. 14). Eleven of the Ps. have his name in their titles (Ps. lxxiii.-lxxxiii.—2. Recorder to king Hezekiah.—3. Keeper of the royal forest under Artaxerxes (Neh. ii. 8).

ASĀ'REEL (God-bound). Son of Jehaleleel (1 Chr. iv. 16).

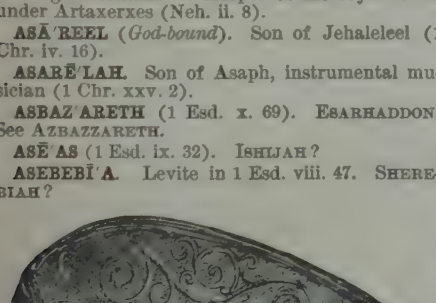
ASARĒ'LAH. Son of Asaph, instrumental musician (1 Chr. xxv. 2).

ASBAZ'ARETH (1 Esd. x. 69). ESARHADDON. See AZBAZZARETH.

ASĒ'AS (1 Esd. ix. 32). ISHIJAH?

ASEBEBĪ'A. Levite in 1 Esd. viii. 47. SHEREBIAH?



EARTHEN LAMP. 3.

ASEBĪ'A. HASHABIAH.

ASĒ'NATH (worshiper of Neith). Daughter of Potipherah, priest of On, Joseph's wife.

A'SER (Tobit i. 2). City in Galilee. HAZOR? (Luke ii. 36; Rev. vii. 6). ASHER.

ASĒ'RER (1 Esd. v. 32). SISERA?

Ā'SHAN. Al Ghuweir, in Simeon (Josh. xv. 42; xix. 7).

ASHBĒ'A (I adjure). Eshba in the Targum of Joseph. It is not known whether this means a house or a place.

ASH BEL (God's charge). Son of Benjamin (Gen. xlvi. 21).

ASHDOD. AZO'TUS. Eighteen miles south of Joppa, in Philistia. On an elevation above the plain, was strongly fortified, and was one of the seats of the worship of the god Dagon (1 Sam. v. 5; Josh. xv. 47). The birthplace of Herod the Great, who adorned it with baths. It was on the high road to Egypt, and besieged by the Assyrian Tartan, B. C. 716 (Is. xx. 1). Psammetichus besieged it for 29 years, B. C. 630 (Jer. xxv. 20). Philip was found at Azotus (Acts viii. 40; Neh. xiii. 23, 24). It was noted during the Crusades. Now called Usdud. The modern village is built among the ruins of the ancient city, and is embowered in groves, tall sycamores, and hedged with cactus, while the sand drifting with the wind is creeping up to the very doors, two miles from the sea, and burying every green thing.

ASH'DOTH-PIS'GAH (to pour forth). Springs E. of the Dead Sea (Deut. iii. 17; Josh. xii. 3; xiii. 20; Num. xxi. 15). Ravine on the E. slope of Pisgah.

ASHER (happy). The eighth son of Jacob, by Zilpah, Leah's handmaid (Gen. xxx. 13). The names of one of the 12 tribes. The boundaries are extremely difficult to trace, but were N. of Carmel, on the Great Sea (Josh. xix. 24–31). It contained some of the richest soil in Palestine, and minerals. Anna, who lived in the temple, watching for the coming of Christ, was of this tribe.

ASHE'RAH (straight). Idol of the Phœnician goddess (2 K. xxi. 7; xxiii. 6). Grove in A. V. Perhaps a head or bust on a straight pillar.

ASH'IMA (goat with short hair). A god of the Hamathites, in Samaria, brought from Assyria (2 K. xvii. 30). The Mendesian god of Egypt was a goat (as the Greek Pan), and the Phœnician Esmun.

ASH'KELON. One of the five cities of the Lords of the Philistines (Josh. xiii. 3; 1 Sam. vi. 17). Samson retired to A. as to a remote place (Judg. xiv. 19). Since the crucifixion it has been more noted than before. There was a temple and sacred lake to Derceto, the Syrian Venus. It was celebrated for its groves of cypress, figs, olives, pomegranates, vines, and for henna, which grew best here of any place, except only Canopus, and also for the peculiar onions called shallot. Richard I of England, during the Crusades, fortified and held his court at A. The Muslim called it the Bride of Syria. The ancient city was enclosed in a natural wall of hills forming an amphitheatre on the shore of the sea, and on the top of this ridge was the wall, which was very high, thick, and built of small stones and old columns of granite and marble. The modern village Askulan, is very beautiful in its groves, orchards, and shade-trees (Gen. xx. 2). Gerar is supposed to be A. by the Samaritans.

ASH'KENAZ. One of the sons of Gomer, son of Japhet. The tribe or nation was located in or near Armenia, Ararat, Minni (Jer. li. 27). The name is a compound, As-kenz = As-race. Probably the origin of ASIA.

ASH'NAH. JUDAH. Two cities. 1. 9 ms. W. of Jerusalem, near Zanoah (Josh. xv. 33). 2. S. W. of Jer. 16 ms., near Nezib (Josh. xv. 43).

ASH'PENAZ (horse-nose). Chief of the eunuchs in Assyria (Dan. i. 3).

AS'PHAR, THE POOL OF. Jonathan and Simon encamped in the vicinity of this pool before the battle with Bacchides (1 Macc. ix. 33; Jos. Ant. xiii. 1, § 2). Is it lake Asphaltitis?

ASH'RIEL. Son of Manasseh (1 Chr. vii. 14). ASRIEL?

ASH'TERATHĪ'TE. Resident in Ashtaroth (1 Chr. xi. 44). Uzzia was one.

ASH'TORETH. ASHTAROTH (star). BASHAN. The seat of the idolatry of the goddess Ashtaroth, or Astarte. Tell Ashareh, a mound 70 feet high, at one time occupied by a village or buildings. A fine spring issues near some ruins at the base. Following the Samaritan Pentateuch, which reads Afinit Karnaim, instead of Ashtaroth Karnaim, the site of the temple and city of Astarte, is looked for on the S. W. slope of Jebel Hauran, 8 miles N. E. from Bozrah at a place called El Afineh.—2. A. Karnaim (of the two horns). Now supposed to be Es Sunamein, 25 miles S. of Damascus on the pilgrim route to Mecca. Sunamein=two idols.

ASH'UR (hero). Son of Hezron; "father" (chief) of Tekoa (1 Chr. ii. 24).

ASH'URĪTES. In the list of Ishbosheth (2 Sam. ii. 9). House of Asher, meaning the whole of Galilee (Judg. i. 32).

ASH'VATH. Son of Japhlet, of Asher (1 Chr. vii. 33).

Ā'SIA (orient). Found only in 1 Macc. viii. 6, and the N. T. Now Asia Minor.—2. The country of the king of Pergamos, Mysia, Lydia, Phrygia. 3. Name claimed by the kings of Antioch, now Cilicia (1 Macc. xii. 39). Chief town, Ephesus (Acts ii. 9).

ASIAR'CHÆ. Chief of Asia in Acts xix. 31. A religious office in Asia (Minor), under the Romans, annual, and subject to the proconsul. There are coins of several cities which show by their inscriptions that this office was a great honor. Their duties were the control of the public GAMES and SPECTACLES in the theatres (which were at their own expense?). Philip was the Asiarch when Polycarp was killed at Smyrna. Only wealthy men could have it. Each city sent one person annually to the council, ten were chosen from the whole number, one was made president, or Asiarch. Others think the ten were all Asiarchs.

COIN OF LAODICEA—STRUCK BY THE ASIARCH.

ASIHĪ'AS. Son of Phorosh, or Parosh (1 Esd. ix. 26).

A'SIEL (God-made.) Ancestor of Jehu of Hezekiah's reign (1 Chr. iv. 35).—2. One of the five writers employed by Esd. on the law and history (2 Esd. xiv. 24).

ASĪ'PHA (1 Esd. v. 29). HASUPHA.

ASMODĒ'US (to destroy). "King of the demons." (Tobit, iii, 8, etc.)

ASNĀP'PER (general). "The great and noble" officer who settled the Assyrians in Samaria (Ex. iv. 10).

A'SOM (1 Esd. ix. 33). HASHUM.

ASP. Cobra of Egypt. See ADDER.

ASPAL'ATHUS. A sweet perfume (Ecclus. xxiv. 15).

ASPĀ'THA. Son of Haman (Esth. ix. 7).

AS PHAR, THE POOL. In the wilderness of Thecoe (1 Macc. ix. 33). ASPHALTITIS?

ASPHAR'ASUS. MISPERETH (1 Esd. v. 8).

AS RIEL (vow of God). Son of Gilead (Num. xxvi. 31). ASRIELITES.

ASSAHĪ'AS (1 Esd. i. 9). HASHABIAH. ASEHIA.

ASSAL'IMOTH (1 Esd. viii. 36). SHELOMITH?

ASSANĪ'AS (1 Esd. viii. 54). HASHABIAH?

ASSARĒ'MŌTH (1 Macc. iv. 15). Margin. GAZERA?

AS'SHUR. Son of Shem. Named Assyria.

ASSHŪ'RIM. From Dedan, grandson of Abraham (Gen. xxv. 3). Ashur in Ezr. xxvii. 23.

ASSĪDÆ'ANS (pious). A sect who upheld the doctrine of the unity of God, and opposed Grecian manners and idolatries (1 Macc. vii. 13). The name afterwards denoted a life of austerity and religious exercises, in the hope of hastening the coming of the Messiah, and of making an atonement for their own and others' sins. (There is a sect of the name of Assidians now in Poland).

AS'SIR (captive). Son of Korah (Ex. vi. 24).—2. Son of Ebiasaph (1 Chr. vi. 23).—3. Son of Jeconiah (1 Chr. iii. 17). Jeconiah, the captive?

AS SŌS. Seaport in Mysia, on a peninsula in the Ægean Sea (Acts xx. 13). The ruins are very extensive, and give a more perfect idea of an entire ancient Greek city than any other known site. Paul met Luke and others here after walking from Troas.

ASSYR'IA. Country on the Tigris (Gen. ii. 14), the capital of which was Nineveh (x. 11): named from Asshur, the Son of Shem, who was deified and worshiped as their chief god by the Assyrians: 500 ms. N. E. to S. W. and 350 to 100 ms. wide. Divided from Armenia by a high range of mountains. Its northern part is mountainous, the middle hilly, with fertile plains, and the southern is the great plain of Mesopotamia (midst of rivers)—the district now called El Jezira. This plain is 250 miles long, divided by the rocky ridge, Sinjar—a limestone range, sparsely wooded, and of a golden color, with purple lines of shade at a distance. 80 ms. N. of the Sinjar the plain extends to the hilly region, and was once densely populated, but is now a wilderness. The mounds are the only relics of antiquity, and these contain (in those of Nineveh, and others recently partly explored by Layard), proofs of their greatness, in sculptures, inscriptions, and remnants of architecture. The first king of A. who oppressed Israel was Chushan-Rishathaim, B. C. 1400 (Judg. iii. 8). Art and architecture, civil and religious institutions, were in a very advanced state. They used the arch, tunnels, drains, the level, and roller; engraved on gems; enamelled, inlaid, and plated with metals; made glass, optical instruments, ivory, bronze, and precious metal ornaments. The prophesies against A. are those of Nahum, B. C. 645; Zephaniah ii., B. C. 608; and Ezekiel xxxi. B. C. 584.

ASSYRIAN KING

ASSYR'IANS. In Heb. ASSHUR (Is. x. 5., etc.).

ASTAR'TE. ASHTORETH.

ASTATH (1 Esd. viii. 38). AZGAD?

ASTRŎN'ŎMY (star-naming). The knowledge of this science by the Hebrews was very limited, as may be judged from their writings; but they in no case oppose scientific fact or truth. Some special knowledge was needed for the temple service. Worship of the stars was denounced with other idolatries (Job xxxviii. 32; K. xxiii. 5. MAZZAROTH. 2. Signs of the Zodiac. MAZZALOTH—planets). The Chaldeans and Egyptians were more cultivated in this and other sciences, and used them in their religious systems.

ASY'LUM (inviolable refuge). The earliest recorded was the temple of pity at Athens, or perhaps one made by Cadmus at Thebes, Greece. Christians adopted the pagan custom and made their churches asylums, and this is still the case in Italy. Moses set apart 6 cities of refuge in the Holy Land. (CITIES OF REFUGE). He also made the "horns of the altar" an asylum; which privilege afterwards attached to the temple and its courts (1 Macc. x. 43).

ASYN'CRITUS. Disciple at Rome (Rom. xvi. 14).

Ā'TAD (thorn). Threshing-floor on the W. of Jordan, near Hebron, (Gen. l. 10-11). ABEL-MIZRAIM.

AT'ARAH (crown). Wife of Jerahmeel, mother of Onam (1 Chr. ii. 26).

'AT'ĀROTH (crowns). 1. A. Beth Joab, Judah (1 Chr. ii. 54).—2. A. Addar, Eph. (Josh. xvi. 2), 6 ms. N. W. of Bethel.—3. A. Shophan-Gad (Num. xxxii. 34), S. of Heshban, near Jebel Atarus.—4. A. Reuben (Num. xxx. 3).

PLAN OF ATHENS.

A'TER (dumb). Gate-keepers in the temple (Ezr. ii. 42). Sons of Jatal (1 Esd. v. 28).—2. 98 sons of Ater returned with Zerubbabel (Num. viii. 21).

ATERĒ'ZIAS (1 Esd. v. 15). See ATER 2.

ATHARĪ'AS (1 Esd. v. 40). Correctly "the Tirshatha."

ATHENŌ'BIUS. Envoy by Antiochus Sidetes to Simon (1 Macc. xv. 28).

ATH'ENS. Capital of Greece, founded by Cecrops, B. C. 1556. Visited by Paul (Acts xvii.; 1 Thess. iii.). He founded a church. The people were lovers of music, painting, sculpture, architecture, and oratory, and took part in politics. The fine arts, history, and philosophy were a part of the education of all freemen. The plan shows the position of the Agora (market-place), between the four hills. Pausanius says the Athenians surpassed all others in attention to the gods; and their city was crowded with temples, altars, statues, and other sacred works. Paul said they were "too religious." See AREOPAGUS.

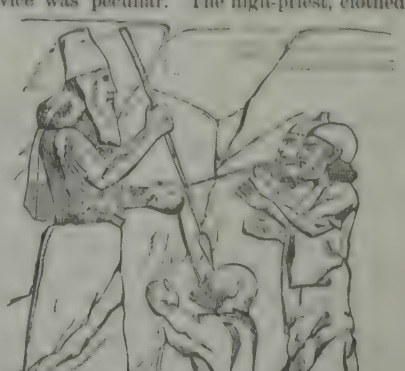
ATĪ'PHA (1 Esd. v. 32). HATIPHA?

ĀTŌNE'MENT (at-one-ment). Satisfaction for sin by which forgiveness is had. When Jacob sent a present to his brother Esau, he said, "I will cover his face, so that he shall forgive my offence, I will make atonement before him, I will placate him" (Gen. xxxii. 21). In Ps. xvi. 14, "a wise man will pacify it" (the wrath of the king). Only once in the N. T., in Rom. v. 11, where it means reconciling. THE DAY OF ATONEMENT was a great feast of the Jews, on the 10th of Tisri, and was held as a day of rest, a kind of Sabbath of Sabbaths, the only day in the year when the whole people fasted. The service was peculiar. The high-priest, clothed in white linen, without ornaments, took a young bull and a ram for himself and his house, and two goats as a sin-offering, and a ram as a burnt offering for the people. The goats were selected by lot, one for Jehovah and one for Azazel in the wilderness (that is to be sent away surely). The blood of the victims was taken into the most holy place and sprinkled upon and before the mercy-seat. The scape-goat, to be sent away, was brought forth and the high-priest confessed over his head his sins and those of the people, and he was sent into the wilderness by a trusty man. The bullock and the goat were not eaten, but entirely burnt. This was a symbol of the great truths of the redemptory system by means of propitiation, and it is understood as a type of the vicarious intercession of Jesus Christ.



ASSYRIAN KING PUTTING OUT THE EYES OF HIS CAPTIVES.

AT'TAI (timely). Grandson of Sheshan, son of Ahlai and Jarha, the Egyptian slave (1 Chr. ii. 35). 2. One of David's "lion-faced" warriors (1 Chr. xii. 11).—3. Second son of Rehoboam by Maachah, daughter of Absalom (2 Chr. xi. 20).

ATTĀL'IA. Maritime city in Pamphylia, named from Attalus Philadelphus, king of Pergamos. (Acts xiv. 25). Now Adalia, whose ruins witness its former greatness. Pop. 8000.

ATTHARĀ'TES (1 Esd. ix. 49). Error for "the Tirshatha" in Neh. viii. 9.

AU'GIA. Daughter of Barzillai (1 Esd. v. 38).

AUGUS'TUS (venerable). Title of the Roman Emperors. First assumed by Caius Julius Cæsar Octavianus (nephew of the great Julius Cæsar), when at the battle of Actium he became sole ruler of the empire, B. C. 29. Born B. C. 63, died A. D. 14, aged 76. He gained his great power by gradually uniting in himself all the principal state offices. Tiberius was associated with him in the empire long before his death. He was truly venerable and worthy of regard, for he used his absolute power with great moderation and prudence.

COIN OF HADRIAN AUGUSTUS.

AUGUSTUS' BAND (Acts xxvii. 1). Independent guard of the governor.

AURĀ'NUS. Leader of a riot in Jerusalem (2 Macc. iv. 40).

AUTĒ'AS. Levite (1 Esd. ix. 48). HODIJAH?

Ā'VA (overturning). In Assyria; AHAVA—IVAH (2 K. xvii).

ĀV'ARAN (killer of the royal elephant). (1 Macc. vi. 43–46). Title of honor given to Eleazar, brother of Judas Maccabeus.

Ā'VEN (nothing). 1. Plain of AVEN, perhaps the Bukna, of Baalbek (Amos i. 5).—2. High places of AVEN (Nos. x. 8), BETHEL.—3. In Ezr. xxx. 17, AVEN—ON, HELIOPOLIS in Egypt.

Ā'VIM. (ruins). AVITES. 1. Inhabitants of AVA. (2 K. xvii).—2. Town in Benj., ruins-town (Josh. xviii, 23). It is supposed, from Joshua, xiii. 3, that the country of the Avim was taken from them by the Philistines; called Hazerim in Deut. ii. 23.

Ā'VITH. Chief city of Hadad, king of Edom. (Gen. xxxvi. 35). Jebel Ghoweythe, N. E. of Kerak.

AX. The Hebrew words are KARDOM, or GARZEN, the softer form, for a heavy ax with a long handle. MAATZAD, a carving knife (Is. xliv. 12), and also a file for wood or iron (Jer. x. 3); CHEREB, a longer knife, or sword; CASH SHIL (Ps. lxxiv. 6), a carpenter's hatchet; MAGZERAH, ax or clever; MAPPETS, a maul or battle-ax. In some the ax is fastened to the handle with a thong or strip of leather, wound around a great many times; in others there is a hole or eye through the head. (See KNIFE, HOE). See cut on next page.

AZ'AEL (1 Esd. ix. 14). ASAHEL. AZAR'EUS

A'ZAL. ATZAL (Zech. xiv. 5). The limit of the Mt. of Olives in a poetical passage of Zechariah.

AZALĪ'AH (God-spared). Father of Shothan, the scribe (2 K. xxii. 3).

AZANĪ'AH (God hears). Father of Jeshua, the Levite (Neh. x. 9).

AZA'PHION. SOPHERETH? (1 Esd. v. 33).

AZAR'AEL. AZA'REEL (God helps). Korhite, with David at Ziklag (1 Chr. xii. 6).—2. Levite musician in David's time (1 Chr. xxv. 18); Uzziel in xxv. 4.—8. Son of Johoram, of Dan (1 Chr. xxvii. 22).—4. Son of Bani (Ezr. x. 41). Esril in 1 Esd. ix. 34.—5. Father of Amashai, priest in Jerusalem (Neh. xi. 13).

AZARĪAS (1 Esd. ix. 21). Uzziah in Ezr. x. 21. Several errors in the Apocrypha of this name, the correct form being found in Ezra and Nehemiah, Azariah. AZARIAS, the angel Raphael (Tobit v. 12).

AXES.

A'ZAZ (strong). Father of Bela (1 Chr. v. 8). REUBENITE.

AZĀ'ZEL. Scape-goat in Lev. xvi. 8. See ATONEMENT.

AZ'ZUR (helper.) Signer of the marriage covenant (Neh. x. 17). AZUR.

B

BĀ'AL (sun or lord). The supreme male god of the Phœnicians, as Ashtoreth was the supreme female goddess. The worship has been practiced from the most ancient times, and was adopted by the Jews, and carried on with great pomp and ceremony in special temples adorned with his images. The several names by which he was known were—1. BAAL-BE'RITH (covenant), at Shechem (Judg. viii. 33).—2. BAAL-ZE'BUB (of the fly), at Ekron.—3. BAAL-HA'NAN (gracious). BAAL-PE'OR (see Smith's Dictionary). The name was given to many places.

1. Simeon (1 Chr. iv. 33). Baalath Beer.

2. BĀ'ALAH. Kirjath Jearim, Judah, 7 miles W. of Jerusalem (Josh. xv. 9).—3. Town of the same name in Dan (Josh. xix. 44).

4. B. BĒER (B. of the well, or holy well) south Judah, and given to Simeon. Other sacred wells in this region were called Beer-lahai-roi (of the vision of God), and Beersheba (of the oath).

5. B. GĀD (fortune). The most northern point of Joshua's victories (xi. 17; xii. 7). Supposed to have been a Phœnician sanctuary. Robinson thought it was the same as Banias, which has been a sanctuary of the god Pan from a remote age.

6. B. HĀ'MON (of multitude). Where Solomon had a vineyard (Cant. viii. 11). May have been not far north of Samaria (Judith viii. 3).

7. B. HĀ'ZOR (village). Where Absalom had a sheep-farm, and where Amnon was murdered (2 Sam. xiii. 23).

8. MT. BĀ'AL HERMON. Mt. Hermon.

11. B. SHĀL'ISHA (third idol). Not far from Gilgal, Sharon (2 K. iv. 42).

12. B. TĀ'MAR (of the palm). Benjamin, near Gibeah (Judg. xx. 33). The palm-tree of Deborah is supposed to be meant by some. Lost.

13. B. ZĒ'PHON. Near the crossing-place of the Red Sea in the Exodus. Lost.

BA'ALAH. BAAL.

BA'ALATH. BAAL.

BĀ'ALBEK (city of the sun). BAAL GAD (Josh. xi. 17; xii. 7), in Cœle-Syria, the valley of Lebanon, under Mt. Hermon. The ruins are the most important and remarkable in the whole country; the site pleasantly located on the lowest slopes of Anti-Lebanon, at the opening of a small valley into the plain El Bukaa. A small stream, divided into many rills for irrigation, waters the fertile soil.

The city was not regular in plan, and heaps of ruins scattered over a space of two miles indicate its size. The chief attractions are the three temples. 1. The Great Temple, whose ruins are very grand and picturesque, but seems to have been left unfinished. The Great Gate is ornamented with every device that could be used in the most florid Corinthian style. Ears of grain, vine-leaves and grapes, with little figures of genii, or elves half-hid among them, and many choice touches of scroll-work, attract the eye and gratify the taste. Only 6 columns of the peristyle of this temple are now standing (75 ft. high, 7 ft. thick, the pediment 120 ft. above the ground), besides two courts and a portico. These are on an artificial platform, which is elevated 30 feet, and has vaults underneath. The three great stones forming a part of the wall of this platform measure (1) 64 ft., (2) 63 ft. 8 in., (3) 63 ft. Thickness, 13 feet. The large stone left in the quarry is 69 ft. long, 17 ft. wide, and 14 ft. thick. 2. The Octagon Temple is Ionic and Corinthian in style, circular inside and outside, having niches which are seen each between two columns. Carved wreaths ornament the space above each. This has been used as a Christian church, but is now ruinous. 3. The Temple of the Sun, also Corinthian, is the most beautiful work there. The great work of Wood and Dawkins contains drawings and plans of every object of interest at Baalbek, and also at Palmyra.

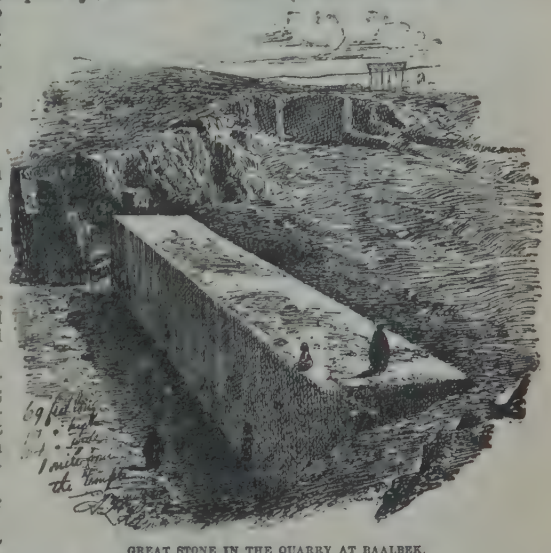
BA'ALE, of Judah. BAAL.

BA'ALIM. BAAL.

BA'ALIS. King of the Bene-Ammon (Jer. xl. 14).

BA'ANA. Son of Ahilud (1 K. iv. 12).

BA'ANAH. 1. Son of Rimmon (2 Sam. iv).—2. Fathers of Heleb (2 Sam. xxiii. 29).—3. Correctly Baana, Son of the Cushai (1 K. iv. 16).—4. Returned with Zerubbabel, (Ezr. ii. 2).



GREAT STONE IN THE QUARRY AT BAALBEK.

BA'ARA. Wife of Shaharaim.

BAASEI'AH. A Gershonite, ancestor of Asaph (1 Chr. vi. 40).

BAASHA (bad). The first king of the second line which reigned over the ten tribes. He was an idolater—worshiped the calves, and compelled the people to break off intercourse with Jerusalem.

BA'ASHA (lays waste). Son of Ahijah, 3d king of Israel, for 24 years. B. C. 953 to 930.

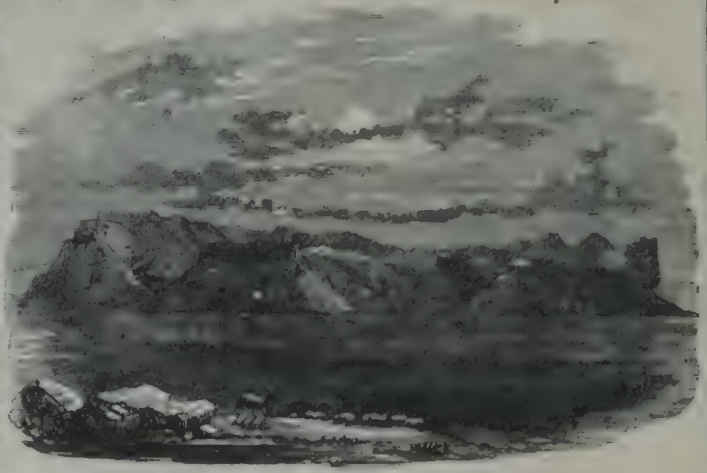
BĀ'BEL, BĀB'YLON (gate of God). Capital of the Plain of Shinar (Gen. x. 10). Built B. C. 2600 (ver. 25), on both sides of the river Euphrates: a vast square, 56 miles in circuit. About 5 miles above Hillah, on the E. bank of the river, are a great many artificial mounds of enormous size, in three groups: 1. Babil, or Mujellibe (overturned), a high pile of unbaked bricks; 2. The palace or Kasr; and 3. The mound on which the modern tomb of Amram ibn Ali stands. In a line with the Amram mound, on both sides of the river, are the ruins of a great palace, the bricks of which bear the name of Nergal-Sharezer (Neriglissar), who was the chief magician (Rab-mag) and officer of Nebuchadnezzar (Jer. xxxix. 3). Similar mounds, but smaller, are scattered over the country on both sides of the river, one of which, 6 miles S. W. of Hillah is called Birs Nimrud, which some say is the tower of Babel. Inscriptions found here, of the date of Nebuchadnezzar, mark the site of Borsippa, outside of Babylon. A broad and deep moat, kept full of water, surrounded one wall of the ancient city, outside of which was another wall 200 royal cubits high and 50 thick. (Pliny says 200, Strabo 75, and Rawlinson 60 to 70 feet). Scarcely a trace of these walls can be found now except it may be a few mounds which are supposed to mark the sites of some of the gates. Ctesias says there were 250 towers on the walls. The houses were generally built of bricks made of the river mud, sun dried, or burnt in kilns, cemented with bitumen, and were three and four stories high.



VIEW OF BABIL.

The streets were straight, and crossed each other at right angles, the cross streets having gates of bronze at the river. Ctesias mentions a bridge of stone 3,000 feet long and 30 feet wide, connecting two palaces on opposite sides of the river. There were 3 walls around the royal palace on the Eastern side, the second or middle wall being 300 ft. high and the towers 420 ft., and 4½ miles in circuit, made of colored brick, representing hunting scenes, with figures of Ninus and Semiramis. A tunnel under the river also connected the two palaces (Jer. li. 58, 53; l. 15). There were a hundred gates of bronze with posts and lintels of the same. The banks of the river had quays, whose ruins still exist, and on the bricks was written in arrow-head characters the name of the last king. The most imposing ruin examined by Layard is called Birs Nimrud, and was found to be in seven stories, with a chamber on the top, each story smaller, forming an oblique pyramid with a square base. It was called the Temple of the Seven Spheres, and is not the Tower of Babel of the Scriptures, which is not yet identified. The stories were colored, and were, beginning at the lower—1st, 272 ft. square, 26 ft. high, colored black; 2d, 230 sq. 26 h., orange; 3d, 188 sq. 26 h., red; 4th, 146 sq. 15 h., golden color; 5th, 104 sq. 15 h., yellow; 6th, 62 sq. 15 h., blue; 7th, 20 sq. 15 h., silver color; and the ark nearly covering the entire upper platform and 15 feet high, color not given: making, in all, 153 feet above the platform, which was three feet above the plain. The empire lasted 1300 yrs. (Jer. xxv. 12, 14). It is now a desolation, the great city has become heaps (li. 37), the land a wilderness for wild beasts, and even the Arabs refuse to pitch the tent, and the shepherd to fold sheep there (Is. xiii. 19–22).

BA'BI (1 Esd. viii. 37). BEBAI.

BĀ'CA (weeping). The valley (Ps. lxxxiv. 6). Located in Hinnom (2 Sam. v. 23). A valley of the same name is now found in Sinai. (Burck.).

BACCHĪ'DES (son of Bacchus). Friend of Antiochus Epiphanes, and governor of Mesopotamia; after Judas Maccabeus fell he reëstablished the power of the Syrian faction in Judæa. B. C. 161–158.

BACCHU'RUS. A holy singer who married a foreign wife (1 Esd. ix. 24).

BĂC'CHUS. Greek Dionysus. (2 Macc. vi. 7; xiv. 33). A god of special abhorence to the Jews. He was the god of wine, and of general festivity and jollity, and his rites sanctioned the most frantic excesses of revelry and excitement. Nicanor threatened to build a temple to Bacchus on the site of the temple of Solomon.

BACE'NOR. Captain under Judas Maccabæus (2 Macc. xii. 35).

BACH'RITES. Family of Becher, son of Ephraim.

BADG'ER (Heb. Tachash). The antelope. Tachaitze of Eastern Africa, bluish slaty-gray in color. Sculptured in Egypt.

BA'GO. BIGVAI.

BAGO'AS. EUNUCH (Judith xii. 11).

BA'GOI (1 Esd. v. 14). BIGVAI.

BAHARU'MITE, THE. BAHURIM.

BAHŪ'RIM (young men's village). Near the Jerusalem-Jericho road; where in the Wady Ruweiby, there are some ruins.

BALA'AM (stranger). Son of Beor, and a prophet (Num. xxii. 5). This strange man worshiped Jehovah, and at the same time knew and practiced the forbidden arts of divination. His prophesies are distinguished for dignity, compression, vividness, and fulness of imagery: there is scarcely any work equal to them in the later prophets (Rev. ii. 14).

BA'LAC (Rev. ii. 14). BALAK.

BAL'ADAN. MERODACH—BALADAN.

BA'LAH (Josh. xix. 3). BAAL.

BĂ'LĂK (empty). Son of Zippor, king of Moab, who hired Balaam to curse the Israelites (Num. xxii. 24).

BAL'AMO. BAAL. (Judith. viii. 3).

BALAS'AMUS (1 Esd. ix. 43).

BALDNESS, is natural and artificial. The artificial is caused by shaving the head, in token of mourning for the dead (Jer. xvi. 6), which Moses forbade to the Jews because it was a heathen custom. Baldness was ridiculed (2 K. ii. 23), perhaps on suspicion of leprosy. A bald man was declared unfit for the priestly office (Lev. xxi. 20).

BALM. TSORI.

BALNU'US (Esd. ix. 31). BINNUI.

BALTHA'SAR. (Bar. i. 11–12). BEL SHAZZAR.

BA'MAH (High-place) (Ezr. xx. 29). Jehovah gave this name to every place of idolatrous worship.

BA'MOTH. Station in the Exodus (Num. xxi. 19.)

BA MOTH-BA'AL. BAAL. High-place in Moab (Josh. xiii. 17).

BAN (1 Esd. v. 37). TOBIAH.

BANAI'AS (1 Esd. ix. 35). BENAIAH.

BA'NI. 1. Gadite; one of David's 30 (2 Sam. xxiii. 36).—2. A Levite (1 Chr. vi. 46).—3. Father of Imri (1 Chr. ix. 4). 4. Children of Bani, returned with Zerubbabel (Ezr. ii. 10—5. An Israelite—son of Bani (Ezr. x. 38).—6. A Levite (Neh. iii. 17). 7. A Levite [ANUS] (Neh. viii. 7).—8. Another Levite (Neh. ix. 4).—9. Levite—son of Asaph (Neh. xi. 22).

BANNAI'A (1 Esd. ix. 33). SABAD in Ezra.

BAN'NUS (1 Esd. ix. 34). BANI or BINNUI.

BĂN'QUET. Entertainment furnished at the expense of one man; usually towards the close of the day, between 5 and 6, and called supper. On grand occasions the invitations were given out some days before, and on the day appointed a servant was sent to announce that the time had arrived, and the guest was expected (Matt. xxii. 8; Luke xiv. 17). After accepting the invitation, to neglect to attend was no less than an insult. When all who had been invited had arrived the master of the house shut the door (Luke xiii. 24). The first act of welcome was washing the feet and anointing the hair with perfumed oil; and among the wealthy, on great days, a handsome cloak was furnished to each guest, to be worn during the festivity (Ecc. ix. 8; Rev. iii. 4).

BAN'UAS returned from captivity (1 Esd. v. 26).

BAP'TISM. Washing before prayer or sacrifice was a custom among all ancient nations, as a sign of spiritual purity in the physical cleanness, and baptism was instituted as an initiatory rite of his religion by the Lord Jesus Christ. To be baptized for Moses (1 Cor. x. 2) means to become subject to the law of Moses; to be baptized for Christ, shows an intention to become a true follower of Christ. John baptized with water unto repentance—not causing repentance but as a sign of it. Perhaps only a sign of their willingness to enrol themselves among John's followers. Some claim that Christian baptism was instituted by John; others, that it was not instituted till after the resurrection, when the Lord gave the commission to his apostles "to go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." There are different views of Baptism. 1. That it is a direct instrument of grace, when applied by a properly qualified person; infusing into the soul positive moral goodness; or, as some believe, giving only the capacity to receive goodness, which if rightly used will lead to salvation; while others again see that the good will only be enjoyed by those who are predestined to salvation.—2. It is a seal of grace, divine blessings being thereby confirmed to the soul.—3. Some hold that it is only a sign of initiation into Church membership.—4. Or a token of regeneration, to be received only by those who give evidence of being really regenerated.—5. A symbol of purification. The mode of baptism differs; and there is practiced immersion and affusion or sprinkling. The Marcionites, and the Gnostics baptized the dead (1 Cor. xv. 29), by proxy, some one answering for the dead, while the water was applied to the dead body; and parents were baptized for their children, from a mistaken reading of the words of Paul. He meant "If the dead rise not at all, what benefit do they expect who baptize vicariously for the dead?"

BARAB'BAS (son of Abba). One who had forfeited his life for sedition and murder (Mark xv. 7). The Armenian Version reads "Whom will ye that I shall deliver unto you, Jesus Barabbas, or Jesus that is called Christ?"

BAR'ACHEL. Father of Elihu, a Buzite (Job xxxii. 2–6).

BARACHI'AS (Matt. xxiii. 25). ZACHARIAS.

BĀ'RAK (lightning). Son of Abinoam of Kedesh, Naphtali (Judg. iv. 6). Summoned by Deborah to fight against Jabin and Sisera.

BARBARIAN. Any nation but the Greek, was the Greek definition. The term meant to the Greeks what Gentile did to the Jews—any people but Jews. The Egyptians had a similar term; and the oriental nations all had, and have now some term for distinction between their own and other people.

BARHUMITE. BAHURIM. AZMARETH.

BARI'AH. Son of Shemaiah, of Judah (1 Chr. iii. 22).

BAR-JE'SUS. ELYMAS.

BAR-JO'NA. PETER.

BARKOS. A Nethinim returned with Zerubbabel (Ezr. ii. 53).

BARLEY. Used, by the poor only, for bread, mixing it with wheat, beans, lentils, millet, etc., and as fodder for horses (Judg. vii. 13; 2 K. iv. 42; Ezr. iv. 9; 1 K. iv. 28). The barley harvest is in March and April, earlier than the wheat harvest by three weeks. Barley bread is a sign of poverty, and is little esteemed (Ezr. xiii. 19). Its value was one-third that of wheat (Rev. vi. 6).

ORIENTAL BANQUET.

BARN. Ten different Hebrew and Greek words are translated barn. Barns, as we know them, for storing hay, grain, etc., are unknown in the East. Rooms, or pits (granaries) are often made underground or cut into the solid rock. It is the custom to keep animals, produce, grain, and all kinds of goods, in the lower story of the dwelling. Poor people often sleep in the same room with their cattle.

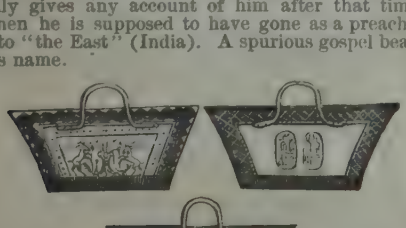
BAR'NABAS (exhorter). Joses, a Levite of Cyprus, an early disciple and companion of Paul, was called Barnabas—son of eloquence—because of his ready oratory (Acts. iv. 36). He was the first to recognize Paul's sincerity, and introduce him to the church in Jerusalem (ix. 27). Being honored with the mission to Antioch, he sought for Saul (Paul) in Tarsus as a helper, and they worked together a year. Barnabas' sister's son, Mark, was the Evangelist. He is not counted as an apostle (see APOSTLE), although Luke so speaks of him in Acts xiv. 14; and they were equally honored by the church until after the quarrel and separation of Barnabas from Saul. After that Barnabas is lost sight of. The Epistle called by his name is believed to be spurious, because it has in it errors in the Jewish history and worship, and very feeble grasp of divine truth, unworthy of a Levite and a disciple. It is assigned to the 2d century A. D. by Alford.

BARO'DIS. Servant of Solomon, returned with Zerubbabel (1 Esd. v. 34).

BARSABAS. See JOSEPH and JUDAS.

BARTACUS. Father of Apame. "The admirable" was probably an official title belonging to his rank (1 Esd. iv. 29).

BARTHOLOMEW (son of Talmai). One of the 12. The same as Nathanael. Born at Cana. Philip had some difficulty in bringing him to regard Jesus as the Christ. He was one of the 7 to whom Jesus appeared after the resurrection at the lake of Tiberias, and a witness of the ascension. Tradition only gives any account of him after that time, when he is supposed to have gone as a preacher into "the East" (India). A spurious gospel bears his name.



EGYPTIAN BASKETS.

BARTIMEUS (son of Timai), a blind beggar of Jericho (Mark x. 46).

BA'RUCH (blessed). 1. Friend and amanuensis of Jeremiah (Jer. xxxii. 12). See HISTORY OF THE BOOKS.—2. Son of Zabbai (Neh. iii. 20).—3. Son of Col-hozeh (Neh. xi. 5).

BARZILLA'I. A wealthy Gileadite who was hospitable to David when he fled from Absalom (2 Sam. xvii. 27); but declined David's invitation to reside at court, because of his great age.—2. Whose son married Saul's daughter Michal.

BAS'ALOTH. BAZLITH. (1 Esd. v. 31).

BAS'CAMA. Gilead, where Tryphon killed Jonathan Maccabeus, whose bones were afterwards removed to Modin by Simon (1 Macc. xiii. 23-25). Lost.

BA'SHAN, (soft, rich soil, or basalt soil). Land of Bashan. E. of Jordan, N. of Jabbok; from the border of Gilead to Hermon, and from the Jordan to Salcah (Josh. xii. 4, 5; Deut. iii. 10–14). At Edrei, Og, king of B., was defeated, and the land given to the half-tribe of Manasseh, with half of Gilead. It was famous for its oaks (Is. ii. 13; Zech. xi. 12), and cattle; and now the granary of Damascus. Modern travelers speak of its delightful forests, of its flocks and herds, and grain fields. ARGOB, with its 60 cities, was in Bashan.

BA'SHAN-HA'VOTH-JA'IR. Name given to Argob after its conquest by Jair (Deut. iii. 14.)

BASH'EMATH (fragrant). Daughter of Ishmael, Esau's 3d wife (Gen. xxxvi. 3). MAHALATH (xxviii. 9).—2. Daughter of Elon the Hittite, and wife of Esau (Gen. xxvi. 34).

BA'SIN. The translation of four Hebrew words, and one Greek word. The forms of some kinds have been preserved on the monuments, and are given in the article WASHING THE HANDS AND FEET.

BAS'KET. Five Hebrew words are translated basket. The form of the bread-basket is shown in the cut. They were made of grass, or willow twigs.

BAS'SA. BEZAI. (1 Esd. v. 16).

BA'STAI. BESAI. (1. Esd. v. 31).

BAS'TARD (Heb. mamzer). A child born to those who marry within the limited degrees of relationship, as two of the same family; or a Jew and a gentile.

BAT. Among the animals forbidden to be eaten (Lev. xi. 20). The peculiar habitation of bats, in the dark recesses of rocky caves, and their nocturnal habits, give great force to the prophesy that the idols shall be cast to the bats and the moles. Baruch shows (among other images) that the idols are no gods because bats sit on their heads, with birds and cats.

BATHING. BAPTISM. In Palestine, Syria and Egypt, bathing is a luxury as well as a necessity, and is now a religious ceremony, as in ancient times.

BATH-RABBIM. Gate of the ancient city of Heshbon. The two pools were near this gate; were likened to the eyes of Shelomith's beloved (Cant. vii. 4).

BATHSHE'BA (promised—sworn). Daughter of Eliam, wife of Uriah, and grand-daughter of Ahitophel, the statesman. Mother of Solomon. There are recorded instances of her vigorous understanding and kindness of heart.

BATH'SHUA. Daughter of the oath.

BATH ZACHARI'AS (house of Z.). Now Beit Sakarieh. 8 ms. N. of Beit Sur.

BAVAI. Ruler of Keilah (Neh. iii. 18).

BAY-TREE. A native—not an exotic (Ps. xxxvii. 35). Grows near Antioch.

BAZ'LITH (stripping). "Children of B." returned with Zerubbabel (Neh. vii. 54).

BDELLIUM. The gum of a tree that grew in the land of India and Arabia—used in sacrifice and as a perfume and flavor for wine. The word may mean pearls (Gen. ii. 12; Num. xi. 7).

BEALI'AH. A Benjamite who went over to David at Ziklag (1 Chr. xii. 5).

BE'ALOTH. A town in the extreme South of Judah (Josh. xv. 24).

BE'AN, CHILDREN OF. BEON. (1 Macc. v. 4), probably Bedouins.

BEANS. A native of Palestine, Syria and Asia Minor. (2 Sam. xvii. 28). Blossoms from January to March. Planted in November; gathered in February. Both the green pod and ripe beans, boiled with oil and garlic, are commonly used by persons of all classes. There are several kinds, some of which are fed to horses.

BEAR. The Hebrew name (dob) is still in use for the bear in the East, which is found on Mts. Hermon, Lebanon, and other parts of the country; and naturalists have shown that it is a species peculiar to Syria.

BEARD. The beard in the East is a badge of manhood and a mark of freedom. The Egyptians shaved it off and wore a false beard of plaited hair, in style and length to suit their rank. The Hebrews were distinct from both their Egyptian and Assyrian neighbors, as may be shown on the monuments, where captives are drawn in their proper costume and feature. It was a shame to lose the hair or beard (Is. l. 6), and also a sign of mourning. It was carefully dressed and oiled (Ps. cxxx. iii), and a full, long beard was, and is, a highly coveted ornament.

BE'BAI. 1,623 sons of Bebai returned with Zerubbabel (Ezr. ii. 11); 28 more with Ezra; 4 took foreign wives (Ezr. x. 28).—2. Father of Zechariah.—3. Bebai—Chobai (Judg. xv. 4).

SYRIAN BEAR.

BE'CHER (first-born—young camel). 1. Second son of Benjamin (Gen. xlvi. 21).—2. Son of Ephraim (Num. xxvi. 35).

BECHO'RATH. Son of Aphiah—grandson of Be'cher (Sam. ix. 1.)

BECTILETH, THE PLAIN OF (house of slaughter) between Nineveh and Cilicia (Judg. ii. 2). Bactiali was a plain 21 miles from Antioch. (Peutinger tables).

BEARDS.

BED. 1. A mat of grass, reeds, straw, hemp, or one or more cloths.—2. A quilt or mattress, filled with cotton, wool, grass, or straw. The pillow for the head is a frame of wood, a stone, or a stuffed bag, or sheep-skin. The bed was laid on the divan (platform 6 to 8 feet wide, and 8 to 15 inches high, on one or more sides of a room). Bedsteads, or movable frames (1 Sam. xix. 15; bier, 2 Sam. iii. 31), were used, perhaps, only, by the wealthy. Some were made of palm-sticks, and others of iron (Deut. iii. 11). Sculptures in Asia Minor show many elegant shapes of bedsteads, and couches. The canopy (Judith xvi. 23) was, and is still used in the East, for display, and for protection against light, dust and insects. (Esth. i. 6; Ps. vii. 16). The people seldom or never change their dress on going to bed; only taking off the outer garment (see DRESS), excepting in hot weather.

BE'DAD (separation, part). Father of Hadad, king of Edom (1 Chr. i. 46).

BE'DAN (son of Dan—servile), judge of Israel. (1 Sam. xii. 11).

BE-DEI'AH. Son of Beni (Ezr. x. 35).

BEE (dĕbôrâh). Palestine abounded in bees, for it was a land "flowing with milk and honey" (Deut. xxxii. 13). The banded bee of Palestine is not found in this country. So plentiful was wild honey that it was exported. It was eaten mixed with butter. There is a vegetable substance called honey which is a thick juice of grapes.

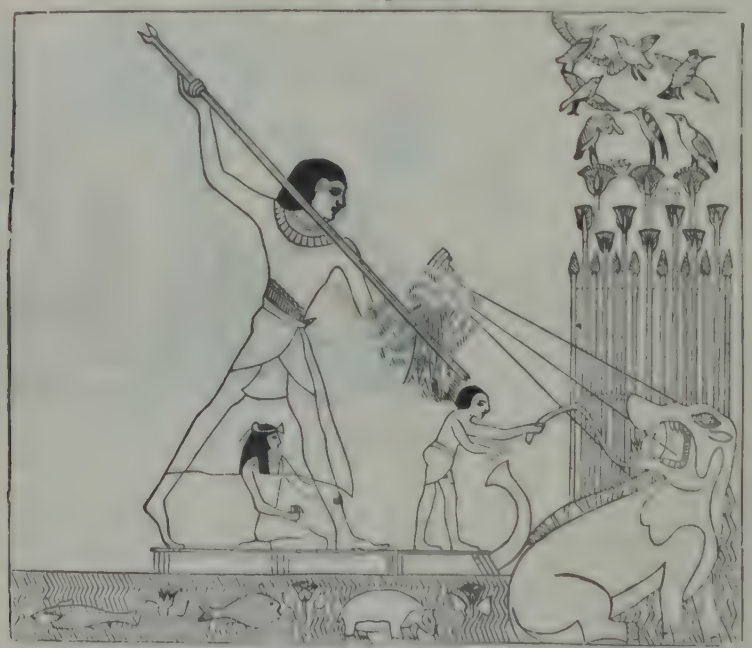
BEEL'SARUS. BIL-SHAN (1 Esd. v. 8).

BEELTETH'MUS (chancelor) officer of Artaxerxes in Palestine (1 Esd. ii. 16–25.)

BEEL'ZEBUB (fly-god). BEEL'ZEBUL (lord of dirt). House-god, and dung-god, by some. A belief that demons possessed persons, led to a belief in a prince of demons, who was supposed to rule over them.



EGYPTIAN HUNTING HIPPOPOTAMUS.

BĒ'ER (well).—1. A well dug by the "princes" beyond Arnon, near one of the last stations of the Exode, and celebrated in poetry (Num. xxi. 16, 18). —2. Jotham, son of Gideon, fled to this place (Judg. ix. 21). Site lost.

BĒ'ER-A (well). Son of Zophah (1 Chr. vii. 37).

BĒ'ER-AH (well). Prince of the Reubenites (1 Chr. v. 6.)

BEER-ELIM (well of heroes). BEER 1 (Is. xv. 8).

BĒ'ER-LAHĀ'I-ROI (well of the living and seeing God). Between Kadesh and Bered, wilderness of Shur (Gen. xvi. 14; xxiv. 62; xxv. 11). Located by Ritter 25 ms. S. E. of Beersheba, at Moyle, Beit Hagar.

BEĒ'ROTH (wells). One of the 4 cities of the Hivites; the other 3 being Gibeon, Chephirah, and Kirjath Jearim (Josh. ix. 17; xviii. 25, 26, 28). 10 ms. N. of Jerusalem, on the Shechem road, the customary resting-place of travelers (Rob.).—Bene Jaakan. Edom, a station (Deut. x. 6).

BĒER'SHEBA (well of swearing or well of seven). S. border of Judah. Dug by Abraham (Gen. xxi. 31). The compact of Abraham and Abimelech was ratified by setting apart 7 ewe-lambs, sheba=seven). Isaac's servants also "digged" a well (xxvi. 32). Two principal wells and five smaller ones are on the N. bank of Wady Seba on the edge of the desert. One is 12½ ft. diameter, 44½ ft. to the water (Rob., Apr. 12). The other is 5 ft. diam. and 42 ft. to the water. Watering-troughs of stone lie around the wells, and among the grass are crocuses and lilies. The 5 lesser wells are at some distance from the 2 larger. The ruins of a town are on the hills N. of the wells. It is very frequently mentioned as one of the boundaries of all Israel: From Dan to Beer-sheba. The Arab name is Bir es Seba', Well of the Lion.

BĒESHTE'RAH. MAN. (Josh. xxi. 27). ASHTAROTH.

BEE'TLE. LOCUST.

BEEVES. BULL; OX.

BEGGAR. ALMS; POOR.

BEGOTTEN. Jesus Christ, the Son of God (John i. 14, 18; Rev. i. 5).

BEHEADING. PUNISHMENTS.

BEHĒ'MOTH (excellences). Mentioned only in Job ix. 15–24. It is not certain which is meant, the elephant or the hippopotamus (river horse). Both answer the description, but the elephant comes much nearer to all the points required.

BE'KAH (part-half). WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

BE'LEMUS (1 Esd. ii. 16). BISHLAM.

BEL. The national god of the Babylonians (Is. xlvi. 1; Jer. l. 2) Zeus Bel is the male, and Hera the female of the same deity. Writers are divided as to whether Bel (Baal) was the sun or the planet Jupiter: if the sun, then Ashtoreth was the moon goddess.

BEL AND DRAG'ON. DANIEL, ADDITIONS TO.

BĒLA. Son of Beor, king of Edom; capital Dinhabah.—2. Eldest son of Benjamin.—3. Son of Ahaz. BELAH—Bela 3).

BE'LAITES.—Descendants of Bela 3.

BELĪ'AL, SON OF. Good-for-nothing—worthless fellow.

BEL-TE-SHAZ'ZAR. Name given to Daniel (Dan. i. 7). Correctly BEL-SHAT-ZAR (favored by Bel).

BELLS. Large bells were not used in ancient times, nor are they in use now. Small hand bells were used by the Greeks, Romans and Jews. The high priest wore round the hem of his dress seventy-two gold bells, which were placed alternately with pomegranates. The little girls of Cairo wear strings of them round their feet. They were sometimes attached to the harness of horses and camels.

BEL'LOWS. The ancients used two kinds, according to the monuments, ingeniously contrived to be worked by the feet (Jer. vi. 29).

BEL'MA-IM. BELMEN. Place S. of Dothaim (Judg. vii. 3).

BEL'MEN. ABEL-MAIM. Place in Samaria (Judg. iv. 4). ABEL-MEHOLAH.

BE'LIEVE. Faith in the Lord Jesus Christ (Acts xiii. 35).

BE'LIEV'ERS. Christians (Acts v. 14).

BĒLSHAZ'ZAR (Bel's prince). The last king of Babylon. A mysterious writing appearing on the wall during a great feast, and his magicians not being able to read it, Daniel was called, and explained its meaning. He died the same night (Dan. 5).

BEN (son). A Levite—a porter of the ark (1 Chr. xv. 18).

BEN-A-BIN'A-DAB. Son of Abinadab (1 K. iv. 11).

BENĀ'IAH (god-built). 1. Son of Jehoiada, of Kabzeel, a Levite (2 Sam. xxiii. 20–23).—2. One of David's 30 valiant men; an Ephraimite. Seven others of this name, but none very noted.

BEN-AM'MI (son of my kindred). Son of the younger daughter of Lot (Gen. xix. 38).

BENCH'ES. Hatches, or "thy deck" (Ez. xvi. 15 ff).

BEN-DE'KAR (Lance-bearer). Son of Dekar (1 K. iv. 9).

BE'NE-BE'RAK (sons of lightning). City of the tribe of Dan (Josh. xix. 45).

BEN-E-FAC'TOR (a doer of good). Title of honor (Luke xxii. 25).

BENEJĀAKAN. Tribe descended from Jaakan (AKAN), a Horite chief (Gen. xxxvi.), and who owned wells where Israel encamped in the Exode (Num. xxxiii. 31).

BENEKĒDEM (people of the East). Kedem was the name for the whole country E. of Palestine, far or near. They lived (as now) in tents, kept flocks and herds, and were always ready for robbing expeditions.

BEN-GE'BER. Son of Geber (1 K. iv. 13).

BENHĀ'DAD (son of Adad, a god of Syria). 1. King of Syria, who was hired by Asa, king of Judah, to invade Israel (1 K. xv. 18). Supposed to be the same as Hadad, the Edomite, who rebelled against Solomon (1 K. xi.).—2. King of Syria, son of the former, and always at war with Ahab (1 K. xxi. 30). He consulted he prophet Elisha, by means of Hazael, and was smothered by him soon after, B. C. 884 (2 K. viii.).—3. A king of Syria, son of Hazael (2 K. xiii.).

BEN-HA'IL (warrior). A prince Jehoshaphat sent to teach in Judah (2 Chr. xvii. 7).

BEN-HA'NAN (son of one gracious). Son of Shimon (1 Chr. iv. 20).

BEN-HE'SED (son of Hesed), (1 K. iv. 10).

BEN'-HUR (son of Hur), (1 K. iv. 8).

BE-NĪ'NU (our son). A Levite, who sealed the covenant with Nehemiah (Neh. x. 13).

BEN'JAMIN (fortune). Named Benoni by his dying mother. Youngest son of Jacob, second of Rachel, born near Bethlehem; his father's favorite, next to Joseph, and the mark of special honors from him. He had the affection of his brothers, and received their favors as a matter of course, and was not very positive, but a quiet, gentle spirit. He had ten sons and grand-sons at the migration into Egypt (Gen. xlvi.). He made no special history for himself. The tribe was always of least consequence. At the Exodus there were 35,400 of full age, and at the passage over Jordan 45,600. There were 26 cities in their portion (see map). The tribe was almost destroyed for violating the rights of hospitality (Judg. xix. 20), 600 only escaping to the rock Rimmon (see RIMMON and SHILOH). The first deliverer of Israel (from Moab) in the time of the judges, was Ehud, a Benjamite. The first king of Israel was Saul, a Benjamite; and Saul (Paul), the apostle, was also of this tribe.

BEN'JAMIN, GATE OF. In Jerusalem.

BEN'JA-MITE. Decendant of Benjamin (Judg. iii. 15).

BE'NO (his son). A Levite, son of Merari (1 Chr. xxiv. 26, 27).

BENŌ'NI (son of my sorrow). Name given by Rachel to her son (Gen. xxxv. 18).

BEN-ZO'HETH (son of Zoheth). Decendant of Judah (1 Chr. iv. 20).

BE'ON. Place E. of Jordan (Num. xxxii. 3). (Compare verse 38).

BE'OR (torch or lamp). 1. Father of Bela. Edomite king (Gen. xxxvi. 32).—2. Father of Balaam.

BE'RA (son of evil). King of Sodom (Gen. xiv. 2).

BERĀ'CHAH (blessing). 6 miles S. of Bethlehem, 1 mile E. of the Hebron road, now called Bereikut (2 Chr. xx. 26).

BER-A-CHI'AH. A Levite (1 Chr. vi. 39). BERECHIAH.

BETA'NE. BETHANIN of Eusebius, two miles from Terebinth, or Oak of Abraham, and four from Hebron. This has been variously identified with Betharath, Bethainun (Beth-anoth) and Betaneh, or Ectabana, in Syria.

BE'TEN (belly). A city on the border of Asher (Josh. xix. 25), 8 miles E. of Ptolemais.

BĒTH. House of any kind. TENT. HANGINGS. FAMILY. TEMPLE.—ĀB'ARA (house of the ford), where John was baptizing (John i. 28). The oldest MSS. read BETHANY. It was beyond Jordan, and nearly opposite Jericho.—A'NATH. Naph. Fenced city (Josh. xix. 38; Judg. i. 33). Site lost.—A'NOTH. Judah (Josh. v. 59). Beit ainun, near Halhul, and Beit Sur. (Rob.) 3 ms. N. of Hebron.

BETH'ANY (house of dates). One of the most interesting places in Palestine. The residence of Lazarus, who was raised from the dead; the frequent resting-place of Jesus; the home of Mary and Martha, and of Simon, the leper; and from whence the triumphal entry began; and near this place was the scene of the Ascension. On the Mt. of Olives (Mark xi. 1; Luke xix. 29); 15 furlongs off (John xi. 18); on the road to Jericho (Luke xix. 1, 29), and near it was Bethphage. It is now called El Azariyeh, the city of Lazarus. Is in a hollow, surrounded with olives, almonds, pomegranates, oaks, and carobs. The buildings are ruinous and wretched. The house of Lazarus is pointed out as a square tower, very ancient; and his tomb, a cave in the rock, descended by 26 steps.

BETH-AR'ABAH (house of the desert). One of the six cities of Judah in the Arabah—sunk valley of the Jordan (Josh. xv. 6, 61; xviii. 22).

BETH-ĀRAM. Gad, E. of Jordan (Josh. xiii. 27, xxxii. 36). Site located two miles E. of Jordan in W. Seir. Livias. Tell Haran.

BETH-ĀRBEL (Hos. x. 14). Site lost. Supposed to refer to Judg. viii.

BETH-ĀVEN (house of naught). Benj. E. of Bethel (Josh. vii. 2).

BETH-AZ'MAVETH. Benj. (Neh. vii. 28). On the hills S. E. of Jeba.

BETH-BĀAL-MEON. Reuben, on the downs E. of Jordan (Josh. xiii. 17). Baal Meon (Num. xxxiii. 38). The name is still given to a ruin of large size, two miles S. W. of Hesban (Burck.) in W. Zurka Main, where there are remains of a Roman road.

BETH-BĀ'RAH (house of the ford) (Judg. vii. 24). Gideon's victory was near Bethshean, and the fords were probably the outlets of the brooks coming down from the mountains of Ephraim. The place where Jacob crossed on his return from Mesopotamia, and at which Jephtha slew the Ephraimites. Located by Van de Velde on the Jordan, at the ford on the Nablus-Es—Salt road.

BETH-BĪR'EI. Simeon (1 Chr. iv. 31), near Beersheba.

BETH-DA'GON (house of Dagon).—1. In the Shefelah, Judah (Josh. xv. 41). Site supposed to be found at Beit dejan, between Lydda and Jaffa (Rob.).—2. Asher, near the coast (xix. 27).—3. Beit dejan, about 5 ms. S. E. of Nablus, Shechem.

BETH-DIBLA-THĀ'IM (house of the double cake). Moab (Jer. xlviii. 22).

BETH-ĒDEN (house of pleasantness) (Am. i. 5.)

BETH-E'-KED (shearing house).

BETH-EL (house of God). Ten miles north of Jerusalem, to the right of the Shechem road, where Jacob saw the ladder in his dream (Gen. xxviii. 19). The name of the city was originally Luz. Another account is, that Jacob set up a stone to mark the spot where God spake with him (Gen. xxxv. 14, 15; Hosea, xii. 4, 5). In Abram's time it was called Bethel (xii. 8). Jeroboam, the king, set up a golden calf at Bethel (1 K. xiii). Jehu continued the worship of the calf. It was near Bethel that the event of the bears and Elisha and the forty-two children took place. It was a royal residence (Amos vii. 13). There were winter-houses and summer-houses and houses of ivory at B. (iii. 14, 15; 2 K. xxvii. 28). Josiah destroyed it. The worship of God and of idols went on side by side for many years (Amos v. 14, 22). Was a strong place in later times (1 Macc. ix. 50). It is not mentioned in the N. T. Josephus relates its capture by Vespasian (Wars iv. 9, § 9). The ruins cover four or five acres: on a low hill between two valleys, which run into es Suweinit (Rob.).—2. Judah (Josh. xii. 16; 1 Sam. xxx. 27). Chesil, Bethul. HIEL, the BETHELITE, the rebuilder of Jericho (1 K. xvi. 34.)

SECTION OF POOL.

BĒ'THER. Mountains of (Cant. ii. 17). Lost.

BETHES'DA (house of mercy or place of flowing water). A pool at Jerusalem, near the sheep-gate, or "market," with five porches, extensive enough to accommodate a large number of sick and infirm people, who resorted there for relief (John v. 2). Supposed to be the great excavation near St. Stephen's gate, now called Bethesda. The porches and water are gone, and all around it are ruins, but it is very large, cemented as if for holding water, and there might have been buildings on its east and north sides anciently. See JERUSALEM.

BETHĒ'ZEL (fixed). Philistia (Micah i. 11).

BETH'GĀDER (wall). Geder (Josh. xii. 13).

BETH'GA-MUL (house of the weaned, or camel). Moab, in the plains. Um-el Jemail, a few miles south of Busrah, in the Hauran (Rob.).

BETH-HAC'CEREM (house of the vine). New Tekoa (Jer. vi. 1; Neh. iii. 14). See KARIM.

BETH-HAG'GAN (garden-house).

BETH-HĒ'RAN. East of Jordan, at the mouth of Wady Seil Now Tell Haran-Livias. Built by the Gadites (Num. xxxii. 36; Josh. xiii. 27).

BETH-HŌG'LAH (house of partridge). On the border of Judah (Josh. xv. 6) and Benjamin, near Jericho. A great spring and ruin in the Jericho plain is now called Ain Hajla (Rob.).

BETH-HŌ'RON (house of caverns). Two cities, on the Jerusalem-Jaffa upper road, built by Sherah, a woman of Ephraim, on the boundary between Ephraim and Benjamin (Josh. xvi. 3, 5; xviii. 13, 14; xxi. 22). Two of the most memorable victories of the Jews occurred here—Joshua over the five Amorite kings, when the sun and moon stood still at his command (Josh. x.), and that of Judas Maccabæus over the forces of Syria, under Seron (1 Macc. iii. 13-24). The Roman army, under Cestius Gallus, was defeated here in the reign of Nero, with a loss of 5,680 men (Jos. Wars, ii. § 8).

BETH-JESH'IMOTH (house of the wastes). East of Jordan, in the deserts of Moab (Num. xxxiii. 49). Was one of the cities which were "the glory of the country" (Ez. xxv. 9). Beth Jisimuth is now half a mile east of the Jordan, and a mile north of the Dead Sea.

BETH-LEB'ĀOTH (house of lionesses). Simeon (Josh. xix. 6; 1 Chr. iv. 31). BETHBIREI.

INN. CARAVANSERAI.

BETH'LĒHĒM (house of bread). Four and a half miles south of Jerusalem. One of the most ancient cities in Palestine. Called EPHRATH (fruitful) (Gen. xxxv. 16; xlviii 7). The residence of Boaz and Ruth, the birthplace of David, and the residence of Saul. Rehoboam fortified it (2 Chr. xi. 16). The INN OF CHIMHAM was a halting place for those who would "go to enter into Egypt"

(Jer. xli. 17); which was probably the same inn in which Jesus was born (Matt. ii. 1, 5; Luke ii. 4, 5). Called also B. JUDAH and CITY OF DAVID. Justin Martyr (A. D. 150) speaks of our Lord's birth as having taken place "in a certain cave very close to the village" The village is not again mentioned after the birth of Jesus, in the Scripture. The Emperor Hadrian planted a grove of Adonis over the cave, which stood 180 years (A. D. 135-315). The Empress Helena, after clearing away this grove, built a church on the spot, which has been continued, with additions, making it "a half church and half fort," until the present day.

The modern town is built on the low hill behind the convent (or church), facing the east. The hill is an offshoot of the main ridge, and ends in a little valley or narrow plain. The village is walled in, and is triangular. The plain east of the ridge is that on which tradition says the angels appeared to the shepherds, and it is called the Shepherds' Field (Arabic, Beit Sahur—house of Sahur). As the plains were always, anciently, cultivated, it is probable that the shepherds would have been found on the hill, where they now may be found, with their flocks.

A church containing the monuments of the three shepherds is mentioned by an early writer (Arculfus), as standing in the midst of the fields and terraced gardens. Jerome lived here, in a cell which is now pointed out, next to the great church, where he wrote most of his commentaries, and compiled the Latin Vulgate, the best ancient version of the Scriptures, A. D. 385–420. The present town has about 3,000 people, nearly all Christians, who are makers of crucifixes, beads, models of the holy places, and other articles for sale to pilgrims.—2. Zebulon, 7 ms. W. of Nazareth (Josh. xix. 15). Birthplace of Ibzan, the judge (Judg. xii. 8).

BETH'LEHEMITE. One from Bethlehem (1 Sam. xvi. 1, 18; 2 Sam. xxi. 19).

BETH-MĀ'ĀCHAH. See ABEL.

BETH-MĀR'CĀBOTH (house of chariots). HAZAR-SUZIM, MADMANNAH (Josh. xix. 5). Of Simeon in Judah, extreme S. A station on the way to Egypt, where Solomon's chariots were kept (1 K. ix. 19; 2 Chr. viii. 6). Post-station.

BETH-ME'ON. House of Habitation (Jer. xlviii. 23).

BETH-MILLO (wall-house). Near Shechem (Judg. ix. 20, 46–49). Perhaps a part of the fortification of Shechem.—2. A fort or tower on Zion (2 K. xii. 20). MILLO (2 Sam. v. 9).

BETH-NIM'RAH (house of pure water). E. of Jordan, N. of Beth-aram, in the Jordan valley, opposite Jericho; a fenced city (Num. xxxii. 36; Josh. xiii. 27; Is. xv. 6; Jer. xlviii. 34). Eusebius mentions it as a large place. A group of ruins 2 m. E. of the Jordan are now called Nimrim or Wady Shoaib. Supposed to be the Bethabara of John i. 28; Matt. iii. 5; Mark i. 5.

BETH-O'RON. BETH-HORON (Judg. iv. 4).

BETH-PĀ'LET (house of flight). Judah (Josh. xv. 27; Neh. xi. 26). Near Moladah and Beersheba. Lost. PALTITE (2 Sam. xxiii. 26).

BETH-PĀZ'ZEZ. ISSA. (Josh. xix. 21). Lost.

BETH-PE'OR. E. of Jordan, opposite Jericho, 6 m. N. of Libias; a place dedicated to Baal (Josh. xiii. 20). It is supposed that Moses was buried in this ravine (Deut. iii. 29, iv. 46, xxxiv. 6). Beth is used for Baal.

BETH-PHA'GE (house of figs). On the Mt. of Olives near the Jericho road (Matt. xxi. 1; Mark xi. 1; Luke xix. 29). Probably W. of Bethany (Matt. xxi. 19). The locality of the miracle of the withered fig-tree.

BETH-PHĒLET (Neh. xi. 26).

BETH-RĀ'PHA (house of the giant). Judah (1 Chr. iv. 12). Lost.

BETH-RĒ'HOB (house of room). Naph. Near Dan Laish (Judg. xviii. 28). A little kingdom of Aram (2 Sam. x. 6). Now called Hunin, and was one of the strongest forts in the North P., and commanded the plain of Huleh. Its beveled masonry marks its Phœnician origin (Rob. iii. 371).

BETHSĀ'IDA (house of fish). Two places on the Sea of Galilee. 1. B. of Galilee (John xii. 21). The city of Andrew, Peter and Philip (John i. 44). In the land of Gennesaret.—2. B. on the E. of Jordan, raised to importance by Philip the Tetrarch, and named Julias, after the daughter of the emperor (Jos. A. xviii. 2, § 1). The 5,000 were fed nearthis place (Luke ix. 10; John vi. 3—10; Mark vi. 39; Matt. xiv. 19). A blind man was healed here (Mark viii. 22–26). About two miles N. of the lake, and half a mile E. of the Jordan, is a long hill called Tell Julias, now covered with extensiveruins (Rob. ii. 413).

JULIAS.

BETHSĀ'MOS. BETH-AZMAVETH.

BETH-SAN. BETH-SHEAN. (1 Macc. v. 52; xii. 40, 41).

BETH-SHAN. BETH-SHEAN (1 Sam. xxxi. 10, 12).

BETH-SHĒ'AN. BETHSHAN (house of rest). Town of Manasseh in Issachar (1 Chr. vii. 29; Josh. xvii. 11). In the Ghor, 18 ms. S. of the lake of Galilee, 4 ms. W. of the Jordan. Called Scythopolis, from the Scythians, B. C. 631 (2 Macc. xii. 29; Judith iii. 10; Col. iii. 11). The corpses of Saul and his sons were fastened on its walls by the Philistines (1 Sam. xxi. 10, 12). Three or four large brooks run near, and Ain Jalud, one of these, was the fountain which was near Jezreel, referred to in 1 Sam. xxix. 1. The ruins of Beisan now cover about 3 ms. in circuit, among which is a tower of Phœnician origin. The ruins are on several hills, high, steep, between whose black, rocky bases the four brooks run. The highest hill is nearly 200 feet high, and overlooks the Jordan for many miles N. and S. It must have been a city of temples (Rob. iii. 328; 1 Chr. x. 10). Josephus names it as the chief city of the Decapolis (Jos. Wars, iii. 9, 7).

BETH-SHĒ'MESH (house of the sun). Several places of this name. 1. Judah, near Kirjath Jearim (Josh. xv. 10; 1 Sam. v. 13). The ark was sent here by the Philistines from Ekron (1 Sam. vi. 9–12, 18). Now Ain Shems.—2. Issachar (Josh. xix. 22).—3. A fenced city of Naphtali (Josh. xix. 38).—4. An idolatrous temple in Egypt (Jer. xliii. 13). AVEN. ON.

BETH-SHITTAH (house of the acacia). In the N. of Palestine, to which the Midianites fled before Gideon (Judg. vii. 22). In the valley of the Jordan (Rob. ii. 356).

BETH-TAP'PŪAH (house of the citron). Judah, near Hebron (Josh. xv. 53; 1 Chr. ii. 43). Now called Teffuh, and surrounded by olive groves, vines and fig-trees.

BETH'SUA. BETH-ZUR (1 Macc. iv. 29, 61; vi. 7, 26, 31, 49–59; ix. 52).

BETHŪ'EL (1 Chr. iv. 30). BETHUL. Simeon (Josh. xix. 4).

BETHŪLIA. S. of the Plain of Esdrælon, near Dothan, in which the chief events of the book of Judith occurred (Rob. ii. 313). The Frank Mountain was called Bethulia in the middle ages. Safed was also called by the name of the lost city.

BETH-ZACH-ARĪ AS. BATHZACHARIAS.

BETH'ZUR (house of rock). Judah (Josh. xv. 58). Josephus says it was the strongest fortress in Judea. Built by Rehoboam, or fortified by him, and built by the people of Maon (1 Chr. ii. 42, 45). In the days of Jerome this was considered as the place of the baptism of the eunuch by Philip. Robinson finds it in Beit Sur, 4 ms. N. of Hebron, near the Jerusalem road.

BE'TOLI-US (Esd. v. 21). BETHEL 1.

BET-O-MES'-THAM and BETOMASTHEM. Lost.

BETROTHING. See MARRIAGE.

BIRTHDAY. Birthday feasts were common (Job i. 4), and martyrs and heroes were honored on that day. It was the king's day (Matt. xiv. 6), and kept holy, without work.

BIRTHRIGHT. The privilege of the first-born son to a double share of the inheritance (Elisha asked for a double share of Elijah's spirit). Great respect was (and is) paid to him as the expected successor of his father as head of the family. He is supposed to have been a kind of priest of the family, but there is no allusion to this in Scripture. Reuben lost his birthright, which was given to Joseph, whose two sons enjoyed it, one share each. There was a sacredness in the title, as is seen in the "first-begotten," as applied to the Messiah, and to the Jewish people as the chosen of God.

BIR'ZAVITH (olive source). In the line of Asher (1 Chr. vii. 31); probably a place. Lost. MALCHIEL?

BISH'LAM (son of peace). Officer in Persia at the time of the return from captivity (Ezra iv. 7). Belemus in 1 Esd. ii. 16.

BI'SH'OP (overseer). An old title of the Romans adopted in the early church for its officers who were charged with its superintendance. Originally the same as elder. Both deacons and elders were preachers as well as overseers. In Paul's time the two titles had already become descriptive of different duties required of the different officers. The church elected them, and the apostles confirmed them by laying on their hands (sometimes also the hands of the presbytery—ELDERS), (2 Tim. i. 6; 1 Tim. iv. 14). They were to lead blameless lives, be the husband of one wife; have a spiritual care over the flocks (1 Peter v. 2); teach in private and public; visit the sick (James v. 14), receive and entertain strangers (1 Tim. i. 2). Bishops succeeded to the authority of the apostles.

BI-THI'AH (worshiper—daughter of Jehovah). Wife of Mered of Judah, and daughter of a Pharaoh (1 Chr. iv. 18).

BITH'RON (the broken-up place). A district in the Jordan valley, E. of the river (2 Sam. ii. 29). Not determined.

BITHŸN'IA. Province in Asia Minor, on the Black Sea (Acts xvi. 7). Paul was not suffered to visit B., but the gospel was preached there (1 Peter i. 1). The country is mountainous and well watered.

BIT'TER. BITTER HERBS. A bitter day (Am. viii. 10). A bitter and hasty nation (Acts viii. 23). Simon at Samaria being in the gall of bitterness. The passover was eaten with bitter herbs (Ex. xii. 8).

BOTTLES.

BIT'TERN (H. kippod). The Hebrew word is translated both hedgehog and bittern. The Arabic name of hedgehog is kunfod. Is. xxxiv. 7, &c., corrected would read, "The Pelican and hedgehog" instead of "cormorant and bittern." (See Wood's Bible Animals). Others refer to the porcupine as offering all the required points (Im. Bible Dict., p. 227).

BITU'MEN. SLIME.

BIZJŌTH'JAH (contempt of Jehovah). Judah, near Beersheba (Josh. xv. 28). Deir el Belah, on the coast 10 ms. from Gaza? Bewaty, 15 ms. S. of Gaza?

BIZ'THA. The second of the seven eunuchs of king Ahasuerus (Esth. i. 10).

BLAS'PHEMY (speaking evil of God). This crime was punished with death (by stoning) by the Jews, and both Jesus and Stephen were condemned on a charge of breaking the law. The Blasphemy against the Holy Ghost (Matt. xii. 31) has never been determined, unless it was the saying that the miracles of Jesus were the work of Satan.

BLAST'ING A scorching of grain by the E. wind (Deut. xxviii. 22; Gen. xli. 6, ff.).

BLAS'TUS (a bud, sprout). The chamberlain of Herod Agrippa I. An officer of great influence with the people of Tyre and Sidon when they aimed at a reconciliation with the king (Acts xii. 20).

BLEM'ISH. All priests and animals for sacrifice were required to be without blemish or bodily defect (Lev. xxi. 17, 86). Jesus Christ is compared to "a lamb without blemish" (1 Pet. ii. 13).

BLESSING. Favors or benefits specially given by God. Men bless God by thankfully acknowledging his goodness and excellence. The same acts and returns among men have the same name.

BLINDING. PUNISHMENTS.

BLIND'NESS. Is very common in the East from many causes (Matt. ix. 27, ff, xi. 5, xii. 22, xx. 30 ff). "Opening the eyes of the blind" is mentioned as a peculiar attribute of the Messiah (Is. xxix. 18). Blindness was wilfully inflicted as a punishment (Judg. xvi. 21). See cut on p. 16.

BLOOD. Among the Hebrews called the life (Lev. xvii. 11–14). In sacrifices the blood was caught and disposed of in a prescribed manner (Lev. iv.). Murder was held to curse the place where it was done (a superstition still strong in nearly every country (Gen iv. 10).

The Jewish people from the time of Noah were forbidden to eat blood (Gen. ix. 4), when at the same time animal food was permitted, because the blood was specially offered to God in sacrifice (Lev. xvii. 11). Since animal sacrifices have been abolished by the one great sacrifice of Jesus, blood is eaten by Christians. THE AVENGER OF BLOOD is the nearest relative (to the fifth degree) to any person who has been murdered, whose duty it is to avenge the death (Gen. ix. 5). A money payment is often accepted for a life in the East. The 6 Cities of Refuge were appointed as a refuge for any who accidentally killed another [not for murderers, for whom there was no refuge or pardon]. The "blood-revenge" has, more than any other custom or power, prevented the tribes of Arabia from exterminating each other.

BLOT (blame or blameworthiness) (Job xxxi. 7; Prov. ix. 7).

BLUE. COLORS.

BŌANER'GES (sons of thunder—loud voiced?). Names given to the two zealous sons of James and John (Mark. iii. 17).

BOAR. SWINE.

BOAT. SHIP.

BŌ'AZ (agile). Married Ruth as directed by the law (Deut. xxv. 5). He was a pure and high-minded man, fearing the Lord and keeping his obligations among men.

BOC'CAS (1 Esd. viii. 2). BUKKI.

BOCH'ERU (youth or first-born). Son of Azel (1 Chr. viii. 38).

BŌ'CHIM (the weepers). W. of Jordan, N. of Gilgal (Judg. ii. 1, 5).

BŌ'HAN. A stone set up on the border of Benjamin and Judah, between Betharabah and Bethhoglah on the E. and Adummim and Enshemesh on the W. (Josh. xv. 6; xviii. 17).

BOIL. MEDICINE.

BOLLED (formed into seed-vessels). The flax was bolled (Ex. ix. 31).

BOLSTER. BED.

BOND. Bondage. See SLAVERY.

BON'NET. HEAD-DRESS.

BOOK. WRITING.

BOOTHS. Huts made of branches of trees or other very perishable materials.

BOOTY. See SPOIL.

BO'OZ. BOAZ (1 Matt. i. 5; Luke iii. 32).

BO'RITH (2 Esd. 1, 2). BUKKI.

BOR'ROW. LOAN.

BOS'CATH (stony). BOZKATH (2 K. xxii. 1).

BO'SOM. Abraham's bosom. DRESS. Intimacy and Love are expressed by this word when we speak of bosom friends; it was well known to the ancients (Luke xvi. 20).

BŌ'SOR. E. of Jordan, in Gilead (1 Macc. v 26, 36).

BŌSŌ'RA. Gilead. A strong city taken by Judas Maccabæus; probably the same as Bozrah (1 Macc. v. 26, 28).

BOSS. ARMS.

BOTCH. BLAINS. MEDICINE.

BOT'TLE. One Greek and four Hebrew words are translated bottle (chemeth, nebel, bakbuk, nod and askos.) Bottles are of skins, or of earth or glass. Skins of goats and kids are used for the smaller, and of the ox for the larger. These skin bottles are mentioned by Homer, Herodotus and Virgil, and are now used in Spain and all over the Orient. Earthen and glass bottles were also used, and are often mentioned.

BOWELS. In the Bible meaning the seat of the feelings as we now use heart; also mercy and compassion (Gen. xliii. 30).

BOWING. ADORATION.

BOWL. CUPS.

BOX. ALABASTER; VIAL.

BOX-TREE. This elegant shrub, or small tree, is twice named by Isaiah for its beauty (Is. xli. 19, lx. 13; 2 Esd. xiv. 24). It is thought that the word ivory ought to be translated box-wood: in Ezr. xxvii. 6, box is still used for combs, and by the carver and the turner. It is the best material for blocks for the wood-engraver.

BOTTLES.

BŌZEZ (shining.—Teeth of the cliff). The rock on the N. of the pass by which Jonathan entered the Philistine camp (1 Sam xiv. 4, 5). In the Wady Suweinit, near Michmash.

BŎZKATH. Judah, in the Shefelah (Josh. xv. 39; 2 K. xxii. 1). The native place of King Josiah.

BŎZ'RAH (enclosure; sheepfold). Chief city in Edom (Gen. xxxvi. 33). The modern name is Buseireh—little Busreh (Rob., ii. 167). It is still a strong fort on a hill-top among the mts., about 25 ms. S. E. of the Dead Sea, half way to Petra (Is. xxxiv. 6, lxiii. 1; Jer. xlix. 13, 22; Amos i. 12; Micah ii. 12. It is the centre of a pastoral region.—2. In the plain country—the land of Mishor—(Jer. xlviii. 24). E. of the Dead Sea and Lower Jordan are high table-lands, called Belka, where there are three ruins, named Um-el-Jemal (Beth-gamul), Kureiyeh (Kerioth), and Busrah (Bozrah), in the N. E. section, which is a rich district near the Hauran. The walls of Bozrah were 4 ms. in extent, and they did not include the suburbs. Temples, churches, mosques, and a beautiful theatre, are all in ruins; only a strong castle is left entire.

BRĂCELET. Armlet, wristlet. Ornament worn around the arm, above or below the elbow.

BRAMBLES. Thorns.

BRĂNCH. Limb of a tree—figuratively a person related to another, or to a family—as Jesus to the line of David (Is. iv. 2; xi. 1; Jer. xxiii. 5; xxxiii. 15; Zech. iii. 8, vi. 12)—Christians to Christ.

BOZRAH.

BRĂSS. The Hebrews did not mix copper and zinc, as we do, to make brass, but used the copper pure, or mixed tin with it, forming bronze; of which metal are nearly all of the antique coins not gold and silver.

BRA'VERY—In Is. iii. 18—beauty, splendor.

BRAY. To make a noise like an ass (Job vi. 5, etc.) or to break in pieces (Prov. xxviii. 22).

BRA'ZEN SEA. Sea, molten.

BRA'ZEN SERPENT. Serpent. Brazen.

BREACHES (Judg. v. 17), a rent, notch. House, War.

BREAD. (Hebrew lehem, or lechem). First mentioned in Gen. xviii. 6. Bread was a term for the whole meal; as meal (ground grain) is for all that is eaten at any time. The best was made of wheat, ground and sifted, leavened and baked. Poorer kinds were made of barley, rye, beans, and lentiles. The bread was kneaded with the hands or with the feet (as shown on the monuments), in a trough, and if unleavened baked thin and quickly, as now by the Bedawins. There were private and public ovens (Jer. xxxvii. 21; Neh. iii. 11). Hot, smooth stones are used for baking now. The objectionable passage in Ez. iv. 12 is explained when we know that dried dung of all kinds, in the East where there is no wood, is used for burning. Ephraim is a cake not turned (Hosea vii. 8). The baking-pan was used (Lev. ii. 5; 2 Sam. xiii. 9), and the frying-pan.

BRICK-MAKING IN EGYPT.

BREAST-PLATE. See Arms.

BREECHES. Under-drawers (Ex. xxviii. 42).

BRETHREN. Brothers.

BRĪBE. Bribery of magistrates was forbidden (Ex. xxiii. 8; Deut. xvi. 19), and when Samuel's sons took bribes, and perverted justice, the people asked for a king (1 Sam. viii.).

BRICK. Made of clay, clay and sand, mud with straw, burnt in kilns, or dried in the sun. They were sometimes colored or painted in patterns. Houses of sundried bricks had layers of reeds or straw at intervals. David made the prisoners work in brick-kilns (2 Sam. xii. 31). Bitumen, mud, and and a very hard cement, were used to join the bricks.

BRIDE and BRIDEGROOM. Marriage.

BRIDGE. The only mention of a bridge is in 2 Macc. xii. 13. The Romans made the first bridges in Syria and Palestine.

BRIDLE. Bridles were in the lips of captives, as seen in the Assyrian sculptures. The prisoners are all fettered and have in the under lip a ring to which is attached a cord held by the king (Is. xxxvii. 29; 2 K. xix. 28). See page 16

BRI'ER. Thorns.

BRIG'AN-DINE. Arms.

BROID'ERED. "Broidered Hair" (1 Tim. ii. 9).

BROTH or SOUP (Judg. vi. 19, 20; Is. lxv. 4). Food.

BRIM'STONE. Sulphur. Found on the shore of the Dead Sea. See Geology.

BROOK. See River.

BROTH'ER. 1. Kinsman, brother, nephew, cousin.—2. Of the same tribe.—3. Of the same people.—4. An ally in war.—5. Any friend (Job. vi. 15).—6. One in the same office (1 K. ix. 13).—7. Fellow man (Luke xix. 17).—8. One of a similar character (Job xxx. 29).—9. Disciples (Matt. xxv. 40).—10. Of the same faith (Amos i. 9; Acts ix. 30). A term meaning similarity, as "brother of dragons," in Job xxx. 29. See James for brethren of the Lord.

BROWN. Colors.

BRUIT. News or Rumor (Jer. x. 22).

BUBAS'TIS. Pi-beseth.

BUCK'LER. See Arms and Armour.

BUFFET. To smite, to maltreat (Matt. xxvi. 67).

BUILDING. Architecture.

BŪK'KI (mouth of God). Fifth in the line of high priests after Aaron. Son of Abishua (1 Chr. vi. 5). Boccas in Esdras viii. 2.—2. One of Joshua's assistants in the allotment. Of the tribe of Dan (Num. xxxiv. 22).

BUK-KI'AH (hasting from Jehovah). A Levite. Son of Heman. Musician in the temple (1 Chr. xxv. 4, 13).

BUL (rain). Eighth month. Climate.

BULL. Bull'ock. Cattle.

BUL-RUSH. Reed.

BUL'WORKS. Fenced City.

BU'NAH. Son of Jerahmeel, of Pharez and Judah (1 Chr. ii. 25).

BUN'NI (built). A Levite (Neh. ix. 4).—2. A chief (x. 15).—3. Ancestor of Shemaiah (xi. 15).

BUR'IAL. The custom was to bury in tombs or graves, and there were no exceptions, not even criminals (Deut. xxi. 23). The tombs cut in the rocks of Palestine and Egypt have been found to be depositories of much valuable information on the manners and customs of antiquity. Sepulchres for families were cut near the residence, in a garden, or by the road, long before they were expected to be needed. Only kings and prophets were buried in towns (1 K. ii. 10; 2 K. x. 35; 1 Sam. xxv. 1). Rachel's tomb was a monument erected on the spot where she died. It was a misfortune and a dishonor to fail of burial in the family tomb (1 K. xiii. 22); and an honor to a person or family to wish to be buried with them (Ruth i. 17); or to give one a place in a sepulchre (Gen. xxiii. 6; Luke xxiii. 50). It was the custom to wash them with lime ("white"), each year (Matt xxiii. 27). Spices were used to prepare the body for the grave (2 Chr. xvi. 14; John xix. 40), which were omitted as a mark of popular dishonor (2 Chr. xxi. 19). Burning was very rare, and only recorded of Saul and his sons. The next of kin presided over the whole offices, but there were public buriers (Ez. xxxix. 12; Acts v. vi. 10). The body was wrapped in its usual dress, and with bandages. Coffins were rarely used. A stone sarcophagus was used for a great person—king, etc. The dead were carried on a bier, by the relatives or hired persons, or by any who wished to honor the dead or the relatives. The desire was to be buried in the native place, as Jacob and Joseph wished to be carried to Canaan, because of a superstition that only those buried in the Promised Land would rise in the resurrection.

BURN'ING. Burial.

BURN'ING-AGUE (Lev. xxvi. 16). Fever.

BURNT'-OFFERING. Temple.

BUSH. Moses.

BUSH'EL. Measures.

BUT'LER. Cup-bearer.

BUT'TER. The term usually means curdled milk, curds, milk, and cheese. Butter, (churned cream), is made by shaking a skin of cream, or milk, and when formed, melting, and pouring into skin bottles, or earthern jars. It is more like oil than our butter.

BUY'ING. Agriculture.

BUZ.—1. 2d son of Nahor and Milcah (Gen. xxii. 21). Elihu the Buzite (Job xxxii. 2, 6), was of this family (of Aram) which settled in Arabia (Jer. xxv. 23).

BU'ZI. Buzite, father of Ezekiel (Ez. i.).

BUZ'ITE. Descendant of Buzi (Job xxxii. 2, 6).

BY. Sometimes meaning against (1 Cor. iv. 4).

BYB'LUS. Gebal. The Greeks changed the name of Gebal to Byblus, and the Septuagint uses that name in 1 K. v. 18, etc. In mythology this was the birth-place of Adonis, and contained the principal temple and sanctuary of that god. Byblus had a fleet of war vessels in the time of Alexander. For many centuries it was a place of importance, and in Christian times had a bishop.

C

CAB. Weights and Measures.

CAB'BON. Judah, in the Shefelah (Josh. xv. 40).

CĂ'BUL (little). 1. Asher (Josh. xix. 27; Jos. vi. § 43, 45). Modern site, 8 ms. E. of Acre.—2. Region in Galilee given by king Solomon to Hiram, king of Tyre, which "pleased him not" (1 K. ix. 12, 13; Jos. Ant. viii. 5, § 3).

CAD'DIS. Eldest brother of Judas Maccabæus (Macc. ii. 2).

CÆSARE'A. On the shore of the Great Sea, N. W. of Jerusalem 70 ms., and 35 N. of Joppa, on the ancient road from Tyre to Egypt (Jos. Wars, i. 21, § 5). The political capital of Palestine, and a very important city in the time of the apostles (Acts viii. 40; ix. 30; x. 1, 24; xi. 11; xii. 19; xviii. 22; xxi. 8, 16; xxiii. 23, 33; xxv. 1, 4, 6, 13). In Strabo's time there was at this place Strato's Tower, and a landing-place; and Herod the Great, at immense cost, built an artificial breakwater and founded a city, B. C. 22. The sea-wall was built of very large blocks of stone, 50 feet long, and extended into water of 120 feet depth, enclosing several acres, on which a large fleet could safely ride (Jos. Ant. xv. 9). Named, in honor of Augustus, C. Sebaste (Jos. Ant. xvi. 5, § 1). Sometimes called C. Palestina, and C. Stratonis. Called Sebastos on coins. The residence of Philip, one of the 7 deacons of the early church, and the home of the historian Eusebius; the scene of some of Origen's labors and the birthplace of Procopius. Was noted in the time of the Crusades. Is now utterly desolate.

CÆSAREA PALESTINA.

It was at Cæsarea that Origen (A. D. 185–201), a man of great natural ability, collated the text of the Septuagint, Hebrew, and other Greek versions, making a page of six columns, each version in its proper column, thus forming what was called the Hexapla—Six-ply version of the Scriptures, which is the most important contribution to biblical literature in ancient times. Of some books he gave eight versions.

CÆSARĒ'A PHILIP'PI. PANEAS (Pan). At the S. W. foot of Mt. Hermon, on a broad terrace overlooking the Huleh plain; behind the mountain range rises in rugged bold peaks, wooded and capped with snow. Groves of evergreens, oaks and olives, hawthorns, myrtles, oleanders, and beautifully carpeted with grass. One of the chief sources of the Jordan is in a cave near the castle, and pours out an abundance of water, spreading fertility in its course. Named by Philip in honor of Tiberius Cæsar and himself. Agrippa II named it Neronias, after Nero. Titus exhibited gladiators there (Jos. Wars vii. 2, § 1). On the coins it is C. Paneas. Its most ancient name is now only known at the spot. The castle (Subeibeh) is of Phœnician work, and one of the largest in the land. Supposed to be Baal Gad (Josh. xi. 17). The charge to Peter was given here by Jesus (Matt. xvi. 18), and near it was probably the scene of the Transfiguration (xvii. 1, 2).

CĀIĀ'PHAS (rock, or dépression). Joseph Caiaphas, high-priest of the Jews, under Tiberius at the crucifixion—appointed by Valerius Gratus, A. D. 25, holding it till removed by Marcellus, A. D. 37. His long term indicates unusual power and fitness. Son-in-law of Annas. He pronounced judgment that Jesus was guilty of blasphemy (Matt. xxvi. 57–66), and uttered a prophesy of Jesus without being conscious of it.

CAIN (acquisition). The first-born of the Adamic race. Son of Adam and Eve (Gen. iv. 1). Eve said, "I have got a man, by the help of Jehovah." It is supposed that he worked in the field, and that his brother Abel kept the flocks. After the murder of Abel (through envy and jealousy) he went into the land of Nod (wandering land); saw a sign from heaven, and was assured that no attempt would be permitted against his life; he married Save, and built the city of Enoch. Society was thoroughly organized in his time, and we find such names as Zillah (shadow), Naamah (pleasant), and Adah (ornamental); and Jabal living in tents; Jubal making musical instruments; Tubal Cain in the shop of the smith; Lamech composing poetry; while history and genealogy were carefully preserved.—2. CAIN. A place in Judah, in the mts., near Zanoah and Gibeah (Josh. xv. 57).

CĀI'NAN (possessor). Son of Enos. Great-grandson of Adam. Father of Mahalaleel. Died aged 910 (Gen. v. 9; Luke iii. 37).—2. Son of Arphaxad and father of Sala. The name is supposed to have been added to the genealogy for some reason by the scribes or some compiler.

CĀ'LAH (old age). One of the most ancient cities of Assyria, built by Asshur (Gen. x. 11). HALAH (2 K. xvii. 6). Shalmaneser carried Israel captive to this city. The Nimrud ruin, which has yielded vast quantities of Assyrian remains, is believed to be the ancient Calah, once capital of the empire.

CAL'COL (sustenance). Son or descendant of Zerah (1 Chr. ii. 6).

CALD'RON. A pot or kettle (2 Chr. xxxv. 13).

CĀ'LEB (dog). The only one besides Joshua, of all those who left Egypt, who was permitted to enter Canaan. Son of Jephunneh, the Kenezite (Josh. xiv. 14), not a Hebrew, but so adopted, and the city of Hebron was given to him as his portion.—2. Son of Hezron—Pharez—Judah—and father of Hur; his wives were Azubah, Jerioth and Ephrath, Ephah and Maachah.—3. Son of Hur.—4. CALEB EPHRATA. BETHLEHEM.

CALF. Image for worship made at Sinai in imitation of the Apis (Mnevis?) of Egypt, from the jewelry borrowed of the Egyptians (Ex. xxxii. 2). Not solid gold, but of wood, gilded or plated with gold (as the emblem of Osiris—Apis—was made). Moses burnt the image as an allegorical act (Job xv. 16; Hos. viii. 56; x. 6). Another was set up at Bethel, and one at Dan.

CAL'NE (fort of Ann), Calno, Calnah, Canneh, Assyria, on the E. bank of the Tigris, opposite Seleucia (Gen. x. 10), Ctesiphon, 200 ms. below Nineveh, 20 below Bagdad; 6 N. of Babel. Tauk Kesra is its present name, and the ruins are very interesting.

CALIS'THENES. Burnt by the Jews (2 Macc. viii. 33).

CAL'PHI Father of Judas (1 Macc. xi. 70).

CALVARY (a bare skull). GOLGOTHA. Place of the crucifixion of Jesus. Wm. C. Prime this year found a wall in Jerusalem which he thinks is the long-lost second wall of Josephus, running south of the so-called Church of the Holy Sepulchre, and so far proves the claim that the true site of calvary, and the sepulchre are known and in that church (Matt. xxvii. 33; Mark xv. 22; Luke xxiii. 33; John xix. 17).

CAM'EL (Heb. gamal). Mentioned in Gen. xii. 16; Ex. ix. 3, as abundant (2 Chr. xiv. 15). Used as a means of traveling, especially across the desert (1 K. x. 2), both for riding and for burdens; and also used in war. The coarse hair (shed in the spring) was made into tent-cloth, and heavy cloaks for rough weather, and used in the desert or open country (Matt. iii. 4); and the fine hair into the delicate "camel's hair shawls." Its meat was forbidden as food or sacrifice, because it does not divide the hoof. Many trinkets and ornaments are hung on the neck and sides of favorite camels (Judg. viii. 21, 26). Its foot is provided with pads under the two toes which do not easily sink in the sand; its nostrils can be closed against the dust or fine sand, or hot wind; its sharp, long teeth are exactly adapted to cut off the prickly shrubs of the desert; its hump is almost pure fat, which can be absorbed on a long journey, where food is scanty; and its stomach has several extra water-bags, holding many days supply. The desert would be uninhabitable without the camel (and the palm-tree). Camel's milk is a luxury much esteemed in the East. The swiftness of the dromedary (swift-camel) is proverbial, 900 miles in 8 days having been done.

CĀ'MON (full of grain). GILEAD? (Ant. 5, 7, 6). Where Jair was buried (Judg. x. 5). Lost. CYAMON.

CĀM'PHIRE. Camphor (Song of S. i. 14; iv. 13). Hebrew kopher, Greek kupros, Arabic alcana. Lawsonia inermis, a privet, with clusters of delicate little lilac blossoms, and exquisite in perfume. The ladies wear them in their bosoms as a boquet. The dried leaves are mixed with citron juice and used to stain the nails and palms with a yellowish brown (rust-color), very much liked (and is compelled by fashion), in the East. In Persia men also dye the nails. The hair is colored also, by adding indigo, black. Deut. xxi. 12, should read "adorn her nails" instead of "pare her nails."

CĀ'NA (the nest). Galilee (John ii. 1). 7 ms. N. of Nazareth. Scene of the first miracle of Christ, turning water into wine; and another, healing the son of a nobleman (iv. 46–54). The native place of Nathanael, Bartholomew. Now called Kana el Jelil, and in ruins, occupying a beautiful side-hill overlooking the plain of Buttauf. (Robinson ii. 346–9, iii. 108). Howard Crosby, D.D. (Life of Jesus), decides in favor of Kefr Kenna, 4 ms. N. E. of Nazareth. The text is equally explained by either place.

CĀ'NAAN (bowed down). 4th son of Ham (Gen. x. 6), progenitor of the Phœnicians. The word is also translated "traffickers" (Is. xxiii. 8), "merchant" (11), "the land of traffic" (Ezr. xvii. 4), "merchant people" (Zeph. i. 11), and in scorn by Hosea (xii. 7), "he is a merchant; the balances of deceit are in his hand," speaking of degenerate Israel. Ham, the younger son of Noah, behaved with indecent levity towards his father, becoming a shame and reproach to him in his old age, and so Ham was punished in his youngest son, for indecent levity, shameless profligacy, and insufferable abominations, have poisoned the whole line, taking the shape and plea of religion, the most hateful being worshiped as the most holy. Mt. Lebanon is now the harbor of the most revolting types of idolatry, the relics of antiquity.

CĀ'NAAN (lower country). That is, lower than Gilead. The ancient name of the country between the Jordan and the Great Sea, extending from Hamath on the N. to the desert below Beersheba on the S. (Gen. xii. 5; xiii. 12; Zeph. ii. 5; Is. xix. 18; Judg. iii. 1; Ex. xv. 15). In Matt. xv. 22, the name is applied to Philistia and Phœnicia, the low lands.

GROUP OF CAMELS.

CĀ'NĀANITE. Simeon the Zealot (Canaanite—from the Syriac kannean, of which the Greek is zelotes).

CĀ'NĀANITE. Dwellers in the land—lowland—as lower than Gilead. And again, dwellers in the lower lands of the plains by the sea; and in the Jordan valley (Num. xiii. 29; Gen. x. 18–20).—2. Any people in the land not Hebrew (Gen. xii. 6; Num. xxi. 3).

CAN'DĂCE (Greek, kandake). Title of the queens of Meroe, whose capital was Napata. A prime minister from this court was converted by Philip, on his way back from Jerusalem to Ethiopia (Acts viii. 27). Queens of this country were sculptured on the ancient monuments, mentioned by Herodotus (Nitocris, ii. 100), Pliny (vi. 35), Strabo (xvii. 820), Dio Cassius (liv. 5), and Eusebius.

CAN'DLE. Lamp.

CANDLESTICK. Lampstand. The only light of the tabernacle, and afterwards of the temple, was that of the 7 lamps on the golden stand; or ten, according to 1 K. vii. 49, and one in 1 Macc. i. 23; iv. 49; Wars vii. 5. The only ancient figure we have of this is the sculpture on the Arch of Titus at Rome.

CĂNE (reed, grass). A sweet-scented vernal grass, much valued for its perfume (Is. xliii. 24; calamus (reed) in Cant. iv. 14. There is no notice of the sugar-cane.

CANKERWORM. Locust.

CĂ'NON (rule). The authoritative standard of religion and morals, composed only of divinely inspired writings, which have been added from the time of Moses to that of John. In making the selection of the books, the four conditions were kept in view: 1. Divine authority; 2. Entire and incorrupt work as made by the writer; 3. The whole complete as a rule, and guide; and 4. Therefore needing no further addition. The Holy Bible is then the only and supreme standard of religious truth and duty. The evidences are: The decision of the Church in council; the concurrent testimony of ancient Jewish and Christian writers; and the internal evidence of the books themselves. Inquiring, we wish to know—1. Were the books written by their reputed authors? 2. Were the writers believed to be divinely inspired by their cotemporaries? and 3. Have the books been kept as they were written, unchanged? In Exodus and the earlier books of the Old Testament, the term used for the Sacred Writings is The Law, or the Book of the Covenant (Ex. xxiv. 7). After the return from the captivity (about 400 B. C.) they are called recitations, or the words read or recited (Neh. viii. 8). They were also called The Books in Ecclesiasticus. Josephus, Philo, and the writers of the New Testament call them Sacred Writings, Sacred Letters, and Scriptures (Matt. xxi. 42, xxii. 29; John v. 39; Acts viii. 32, 35; Rom. xvi. 26; 2 Pet. i. 20), and Paul, twice, Holy Scriptures (Rom. i. 2; 2 Tim. iii. 15). After the New Testament was written, Jerome (A. D. 400) called them the Sacred Books (following 2 Macc. ii. 13), the name Bible being first applied by Chrysostom A. D. 400, adding the title Divine, or, as we now write it, Holy Bible. The word Bible is Greek, and means book. The sacred book of Mohammed is called Koraon—the book (i. e., the thing to be read). The word Scriptures is Latin, and means writings. The Bible is divided into the Old and New Testaments (2 Cor. iii. 14), and according to the Canon (Kanon, Gr., rule, meaning The Catalogue of the Sacred Books), consisting of 39 books in the Old and 27 in the New Testament. The Roman church adds 10 other books (or parts). The Old Testament collection was completed by Ezra, having been begun by the ancient patriarchs, continued by Moses (Deut. xxxi. 9), by Joshua (xxiv. 26), by Samuel (1 Sam. x. 25), by David, Solomon, and others; and his arrangement has been preserved up to the present time. It was divided into three classes of writings: the Law (Thorah), the Prophets (Nebiim), and the Psalms (Chethubim), (Luke xxiv. 4). Josephus names the same divisions (c. Apion i. 8). The first canon on record is that of Laodicea in Phrygia, A. D. 365, which fixed the names and order and number of the books very much as we find them now. The Council of Hippo in 393, of Carthage in 419, in which Augustine (Bishop of Hippo), had great influence, held (A. D. 397) that the entire canon of Scripture is comprised in these books—Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers, Deuteronomy, Joshua, Judges, 1 small book of Ruth, * * the 4 books of the Kingdoms, and 2 of the Remains. These are the historical books: Job, Tobit, Esther, Judith, 2 books of Maccabees, and 2 books of Ezra. Next are the prophets; 1 book of the Psalms of David, 3 of Solomon—viz., Proverbs, Canticles, and Ecclesiastes. The 2 books Wisdom and Ecclesiasticus are called Solomon's only because they resemble his writings, and they were written by Jesus, the son of Sirach, which are to be reckoned among the prophetical books. The rest are the prophets, 12 of them being reckoned together as one book; and after these the four prophets of large volumes—Isaiah, Jeremiah, Daniel and Ezekiel. The New Testament was the same as now received.

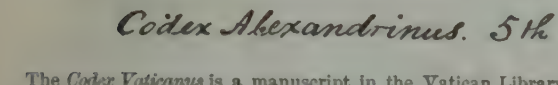
APOCRYPAL BOOKS OF THE NEW TESTAMENT AGE.

Eusebius, in his list of the sacred books, makes a distinction against certain ones which were doubtful or heretical, and which were: 1. The doubtful—Acts of St. Paul, Shepherd of Hermas, Apocalypse of Peter, Epistle of Barnabas, Doctrine of the Apostles, Gospel to the Hebrews. 2. The heretical—Gospels of Peter, Thomas, Matthias, and others; the acts of Andrew, John, Epistle of Clement, and others. The oldest version in any language of which there is a record, is the Septuagint, written in Greek, at Alexandria, Egypt, B. C.

286–280. The oldest known copy of this version is written on thin vellum, contains the whole Bible, and is dated in the 5th century: now in the British Museum, and is called the Codex Alexandrinus.

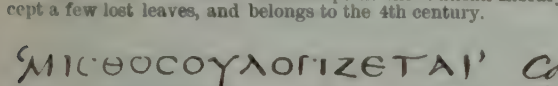
Codex Alexandrinus. 5th century. (Ps. iii. 2).

The Codex Vaticanus is a manuscript in the Vatican Library, Rome; contains the whole Bible, except a few lost leaves, and belongs to the 4th century.



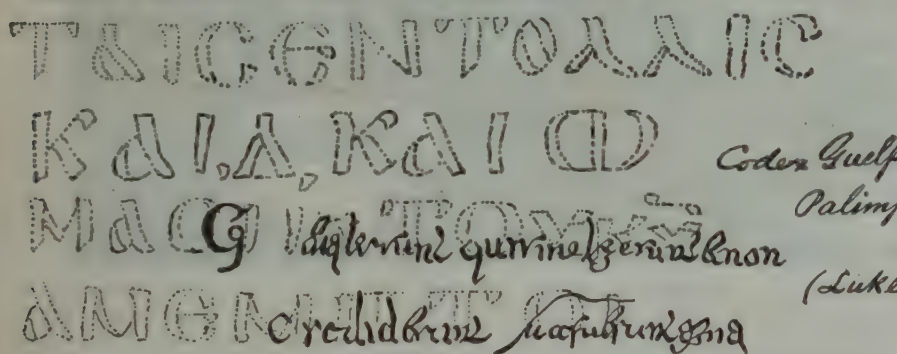
Codex Vaticanus. 4th C. (Rom. iv. 4).

The Codex Sinaiticus was found in the Convent on Mount Sinai. It belongs to the 6th century, but is a copy of one of an earlier date. Besides the O. and N. T., it has the Gospel and Epistles of Barnabas and the Epistle of Hermas.



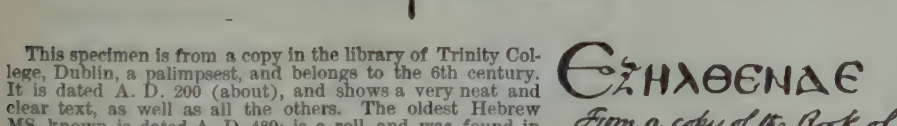
C. Sinaiticus. 6th C. (1 Tim. iii. 16).

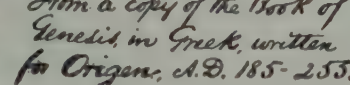
Fragments of the Gospel are contained in a palimpsest MS. in a library at Wolfenbuttel, Germany, where the ancient Greek letters have been scraped off, and a modern text written over them.



Codex Guelph. Palimpsest (Luke i. 6)

This specimen is from a copy in the library of Trinity College, Dublin, a palimpsest, and belongs to the 6th century. It is dated A. D. 200 (about), and shows a very neat and clear text, as well as all the others. The oldest Hebrew MS. known is dated A. D. 489; is a roll, and was found in the Karaite Synagogue in the Crimea. The specimen given here is from a Pentateuch written on a roll of leather, preserved in Odessa, originally brought from Derbend, in Daghestan. It was "corrected" in 580, and therefore probably written some time before.





From a copy of the Book of Genesis, in Greek, written by Origen. A.D. 185–255.

Ancient Hebrew MS. A.D. 580. (Mal. iv. 6.)

As a specimen of the ancient Hebrew letter used about the time that Paul was a pupil of Gamaliel, here is a copy from a gravestone in the Crimea, of the year A. D. 6. This style of letter is like that on the coins of the Maccabees, B. C. 139, and other coins down to A. D. 130, given in the chapter on Coins. We have records of Origen's work, in which he placed side-by-side six different versions of each book of the Bible, thus forming the most valuable contribution to the critical study of the Scriptures known to scholars; but no specimen of his MS. is extant. The oldest known MSS. in our own, or the Anglo-Saxon language, is the Durham Bible, dated A. D. 688. The oldest printed Hebrew Bible (Old Testament) was issued at Soncino, Italy, A. D. 1487, in folio. The Complutensian Polyglott was published at the expense of Cardinal Ximenes in 1514–1522, in 6 vols. folio, and sold at 6½ ducats. The Hebrew Vulgate, and Greek texts of the O. T. (with a Latin translation of the Greek), were printed in three parallel columns; the Targum of Onkelos, with a Latin translation in two columns below. The oldest known version in the Latin language is the Vulgate (current text), which was the work of Jerome, A. D. 385–420, while he lived at Bethlehem. Tertullian (160–245) mentions a Latin version, but there is nothing known of any belonging to his age. The first book printed was the Bible, in Latin; and the splendid pages of the Mazarin Vulgate, printed by Gutenburg and Fust in 1455, at Mainz, are not surpassed at this day as specimens of typography.

(On a gravestone at Simpheropol, Crimea.) "This is the grave Buki, son of Isaac, the priest; may his rest be in Paradise! [Died] at the time of the deliverance of Israel, in the year 702 of our captivity," (i. e. A. D. 6).

CANOPY. Curtain over a bed (Judith x. 21). HIS. OF BOOKS.

CANTICLES. Song of Solomon.

CĀ-PER'NA-UM (village of Nahum). On the N. W. shore of the Lake of Galilee. The scene of many of the works of Christ. Not mentioned in the O. T. or the Apocrypha. Site now located at Tell Hum, where there are ruins of a magnificent synagogue, with beautiful specimens of columns, some of which are double; cornices and massive walls; and a great extent of ruins, half a mile long by a quarter wide. The home of Jesus after leaving Nazareth on being rejected (Mark ii. 1). Here Matthew was chosen (ix. 10). Simon, Peter and Andrew belonged here (i. 29). (For the miracles wrought here, see LIFE OF CHRIST). The son of the nobleman was healed here by words spoken at Cana. The woes denounced against this city and others near it have been so literally fulfilled that even their sites cannot be determined (Stanly, S. & P., ch. x.; Rob. ii. 403–4, iii. 344–358). Mentioned by Josephus (Wars, iii. 10 § 8). Wilson, Lands of the Bible (ii. 139, 149). The Palestine Exploration has this last year added new facts to the evidence in favor of Tell Hum being the true site. (The Recovery of Jerusalem, p. 265, &c.)

CĀ'PHAR. A village (1 Chr. xxvii. 25).

CĀ'PHAR-SAL-AMA. A place where a battle was fought between Judas and Nicanor (1 Macc. vii. 31).

CĀPHEN'ATHA. A place on the E. of Jerusalem (1 Macc. xii. 37).

CĀPH'TOR. CRETE. CAPHTORIM. Mentioned three times as the origin of the Philistines (Deut. ii. 23; Jer. xlvii. 4; Amos ix. 7). By some supposed to be an ancient name of a part of Egypt. KEBT-HOR in hieroglyphics.

CAPPADO'CIA. Asia Minor (Acts ii. 9; 1 Peter i. 1; Jos. Ant. xii. 3, § 4). The road from Palestine passed through the famous Cilician Gates, which led through Mt. Taurus. It is an elevated table-land divided by chains of mountains, well watered but scantily wooded. Mazaca, afterward called Cæsarea, was the Roman capital, and at the base of Mt. Argæus, the highest in Asia Minor. The people were mixed, Scythian and Persian.

CAP'TAIN. Some times a civil and at others a military chief is meant. The Lord is called the captain of his people's salvation (Heb. ii. 10).

CAPTIVITY. The Hebrews reckon four captivities: Babylonian, Median, Grecian and Roman. The expatriation of the people belongs to two periods only—the first and second captivity. In the first—the Babylonish—the best of the nation were carried to Assyria. They were not slaves, but were free under their own civil laws (they would not obey the divine law of ceremonies away from the temple, and it is thought that the custom of building synagogues in every city arose during the captivity), and were ruled by their own elders (Ez. xiv. 1; xx. 1), and held slaves themselves (Tobit viii. 18); while some filled high offices at the court, as Mordecai and Daniel. This event occupied, from beginning to end, 150 years, ending B. C. 588. Judah was carried away captive by Nebuchadnezzar about a hundred years after the first deportation of Israel (Jer. lii). The decree of Cyrus granting the return of the Jews, was dated B. C. 536. A part of the people, under Zerubbabel, returned B. C. 535; and more under Ezra B. C. 458; and of others, under Nehemiah, B. C. 445. The return thus extending over a period of 145 years. (See Nehemiah, Ezra, Haggai and Zechariah). The number of those who remained in Assyria was about six times those who returned to Jerusalem, and they were known in the time of Christ as the DISPERSED (John vii. 35; James i. 1). Besides those who remained in Assyria, there were many Jews who fled into Egypt (Zech. x. 6–10), and into Arabia, settling in Yemen (Sheba). After this time the TEN TRIBES were lost to history. It is supposed that they intermarried with each other and with the people among whom they lived, and so became lost as distinct tribes, or even as a people. During and after the captivity the Jews laid aside their prejudices, forgot their peculiar tribal pride, and became one nation (Is. xi. 13; Ez. xxxvii. 22); and since that time no one of them is able to trace his lineage to any particular tribe, but may reasonably claim to have the blood of the whole twelve mingled in his veins. So Paul seems to have felt (Acts xxvi. 7) when pleading before Agrippa.

CARBUNCLE (Is. liv. 12). PRECIOUS STONES.

CARCAS. One of the seven princes of Ahasuerus (Esth. i. 10).

CARCHE'MISH (fort of Chemosh). Assyria (Is. x. 9). By Euphrates (Jer. xlvi. 2; 2 Chr. xxv. 20). Assyrian inscriptions discovered in modern times show it to have been a chief city of the Hittites, from B. C. 1100 to B. C. 850, who were masters of Syria. Taken by Pharaoh Necho, B. C. 608, and 3 yrs. after by Nebuchadnezzar

CAPERNAUM.

CA'RIA. S. W. in Asia Minor.

CARMA'NIANS. People of Carmania, north of the Persian Gulf (2 Esd. xv. 30).

CARE'AH. Father of Johanan (2 K. xxv. 23).

CAR'MEL (park—fruitful field). A mountain range branching off to the north-west from the mountains of Samaria, 15 miles long, 2 to 4 wide, and 600 to 1800 feet high, ending in a steep cape far out into the Great Sea, dividing the plain of Acre from Sharon (Josh. xii. 22, xix. 26; Jer. xlvi. 18). The plain of Esdrælon lies east, and the river Kishon washes its north side. No part of Palestine equals it in picturesque beauty and variety of scenery, the luxuriance of its herbage, and the brilliance and variety and abundance of its flowers (Is. xxxv. 2; Cant. vii. 5). There are many deep ravines, which abound in partridges, quails, woodcock, hares, jackals, wolves, hyenas, and wild-boars; and it is said, anciently also lions and bears. There are many caves in the vicinity of the convent, which were once occupied by hermits; and one of these is said to be the one referred to in 1 K. xviii. 4; and also see Amos ix. 3. The chief incident in its history is Elijah's sacrifice, the site of which is now located at el Mukrakah (the burning—the sacrifice), on a rock terrace, Tell el Kusis (hill of the priests), at the east end; from which was seen the whole of the plain of Esdrælon, the river Kishon, Gilboah with Jezreel at its base, Jezebel's temple and Ahab's palace in full view, the sea being hid by the hill to the west, up which the servant could climb in a few minutes and see the sea in its entire expanse (1 K. xviii. 30; 2 K. iv. 23). Pythagoras visited it, and Vespasian, the emperor, came to consult the oracle of Carmel. Elijah was sitting on the mountain when the "fifties" were sent by Ahaziah to take him prisoner for stopping his messengers to Baal at Ekron, and two bands were consumed by fire from heaven (2 K. i. 9–15). After the ascent of Elijah, Elisha went to reside on Carmel for a time (2 K. ii. 25), and was here when the woman from Shunem found him, and told him of her son's death (iv. 25). Called now Jebel Mar Elias. The convent was built A. D. 1830, over ancient ruins, and is famous for having been founded by St. Louis of France, and its name given to the Barefoot Carmelite Friars.—2. Judah, 6 miles southeast of Hebron. City of Nabal (1 Sam. xxv. 2), and of Abigail, David's favorite wife (xxvii. 3), where Saul set up a "place" after his victory over Amalek (xxv. 12), and Uzziah had vineyards (2 Chr. xxvi. 10). It is mentioned by Jerome and Eusebius as having a Roman garrison; and in the history of the Crusades, A. D. 1172. The heaps of ruins now called Kurmul, lie around the sloping sides of an oval valley, the head of which is shut in by rocky ridges. The castle (Kusr el Birkeh) had walls 10 feet thick of beveled stones, 60 feet long, 40 wide, and 30 high. Near it was a round tower, and there are the remains of several churches, one of which was 150 by 50 feet. There is a fine reservoir of sweet water supplied from springs near (Van de Velde).

CAR'MELITE. Of Carmel in the mountains of Judah (1 Chr. xi. 37).

CARMELITESS. Woman of Carmel in Judah (1 Sam. xxvii. 3).

CÂRMI, (a vine-dresser).—1. Father of Achan (Josh. xii. 1, 18).—2. 4th son of Reuben (Gen. xlvi. 9).

CAR'MITES. Of Reuben (Num. xxvi. 6).

CÂRNAÏM. In the land of Galaad, Gilead. Ashteroth Karnaim.

CARPENTER. Since wood was always too scarce and precious in Palestine for any use besides for doors, windows, etc., and for decorations, the carpenter was probably a carver of such finishing as is now seen in the best rooms of the East.

CÂR'PUS. A disciple at Troas with whom Paul left his cloak (2 Tim. iv. 13), books and parchments. He is mentioned as bishop of Berytus in Thrace by Hippolytus.

CÂRRIAGE. This word means baggage in the A. V.

CAR'SHENA. One of the seven princes (Esth. i. 14).

CART. Wagon. Were open or covered (Num. vii. 3), and used to carry persons and burdens (Gen. xlv. 19; 1 Sam. vi. 7), or produce (Amos ii. 13). There were no roads, and the only ones now in use have been lately made, from Joppa to Jerusalem, and from Beirut to Damascus.

CAR'VING. Carving and engraving have always been much used for the decoration of houses, furniture, arms, jewelry, etc. The occupation of Joseph was that of a carver and not a carpenter, as wood has always been too scarce and expensive to use in the framework of houses.

CASIPH'IA. Place between Babylon and Jerusalem (Ezr. viii. 17).

CAS'LEU (1 Macc. i. 54).

CAS'LU-HIM. Mizraite people (Gen. x. 14). In Upper Egypt. Bochart thinks they were the Colchians of the Greeks.

CAS'PHON (1 Macc. v. 36).

CAS'PHOR. Fortified city in the land of Galaad (1 Macc. v. 26). The Jews took refuge there from the Ammonites.

CAS'PIS. A strong, fortified city. Was taken by Judas Maccabæus (2 Macc. xii. 13, 16).

CAS'SIA. One of the principal spices in the composition of the "oil of holy ointment" (Ezr. xxx. 24); a choice perfume. Also, an article among the precious merchandise of Tyre (Ezr. xxxvii. 19).

CAS'TOR and POL'LUX (sons of Jupiter), (Acts xxviii. 11). Name of the vessel in which Paul sailed from Malta to Rome; derived from the name of the two stars called "the Twins;" the fabled sons of Jupiter and Leda.

CATS (Bar. vi. 22). The cat was a favorite of the Egyptians, and is found embalmed among their mummies.

LOCUST.

CAT'-ER-PIL-LAR. See LOCUST.

CATHUA. GIDDEL (1 Esd. v. 30).

CAUL. A head-dress, made in checker-work; long, like a scarf; worn by women for ornament.

CAUSE-WAY. Raised path (1 Chr. xxvi. 16, 18.)

CAVE. Mentioned in the early history as often useful to men. There are a great number in the limestone region of Palestine and Syria, many of which have been cut out larger for shelter or defence. Several Hebrew words are used to denote caves, holes and fissures, and many places were named from noted caves, and some people, as the Horites (caveites), were so named from their dwellings. The great cave near Aleppo will hold 3000 horse-soldiers. Maundrell described a large system of caves, containing 200 rooms, near Sidon. Lot is the first who is recorded as living in a cave. The cave of Machpelah is the first mentioned as a burial-place. Other noted caves were Makkedah (five kings taken in by Joshua); Adullam (where David cut Saul's skirt off); and in Josephus, the famous robber-caves of Arbela, near Gennesaret.

CART.

CEDAR (Heb. Erez; Ar. arz, the larch). There are eleven groves of cedars on the Lebanon mountains, which have been visited by travelers recently. One, near the highest peak, 6000 feet above the sea, N. E. of Beirut, and long famous for its 400 ancient trees of immense size, standing near the summits, which are covered with perpetual snow; the second, near Deir El Kamr. The six largest of this northern group measured, in 1868, 48, 40, 38, 33½, 30, 29¾ feet; and a third, near Ain Zehalteh, on the Beirut-Damascus stage road, lately found. Dr. Robert Morris recently brought several camel loads of cones from these trees for distribution among Sunday-School scholars. The references to cedar-wood in the Scripture do not always mean the cedar of Lebanon—as, for instance, when at Sinai (Lev. xli. 6). The word EREZ means also pine, cyprus, fir and juniper. Rev. Henry H. Jessup, an American missionary in Syria, thinks the whole range of Lebanon, from 3000 to 7000 feet altitude, was at one time covered with cedar groves.

CE'DRON. Near Jamnia and Azotus; fortified by Antiochus Sidetes.—2. Kidron, the torrent E. of Jerusalem, which see.

CEI'LAN (1 Esd. v. 15). AZETAS.

CEILING. The ceilings of the principal apartments in Eastern houses are the parts on which the chief care is expended in adorning. The Jews bestowed much care on these parts in their houses (Jer. xxii. 14; Hag. i. 4).

CEN'CHRÆ. Harbor of Corinth, on the Saronic Gulf, east, whence Paul sailed for Ephesus (Acts xviii. 18). There was a church here, of which PHŒBE was a member (Rom. xvi. 1), and Lucius its first bishop, appointed by Paul. There was a temple at the end of each mole, and a statue of Neptune on a rock between, as may be seen on an ancient coin of Corinth.

CENDEBE'US, correctly CENDEBÆ'US. One of Antiochus' generals in Palestine (1 Macc. xv. 38, ff).

CENSER. A small portable vessel of metal, fitted to contain burning coals (2 Chr. xxvi. 18; Luke i. 9).

CENSUS. See POPULATION.

CENTU'RION. Captain of 100. CENTURY. A Roman military officer. Cornelius, a centurion, was one of the first disciples. Several others are mentioned.

CE'RAS (1 Esd. v. 29). KEROS.

CE'TAB (1 Esd. v. 30).

CHA'BRIS. Son of Gothoniel (Judith vi. 15; viii. 10; x. 6).

CHA'DIAS (1 Esd. v. 20). AMMIDOI.

CHAFF (Is. v. 24; xxxiii. 11). The carrying away of chaff by the wind in Scripture is used as a symbol of the destruction of the wicked (Is. xvii. 13).

CHAIN. Chains were in use by the ancients; they were made of precious metal for ornaments, and were worn alike by men and women—of iron for other purposes. The gold chain given to Joseph (Gen. xli. 42), and the one promised to Daniel (Dan. v. 7), were the first mentioned.

CHAL'CE-DO-NY. PRECIOUS STONES.

CHAL'COL (1 K. iv. 31).

CHALK (Is. xxvii. 9). Limestone.

CHAL'DÆA, CHALDEA, CASDIM (Khaldi in Armenian, the moon). Babylonia—the whole, or sometimes the southern part (Dan. v. 30, ix. 1; Gen. xi. 28). Haran died in Ur of Casdim (Ezek. i. 3). The whole of Mesopotamia occupied by Chaldeans. The Chaldeans were one out of many Cushite tribes peopling Babylonia. Hence came Sabæans to afflict Job (i. 15–17). Recently discovered inscriptions on ancient works show that there were two languages in use: one a Semitic, for civil purposes, and another a Cushite, for learned and religious purposes (Dan. i. 4; v. 11). The Chaldeans were priests, magicians or astronomers—the depositaries of learning and science. The plains were formerly irrigated by canals led from the river, spread over the country like a network. Groves of palm-trees, pleasant gardens, fields of grain and vineyards, proved the richness of the soil, and supported a dense population. It is now a waste of drifting dust and sand, with heaps of bricks and rubbish (Is. xiv. 23; Jer. l. 38). The chief cities were Accad, Babel, Borsippa, Calneh, Cutha, Erech, Sippara and Teredon. Herodotus mentions a vast number of cities, and the mounds over all the country prove his statements true.

CHAMBERS OF IMAGERY. Used by Ezekiel (viii. 12) in denouncing the idolatrous corruptions of the kingdom of Judah, or that part which imitated the Egyptians in painting on the walls of a chamber pictures of idols, &c., for worship. (See Wilkinson's Manners and Customs of the Ancient Egyptians). Every man has a chamber in his own mind filled with his idols—his dearest objects of regard.

CHAM'BER-ING (Rom. xiii. 13).

CHAM'BER-LAIN. Erastus, "the chamberlain." An officer who had charge of a king's lodgings and wardrobe (2 K. xxiii. 11).

CHAME'LEON (Heb. KO-ACH, strength). There are two lizards, each of which have been proposed as the animal meant. Lizards are very plentiful in Palestine and Egypt. 1. The chameleon is noted for its strong grasp, by which it sustains its position for a long time on twigs and branches. The normal color is black or slaty, but can be changed in an instant to many other tones, as green, yellow, spotted, which changes seem to be independent of the will of the animal.—2. The Nile Monitor is sometimes called the land crocodile, being about 6 feet in length. It eats the eggs and young of the crocodile.

CHAM'OIS. A specie of wild goat found in Arabia (Deut. xiv. 5).

CHAM-PAIGN (a plain) (Deut. xi. 30).

CHA'NAAN (Judg. v. 39, 10).

CHA'NAANITE (Judg. v. 16).

CHAN'CEL-LOR (Ezr. iv. 8, 9, 17).

CHAN'GERS (Judg. ii. 15). MONEY CHANGERS.

CHANGERS OF MONEY. A class who made a business, in accommodating the temple worshipers at the annual feasts of the Jews, by exchanging the money of those who came from foreign countries for the half-shekel which was the lawful tribute to the treasury. They probably crept gradually nearer the temple until they occupied the corners and passages of the sacred courts. From these Jesus drove them, because no trading was lawful there, and certainly not dishonest, sharp practices, which had made God's house a "den of thieves."

GOAT OF AOUDAD.

CHAN-NU-NE'US. MERARI (1 Esd. viii. 48).

CHA'NOCH. ENOCH (Gen. iv. 17).

CHAP'EL (a holy place, sanctuary). Idol's temple (1 Macc. i. 47). Bethel was crowded with altars (Amos iii. 14).

CHAP'ITER. The upper part of a pillar (Ex. xxxviii. 17).

CHAP'MEN. Traders (2 Chr. ix. 14). Footpeddlers,

CHARAATH'ALAR (1 Esd. v. 36).

CHAR'A-CA. A place E. of Jordan (2 Macc. xii. 17). Lost.

CHAR'A-SHIM, THE VALLEY OF. A place settled by Joab 2 (1 Chr. iv. 14), and reinhabited by Benjamites after the captivity (Neh. xi. 35).

CHAR'CHĀMIS (1 Esd. i. 25). CARCHEMISH.

CHAR'CHĒMIS (2 Chr. xxxv. 20).

CHAR'CUS (1 Esd. v. 32). BARKOS.

CHA'RE-A. HARSHA (1 Esd. v. 32).

CHAR'GER. (Heb. AGARTAL). Basin in Ezra i. 9, that is, a tank for catching the blood from the victims on the altar.—2. KEARAH, deep dishes (Num. vii. 13).—3. PINAX, a tray, or server, of wood inlaid, or of metal (such as is now used for the common table), (Matt. xiv. 8).

CHARIOT. Heb. merkabah, and rekeb, and agaloth for war-chariots, or wagons or carts. The Egyptian monuments present paintings of several kinds of chariots, all of two wheels only, differing chiefly in the ornaments. The king's was different only in being more richly ornamented, and as having the king alone—as a sign that to him belonged the entire glory of the victory. In the Assyrian sculptures are some 4-wheeled carriages. Three persons usually ride in them—the king, his umbrella-bearer, and the charioteer. The Persian chariots were heavier than those of Egypt or Assyria.

CHARITY. Greek agape, which is properly love (1 Cor. viii. 1, 13; Luke xi. 42; Rom. v. 5, 8.) AGAPE.

CHAR'MIS. Son of Melchiel; one of the three rulers of Bethulia (Judg. vi. 15).

CHAR'RAN. HARAN (Acts vii. 2, 4).

CHASTE-BA (1 Esd. v. 31).

CHA'VAH (Gen. iii. 20). Eve.

CHE'BAR (great river). Chaldea (Ez. i. 3). Some of the Jews were located here during the captivity (Ez. i. 1, 3, iii. 15; 2 K. xxiv. 15). HABOR. This was the largest artificial canal of Babylonia, and was cut by the Jewish captives.

CHE'DORLĀ'OMER (Gen. 14). King of Elam, perhaps a part of Persia and Media. His marauding excursion, aided by four other kings, was brought to an abrupt and disastrous end by Abraham.

CHEESE. There is no Hebrew word for cheese. The three words translated cheese are: 1. gebinah, curdled milk (Job x. 10); 2. churitse hechalab, slices of curds (1 Sam. xvii. 18); 3. shephoth bakar, curd rubbed fine—of kine (2 Sam. xvii. 29). Cheese now in use in the East is in small round cakes (4 inches), white, very salt, and hard. The Bedawins coagulate buttermilk, dry it, and grind to powder.

CHARIOT.

CHEL'LAI. Son of Pahath-moab (Ezr. x. 30).

CHELCI'AS. 1. Of Baruch (Bar. i. 1).—2. High-priest (Bar. i. 7)—3. Father of Susanna (Sus. ii. 29, 63).

CHEL'LIANS (Judg. ii. 23). CHELLUS.

CHEL'LUH (strong). Son of Bani (Ezr. x. 35).

CHEL'LUS. Place west of Jordan (Jud. i. 9).

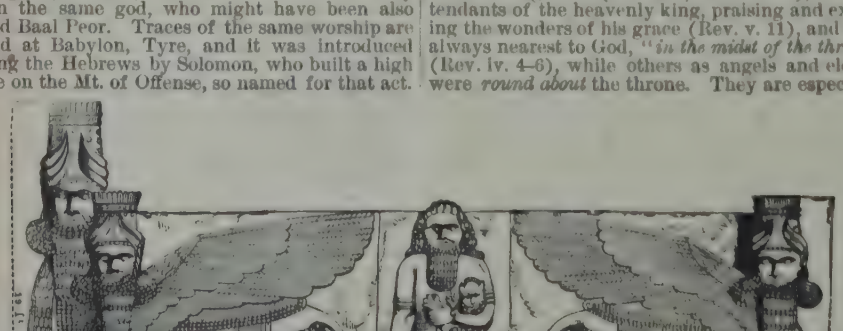
CHE'LOD (corrupted text in Jud. i. 6).

CHE'LUB (basket). 1. Father of Mehir, of Judah (1 Chr. iv. 11).—2. Father of Ezri, David's officer (xxvii. 26).

CHE-LU'BAI. Caleb, son of Hezron (1 Chr. ii. 9).

CHEM'ARIM (idol-priests). An ascetic; one who goes about dressed in black (Zeph. i. 4). Idolatrous priests in 2 K. xxiii. 5. Priests of false worship (Hos. x. 5).

CHĒ'MOSH (subduer). The national god of the Moabites (1 K. xi. 7; Jer. xlviii. 7), who were called the people of Chemosh (Num. xxi. 29). Also of the Ammonites, though Moloch was afterwards their god (Jer. xlix). Moloch and Chemosh may mean the same god, who might have been also called Baal Peor. Traces of the same worship are found at Babylon, Tyre, and it was introduced among the Hebrews by Solomon, who built a high place on the Mt. of Offense, so named for that act.



ENTRANCE OF PALACE AT KONYUNJIK.

The Arabs worshiped a black stone as his emblem—as a black stone in the Kaaba at Mecca is an emblem now worshiped by all Mohammedans. This idol represented some of the planets: perhaps Saturn.

CHE'NA-AN (Gen. ix. 18). CANAAN.

CHE-NA'ANAH. Son of Bilhan, a Benjamite (1 Chr. vii. 10).—2. Father of Zedekiah (1 K. xxii. 11, 24).

CHENA'NI. A Levite (Neh. ix. 4).

CHENANI'AH. Chief of the Levites (1 Chr. xv. 22, 27).

CHE'PHAR-HAAMMO'NAI (village of the Ammonites); a city of Benjamin (Josh. xviii. 24).

CHEPH'IRAH (the village). Benjamin (Josh. ix. 17). East of Yalo, two miles. Kefir (Rob., iii. 146). The Gibeonites of this place (and also Kirjath Jearim and Beeroth) played the trick on Joshua mentioned in Josh. ix. 3, which led him to make a treaty with them.

CHE'RAN. Son of Dishon (Gen. xxxvi. 26).

CHE'REAS. Brothers of Timotheus; Governor of Gazara where he was slain by the Jews (2 Macc. x. 32, 37).

CHER'ETHIM. Cher'ethims; pl. of Cherethites (Ez. xxv. 16).

CHERĒTHĪ'TES and PELETHITES. Body-guard of David. No other king had one, that is recorded, but they had runners. Their captain was Benaiah the son of Jehoiadah (2 Sam. viii. 18). Under Solomon, Benaiah was made general instead of Joab. The names are of Philistine origin, and the men may have been partly of Philistine and partly of Hebrew (refugee) origin, attached to David in his adversity, and rewarded by him in his prosperity.

CHE'RITH. The brook Cherith, in a valley now called Kelt, running by Jericho to the Jordan (1 K. xvii. 3, 5; Jos. Ant. viii. 13, § 2). Some have supposed that it must be looked for on the east of Jordan.

CHER'UB (mystic figure on the ark). Cherubim, plural. A keeper, warder or guard of the Deity. Josephus said no one in his day could even conjecture the shape of the cherubim that Solomon made for the Holy of Holies (Ant. viii. 3, 3). They were of wood, gilded, and 15 feet high (1 K. vi. 23). Ezekiel describes them as having each four faces and four wings; but he gives only two faces (or it may be but one) to those in the temple on the walls. The cherubim of Rev. iv. 7, 8, are living creatures, with one body, four faces full of eyes, and six wings. The fourfold combination was of man, lion, ox, and eagle. Monstrous combinations of this kind are figured and sculptured both in Assyria and Egypt. These combined forms are symbolical of united powers; the lion of strength, royal majesty; the ox of patient industry; wings of swiftness, quickness, and the human head the intelligence to guide all these for one purpose; and thus showing that the divine government is sustained by intelligence, power, patience, and speed. They were servants of God, and they were ministers of vengeance (Ez. x. 7; Rev. xv. 7), and attendants of the heavenly king, praising and extolling the wonders of his grace (Rev. v. 11), and thus always nearest to God, "in the midst of the throne" (Rev. iv. 4–6), while others as angels and elders, were round about the throne. They are especially called living creatures (Ezekiel and John), and so full of eyes, the peculiar sign of life. The cherubim were designed as symbols of faith and hope to man, pointing to the possibility of man attaining to the highest and holiest places. (See EGYPT for picture of the Sphinx, and NINEVEH for winged figures).

CHE'SALON (flank). Judah (Josh. xv. 10). Now Kesla, 7 ms. W. of Jerusalem.

CHE'SED (increase). Son of Nahor (Gen. xx. 22).

CHE'SIL. Simeon (Josh. xv. 30). Near the desert, S.

CHEST (Heb. ARON and GENAZIM). Meaning Ark of the Covenant, Joseph's coffin, and the contribution box in the temple. Treasuries in Esther iii. 9.

CHESTNUT TREE. In the A. V. (Gen. xxx. 37; Ez. xxxi. 8) the translation of the Heb. ARON, the plane tree. In Ecclus xxiv. 14, wisdom is a plane tree by the water.

CHESUL'LOTH (loins). Issa. Between Jezreel and Shunem (Josh. xix. 18). Iksal? Chisloth Tabor?

CHET'TIM. CHITTIM (1 Macc. i. 1).

CHĒ'ZIB (false). Birthplace of Shelah (Gen. xxxviii. 5). AIN KUSSABEH. A fountain and ruins 10 ms. S. W. of Beit Jibrin.

SPHINX.

CHĪ'DON (javelin). Near Kirjath Jearim (1 Chr. xiii. 9; 2 Sam. vi.). An accident happened here to the ark while on its way to Jerusalem.

CHICKENS (2 Esd. i. 30; Matt. xxiii. 37). HEN.

CHILD. CHILDREN. Were regarded as God's gifts. Parents were bound to teach them their own faith and fit them to occupy the place of true members of the covenant (Gen. xviii. 19; Deut. vi. 7; xi. 19), and required of children a kind of sacred reverence, sanctioned in the Decalogue; the parent standing to his children as God does to the parent. At five the child was placed under the father's special care, and at twelve the son was called the son of the law. Very severe laws regulated the conduct of the child and punished misconduct (Lev. xix. 3; Ex. xxi. 15, 17; Deut. xxvii. 16), in the father as well as the son (Deut. xxi. 21). Property descended to the sons in equal shares, the oldest having a double portion, no wills being necessary. The child might be sold for a debt of the parent (2 K. iv. 1; Is. i. 1; Neh. v. 5), until the year of jubilee. The word child also means a person noted for certain qualities, as "children of the world"—selfish; "children of light" having religion; "child of song," a good singer.

CHIL'ION (sickly). Son of Elimelech. An Ephrathite (Ruth i. 2–5, iv. 9).

CHIL'MAD. On the Euphrates; mentioned by Xenophon (Anab. i. 5, 10). Had traffic with Tyre (Ez. xxvii. 23).

CHIM'HAM (longing). Son of Barzillai—returned with David (2 Sam. xix. 37, 38, 40; Jer. xli. 17). See BETHLEHEM.

CHIN'NERETH. Naph. Fortified city (Josh. xix. 35). Lost. It is a question which was named first, the lake or the city. Gennesar is a proper change of the same name. (See GENNESARETH).

COIN OF CYPRUS.

CHI'OS. Island in the Ægean Sea, 5 ms. from the shore of Asia Minor, 32 ms. long, 8 to 18 ms. wide (Acts xx. xxi.).

CHIS'LON (confidence—hope). Father of Elidad, the prince of Benjamin (Num. xxxiv. 21).

CHIS'LOTH-TA'BOR (loins—flanks). West end of Mt. Tabor (Josh. xix. 12). Iksal?

CHIT'TIM, KITTIM (maritime). Josephus says it was Cyprus. Mentioned many times (Gen. x. 4; 1 Chr. i. 7; Num. xxiv. 24). Fleets from Tyre sailed there (Is. xxiii. 1, 12; Jer. ii. 10). Cedar or box-wood was got there (Ez. xxvii. 6). Some suppose the name means all the islands settled by the Phœnicians, as Crete, the Cyclades, &c.

CHLO'E (verdant—short). A disciple mentioned by Paul (1 Cor. i. 11).

CHO'BA. Ephraim (Judg. iv. 4). CHO'BAI (xv. 4, 5). Hobah?

CHORA'SHAN (smoking furnace). Visited or haunted by David (1 Sam. xxx. 30). May be the ASHAN of Simeon, S. of Hebron (Josh. xv. 42).

CHORA'ZIN. One of the cities in which the mighty works of our Lord were done (Matt. xi. 21; Luke x. 13), 2 ms. from Capernaum. Supposed to be Kerazeh, a small Arab village 3 ms. inland from Tell Hum. The woes pronounced upon this city have come to pass. Its site even is doubtful.

CHOZE'BA. CHEZIB. ACHZIB (1 Chr. iv. 22).

CHRIST. Title of Jesus as the Messiah. See JESUS.

CHRISTIAN. Followers of the highest and best known divine laws as taught by Jesus Christ. The name Christian was given to the disciples of Jesus at Antioch by the Greeks in derision, in the reign of Claudius. They were before that called Nazarenes and Galileans.

CHRŌNOL'OGY. The chronology of the Bible is that of the Jews and their ancestors, from the earliest records to the end of the writing of the New Testament. Since the Bible is not a complete history of the whole time it represents, nor of the whole world, it must not be expected to have a continuous chronology. Designed alterations by bad men and careless copying have changed many points, and have made it necessary to exercise the greatest care in determining and correcting the errors. The Jews were not a mathematical people, or scientific in any respect, and computed the year by observation only. The Egyptians and Chaldees were far in advance of the Hebrews in science, and attained to a high standard of mathematical knowledge and chronological computation. The observation of the moon was the basis of the year's reckoning. Messengers were stationed on the heights around Jerusalem, on the 30th day of the month, to announce the appearance of the new moon, who reported to the Sanhedrin. This custom, among the Jews, was older than Moses, as appears in the regulation of it in Num. xxviii. 11. The year was made of twelve moons; and every fourth or fifth year a month was added at the end of the year, after the month Adar, called Veadar, Second Adar. The sacred year began with the month Nisan, in which Moses brought Israel out of Egypt (Ex. xii. 2; Esth. iii. 7). The civil year began as now, with the month Tishri, which was supposed to be the month of the creation.

CHART OF MONTHS, FEASTS, ETC.

Modern.	Sacred No.	Months.	Civil No.	Festivals.
April,	1,	Nisan or Abib,	7,	Passover, 15.
May,	2,	Iyar-Zif,	8,	2d Passover, 14.
June,	3,	Sivan,	9,	Pentecost, 6.
July,	4,	Tammuz,	10,	4th mo., 17.
August,	5,	Ab,	11,	Temple taken by Chaldees, 9.
September,	6,	Elul,	12,	Nehemiah dedicated the walls, 7. Wood-offerings, 21.
October,	7,	Tishri,	1,	Trumpets, 1. Atonement, 10. Tabernacles, 15.
November,	8,	Marchesvan,	2,	Fast, 19.
December,	9,	Chislev,	3,	Dedication, 25.
January,	10,	Tebeth,	4,	Feast of 10th mo., 8. Siege of Jerusalem, 10.
February,	11,	Shebet,	5,	Beginning of year of trees, 15.
March,	12,	Adar,	6,	2d Temple, 3; Purim, 14, 15.

The year was also dated from the king's reign, as in Esther, Chronicles, Kings, etc.; from the building of King Solomon's temple; and from the beginning of the Babylonish captivity. The week was of seven days, ending with the Sabbath. The Egyptians and Greeks divided the month into periods of ten days, called decades. The day was divided into night and day: thus, in Gen. i. 5, "the evening and the morning were the first day." The evening began at sunset, the morning at sunrise. There were four divisions of the day in common use—evening, morning, double light (noon), and half night (midnight). The night was divided into watches, the first and the second. A middle watch is mentioned once in Judg. vii. 19; and the morning watch in Ex. xiv. 24, and 1 Sam. xi. 11. Four night-watches were adopted from the Romans in later times (Mark viii. 35). The day and the night were divided into 12 hours each (Dan. iv. 19, 33). The Egyptians divided the day and night into hours from about 1200 B. C. The division into 24 hours was unknown before the fourth century B. C. The most common usage was to divide the day by the position of the sun, as the Arabs do now. The length of the day was longer in summer than in winter, and the hour longer in proportion. There were many contrivances for measuring time, such as dials, gnomons and clepsydræ, which had long been known by other nations. The day was divided into four parts only for the Temple service (Acts ii. 15; iii. 1; x. 9). The Sabbath (a day of rest), at the end of the week, was kept up by the patriarchs, and continued by the law of Moses, as a memorial of the deliverance from Egypt (Deut. v.), and was a day of joy and rejoicing. The morning and evening sacrfice in the Temple were doubled, the shew-bread changed for fresh, the law was publicly read and expounded; and this custom, simple at first, finally developed into the grand ceremonials of the Synagogue, especially under Ezra, after the return from Babylon. The resurrection of our Lord Jesus, the Christ, occurred on the FIRST day of the week (John xx.), and several of his appearances to his friends and disciples happening on that day also, the day of Pentecost in that year fell on that day, when the miraculous gift of tongues prepared the apostles for their peculiar work among all nations; therefore it was adopted as the day for stated meetings of the believers, and called the Lord's day. The seventh day, the seventh month, the seventh year, and the YEAR OF JUBILEE (the 49th or 50th), were sacred, and had their festivals and privileges. The seventh month contained the FEAST OF TRUMPETS, the DAY OF ATONEMENT and the FEAST OF TABERNACLES (which was the most joyful of all the Hebrew festivals), and the opening of the New Year. On the seventh year the land was to rest (Ex. xxiii. 10), in which no field was to be tilled nor vineyard dressed, nor even grain gathered that had sowed itself, nor grapes plucked. All debts were released. The Sabbatical year completed the Sabbatical scale. It began on the seventh month, and was marked by high and holy occupation, connected with sacred reflection, and was completed in the YEAR OF JUBILEE. It is quite certain that the year of jubilee was the 49th. It was to begin on the tenth day of the seventh month, at the sound of a horn (trumpet) all through the land (Lev. xxv). The laws respecting this year were: 1. Rest for the soil; 2. Restoration of land to its original owner; 3. Freedom to all slaves, whether by poverty or other causes. A notable instance of the release from debt is recorded in Nehemiah v., after the captivity, when the people were rebuilding the walls. There were several eras used in reckoning, by writers, and as national customs. 1. The Exodus (1 K. vi. 1; Num. xxxiii. 38), counting from the first starting out of Egypt.—2. The foundation of King Solomon's Temple.—3. The captivity of Jehoiachin (Ezek. i. 2; xxix. 1; 2 K. xxv. 27; Jer. lii. 31).—4. The return from the captivity of Babylon (Ez. iii. 1, 8).—5. The era of the Seleucidæ.—6. The year of liberation under Simon Maccabæus, marked by coins (1 Macc. xiii. 41). And the years of the reign of each king in his own time, reckoned from the beginning of the new year next after his accession. The original records are so few, and so indefinite, that it is difficult to fix on the precise date of any event, either in the Old or the New Testament. The Bible does not give a connected chronology from Adam down, nor from Noah, nor even from Abraham; nor is there any apparent purpose or system of dates that we can find. At one time it was expected that a better acquaintance with the originals would disclose a perfect system of chronology, giving periods, years, months, and even days; but such close study has unexpectedly shown us that the Bible treats of men and character, and God's dealing with man, and of certain distinct and separate periods of time only as were occupied in the passing events recorded. The people of the East, and the Arabs of the desert in particular, have never been mathematical, founding their chronology on astronomy; but have from the first regulated their calendar by observation only. Since they did not have the exact machinery of our modern clocks for determining the precise times of the sun's, moon's or stars' rising and setting, eclipses, &c. (which are the foundation of our most exact calculations), they never could have had more than a moderate degree of accuracy in their observations. The new moon would be expected on a certain day, and the precise moment of its appearance would depend on the place of observation, on a hill or in a valley, and the careful watch and good eyesight of the sentinel. The true figures of the original Hebrew chronology are very obscure in many instances, because there are three different versions—the Hebrew, the Samaritan and the Septuagint—each of which gives a different series of figures for the ages of the patriarchs, as shown in the following

TABLE OF THE AGES OF THE PATRIARCHS.

1996	Abraham .	100
1896	Isaac . . .	60
1726	Joseph . .

1. Here is a continuous chronology from Adam to Joseph, subject to only three questions: 1. Are the numbers given in either version of the text genuine? If so, which is correct? 2. What was Terah's age at the birth of Abraham? 3. When did the 430 years (of the period from the Promise to the Exodus) begin? A synopsis of the debates on these points may be found in Smith and Kitto. The accuracy of the original Hebrew is not doubted; but the alterations cannot be pointed out, so as to harmonize the three records in the Hebrew, the Septuagint, and the Samaritan. The Hebrew text, as interpreted by Ussher, is adopted here for convenience.

2. From the call of Abraham to the Exodus, 430 years; estimated as follows;

Abraham to Jacob .	85	Abraham to Isaac . .	25
Levi's age	137	Isaac to Jacob	60
Kohath's age	133	Joseph entered Egypt	130
Amram's age	137	Joseph lived after .	71
Moses at Exodus . .	80	Oppression after Joseph.

From the number 572 we may take the average years of each before the birth of the next, making a sum of 142, and this will leave 430. To the 366 we may add the years of oppression (Ex. i. 8–22) after Joseph died, say 64, and this gives the number required. Joshua's ancestry, from Ephraim, is given in 1 Chr. vii. 23–27; and if their ages were equal to their brethren of the other tribes mentioned, 430 years is not too long a period.

The specimen of ancient Egyptian papyrus preserved in the Bibliotheque at Paris, and published in fac-simile (pl. V. in the Astor Library), gives independent and disinterested evidence on the question of the long life of Jacob and others of this age. At the close of the essay (on morals) the writer says: "I have become an elder on the earth; I have traversed 110 years of life by the gift of the king and the approval of the elders, fulfilling my duty toward the king in the place of favor." The inscriptions at Memphis corroborate this account, and show that the writer Ptah-hotp, was eldest son of Assa, 5th king of the 15th dynasty (B. C. 1960–1860), whose father's age must have been at least 130. Manetho also verifies the same point. The increase of the Jews in Egypt was from seventy families to about three millions.

404. Artaxerxes II, king of Persia.—401. Xenophon and the 10,000 retreat. Socrates dies.

383. Mithridates, king of Pontus. Bithynia made a kingdom. Plato (philosopher). Aristæus (mathematician).

368. A celestial globe brought from Egypt to Greece.

366. Joshua slain by Johanan in the temple of Jerusalem.—361. Darius Ochus king of Persia.

360. Cappadocia made a kingdom. Tachos, king of Egypt. Philip II, king of Macedon. Demosthenes.

356. Temple of Diana burnt at Ephesus. Alexander born.

349. Darius Ochus takes Egypt and robs the temples. Aristotle (tutor to Alexander, 343). —345. 12 cities in Italy buried by an earthquake.—336. Eclipses first calculated by Calippus of Athens.

330. Alexander conquers Persia. He enters Jerusalem. Seeing the high priest, Jaddua, in his sacred robes, he respects him, and offers sacrifice to Jehovah. —323. Alexander died at Babylon.

320. 100,000 Jews carried into Egypt by Ptolemy. Onias I, high priest.—312. Seleucus Nicator, king of Syria.

311. Judæa subject to Antigonus. Appian Way made.

301. Judæa under the Ptolemies. Euclid, mathematician in Alexandria. Chinese wall built.

284. Colossus of Rhodes. Sect of Saducees. The Pharos (first light house) at Alexandria.

267. Ptolemy makes a canal from the Nile to the Red Sea. Silver money coined. Parthia.

248. Onias II, high priest.—246. Ptolemy Euergetes conquers Syria.—237. Simon II, high priest.

241. Attalus I, king of Pergamus. Archimedes, mathematician.

203. Judæa conquered by Antiochus. Onias III, high priest.—200. Jesus, son of Sirach (Ecclesiasticus). First mention of the Sanhedrin (70 rulers).

187. Syria a Roman province.—175. Jason, high priest. The temple plundered by Antiochus Epiphanes, and dedicated to Jupiter Olympus (168). See head on page 11.

165. Judas Maccabæus expels the Syrians and purifies the temple. Rise of the Pharisees.

161. First treaty with the Romans.—146. Carthage destroyed.

135. End of the Apocrypha. Antiochus IV, (Sidetes) besieged Jerusalem.

130. John Hyrcanus delivers Judæa from the Syrians, and reduces Samaria and Idumæa.

107. Aristobulus, king of Judæa. 116. Ptolemy Lathyrus, king of Egypt.—107. Alexander I, king of Egypt.

105. Alexander Jannæus at war with Egypt. Libraries of Athens sent to Rome by Sylla (86).

92. Tigranes, king of Armenia. See portrait in COINS.

79. Alexandra, widow of Jannæus, governs Judæa. Pompey in Africa. Julius Cæsar.

70. Hyrcanus II, high priest, deposed by his brother Aristobulus. They appeal to Pompey, who conquers Judæa and Syria, and makes them Roman provinces.—63. Antiochus XII, the last of the race of the Seleucidæ.

53. The temple plundered by Crassus (proconsul of Syria). Augustus born.—31. Cæsar passes the Rubicon.

48. Antipater of Idumæa. Calphurnius Bibulus, governor of Syria. Battle of Pharsalia.

45. Cæsar reformed the calendar, using solar years instead of lunar. Gives the Jews privileges.

44. Cæsar assassinated.—42. Battle of Philippi.

40. Herod the Great marries Mariamne, granddaughter of Hyrcanus, and is made king by the Romans (at Rome, with Pagan sacrifices).—30. Mariamne, and all the Sanhedrin but Pollio and Samcas, killed by Herod.

37. Romans assist Herod by taking Jerusalem. Antigonus, last Asmonean, killed at Antioch.

30. The Roman Republic becomes a monarchy. Antony and Cleopatra in Egypt.

27. Battle of Actium. The title of Augustus (Venerable) created and given to Cæsar Octavius.

20. Augustus (nephew of Julius Cæsar) visited Judæa and enlarged Herod's kingdom, by Pancas, where Herod built a temple in honor of Augustus (Cæsarea Philippi), ordering heathen games to be celebrated every fifth year. Herod built a temple at Samaria and called the city Sebaste (Venerable). He began to rebuild the temple, which was finished in the reign of Herod Agrippa II, A. D. 65.

15. Augustus (Germanicus) assumes the title of Pontifex Maximus (Pope).—11. Germany conquered by the Romans.

5. Varrus, gov. of Syria; Cyrenius (Quirinius) of Judæa. Cymbeline, king of Britain. Dionysius of Halicarnassus, historian. Herod robs the tomb of David.

4. Jesus the Christ born in Bethlehem. Flight into Egypt. Herod dies: his son Archelaus succeeds as Ethnarch. Herod Antipas tetrarch of Galilee. (For events in the life of Jesus and of Paul, see BIOGRAPHY).

A. D.

48. Population of Rome, 1,200,000.

CHRYSOLITE, CHRYSOPRASE, CHRYSOPRASUS. See PRECIOUS STONES.

CHUB A country or people associated with Egypt. Lud, Phut and others in Ez. xxx. 5.

CHUN (to stand up) A city of Hadadezer (1 Chr. xviii. 8). BEROTHAI in 2 Sam. viii. 8.

CHURCH (called). The Lord's faithful people. The Lord's house, where his people gather. A church is any number of souls, called and united in one vow, in one place, for divine worship, where the pure word is preached, and the sacraments duly administered, and godly living, after his law, as given by the head of the church, the Lord Jesus Christ. The church in Galatia means all the societies or churches in that country.

CHU SHAN or CUSHAN-RISHATHAIM (Ethiopian of wickedness). King of Mesopotamia, who oppressed the Israelites 8 years. Probably a sheikh, not a king.

CHU SI (Judg. vii. 18). A place near Ekrebel.

CHUZA (seer). Steward of Herod Antipas (Luke viii. 3).

CILICIA (Circ, son of Agenor) (Herodotus vii. 91). Asia Minor, southeast on the sea. Separated from Pamphylia, W., Lycaonia and Cappadocia, N., and Syria E., by lofty mountains. Chief rivers are Calycadnus, Cydnus, and Sarus. Fertile and populous. Tarsus was its capital. Josephus supposed it was the Tarshish of Gen. x. 4 (Ant. i. 6, § 1.) Native land of Paul the Apostle. The high road between Syria and the West. The Roman general Pompey destroyed the pirates and robbers of Cilicia.

CASTOR AND POLLUX.

CI'MAH (cluster). (Job. ix. 9).

CIN NAMON. A native of Ceylon and other islands of the Indian Ocean. It was one of the principal spices in the precious ointment used in the tabernacle, and highly valued for its perfume (Ex. xxx. 23, Prov. vii. 17).

CIN NEROTH. NAPHTALI (1 K. xv. 20). CHINNEROTH.

CIRA MA (1 Esd. v. 20). Ramah in Ezr ii. 26.

CIRCUMCISION (cutting around). The cutting off of the foreskin of man, first practiced by Abraham by divine command, as a token of a covenant between God and man. It was a very ancient custom founded on (supposed) sanitary laws, by the Egyptians and Ethiopians, and the practice is widespread in modern days; the Abyssinian Christians holding to the rite strictly. The Egyptian priests were required to observe this rite, and it was only strictly binding on those who entered the priesthood. So it became the badge of a religion that made undue account of outward distinctions, and merely natural virtues. The Hebrews were to practice it because they were to be a nation of priests (Ex. xix. 6), and it was to signify spiritual purity, being so considered by the leading men, implying a call to a holy life and purity of heart. The time was the 8th day after birth: among other people at full age—20 years. Foreigners on adoption into the Hebrew nation were required to submit to it.

CIS. KISH (Acts xiii. 21).

CI SAI (Esth. xi. 2). KISH.

EGYPTIAN DRESS.

CIS'TERN. A dug place, for the water of a spring, or from rain. Some were built up of stone and cement, and the best were cut in the solid rock. The largest are called pools, such as Solomon's, the Royal Cistern, Bethesda, etc. (See JERUSALEM.) A wheel is used to pan the rope over for drawing up the water, alluded to in Eccl. xii. 6. Keeping to one's own sources of pleasure, and not meddling with the property of others, is taught in the Proverbs (v. 15), by the figure of the cistern. Idolatry is compared to broken cisterns (Jer. ii. 3).

CIT'TIMS. CHITTIM (1 Macc. viii. 5).

CITIZEN. Among Romans, etc., a member of the state, or of a city. Among the Hebrews a member of the nation at large. Paul was an instance of one born to the rights of a Roman citizen, which protected and benefited him on three occasions (Acts vi. 37; xxii. 25; xxv. 11). The Roman law made two classes of citizens—the first entitled to hold office and vote, and carry on public and private business—the second to enjoy only the protection of the laws as a free man. The sacred law was the basis of the civil among the Jews, and citizenship was acquired by complying with the terms of the covenant, and lost by certain transgressions. Christians are counted as citizens of the celestial state.

CIT'Y. Any inhabited place, large or small.

CLAU'DA. An island S. W. of Crete (Acts xxvii. 16). Now Gozzo.

CLAU'DIA. A British maiden; wife of Pudens, daughter of King Cogidubnus, an ally of Rome and a disciple (2 Tim. iv. 21).

CLAU'DIUS. 5th emperor of Rome, A. D. 41 to 54. Tiberius Claudius Nero Germanicus. He succeeded Caligula. The famine mentioned in Acts xi. 28, happened in his reign; and he banished all Jews from Rome (xvii. 2). His head is on the coin of Cyprus. Agrippina, his fourth wife, poisoned him.

CLAY. A beautiful symbol of the divine power over the destinies of man was derived from the potter's use of clay, as he produced such elegant and useful forms from such a crude material (Is. lxiv. 8; Rom. ix. 21). "It is turned as clay to the seal" (Job xxxviii. 14), refers to the use of clay in stopping up doors in tombs or granaries, and the use of a seal engraved with a private design on the soft surface, leaving its impression as a protection against intrusion. Bricks were stamped also as may be seen on the numberless specimens from the ruins. Locks on the storehouses in the East are now further secured by the clay, stamped with a seal.

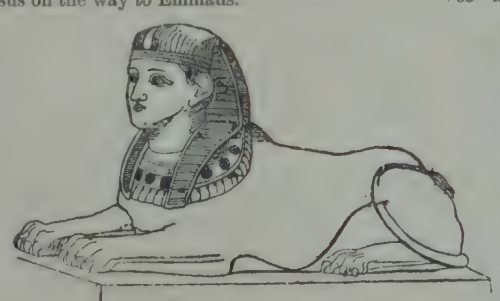
CLEAN and UNCLEAN. Terms of frequent occurrence in the Bible, concerning the rites and usages of the Abrahamic covenant, having both a natural and a symbolical meaning. It is mentioned as in use at the sacrifice made by Noah and it is probable that it was then an ancient distinction. Animals, birds, beasts and reptiles were pronounced good for food without distinction (Gen. ix. 3). It then has no foundation in the laws of diet or health. The line was fixed by man between the wild, obnoxious, poison-fanged animals, filthy in habit and suggestive of evil, and the tame, docile creatures, more cleanly in their habits and more akin to the better instincts of mankind. The Egyptians sacrificed dogs, cats, crocodiles, etc., and held them as sacred. Moses, to separate his people from those pagans, confined sacrifices to animals from the flock and herd, sheep, goats and cattle, and to the dove species among birds; while, for food, a larger limit was allowed, but in the same time, the animals allowed being those that chew the cud and divide the hoof, among wild animals only the deer species, and of birds, a few were prohibited by name, and the rest allowed; of fishes those that had both fins and scales; and of insects, locusts and grasshoppers. The unclean were called abominations, and were to work a spiritual defilement if eaten. The clean and unclean animals had a counterpart in the soul, and the restrictions laid on the appetite became a bit and bridle to the soul. This law was abolished by the Lord in a vision to Peter at Joppa. There were other laws relating to ceremonial impurity, touching certain animals, dead bodies, diseased persons, the intercourse between man and wife, and the office of the mother. Particulars in Leviticus.

CLEAVE. To adhere to; "clave to" (Ruth i. 14); to divide; separated (Acts iii. 2).

CLEFT. (Deut. xiv. 6; Cant. ii. 14, etc.).

CLEMENT. Mentioned by Paul in Phil. iv. 3, with much esteem and honor, as his fellow laborer at Philippi, whose name (with the others) was in the book of life. He is said to have been bishop of Rome (Pope Clemens Romanus, the third from Peter), and wrote a letter to the Corinthians very much esteemed by the ancients and read publicly in the churches. It is in the Alexandrian MS. copy of the Scriptures as Codex A.

CLEO'PAS. One of the two disciples that saw Jesus on the way to Emmaus.



SPHINX.

CLEOPAT'RA. Daughter of Antiochus III. (the Great), and the name of several queens of Egypt. 1. Wife of Ptolemy V, called Epiphanus, B. C. 193; 2. Wife of Ptolemy VI, Philometer (Esth. xi. 1); 3. Wife of Alexander Balas, B. C. 150, daughter of No. 2; afterwards given by her father to Demetrius Nicator (1 Macc. xi. 12); also wife of Antiochus VII, Sidetes, B. C. 125, who killed Demetrius. She murdered her son Seleucus, and died by a poison she had prepared for her second son, A. VIII.

CLEOPHAS ALPHEUS (John. xxix. 25).

CLIFF, anciently called CLIFT (Is. xxxii. 14). A steep rock split off by violence.

CLIMATE. There is no country in the world which has such a variety of climate and temperature, within the same limits, as Palestine. On Mts. Hermon and Lebanon there is perpetual snow; and at Jericho, only 60 or 80 miles, there is tropical heat. The hills of Bashan, Gilead, Galilee, Samaria, and Judæa, are the home of forests, vines, figtrees, and all kinds of fruits and vegetables; and the plains produce bananas, oranges, etc. From Jerusalem to Jericho, in a direct line, is about 15 miles. At one place snow and ice sometimes are seen in the winter, but at the other frost is never known. Frost is also unknown in the plains of Sharon and Philistia. The temperature at Engedi is as high as that of Thebes, in Egypt. Palms grow as far north as Beirut, and bear fruit also at Damascus in sheltered positions.. The greatest heat on the hills of Judæa, Hebron, and Jerusalem, is seldom above 90° Fahrenheit, and the cold only once so low as 28° in five years (Barclay.). Damascus is cooler, the highest degree being 88°, and the lowest 29°.

On Lebanon, Shumlan, highest 82°, in August.

In Gennesaret, 450 ft. above the sea, from March 17 to April 5, average, 63°, and 73° from 8 A. M. to 8 P. M. In May 78°, and day only 83°.

Dead Sea shore, 42°; average, night 47°, day 67°, in Jan. In April 105°, in the shade.

The Arabs leave for the high lands in the hot months, June to Sept.

Beersheba, Feb., night 31°, noon 72°; in summer 65° night, and 90° day, highest range.

Nablus is sheltered and warmer than Jerusalem; and Nazareth also.

January.—Last sowing of wheat and barley. Last roasting ears of corn (the 3d crop of the year!). Trees in leaf. Almond blossoms, apricot, peach, plum, beans. Winter figs still on the trees. Cauliflowers, cabbages, oranges, lemons, limes, citrons. Mandrake in bloom; wormwood also. New leaves on the olive-trees. Fire is needed in the house. Many flowers.

February.—Barley may be sown. Beans, onions, carrots, beets, radishes, etc. Oranges, etc. Apple-trees in bloom. Flowers in the fields abundant.

March.—Beans and peas in the market. Trees in full leaf. Barley ripe at Jericho. Fig-tree blossoms while the winter fig is still on. First clusters of grapes. Pear-trees, apple, palm, and buckthorn in bloom. Sage, thyme, mint, etc. Carob pods ripe. Celery. Rue, parsley, hyssop, leeks, onions, garlic, etc. Flowers carpet the fields.

April.—Barley and wheat harvest. Sugar-cane set. Beans, etc., lettuce, cucumbers; lavender, rosemary, mulberries. Oleander blossoms; also rose of Sharon. Great variety of flowers. Early ears of corn. Apricots.

May.—Harvest in the plains and on the hills. Almonds, apples, mandrakes, and many vegetables. Grass begins to wither for want of rain. Melons of all kinds, onions, cucumbers, tomatoes, potatoes, corn. Walnuts, blackberries, sycamore and mulberry figs.

June.—Threshing grain. Figs, cherries, plums, cedar-berries, olives, almonds, quinces, plaintain fruit, bananas, grapes, liquorice plant, dandelion, egg-plant, doum palm dates. Henna (for dyeing the nails) and roses gathered.

July.—Pears, nectarines, peaches, grapes, melons, potatoes, tomatoes, egg-plant, Indian figs, prickly pear (cactus fruit), gourds. Millet, doura, linseed, tobacco, grapes.

August.—All fruits and vegetables before named, and also citrons, pomegranates. Olives now perfect. Grapes. The fruit month.

September.—Every fruit and vegetable still in market. Cotton and hemp mature. Millet, doura, maize, lentils, chick-peas, lupines, beans, fenn-greek, fennel, castor-oil plant. Grapes.

October.—Sesame (for lamp oil) ripe. Wheat and barley may be sown. Vegetables planted. Olives yield the last berries. Pomegranates, pistachio nuts. Lettuce, radishes, and other garden sauce. Cotton mature. Fig leaves fall. Plowing.

November.—Principal sowing of wheat and barley. Trees lose their leaves. Early dates. Very few olives. Grapes. Plowing.

December.—Grass abundant. Wheat and barley may still be sown, and pulse also. Sugar cane, cauliflowers, cabbage, radishes, lettuce, lentils. Plowing.

COLOSSÆ.

This calendar is mainly true of Jerusalem and the hill country. Some weeks allowance must be made for the higher temperature of the Jordan valley, and the plains by the Mediterranean sea.

RAIN. The average rain-fall at Jerusalem for the year is 56; in very wet seasons it has gone higher, 85, 44—66 average. The average in London is only 25, in the highlands of England 60, in New York, 62, and the highest in the lake country 65. There is a wet and a dry season. In the wet, the winter, the rains fall in two series of showers, called the early (yoreh) and the latter rain (malkosh), with occasional lighter showers between, and many clear sunny days. The loss of rain is sure to affect the harvest, and a total want of rain would destroy all crops (Amos iv. 7). From April to November there is scarcely ever a cloud. The dews are heavy often like a small shower. Chilly nights, succeeding hot days have always been a constant feature in the East (Gen. xxxi. 40). The different climate of Jericho has been often noticed. Josephus says, and it is true now, that linen clothing can be worn at Jerecho when there is snow in the hills around Jerusalem. The plains along the sea shore are but little hotter than the hills. Beirut is much hotter the year round than Jerusalem. In the desert are found the greatest extremes of heat and cold. In winter the heat will be greater than our summer in the day, and the night colder than our average winter. The winds are very regular in their season and effects. West or S. W. wind invariably brings rain in winter (Luke xii. 54). The North wind is cool, but rare. The South wind is always hot (55; Job xxxvii. 17). The East wind is very rare in the winter, and, blowing on the desert in summer, is dry and hot (Ez. xvii. 10; Hos. xiii. 15). In the Jordan valley there is an under and an upper current. The under current blows down the valley in winter and up in summer. There are no East and West winds in the Arabah.

CLOUD. See CLIMATE. Pillar of a cloud. The peculiar sign and symbol of the Lord's presence with his ancient people, during the exodus (Ex. xiii. 21), as of a cloud by day and of fire by night. It disappeared (or is not mentioned) from the passage of the river Jordan until the dedication of Solomon's temple (2 Chr. v. 13), and then only as a momentary sign for that occasion. The figurative use of the cloud has reference to the peculiar climate. "A cloud of the latter rain" (Prov. xvi. 15) means the gladdening influence of the king's countenance when well favored toward his subjects. The commanding the clouds to rain not was a sign of desolation (Is. v. 6; Deut. xi. 17). Dark clouds were emblems of gloom and sadness (Joel ii. 2). Swift wind-driven clouds, with lightning, were an emblem of Jehovah (Ps. civ. 3). Their height expressed loftiness (Ps. lvii. 10).

CLOUTED (Josh. ix. 5). Mended. Spotted.

CLOUTS (Jer. xxxviii. 11, 12). Cast-off rags or torn clothes.

CNI'DUS. Caria, S. W., in Asia Minor (Acts xxvii. 7). Passed by Paul. Celebrated for the worship of the goddess Venus (Strabo xiv. 965).

COACHES (Is. lxvi. 20).

COAL (PEHHAN—black, and GAHHELETH—burning). There are veins of coal in Mt. Lebanon, a few miles from Beirut, and it is probable that the Hebrews and Phœnicians knew and used it. But charcoal must have been specially meant in Psalm cxx. 4, in coals of juniper; and only charcoal was used in the censer at the temple service.

COAST. border, bound (Ex. x. 4; xiv. 19).

COCK. Domestic poultry are not mentioned in the O. T., unless in Is. xxii. 17, 18. The compassion of the Lord towards Jerusalem is compared to the tender care of a hen over her chickens (Matt. xxii. 37; Luke xiii. 34). The cock-crowing of Matt. xiii. 35, refers to a certain hour of the night, just before dawn, and the special signal given at that hour to Peter (Matt. xxvi. 34, 74). They are on the monuments in Assyria but not in Egypt; also on the Etruscan pottery of great antiquity (Mrs. Gray's Etruria), and on the coins of Greeks and Romans. The ancient Britons kept them, but did not think it right to eat them (Cæsar's Wars, 5).

COFFER. A box hanging from the side of a cart (1 Sam. vi. 8, 11, 15; Ezr. vi. 2). "In a coffer."

COLHŌZEH (all-seeing). A man of Judah (Neh. iii. 11, 5).

CO'LIUS (1 Esd. ix. 23) KELAIAH.

COLLARS (Judg. viii. 26). EAR-RINGS.

COL'LEGE (2 K. xxii. 14; and second in Zeph. i. 10). Where Huldah the prophetess lived "in the lower (or second) part of the city" (Neh. xi. 9).

COL'LOPS OF FAT (Job xv. 27). Slices of fat.

COL'ONY. Philippi, in Macedonia, is so called (Acts xvi. 12). A body of citizens sent out to found a new state for themselves, under the same laws and rights.

COL'ORS. There are about twenty different words, meaning color, in the O. T.; but only white, black, red, yellow or green are distinctly named. In the N. T. there are seven words meaning color. 1. Leben, white (Lebanon, white mts). Milk is leben, and so is manna, snow, horses, clothing, the moon, the pale face, and white hair. It was the symbol of joy, of innocence, purity; the clothing of angels, saints, and of Jesus.—2. Shahor, black: as hair, complexion of the sick, horses, mourners' robes, clouded sky, night, turbid brook; and as opposed to white, the symbol of evil.—3. Adom, red (Adam). Blood, pottage of lentiles, a horse, wine, complexion, leprous spot, a grape-vine; and the symbol of bloodshed.—4. Argaman, purple. Made at Tyre, from a shell-fish. The color was only a drop in the throat of each animal. It was purple, violet, or blue, according to the fixing. Some say the violet (or blue) was had from a different shell-fish, and called—5. Tekeleth, blue. The deep blue of the sky, violet, and sometimes as black; the ribands and fringes of the Hebrew dress (Num. xv. 38), tapestries of Persia (robes of perfection in Ez. xxiii. 12).—6. Shani, shine (as scarlet); tolaath, worm scarlet (our word vermilion means worm color). Lips, in Cant. iv. 3, fire; scarlet robes were luxuries, and appropriate for a warrior's cloak (Na. ii. 3). The vermillion of the ancients was like our Venitian-red—dull red—such as is seen on the monuments, where it has preserved its tint for many ages.

COLOS'SE, COLOSSÆ. On the Lycus, a branch of the Mæander, in Phrygia, near Laodicea (Col. ii. 1; iv. 13). Pliny (Nat. Hist. v. 41) describes it as a celebrated city in Paul's time. Paul founded a church here, on his third tour. The ruins of the ancient city are near the modern village of Chonas.

COM'FORTER. A name given to the Holy Spirit (2 Sam. x. 3).

COM'MERCE (trade, Heb. rekel, traffic). The first record of bargain and sale is of Abraham's purchase of the burial-place for Sarah of Ephron, at Hebron, for 400 shekels weight (as sovereigns are weighed at the Bank of England) of silver. Job throws much light on the commerce, manufactures and science of his age. He mentions gold, iron, brass (copper or bronze), lead, crystal, jewels, weaving, merchants, gold from Ophir, topazes from Ethiopia, building of swift ships, writing in books, engraving on plates of metal and stone, and fine seal or gem engraving; fishing with hooks, nets, spears; harp, organ, and names of stars. The history of Sidon and Tyre is a record of commercial affairs; and that of the building of King Solomon's Temple is also. Foreigners were the principal traders before the Captivity, but after that, and especially after the destruction of Jerusalem by Titus, the Jews have been an entire people of traffic.

COM'PEL (Mark xv. 21). To press into service.

CONANI'AH (whom Jehovah hath sent). Chief of the Levites in time of Josiah (2 Chr. xxxv. 9).

CON'CIS'ION (cutting off). A term of contempt for outward circumcision (Phil. iii. 2).

WOMAN RIDING.

CON-CŌR'DANCE. A book which gives the names of persons, places and things (and ideas by their chief word), with many definitions, in alphabetical order, with a reference to the place where each may be found. They are useful for comparing passages bearing on the same subject, which may explain each other, and for finding the place where any particular text or subject is located. So, in a few minutes, all the texts on the subject of the Lord's Supper may be found and read. The first work of the kind was made by Antony of Padua

CON'-CU-BINE. A wife of second rank, where more than one wife was allowed. Her condition was assured and provided for by Moses. She was either 1. A Hebrew girl bought; 2. A captive taken in war from the Gentiles; 3. A foreign slave bought; 4. Or a Canaanite woman, bond or free. She could not be sold, but might be sent away free.

CON DUIT (French, aqueduct), (2 K. xviii. 17). The largest mentioned is from Solomon's Pool to the Temple site.

CO'NEY (Heb. SHAPHAN, rabbit). The Syrian Hyrax. Its habits are very much like the rabbit, only it is a little larger. Its teeth and hoofs (instead of claws on each toe), are like those of the rhinoceros (Lev. xi. 5; Deut. xiv. 7; Ps. civ. 18; Prov. xxx. 26).

CONFEC'TION (a compound); (Ex. xxx. 35).

CON-GRE-GA'-TION (edah). The Hebrew people collected as a holy community, held by religious bonds (for political ends). Circumcision and full age (20), were the requisites for membership, which might be forfeited for certain faults (Deut. xxiii. 1–8). During the Exodus the whole nation could gather from their tents, but when they occupied the country on both sides of Jordan, it became a necessity to appoint representatives, who are called, in Num. i. 16, persons "wont to be called to the Congregation"; and, in xvi. 2, they are styled "chiefs of the Congregation, who are called to the Convention"; and, in Ex. xxxviii. 25, their name is, "those deputed to the assembly" (numbered in A. V.). Besides these, the heads of families (patriarchs—sheikhs now), and a fourth class, the judges of cities, magistrates (cadi, now). They met at the door of the tabernacle, or in some other noted places, as Shechem by Joshua; Mizpeh by the Levite (Judg. xx. i.); Gilgal by Samuel. In the Exodus the sound of the trumpet called the assembly together (Num. x. 2–4), but in Canaan messengers were used of necessity. It did not have legislative powers, for the law of Moses was supreme, but by-laws could be made. They could not lay taxes. The divine law was submitted to the assembly for acceptance or rejection (Ex. xix. 3–9, xxiv. 3). Chiefs were confirmed in their office (or rejected) by this body (Num. xxvii. 19; 1 Sam. xi. 15, 2 Sam. v. etc.). The assembly could arrest the execution of the king's sentence, as Jonathan was "rescued" (2 Sam. xiv. 44, 45), by the action of the Edah. Peace and war with foreign powers were considered in it (Josh. ix. 15, 18). It was the high court of appeal, and had control of death-penalties. After Jeroboam's usurpation, it was called the C. of Jerusalem (2 Chr. xxx. 2), or of Judah (v. 25). It finally was reduced to the 72 members of the Sanhedrin.

CONI'AH. JEHOIACHIN (Jer. xxii. 24).

CONONI'AH. A Levite; ruler of the offerings in Hezekiah's time (2 Chr. xxxi. 12, 13).

CONSCIENCE. Internal knowledge; moral faculty which judges between right and wrong (John viii. 9.)

CONVER-SA'-TION. The whole tenor of one's life, acts, and thoughts.

COOKING. MEALS.

CON-VO-CA'TION. The religious gathering on the Sabbath and the great feast-days.

COOS. COS. Island at the E. entrance to the Archipelago, and between Miletus and Rhodes, and the peninsulas on which are Halicarnassus and Cnidus (Acts xxi. 1) 21 ms. long, N. E. to S. W., and 6 ms. wide. Was an important island in Jewish history from early times (1 Macc. xv. 23; Jos. Ant. xiv. 7 § 2). Stanchio.

COPPER. (Heb. NEHOSHETH). Copper was and is now used more extensively in the East than any other metal. There is no certain mention of iron in the Scriptures, and all kinds of instruments, weapons and tools must have been made of copper or bronze, which is a mixture of copper and tin. Wherever brass, iron and steel are mentioned copper was the metal meant in the original. Copper money, in great quantities, is often found buried, dated many centuries back. See MONEY.

CORAL (lofty). Coral is mentioned only twice in Scripture (Job xxviii. 18; Ez. xxvii. 16). It often occurs in ancient Egyptian jewelry. The coral which is described as being brought from Syria was probably that of the Red Sea where coral abounds.

CORBAN (a sacred gift). A present devoted to God or to his temple (Matt. xxiii. 18). The Jews were reproved by Christ for cruelty to their parents in making a corban of what should have been theirs (Mark ii. 7).

CORIANDER. An aromatic plant found in Egypt, Persia and India, mentioned twice in Scripture (Ex. xvi. 31; Num. xi. 7).

CORD. The word cord means line, band, rope, thread, string, etc. It is made of various materials according to its uses. Strips of camel hide are still used by the Bedawins. The finer sorts were made of flax (Is. xix. 9); others of the fibre of the date palm, and of reeds and rushes. The tent being an image of the human body, the cords which held it represented the principle of life (Job iv. 21). For leading or binding animals (Ps. xviii. 27). For bow-strings made of catgut (Ps. xi. 2). A line of inheritance (Josh. xvii. 14; xix. 9).

CORINTH.

CORINTH'. On the isthmus that joins Peloponnesus to Greece. The rock, Acrocorinthos, south of the city, stood 2,000 feet above the sea, on the broad top of which there was once a town. The Acropolis of Athens can be seen from it, 45 miles (Liv. xlv. 28). It has two harbors: CENCHRÆA (now Kenkries), on the Saronic gulf, 7½ ms. distant, east; and LECHÆUM, on the Gulph of Lepanto, 1½ ms. west (Strabo viii. 6). Corinth was the natural capital of Greece, and was the commercial centre. Eminent for painting, sculpture, and works in metal and pottery. Famous for a temple to Venus of great wealth and splendor, the most ancient in Greece. Was the military centre during the Achaian league. Destroyed by the Romans, B. C. 146, and after 100 years of desolation the new city visited by Paul was built by Julius Cæsar, and peopled with freedmen from Rome (Pausanias—Strabo). Paul lived here eighteen months, and became acquainted with Aquila and Priscilla. The Posidonium, the sanctuary of Neptune was the scene of the Isthmian games, which were celebrated, every other year, and gave Paul some of his most striking imagery. It was N. E. of the city, near the harbor of Schœnas, now Kalamaki, on the Saronic gulf (1 Cor. ix. 24, 26). The foot-races were run in the stadium; the boxing held in the theatre; and the victor's wreaths were made from the pines that grew near.

CORINTH'IANS. The people of Corinth. For Paul's epistles to, see PAUL.

COR'-MO-RANT. The cormorant (Heb. SHALAK, Lev. xi. 17; Deut. xiv. 17); and Pelican (Heb. KAATH, Ps. cii. 6). Common in Syria, among the rocks on the coasts.

CORN. A term for all kinds of grain. The grains and loaves of Indian corn (maize), were found under the head of an Egyptian mummy, and it is supposed to be mentioned by Homer and Theophrastus. The offering in Lev. ii. 14, was of green corn, roasted, which was eaten with oil, etc. (ver. 15). The "seven ears of corn" on one stalk is possible, and has been noticed (N. Y. Evening Post, Aug. 26, 1863) lately in this country and is in accord with the proper character of maize, but not of wheat, and we may so understand the dream interpreted by Joseph.

COR-NE'LIUS. A Roman centurion, commander of 100 (Acts x. 1). He seems to have worshiped the true God before his conversion (x. 2), and not the pagan deities. He was the first Gentile convert, and was received by Peter.

CORNER. The Levitical law gave a portion of the field called a "corner" to the poor, and the right to carry off what was left, also the gleanings of the trees and the vines (Lev. xix. 9). See also RUTH, GLEANING.

COR'NER STONE. A stone of size and importance in the corner of a building, uniting two walls. This is laid with ceremonies in large buildings. Christ is the corner stone of our salvation (Eph. ii. 20; 1 Pet. ii. 6; Matt. xxi. 42).

CORNET. MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.

CORRUP'TION, MOUNT OF (2 K. iii. 13.) MT OF OLIVES.

CO'SAM (a diviner). Son of Elmodam, in the line of Joseph (Luke iii. 28).

COTES. Enclosures for sheep (2 Chr. xxxii. 28).

COTTAGE (house), (Is. xxiv. 20). A tent or shelter made of boughs.

COTTON (Heb. karpas; Sans., karpasam; Arabic, karfas); mentioned in Esther i. 6, as green hangings. "Hanging curtains of calico, in stripes, and padded, are used, in India, as a substitute for doors." In the king of Delhi's palace there is a roof supported by beautiful pillars, between which hang striped and padded curtains, easily rolled up or removed. Some of the passages where fine linen is said, in our version, cotton was probably the article meant in the original.

COUN'CIL. An assembly of people, rulers, priests or apostles. See SANHEDRIN.

COURT (Heb. CHATSER). An inclosed space, or yard, belonging to a house.

COU'THA. A servant of the temple (1 Esd. v. 32).

COV'ENANT (Heb. BERITH). Contracts between men, and between God and men. Various rites were used: joining hands (Ez. xvii. 18); by an oath (Gen. xxi. 31); by a heap of stones; (ib. xxxi. 46); by a feast (ib. xxvi. 30); by sacrificing victims, dividing the parts, and both parties to the covenant walking between the parts of the sacrifice (xv. 8–17); and, more common and above all others, eating salt (Num. xviii. 19; Lev. ii. 13).

The covenants between God and men were also ratified by signs. By the sacrifice, when a symbol of deity, a smoking furnace and a burning lamp, passed between the parts (Gen. xv. 17); by the 12 loaves on the table of shew-bread (Lev. xxiv. 6–8); and the crucifixion of the Christ (Heb. ix. 15, xiii. 20; Is. lv. 3).

COZ (thorn). A man of Judah, also a Levite. (1 Chr. iv. 8, xxiv. 10).

COZBI. (false). A Midianite woman, daughter of Zur (Num. xxv. 15, 18).

CRACK'NELS. Hard; brittle cakes (1 K. xiv. 3).

CRĂFTS'MAN. A mechanic (Deut. xxvii. 15). CHARASHIM.

CRĀNE (Heb. AGUR). Is a wader, migratory, utters a twittering cry, and goes in vast flocks (Is. xxxviii. 14; Jer. viii. 7).

CRE-Ā-TION. The origin of all things, material and living, in the world, and this heavens around it (Gen. i; Ps. cxlviii. 5). When rightly understood God's works and His Word are in harmony. The Mosaic account in Genesis opens with a notice of the work of God in the original creation of the world and the heavens, in the vastly remote past, and passes at once to the final preparation of the earth for man's occupation, which has extended through six (geological) periods of unknown extent, which are called days. It is supposed by the geologist that the first formations were rocks, either in water by deposit, or both water and fire. There are traces of living things in the rocks, called fossils, and they are without eyes; perhaps because there was no light—for light was made after the heavier materials. Both vegetables and animals appear at the same time. These oldest rocks are called the CAMBRIAN, and are 5 miles thick.

The next in the series is the SILURIAN, of sediment, whose thickness is 6 miles. Fossils are very numerous, and of low types, having no animal with vertebræ (back-bone), except a few fishes on the very top. Vegetation first appears in this place. There was light, and there were eyes in the living things. The firmament (expanse) divided the waters above (clouds) from the waters below (the ocean).

The third in the series is the OLD RED SANDSTONE, which marks the time when the great mountain ranges of the world were lifted into their present position. Sedimentary, and two miles thick, and having fossils of animals found in the other two, and of vertebrates. Dry land appeared, grass, herbs and trees. No land animals.

The fourth was the CARBONIFEROUS (coal bearing), in which we find coal, minerals, limestone. Coal is made of wood, and the fossil wood found in the coal series does not show the rings which we now find in all wood as marks of the yearly growth, which is evidence of dense fogs and very pale light. The lifting of the fogs towards the end of this period, letting the sunshine on the earth, is described by Moses as the events of the fourth day. The fossil remains in these rocks are the same at the equator and everywhere, indicating a uniform heat all over the earth. Animal life on land is first seen: insects, such as beetles, scorpions, and reptiles—such as frogs.

The fifth series was the PERMIAN, which has remains of a higher order of vegetation and of animals, such as the saurians (lizards), and birds, whose fossils are in the NEW RED SANDSTONE of this series.

The TRIAS and OOLITE show fossils of more advanced orders, both vegetable and animal. Palm, pine, cypress, insects, and three kinds of lizards, called by Moses "the moving creature that hath life"—a better translation of the original being "the reptile that hath the breath of life"—and also great sea monsters (called whales in Genesis). The fossils of these animals exist in such amazing numbers as to give the name age of reptiles to this day, which was the fifth in the account of Moses.

The next was the CHALK, which has but few remains, while the Tertiary, which followed, is full of mammals, such as cattle, beasts and creeping things, which mark the progress of the sixth day, which ended on the creation of man.

There are no fossil remains of man among all the vast number of living things in all the series. And there are no animals now living on the earth whose origin cannot be traced in the fossil remains of similar races living on the earth before man was placed here.

The discovery of flint implements (hatchets, spears, arrow-heads and wedges) in the gravel quarries of Abbeville and Amiens, France, does not carry back the history of man into the age of the extinct species of elephant, whose bones were found in the same deposit, because no human bones were found there.

The truth of the Mosaic account is thus peculiarly shown in the records of the rocks.

The account is true as it would appear if shown to a man in a vision, every item agreeing with the optical appearances.

It may be that there was a race of men living on the earth before the birth of Adam; and if so, the passages which seem to imply other races besides Adam's would have an explanation. The several species of men, with their distinct languages, indicate more than one origin.

The most skeptical scientist of the present day admits that the breath of life was breathed into at least one original form—if not three or four—and that is the whole question. God did create a living being, or several; and since the most careful examination shows that species and groups of animals were from the first—in the oldest rocks, and in all of them—distinct, as distinct as they are now, and so may have been created each by itself, "after its own kind." The history of the past is proved true by the discoveries of the present. However short the account, the order of the events is correct, according to science.

CRES'CENS (growing), (2 Tim. iv. 10). One of the seventy disciples. An assistant of Paul.

CRĒTE. CANDIA. S. of the Archipelago; 160 ms. long from E. to W., and 6 to 35 ms. wide. Homer says it had 100 cities (Iliad ii. 649; Virgil, Æ. iii. 106). Minos, the great legislator, was a native. Very mountainous, but full of fruitful valleys. There was a very early connection with the Jews (1 Sam. xxx. 14; 2 Sam. viii. 18; Ez. xxv. 16; Zeph. ii. 5; 1 Macc. x. 67, xv. 23; Jos. Ant. xvii. 12, § 1). Cretans were at the feast of Pentecost at Jerusalem (Acts ii. 11). Visited by Paul (see Life).

CRETES (Acts iii. 11), CRE'TANS (Tit. i. 12). People of Crete.

CRIB (Job xxxix. 9), (to fodder). Feeding-box for animals, made of small stones and mortar, or cut from a single stone.

CRISP'ING-PINS (Is. iii. 22).

CRIS'PUS (curled?). Ruler of the Jewish synagogue (Acts xviii. 8).

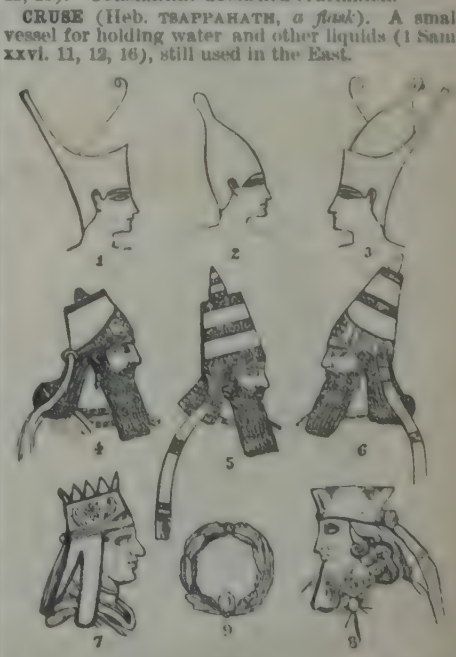
CROC'ODILE (Heb. LEVIATHAN). The Jewish translations of Job xli. gives crocodile for leviathan, and the description is very poetical as well as true. Herodotus says the Egyptians paid divine honors to this reptile, keeping a tame one, whose ears were hung with rings and fore-paws circled with bracelets; and when he died they embalmed his body. The worship began in the fear of man for the most terrible animal in the river Nile.

CROSS. An upright stake, with one or more cross-pieces, on which persons were suspended for punishment. It was an emblem of pain, guilt and ignominy, but has been adopted by Christians as the most glorious badge of a servant and follower of the Christ, who was crucified on it. Constantine was the first emperor who adopted it as an ensign, whose coins bear its form, with monograms of Christ or of Constantine. The image was added to the cross, forming the crucifix, in the 6th century. The term cross was used for self-denial by Jesus and others (Matt. xvi. 24). See cut, p. 22.

CROWN. Originally the band or ribbon about the head or hair of a king or a priest. The ornamented cap differed in style in every country, as is shown on the sculptures and coins. A wreath of leaves crowned the winners in the Grecian games. The final inheritance of the saints is figured as a crown of righteousness (2 Tim. iv. 8.). The figures are of crowns from Egypt: 1. Upper E.; 2. Lower E.; 3. Upper and Lower united; 4. Assyria; 5. Assyria (Sardanapalus 3d.); 6. Assyrian (Sennacherib); 7. Tigranes (Syria); 8. At Persepolis; 9. Crown of leaves, Roman coin of Galba. The Roman soldiers crowned Jesus with a wreath of thorn twigs, made from what is now called Christ's thorn (zizyphus), and by the Arabs' nubk, the jujube tree. It is very abundant, and forms dense thorny hedges (growing or laid in rows two or three feet high), through which no large animal can pass.

CRUCIFIX'ION. Putting a person to death on a cross was a very common practice in ancient days, as hanging is now. Jesus was condemned to the cross by the Sanhedrin for blasphemy, and by Pilate for sedition against Cæsar. The scarlet robe, crown of thorns, and other insults were the inventions of those engaged in the execution, and were peculiar to his case. Whipping was a part of the punishment, but in the case of Jesus was not the legal act, being applied before sentence. The sufferer was to carry his cross, or a part of it. The clothes were perquisites to the guards. A cup of stupefying liquor was often given in mercy, just before the hands and feet were nailed. The body was often left to waste away naturally on the cross, or be eaten by birds and beasts, by the Romans, but they allowed the Jews to bury their dead on account of the law of Moses (Deut. xxi. 22, 23). Constantine abolished crucifixion.

CRUSE (Heb. TSAPPAHATH, a flask). A small vessel for holding water and other liquids (1 Sam. xxvi. 11, 12, 16), still used in the East.



CROWNS.

CRYS'TAL. Three Hebrew words, 1. ZEKUKITH, 2. GABISH, and 3. KERACH, are translated crystal. 1. is, no doubt, the word for glass; 2. means (like) clear ice; and 3. means ice or frost. "Clear as crystal," is a figure in Ez. i. 22; Rev. iv. 6; xxi. 11, etc.

CUCK'OO (Heb. SHACHAPH), Lev. xi.; Deut. xiv.). The Arabs think its note sounds like yakoob, and so call it Jacob's bird. It migrates, and winters in Palestine. Tristram suggests the shore petrel as the bird of the Hebrew text.

CU'-CUM-BER (Heb. KISHUIM, heavy, hard to digest). Grown only in the fertile land which is overflowed by the Nile, and is esteemed the coolest and most pleasant fruit in the East (Is. i. 8).

CUM'BER. Overload, harrass (Luke x. 40).

CUM'BRANCE. Burden (Deut. i. 12).

CUM'MIN (Heb. KAMMON). An umbelliferous plant (fennel), bearing aromatic seeds, like anise, coriander, dill and caraway. Used as a styptic after circumcision. Cultivated for export (Is. xxviii. 25; Matt. xxiii. 23).

CUP OF THE PTOLEMIES.

CUP (Heb. 1. COS, 2. KESAOTH, 3. GEBIA; Greek, poterion). The designs were imitated from those of Egypt and Assyria, Phœnicia, etc., as shown by the Scriptures and specimens from antiquity. They were of metal, earthenware, wood, etc. The "sea" or "laver" of Solomon's temple was called a cup, and was of brass (bronze?), and highly ornamented with sculptured lilies.

EGYPTIAN CUPS.

Nos. 1, 2, 3. From paintings at Thebes, Egypt. 4. Porcelain. 5. Green earthenware. 6. Coarse pottery. 7. Wood. 8. Arragonite. 9. Earthen. Bronze cups (and other vessels) are often found in the ancient tombs. A kind of stone was wrought into jugs and bottles, vases and cups at Alabastron, in Upper Egypt, now called alabaster. Matt. xxvi. 7, should read alabaster vase, not box. The "Cup of the Ptolemies" is a work of the time of Nero, 5 inches high, of a single sardonyx, set in a base. See SIDON and ALABASTER.

ASSYRIAN CUPS.

1. Lion head, Khorsabad. 2. Lion-head with handle. 3. From Khorsabad, all of bronze. 4. Red pottery, Nimroud. 5. Painted cup, Karamles. 6, 7. Bronze, Nimroud. The workmanship is excellent, and they are often ornamented with jewels, and embossed with sculptures of animals, or groups of men and animals. Cups of brass and silver are now in use all over the East; generally decorated with some sentence in Arabic of a mystical sense. See BOTTLES and BOWLS.

The office of CUP-BEARER is of great antiquity, being mentioned at the courts of the Pharaoh, the Assyrian, Persian, and Jewish kings. RABSHAKEH of 2 K. xviii. 17, should read chief cupbearer, as in Luther's bible, (der Erzschenke). The cup is used as a figure: of a man's lot (Ps. xi. 6, etc.); of a nation's great riches (Jer. li. 7); as a contrast in "cup of God," true worship, and "cup of devils" idolatry (Ps. lxxv. 8; Is. li. 17, 22); signifying afflictions (Matt. xx. 22, xxvi. 39); of salvation (Ps. cxvi. 13), and of blessing (Luke xxii. 17; 1 Cor. x. 16).

CUN'NING. Skilful, expert, as a workman (Gen. xxv. 27).

CUR'TAIN (Heb. TERIAH), were made of linen, goats' hair, silk, and cotton; used for beds, partitions in tents, and for doors in houses. Heaven compared to a curtain (Ps. civ. 2; Is. xl. 22). The curtains of the tabernacle were embroidered with many colors, in figures on fine linen. Curtains of Solomon (Cant. i. 5).

CUSH. Son of Ham (Gen. x. 6). Country in Africa. Ethiopia (Ez. xxxix. 10; 2 Chr. xii. 3). Tirhakah, king of C. (Is. xxxvii. 9). Modern name Kesh. Geez. People were black (Jer. xiii. 23).

CUSH'ITE. "Ethiopian" (Num. xii. 1).

CUTH'AH. CUTH. In Asia. Shalmaneser transplanted people from here to Samaria during the Jews' captivity (2 K. xvii. 24, 30). Mixing with the Jews of the 10 tribes they became the Samaritans, and were called Cuthæans (Jos. Ant. ix. 14, § 3, xi. 8, § 6, xii. 5, § 5). Between Tigris and Euphrates rivers.

CUT'TINGS IN THE FLESH. Mutilations of the body, practised by the Heathens in mourning for the dead (Jer. xvi. 6, 7, xli. 5); prohibited to the Jews (Lev. xix. 28).

CY'A-MON (beans). Tell Kaimon on the E. slope of Mt. Carmel (Judith, vii. 3; Chelmon in Doway V). Burial place of Jair.

CYM'BAL and CYM'BALS. MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.

CY'PRUS. Island off the coast of Phœnicia and Cilicia, 148 miles long, 40 wide, and irregular; (see map). The highest mountain is Olympus, 7000 feet. Gold, silver, and copper are mined. Its cities were, Salamis, Citium (now Larneka), and Paphos (now Baffa), and many others. Alexander got 120 ships there for his siege of Tyre. It was the birth-place of Barnabas (Acts iv. 36), and was visited by Barnabas and Paul (Acts xiii). The Pagans worshiped Astarte (Venus), in a licentious manner. Barnabas and Mark (Acts xv). Cyprians, the people, in 2 Macc. iv. 29.

CY'RENE. Lybia, Africa. Founded B.C. 632, by Greeks. Built on a table-land 1800 ft. above the sea, in a region of great beauty and fertility, 500 ms. W. of Alexandria. The Pentapolis of Cyrenaica were Cyrene, Apollonia, Ptolemais, Arsinoe, and Berenice (Strabo, xvii.). After Alexander the Great's death Jews were settled there with many privileges. In the time of Christ the Cyreneans had a synagogue in Jerusalem (Acts vi. 9; Philo). Simon, who bore the cross, was from C. (Matt. xxviii., etc.). Lucius of C. was with Paul and Barnabas (xiii. 1). Lucius and Mark are named as bishops of the church at C. Arabic name Ghrenna.

CYRE'NIUS (Latin). Publius Sulpicus Quirinus was governor of Syria twice: before A. D. 1 (B. C. 4); and again, the second time, A. D. 6. Died A. D. 21 (Luke ii. 2).

CY'RUS. The Persian name for the sun (Heb. KORESH), and the same as the Egyptian name Phrah. Thus, Cyrus is a title for the king, as Pharaoh, Augustus, etc. The Bible mentions only the one who conquered Babylon, unless the Cyrus, the Persian, of Daniel, was the uncle of Cyrus, who issued the decree permitting the return of the captive Jews to Judæa. It is impossible to separate the history of Cyrus from the fables connected with it, and now more than when Herodotus found the same difficulty, only a century after the events.

The work of a resident historian, Ctesias, in the court of Persia, about fifty years later than Herodotus, has been lost, except a few extracts by Photius, and that of Xenophon, are both historical romances.

That he became supreme king of Persia, and conquered Babylon, is undoubted. The turning of the course of the river Euphrates and capture of Babylon during a great feast, are also facts.

Daniel's Darius, the Mede, is the Astyages of history, and was a viceroy of the Cyrus who first ruled over Babylon.

It is supposed that the Persian religion, which is almost purely a monotheism, prepared Cyrus to sympathize with the Jews, and that Daniel's explanation of the prophecies, that he had been helping to fulfil, unknown to himself, concluded him to issue the decree for the Jews' return to their native land and temple.

D

DAB'AREH (Josh. xxi. 28). DABERATH.

DAB'BA-SHETH (hump of a camel). Town on a hill. ZEBULON.

DAB'ERATH. Is. Lev. (Josh. xxi. 28). Now Deburieh, W. of Mt. Tabor. Beautifully situated on a rocky platform, with Tabor behind and the broad plain of Esdrælon in front. Boundary of Zebulon (Josh. xix. 12).

DAB'RIA. One of 5 scribes employed by Esdras (2 Esd. xiv. 24).

DĂCŌ'BI (1 Esd. v. 28). AKKUB.

DAD'DEUS. SADDEUS (1 Esd. viii. 45). IDDO.

DAGON.—FROM A GEM.

DĀ'GON (Heb. DAG, little fish, dear). The type of the god of the Philistines. His temples were at Gaza and Ashdod (Judg. xvi. 21; 1 Sam. v. 5). Traces of the worship are left in the names Cephar-dagon and Beth-dagon. Sanconiatho says the name is derived from dagon, grain, and it was the god of agriculture: but this origin does not agree so well with the idea, which was to multiply, increase, as fish do by millions. This god was known in Assyria, and is sculptured there, as shown in the large cut. Miss Fanny Corbeaux ("The Rephaim") shows that the Chaldean Oannes, the Philistine Dagon, and Egyptian On, are identical. DERCETO was the female (as Dagon was the male), and was worshiped at Ashkelon. She had a woman's face, and fish-body. Atergatis, Argatis, Arathis, and Argata, are different forms of Derceto.

DAGON, THE FISH GOD.

DAI'SAN (1 Esd. v. 31). Error for REZIN.

DALĀ'IAH (Jehovah delivers). Son of Elioenai, of Judah (1 Chr. iii. 24).

DALE (Gen. xiv. 17): valley.

DĂLMANŪ'THA. On the shore of the Sea of Galilee; visited by Jesus (Mark, viii. 10). Near Magdala. Possibly it is the same as Zalmon, near Tiberias, now called Ain el Barideh (the cold fountain), where are fine fountains and the ruins of a city (Rob. ii. 396).

DĂLMĀ'TIA. Illyricum. On the E. shore of the Adriatic Sea, N. W. of Greece. Visited by Paul Rom. xv. 19), and Titus (2 Tim. iv. 10) during Paul's imprisonment in Rome.

DĂL'PHON. Son of HAMAN (Esth. ix. 7).

DĀ'MA. Capital of the Ledja. See TRACHONITIS.

DAM'ĂRIS (heifer). A disciple in Athens (Acts xvii. 34), and (perhaps) the wife of Dionysius the Areopagite. Correctly, DAMALIS.

DĂMĂS'CUS. On the E. of Anti-Lebanon, 2,200 feet above the sea, in a fertile plain near the desert. The oldest city known to history. It is cut through by the Barada river, which divides into many branches, and together with the Helbon on the N. and the Awaj on the S., fertilizes a region 30 ms. in extent, which being favored by the finest climate, produces almost every valuable product of forest, field, or garden. First mentioned in Gen. xiv. 15 and in Gen. xv. 2, as the city of Abraham's steward. For 800 yrs., from Abraham to David, the Scriptures are silent on Damascus. David put a garrison in D. (1 K. xi. 23; 2 Sam. viii. 6; Jos. Ant. vii. 5, § 2). During Asa's reign Benhadad pillaged cities in Naphtali (1 K. xv. 19, 20). After this it is mentioned many times. Naaman the leper, who was cured by Elisha the prophet, was of D. (2 K. v. 1). The Assyrian king, Tiglath Pilē'ser, took the city and carried captive the people to Kir (2 K. xvi. 7–9). Isaiah's prophesy (xvii. 3; Amos i. 4, 5). Jeremiah described it, B. C. 600: "D. is waxed feeble, and turneth herself to flee, and fear hath seized on her" (xlix. 24). At the time of the Apostle Paul the city was under Roman rule, and Aretas, the Arabian, king (2 Cor. xi. 22; Jos. Ant. xvi. 11, § 9). Has now 150,000 people: Christians 15,000; Jews, 6,000

The fine fabrics of D. were celebrated as early as 800 B. C. (Amos iii. 12). The damask silk and sword-blades are still famous. Certain localities are pointed out as having a historical connection with Paul's time. The "street called straight" is now the street of Bazaars; there is a "house of Judas;" the house of Ananias; the scene of the conversion, which is an open green spot surrounded with trees, now used as a Christian burial-ground; the place where Paul was let down by the wall in a basket; and also several spots connected with the history of the prophet Elisha. The old city stands on the S. bank of the principal river, surrounded by a ruinous wall of ancient Roman foundations, and a patchwork of all the succeeding ages. The city is splendid, when viewed at a distance, but the houses are rudely built; the narrow streets, paved with big rough stones, or not at all, partly roofed across with mats, or withered branches: the bazaars are covered ways with a few stalls on both sides, each trade having its own quarter. Although rough and rude on the street, yet the interior of the private houses is neat, paved, with fountain and fruit-trees, with grateful shade, and the rooms opening from the court decorated with carving, gilding, and all that wealth and taste can provide. Modern name ESH SHAUM.

DAMASCENES. Inhabitants of Damascus (2 Cor. xi. 32).

DAMNATION (condemnation), (Mark xvi. 16).

DA'MON. Near Shefa Amer. E. of Acre.

DAN (judge). Fifth son of Jacob. First son of Bilhah, Rachel's maid (Gen. xxx. 6.) One of the twelve tribes. The last to receive its portion, and the least portion, but among the most fertile in the land.—2. The city originally called LAISH. LESHEM (Josh. xix. 47). They were idolaters from the beginning (Gen. xiv. 14; Deut. xxxiv. 1; Judg. xviii). The worship was continued by Jeroboam (1 K. xii. 29, 30; Amos viii. 14). "From Dan to Beersheba," was the common form of speaking of the extent of Palestine (Judg. xx. 1; 1 Sam. iii. 20, etc.). Tell el Kadi (judge's mound) is the modern name, and is a long, steep hill, covered with ruins, from the base of which flows one of the largest fountains in the world (Rob. 396).

DANCE (Heb. MACHOL), to move or leap in a circle, twist or turn around, as the dancing Dervishes now do in the East. The sacred song and dance always go together (Ex. xv. 20); words, and music and motion, aiding each other in expressing the joy or sorrow of the soul (Judg. xi. 34; Eccl. iii. 4). The Romans also danced in their worship; so, also, the Egyptians.

In the modern Oriental dance a woman leads off, and goes through a number of graceful and artistic attitudes, and then all the others of the party follow her in every motion. The two companies of dancers are called by an error armies in Cant. vi. 13.

DAN'IEL (God's Judge). 1. David's son (1 Chr. iii. 1).—2. A Levite (Ezra viii. 2).—3. A celebrated prophet in the Chaldean and Persian period, and a (princely) descendant of Judah. He was taken with other captives (Ananiah, Mishael, and Azariah) to Babylon, B. C. 607, at the age of 12 to 16, educated thoroughly and made a cupbearer at the court, when he was given a new name Belshatzar (favorite of Bel). He kept the Jewish law of clean and unclean meat (Dan. i. 8, 16), and was constant and faithful in his devotions to God. After three years service he interpreted a dream (v. 17) on the occasion of the king's decree against the magi, and for this service was made "ruler" and "chief governor" over the province and magistrates of Babylon. He interpreted Nebuchadnezzar's second dream, and the handwriting on the wall, thus introducing the knowledge of the true God, and alluding to the profane use (and consequent insult to God) of the holy vessels of the temple, as one of the crowning sins of the king and his people, which were the means of ending the nation's life, by the conquest of the Medes and Persians (v. 10, 28), while he lived at Susa, and after he had been removed from office, when he was again placed in one of the highest offices of trust and honor. During an interval in which no event in Daniel's life is recorded, his three companions were delivered from a fiery furnace.

Darius made him first of the three presidents of the empire. Having exercised the rites of his religious faith, contrary to law, he was thrown to the lions, but was delivered alive (vi. 10, 23). He was in favor with the king in the third year of Cyrus, and saw his last vision on the banks of the Tigris (B. C. 534), when the prophesy of the 70 weeks was delivered to him (ch. ix.). He died at the age of over 90, at Susa, where there was a monument to his memory in the 12th century, described by Benjamin of Tudela.

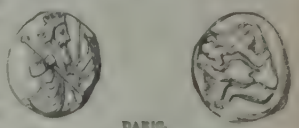
DANJĂ'AN (Ps. ii. 26). LAISH.

DAN'NAH. Town in Judah (Josh. xv. 49), S. W. of Hebron. Lost.

DAPH'NE. A grove and sanctuary sacred to Apollo, 5 miles S. W. of Antioch, Syria, founded by Seleucus Nicator. See ANTIOCH. The right of asylum—where criminals could shelter themselves from justice, because it was thought to be sacrilege to take any one away by force—was an honor attached to this place (2 Macc. iv. 33). The sacred right was often violated, especially when a good man sought safety from the wicked, as in the case of Onias. Now called Beit el Mau—house of water (Jos. Wars, i. 12, § 5).

DĂ'RA. DARDA. Son of Mahol; a wise man, in Solomon's age (1 K. iv. 31). Son of Zerach (1 Chr. ii. 6). Strach or Esrachite?

DĂR'IC. Gold coin of Persia, current in Palestine after the captivity (Ezr. ii. 69; viii. 27; Neh. vii. 70, etc.). The darics that have been found among the ruins are thick pieces of pure gold, stamped, as in the engraving. The gold pieces found at Sardis are of older date, and were made by Crœsus. The name daric may be derived from "DARA," the Persian name for king, or from "Darius, the king." Plutarch mentions silver darics. See MONEY.



DARIC.

DA-RĪ'US (in Heb. DARJAVESH). The Assyrian title lord-king—Dara, lord; shah, king. 1. The first mentioned is DARIUS, THE MEDE (Dan. v. 31, etc.), called also Cyăx'ăres (B. C. 538). The gold coin was named Daric—that is, king's money.—2. DARIUS, SON OF HYS-TAS-PES (Vashtaspa), made king B. C. 521. He conquered Babylon, Scythia, Libya, Thrace, Macedonia and some of the islands in the Ægean sea, but the Greeks defeated him at Marathon (B. C. 490). Died B. C. 485 (Ezr. iv. 7.).—3. DARIUS, THE PERSIAN. Darius II, Nothus, king of Persia, B. C. 424–404. Perhaps DARIUS CODOMANUS (Neh. xii. 22).

DARK'NESS. Opposite of light, absence of light (Gen. i. 2). Three times mentioned in the Bible. In Genesis, at the creation; at the Exodus, as one of the plagues of Egypt, and at the crucifixion. Used as a figure of adversity and misery (Job xviii. 6; Ps. cvii. 10). "Works of darkness," heathen rites and ceremonies (Eph. v. 11), "outer darkness," shut out of heaven (which is glorious with light).

DAR'KON. Children of Darkon were among the servants of Solomon, who returned from the captivity (Ezr. ii. 56).

DARLING. My only one (Ps. xxii. 20).

DĂ'ROM (south), (Deut. xxxiii. 23). Naphtali was to possess the sea and Darom. Jerome and others so name Philistia and the plain toward Egypt.

DĂ'RON (south). Fort built by the Crusaders at Deir el Belah (convent of dates), near Gaza, on ancient ruins).

DĂTES. Fruit of the palm tree, called clusters in Cant. vii. 7, and honey in 2 Chr. xxxi. 5, dates in the margin. In many parts of Arabia the staple product and the main source of landed wealth, is the date-palm, of which there are many species. The ripening season is August and September. The fruit is a substitute for the bread of other countries. To cut down the date trees is a great achievement in war—and the absence of those trees from Palestine indicates a long period of wars and an unsettled condition. To plant the palm on new ground is a sign of prosperity—as now in Egypt. The Arabs believe the tree is a blessing granted only to them, and denied to all other people. Mohammed taught, "Honor the date tree, she is your mother." There are 139 varieties, 70 of which are well known, each of which has its peculiar name. Some six kinds are superior. El Shelebi, the best, are two inches long, with small stones. The value in Arabia is about three cents a pound.

DĂTH'AN (fountain). Chief in Reuben, who joined Korah in rebellion against Moses and Aaron.

DĀTH'EMA. Fort in Gilead (1 Macc. v. 9), near Mizpeh.

DAUGH'TER. 1. Female offspring; of the wife; or adopted; or of a sister; or of a cousin (Ruth iii. 18; Gen. xxxiv. 17); or a grand-daughter.—2. The female inhabitants of a place, or those who hold the faith of a certain place, as "daughters of Zion" (Is. iii. 16), "daughters of the Philistines," "daughters of Jerusalem," "daughters of Aaron" (Num. xxv. 1; 2 Sam. i. 20; Luke i. 5). Cities were named or spoken of under female names, and were said to have daughters, suburbs or villages near. A vine had daughters (branches, in Gen. xlix. 22). Sarah was the daughter of 90 years—that is, she was 90 years old.

DAVID (below). SYNOPSIS OF HIS LIFE. Born at Bethlehem in Judah, B. C. 1084. His father, Jesse; his mother's name not recorded (1 Sam. xvi. 10, 17, 58). Had 7 elder brothers—Eliab, Abinadab, Shammah, Nethaneel, Raddai, Ozem, and Elihu; and two sisters—Zeruiah, and Abigail.

He watched the flocks in the field, and in their defense killed a lion and a bear. He was short, light, "comely," had red hair and blue eyes; was strong, and swift of foot; valiant and prudent.

At a yearly family feast he was anointed king by Samuel "from the sheep-cote" (2 Sam. vii. 8). He went to carry food to his three brothers in Saul's army, and was introduced to the king as valiant and brave. He killed Goliath with a stone from a sling. The sword and armor of the giant were first taken to his tent in Bethlehem, afterwards to Nob, and laid up in the Tabernacle (Ps. viii. 19, 29). Saul takes David into his service as a minstrel. Jonathan, his friend. Women sing his praise as superior to Saul. Saul jealous; seeks twice to kill David. Being afraid of David he made him captain of 1,000. David behaved wisely, and all Israel and Judah loved him. Merab is offered to David as a wife as a reward for his service against Goliath, the Philistine. But Saul gave Merab to Adriel. Michal, Saul's daughter, loved David, and Saul offered her to David for a price, and David paid double the price, for he killed 200 Philistines. He paid twice for his wife, killed Goliath and the 200. He is made armor-bearer and captain of the body guard, with a place at the king's table. Saul seeks to kill him; sets men to watch for him; Michal assists his escape. Goes to Ramah to Samuel (Ps. lix). Michal is given to Phaltiel. Secret meeting with Jonathan. The sign of the arrow. David flies. Saul tries to take him at Ramah. David eats consecrated bread, and gets Goliath's sword at Nob (Ps. lii); against Doeg, who informed against David and killed the priests. David goes to Abimelech (Achish), and feigning madness, escapes (Ps. xxxiv. 56). In the cave of Adullam. Joined by his family beside outlaws, debtors, etc. The incident of the water at Bethlehem (1 Chr. xi. 17). Moves to Herodium or to Masada. Takes his parents to the king of Moab; (they are never mentioned again). Nahash, of Ammon, treats him kindly. Gadites swim the Jordan at its flood and join him. God influences a move to the forest of Hareth. Amasai, a Benjamite, joins him. Relieves Keilah, where Abiathar the priest joins him with an ephod. His troop is now 600. Saul appears; David flies to Ziph.

Twice the Ziphim betray him to Saul, who hunts him "like a partridge" with 3,000 men (Ps. liv.), in the wilderness of Maon. Sees Saul two or three times, once at the cliff of divisions, again in a cave near Engedi, when he cuts off his skirt, and then in a fortified camp, when David carried off by night the water-jar and spear from Saul's bedside.

Twice Saul repented, and said he was reconciled to David. Psalms of this date liv., lvii., lxiii., cxlii. Nabal and Abigail; marries Ahinoam, and Abigail.

DAVID'S TOMB, MOUNT ZION.

David again goes to Achish, with his troop. Achish gives him Ziklag. Benjamite archers join him. Studies the Philistines' art of war. Attacks the Bedawins to deceive Achish. Philistine nobles suspicious, and cause him to be sent back from the army. Saul and Jonathan killed on Gilboa. Manassites join David. Amalekites plunder Ziklag. Abiathar prophesies victory, and David recovers the spoil from the Amalekites. Makes a present to many friends, whose places "he was wont to haunt." Makes a law of division of the spoils (1 Sam. xxx.). News of the battle on Gilboa: kills the messenger. Laments for Saul and Jonathan. David anointed king at Hebron (30 years old). Thanked the men of Jabesh-Gilead for burying Saul. ISHBOSHETH, king in Mahanaim. David the only king west of Jordan. War between the two sections. Abner kills Asahel, David's nephew: Abner quarrels with Ishbosheth, and comes to David. Michal restored to David. Abner and Ishbosheth murdered. David executes the two assassins. Reigned in Hebron 7½ years. David crowned (3d time) king of all Israel (Ps. lxxviii., lxx.). Constitutional law. Festival 3 days; the tribes send produce, fruits, etc., to the feast, and contingents to the army, which was "like the host of God" (1 Chr. xii. 22). Joab (his nephew) commander: Issacharites his counselors. Jehoiada and Zadok join him. (Ps. xxvii.). Jebus taken. Joab made commander-in-chief. Royal residence in the City of David—Zion. His wives were increased by hostages from surrounding princes. Two attacks by Philistines repulsed: their idols burned. Hiram of Tyre an ally: sends cedar-wood for David's palace.

The ark removed from Kirjath Jearim—Obed Edom. The new Tabernacle on Zion; the old left standing at Gibeon. The great assembly on Zion. Musical art developed. Zadok and Abiathar. Nathan the prophet. David, as a priest and minstrel, in the procession. He blesses the people from the new Tabernacle on Zion (Ps. xv. xxiv., xxix., xxx., lxviii., ci., cxxxii.): "The Lord of Hosts, he is the King of Glory" (Ps. xxiv., x.). Michal reproaches him, and is rebuked. God's house designed. Prophesy by Nathan of a Messiah (2 Sam. vii. 12–17). David organizes a court and camp. Mephibosheth cared for, in memory of Jonathan. Hanun, son of Nahash, abuses David's messengers. Ammon and Syria beaten. Joab commander-in-chief (1 Chr. xi. 6): 12 divisions of 24,000 men, one for each month, all infantry, without cavalry. Chain armor in use. Benaiah captain of David's body-guard, the Cherethites and Pelethites—Ittai. The band of 600 continued as Gibborim, heroes; Abishai, David's nephew, captain. Social and moral institutions formed. Ahithophel and Jonathan, Hushai, Shera the scribe, Jehoshaphat, and Adoram, councillors. Gad the seer and Nathan the prophet advisers. Abiathar and Zadok high priests; the musicians, under Asaph, Heman, and the Levites, guardians of the gates and treasures. The Philistines, Moabites, Syrians, Edomites (Ps. lx.), and Ammonites, subdued. Rabbah taken. David wears the gold crown of Milcom (Ps. xxi. 3, lxxxix. 39). Uriah murdered. Nathan's rebuke (Ps. xxii. 51), "Thou art the man." Bathsheba taken. David fasts for his sick child. The child dies: "I shall go to him, but he shall not return to me." Solomon, "the peaceful," born, (Ps. xx. 21). Educated by Nathan the prophet. His daughter Tamar outraged; his eldest son Amnon murdered. Absalom fled to Geshur. The artifice of Joab and the widow of Tekoa, to restore Absalom. Absalom waits two years to see his father; burning Joab's field, is brought to the king. Absalom plots—rebels: David a wanderer again. Leaves the city; a vast multitude go with him. Ittai the faithful, Zadok and Abiathar with the ark, which David sent back. Hushai, "the friend", sent to watch Ahithophel (grandfather of Bathsheba), who was untrue.

Absalom arrives from Hebron. At Bahurim, Ziba's deceit—Shimei's curses. David rested in the Jordan valley, near the ford (Ps. iii. 143). They cross the Jordan to Mahanaim (Ps. xlii.) against Ahithophel (lv., lxix., cix.). Barzillai, Shobi, and Machir his friends. Ahithophel kills himself. Joab, Abishai, and Ittai, were there. Amasa, David's nephew, was with Absalom. Battle in the forest of Ephraim. Absalom killed by Joab. David waiting in the gate. The two messengers, Ahimaaz, and Cushi. David vows to supersede Joab by Amasa. The return to Jerusalem. Shimei forgiven. Mephibosheth partly reinstated; Barzillai rewarded in his son Chimham. Judah and Israel are reconciled.

Sheba's rebellion. David's ten women shut up. Amasa sent to assemble the militia. The forces sent after Sheba. Joab killed Amasa. Sheba's head cast out of Abel. Adoram over the tribute; Jehoshaphat, recorder; Sheva, scribe; Zadok and Abiathar, priests; and Ira, a chief ruler.

A famine of three years on account of the Gibeonites' murder by Saul. David delivered 7 sons of Saul to be hanged, as an atonement. The bones of Saul and Jonathan buried in Zelah. David grows faint in the fight with the Philistines. Ishbibenob, the giant, thought to kill David. Abishai kills the giant. Psalm of thanksgiving (2 Sam. xxii.).

David numbered the people unlawfully, in pride. Joab and the captains opposed it. Gad, the prophet, warns of 3 calamities; David would not choose, and the 3 days' pestilence killed 70,000, and was stayed at the threshing-floor of Ornan. David bought the site for a sanctuary, and it is now marked by an ancient church—the Dome of the Rock (see JERUSALEM). David renews his resolve to build a house for the Lord, and gathers materials. Charges Solomon with the solemn duty (1 Chr. xxii.).

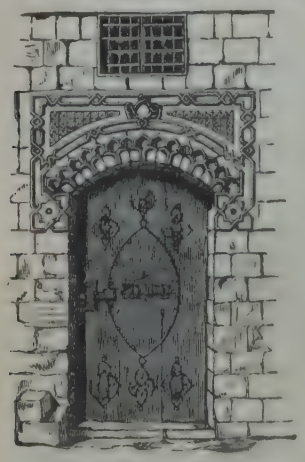
The young Abishag. Adonijah's rebellion. Joab and Abiathar helped (Ps. xcii. 2). By David's order Solomon is anointed king at Gihon. Adonijah pardoned by Solomon. David's last song (2 Sam. xxiii. 1-7). David's last words (1 K. ii. 1-9), describe the perfect ruler fearing God. Died at the age of 70. Buried "between Siloah and the guard-house." Reigned in Jerusalem 33 years (Neh. iii. 16). The site of his tomb is lost.



EGYPTIAN DOOR.

DAVID'S FAMILY.—1. Michal (no children, 2 Sam. vi.). 2. Ahinoam—son Amnon (1 Chr. iii. 1). 3. Abigail—son Daniel (ib.) Maachah—son Absalom, 3 sons died. Tamar (2 Sam. xiii.). 5. Haggith—son Adonijah (2 Sam. iii.). 6. Abital—son Shephatiah (1 Chr. iii.). 7. Eglah—son Ithream. Sons whose mothers are not named: Ibhar, Elishua, Eliphelet, Nogah, Nepheg, Japhia, Elishama, Eliada, Eliphalet and Jerimoth (1 Chr. xiv. 7; 2 Chr. xi. 18). 8. Bathsheba—sons: one died—Shammua, Shobab, Nathan and Jedidjah or Shelomoh = Solomon (2 Sam. xii. 25). The children of the 10 concubines, and their mothers, are not named. There is no reason to suppose he had more than eight wives. The text of 2 Sam. v. 13, probably refers to Michal, Bathsheba and the 10 women whom he took at Jerusalem.

David was a soldier, shepherd, poet, prophet, priest, statesman and king, a romantic friend, chivalrous leader, devoted father. He represents the Jewish people at the point of the change from the lofty writers of their older system to the higher civilization of the newer, and was a type of the Messiah, who is called the Son of David.

David as king is almost above reproach; his private life only proved him a man. Next to Abraham's, David's is the most dearly cherished name of all the ancient patriarchs. The Psalms, whether his own or others' writings, have been the source of consolation and instruction far beyond any other of the holy scriptures, and are the only expressions of devotion that have been equally used by all branches of the Christian church and by the Jews.

It is now thought that the saying that David was a man after God's own heart meant only that he was chosen, while Saul was rejected—and his excellence as a king justified the choice.

The noble qualities of his soul, his sublime piety, which was the habit of his life, his intense struggle against fiery passions, and his mournful remorse over occasional sins, far outweighed his faults.

Because he passed through temptation, passion and humiliation, we are instructed and comforted; and through the divine psalms which he wrote we are provided with language for our times of distress and trouble.

DĀY. See CHRONOLOGY.

DĀY'S JOURNEY. SABBATH. See MEASURES.

DĀYS'MAN. Arbitrator; one to appeal to (Job. ix. 33).

DAVID, CITY OF. Zion in Jerusalem, and also Bethlehem.

DĒACON. Assistant, helper. Christ is called a deacon (A. V. minister, Rom. xv. 8). The Apostles appointed officers and made rules as circumstances required. The 7 deacons appointed to care for the widows (serving tables), had special duties which passed away with the occasion. But there was then a difference made between the ministers of spiritual and of material things. They also assisted at the communion by carrying the food and drink to the members. They received the contributions: cared for the sacred vessels; read the gospel sometimes, and baptized. They were to be grave, venerable, of good report in life, sincere, truthful, temperate, not using their office for profit, keeping the faith in a pure conscience, husband of one wife, ruling their children and house well (1 Tim. iii.; Acts vi.).

DĒA'-CON-ESS. (Rom. vi.) The records show that they were useful in the early centuries—a service which was afterwards absorbed into the nunneries.

DEAD SEA. This name is first met in history, about 200 years after Christ. In the O. T. it is called the Salt Sea, sea of the Plain. See SALT SEA.

DĒATH. 1. Natural death; end of the life of the body. 2. Spiritual death; insensible to holiness; alienation from God (Matt. viii. 22; Eph. ii; Rom. vi. 21). The poetic expressions are "return to dust" (Gen. iii. 19); "removal from the body" (Job x. 21); "asleep" (Jer. li. 39; John xi. 11); "losing the breath" (Ps. civ. 29); "the soul laying off its clothing" (2 Cor. v. 3); "to depart" (Phil. i. 23); "for a great trial" (2 Cor i. 10). GATES OF DEATH (Job xxxviii. 17); doors of the shadow. Some believe that we should be able to live forever if we did not break God's law. But the Bible is a spiritual book and not a treatise on Natural History.

DEB'IR (oracle). 1. Ancient royal city of Canaan (Josh. x. 33). Kirjath-Sepher (book city). Now Dilbeh, 6 ms. S. W. of Hebron, where there is a fine spring and aqueduct.—2. Judah near the valley of Achor. Wady Dabor at the N. W. corner of the Dead Sea (Josh. xv. 7).—3. Boundary of Gad, near Mahanaim. Lo-debar (Josh. xiii. 26). 4. A king of Eglon, hanged by Joshua (x. 3).

DEB'ORA. Mother of Tobiel, the father of Tobit (Tobit i. 8).

DEB'ORAH (bee). 1. Rebekah's nurse (Gen. xxxv. 8). Buried under an oak, called Allon-bachuth.—2. A prophetess, wife of Lapidoth who lived near a palm tree between Ramah and Bethel (Judg. iv. 4). She composed a song (ch. v.) in memory of the victory over Sisera (by Barak and Deborah), which, for poetic beauty is much valued, and gives her the title of prophetess (singer).

DEBT'OR. The strict law of inheritance, of Moses, provided against commercial speculation and debts, by requiring all landed property and slaves to be freed on the year of jubilee (7th) (Lev. xxv. 39). No debtor could be sent to prison, or whipped, or oppressed unfairly, except by breaking the law. In Egypt the creditor could send the debtor to prison, and seize his family tomb, and prevent burials there. The Roman laws were very severe against the debtor, and hard on slaves (made by debt). Bankers and sureties in the commercial sense were unknown (Prov. xxii. 26). No interest could be lawfully taken from a poor person, but relief was to be given, without price, laws being made to prevent evading this rule (Ex. xxii. 25; Lev. xxv. 35, etc.). Nehemiah corrected such abuses (Neh. v.) and Jesus approved the law of Moses, although in the later times the custom of usury had become popular, and even had their tables in the courts of the temple. Loans could be secured by pledges, under certain rules: 1. The cloak, which was used day and night by the poor, must be returned at sundown. A bedstead (a luxury) might be taken (Ex. xxii.); no widow's garments, or a millstone, could be taken (Deut. xxiv. 6, 17). The creditor could not enter a house for his pledge but must wait outside (Deut. xxiv. 10). Debtors held as slaves must be released at the jubilee, and might be redeemed for a price. Foreign slaves were not released (Lev. xxv. 44). A year was allowed to redeem houses sold for debt. The Romans superseded the law of the jubilee year, and the debtor could be held in prison until the last farthing was paid (Matt. v. 26).

DEC'ALOGUE (ten words). TEN COMMANDMENTS (Ex. xx.). The basis of all laws. The number ten was regarded as perfect or complete, therefore the TEN GREAT WORDS were the perfect law of God (Ps. xix, 7) given on Sinai. They were cut on two tables of stone, and kept for several centuries in the ark, in the very centre of the holy place, as a symbol of the centre of the whole system. The two tables indicate a division of the law, into duties towards God, and duties toward our neighbor (Matt. xx. 37-39). Some critics point out more than twenty decalogues in the laws of Moses. See LEVITICUS in the HISTORY.

DECAP'OLIS (ten cities). Mentioned three times in the N. T. (Matt. iv. 25; Mark v. 20, vii. 31), and many times in Josephus and other ancient writers. Soon after the Romans conquered Palestine they rebuilt and colonized ten cities, and gave them especial privileges. The list of the names of these ten cities is given differently by various writers. Pliny names Scythopolis, Hippos, Gadara, Pella, Philadelphia, Gerasa, Dion, Canatha, Damascus, and Raphana. Ptolemy includes Capitolias; and an inscription in Palmyra makes Abila one. The name was probably given to a large district in Christ's time. Damascus is the only one of the ten cities left, all the others being in ruins.

SYRIANS.

DĒ'DAN (low country). 1. Son of Raamah, grandson of Cush (Gen. x. 7). An island on the shore of the Persian Gulf is called Dadan, and another Sheba.—2. A son of Jokshan, grandson of Abraham by Keturah (Gen. xxv. 3). In each case the brother is named Sheba, and both tribes may have intermarried and occupied the same country. "The traveling companies of Dedanim" of Is. xxi. 13, are caravans. They traded with Tyre (Ez. xxvii. 15, 20) in ivory, ebony and fine dry goods (precious cloths).

DED-I-CĀ'TION, FEAST OF THE. Instituted in memory of the purification of the temple by Judas Maccabæus after driving out the Syrians (B. C. 164), (1 Macc. iv. 52; Jer. x. 22). It lasted 8 days —Dec. 25 (chislev) to Jan. 3. Carrying branches of trees and singing, especially the Hallelujah song, every day.

DĒEP, THE. Abyss. Bottomless pit in A. V. (Luke viii. 31; Rev. ix. 1, 2, 11; xx. 1, 3; 2 Cor. xi. 25). In Rev. x. 6, 7, "ascend into heaven," "descend into the deep," the place of the dead. This does not include Hades, which is supposed to include the deep, which is, then, only a part of the great unknown place of the dead.

DE-GRĒE. 1 Tim. iii. 13, should read: "For they who well served as deacons obtain for themselves a good degree, and much confidence in faith in Christ Jesus." That is, in spiritual matters.

DEGREES, THE SONG OF (stairs or steps), is a title of 15 Psalms by different authors. Pilgrim songs, sung by the people as they went up to Jerusalem (Ex. xxxiv. 24; 1 K. xii. 27; Ezr. vii. 9; Ps. cxxii. 4). 5 were written by David (4) and Solomon (1), and the other 10 after the return from captivity. See Ps. cxx. to cxxxiv. See PSALMS in the HISTORY.

DE-HA'-VITES (villagers), (Ezr. iv. 9). Planted in Samaria by Assyria. Dahi (Herodotus i. 125), in Persia; and Daci, in Europe (Dacia).

DĒ'KAR. An officer of Solomon's in Judah (1 K. iv. 9).

DELĀ'IAH (Jehovah's freedman). 1. Priest in David's time, leader of the 23d course (1 Chr. xxiv. 18).—2. Children of D. returned from captivity (Ezr. ii. 60).—3. Son of Mehetable (Neh. vi. 10).—4. Son of Shemaiah, in Jehoikim's time (Jer. xxxvi. 12).

DELĪ'LAH (drooping, languishing). Samson's love; lived in the valley of Sorek, Philistia. She was a wily seducer, who loved the bribes and not her honor or her lover's safety, and captivated only to destroy. Her bribe was large—5,500 pieces of silver—shekels ($2,750), equal to $33,000 as to our standard of wages. See MONEY.

DĒL'UGE. Flood (Heb. HAMMABAL the fulness of waters), from yubal, a river (fulness). Deluge is used instead of flood.

The belief in a deluge of greater or less extent is of very ancient date, in all nations who have kept records, or have traditions. It is very often noticed in the Bible, as a fact from which a great lesson is to be learned (Matt. xxiv. 38), and its history is given in Gen. vi. viii. The account next in value to this is that of the Greeks (Ovid)—the flood of Deucalion and Pyrrha. The Hindus (Sir Wm. Jones, Asiatic Res. iii. 116) also have an account, which, with the Greek, agrees with that in Genesis in many points. The Chinese legend is not very parallel, but agrees in a few items. The Parsee account says the flood washed away all the wickedness which Ahrĭ-mân (the Evil One) had brought about. The Chaldee (Jos. Ap. i. 19), that Noa saved Sem, Japet, and Chem. The Assyrian is (Eusebius, Ev. Præp. c. ix.) similar. The Scandinavian, Mexican, Peruvian, and others, have each a story to tell, of a great flood, and a few persons saved.

The Scripture account is, that God sent the deluge as a punishment for sin, destroying all flesh but such as he directed Noah to place in the ark. The time occupied was 358 days, 7 days less than our year, or a year and ten days by the Jews' calendar. The present majority opinion is, that the subject has a moral rather than a physical character. That mankind had not spread beyond the valley of the Euphrates and Tigris, and Syria; and that the deluge only extended far enough to be universal as to mankind. There has been no evidence yet brought to light, such as human bones or teeth, proving any great destruction of life in this, or any other region, which can be dated to the time of the deluge. The size of the ark is a great argument against the deluge being so universal as to cover the whole globe. There are now known 1700 species of animals, about 1000 of which are clean, of whom 7 of each species were to be kept; 6000 species of birds, 1000 of reptiles, and 550,000 of insects; and the entire space in the ark—547 by 91 feet (21 inches to the cubit) three stories high—is 150,000 square feet, too small, by many times, for standing-room, besides food and storage. And how could 8 persons attend to so many animals daily? Many animals, some in the polar regions, others in the tropics, cannot bear a change of climate, even if they could be carried so far from their homes. Peculiar species belong to each quarter of the globe, whose ancestors have left their record in the ancient rocks, fossilized, showing an unbroken succession. It was also impossible to lay up provision for the wild beasts. Seeds and plants must have perished by so long a soaking in water, and fresh-water fish also, if covered by the salt ocean several months. The notion of a universal deluge is at variance with the light of reason. Geological records (in the rocks, etc.) show the results of many floods in the past history of the earth. Vast extents of the earth's surface have been raised or depressed in modern times (in Chili 100,000 sq. miles, 2 feet high), and the work of sinking is now going on in Holland. The temple of Jupiter, near Naples, shows that it has been sunk, with the island on which it stands, under the waters of the Bay of Baiæ, half its hight, by the holes halfway up the marble columns, all round the temple on a water-line, that were bored by a shell-fish that lives under water only. Those who suppose the deluge related only to the ancestors of the Hebrews, and had no reference to any other races, are answered by a denial of the remote antiquity of Egypt and Assyria. The evidences of the antiquity of Egypt and Assyria are far more convincing than any yet offered for the deluge. Only by limiting the deluge to a small part of the earth's surface, can the account of Moses be made to harmonize with science.

DĒLUS (G. delos, visible). The smallest of the Cyclades, islands in the Grecian Archipelago, the chief seat of the worship of Apollo and his sister Diana (1 Macc. xv. 23). The island was said to have suddenly appeared anciently, as several others have in our time. It was the centre of an extensive commerce B. C. 146.

DĒMAS, DEMETRIUS or DEMARCHUS. Companion to Paul (Philemon 24; Col. iv. 14; 2 Tim. iv. 10). One of Keble's grandest hymns is founded on the association of Demas and Luke with Paul in his earlier trials, and of the desertion of Demas after.

DE-MĒTRI-US (votary of Demeter, Ceres). Maker of silver shrines of Artemis at Ephesus (Acts xix. 24). They were small models of the great statue of Diana. He made an adroit speech against Paul, exciting their religious and selfish feelings against the new sect, which aimed to spoil the business of shrine-making.—2. Another Demetrius is commended by John as having a character so purely Christian as to carry its own testimony with it (3 John 12).—3. DEMETRIUS SOTER, king of Syria, son of Seleucus IV. (See SYRIA and ANTIOCHUS).—4. D. NICATOR, son of No. 3, who was excluded by Alexander Balas from the throne until B. C. 146. He first treated the Jews well, but afterwards so badly that they took sides with Antiochus Theos. Killed at Tyre, B. C. 126.

DĒMON (Gr. daimon, god). At first the Supreme, then a god, and later, to spirits believed to be between gods and men; a kind of messenger, who became tutelary deities of men and cities; and finally the notion of evil demons the latest form. Some believed they were the spirits of evil men after death. It was used to denote fortune, chance, fate. In the Hebrew it is used for a pestilence (Ps. xci. 6), idols (xcvi. 5; Lev. xix. 4), devils (Deut. xxxii. 17), God (troop in A. V.), the goddess of fortune (Is. lxv. 11), satyrs (Is. xiii. 21; xxxiv. 14). The Hebrews meant evil spirits. In the N. T. they are spiritual, evil, at enmity with God, having power to work evil to man with disease and sin, positively and actively wicked. Called devils in 1 Cor. x. 20; 1 Tim. iv. 1; Rev. ix. 20. The modern notion is that there is but one devil (Lardner), although demons are innumerable (Dr. Campbell). The devil, the old serpent, the adversary, satan, prince of the power of the air, etc., are one. God and his angels are opposed to the devil and his angels, the demons.

DELOS.

The angels are sent forth from God's presence to minister on earth to the heirs of salvation; it is the spirit of God which gives his people that character of life-giving and blessed fruits by which they are known; on the contrary, the devil and his demon agency are discovered in the strong delusions and grievous oppressions which men have suffered and do suffer from their power.

DE-MŌ NI-ACS. Men subject to the power of demons, and who are deaf, dumb, blind, epileptic, frenzied, hypochrondriac, imbecile, and suffer ills both of body and mind. Demons cannot be known to our senses, nor their powers distinguished from natural causes; and the few words about them in the scripture do not help to a clear idea of them. Some suppose that the demoniacs were madmen—under the influence of melancholia or mania—in neither case using reason. There are accounts of some who were maniacs and others lunatics. Some also ascribe every form of disease, bodily or mental, to demons. Jesus said the casting out of demons was a part of his work, and by this work he brought the kingdom of God to us (Lev. xiii. 32; Matt. xii. 28).

DENĀ'RIUS. Penny. 12 to 15 cents. See MONEY.

DEP'UTY. Proconsul (Acts xiii. 7, etc.).

DER'BE. Lycaonia, on the road from Tarsus to Iconium (Acts xiv. 6), which passes through the famous CILICIAN GATES, and where the pass opens upon the plains of Lycaonia, the city of Derbe stood. Gaius belonged here (Acts xx. 14).

DESCRY. To reconnoitre (Judg. i. 23).

DES'ERT. Four words of the Hebrew text are translated desert, and they are: 1. ARABAH. The Ghor—the Jordan valley; Jericho at the S., and Bethshean at the N. (Ezek. xlvii. 8; Is. xxxv. 1, 6, xl. 3, xli. 19, etc.; Jer. ii. 6, v. 6, etc.).—2. MIDBAR. Pasture grounds, or the wilderness of the wanderings, where the Israelites had flocks and herds with them during the whole of the passage from Egypt to Canaan (Ex. iii. 1, v. 3, x. 26, xii. 38, xix. 2; Num. xi. 22, xxxii. 21, xxx. 15).—3. CHARBAH. Waste places, dryness, desolation (Ps. cii. 6; Is. xlviii. 21); W. of Sinai (Ez. xiii. 4; Job iii. 14).—4. JESHIMON. Waste places on each side of the Dead Sea. Usually translated Beth Jeshimon (Num. xxi. 20; 1 Sam. xxiii. 19). Is more expressive of utter desolation than any of the others (Deut. xxxii. 10).

DES'SAU. Judah (2 Macc. xiv. 16.) Nicanor's army encamped there. Supposed to be Adasa.

DEŪ'EL (El knows). Father of Eliasaph (Num. i. 14). REUEL.

DEU-TER-Ō'NO-MY (Gr. second law). Fifth book of the Pentateuch. Named in Hebrew ELLEH HADDEVARIM, these are the words. See HISTORY.

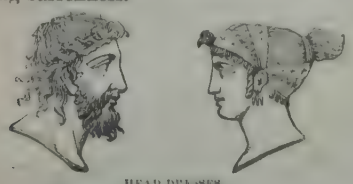
DEV'IL (Gr. Diabolos, slanderer, false accuser). Called SATAN (to lie in wait, oppose) by the Hebrews, and Shaitan by the Arabs. This character expresses the antagonistic, malicious, and perverse nature of the enemy of God and man. See DEMON. It is not believed (by all) that he is an independent, self-existent spirit of evil, though some do so believe, with the Manicheans. He is also called Dragon, Evil One, Angel of the Bottomless Pit, Prince of this World, the God of this World, Prince of the Power of the Air, Apollyon, Abaddon, Belial, Beelzebub. The word Satan is used also to mean an adversary. Hadad the Edomite was an adversary (Heb. SATAN) to Solomon (1 K. xi. 14); David is suspected of being an adversary (satan in 1 Sam. xxix. 4) to the Philistines; the angel of the Lord was a satan (adversary) to Balaam (Num. xxii. 22); a wicked man is a satan in Ps. cix. 6. The wicked wives are adversaries (satans, diabolous; the Hebrew Satan is the Greek Diabolos) in 1 Tim. iii. 1; false accusers, 2 Tim. iii. 3, and Titus ii. 3; and Jesus said one of the 12 was a devil (diabolos, Satan), an adversary. The Hebrew marks, by the article, a difference between a satan, an adversary, and the Satan, a person, the chief. In Zech. iii. 1, 2, it is the Satan, and also in Job 1st and 2d chapters, and 1 Chr. xxi. 1; Matt. iv. 1–11; Luke viii. 12; John viii. 44; Acts xiii. 10; Eph. vi. 11; 1 Pet. v. 8; 1 John iii. 8; Rev. xii. 9. It is said that the Devil is spiritual, but not spirit—not eternal. He works by deceiving, producing or keeping in ignorance, misunderstanding, evil thoughts, unholy desires, pride, anger, revenge, discontent and repining; and besides these moral, he works in physical ways, producing disease (Job ii. 7; Luke xiii. 6; Acts x. 38), which is sometimes used as a divine chastisement (1 Tim. i. 20). As God is the only supreme self-existence, and Satan is not eternal nor in accord with God, but an adversary, he will be overcome, when he has served the will of God, and will go down into the abyss, with death and hell, into utter and final annihilation (Rev. xx. 2, 10, 14).

DEVŌ'TIONS. Objects of worship—temples, images, altars, etc. Paul meant objects of devotion in Acts xvii. 23.

DEW.—The dew falls copiously in Palestine, at night, in spring and autumn, but very little in the summer—May to August. It falls some weeks before, and also after the rains, and so shortens the dry season. It is used as a figure of God's goodness in Hos. xiv. 5, "I will be as the dew unto Israel;" and in Job, of his prosperity (xxix. 19), "the dew lay all night on my branch;" in Ps. cx. 3, of freshness and energy, "dew of his youth" (Christ); of eloquent speech, "distilling like the dew" (Deut. xxxii. 2); of brotherly love, as the "dew of Hermon" (Ps. cxxxiii. 3); and as a sign of calamity, if wanting, in 2 Sam. i. 21, indicating barrenness.



HEAD DRESSES.

DĪ'-A-DEM (bound around). CROWN. Only four passages have this, and they might be read, "fillet," "mitre," "tiara," or "turban," the original meaning rolled together, or around, like the modern Eastern head-dress (Is. iii. 23). The diadem as worn by kings, as a badge of absolute power, was a band about two inches wide, made of silk, ornamented with gold, tied behind, as in No. 7. The ends of the ribbon are frequently shown on the coins. Gibbon describes one as "a broad white fillet, set with pearls" like No. 5. Nos. 1, 2 and 3 are Egyptian; 4, 5, 6, Assyrian; 7, from a coin of Tigranes, king of Syria; 8, sculpture at Persepolis; 9, Roman, civic, of leaves, from a coin. See page 36.

DĪ'-AL. (Heb. MAALOTH, degrees). The earliest mention of the sun-dial is among the Babylonians, 540 B. C. Herodotus says the Greeks adopted it from them, as also the division of the day into 12 parts, being introduced to Greece by the astronomer Berosus, the Chaldean. The first notice of "the hour" is by Daniel (iii. 6). The degrees of Ahaz (2 K. xx. 11), cannot be explained. It may have reference to a dial with degrees (lines numbered). This might have been a present from Tiglath Pileser, the ally of Ahaz, and made in Babylon.

DĪ'-A-MOND (Heb. YAHALOM, precious stone, and SHAMER, sharp point). The hardest and most precious of all the gems. One was in the sacred breast-plate of the high priest, though some say that (yahalom) was an onyx. Ezekiel speaks of making his forehead hard as a diamond (SHAMIR, adamant in A. V. Ez. iii. 9), and Jeremiah of an iron pen pointed with a diamond (Jer. xvii. 1), and Zechariah, of hearts as hard as an adamant stone (vii. 12). The same word shamir is Hebrew for brier.

DIANA.

DĪ-AN'-A. Latin. (Greek, ARTEMIS). The twin sister of Apollo, the sun-god. She is the moon goddess. The Assyrians named them Adrammelech and Anamelech. Diana was called the goddess of hunting, chastity, marriage, and nocturnal incantations. In Palestine the name was ASHTORETH. The services were performed by women (melissai), and eunuchs (megabissoi), with a high priest (essene). The great temple at Ephesus, and grove at Daphne were the most noted shrines of this worship. The image at Ephesus was said to have fallen out of heaven complete! The great temple was 425 by 220 feet, and had 127 columns of marble, each 60 feet high. See EPHESUS.

DIB'LAIM. Mother of Hosea's symbolical wife Gomer (Hos. i. 3).

DIB'LATH. By some supposed to be the same as RIBLAH. By others it is located in Moab, where it is applied to a district in which was Almon-Diblathaim (Num. xxxiii. 46), and Beth D. (Jer. xlviii. 22). S. E. of Heshbon.

DI'BON. E. border of Moab, 3 ms. N. of Arnon river (Num. xxxiv. 45). Rebuilt by the Gadites. Dibon-Gad (xxxii. 34). In Reuben (Josh. xiii. 9, 17). The ruins are still called Diban, and are extensive. Dimon (Is. xv. 9).—2. Judah. DIMONAH (Neh. xi. 25).

DIB'RI. Father of Shelomith, who had married an Egyptian, and her son having "blasphemed the name" was stoned (Lev. xxiv. 11).

DID'YMUS (twin). The apostle Thomas (John xi. 16).

DIKLĀH (palm-tree). There is a district in Arabia, extending along the Red Sea, from Edom to Medina, called Dakalah, from its fruitful palm-groves. Another district is Yemen, now called Minæi, also fruitful in palms, is thought to be the real location; where there is a tribe of Arabs Duklai. (Burckhardt). (Gen. x. 27, 31; 1 Chr. i. 21).

DIL'EAN (place of cucumbers). Judah (Josh. xv. 38). Lost. Possibly Tima, near Ekron.

DIL'LY. Hauran, 6 ms. W. of Edraa, on the edge of a large marsh: the aqueduct for conveying water to Gadara begins here.

DIMAS. Village on E. slope of Hermon; on Damascus—Beirut road.

DIM'NAH. Zeb. (Josh. xxi. 35; Lev.) Damon, near Accho.

DI MON, WATERS OF. Streams E. of the Dead Sea. Moab (Is. xv. 9). DIBON.

DIMO'NAH. Judah. S., near the desert (Josh. xv. 22).

DIM'REH. V. 8 ms. S. of Askulan, on the W. Esneld.

DINAH (acquitted). Dau. of Jacob by Leah. Her history is a short tragedy (Gen. xxxiv.). Her two full brothers took her part against Shechem, and for their deceit and cruelty were condemned by Jacob on his death-bed. Among all the tribes of the East, to this day, any wrong to a sister must be avenged by her brothers or father, or the whole family is disgraced. She may have gone with Jacob into Egypt (xlvi. 15), but she is not mentioned again, nor is her death recorded.

DĪ'NAITES Cuthæan colonists who were placed in Samaria (Ezr. iv. 9).

DINHĀ'BAH (present). (Gen. xxxvi. 32). Capital city and birthplace of Bela, son of Beor, king of Edom. 8 ms. from Ar. toward the river Arnon. —7 ms. from Heshbon, on Mt. Peor (Eusebius). DANABA was a bishop's see in Palmyrene, Syria (Zosimus iii. 27).

DIONYSIA. Feast of Bacchus (2 Macc. vi. 7).

DI-O-NYS'I-US, THE AREOPAGITE. (Acts xvii. 34). Dionysus or Bacchus. He was a member of the supreme court of the Areopagus, and one of the few converts of Paul at Athens. A. D. 420, a writer called Pseudo-Dionysius wrote a book in the name of the disciple, which was believed to be genuine for a long time, but is now condemned.

DIONY'SUS. BACCHUS (3 Macc. ii. 29).

DIOCÆSAREA. SEPPHORIS.

DI-OT'RE-PHĒS (Jove-nurtured). A disciple who resisted the apostle John, in Asia-Minor.

DIR'WEH. Ruin and fountain E. of Beth-Zur, 4 ms. N. of Hebron.

DISCĪ'PLE. Believer. Member of the Church of Christ.

DISCOV'ER. To uncover. "The voice of the Lord—discovereth the forests," that is, the lightning strips off the bark and branches (Ps. xxix. 9).

DIS'CUS. A quoit of iron, copper, or stone, for throwing in play, in the gymnasium. Jason introduced Greek games into Jerusalem in the time of Antiochus Epiphanes, which the priests indulged in to the neglect of their duties (2 Macc. iv. 14).

DISH (Heb. SEPHEL, TSALLACHATH, and KERAH, and Greek trublion). Bowl, charger. See MEALS, CUPS.

DI'SHAN. Youngest son of Seir the mountaineer (Horite). (1 Chr. i. 38). DISHON (Gen. xxxvi. 21).—2. Son of Anah, and grandson of Seir (1 Chr. i. 41).

DISSOLVE. To explain (Dan. v. 16).

DISPER'SION, THE JEWS OF THE Those who remained in Babylonia after the return from captivity were called the "dispersed, or "of the dispersion," or in Heb. "stripped naked." "Removed" in Deut. xxviii. 25; Jer. xxxiv. 17. This included the 12 tribes. The Jewish faith succeeded to the kingdom of David at the return of the remnant, and faithful Jews everywhere contributed the half-shekel to the temple services (Jos. Ant, xviii. 9, 1). Three sections of the dispersion are noticed in history, of Babylon, of Syria, and of Egypt. The Greek conquests extended the limits of the dispersed, by securing greater liberties to the Jews. See ANTIOCHUS, THE GREAT. The African dispersion centred at Alexandria, the best fruit of which is the Septuagint. After the rise of the Jews, in Trajan's time, they were nearly exterminated and the remnant driven into Europe. Those in Rome followed Pompey after his victories in the East. They were banished from the city under Claudius, because they "were continually raising disturbances, Chrestus being their leader" (Suetonius, c. 25). Probably on account of their opposition to the preaching of Christ by Paul and others. The dispersion influenced the spread of the gospel, because the apostles and preachers followed the Jews into "all the world" (Acts ii.).

DIS'TAFF. SPINNING. (Prov. xxxi. 19).

DI'VES. A Greek word meaning rich, which Jesus used in the parable of Lazurus and the "rich" man (Luke xvi. 19). It has since Chaucer's time (see Sompnoure's Tale, "Lazar and Dives") been used in theological literature as a proper name.

DĪV-INA'TION (Heb. KESEM, to divide) Imitation of prophesy; the art of pretending to foretell future events, from the appearance of cards, dice, liquids in a vial, or sediment in a cup (Gen. xliv. 4) which had magical writing on it, or engraving on it; of the earth, sea, and sky; the entrails of animals; the flight of birds; of graves; in dreams; (Num. xii. 6), ("good dreams are one of the great parts of prophesy."—Koran) by talismans, images, oracles; by arrows (see Assyrian sculptures, where the king holds divining arrows, or a rod); and also by magic arts. Plato calls it science without reason. It was taught that the gods gave signs of future events, all through the universe, and that men of observation and study could read those signs. Moses condemned the whole system (Deut. xviii. 10–12), and those who practiced it as impious impostors. The desire to know the future was proper, and would be gratified by God's own prophet, who should speak as he was inspired. This superstition is found among all people, at this day, and is even now practiced under the name of clairvoyants, second-sight, trance-mediums, seventh daughter or son, by cards, water, rods, palm, etc. The result of such practices is the same in all ages, a certain loss of judgment, of purity, and piety, and is as hateful now as ever (1 Sam. xv. 23). The divination by lot seems to be an exception, and is said to be divine (Prov. xvi. 33), and with the Hebrews was conducted solemnly and with religious preparations (Josh. vii. 13), as in the case of Achan and of the division of the Promised Land (Num. xxvi. 55), the election of Saul as king (1 Sam. x. 20), and the chosing of Matthias to the vacant apostleship (Acts i. 26). Many appearances are recorded as of the direct work of God, as the serpent rod of Moses; leprous hand; burning bush; plagues; cloud; Aaron's budding rod; the dew of Gideon, etc., and also visions (Num. xii. 6). See CUP on p. 37.

THE KING, CHIEF OFFICERS, AND GODS OF ASSYRIA DIVINING WITH A CUP.

DĪVŌRCE. The law of Moses is found in Deut. xxiv. 1–4, and xxii. 19, 29. The original words are some uncleanness (Heb. ERVATH DABAR), and are very loosely explained by the Jewish doctors, so that many causes for divorce were admitted. One school (Shammai) limited it to a moral cause, and another (Hillel) included many others: as a bad breath, snoring, a running sore, and burning the food when cooking. When Jesus was appealed to (Matt. v. 31, with a view to entangle him in their disputes), he said, The practice allowed by the Mosaic law of divorcing a wife without crime on her part, and on the ground of dislike or disgust, is opposed to the original, divine idea of marriage; according to which a man and his wife are joined together by God, to be one flesh, and are not to be put asunder by man. He who puts away his wife by a bill of divorce without her crime, causes her to commit adultery by placing it within her power to marry another man. The party who permits the divorce is criminal in marrying again. The mere exchange of a piece of writing will not dissolve the spiritual bond. Unless the union is dissolved by crime, any who unite with either party are criminal.

The apostle Paul allowed (1 Cor. viii.) separation of a believer from an unbeliever, but not to marry another, but to seek reconciliation and reunion. In the Roman church a marriage with an unbeliever may be annulled by the believer, who may marry another. Some Protestants follow the same custom, and also in case of desertion. See MARRIAGE.

DĬZ'A-HAB (place of gold). On the Red Sea, now Dohab (Deut. i. 1).

DOCTOR. Teacher (Luke iii. 46). SCRIBE.

DŌ'CUS (small fort). Near Jericho (1 Macc. xvi. 15). Built by Ptolemeus, son of Abubus, in which he entertained and murdered his father-in-law, Simon Maccabæus and his two sons (Ant. xiii. 8). Dagon, ruins near Ain Duk, are supposed to mark the site (Itob. ii. 309).

ANCIENT HINGES.

DŌ'DAI (loving). An Ahohite, captain of the course of the army (24,000), who served in the 2d month (1 Chr. xxxii. 4). DODO? Brother of Jesse?

DODĀ'NIM. Descendants of the 4th son of Javan (Gen. x. 4). Rodanim. The island of Rhodes and the river Rhone are relics of the name.

DODĀ'VAH (love of Jah). Father of Eliezer, who denounced Jehoshaphat's alliance with Ahaziah (2 Chr xx. 37).

DŌ'DŌ (God his friend). 1. Of Bethlehem, father of Elhanan, one of David's noted 30 captains (1 Chr. xi. 26).—2. Dodai, the 2d in chief command of David's army (2 Sam. xxiii. 9, 24; 1 Chr. xi. 12). 3. Of Issachar, forefather of Tola, the judge (Judg. x. 1).

DŌ'EG (fearful). Chief of Saul's herdsmen (1 Sam. xxii. 9). He obeyed king Saul, and killed the priests of Nob (85, and their families also). He was a proselyte to the Jewish faith, attending there to fulfil a vow?

DOG (Heb. KELEB, seizer; Ar. kelb). From most ancient times the humble friend and servant of man. Sculptured on the monuments of Assyria and Egypt. Mentioned as shepherd dogs by Job (xxx. 1); Moses as property (Deut. xxiii. 18), and Solomon (Eccles. ix. 4). The vile rulers of Israel were compared to dogs by Isaiah (lvi. 10, 11). The dog is almost ownerless in the East, and runs, half-wild, in the streets; never caressed, or made pets of, and seldom admitted to a house or tent. They eat anything that comes in their way, and also each other, if a dog strays from his proper district. Jezebel's fate (2 K. ix.) might be repeated any day or night in any city of the East. Byron writes in his Siege of Corinth:

> "He saw the lean dogs, beneath the wall,
> Hold o'er the dead their carnival;
> Gorging and growling o'er carcass and limb,
> They were too busy to bark at him."

David wrote of Saul's hired assassins lying in wait to kill him: "They return at evening: they make a noise like a dog, and go round about the city. Let them wander up and down for meat, and grudge if they be not satisfied" (Ps. lix. 6). He also speaks of them in Ps. xxii. 16, 20. The caravans to Mecca have many dogs, going from Egypt, Syria and Persia. The dog was held to be unclean, and was despised, and is now, the name being a term of reproach, commonly applied to Christians by the Mohammedans.

STONE DOOR.

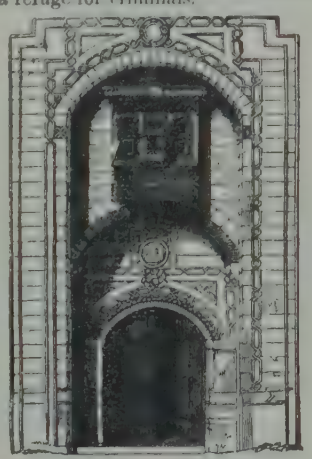
DŌOR. (Heb. SHAAR, to divide, gate; PETHAH, entering; SAPH, threshold; DALETH, to hang down as a curtain, a door; TERA, PULE, PULON, gate). The door had a threshold, side posts and lintel in houses, and was an opening in the side of a tent. The door is generally of wood, and sometimes of cedar, handsomely carved, and also a cloth for inside use. In the Hauran are now to be seen doors of stone, turning on hinges of stone, dating from antiquity. Doors and doorways in the East are generally small and mean in appearance compared with ours, or with the interior to which they open.

The gates of cities are built strong for defense, with towers and chambers (2 Sam. xviii. 24), and rooms inside for public assembly, for hearing the news, buying or selling, or judicial affairs. In Assyrian cities they were similar; and in the temples were highly ornamented with sculpture and colors. The doorway in the engraving from the ruins of the palace (or temple) at Koyunjik (a part of Nineveh), shows the magnificent style of sculpture, in the use of ideal figures combining men, and animals, and birds. (See cut on page 30.)

The principal doorways in the palaces were guarded by symbolic bulls, or winged gods. Images of the gods were hidden in the walls and floor as a kind of protection.

The Egyptian temple was a kind of fort, with massive walls, and a gate with strong, high towers. The doors had double leaves, often plated with metal. They were provided with locks and bars of metal.

The gates of Babylon are said to have been of bronze (brass). On the doors of Egypt in our day, there are sentences from the holy book, following the ancient custom (Deut. vi. 9; Is. liv. 12; Rev. xxi. 21; Lane, Mod. Egyptians, Wilkinson). Petitions were presented to the king at the gate; and the gate was sometimes made a place of sanctuary—a refuge for criminals.



MODERN EGYPTIAN DOOR.

The doors of Solomon's Temple are described as being very valuable, richly carved, and overlaid with gold (1 K. vi. 34, etc). Those of the holy place were double. The Beautiful Gate of Herod's Temple is said to have been of Corinthian brass (bronze), (Jos. Wars, v. 5, § 3), and required twenty men to move it.

The gates of precious stones of Revelations and Isaiah were suggested to the writers by the stone doors of the Hauran, which are often several inches thick, of fine hard bazalt, beautifully carved.

To open, or lift up as a curtain, a door to a coming guest, was and is an especial honor, as alluded to in Ps. xxiv. 7.

"I would rather be a door-keeper in the house of my God than dwell in the tents of wickedness (Ps. lxxxiv. 10), may be better understood as meaning "I would rather lay at the door of the house of my God (like Lazarus), than have a home in their tents."

DOPH'KAH (cattle driving). Station of the Exodus (Num. xxxiii. 12). See WILDERNESS.

DOR (habitation). Royal city of the Canaanites (Josh. xvii. 11; 1 K. iv. 11). On the Great Sea, 14 miles S. of Carmel, 7 ms. N. of Cæsarea. Its king was defeated with others near the waters of Merom (Judg. i. 27), in Manasseh, but the ancient people were never expelled. Solomon made them pay tribute. This was the most southern city built by the Phœnicians. The ruins are on a hill, and extend half a mile, the most conspicuous being an old tower, which is a landmark, called Tantura (the horn).

DOVE.

D 'RA (1 Macc. xv. 11). DOR.

DOR CAS. See TABITHA.

DŌRYM'ENES. Father of Ptolemy (1 Macc. iii. 38). He fought against Antiochus the Great (Polybius, v. 61).

DŌSĬTH'EUS. 1. Captain under Judas Maccabæus against Timotheus (2 Macc. xii. 19).—2. A horseman of Bacenor's band (2 Macc. xii. 35).—3. Son of Drimlus, an apostate Jew at Raphia (3 Macc. i. 3).—4. "Said he was a priest and Levite," messenger to carry the translation of Esther to Egypt (Esther xi. 1, Doway). Another mentioned by Josephus (c. Apion ii. 5).

DO'THAN. Dothaim (two wells). 14 ms. N. of Shechem (Gen. xxxvii. 17). Joseph was sold by his brethren here to the Egyptians (ib. 25). Elisha, the prophet, lived at D. when Benhadad thought to capture him (2 K. vi. 8-23). Tell Dothan is now at the S. end of a rich plain, separated by slight hills from Esdraëlon, and the ruins are on a very large hill; with a fine spring at its foot. The massive ancient Jewish or Roman pavement is to be seen in the road that runs near, from Beisan to Egypt.

DO TO WIT. To make known. Not used. (2 Cor. viii. 1).

DOVE (Heb. YONAH). Two species are mentioned in the law—turtle-dove and pigeon. Both were to be offered in burnt offering (Deut. i. 14). It is a symbol of peace, and the most exalted of animals, as symbolizing the Holy Spirit, and the meekness, purity and splendor of righteousness. Two ancient relics show its use as a national ensign—one on a Phœnician coin, where the dove, with rays about its head and wings closed, stands on a globe; and the other, a sculpture in the Hauran, where the dove's wings are spread, also stands on a globe, the rays behind terminating in stars. Carrier pigeons are figured in Egypt. A dove has carried a letter from Babylon to Aleppo in two days. The DOVE'S DUNG of 2 K. vi. 2, has been explained as chick-peas or the roots of the ornithogalum umbellatum, or the Star of Bethlehem, used now by the poor. Pigeon cotes are common all over the East, usually made of coarse stone jars piled into a kind of house, by itself or on a roof.

DRACH'MA. See MONEY.

DRĀG'ON (Heb. TANNIM, dragons). A mammal, living in the desert (Is. xiii. 22), crying like a child (Job xxx. 29); probably the jackal, which has a mournful howl. Another (Heb. TANNIN) was a great sea monster. Used as a metaphor of the Pharaoh (Is. li. 9; Ez. xxix. 3), where it means the crocodile (see Jer. li. 34). The word is also used as a metaphor for the devil in Rev. xii.

DRĒAM. We know that God needs no rest, and is as active when we sleep as when we wake, and therefore we may suppose that divine influences fashion our dreams, as well as direct our waking thoughts. It is supposed that God appeared to Moses, Abraham, Jacob and Joseph, in dreams. So the Greeks believed (Homer, Il. i. 63). Moses promised such visitations (Num. xii. 6); Peter (Acts 10), and Paul (2 Cor. xii. 1), had such dreams. Jeremiah condemns those who pretended to have revelations in dreams (xxiii. 25), and in visions, etc. xxvii. 9), and Ezekiel also (xiii. 2-9). The modern imitators of Spiritism pretend to a divine converse—perhaps deluding themselves—believing that the wild fancies of their trances are the work of the divine mind.

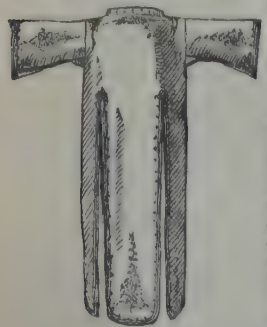
ORIENTAL STREET COSTUME.

DRESS. Oriental dress has preserved a peculiar uniformity in all ages, from Abraham to the modern Bedawin. The monument at Behistun exhibits the antiquity of the costume, which can be compared with that of figures of modern Syrians and Egyptians. The dress for men and women differed but very little; many articles being worn by both in common, varied only by the manner of putting them on. Men wore the shawl over the head and shoulders, or over the shoulders, while the women used it around the waist.

The drawers are scant or full, gathered around the waist, and show, when on, as in the figure of Bedawin, p. 12, and of the woman in street costume. They are fastened just below the knee by garters.



YELEK. GOWN.

The shirt reaches to, or falls a little below the knees, and is worn outside of the drawers generally, as in the picture of Syrians, p. 40. When dressed in the drawers and shirt only, a person was said to be naked (Mark xiv. 51). They also wear a vest, like ours, buttoned up to the chin. The buttons are sewed on the edge of the garment, and passed through a loop, never using a buttonhole.

The coat has sleeves to the wrist, or longer, and skirts to the knees or ankles.

Over the coat is worn the girdle (Acts xxi. 11), which is two or three yards long and about half a yard wide, and is made of any material, from a strip of leather or a rope, to the finest silk, with embroidery. The coat, when cut off at the hips, is sometimes embroidered very highly. The same garment is worn by women, and is called Yelek. This is the robe of ceremony for both sexes, referred to in 1 K. v. 5, and 2 Chr. ix. 4, and (the long skirt) the present that Jehu gave the prophets of Baal (2 K. x. 22).

CLOAK.

The cloak (ABBA, LEBUSH) is a large square bag, open on one side, with holes at the upper corners for the hands, and a band around the neck. Goat's or camel's hair is used in the desert (Matt. iii. 4) as worn by John the Baptist. Joseph's coat of (many) colors was of this pattern; and such rich garments are common among the wealthy, being made of silk or wool, and richly embroided. The same garment is called a burnoos when it has a hood, as worn in Algeria. The hyke is a square shawl, folded cornerwise, and worn as in the cut of Egyptians. Bedawins use a cloth woven with threads of silver or gold, called Akal. The head is covered first with a white cotton cap (libdeh), over which is worn the tarbush (see HEAD-DRESS), a red woolen cap, generally with a blue tassel. Around the tarbush a narrow shawl (three or more yards long) is wound, forming the turban. Women cover themselves with a thin cloak and a veil, leaving only the eyes (or only one eye) visible, as in the figure (Oriental street costume). The ancient Jewesses did not vail their faces, but covered the hair only. Women wear the hair long, braided, curled, etc., and decorated with jewels and coins. Men generally shave the head (2 Sam. xiv. 26). The ancient Jews probably wore the hair as low as the ears or neck, and, as Josephus says of the body-guard of Solomon, used powder (Ant. viii. 7, 3). In mourning the head was shaved (Is. xxii. 12, etc.)

There are many ornaments in use for the hair, head, ears, nose, and neck, not very much different from those in use here; except the nose-ring. The eyebrows and lashes are frequently colored.

EGYPTIANS.

The feet are loosely covered, and are seldom deformed as ours are by tight shoes. The inner slippers are very soft, and only worn in the house; the over-shoes and boot being worn out doors, and always left at the door. Stockings and leggings for cold weather are in common use.

Sandals are still used in the house, but could never have been in common use out doors, because of the many thorns and briers. The Kubcabs are high wooden stilts, used in the bath, or on wet floors. SANDALS.

Jos. Ant. iii. 7, § 7: "The vestments of the high priest, being made of linen, signified the earth; the blue denoted the sky, being like lightning in its pomegranates; and in the noise of the bells, resembling thunder. And for the Ephod, it showed that God had made the universe of four elements; and as for the gold interwoven, I suppose it related to the splendor by which all things are enlightened. He also appointed the breastplate to be placed in the middle of the ephod, to resemble the earth, for that has the very middle place. And the girdle which encompassed the high priest round, signified the ocean, for that goes round about and includes the universe. * * * * And for the turban, which was of a blue color, it seems to me to mean heaven, for how otherwise could the name of God be inscribed upon it?"

Exodus xxviii.: "And these are the garments which they shall make—the breast-plate, and the ephod, and the robe, and the coat of checker-work, the turban, and the girdle;" all of which were peculiar to and worn only by the high priest.

In this description the under-garments are not mentioned. In verse 42, linen drawers are directed to be worn, and it may be presumed that the other undergarments worn by the upper classes were used by the priests.

Breastplate (v. 4, 15). This was embroidered, in two halves sewed together, the front to receive the

SANDALS.

12 stones, and the back to shield the studs; and besides, so as to fit the chest better, because the stuff was thick and stiff from embroidery, and the fine wires of gold worked into the design. The making of the wires is described in xxxix. 3. In it were set four rows of engraved stones, bearing the names of the twelve tribes of Israel. Each stone was set in a rim of gold, like a cameo (or breast-pin), with a button or stud at the back, which was put through a button-hole in the breast-plate. Putting the twelve stones into their places was a solemn service, showing the presence of the twelve tribes before the altar of Jehovah, and they were called LIGHTS and PERFECTIONS—(Urim and Thummim). It was two spans high, and one wide.

Two cord-like chains of gold wire fastened to the upper corners of the breast-plate by two rings of gold (v. 14), which were attached to the engraved stones on the shoulders, one to each stone. Two gold rings on the lower corners of the breastplate were opposite two rings in the girdle; and a blue cord tied the rings together and kept the breast-plate in its place (v. 26, 27, 28).

The other garments were peculiar only in color and ornament, their pattern being similar to those already described.

DRINK (Heb. SHECAR, any intoxicating beverage). Strong drink was made from several fruits besides grapes: as pomegranates (Cant. viii. 2), figs, apples, dates, carob fruit, and from grain: as wheat, barley, millet, and from honey. A fine wine is made by putting raisins in water and burying the jars in the ground until after fermentation.

DROMEDARY (Heb. BECHER, BICRAH, RECESH, RAMMAC). See CAMEL. The A. V. translates in error RECESH in 1 K. iv. 28, and Esth. viii. 10, 14, dromedaries, when the original means swift horses; also RAMMAC in Esther viii. 10, 14, mules instead of mares.

DROPPING, A CONTINUAL (Prov. xxvii. 15). Drops of rain in a wintry day drive a man out of his house; in the same manner also does an abusive woman (Lam. xx). See HOUSE.

EAR-RINGS.

DRUSIL'LA (feminine of Lat. Drusus). Daughter of Herod Agrippa I, and Cypros (Acts xii. 1). She was betrothed to Antiochus Epiphanes, but on his refusing to become a Jew she was married to Azizus, king of Emesa. She afterwards left her husband for Felix (ib. xxiv. 24). She, with her son, perished in an eruption of Mt. Vesuvius.

DŪKE. Translation of the Heb. ALLUPH, which means patriarch, head of a family, or, in Arabic, sheikh, chief, leader.

DUL'CIMER (Heb. or Chal. SUMPHONYAH). Musical instrument mentioned by Daniel (iii. 5, 15). The modern dulcimer is a box, strung with about 50 wires—the longest 36 inches, the shortest 18—played with two small hammers, held in the hands. MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.

DŪ'MAH (silence). Son of Ishmael, founder of a tribe of Ishmaelites. The DISTRICT was in the N. of Arabia, near Edom (Gen. xxv. 15; Is. xxi. 11), where there is now a city called Doomah el Jendel, 240 miles E. of Petra, in a circular valley, surrounded by very fine gardens and orchards. An ancient castle, of massive masonry, is in ruins. Another DUMAH is in Judah, 17 miles from Eleutheropolis, 6 miles S. W. of Hebron.

DUMB. Unable to speak (Ex. iv. 11). See MIRACLES.

DUNG (Heb. GILALA). Used both for manure and for fuel. Its use as manure is very much the same as with us. For fuel it is carefully dried. Many poor people spread cow dung on the outside of their houses to dry for fuel (Ezr. iv. 12.) See Deut. xxiii. 12. The word was omitted in writing, as in 2 K. x. 27, where draught-house is substituted. One of the gates of Jerusalem was named Dung-gate (Neh. iii. 13, Dung Port). Public execration or insult was shown by using his house as a "draught-house."

EAR-RINGS.

DUNG-GATE. JERUSALEM.

DŪN'GEON. PRISON.

DŪ'RA (Heb. CIRCLE). Where Nebuchadnezzar set up an image (Dan. iii. 1). Oppert found the pedestal of a colossal image in a plain called Dowair, S. E. of Babylon, where he thinks the plain of Dura was.

DUST. An image of what is low, mean and impure. Abraham calls himself but dust and ashes (Gen. xviii. 27). In times of grief and mourning the custom in the East is to sit in the dust, and to sprinkle it over the head. To throw dust on one is to show contempt (as Shimei to David, 2 Sam. xvi. 13), and the Jews to Paul (Acts xxii. 23). Shaking the dust off the feet was to leave it as a testimony to the great wickedness of the persons who had offended. To lick the dust is to be prostrated or subdued; to put the mouth in the dust is to show great humility. To return to the dust is a term for death. The dust of the desert sometimes is carried by whirlwinds to great distances, and falling, covers a caravan or the fertile land, leaving desolation in its track.

EAGLE (Heb. NESHER; Ar. niss'r, to tear with the beak). Eagles are found in all parts of the world, and there are several species in Palestine. 1. Imperial. 2. Short-toed. 3. Golden. 4. Spotted. 5. White-tailed. 6. Bonelli's eagle. 7. Gier eagle, or Egyptian vulture, and others. The NESHER is not an eagle, but a Griffon-vulture, which is found in all hot countries of the old world. It measures nearly five feet; eight feet extent of wing. The allusion in Matthew (xxiv. 28), "wheresoever the carcase is, there will the eagles be gathered together," refers to vultures, because eagles do not gather more than two or three, while vultures assemble in large flocks. Its bare head is alluded to in Micah i. 16. Job mentions its strong eye-sight and wing (xxxix. 27–30). "The cliffs are perforated with caves at all hights, wholly inaccessible to man, the secure resting place of hundreds of noble griffons." (Tristram, Land of Israel.) This gorge was the one Josephus describes near Arbela as inhabited by robbers, who were dislodged with great labor and hard fighting. The god NISROCH, specially worshiped by Sennacherib, the Assyrian, was a vulture-headed figure, with wings. Ezekiel and John use this vulture as one of the heads in their symbolic figure (Ez. x. 14; Rev. iv. 6). Its longevity is alluded to in Ps. ciii. 5. "Thy youth is renewed like the eagle's," (NESHER). One was kept in Vienna 104 years. They are always in sight in the East, every day in the year. Its care for its young is twice used as an example of God's fatherly care (Deut. xxxii. 11; Ex. xix. 4).

The gier eagle (Lev. xi. 18), called in Hebrew and Arabic RACHMAH, and is the modern Pharaoh's Hen, or Egyptian Vulture. It is migratory in Palestine, and ranges from Asia Minor to the Cape of Good Hope. The DAYAH is probably a kite (Lev. xi. 14), of which four kinds are known in Palestine. (See KITE.)

The golden eagle lives in pairs only, and requires a wide range of country, five pairs occupying as much as twenty miles. It is smaller than the Griffon, and not so strong.

The short-toed eagle is strong, heavy, and handsome, about two feet long, dark brown, and marked with black spots. There are twice as many of these as of all the other eagles put together in Palestine.

E'ANES (1 Esd. ix. 21). HARIM, MASSEIAH and ELIJAH.

EAR'NEST. (Heb. ARABON), a pledge, security (Gen. xxxviii. 17, 18, 20. Prov. xvii. 18).

EAR'RINGS (Heb. NEZEM). Ear-rings were made of gold, silver, brass or bronze, and glass, and in a great variety of forms, and varying in size from half an inch to three inches across. The nose ring is peculiar to the east, and is mentioned in Genesis (xxiv. 47), where Abraham's servant gave one to Rebekah. Except the nose ring men wear nearly all of these ornaments among oriental nations, and have from remote antiquity, as appears on the monuments in Egypt and Assyria. Rings were especially used for purposes of superstition and idolatry. The ring of ABRAXAS is an instance of superstitious use, as adopted by Christian Gnostics, and the museums of Europe and America furnish a great many other curious specimens of similar designs. Rings, coins and medals are hung in strings around the neck, by the sides of the face, and across the forehead sewed to the edge of the tarbush (see HEAD DRESS). Some ear-rings in the East are very large; two or even three inches across, and are loaded with pearls, precious stones, or glass.

NOSE-RING.

EARTH (Heb. ERETZ, Gr. Ge). Land and water, the whole visible surface of the globe. The Hebrew writers often used the term as we now use it, if meaning a local and limited space (James v. 17; Lev. iv. 25), and especially in the account of the crucifixion, where the darkness may have been over all the land of Israel, but probably not over all the globe (Matt. xxvii. 45; Luke xxiii. 44).

EARTH'QUAKES. Earthquakes have been frequent in all ages in Palestine, and their ravages may be traced at Aleppo (1616, 1812), Antioch (1737), Laodicea, Beirut, Sidon, Tyre, Safed, and Tiberias (1837). One is mentioned in the time of King Uzziah (Zech. xiv. 5): another in 31 B. C., when a great part of Jerusalem was destroyed and 10,000 persons killed. Josephus speaks of one about the time of the crucifixion (Ant. ix. 10, 4), when a large rock fell from Olivet.

EAST (Heb. KEDEM) (before or in front). By the east was often meant sun-rise. The Jews used to designate the lands lying east and north-east of Palestine (Gen. xxv. 6).

GRIFFON-VULTURE.

EAS'TER (Acts xii. 4), PASSOVER.

EAST'GATE (Neh. iii. 29). A gate of Jerusalem.

EATING. MEALS.

E'BAL. Mt. N. of Shechem (Deut. xi. 29). Moses charged the Israelites to put the blessing upon Mt. Gerizim, and the curse on Mt. Ebal. Both mts. are now terraced and cultivated, from bottom to top, by fine gardens. Ebal is 2700 feet high; Gerizim 2600 above the sea, and about 1000 above Shechem. The valley is about 600 ft. wide.

E'BED (Heb. servant).—1. Father of Gaal (Judg. ix. 26, xxviii. 30, xxxi. 35).—2. Son of Jonathan (Ezr. viii. 6); Obeth in 1 Esd.

E'BEDME'LECH. Ethiopian eunuch of Zedekiah, who released the prophet Jeremiah from prison, and was therefore saved when Jerusalem was taken (Jer. xxxviii. 7, ff).

E'BEH (Heb. EBEH)—reed, bulrushes, papyrus (Job. ix. 26). Boats or skiffs made of papyrus—light and swift.

EBEN-EZEL (stone of departure). (1 Sam. xx. 19).

EBEN-E'ZER (stone of help). Set up by Samuel between Mizpeh and Shem (1 Sam. vii. 12). Site lost.

EBER (beyond), HEBER.—1. Son of Salah, great-grandson of Shem; from whom the Hebrews were named.—2. Son of Elpaal, a Benjamite (1 Chr. viii. 12).—3. A priest of Amok under Joiakim (Neh. xii. 20).

E-BI'ĀSAPH (Heb. ABIASAPH). A Levite (1 Chr. vi. 23). The prophet Samuel and Heman the singer descended from him. ASAPH.

EBONY. True Ebony is a native of the coast of Malabar and of Ceylon. The tree is large, the stem nine feet in circumference, and shoots up, before it branches, to 29 ft. in hight; the branches are stiff, irregular and numerous. This elegant plant furnishes valuable materials for inlaying; its fine-grained wood being sometimes black, gray, or green.

EBRO'NAH. Near Ezion-geber.

E-CA'NUS. One of the five swift scribes who assisted Esdras (2 Esd. xiv. 24) ASIEL 2.

ECBATA'NA. ACHMETHA (Ezr. vi. 2). Two cities of this name.—1. Capital of N. Media. Atro-patene of Strabo. The 7-walled town of Herodotus, and said to have been the capital of Cyrus. Where the roll was found which proved to Darius that Cyrus had really made a decree allowing the Jews to rebuild their temple. Ruins the most massive and antique, now called Takht-i-Suleiman, are on a conical hill 150 ft. above the plain, enclosing 2400 by 1200 ft. An artificial lake, 300 ft. across, is filled with clear, sweet water. The walls of the Temple were colored 7 tints—black, white, orange, blue, scarlet, silver and gold, in the order of the days dedicated to the planets. Was an important city as late as the 13th century, called Gaza, Gazaca, Cauzaca, by Greeks and Romans, and Shiz by Orientals.—2. The southern city, capital of Greater Media, is now called Hamadan, and is one of the great cities of Persia, with 20,000 inhabitants. Was the summer residence of the Persian kings from Darius downward. Was occupied by Alexander. The Jews say it was the residence of Ahasuerus, and show the tombs of Esther and Mordecai near it. See cut on page 3.

SHORT-TOED EAGLE.

ECCLESIAS'TICUS. See HISTORY OF THE BOOKS.

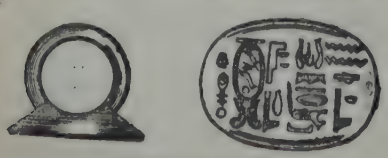
ECLIPSE OF THE SUN. Supposed to be alluded to in Amos viii. 8, 9; Mic. iii. 6; Zech. xiv. 6; Jer. xv. 9.

ED (Heb. WITNESS), (Josh. xxii. 34).

E'DAR (flock-tower). Where Jacob first pitched his tent after the death of Rachel (Gen. xxxv. 21). Near Bethlehem. Eder? There is a Jewish tradition that the Messiah is to be born there.

EDDIAS (1 Esd. ix. 26). JEZIAH.

EDEN (garden of God). The idea of a paradise of purity and happiness is found in all nations and in every religion. The location of the garden is lost.



SIGNET RING OF SUPHIS.

Dr. Robinson proposed as the site of Eden the ruin called Jusieh el Kadimeh, in the valley of the Orontes, 30 ms. N. of Baalbek, 3 ms. S. E. of Riblah. A fortress in it was 396 ft. sq., having towers at the corners. Houses and streets are traced among the ruins over a space of 2½ ms. Much material has been carried away to build a new town of Jusieh, 1 m. N. W., toward Riblah. Ptolemy, Strabo and Pliny mention Paradisus in this same district. It is now dreary and barren, and water is found only in cisterns.—2. Beit-Jenn (the house of Paradise), S. W. of Damascus, on the E. slope of Hermon, near Mejdel, on a branch of the Pharpar.—3. Ez. xxiv. 23. In Assyria, with Haran, Canneh and Sheba, trading with Tyre. Supposed to be Aden.—4. Beth E. A country residence of the kings of Damascus (Amos i. 5). Near the cedars of Lebanon is a village of Elden, but it is not identified with any historical event.

ED'NA (Heb. pleasure). Wife of Raguel (Tob. vii. 2; viii. 14, 16).

E'DOM. IDUMEA (Mark iii. 8). The name of Esau (Gen. xxv. 29–34). The country settled by Esau's descendants. The ruddy hue of the mountains may have given the name Edom, which is red in the original. The ancient name was Mt. Seir. Seir means rugged. On the E. side of W. Arabah, from Elath on the S. to Moab on the N., at the brook Zered (Deut. ii. 13, 14, 18), about 100 ms. long by 20 ms. wide. The whole country is wild, rugged, and full of deep glens, but is also very fertile on the terraces; while the desert on each side is barren. The people dwell amid the rocky hights, in caves and houses perched on dizzy crags, like eagles in their nests, living by their swords (Gen. xxvii. 40; Jer. xlix. 16); yet, as Isaac promised, this land possessed "the fatness of the earth, and of the dew of heaven" (Gen. xxvii. 39). The ancient capital was Bozrah. Sela (Petra) was the stronghold, and Ezion-geber its seaport, where Solomon built a fleet (2 Sam. viii. 14; 1 K. ix. 26). The crusaders built a fortress 12 ms. N. of Petra, on Mons Regalis, now a ruin, called Shobek. The people were always idolaters (2 Chr. xxv. 14; Jos. Ant. xv. 17, § 9). The rock temples and dwellings of Edom were cut in a soft rock; were large, airy, well lighted and dry, and a safe protection against robbers.

E'DOMITES. Descendants of Edom (Gen. xxxvi. 1, ff.). See EDOM.

E'DREI. Bashan, one of its two capitals, the residence of Og (Deut. i. 4). In Manasseh (Josh. xiii. 12, 31). Two modern places claim this ancient name—(1) Edhra, at the S. W. angle of the Lejah, and (2) Dera, in the open plain of the Hauran, 14 ms. S. of the former. The ruins of Edhra are extensive and important above any other of the region; on a rocky projection from the Lejah, 3 ms. in circuit, raised 30 feet above the plain, which is wide and of unequalled fertility. The walls, roofs and doors are of a dark stone. There were many public buildings.—2. Naphtali, 3 ms. S. of Kedesh (Josh. xix. 37).

EGYPTIAN KING, RHAMSES IV.

EDUCATION. The Jews were strictly charged in the law to educate their children (Deut. iv. 9), but probably only in moral and religious discipline. The exceptions were those who were intended for priestly or civil office, as in the cases of Moses, Paul, Ezra, Daniel. There were schools of prophets (singers?), one of which, kept by Samuel, David attended. The sect of Essenes instructed children.

EG'LAH (Heb. a heifer). Wife of David at Hebron (2 Sam. iii. 5; 1 Chr. iii. 3). See DAVID.

ECLA'IM (2 pounds). (Is. xv. 8). Moab. Lost.

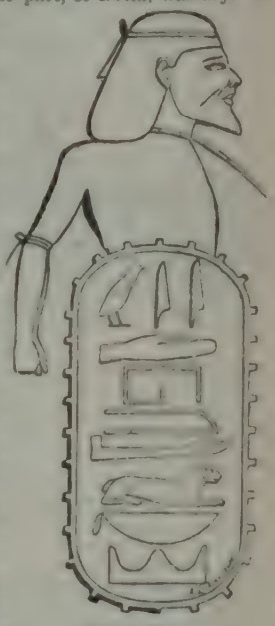
EGLON. Judah, in the Shefelah (Josh. xv. 39; x. 3–5). Now Ajlan, a shapeless mass of ruins, 10 ms. S. W. of Beit Jibrin, on the road to Gaza, from which it is 13 ms. Name of a very fat king of Philistia (Judg. iii. 14).

SIGNET OF THOTHMES III.

EGYPT. It would be interesting and valuable if we could give here a full account of all the monuments which confirm scripture, found in Egypt; but as that would fill a large volume, we must admit only a few illustrations, referring the student to the larger works.

Concerning Abraham, we find that the account of his visit to Egypt is confirmed by many facts which may be compared with the history, laws and customs of the country as found in Wilkinson, Lane, and other writers. The principal points illustrated by evidence derived from Egypt are: 1. That Egypt was then a rich, powerful, and civilized nation. 2. The lower part, or Delta, was dry. 3. Its kings were called Pharaoh. 4. Slavery was an institution. 5. There was a famine in Canaan and an abundance in Egypt. 6. Abraham's wife, Sarah, was fair and did not wear a veil. 7. Pharaoh wished to place Sarah in his harem. 8. Abraham was well received as a shepherd. 9. He had sheep, oxen, asses, men and maid servants, and camels. 10. Abraham accepted Pharaoh's gifts because he dared not refuse them, for the custom of the time then, as well as now, makes the refusal of a present an insult.



KING OF JUDAH

Joseph was sold to the Ishmaelites for a household servant; was bought by Potiphar, an officer of Pharaoh; made an overseer in the king's house; was tempted by Potiphar's wife; thrown in prison; interpreted the king's dream; was elevated to office; was invested with a ring and robes of office, a gold chain; had his name changed to an Egyptian one; and was married to Asenath, daughter to a priest of On.

The ring of Suphis, here engraved, was found on a mummy in the necropolis of Sakkara, near Memphis, is of pure gold, massive, and is now in the Abbott Egyptian Museum of the Historical Society, New York. The mummy was entirely cased in pure gold, every limb, even to the fingers' ends, being wrapped separately, and the whole was inscribed with hieroglyphics. Joseph was embalmed and put in a coffin (Gen. l. 26). The mummy cased in gold is of the age of Thothmes III, the Pharaoh who reigned in the time of Joseph, whose signet was found attached to a chain of gold, around his neck. The seal turns on a swivel, and so has two tablets, which are engraved. The whole is of very pure gold. Pharaoh made Joseph a ruler over all the land of Egypt, and called him ZAPHNATH-PAANEAH (preserver of the world) (Gen. xli. 37–45.) The seal bears the name of Pharaoh, and also the title "Paaneah." (These, with the chain, are now in the Leyden Museum.) "He made him to ride in the second chariot" (v. 43).

MERCHANT OF CAIRO CARRYING HIS KEYS.

"Now there arose up a new king over Egypt, which knew not Joseph," and there was a period of bondage in which the Jews were held until the time of Moses and the Exodus.

The monuments show us the taskmaster and his men, the several kinds of work, punishment by the bastinado, etc.

The picture on p. 24, is in the tomb of Rosehere, at Thebes. Rosellini (See his great work on Egypt, in the Astor Library) says: "Of the laborers, some are bringing clay in vessels; some mingling the straw with it; others taking the bricks out of the moulds and arranging them in order for burning; others carrying away the burnt bricks: all are different from the three overseers at the right-hand end of the picture (a fourth is sitting), in complexion, physiognomy and beard. The original is in colors and the figures are very large.

The inscription at the top is translated, "Captives brought by his majesty to build the temple of the great God."

The question has been asked, "Had the Jews the skill requisite to make a golden image of a calf, such as they made in Sinai?" As proof that they had, we offer the pictures on the monuments, showing men actually at work at the furnaces, "the refiner's fire," weighing, etc. The "calf" they made was an image of the Egyptian god Apis, which was a live bull, kept at Memphis; and they had probably, while slaves, made many images of him for use in all parts of the country.

Selections might be made showing workers in nearly every industry known in the East, but the student will be better satisfied with the larger works; and we have given enough here to point the argument, that the scriptures are true.

Long after the Exodus, "Shishak, king of Egypt, came up against Jerusalem" (2 Chr. xii. 2), and on one of the walls in a temple at Karnac there is a picture of 63 prisoners, each one representing a city, tribe, or nation, and among them is a "king of the country of Judah." The names of Beth-horon, Megiddo, Mahanaim, and other cities in Palestine, are there, on shields. There are 84 names of persons or places of Canaan on the monuments at Abu Simbel, Thebes, and other ruins in Egypt, written in hieroglyphics. (See SHISHAK.) The word mizraim (the two Egypts) in the Hebrew Scriptures is translated Egypt in many passages (Ez. xxix. 10, etc.). Misr is red mud in Arabic. The name on the monuments is KEM (black). Upper E. extended from the cataracts to Memphis, and was called THEBAIS; and Lower E. from Memphis to the sea called the DELTA. Upper E. was also called PATHROS (Is. xi. 11). Land of Ham (Ps. cv. 23). The sign for Upper E. was a bent reed, and for Lower E. a bee (Is. vii. 18).

E'HUD (Heb. union, powerful). 1. Son of Bilhan (Zech. vii. 10, viii. 6).—2. Son of Gera, tribe of Benjamin (Judg. iii. 15, ff), the second Judge of the Israelites (B. C. 1336), called a deliverer.

E'KER (Heb. transplanted). Descendant of Judah (1 Chr. ii. 27).

EK'REBEL (Judg. vii. 18), AKRABEH A village 7 miles S. E. of Nablûs.

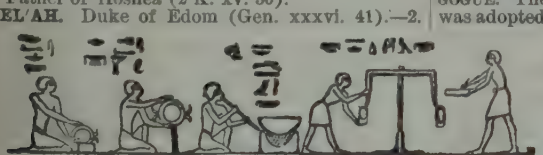
EK'RON (Heb. eradication). A royal city in the north of Philistia (Josh. xiii. 3), now AKIR, built on the accumulated rubbish of past ages. The deity worshiped was Baal-zebub. Ekron was the last place to which the Ark was carried before its return to Israel.

EK'RONITES. People of Ekron (Josh. xiii. 3).

E'LAH (valley of Terebinth). Where David slew Goliath (1 Sam. xvii. 2, 19; xxi. 9).

E'LAH (strength), (Heb. TEREBINTH or oak).—1. Son of Baasha, king of Israel (1 K. xvi. 8-14).—2. Father of Hoshea (2 K. xv. 30).

EL'AH. Duke of Edom (Gen. xxxvi. 41).—2.



WORKING IN METALS.

Father of Shimei (1 K. iv. 18).—3. Son of Caleb (1 Chr. iv. 15).—4. Son of Uzzi, a Benjamite chief (1 Chr. ix. 8).

EL'AHDAH (Heb. ELADA), (whom God adorns). A descendant of Ephraim (1 Chr. vii. 20).

E'LAM. Oldest son of Shem (Gen. x. 22). The country peopled by his descendants was along the Ulai, and its capital was Shushan, one of the most powerful and magnificent cities of antiquity. The name is found in the ancient inscriptions. Called also Nuvaki. Extended from the Persian Gulf to Assyria on the N., to the Zagron mts. on the E., and the Tigris on the W. In the time of Abram, the king of Elam was one of the most powerful in Asia (Jer. xlix. 34-39). The people were idolaters, and their images are found in the ruins. Elamites were at the Pentecostal feast (Acts ii. 9).

E'LAMITES. They were the original inhabitants of ELAM (Gen. x. 22; Ezr. iv. 9).

E'LASAH (God-created). ELASA. 1. A priest of Pashur (Ezr. x. 22).—2. Son of Shaphan. Sent on a mission by king Zedekiah to Babylon. (Jer. xxxi. 3).

E'LATH. Idumæa, on the E. gulf of the Red

PYRAMIDS AND SPHINX.

Sea. First named in Deut. ii. 8; and the reference in 1 K. ix. 26, shows that E. was more ancient than Ezion-gaber. King Solomon built a navy here. A fort is kept garrisoned here now, called Akaba, for the benefit of the pilgrims to Mecca.

EL'BETH'EL (God of Bethel). The place where God appeared to Jacob when he was fleeing from Esau (Gen. xxxv. 7).

EL'CIA. HILKIAH (Judg. viii. 1).

EL'DA-AH (Heb. whom God called) (Gen. xxv. 4). Son of Midian.

EL'DAD (whom God loves) and MEDAD. Two of the seventy Elders who had the gift of prophesy (Num. xi. 16, 26).

EL'DER (Heb. ZAKEN, Gr. presbyter). An old man. A title of honor and respect given to persons in authority (Gen. xxiv. 2; l. 7), as stewards or as master workmen. The elder was a political officer among the Hebrews, Moabites, Midianites and Egyptians (Num. xxii. 7). The office is the keystone of the political system among the modern Syrians, who use the name SHEIKH, which means old man, for the chief or head of the tribe. Moses adopted the idea and regulated its use by laws (Ex. iii. 16; iv. 29). Their authority was almost unlimited, within the law and customs (Josh. ix. 18). They became judges or magistrates in Canaan, in the local towns, sitting in the gates (Deut. xix. 12). They are called the Senate in 1 Macc. xii. 6. See SYNAGOGUE. The office of elder in the Christian church was adopted from the Jewish custom.

E'LEAD (whom God applauds). A decendant of Ephraim (1 Chr. vii. 21). SHUTHELAH.

ELE'ALEH (God's hight). E. of Jordan, on the plateau of Moab, 1 m. N. E. of Heshbon, on the summit of a conical hill. Was once strongly fortified; and there are ruins of walls, cisterns, etc. Rebuilt by Reuben (Num. xxxii. 37).

ELEA'SA. Near Azotus (1 Macc. ix. 15).

ELE'ASAH (Heb. ELASAH.) 1. Son of Helez of Judah (1 Chr. ii. 39).—2. Son of Rapha (1 Chr. viii. 37, ix. 43).

ELEA'ZAR (Heb. whom God helps). 1. Son of Aaron (Lev. x. 1, ff). Eleazar was chief over the Levites (Num. iii. 32).—2. Son of Abinadab (1 Sam. vii. 1).—3. Son of Dodo the Ahohite; one of the three chiefs of David's army (2 Sam. xxiii. 9, ff).—4. A Levite, son of Mohli (1 Chr. xxiii. 21, 22).—5. A priest (Neh. xii. 42).—6. A decendant of Parosh; an Israelite (Ezr. x. 25).—7. Son of Phinehas (Ezr. viii. 33).—8. Elizzer (1 Esd. viii. 43).—9. Avaran (1 Macc. ii. 5).—10. A distinguished scribe of great age, who was a martyr in the time of Antiochus Epiphanes (2 Macc. vi. 18, 31).—11. Father of Jason (1 Macc. viii. 18).—12. Son of Eliud (Matt. i. 15).

ELECT' (chosen, selected). Election. The designation of persons to office (Acts ix. 15); of people or nations to the enjoyment of peculiar privileges (Deut. vii. 6-8) and of a definite number of persons to eternal life (2 Thess. ii. 13). This subject belongs to the mysteries of God and cannot be so clearly stated as to leave no uncertainty in the mind. The position is: that God does and will save a number of persons, and He does this according to a plan which he formed before the world was made; and he has never, and never will change that plan (Eph. i. 4; 2 Tim. i. 9); their election is of free grace and love, and not for any good in the person (Eph. i. 5); the redemption of Christ is included in the great plan. This plan enters into our destiny as a controlling element; as, it may be said by analogy, the patriotic determination of Washington resulted in the independence of our country; and the plans of a father determines where his family shall reside, the college his son shall attend, and the studies he shall pursue.

EL-ELOHE-ISRAEL (Almighty, God of Israel). Name of the altar that Jacob built facing Shechem (Gen. xxxiii. 19, 20).

ELEPH (ox). Benj. (Josh. xviii. 18).

ELEPHANTS (Heb. SHEN-HABBIM). Elephants were used in warfare (1 Macc. i. 17, iii. 34). See IVORY.

ELEUTHEROP'OLIS. On the E. border of the plain of Philistia, at the foot of the hills of Judæa, in S. Palestine, 25 ms. S. W. from Jerusalem. Not mentioned in Scripture, but was an important city in the early Christian ages, when its name was Betogabra, House of Bread. Eusebius mentions it as the seat of a bishop, and reckons distances to other cities from it as a centre. The ruins are still shown of a fine chapel, and of a fort built by the Crusaders, 200 ft. square, in the 12th cent. Now Beit Jibrin, having 50 or more houses. The great attractions here are the caverns, or houses cut in the solid rocks. Rooms 100 feet or more in length, with smooth and ornamented walls, and lofty, arched roofs; some 40 to 70 ft. by 60 ft. high; most of them lighted by openings in the roof, and connected by doorways. Jerome says they were built by Idumæans.

ELEU'THERUS. River in Syria (1 Macc. xi. 7, xii. 30). Strabo says it divided Syria from Phœnicia. Now the Nahr el Kebir, Great River; rising in Lebanon, passing through the entrance to Hamath (Num. xxxiv. 8), emptying into the Great Sea 18 miles N. of Tripolis.

ELHA'NAN (God-endowed). 1. A great warrior in David's time (2 Sam. xxiii. 24). Son of Dodo, one of David's thirty men.—2. Son of Jair (or Jaor).

ELI (hight). A high-priest descended from Aaron (1 K. ii. 27; 2 Sam. viii. 17).

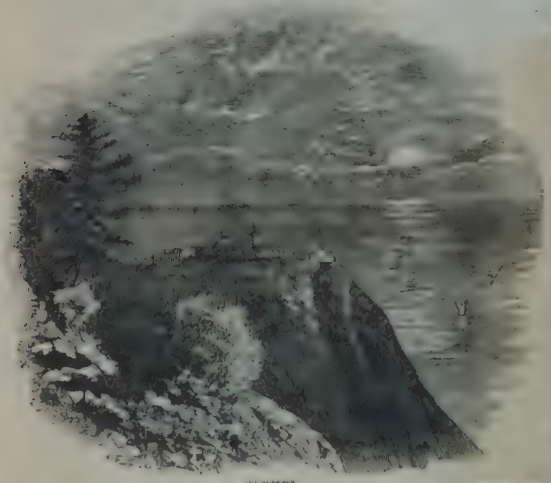
E'LI LA'MA (my God) SABACH'THANI—wherefore hast thou forsaken me?—words uttered by Christ on the cross (Matt. xxvii. 46; Ps. xxii.).

ELI'AB (God is father). 1. Son of Helon (Num. i. 9).—2. Son of Phallu (Num. xxvi. 8, 9).—3. One of David's brothers, son of Jesse (1 Chr. ii. 13).—4. A Levite, porter and musician (1 Chr. xv. 18, 20).—5. A Gadite leader in David's time (1 Chr. xii. 9).—6. Son of Nohath (1 Chr. vi. 27).—7. Son of Nathanael (Judg. viii. 1).

ELI'ADA (whom God knows or cares for). 1. Son of David (2 Sam. v. 16).—2. A Benjamite who led 200,000 men to the army of Jehoshaphat (2 Chr. xvii. 17).

ELI'ADAH (Heb. ELIADA). Father of Rezon (1 K. xi. 23). ELI'ADAS (1 Esd. ix. 28)—ELIOENAI.

ELI'AH (Heb. ELIJAH). 1. Son of Jeroham (1 Chr. viii. 29).—2. Son of Elam (Ezr. x. 26).



CARMEL.

ELI'ABA (whom God hides). One of David's thirty men (2 Sam. xxii. 32).

ELI'ĀKIM (whom God has set up). 1. Son of Hilkiah I (2 K. xviii. 26, 37); he was a prefect in the king's house (Is. xxii. 20).—2. The original name of Jehoiakim, king of Judah (2 K. xxiii. 34).—3. A priest who assisted at the dedication of the new wall of Jerusalem (Neh. xii. 41).—4. Son of Abiud, and father of Azor (Matt. i. 13).—5. Son of Melea (Luke iii. 30, 31).

ELIAM. ELIAB (God's people). 1. Father of Bathsheba (2 Sam. i. 3).—2. Son of Ahithophel (2 Sam. xxiii. 34).

ELIAS. See ELIJAH.

ELI'ASAPH (whom God has added). 1. Son of Deuel (Num. i. 14).—2. Son of Lael (Num. iii. 24).

ELI'ASHIB (God restores). 1. A priest in David's time (1 Chr. xxiv. 12).—2. Son of Elioenai (iii. 24).—3. High-priest at Jerusalem (Neh. iii. 1, 20, 21).—4. A singer (Ezr. x. 24).—5. Son of Zattu (x. 27).—6. Son of Bani (x. 36).

ELI'ATHAH (God comes). Son of Hernan (1 Chr. xxv. 4, 27).

ELI'DAD. Son of Chislon; a prince who assisted in the division of the land of Canaan (Num. xxxiv. 21).

E'LIEL (God is strength)). A common name among the Hebrews, but nothing of any note is known of any one bearing it (1 Chr. viii. 20; ii. 46).

ELIE'NAI. Son of Shimhi (1 Chr. viii. 20). Elioenai, a chief.

ELIE'ZER (God helps). 1. Steward of Abraham's house (Gen. xv. 5).—2. Son of Moses and Zipporah (Ex. xviii. 4).—3. Son of Becher (1 Chr. vii. 8).—4. Priest in David's reign (xxv. 24).—5. Son of Zichri (xxvii. 16).—6. Son of Dodavah (2 Chr. xx. 37).—7. A chief Israelite—a learned assistant to Ezra (Ezr. viii. 16).—8, 9, 10. Priests (Ezr. x. 18, 23, 31).—11. Son of Jorim (Luke iii. 29).

ELIHOE'NAI. Son of Zerahiah, who, with 200 men, returned from the captivity with Ezra (Ezr. viii. 4).

ELIHO'REPH (God rewards). Son of Shisha, scribe of Solomon.

ELI'HU (Jehovah). 1. Son of Barachel (Gen. xxii. 21).—2. Son of Tohu (1 Sam. i. 1).—3 (1 Chr. xxvii. 18). "Of the brethren of David."—4. Captain of the thousands of Manasseh (1 Chr. xii. 20). A Levite (1 Chr. xxvi. 7).

ELI'JAH (Heb. ELI'AHU, God-Jah, El-Jehovah). On his first appearance he is simply denominated "Elijah the Tishbite, of the inhabitants of Gilead" (1 K. xvii. 1). It is supposed that Thisbe, in Galilee, was the birth-place of Elijah, but there is no proof. Such points were left in doubt that he might be known and thought of simply as the great prophet reformer. In this light alone he appears in the sacred history. His one grand object was to awaken Israel to the conviction that Jehovah, Jehovah alone is God. The period of Israelitish history at which Elijah appeared was one that emphatically called for the living exhibition of this great truth. It was that period of Ahab's apostasy, when, through the influence and example of his wife Jezebel he formally introduced the worship of other gods into Israel. In the language of the sacred historian, "It seemed a light thing for him to walk in the sins of Jeroboam, the son of Nebat; he took the daughter of Ethbaal to wife, and served Baal, and worshiped him. He reared up an altar for Baal in the house of Baal, in Samaria" (1 K. xvi. 31). He did not rest, like his predecessors, with the corrupt worship of Jehovah under the form of a calf, but brought in the worship of the Tyrian Baal, with its usual accompaniment of the Asherah pollutions—the rites of the Syrian Venus. Hence he enters on the work assigned him as the special servant of Jehovah, and in his name announces what shall absolutely come to pass, confident that there is no power in heaven or earth capable of reversing the word. "And Elijah said unto Ahab, As Jehovah, God of Israel liveth, before whom I stand, there shall not be dew nor rain these years, but according to my word" (1 K. xvii. 1). After the utterance of a word by which the genial influences of heaven were to be laid under arrest for a series of years, it became necessary that a hiding-place should be provided for Elijah, that he might escape from the violence of those in high places, and from the importunities of others, who might try to prevail upon his pity. Such a hiding-place was found for him to the east—beyond the limits of the kingdom of Israel—beside the brook Cherith, that flowed into the Jordan. There he found not only water from the brook, but also supplies of bread and flesh, morning and evening, ministered at God's command by ravens. The brook Cherith, however, in course of time dried up, and another place of refuge had to be provided for the prophet. This was found in the house of a poor widow, with an only son—and she not in the land of Israel, but at Zarephath (Sarepta), in the territory of Zidon, the native region of the infamous Jezebel (1 K. xvii. 9). Brought by divine direction to the place and to the woman, he found her near the gate of the city, gathering a few sticks to prepare her last meal, that she and her son might thereafter die. In the confidence of faith he bids her go and bake the bread as she intended, but in the first instance to bring a portion of it, with a little water, to him, demanding such faith from her as he himself exercised toward God. And he added, as the ground for her belief and his own demand, "For thus saith Jehovah, God of Israel, the barrel of meal shall not waste, neither shall the cruse of oil fail till the day that Jehovah sendeth rain on the earth." On the occasion of a severe illness befalling her son, she said to Elijah in a petulant tone, "What have I to do with thee, O thou man of God? Art thou come unto me to call my sin to remembrance, and to slay my son?"

Josephus does not understand that the child died. Jewish tradition says that this boy afterwards became a servant to the prophet, and also the prophet Jonah.

This seems to imply that she looked upon him as the occasion of her calamity, and that it would have been better for her had she not known him. However she graciously overlooked what might be wrong in it; as it was, the calamity proved a heavy trial to Elijah, and with holy freedom he laid it before God, and said, "O Jehovah, my God, hast thou also brought evil upon the widow with whom I sojourn, by slaying her son? I pray thee, let this child's soul come into him again." The child began to breathe, and presently was delivered alive to his mother. She said, "Now, by this I know that thou art a man of God, and the word of Jehovah in thy mouth is truth."

It was in the third year of Elijah's sojourn with the widow, that the Lord came to him, announcing the near prospect of rain, and bid him go and show himself to Ahab (1 K. xviii. 1). Returning to King Ahab, he procured the great assembly at Mount Carmel, where God "answered by fire," and the prophets of Baal were destroyed. (See CARMEL.) Now the long terrible drought was broken, and a plentiful rain descended at the prophet's prayer. He fled from the fury of Jezebel first to Beersheba where he left his servant (Jonah), and went on alone into the wilderness (of Sinai.—Dr. Crosby), where he wished for death. "It is enough, Lord, let me die, for I am not better than my fathers." (The oratorio of Elijah, by Mendelssohn, is a beautiful and effective commentary on this part of the prophet's life.) Here the prophet saw the Lord pass by, in answer to his complaint. The wind rent the mountains, and brake in pieces the rocks of Sinai; then an earthquake; and after that a fire, burning in the constant blaze of lightning. These were symbols of the angry frame of mind that the prophet had. Then, after a profound stillness, there came a small voice, soft and gentle. This was Jehovah's method of winning men—not by exhibitions of terrible power. The persecutions of Ahab and Jezebel, the slaughter of Baal's priests, had nothing of God in them; but he was to be found as truly worshiped by the few who had not bowed the knee to Baal. These commands were given him:—To return to the wilderness of Damascus, and at a proper time annoint Hazael, king of Syria, Jehu, king of Israel, and Elisha as his successor. Elisha was appointed by having Elijah's cloak (of coarse camel hair, or wool) cast on him, when, from that time "He poured water on the hands of Elijah," that is, served him daily. Six years after he denounces Ahab and Jezebel for their crime against Naboth, in taking his vineyard. He foretells the death of Ahaziah, the king. The warning letter to Jehoram is by a later hand, of the same school. Two bands of guards having been sent by Ahab to arrest him, he calls down fire from heaven on their heads. Soon after that he crossed the Jordan with Elisha "on dry ground," and was separated from him by fire and carried away by a wind "into heaven." Elisha asked for the first born's double portion, as the eldest follower of Elijah. His whole life as a prophet was one of trial and conflict. The Jews, in the time of Jesus, expected Elijah to reappear, and Jesus alludes to the belief (Matt. xi. 14), explaining the fulfilment as in John the Baptist. Elijah (Elias in Greek) became a name for any or all true prophets, as David for the king, Abraham or Israel for the Hebrews.

ĒLIM (trees). Had twelve fountains (not wells), and a palm grove, being a kind of desert paradise (Ex. xv. 27). Wady Ghurundel has now several fine fountains, supplying a perennial stream, and has more trees, shrubs, and bushes than any other spot in the desert. Here the plain ends and the mountain begins.

ĒLIM'ELECH (God is King). The Bethlehemite husband of Noomi; the father of Mahlon and Chilion. See RUTH in the HISTORY OF THE BOOKS.

ELIOĒ'NAI (eyes turned to El-God).—1. Benjamite, and head of a family (1 Chr. vii. 8).—2 Simeonite, and head of a family (1 Chr. iv. 36).—3. Korhite Levite, and doorkeeper in the Temple of Solomon (1 Chr. xxvi. 3). Two before, and two others after the captivity, were not noted.

EL'IPHAL (judged by El). Son of Ur (1 Chr. xi. 35).

ELIPH'ALET. Son of David, the last of 13, born in Jerusalem (2 Sam. v. 16).—2. One of David's 30 heroes.—3. A Benjamite. ELIPHELET.

EL'IPHAZ, or ELĪPHAZ (God for strength). 1. Son of Esau, and father of Teman (Gen. xxxvi. 10).—2. Chief of the three friends of Job, called the Temanite (Job. ii. 11). See JOB in the HISTORY OF THE BOOKS.

ELIPH'ELET (God distinguishes).—1. Son of David (1 Chr. iii. 6). ELPALET.—2 ELIPHALET 1. —3. Son of ABASBAI (2 Sam. xxiii. 34). ELIPHAL in 1 Chr. xi.—4. Son of Eshek, and of Saul through Jonathan (1 Chr. viii. 39).—5. One of the Bene-Adonikam who returned with Ezra (Ezr. viii. 13).—6. One of the Bene-Hashum in Ezra's time (Ezr. x. 33).

ELIS'ABETH (fulness of God).—1. Wife of Zacharias, and mother of John the Baptist (Luke i. 5, 42), and cousin to Mary, the mother of Jesus.—2. The wife of Aaron (Ex. vi. 23).

ELISĒUS. The name of Elisha in the Apocrypha and the N. T. (Luke iv. 27).

ELI'SHA (God for salvation). Son of Shaphat, and a native of Abel-Meholah, where Elijah found him, whose pupil and successor he was from B. C. 903 to 838 (1 K. xix. 16). He was with Elijah when he divided the Jordan, and was carried away by a whirlwind and chariot of fire. Elijah's mission was to show that El was the God of Israel—Elisha to show that God should also be the salvation of his people. Beneficent working and kindly blessing were Elisha's chief work. His first act was to heal the bitter waters of Jericho. Following this were: the anathema on the young lads who mocked at God's prophet; refusing to prophesy for Jehoram the son of Ahab, "the son of a murderer," he did so to Jehoshaphat, giving them counsel which secured victory; he multiplied the widow's pot of oil; restored the Shunemite's son; cured the poisoned pottage; he multiplies a scant supply (twenty barley loaves and some roasted corn) to enough for 100 men; cured Naaman's leprosy; Gehazi lies, and is cursed with leprosy; restored the ax lost in the Jordan; showed a host of spiritual warriors to his servant, and struck blind the whole Syrian army, but he saved them from destruction by the Jews, caused the king to feed and send them away; he predicts plenty and the death of the king; the king restores her land to the Shunemite; predicts the death of king Ben-hadad, and the succession of Hazael; anoints Jehu king over Israel; the incident of the smiting with the bundles of arrows. Even after death he restored the dead to life. Elisha is seen to resemble Christ in his miracles, and in his loving, gentle character. He had no successor. The Greek church honors Elisha as a saint, on June 14.

ELĪSHA (firm bond). Son of Javan (Gen. x. 4), who named the "Isles of Elisha," which traded with Tyre (Ez. xxvii. 7). ELIS is from the same source. HELLAS, ancient Greece.

ELISHĀ'MA (God hears). Prince in Ephraim (Num. i. 10).—2. Son of David (2 Sam. v. 16).—3. Son of David, also called ELISHUA (1 Chr. iii. 6).—4. Of Judah, son of Jekamiah (1 Chr. ii. 41), and father of Nethaniah, grandfather of Ishmael of the Captivity (2 K. xxv. 25); ELISHAMAH in some editions.—5. Scribe to Jehoiakim (Jer. xxxvi. 12) —7. Priest to Jehoshaphat, and sent to teach (2 Chr. xvii. 8).

ELISH'APHAT (God judges). Captain of "hundreds," in the service of Jehoiada (2 Chr. xxiii. 1).

ELISH'EBA (God of the oath). Daughter of Amminadab, of Judah, wife of Aaron; same as Elisabeth (Ex. vi. 23; Num. i. 7). Her marriage to Aaron united the royal and priestly tribes, Judah and Levi.

ELISHU'A (El is salvation). David's son, born at Jerusalem (2 Sam. v. 15). ELISHAMA in 1 Chr. iii. 6).

ELĪU. Ancestor of Judith (viii. 1), of Simeon.

ELĪ'UD (Jews' God). Son of Achim (Matt. i. 15). From Abina.

ELIZ'APHAN (God protects).—1. Son of Uzziel, a Levite (Ex. vi. 22). The family are mentioned in the times of David and Hezekiah. ELZAPHAN. 2. Son of Parnach, appointed by Moses, from Zebulon, to assist in dividing the land (Num. xxxiv. 25).

GOLDEN EAGLE.

ELĪ'ZUR (God the rock). Son of Shedeur, of Reuben (Num. i. 5).

ELKĀ'NAH (El creates). Son of Korah (Ex. vi. 24). Several generations of Korah's sons are given in 1 Chr. vi. 22, etc.—2. Son of Joel, in the same line as 1 (vi. 25, 36).—3. Another, in the line of Ahimoth, or Mahath (vi. 26, 35).—4. A Kohathite Levite, in the line of Heman. Son of Jeroham, and father of Samuel the prophet (1 Sam. i. 1, etc). He lived in Mt. Ephraim, or Ramah, and attended yearly meeting for worship and sacrifice at Shiloh. He was rich enough to give three bullocks when Samuel was presented at the house of the Lord.—5. A Levite living in Netopha (ix. 16).—6. Doorkeeper in David's time, for the ark (xv. 23).—7. Joined David at Ziklag (xii. 6).—8. The second in command in the house of Ahaz, killed by Zichri (2 Chr. xxviii. 7).

ELKŌSH' (El's power). Birthplace of Nahum (i. 1). There is a place so named in Assyria (34 ms. N. of Mosul), and modern Jews and the resident Chaldee Christians show a tomb of Nahum there. Jerome says the place was in Galilee, where there is now a traditional tomb of the prophet at kefr tanchum, near Tiberias.

ELKOSH'ITE. From Elkosh.

EL'LASAR (Gen. xiv. 1). THELASAR TELASSAR. The country and kingdom of Arioch in the days of Abraham.

ELM. Error for oak (Heb. ALAH), in Hos. iv. 13.

ELMŌ'DAM. Son of Er, in Joseph's line (Luke iii. 28). Almodad in Gen. x. 26.

ELNĀ'AM (El his delight). Father of Jeribai and Joshaviah, two of David's guard (1 Chr. xi. 46).

ELNĀ'THAN (whom El gave). Maternal grandfather of Jehoiachin (2 K. xxiv. 8).—2. Three Levites of this name in Ezra's time (Ezr. viii. 16). In 1 Esd. viii. 44, etc., the names are ALNATHAN and EUNATAN. Elnathan was sent by the king into Egypt to bring back the fugitive Urijah (Jer. xxvi. 20); and he was present at the burning of Jeremiah's roll, protesting against the act. See JEHOIAKIM.

ELŌ'HIM. A plural word in Hebrew, meaning the true God. See GOD.

ELŌ'I. When applied to heathen idols, it means gods. My God (Mark xv. 34).

Ē'LON (Heb. ALLON, an oak). 1. Father of Esau's wife Adah, a Hittite (Gen. xxvi. 34).—2. Founder of the Elonites (Gen. xlvi. 14).—3. Judge for ten years (Judg. xii. 11); from the tribe of Zebulon. E'LON (oak). Dan (Josh. xix. 43). Same place as E'LON-BETH-HANAN (oak of the house of grace). Dan (1 K. iv. 9). Lost.

EL'PAAL (El, his reward). Son of Hushim, a Benjamite, and founder of a family (1 Chr. viii. 12).

ELPĀ'RAN. Terebinth of Paran (Gen. xiv. 6).

EL'TEKEH (El fearing). Place in Dan (Josh. xix. 44). Levitical.

ELTEKON (God its foundation). In Judah, 4 miles from Hebron (Josh. xv. 59). Lost.

ELTŌ'LAD (El's kindred). In Judah, near Beersheba (Josh xv. 30). Wilton thinks it was in Wady Iussan, 60 miles S. of Gaza. Rowland places it in Wady Salud, 40 miles S. E. of Gaza.

ĒLUL. Name of the sixth Hebrew month.

ELŪ'ZAI (God my praise). Soldier who joined David at Ziklag (1 Chr. xii. 5).

ELYMA'IS. ELAM. City in Persia, containing a very rich temple, in which were many trophies deposited by Alexander the Great (1 Macc. vi. 1). Antiochus Epiphanes failed to capture it (Ant. xii. 9, § 1). In Tobit ii. 10, Elymais is the name of a province.

ELYMÆ'ANS. Elamites (Judith i. 6). See ELAM.

EL'YMAS (Ar. wise). Arabic name of Barjesus (Acts xiii. 6), the sorcerer. The Orientals called fortune-tellers by their true names, sorcerers, imposters.

EL'ZĀBAD (given by El). Warrior from Gad, who joined David in the wilderness (1 Chr. xii. 12).—2. A Korhite Levite, son of Shemaiah (1 Chr. xxvi. 7), a doorkeeper in the Temple.

EL'ZĀPHAN (protected by El). Cousin to Moses, and son of Uzziel (Ex. vi. 22). He was one of the two bearers of Nadab and Abihu (Lev. x. 4). ELIZAPHAN.

EMBALMING (em-bä-ming). Preserving by spices, gums, etc., dead bodies from decay. Two instances are mentioned in the O. T.: Jacob's and Joseph's bodies (Gen. l. 2, 26). The soft parts of the interior were removed, and spices, gums, etc., filled in their stead, and the whole was then steeped for 70 days in natron (petroleum or asphaltum), after which the body was carefully wrapped in strips of linen, dipped in gum, and delivered to the friends, who put it in the coffin, which was of wood carved and painted, or of stone, sculptured. The whole art was carefully guarded by strict laws. The body could only be cut by an authorized person, with a stone knife (see KNIFE). Embalming was not practiced by the Hebrews. Asa was laid in a bed of spices (2 Chr. xvi. 14), and Jesus had a hundred pound weight of spices placed in the tomb (John xix. 39, 40).

MUMMY.

The Egyptians practiced the art because of their belief in the doctrine of transmigration of souls. (See Pettigrew's Hist. of Eg. Mummies).

EMBROIDERED ROBE.

EMBROIDERY (Heb. ROKEN), (Ex. xxxv. 35). Needlework. Two kinds of extra fine cloth was made, one by the roken of various colors and figures, called rikmah, and the other by the chosheb (cunning workmen), into which gold or other metallic threads are woven, besides the usual colors, both of which were made in the loom. The needle was used where the figure was wanted on one side only of the cloth. Wilkinson says that "Many of the Egyptian stuffs presented various patterns, worked in colors by the loom, independent of those produced by the dyeing or the printing process, and so richly composed that they vied with the cloths embroidered by the needle." The art was known in Assyria also, as the sculptures show. Ezekiel mentions embroidered work as the production of Egypt and Assyria, imported by way of Tyre (Ez. xxvii. 7, 23, 24). See DRESS.

EM'ERALD (Heb. NOPEK). A precious stone in the 2d row in the breastplate of the high-priest (Ex. xxviii. 18).

EM'ERODS. Some kind of tumors which afflicted the Philistines, because of their want of respect for the ark of the covenant (1 Sam. v. 6).

E'MIM (Heb. terrors). Moabite name for a race of giants or strong men, on the east of the Dead Sea (Gen. xiv. 5; Deut. ii. 10).

EMMAN'UEL. IMMANUEL (Matt. i. 23).

EMMĀ'US. Now called Kuriet El Enab, 7½ ms. west of Jerusalem. Josephus mentions it (Wars vii. 6, 9). Jerome mistook Nicopolis, the present Amwas, for this place, a proof of how early some scripture localities of the N. T. times were lost.—2. In the plain of Philistia; fortified by Bacchides (Ant. xiii. 1, 3; Macc. ix. 50). Destroyed A. D. 4, by the Romans. Rebuilt A. D. 220, and called Nicopolis.—3. A village on the shore of the Sea of Galilee, S. of Tiberias, the same as Hammath (hot baths).

EM'MOR. See HAMOR (Acts vii. 16).

EN. AIN Hebrew for fountain. The word means an eye. See AIN.

ENĀ'JIM. ENAM. An open place (Gen. xxxviii. 11, 21), in the gate of Enam.

E'NAM (double spring). Judah, in the Shefelah (Josh. xv. 34). The residence of Tamar. (Gen. xxxviii. 14).

Ē'NAN (having eyes or fountains). Ahiram Ben Enan was a chief of the tribe of Naphtali, at Sinai (Num. i. 15).

ENCAMPMENT (Heb. MAHANEH). The camp of the Lord's host, with the Lord himself symbolically resident among them. The whole camp was a sacred place, and all impurities both actual and ceremonial must go outside of its limits (Deut. xxiii. 14). Criminals were also executed outside, as also of the cities. It was managed and guarded in a military style, with sentinels, etc. See WILDERNESS OF THE WANDERING. The modern Bedawins now camp in any fit place, near water, if possible. The Sheikh marks his place by his spear standing in front of his tent. The walled cities were fortified camps.

ENCHANTMENTS. Several Hebrew words are so translated.—1. LATIM (Ex. vii. 11); secret arts. —2. CESHAPHIM (2 K. ix. 22); witchcrafts, sorceries, in Isaiah xlvii. 9, meaning muttered spells. —3. LAHASH (Eccl. x. 11); ear-rings, amulets in Is. iii. 20. Used in the charming of serpents.—4. NAHASH (Num. xxiii. 23), augury, omen.—5. HEBER, spell. See MAGIC, DIVINATION.

EN'DOR (spring of Dor). In Issacher, but belonging to Manasseh (Josh. xvii. 11). The great victory over Sisera and Jabin (Ps. lxxxiii. 9, 10). Saul visited the witch (1 Sam. xxviii. 7). Now a little village at the N. of Jebel Duhy, Little Hermon. The rocks around are full of caves.

ENĒ'AS. A paralytic healed by Peter at Lydda (Acts ix. 33, 34).

ENEGLĀ'IM (spring of two heifers). On the shore of the Dead Sea. Lost. (Ez. xlvii. 10).

ENGANNIM (spring of gardens). Judah, in the Shefelah near Zanoah (Josh. xv. 34).—2. Issachar. (Josh. xix. 21; Lev. xxi. 29). Now Jenin, at the head of the plain of Esdraelon (Jos. Ant. xx. 6, § 1). The spring and orchards are still famous.

ENGEDI

ENGĒ'DI (spring of the kid). In the wilderness of Judah, on the W. shore of the Dead Sea (Josh. xv. 62). HAZEZON TAMAR (the pruning of the palms) was its original name, from its palm-groves (2 Chr. xx. 2; Eccl. xxiv. 14; Jos. Ant. ix. 1, § 2). A rich plain half a mile square, gently sloping up from the water to the base of the mts., watered by a fountain a mile from the sea, up a ravine 400 ft. above the level plain; the water is sweet and warm (81° Fahr.). Ruins of the ancient city are scattered tered over the hills and plain. The soil is rich and fertile, and the variety of trees even now produced gives evidence of its ancient fruitfulness. The vineyards mentioned in Cant. i. 14, are still represented by fine vines. Its history is 4000 years, but may be told in a few words. The Amorites dwelt here (Gen. xiv. 7; 2 Chr. xx. 2). David cut off the skirt of Saul's robe in a cave at E. (1 Sam. xxiv. 1-4). The early hermits of Palestine, the Essenes, had their chief seat at Engedi, and not far from there is the convent of Mar Saba (Saint Saba), in the gorge of Kidron.

EN'GINE. In military affairs, machines for throwing things, first mentioned of Uzziah's time (2 Chr. xxvi. 15). They were: 1. balista, cross-bows, for arrows or stones, and catapulta, the same, much larger,—2. the battering ram (see cut on page 14), for breaking walls (Ez. iv. 2).

ENGRĀ'VER (harash, in Ex. xxviii. 11, etc.). Any worker in wood, stone, or metal. The work was cutting names or devices on rings or seals; as on the high-priest's dress, breast-plate, etc. The art was known among all ancient nations, as evidences from the ruins prove. Many beautiful specimens of engravings on rings, etc., are preserved in the museums of Europe and in the Abbott Egyptian Museum, New York.

ENHAD'DAH (swift spring). In Issachar, near ENGANNIM (Josh. xix. 21).

ENHAKKŌ'RE (spring of the crier). The spring which came forth in answer to the call of Samson (Judg. xv. 19). See LEHI.

ENHĀ'ZOR (spring of the village). Naph., a fenced city, near Kedesh (Josh. xix. 37). Lost.

ENMISH'PAT (spring of judgment), (Gen. xiv. 7). KADESH.

Ē'NOCH. HENOC (teacher). Eldest son of Cain, who named his city after himself (Gen. iv. 17).—2. The son of Jared, and father of Methuselah, the seventh from Adam (Jude, 14). Enoch was a type of perfected humanity, "a man raised to heaven by pleasing God, while angels fell to earth by transgression." Some have thought Enoch was the god of the new year, because he lived 365 years, and did not die. The phrase "walked with God," is also used of Noah (Gen. vi. 9), and of Abraham (xvii. 1), and of others, as well as of people, and means a spiritual, upright life. The Greek and Latin fathers used the instances of Enoch and Elijah as evidences of the possibility of a resurrection and a future life. He is supposed to be one of the two witnesses alluded to in Rev. xi. 3. He is called Edris (the learned) in the Koran, and is credited with inventing the art of writing and the sciences of arithmetic and astronomy. See HISTORY OF THE BOOKS for the Book of Enoch.—3. Third son of Midian (1 Chr. i. 33, Henoch).—4. Son of Reuben (Gen. xlvi. 9, Hanoch), from whom came the Hanochites (Num. xxvi. 5).—5. In 2 Esd. vi. 49, 51, Enoch is found in the Latin and English versions, and Behemoth in the Æthiopic.

Ē'NON (John iii. 23). AENON.

ĒNOS (Heb. ENOSH, man). Son of Seth (Gen. iv. 26). Enosh (1 Chr. i. 1).

ENRIM'MON. Reinhabited after the return from the Bab. Cap. (Neh. xi. 29). Probably Ain and Rimmon (Josh. xv. 32).

EN-RŌGEL (fuller's fountain). Spring near Jerusalem, at the junction of the valleys of Jehoshaphat and Hinnom (Josh. xv. 7; xviii. 16). Jon athan and Ahimaaz hid here (2 Sam. xvii. 17). Adonijah held a feast here, by the stone Zoheleth; his first and last attempt on the crown (1 K. i. 9). Josephus (Ant. vii. 14, § 4; ix. 10, § 4) mentions the royal gardens. The well is 125 feet deep, walled up square with large stones, and arched over. It overflows underground most of the time, over the top only a little while in the rainy season. "It is a singular work of ancient enterprise" (Thomson, Land and Book, ii. 528).

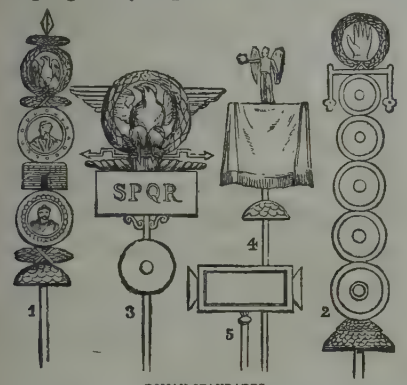
ENSHĒ'MESH (spring of the sun). Landmark on the N. of Judah (Josh. xv. 7). The only spring now known east of the Mt. of Olives is the Well of the Apostles, so called because it is supposed that Christ and his apostles rested there often, about a mile east of Bethany. The sun shines on the spring all day long.



ROMAN STANDARDS.

EN'SIGN. STANDARD. Several Hebrew words are so rendered: NES, an elevated signal, not a military standard, having on it a device, emblem or inscription, as "Jehovah nissi" (Ex. xii. 15); the pole on which the brazen serpent was lifted is so called (Num. xxi. 8), which was an ensign of deliverance. DEGEL was the standard given to each of the four divisions (see ENCAMPMENT) of the Israelite host in the Wilderness (Num. i. 52). The Egyptian banners had on them sacred emblems—as a boat, an animal, a bird, or the king's name. The Hebrew banners are described by the Rabbis as follows: Judah, a lion; Reuben, a man; Ephraim, an ox; Dan, an eagle. It is more probable that each tribe and each company in a tribe had a particular ensign for its own use—as a figure or inscription. The Romans made images on their standards of certain gods and of deified men, which they worshiped. The Assyrian standards were very similar to those represented here as Egyptian and Roman.

EGYPTIAN STANDARDS.

ENSŪE'. In 1 Pet. iii. 11, ensue means to follow after and overtake—a meaning now obsolete.

ENTAP'PŪAH (citron-spring). Boundary of Manasseh, near Shechem (Josh. xvii. 7). TAPPUAH.

ENTREĀT. INTREAT. TREAT. To be entreated means in Scripture to be persuaded, as in 1 Chr. v. 20; Is. xix. 22, etc.

EPŒNE'TUS. EPENETUS (praised). Disciple at Rome, mentioned in Rom. xvi. 5, as the first fruit of Asia unto Christ. Tradition says he was first bishop of Carthage.

EP'ĀPHRAS (lovely). Paul's assistant at Colossæ (Col. i. 7), of which he was a native, and very kind to Paul, who was in prison in Rome.

EPAPHRODI'TUS (favored by Venus). A disciple at Philippi, who was sent to Paul at Rome with contributions (Phil. ii. 25). He preached in North Greece and Macedonia.

Ē'PHAH (darkness). Son of Midian (Gen. xxv. 4; Is. xl. 6, 7). There is a town in Arabia, near Bilbeys, called Gheyfer (jā-fēr), which is supposed to be Ephah.—2. Woman in Caleb's family, in the line of Judah (1 Chr. ii. 46).—3. Son of Johdai, in the same line (ib. 47).—4. See MEASURES.

Ē'PHAI (weary). OPHAI (languid). Of Netopha, whose sons were officers left in Judah during the captivity (Jer xl. 8). Killed with Gedaliah by Ishmael (xli. 3—compare xl. 13). Ishmael 6.

Ē'PHER (calf). Son of Midian (Gen. xxv. 4). The Arabs have a town named Ghifr (jiffer, a calf), but trace to Amalek and Ishmael, and not to Midian.—2. Son of Ezra, of Judah, in Caleb's line (1 Chr. iv. 17).—3. Chief in Manasseh, E. of Jordan (1 Chr. v. 24).

Ē'PHĒS-DĀM'MIM (end of blood). Between Socoh and Azekah, where the Philistines encamped the evening before David slew Goliath (1 Sam. xvii. 1). PAS-DAMMIM (1 Chr. xi. 13).

EPHĒ'SIAN. Trophimus, the Ephesian (Acts xxi. 29).

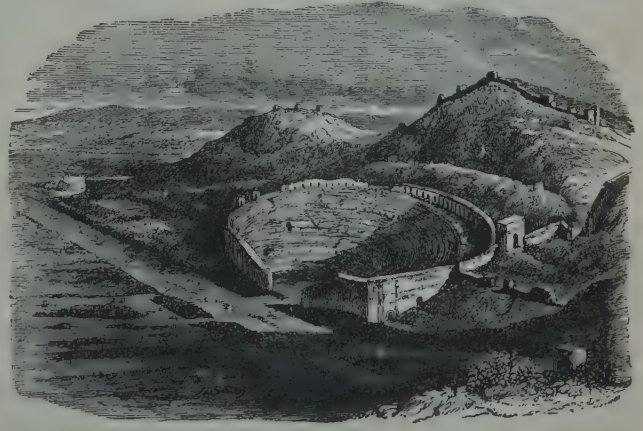
EPHĒ'SIANS. Citizens of Ephesus, who worshiped Diana (Acts xix. 28, etc.). The Epistle to the Ephesians is described in the HISTORY OF THE BOOKS.

EPH'ESUS. About the middle of the W. of Asia Minor, opposite the island of Samos. The capital of Asia, which province under the Romans included only the W. part of the peninsula. Built partly on hills and partly on the plain. The climate was excellent. The country around the city was very fertile, and its position most convenient for traffic with other regions of the Levant. In the time of Augustus it was the great metropolis of this section of Asia Minor. Paul's journeys indicate the facilities for travel by sea and land.

The harbor was elaborately constructed, and at its head stood the famous temple of Diana. The first temple was burnt on the night Alexander the Great was born; the second, which stood in Paul's time, was built by the contributions of all Asia: 425 feet long by 220 wide, with 127 marble columns, each 60 feet high. Built in the Ionic order, perfected here first. The magnificence of this great temple was a proverb throughout the world. Here the people held an "uproar" against Paul for two hours (Acts xix. 23. See PAUL). Public games were held in the month of May, which was sacred to Diana, and Paul was probably there at that time (1 Cor. xvi. 8). Plutarch mentions the charms and amulets which were made and sold here, and accounts of faith in their value reach as far down as the 6th century. The coins of E. have many allusions to the Diana worship. Josephus says the Jews were numerous there. Disciples of John the Baptist were found here after the ascension of Christ (Acts xviii. 25; xix. 3). Paul established a church here, of which Timothy was at one time the head. It is supposed that St. John the Divine wrote his Gospel and Epistles here; the Apocalypse being written on Patmos. E. was one of the seven churches, and is named first; and its "candlestick" has been removed surely, for all is desolation now where the city once stood. The fine columns have been carried to other cities, chiefly Constantinople and Italy. Ruins cover the hills and a swamp the plain. There is a tradition that the mother of Jesus was buried here, and also Timothy and St. John.

There is now a railroad from Smyrna to Aidin, with a station near the ruins of Ephesus, called Aysaluk (ā-sa-look, city of the moon). The whole district covered by the ancient city and suburbs are now desolate. The map was copied from one constructed on the spot by Prof. Eddy, 1870. See LIFE OF PAUL, of JOHN, DIANA.

SITE OF EPHESUS.



THEATRE AT EPHESUS.

EPH'LAL (judgment). Son of Zabad (1 Chr. ii. 37), in the tribe of Judah.

EPH'OD (girded on). Part of the high-priest's dress—the peculiar badge of his office.

Ē'PHOD (oracle-giving). Father of Hanniel, chief in Manasseh (Num. xxxiv. 23).

Ē'PHRAIM (double fruitfulness). Second son of Joseph by his wife Asenath. Blessed by Jacob above his elder brother, Manasseh (Gen. xlviii.). Joshua, the son of Nun, was of E. The portion of E. in Canaan was 55 ms. from E. to W. and 70 ms. from N. to S. in extent; elevated, hilly, and having the plain of Sharon, a narrow strip, on the W., Esdraëlon on the N., and the Jordan valley on the E., in the centre of the country, the whole called Mt. E. (1 Sam. i. 1, vii. 17; 2 Chr. xiii., xv. 8). It had the "precious things of the earth, and the fulness thereof," as blessed by Moses. The finest and most fruitful of all the land. Afterward called Samaria. Its wealth and importance were increased by the presence of the Ark of the Covenant and the Tabernacle at Shiloh within its borders. The people were jealous, and at enmity with the tribe of Judah from the time of David. Very few attempts to conquer E. were ever made, and Shalmaneser only succeeded through the internal divisions of the kingdom of Samaria (721 B. C. See SHECHEM; SAMARIA).—2. A city on a hill N. E. of Jerusalem, 10 ms. See OPHRAH.—3. A forest E. of Jordan, near Mahanaim, where Absalom was caught by his hair in a tree and killed, when fighting against his father David, the king (2 Sam. xviii. 6).

Ē'PHRAIN. EPHRON (2 Chr. xiii. 19). Supposed to be Ophrah.

Ē'PHRAIM, THE GATE OF. See JERUSALEM.

Ē'PHRAIM, MOUNT, means the whole hill country of the district between Jordan and the plain of Sharon.

Ē'PHRAIM, THE WOOD OF. EPHRAIM 3.

Ē'PHRAIMITE. Ephrathite (Judg. xii. 5), of E.

EPH'RATAH, EPH'RATH. The ancient name of Bethlehem. Ephratites, cities of Bethlehem-Judah

EPHRAIM.

(Ruth i. 2). The second wife of Caleb, the son of Hezrom, mother of Hur, and grandmother of Caleb the spy, was named Ephrath (1 Chr. ii. 19), Ephratah in verse 50. Caleb-ephratah in verse 24.

Ē'PHRON (fawn). Son of Zohar (Heb. ZOCHAR), a Hittite, who sold the field to Abraham (Gen. xxiii. 8, etc.).

E'PHRON. E. of Jordan, a strong city between Carnaim and Bethshan (1 Macc. v. 46–52; 2 Macc. xvi. 27). Lost.

E'PHRON, MOUNT, Cities of, were landmarks (Josh. xv. 9). Said to be Ain Lifta (Nephtoah), and Kuriet el Enab (Kirjath-jearim).

EPICŪ'REANS. Disciples and followers of the philosopher Epicurus (lived B. C. 342-271), who taught at Athens. He tried to find in philosophy a practical guide to happiness. True pleasure, and not absolute truth, was his aim. He endeavored to remove superstitious fears, and made the study of physics (nature) useful for the good of mankind. Epicurus was a follower of Diogenes Laërtius. His system had degenerated into mere materialism at the time when Paul was at Athens (Acts xvii. 18). The Stoics were their opponents; who were named from a portico (Greek stoa) in which the philosopher Zeno taught, at Athens, a system of ethics based on pride, as Christianity is on humility. This school taught the Fatherhood of God, the common bonds of mankind, and the sovereignty of the soul. Christianity was a practical union of the two schools of Epicureans and Stoics. The same ideas among the Jews produced the sect of Sadducees. The teaching of the Hebrew patriarchs and prophets was independent of any system of philosophy, and it is curious that Greek philosophy arose just after the Hebrew prophets closed their oracles, Malachi being cotemporary with Socrates.

EPIPH'ANĒS. ANTIOCHUS EPIPHANES (1 Macc. 1. x.)

EP'IPHI. The 11th month of the Egyptian year, the third of the "season of waters," inundation. Named from the goddess Apapt. The Hebrews derived from this their name Abib, the 1st sacred, and the 7th civil month in their calendar.

EPĬS'TLES. See HISTORY OF THE BOOKS.

Ē'QUAL. Means to make equal in Lam. ii. 13.

ĒR (watchful). First-born of Judah, son of Bath-Shuah, a Canaanite. He married Tamar, who became mother of Pharez and Zarah by Judah. He probably sinned by idolatry (prompted by his wife?) (Gen. xxxviii. 3-7).—2. In the line of Judah, son of Shelah (1 Chr. iv. 21).—3. Son of Jose, a cotemporary with king Uzziah (Luke iii. 28).

Ē'RA. CHRONOLOGY. The Era of Jesus Christ is dated four years too late, and was fixed by the Abbot Dionysius Exiguus, in the 6th century, so that the true date would be now not 1871 but 1875.

Ē'RAN. Son of Shuthelah, and ancestor of the Eranites.

Ē'RANITES. Descendants of Eran (Num. xxvi. 36).

ERĂSTUS (beloved). Chamberlain of Corinth, and a disciple (Rom. xvi. 23). He was with Paul on some of his journeys (Acts xix. 23), and probably settled at Corinth (2 Tim. iv. 20).—2. A deacon in the church at Ephesus. Supposed to be different from No. 1.

E'RECH. Land of Shinar. Built by Nimrod. (Gen. x. 10). Now Irak, 43 ms. E. of Babylon. The place seems to have been the metropolis of the Assyrian kings, mounds and the remains of bricks and coffins being found through a wide district. People from this city were transplanted to Samaria by Asnapper (Ezr. iv. 9). See Rawlinson's Five Great Monarchies.

Ē'RES. Hebrew word for a species of pine. See CEDAR.

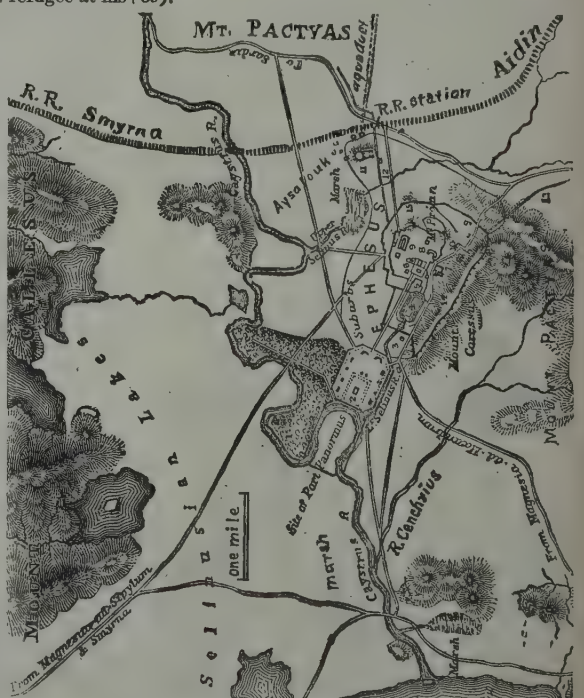
Ē'RI (watching.) HERI. HER. Son of Gad (Gen. xlvi. 16).

Ē'RITES. Branch of the tribe of Gad, from Eri (Num. xxvi. 16).

ESĂ'IAS. The Greek form of the Hebrew Isaiah (ISAIAHU), (Matt. iii. 3, etc).

Ē'SAR-HAD'DON (fire-given). King of Assyria, son of Sennacherib (2 K. xix. 37). He first appears in history B. C. 680, as king, after his father's murder (Is. xxxvii. 38). The monuments exhibit him as one of the most powerful of the Assyrian kings, conquering all Asia, from the Persian Gulf to the mountains in Armenia, and the Mediterranean Sea. He is the only Assyrian king who dwelt (a part of the time) at Babylon, where bricks are found bearing his name. It is while living there (B. C. 680-667), that Manasseh, king of Judah, was brought before him at Babylon (2 Chr. xxxiii. 11). He proved his great clemency by restoring Manasseh to his throne in Jerusalem, and by giving territory on the Persian Gulf to a son of Merodach-Baladan, whom he had conquered, and who submitted to him and became a refugee at his court. He was a builder of great works, such as his palace at Babylon, and three others, in different cities, for himself and his son; and one inscription mentions thirty temples in Assyria and Mesopotamia. These works were ornamented highly with silver and gold. The palace at Nimroud is the best preserved of any. Mr. Layard found its plan to agree quite closely with that of Solomon's palace (1 K. vii. 1–12), but much larger, the great hall being 220 by 100 feet, and the porch 160 by 60. The sculptures were winged bulls, sphinxes and slabs, most of which were almost destroyed by fire. It is believed that Phœnician and Greek artists were employed as assistants on these works. His son, Asshur-banipal, succeeded him (SARDANAPALUS).

ĒSAU (Heb. ESAV, hairy). Oldest son of Isaac, twin of Jacob. The bitter enmity of the two brothers, and the strife between the two nations derived from them, were foreshadowed even in the womb (Gen. xxv. 22 to 27). Esau was a robust, active, real Bedawy, "son of the desert," and was loved for his wild, roaming disposition, but his brother Jacob was more crafty, and, succeeding in buying his birthright for a dinner ("mess of pottage," verse 34), Esau attempted to get from his blind father the blessing belonging to the first-born, and which he had sold to Jacob, but Jacob again was too crafty for his brother, and succeeded in deceiving Isaac, and received the blessing. From this time he was called Edom (red), which was given to the country that he afterwards lived in. At the age of 40 he married, against the will of his parents, two Canaanite women. Jacob was sent to Padan-aram, out of the way of Esau, who took another wife, Mahalath, his cousin, daughter of Ishmael (xxviii. 8, 9). He then went to Mt. Seir, where he was living when Jacob returned from Padan-aram, and had become rich and powerful. The brothers met on the east of Jordan, when Jacob again acted in a double-faced way, and parted to meet again only at the side of their dead father, twenty years after, at Machpelah. From this time he lived in Mt. Seir, but nothing is recorded of his later history. See EDOM, EDOMITES.



PLAN OF EPHESUS.

ESH'KĂLONITES. Citizens of Ashkelon (Josh. xiii. 3).

ESH'TAOL. Judah, in the Shefelah, allotted to Dan. The residence, during his youth, of Samson; and here he was buried (Judg. xiii. 25; xvi. 31). Some of the Danites who were sent to look for a new home in the N. were from E. (xviii. 2, 8, 11). Lost. In the time of Jerome it was said to lie between Azotus and Ascalon, and named Astho; and another, named Esthaül, 10 miles

N. of Eleutheropolis, probably near the present Yeshua.

ESH'TAULITES. Among the citizens of Kirjath-Jearim (1 Chr. ii. 53).

ESHTĒMO'A (women of note). Judah, in the mountains (Josh. xv. 50; 1 Chr. vi. 57). Frequented by David (1 Sam. xxx. 28). Now Semna, 7 ms. S. of Hebron. Founded by the descendants of the Egyptian wife of Mered (1 Chr. iv. 17).—2. Name of a person in 1 Chr. iv. 19, as a Maachathite.

ESH'TON (uxorious). In the line of Judah (1 Chr. iv. 11).

ES'LI. Son of Naggai, father of Naum (Luke iii. 25).

ESŌ'RA. Perhaps Hazor or Zorah. Fortified by the Jews on the approach of Holofernes (Jud. iv. 4). Possibly Beth-horon.

ESPOU'SAL. MARRIAGE.

ES'ROM. In the geneology of Jesus (Matt. i. 8; Luke iii. 33). HEZRON.

ESSĒ'NES. Josephus says they combined the ascetic virtues of the Pythagoreans and Stoics with a spiritual knowledge of the Divine Law, and arose about 200 B. C. Their chief city was Engedi (Pliny). The name is supposed to mean silent, mysterious or pious (Dr. Ginsburg). The origin of the party was rather in a certain tendency of religious thought among all classes towards an ideal purity. Special doctrines had for their object a life of absolute purity and divine communion.

Next to God, Moses was honored; the Sabbath was carefully kept; food was eaten only when prepared by their own members, and never cooked on the Sabbath; and they practiced self-denial, temperance, and agriculture. Slavery, war, and commerce were forbidden. They were very regular in their devotions; before sunrise they began their prayer and praise; said grace before and after meals; ate from only one kind of food at a meal; disallowed oaths, holding truth to be sacred; held all things in common. Their system was a compound of mystical and ceremonial elements. The applicant for membership was obliged to live a year outside of the order, but keeping its rules (?), having received as badges an ax, a white apron, and a white dress. One year more he would share in the ablutions but not in the meals. After two more years he was admitted to full membership, solemnly binding himself to piety to God, justice to men, to hate the wicked, assist the righteous, injure no one, speak the truth, avoid robbery and theft, and keep the rules and secrets of the society. Some of their rules were: 1. To bathe, if touched by a stranger, or a lower grade of their own order, and before and after meals, and other natural acts; not to spit in an assembly, and if so not on the right side; the social meal was a sacrament. 1. Baptisms produced bodily purity, which led to 2. celibacy, and 3, spiritual purity, and 4, to a meek and lowly spirit, banishing all anger and malice, thus reaching 5, holiness, arriving at 6, a state wherein he is a Holy Temple for the Holy Spirit, and could prophesy, and advancing to 7, could perform miraculous cures, raising the dead, attaining finally to the lofty state of Elias the forerunner of the Messiah, and no longer subject to death.

Jesus alludes to the Essenes in Matt. v. 34, "swear not at all," and in xix. 12, "who abstain from marriage for the kingdom of heaven's sake," and Paul in 1 Cor. vii., which is hardly intelligible without a knowledge of the tenets of the Essenes, and by James in v. 12, and the first church held all things in common as they did (Acts iv. 32–34). Their number was never larger than 4000. See Josephus and Eusebius. They disappeared after the destruction of Jerusalem, and are not heard of again, although various orders of monks follow more or less strictly their rules and practices.

ES'THER (the planet VENUS, ASTER, ASTARTE, ASHTORETH, meaning good fortune). The Persian form of the Hebrew name HADASSAH (a myrtle). She was daughter of Abihail, son of Shimei, a Benjamite, cousin of Mordecai. Her parents did not return from captivity, but died, leaving her in care of her relative (cousin?) Mordecai. The Persian king having divorced his queen, Vashti (a beauty), for contempt, the royal choice fell on Esther, after passing many others by. In this position she delivered her people, who were still very numerous, from a threatened calamity, which was the origin of the yearly feast of Purim. See HISTORY OF THE BOOKS, Esther and Apocrypha.

Ē'TAM (place of wild beasts). Simeon (1 Chr. iv. 32).—2. Judah; fortified and garrisoned by Rehoboam (2 Chr. xi. 6) Near Bethlehem and Tekoah.

Ē'TAM (the rock). To which Samson retired after his slaughter of the Philistines (Judg. xv 8, 11). Probably in the valley of Urtas.

ĒTER'NAL (Heb. OLAM, hidden, time long past, and of future to the end).

ĒTER'NITY (Heb. AD), only once, in Is. lvii. 15, meaning duration in time.

Ē'THAN (limit of the sea). Station in the Exodus, near the Red Sea, east.

ĒTHAN (firmness). 1. The Ezrahite, son of Mahal, a wise man, only excelled by Solomon (1 K. iv. 31; Ps. lxxxix).—2. Son of Kish, a Levite in David's time (1 Chr. vi. 44). Played cymbals with Heman and Asaph (xv. 17, 19).—3. Levite ancestor of Asaph, the singer (1 Chr. vi. 42).

ETH'ANIM. MONTH.

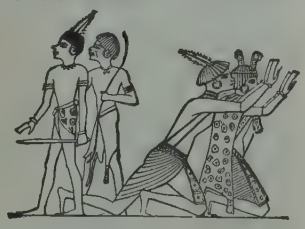
ETH BAAL (with Baal). A king of Sidon, father of Jezebel (1 K. xvi. 31). Josephus said he was king of Tyre and Sidon. Menander says that Ithobalus, a priest of Astarte, killed Pheles and usurped the throne, reigning 32 years, B. C. 940–908.

Ē'THER (abundance). Judah, in the Shefelah (Josh xv. 42), in Simeon. Now Attarah near Gaza.

CANDACE (QUEEN).

ETHIO'PIA (burnt). The country called in Hebrew CUSH. S. of Egypt, from Syene (Ez. xxix. 10). Libyan desert W., Abyssinian highland E. and S. The Hebrews traded with E. (Is. xlv. 14) in ebony, ivory, frankincense, gold and precious stones (Job xxviii. 19; Jos. Ant. viii. 6, § 5). Settled by a Hamitic race (Gen. x. 6), dark (Jer. xiii. 23), men of stature (Is. xviii. 2), and fine-looking (xxxviii. 7). The Sabæans were the most noted tribe. There are ruins of many temples in E. built during the reigns of the Hyksos kings of Egypt. Queen Candace is mentioned in Acts viii. 27.

The official title of the queen was CANDACE, and there was a line of queens who governed the country about the time of Christ, who successfully resisted even the Romans.



ETHIOPIANS.

ĒTHIŌ'PIAN (Heb. CUSHITE). Black man (Jer. xiii. 23). Zereh (2 Chr. xiv. 9) and Ebed-melech (Jer. xxxviii. 7, etc.,) were Ethiopians.

ETHIŌ'PIAN WOMAN. Wife of Moses. A CUSHITE (Num. xii. 1). She is also said to be a Midianite, and so supposed to be a second wife.

ETHIŌ'PIANS. In several passages meaning CUSHITES.

ETHIŌ'PIC LANGUAGE. See LANGUAGE.

ETHIŌ'PIC VERSION. See HISTORY OF THE BOOKS, page 4.

ETH'NAN (gift). Son of Hela, the wife of Ashur (1 Chr. iv. 7).

ĒTH'NI (giving). Ancestor of Asaph (1 Chr. vi. 41).

EUBU'LUS (prudent). Disciple at Rome (2 Tim. iv. 21).

EUĒR'GETĒS (benefactor). Title of honor among the Greeks. Two of the Ptolemies were so honored—Ptolemy III and VII.

EUME'NĒS (friendly). Eumenes II, king of Pergamus, succeeded his father, Attalus I, B. C. 197. He served the Romans against the Greeks in the battle of Magnesia (B. C. 190), for which he was rewarded with the provinces of Mysia, Lydia, Ionia, Phrygia, Lycaonia and Thracian Chersonese. Died probably B. C. 159 (1 Macc. viii. 8).

EU'NĪCE (victorious). Mother of Timothy (2 Tim. i. 5); a disciple of pure faith (Acts xvi. 1).

EU'NUCH (Heb. SARUS). Officer, chamberlain. The word indicates the incapacity which certain mutilation produces—a practice contrary to the law in Deut. xxiii. 1. The origin of the custom is ascribed to queen Semiramis, but is probably as old as Eastern despotism itself, which delights in servants who excite no jealousy. It is supposed that the prophet Daniel and his companions were so treated, because it was so prephesied (2 K. xx. 17). The ETHIOPIAN EUNUCH was probably an officer of the queen, perhaps a Jew.

EUŌ'DIA. EUŌ'DIAS (good journey). Disciple, a woman of Philippi (Phil. iv. 2).

EUPHRĀ'TES (the good river). Now called Frat. Called in Scripture the river. The largest, longest, and most important river in W. Asia. Rises in the mts. of Armenia, near Erzeroum and Mt. Ararat. Of two branches: one is called Frat, and Black River (Kara su), and is 400 ms. long; the other, Murad Chai (chief), 270 ms. long; and both unite at Kebban Meden, in a stream 360 ft. wide, and from this point to the Persian Gulf it is 1,000 ms. making in all nearly 1,800 ms., 1,200 of which is navigable for steamers. Nebuchadnezzar dug canals to carry the water of the annual inundation across the wide plains of Chaldea. Herodotus describes the river and its traffic (i. 185). First mentioned in Gen. xv. 18, in the description of the promised land (Deut. i. 7, xi. 24; Josh i. 4). Fulfilled partially by Reuben (1 Chr. v. 9), and completely by David (Ps. cxxxvii. 1).

ASSYRIAN KITCHEN.

EUPŌL'EMUS (good warrior). Son of John the son of Accos, KOZ (Neh. iii. 4, etc.). Envoy sent to Rome by Judas, about B. C. 161 (1 Macc. viii. 17). He was a well known historian, mentioned by Eusebius and Josephus.

EURŌC'LYDON. Name of a wind from a certain quarter (Acts xxvii. 14). See Paul.

EUTY'CHUS (fortunate). The youth who was resuscitated by Paul after having fallen out of a window at Troas (Acts xx. 9).

EVAN'GELIST (publisher of glad tidings). An order of men in the Christian Church. They were not attached to any particular locality, but worked wherever there was a field, by preaching or writing. Philip (Acts xxi. 8), and Timothy (2 Tim. iv. 5), and the four, Matthew, Mark, Luke, John are examples.

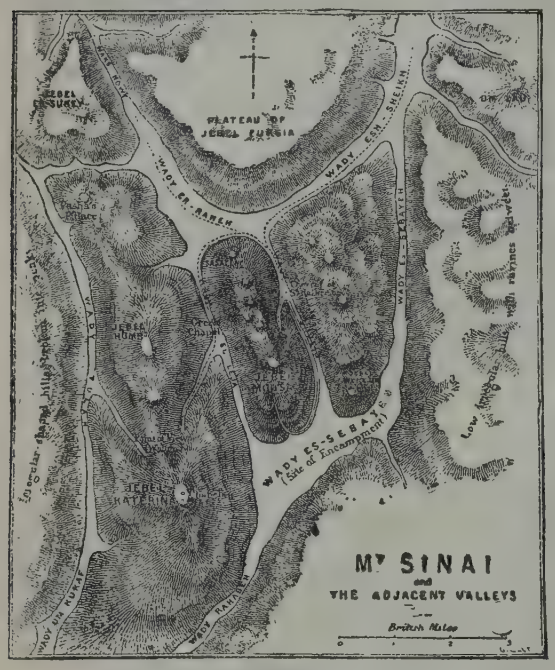
ĒVE (Heb. CHAVVAH, living). Name of the first woman. It is the feminine form of the noun which means life. There are two accounts of her creation in Genesis. 1. Gen. i 27: "So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them;" 2. ii. 18: "And the Lord God said 'It is not good that the man should be alone," (his creation is noticed in verse 7), "'I will make him a help meet for him.'" Then, in verses 19 and 20, is the account of the creation of the beasts, and that among them there was not found a help meet for Adam. Verses 21 to 25, give the account of Eve's formation out of the rib of Adam. The story—or two stories—may mean simply that God holds both man and woman equal in duty and accountability, and one in nature and origin. Eve is not mentioned after the birth of Seth, and her death is not recorded.

E'VENING. CHRONOLOGY.



MAP OF SINAI.

EV'ER, AND FOREV'ER. Eternal. Eternity. The whole period.

E'VI (desire.) Prince of Midian (Num. xxxi. 8).

EV'IDENCE. In Jer. xxxii. 10, etc., means bill of sale, in the prophet's petition; purchase of a field. This symbolic act meant that though desolation must come, God's promise was sure, and houses, fields and vineyards should again be possessed in Palestine by the Hebrews.

EVIL MERO'DACH (Merodak's fool). Son and successor of Nebuchadnezzar, B. C. 561; murdered and succeeded by Neriglissar, B. C. 559. Joachin was kindly treated by him (2 K. xxv. 27). The historian Berosus says that his change of policy from severe to mild caused his death by the violent men of his party.

EVIL-SPIRIT. Devil. DEMON.

EXCELLENCY OF CARMEL (Is. xxxv. 2). See CARMEL.

EX'CELLENT. Surpassing (Dan. ii. 31). Excellent glory (2 Peter i. 17). "Most excellent" was a title of rank and honor given to Theophilus (Luke i. 3), and to Felix (Acts xxiii. 23; xxiv. 3); and to Festus (Acts xxvi. 25).

EXCHAN'GERS. Money changers (Matt. xxv. 27).

EXCOMMUNICA'TION. Putting one out of church society. The Jews had three modes: 1. For twenty-four minor offenses an offender was under NIDDUI. Keeping a fierce dog, swearing, etc., were instances. The penalty was to abstain from the use of the bath, the razor, wine, etc., and to keep at 6 feet (4 cubits) distance from every one. He could not worship in the temple in the usual manner, and this lasted 30 days.—2. The second was CHEREM. He could not teach or be taught to work for or buy any object not intended for food. —3. The SHAMMATHA, an entire cutting off from the congregation. Moses did not make this law, but the natural right of societies for self-preservation gave rise to it. The cases in Num. xvi. (of Korah, etc.), Judg. v. 23 (Meroz), Ezr. vii. 26; x. 8; Ex. xxx. 33, and Lev. xiii. 46; xvii. 4, are precedents. One instance is recorded in the N. T., John ix., of the young man who confessed that Jesus was the Christ. The fear of the result prevented some from such a confession (xii. 42). The blessing in Luke vi. 22, refers to the three forms of this law. The excommunication founded by Jesus was to be executed only after due trial, and a settled contempt for the church in refusing to atone for a trespass which the person has committed (Matt. xviii. 15-18). The final act of exclusion was to be done only after two warnings. Paul commanded the same (1 Tim. i. 20; 1 Cor. v. 11; Tit. iii. 10), and frequently used the power. Restoration was possible, and is urged in 2 Cor. ii. 6. The censure of the church was not to include enmity, curses, and persecution, as among some sects, but rather to look upon the excluded "as a heathen and a publican," that may be brought in again. It is a spiritual penalty, not physical, separating from the communion of the church, aiming to benefit the person and the church, by excluding heresy, immorality, and only put in force by the authority of the church at large (by a vote?) and the sanction of the highest officer, whose sentence was declared in the congregation to which the offender belonged; and that penitence is a condition of restoration, which is to be as public as the exclusion.

EXECU'TIONER (Heb. TABBACH, slaughter). The duties were both those of an executioner and of the leader of the body-guard of the king, as in Egypt (Gen. xxxvii. 36), whose official residence was the prison. It was a post of high dignity. The Septuagint says Potiphar was chief-cook.

EX'ILE. CAPTIVITY.

EX'ODUS (going out). For the book, see HISTORY OF THE BOOKS.

The date of the Exodus of the Hebrews from Egypt, led by Moses, is fixed by different writers: as Poole, B. C. 1652, Hales, 1648, Usher, 1491, Bunsen, 1320. The patriarchal institution ended and the era of the Law began at the Exodus—the family had become a nation. The departure was begun at Raamses (Rameses) in the early morning of the 15th of Nisan, which was from that time called the first month. Three stages brought them to the Red Sea, where they were overtaken by Pharaoh and delivered by Moses, as celebrated in the songs of Moses and Miriam (Ex. xv.).

The great difficulty in tracing the route of the Israelites from Egypt to Canaan has called out a large number of travelers in our day, who have minutely examined the district (or a part of it, omitting the region of the 38 years wandering, because there are no records from which to form a base of exploration), and from their researches it is "possible by the internal evidence of the country itself to lay down not indeed the actual route of the Israelites in every stage, but in almost all cases, and in some cases the very spots themselves."

The question of the passage of the Red Sea is referred to MIRACLES.

ETHAM was a district on both sides of the N. end of the Red Sea. The place of crossing might have been anywhere between Suez and Jebel Atakah, which is a steep, high promontory standing out into very deep water.

SHUR (wall) is a name for the whole desert from Suez to Beersheba, N. of the plain Er Ramleh, also called PARAN. The first water found was at MARAH (bitter), and the rest at ELIM (stags,) where there were twelve fountains, and a kind of desert paradise, among a grove of palm trees. Wady Ghurundel has several fine fountains, a perennial stream, and more trees, shrubs and bushes than any other place in the desert. Here the mountain district begins. The next camp was by the Red Sea, where, in a wild and lonely plain, there is a sublime view of Sinai's granite peaks on one side, and the blue sea on the other.

The WILDERNESS OF SIN is a continuation of this valley on the south, widening into the broadest plain in the whole region. Here they first murmured, and the quails were sent in answer to their cry, and the first fall of manna. DOPHKA and and ALUSH were probably in the same plain. REPHIDIM (supports) is located in Wady esh Sheikh, the most spacious valley in this region, and the most fertile. Here the people found no water to drink, and Moses brought water out of a rock (Ex. xvii. 5, 6). The Amalekites attacked the people, and were routed. Jethro, Moses' father-in-law, visited him here and counseled him. They next pitched in the plain of Rahah (rest, Ex. xix.) in front of SINAI. Jebel Musa (Mount Moses), the Sinai of recent tradition, is in the midst of a group of mountains, and is 7,000 feet high. Katerin is 8,700, and Om Shomer is 9,300 feet high. On the summit of Jebel Musa is a platform nearly 100 feet across, partly covered with ruins, a chapel at the east end, and a small mosque. Ras es Sufsafeh (peak of the willow) is the Sinai of many scholars, because from it the plain can be seen, and every other requirement of the text answered, and every incident illustrated by the features of the surrounding district. They stayed almost a year at Sinai. While Moses was on the mount, receiving the two tables, Aaron (his brother) made a calf of gold, probably in imitation of the Egyptians. Aaron's sons offered strange fire (Lev. x.), and were destroyed, and the second passover was held.

On leaving Sinai a certain order of march and of camping was adopted (Num. x.), and Hobab was engaged as a guide, to be unto them "instead of eyes" (ver. 31), as is the custom now in crossing the desert. From Sinai to Kadesh the route cannot be clearly laid down. After three days they pitched in Paran, at a place afterwards called TABERAH (burning, Num. xi. 3). Quails were sent here (ver. 31), the people suffered from a plague after eating them, and the place was named a second time KIBROTH-HATTAAVAH (graves of. lust, ver. 33). The next station, HAZEROTH, has been identified with Ain Hudhera, a little fountain in a wild, dreary waste, among naked hills, 40 miles from Sinai. The place was noted for the foolish rebellion of Miriam and Aaron (xii.). The fountain of El Ain, north of Hudherah, is the most important watering-place in the district. The next station that can be located is EZION-GEBER, at the head of the Gulf of Akabah. Between this station and Kadesh, in the Arabah, there were many stations, and, as appears from the two accounts in Num. xxxiii. and in Deut. ii. 8, x. 6, they wandered up and down the valley several times.

KADESH (holy), next to Sinai, was the most important of all the resting-places in the wilderness. From here the twelve spies were sent into the promised land, and from Kadesh the rebellious people were turned back into the wilderness by the way of the Red Sea (Deut. i. 40) to wander for 38 years. And when they attempted to go up (by the pass Es Sufah) against the command of the Lord, they were defeated at Hormah with disgrace and slaughter (Num. xiv. 40).

Of the "great and terrible wilderness" of the wandering not one station is recorded, nor even a hint of its locality, and the only events noticed are (besides the ceremonial law) the execution of the man who gathered sticks on the Sabbath day (Num. xv.), the rebellion of Korah (xvi.), and (either during that time or soon after) the writing of the ninetieth Psalm by Moses. The great desert from Akabah to Gaza, is now called Et Tyh (the wandering), and it may be the very region; but having no names to locate or compare, there is nothing left us but conjecture.

They visited Kadesh a second time, where Miriam, the sister of Moses, died and was buried (Num. xx. 1). Moses brought water out of the rock, and the people and their beasts drank. Their flocks had survived through 38 years. Then they sent messengers to the king of Edom, asking permission to pass through his country, and making the fairest proposals, but they were denied their request (xx. 14).

They then left Kadesh and moved to Mt. Hor, where their first high-priest, Aaron, died and was buried, and Eleazar his son was invested with the "holy garments" and the office of his father. See AARON.

The next place that is identified is the pass through the east wall of the Arabah, up into the Arabian desert—Wady Ithm—by the way of the Red Sea (to compass the land of Edom, xxi. 4). Here the fiery serpents were sent, killing many; and the brazen serpent was set up, which became a type of the greater salvation. IJE ABARIM was reached, and then the willow brook (ZERED), and soon also the ARNON, and they were out of the desert. Sihon, king of the Amorites, opposed their advance, and Israel smote him, and possessed his land from the Arnon to the Jabbok. They next conquered Og, the king of BASHAN. His "giant cities" are still standing, deserted but not ruined, all over the vast plain of the Hauran. The king of Moab sent the prophet Baalam to curse Israel as they were encamped in the plains of Moab, and he blessed them, but laid a snare which caught them, and caused the loss of thousands of lives (xxxi. 16).

Moses numbered the pleople in the plain of Moab, and found 601,730 men above the age of 20 (being only 1820 less than the number at Sinai, 39 years before), and of all these only three were among those who came out of Egypt, all the rest having fallen in the desert (Num. xiv. 29), leaving only Moses, Caleb and Joshua. After looking at the land from the hights of Nebo, Moses died, and was buried (by the Lord), "but no man knoweth of his sepulchre" (Deut. xxxiv. 6). With his death the wanderings ended.

EX'ORCISM. The formal ejection of evil spirits from persons or places. Those who do this are called EXORCISTS. This pretense is usually accompanied with incantations and magical arts of various kinds, and was common to all nations of antiquity (Jos. Ant. viii. 2, 5, Wars, vii. 6, 3). Jesus implied that such a power did exist, and might be used after peculiar preparation (Matt. xii. 27; Luke ix. 49). There was an order of Exorcists in the Christian church in the 3d century, which led to a great increase of superstition, fraud, and imposture. Some introduced forms of exorcism into baptism, saying, "as the soul bea re baptism is in bondage to the devil, so at baptism it should be formally released from the evil spirit." The priest was instructed to breathe three times on the face of the subject, and say, Depart from him, foul spirit—give place to the Holy Spirit, the Paraclete. Then another breathing on the face, with the words, Receive the Holy Spirit. The order still is in the Roman ritual. It was originally practiced by the Lutherans, but it is now disused. John wrote his Gospel in Asia, where medical science was advanced, and he seems to have known that the diseases attributed to demons were merely natural diseases, for he nowhere mentions possessions of evil spirits, except as being spoken of by Jews, whom he is reporting.

2 Chr. viii. 17). Station of the Exodus. Port for Solomon's fleet. Jehoshaphat's fleet was broken here (2 Chr. xx. 37).

EZ NĪTE (Heb. EZNI). Adine, the Eznite; also called Josheb-bassebet, the Tachmonite (2 Sam. xxiii. 8).

EZRA (help). 1. In the line of Judah (1 Chr. iv. 17).—2. The famous Scribe and Priest (Esdras in the Apocrypha), son of Seraiah 7 and descendant of Hilkiah 2, high priest in Josiah's reign (Ezra vii. 1). His history is given partly in Ezra vii. to x. and in Nehemiah viii., xii. 26, 36. His narrative includes 80 years, during which period, in Persia there were Cyrus, Cambyses, Smerdis, Darius Hystaspis, Xerxes and Artaxerxes Longimanus. The last named gave Ezra men, money and letters of power, and permission to return and rebuild the house at Jerusalem.

FALLOW-DEER.

He collected and revised the books of the O. T. Tradition says he died at Babylon (or Zamzummu on the Tigris), aged 120. A tomb is shown as his, 20 ms. above the junction of the Euphrates and Tigris.

The works credited to him are: 1. Founding the Great Synagogue; 2. Forming the Canon of the O. T.; 3. Introduction and use of the Chaldee instead of the Old Hebrew letters; 4. Authorship of Chronicles, Ezra, Nehemiah, and Esther. Some also add Ezekiel and Daniel; 5. Institution of Synagogues.—3. Another Ezra was head of one of the 22 courses of priests which returned with Zerubbabel and Joshua.—4. One who assisted at the dedication of the wall (Neh. xii. 33) For Book of Ezra, see HISTORY OF THE BOOKS.

EZ'RĀHITE (of Ezra, or of Zerah). A title of Ethan (1 K. iv. 31). There is no reason to believe that the Ethan and Heman, authors or singers, mentioned in the titles of the Psalms, are the same as those in 1 Kings. The two passages, in Chronicles and Kings have become mixed. There was no Heman an Ezrahite.

EZ'RI (Jehovah's help). Son of Chelub, over David's farmers (1 Chr. xxvii. 26).

F

FA'BLE. The deliberate choice of statements known to be inventions, which are intended to teach general truth. The Mythus is an unconscious evolution of traditional thought or fancy. The parable assumes that what is related might have been true, and deals with matters of human life, using the acts of men to figure those of a higher order of being. The fable draws its materials from the brute creation and inanimate nature, attributing the qualities of humanity to brutes, trees, &c.

The fable of Jotham about the trees of Shechem is the oldest extant (B. C. 1209), and as beautiful as any made since (Judg. ix. 8–15). The fable in Ezekiel xvii. 1–10, brings before us the lower forms of creation as representatives of human characters and destinies. The great Lokman, the Arabian writer of fables, lived about the time of David (B. C. 1025), Hesiod and Æsop of the Greeks are still later (B. C. 550). The fable exhibits relations between man and man, the parable those between man and God. The fables and inventions alluded to in 1 Tim. iv. 7; Titus, i. 14; 2 Pet. i. 16, were false and weak, probably, and unfit for instruction.

FĀCE. The most peculiarly indicative part of the human figure. The face is the presence; to stand before the face is to stand in the presence. The face is also the favor—as the prince's face, or favor. To turn away the face is to deny a favor. And the face of the Lord means His presence. "No one can see the face of God and live," but Jacob did see it, as he says so, and lived (Gen. xxxii. 30.) Jacob first mentions God's face, at Peniel. God's grace or favor is indicated in such passages as "seeking face," "lift on us the light of thy face," "pour out thine heart like water before the face of the Lord" (Lam ii. 19).

FAIR HA'VENS. Harbor on the south side of Crete, east of Cape Matala, and near Lasea (Acts xxvii. 8). Visited by Paul on his voyage to Rome, A. D. 60. (Gr. Kaloi Limenes).

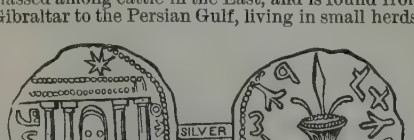
FAIRS (Heb. IZEBONIM). Only in Ezekiel xxvii., where it is found seven times, once translated wares in verse 33. The word means exchange, and the sense of the chapter is much improved by this rendering.

FĀITH (Heb. EMUN, faith; EMUNAH, faithful; Greek elpis; faith or hope; pistis, one belief). Faith is the assent of the mind to the truth of God's revealed will. There are two kinds: 1. Historical, which assents to the statements about the life and works of Jesus and the apostles, as historical truths. 2. Evangelical, or saving faith, is an assent to the truth of revelation, and an entire trust and confidence in God's character, and Christ's teachings, with an unreserved surrender of the will. Jesus Christ is then received into the heart as the Saviour, Prophet, Priest, and King, to be loved and obeyed. This is instrumentally a means of salvation, an essential grace, and a mainspring of Christian life.

FALLOW-DEER (Heb. YACHMUR). Permitted as food by the law, and supplied to Solomon's table (Deut. xiv. 5; 1 K. iv. 23). Two kinds of deer were known to the Hebrews in Palestine. Jacob refers to one in his blessing on Naphtali. Its beauty, speed and agility are frequently used by the poets and prophets. The opening of the xlii. psalm is as beautiful as familiar:

"As the hart pants after the water-brooks,
So does my soul pant for thee, O God."

This was written by David when Saul was hunting him from one place to another like a deer or "a partridge." Figures of deer are sculptured on the ancient monuments in Egypt. The bubale is classed among cattle in the East, and is found from Gibraltar to the Persian Gulf, living in small herds.



SHEKEL.

The fallow-deer is quite rare, a few living around Mt. Tabor, and Lebanon, and is not found in Arabia, but Persia and Armenia are its peculiar home.

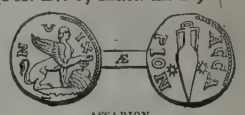
FAL'LOW-GROUND. Land that has been left to rest untilled a year or more. Figuratively, backsliding, unfruitful in spiritual things (Hosea x. 12).

FAMĬL'IAR-SPIRIT. DIVINATION. MAGIC.

FAM'INE. A scarcety of food. Several are noticed: Gen. xii. 10; xxvi. 1, xli; Ruth i. 1; 2 K. vi. 25; Acts xi. 27. The most noted is that of seven years in Egypt, by which the whole people were reduced to dependence on the king, when Joseph was prime minister. Famine results from want of rain, visits of locusts and other insects. Amos predicted a spiritual famine (viii. 11).

FAN. 1. A hand machine, like a flat basket, for winnowing grain (Is. xxx. 24).—2. A large fork with a long handle, with which the grain is thrown up against the wind (Jer. xv. 7; Matt. iii. 12).

FAR'THING (Gr. quadrans, one fourth of the as, or assarion). Equal to two lepta (mites), about ⅜ of a cent. The specimens now extant are very neatly and artistically made, of copper or bronze, except that, like all ancient coin, the edge is unfinished.



ASSARION.

FAST. There is no word in the Pentateuch which means to fast. It was a voluntary, not a legal, act. This was probably a silent protest against the tendency to asceticism, so prevalent in the East. The vow of the Nazarite was voluntary, and only included wine and things related to it in origin, and the cases where it was necessary were few. Once a year, at the yearly atonement, the people were called to do what became, after a while, a fast in common terms (Lev. xvi. 29; Acts xxvii. 9), but there is no rule against eating or drinking, while there is against work—it was to be "a Sabbath of rest." Isaiah notices that when the spiritual element declined the ceremonial increased, and fasts became popular as an easy means of atonement (Is. lviii. 5). The true fast is to have a serious and heartfelt sorrow for sin, with earnest strivings to be delivered from it, as Isaiah says. Holiness and mourning are always, in the Hebrew mind, contrasts—opposite states of feeling. The public fast anciently among the Hebrews as well as among the modern Arabs, was a total abstinence from food for twenty-four hours, beginning at sunset. The forty days fast of Moses, Elijah and Jesus were miraculous. Jesus did not institute a fast, except the life-long fast of his disciples, after his death, intimated in Luke v. 34, 35, and directed those who did fast to conceal the fact by washing and dressing as usual, so as not to appear to fast before men and not really fast before God (Matt. vi. 17). The mere fast is no essential part of the gospel plan, although it was practiced by the apostles (1 Cor. vii. 5; Acts xiii. 2, etc.). The real fast is the sacrifice of the personal will, which is meant by the term afflicting the soul (Is. lviii. 5).

FAT. The fat, as being the choice part of animals, and especially sacred to the Lord, was always to be burned in sacrifice, even when other parts were to be eaten. The fat and the blood were not to be eaten (Lev. iii 16, 17; vii. 23–27). The term fat was applied to the best and most excellent of all things, as the fat of the earth, of the wheat, of the oil, the vine, and even the fat of the mighty. The burning of it in the sacrifice is typical of the offering of what was best and loftiest in Christ's pure humanity. In him alone was there anything strictly good to offer. The offering of his followers is only acceptable through the working of his grace in their hearts (Ps. xii. 1).—2. Fat, for vat, in wine fat.

FATHER. 1. Male parent.—2. Any male ancestor, as Father Abraham.—3. Any man in the position of a father, as Joseph to Pharaoh.—4. The inventor or teacher of an art was called its father, and the father of those who practiced it. "Jubal was the father of all such as handle the harp or organ," that is, he was a teacher of music, if not its inventor; and "Jabal, the father of such as dwell in tents" (Gen. iv. 20, 21).—5. The builder or founder of a city, as Salma, the father of Bethlehem (1 Chr. ii. 51).—6. Any one who makes a thing or produces it, or tells a story, or recites a poem, is called the father of such a thing or poem. The authority of the father was sanctioned by the law of Moses, as standing between God and man. His blessing conferred special benefits, and his curse special injury. His sins affected his children, but they were not liable to punishment for them. The command to honor the parents was the only one to which a promise was attached, in the decalogue, while disrespect and filial insubordination were the worst of crimes.

The principle of respect to age and authority, so universal in the East, is derived from the patriarchal spirit, which still prevails outside of the walled cities, especially among the Arabs.

FATHOM. See MEASURES.

FAT'LING. Fat beast. In good condition.

FANCHION. Falchion, a short crooked sword (Judith xiii. 6; xvi. 9). Cimeter.

FEASTS. See FESTIVALS.

FEET. See WASHING FEET, SANDALS.

FE'LIX. Claudius Antonius Felix was the Roman governor (procurator) of Judæa, from A. D. 53 to 60. He was originally a slave and was freed by the Emperor Claudius. His brother Pallas was also freed by the Emperor's mother Antonia, and deservedly had great influence with Claudius. Felix is said to have ruled Judæa in a mean, cruel, and profligate manner. Under the pretense of destroying robbers he crucified hundreds of good and patriotic Jews. He had trouble with false Messiahs also, followers of a "certain Egyptian magician." He married Drusilla, a Jewess, sister of the younger Agrippa; whom he enticed from her second husband Azizus. He kept Paul in prison two years, hoping that his friends would buy his liberty with a heavy bribe (see PAUL). Felix being recalled to Rome, was succeeded by Festus, and being charged with crimes by citizens of Cæsarea, would have been condemned to death but for the influence in his favor of his brother Pallas.

FELLER. Who cuts trees down, for timber or wood (Is. xiv. 8).

SIEGE OF JERUSALEM.

FENCED CITIES (Heb. MIBZAR, cut off, separate). The difference between a city and a village in the Bible is the wall around the city. The village had a watch-tower only. Sometimes the houses are built close together around a space, forming a wall, the entrance having a gate. Jerusalem, as described by Josephus, had three walls on some sides, with towers and battlements. Some of the cities in Assyria were surrounded with very wide and high walls, with a ditch outside for water, and a palisade in the middle of the ditch. These are found drawn in the sculptures.

FER'RET (Heb. ANAKAH, sighs or groans). Formerly translated shrew-mouse, but now the Gecko, of which there are several in Palestine. It is also called the Fan-foot. It is a lizard, with padded feet, and can move up and down walls like a fly, without noise, except what it makes with its voice, which sounds like its name—geck-o. They are red, brown, green, or bright blue, and all studded with clear white spots over the back and flanks.

FER'RY-BOAT (Heb. ABARAH). Perhaps a raft (2 Sam. xix. 18).

FESTIVALS. The law plainly intended stated and regular meetings for worship, at shorter or longer intervals. No rule was made for any particular form of gathering, but each community was left to direct its own affairs. When synagogues were built, after the Captivity, the service was made more uniform. These gatherings were intended to be holy (Is. i. 13; Ps. lxxxi. 3, etc.). They were sacred seasons—feasts of the soul.

1. THE WEEKLY SABBATH (Heb. SHABBATH, a day of rest). The 7th day of the week (Gen. ii. 3), was established by law (Ex. xvi. 23, 29), to be kept by the whole people (Ex. xxv. 25). Isaiah utters solemn warning against profaning, and promises blessings for the due observance of it (Is. lviii. 13). The Scribes and Pharisees invented many strict rules, which hedged about the day and bound the people hand and foot, so that Jesus found it necessary to repeat the saying that "the Sabbath was made for man, and not man for the Sabbath." It was the key-note to a system consisting of 7th day, 7th week, 7th month, 7th year, and year of jubilee, which was at the end of 7 times 7 years. Each of these periods had its sacred day. It was lawful and customary for the priests to light fires, bake the shew-bread, and do other needed work about the Temple. "There was no Sabbath in holy things."

2. PASSOVER OR FEAST OF UNLEAVENED BREAD. It was kept in the 14th day of the first month, "between the two evenings"—that is, late in the evening is the Lord's Passover. On the next day, the 15th, is the feast of the unleavened bread, continuing 7 days (Lev. xxiii. 5). The lamb sacrificed for the passover must be of the first year, and without blemish (1 Cor. v. 7). The flesh of the paschal lamb was eaten to show the actual fellowship which the partakers of the feast held with God as the result of the atoning sacrifice.

THE PASSOVER was the annual national birthday festival, and was held in the first month when the ears of grain were forming. The lamb was roasted (not boiled), not a bone broken, and was entirely eaten, the persons standing, with loins girt, a staff in hand, shoes on, ready for a journey, in memory of the Exodus. The Pharisees excused the custom of reclining at the table in their day, by saying that it was a sign of the rest that the Lord had granted his people. The bitter herbs eaten with the lamb were reminders of the bondage in Egypt, and of the anxiety and trouble mingled with blessings in life, an emblem of the crucifixion of nature. Leavened bread was not to be eaten for a week—unleavened bread was "the bread of affliction," "for they came out of Egypt in haste." Leaven is a species of corruption—against which Jesus warned his disciples as in the peculiar errors of the Pharisees (Matt. xvi. 6). The feast also pointed to the future—to the sacrifice of the Paschal Lamb (Luke xxii. 15, 16).

THE FEAST OF WEEKS (Greek name PENTECOST.) The presentation of the first ripe ears of barley. It was also the feast of first-fruits and of harvest. The offering was made by the priest waving two loaves, made of the best of the crop, of fine wheat flour, leavened and baked, but not put on the altar (where no leaven could be placed), (Deut. xxvi. 2). This feast was in memory of the giving of the Law. It was the end of the harvest, as the second day of the Passover was the first, and it was the end of the Week of Weeks—seven times seven days. Canaan was in a peculiar sense God's land, and as He manifests his care in providing, He should be honored by those who are partakers of his bounty. In spiritual matters it was also the harvest season—the end of Christ's personal ministry on earth.

THE FEAST OF TRUMPETS, OR NEW MOON. The year was reckoned by the moon, twelve or more moons making a year (see CHRONOLOGY). Besides the usual offerings (Num. xxii. 11-15), there was a blowing of trumpets, as sung in Ps. lxxxi. 3. It occurred on the first of the 7th month, near our October. The voice of God and the voice of the trumpet on Mt. Sinai were heard together (Ex. xix. 16-19). It was a symbol of the mighty voice of God. The first was the sacred month, and was therefore placed seventh in the calendar. Four days were sabbaths, the 10th was the Day of Atonement, the 15th was the Feast of Tabernacles.

THE FEAST OF THE DAY OF ATONEMENT (see ATONEMENT). It was the occasion above all others, on which the ideas of sin and atonement rose to their highest potency in the ritual of the old covenant, exhibiting those ideas in their clearest light, how one ordained from among men, for the purpose of drawing near to God, mediates in behalf of his fellow men in things pertaining to sin and salvation.

THE FEAST OF TABERNACLES, the last of the appointed festivals under the old covenant, beginning on the 15th of the 7th month, and lasting seven days. The real name is booths, and was celebrated "in the end of the year, when they had gathered in their labors out of the field" (Ex. xxiii. 16). The crops and the vintage are supposed to be ended, and this was practically the end of the year. The booths were temporary and slight structures of sticks and leaves (Neh. viii. 16). Its object was to keep in memory the sojourn in the wilderness, a sort of perpetual renewing of their religious youth, when the covenant of the Law was first given. There was the same sin-offering for each day, and double the other offerings, two rams and fourteen lambs each day, and thirteen bullocks on the first day, one less each day, ending with seven on the seventh day.

After the Captivity, and in later times, there was the Feast of the DEDICATION, in memory of the fresh consecration of the temple after it had been profaned by Antiochus Epiphanes (1 Macc. iv. 52-59), B. C. 164 (John x. 22). It was held beginning on the 15th day of the 9th month (December) and lasted eight days. The modern Jews light one light on the first day, two on the next, etc. (8 on the last), making it a "Feast of Lights" (Ant. xii. 7, 7). Business and jollity going on as usual.

The FEAST OF PURIM is kept on the 14th and 15th of the 12th month, Adar (March). See BOOK OF ESTHER in the HISTORY.

FEASTS OF CHARITY or LOVE FEAST. See AGAPE.

FES'TUS PORCIUS. The successor of Felix as governor of Judæa, A. D. 60. His term was short, for he died in a little while (A. D. 62). He was superior to Felix, and would have set Paul at liberty, if he had understood the case, which Paul seeing, he appealed to Cæsar (Acts xxiv. 27). He gave the apostle a hearing in the presence of Agrippa and Berênice, and was astonished at his preaching, but supposed it came from a heated imagination aided by the peculiar dreamy speculations of the East. He got into a quarrel with the priests at Jerusalem by building a dining room in the the governor's house, which overlooked the temple courts, when the priests built a high wall, cutting off the view. The emperor afterward sustained the priests (Ant. xx. 8). He was a good man and governor, but indifferent to religion.

FET'TERS. Chains to confine the feet, made of bronze or iron (Judg. xvi. 21; brass, iron in Ps. cv. 15).

FE'VER (Heb. KADDACHATH). Burning ague in Lev. xxvi. 21. DALLEKETH is translated inflammation in Deut. xxviii. 22, and CHARCHUR, extreme burnings. Greek puretos, fever in Matt. viii. 15, etc. Malignant fevers are still met with in Palestine, near water, in the spring and autumn, especially about the Sea of Galilee (Land and Book, i. 547).

FIELD (Heb. SADEH). A field which is not fenced; an open field (Num. xxii. 23, 24). Separate plots were marked by stones (Deut. xix. 14), which might be removed (Job. xiv. 2); and it was necessary to watch the flocks and herds day and night to prevent trespass. FULLER'S FIELD, POTTER'S FIELD.

FIG (Heb. TEENAH; Arab. tin, the ficus carica tree; Gr. sukê, fig-tree; suka (sycamore) figs. Three kinds are cultivated: 1. The early fig (Heb. BOKKORE, early fig; BICCURAH, first ripe), ripe in June, green in color.—2. The summer fig (KERMOUS), ripe in August, is sweet and the best, purple in color; and the green fig (pag) which remains on the tree all winter. (Beth-phage, place of figs). DEBELAH, cake of figs in 1 Sam. xxx. 12. It is still used in the East as the most convenient and the best poultice (2 K. xx. 7; Is. xxxviii. 21). It is one of the few plants which grow wild all over the country. The fig tree puts forth its earliest fruit buds before its leaves, and the foliage forms a very dense shade. "To sit every man under his vine and under his fig tree," indicates in the East the fullest idea of peace, security and prosperity. Jeremiah (as well as several other prophets) uses the fig through all of his books as an emblem of good or evil, and particularly in chap. xxiv. Jesus made frequent use of the tree or its fruit as an emblem or a means of instruction, especially in the case of the barren fig tree, as a lesson against deceit. It grows best near a fountain or stream. The sycamore fig grows to a large size in Palestine and Egypt—sometimes 50 feet in circumference—and is evergreen. The fruit is purple, smaller than the other kinds, sweetish, and not so valuable. They ripen from November to June. The wood is used for many purposes, as it is almost the only large tree in Egypt.

FILE (Heb. PETSIRSAH). In 1 Sam. xiii. 21, translated file. The word means notched.

FIN'GER (Heb. ETSABA). The priest sprinkled with his forefinger (Lev. iv. 6). A certain gesture of the finger indicated contempt (Is. lviii. 9). The FINGER OF GOD, is his power (Ex. viii. 19).

FIR (Heb. BEROSH, BEROTH, to cut up into boards). Pine, cypress, juniper, or various evergreen trees. Found in the mountains. The timber was supplied to King Solomon by Hiram for the temple, for the floors and doors. It was used for musical instruments (2 Sam. vi. 5). The tree is next in size to the cedar. It is used by the poets and prophets among their figures.

FIRE (Heb. ESH). The symbol of Jehovah's presence, and first kindled by the Lord (Lev. vi. 9; 2 Chr. vii. 1). Sacred fire could only be had from the altar, and the crime of Nadab and Abihu was in using "strange fire" from some other source. No fire could be kindled on the Sabbath, except by the priests for holy purposes. Fire for cooking is made with sticks, grass and dried dung. To set fire to a grain field is a capital offence. Any damage by a careless fire must be made good (Ex. xxii. 6).

Fire was used to burn certain criminals and prisoners, and in some cases to destroy an enemy's city, and in the art of metallurgy. Fire was a symbol of fierce passion, calamities etc., and an emblem of healing spiritually (Mal. iii. 2). A baptism by fire.

FIRE-PAN (Heb. MACHTAH). Snuff-dish, or some utensil used about the altar.

FIRKIN (John ii. 6; Greek metretes). The firkin is a larger vessel than the one meant in the text.

FIR'MAMENT (Heb. RAKIA). The expanse; the sky over our heads. On the second day the expanse was made; on the fourth, in the expanse was made the sun, moon and stars.

FIRST-BORN (Heb. BECHOR). See BIRTHRIGHT. The religious bearing was the most important. Christ is the first born of all creation (Col. i. 16, 18), and the first born from the dead.

FIRST-FRUITS (BICCURIM). Among fruits what the first-born is among men and beasts. The first or best of the oil, of the wine, of the wheat, of all the harvest, was sacred to the Lord, to be given in a quantity, accordinging to the will and inclination of each person. The faithful priest reaped a rich reward from the holy zeal that he instilled into the hearts of his people. The doctors limited the gifts to the 60th part as the least that would be accepted. In the later times the Jews turned the gifts into money. This custom was not peculiar to Israel. The first-fruits were often sent to Jerusalem from foreign countries.

FISH (Heb. DAG, DAGAH; Gr. icthus). No particular kind of fish is mentioned by name in the Bible; but there are frequent references to fish generally. It is a little remarkable that the apostles, who were professed fishermen, did not designate by name any kinds of fish, saleable or unsaleable, and especially the one bearing the tribute-money. It would have been interesting to know the name of the fish, as well as that of the coin. Even the law of Moses does not mention names (as among animals), but character only, as fins and scales for pure or clean, that might be eaten. Solomon's treatise on fishes (1 K. iv. 33), is lost. The Greek furnishes 400 names for varieties of fishes, but the Hebrew has not one. Jacob knew how rapidly they increase, for he alludes to this fact in his blessings (Gen. xlviii. 16), "multitude," etc., meaning in the original "as fishes do increase." Fish were eaten from the earliest times (Num. xi. 22), and one of the gates of Jerusalem was called Fish Gate. In Egypt, the monuments show many pictures of fish and fishing. The historians speak of the vast quantities of fish taken, from which the royal revenue was derived for the queen's special use, for jewelry, perfumery, etc., of $350,000 a year. The Assyrian sculptures also show men fishing. The Egyptians also dried and salted fish, as shown in the sculptures.

FITCHES (Heb. KETZACH). "The fitches are beaten out with a staff," (Is. xxviii. 27). The fennel-flower, a coarse kind of pea, hard, but nutritious. In the great famine in England in 1555 wild fitches saved many people from starving. It grows all over Europe and Asia. The "fitches" in Ezekiel's symbolized bread (iv. 9), was spelt (Heb. KUSSEMETH), a grain something like wheat.

FLAG (Heb. SUPH, and ACHU). The ark of Moses was floated among the flags (Ex. ii. 3), SUPH. Isaiah predicts that the reeds and flags shall wither (xix. 6) in Egypt: "Can the flag grow without water?" (ACHU, Job. viii. 11). It is rendered meadow or marsh in Gen. xli. 2, 18. Any waterplant would answer the case. The Edible Rush, and Flowering Rush grow both in Egypt and Palestine. The name of the Red Sea is Yam Suph.

FLAG'ON (Heb. ASHISHAH). In 2 Sam. vi. 19; Cant. ii. 15, and Hosea iii. 1, it is a cake of raisins. —2. (Heb. NEBEL). In Is. xxii. 24 is a bottle of skin or pottery.

FLAX (Heb. PISHTAH, peeled). Very few plants are so beautiful and so useful as the slender flax, with its tall, taper leaves, large purple flowers, and its strong fibre from which the most delicate lawn or coarsest canvas is made. The holy garments of Aaron, and the curtains of the tabernacle were partly of linen. Its whiteness, in linen, was a symbol of purity. The ancient sculptures represent the manufacture of linen (Prov. xxxi. 13).

FLEA (Heb. PAROSH). "The king of the fleas holds his court in Tiberias," now as ever in old times. Frequent change of linen is the only means of keeping clear of them in the East. They almost disappear in the heat of summer. They swarm on travelers, when scarcely touching natives. They are said to produce a healthy irritation in the skin. David says: "After whom is the king of Israel come out? * * * after one flea?" (1 Sam. xxiv. 14, xxvi. 20).

FLESH (BASAR). All that is of flesh and blood (Gen. vi. 13); and the human race (Luke iii. 6, etc.). The weakness, and frailty of man is also flesh (Rom. iv. 1). Flesh is also the antipathy to spirit (viii. 1).

FLIES FLY (Heb. ZEBUB, AROB). Common house-flies swarm in great numbers in the East. The peculiar gray fly (Ar. thebab) which comes with the rise of the Nile is productive of disease in both man and animals. The arob was the fly, or swarm of insects of one of the plagues in Egypt. Flies in the East are very persistent in settling on persons, never quitting until dark, and are the means of carrying diseases from one to another. The Philistines had a god, Baal-zebub, whose special duty it was to take care of flies. Judging from their number they are well cared for. The "ointment (perfume) of the apothecary" (Eccles. x. 1) was attractive to flies, and their dead bodies spoiled its odor, and so would little follies spoil the reputation of a wise man. The man is the perfume, his little folly the dead fly, his disgrace the bad odor.

FLINT (CHALLAMISH). Used in Deut. viii. 15; and Psalms cxiv. 8, in reference to God's bringing water and oil out of the naturally barren rocks for the sake of his people. In Is. i. 7, it is a metaphor of the firmness of the prophet in resisting his enemies, as also in Ezek. iii. 9.

FLOOD. Deluge.

FLOOR. Pavement.

FLOUR. Bread.

FLOWERS. Flowering plants and shrubs are found in great numbers and variety all over Palestine, except in the highest regions of the mountains, and in the shifting sands of the desert. 2500 have been named and classified, 500 of which are well known in Europe. The most abundant families of plants are Leguminous, pod-bearing, such as peas, beans, pulse; the Astragalus and the Acacia. A vast number of thistles, centauries, and other like plants, cover the richest plains and the stony hills. Many sweet flowering shrubs, such as marjoram, thyme, lavender, calaminth, sage, and others similar. A vast number and variety of weeds, mustard being the king of all.

SYCAMORE FIG.

Fennel, Bupleurum, and Eryngium form dense rows of foliage and flowers along the border of woods, and in damp hollows. Soap plant is conspicuous, and the Boragineæ, annual weeds, besides which are the Echiums, Anchusas, and other fine species. Scrophularia, Veronica, Linaria and Verbascum (mulleins) are very abundant. Grasses are very numerous, many species bearing silky plumes of flowers of great beauty and grace. The variety and beauty of the family of lilies is no where exceeded. The lily springs up everywhere, and the Amaryllids are of great size, beauty, and variety. Fritillarias and squills are in abundance, and bear pretty flowers. Violets and geraniums are very numerous and finely colored. Roses are a subject of profitable cultivation for attar, and a valley near Jerusalem is called the Valley of Roses (Wady el Werd). The Narcissus is very beautiful, abundant and in several varieties, and is believed to be the flower alluded to by the poet in Cant. ii. 1, and the prophet in Is. xxxv. 1. Several other Amaryllids are found in great numbers, and almost the most showy plants in the field. Iris, crocus, and gladiolus grow very large and showy. Broom, ivy, dog-rose, elder, honeysuckle, berberry, hawthorn, and jasmine are found in Lebanon and Anti-Lebanon, at and above 4000 feet elevation. Rhododendrons, primrose, and a great variety of plants, from 5000 to 7000, and some kinds are found even up to the limits of the snow line; at 8000 Vicia forms tufts of pale blue, at 9000 there are Arenaria, Arabis, Drabas, Festuca, and Potentilla, while the little Nocæa and the Oxyria grows on the very summit of Khodib, 10,200 feet high. From the sands of the desert to the snows of the mountain summits there are flowers of many varieties, blooming in every month of the year.

FLUTE (Chaldee, mashrokitha). Made of one or more pipes. Pipe in 1 K. i. 40. One of the simplest and oldest of musical instruments. Used at banquets (Is. v. 12), at public worship (Dan. iii. 5, etc.), marriages, funerals, and by pilgrims on the way to the yearly meeting.

FLUX. Dysentery of a very severe kind in the East, attended with fever (Acts xxviii. 8). The Oriental custom of wearing a bandage around the bowels is a preventive of bowel disorder by protecting against the sudden changes from hot to cold which always follows sundown. When bloody the dysentery is less dangerous. King Jehorum had a chronic dysentery, with prolapsus ani (2 Chr. xxi. 15).

FOOD. Some kind of prohibition in what may be eaten or may not has been known from the earliest times. The human race can eat "every herb bearing seed," and "every tree in which is the fruit of a tree" (Gen. i. 29), and also "every moving thing that liveth," but flesh with the life thereof, which is the blood, was prohibited (Gen. ix. 3, 4). And other rules made distinctions of clean and unclean among animals, fowls and fishes, for food. (See Clean.) The climate influences the diet all over the world. Animal food is not needed, and cannot be used, during the greater part of the year, nor can it be kept in a healthy state for any length of time in the hot season. The sacrificial feasts occurring at long intervals when animal food was eaten, were very acceptable, on account of the abstinence preceding them. Bread is the chief food besides fruit and vegetables. Rice is much used. (Bread.) Neither eggs nor fowls are mentioned among gifts of first-fruits, although they are largely used now in the East. Almost every known fruit and vegetable can be had, in plenty and of good quality. Milk, cheese, butter (melted as oil), oil of olives, and honey, or molasses from grapes (dibs) can be found everywhere. Condiments of many kinds are in common use; and much use is made of aromatic herbs in cookery. Nuts cooked with meat adds delicacy to the flavor. Highly seasoned food, with spices, salt, onions, garlic, lemons, pomegranates, and verjuice, makes a savory dish. Cracked wheat is boiled with meat. "Killing, cooking, and eating in rapid succession is a very old custom" (Land and Book, ii. 162). The Arabs have many caustic terms of contempt for the man who neglects to honor a guest with a "sacrifice" of a lamb, kid, or calf, as required by the laws of hospitality. (See Meals, Wine, Water) Milk and honey, and oil with honey, or butter with honey, are choice dishes, eaten with bread, usually for breakfast.

FOOL. Used of moral more than of intellectual deficiencies, of one who does not fear God, and acts without regard to His law (Ps. xiv. 1).

FOOT. (See Washing Feet). The foot was used as a symbol of many ideas. Such phrases as "slipping of the foot," "stumbling," and "from head to foot," need no explanation. "To be under the feet," means subject to a king, or as a servant to the master (Ps. viii. 6; Heb. ii. 8); derived from the symbolical act of a conquerer who placed his foot on the neck of his subdued enemies in token of triumph (Josh. x. 24), as may be seen in the sculptures on the ancient monuments. To be at any one's feet meant service or pupilage (Judg. iv. 10), and Paul actually sat at the feet of Gamaliel (who sat on a raised seat), as was the custom then (Acts xxii. 3). "Lameness of feet" is affliction or calamity (Ps. xxxv. 15). To set one's foot in a place is to take possession (Deut. i. 36). To water with the foot is to turn the little rills easily (this was a mark of the superiority of Palestine to Egypt, because rain and brooks were there instead of the Nile and the artificial canals); (xi. 10.) To walk with a straight foot "uprightly" in Gal. ii. 14. Naked feet (out of doors) was poverty or mourning (Ez. xxiv. 17). Uncovering the feet, or taking off the overshoe in the East, is equivalent to taking off the hat with us. Uncovering the feet was a part of the act of adoration (Ex. iii. 4), as Moses before the burning bush. "How beautiful on the mountains are the feet of him who brings glad tidings" (Is. lii. 7).

The Hebrews were modest in their writings, and used the word foot for certain parts and actions which could not be named. "Hair of the foot," "water of the foot," "between the feet" (Deut. xxviii. 57), "he covereth his feet" (Judg. iii. 24 for "dismisses the refuse of nature.")

FOOT'MEN (Heb. ragli). 1. Soldiers; not horsemen.—2. (Heb. rootz.) Swift runners (1 Sam. viii. 11; xxii. 17). Paul refers to them (1 Cor. ix. 24). Elijah ran before Ahab as a footman.

PAPYRUS.

FORDS. Places for crossing a river by wading. See Jordan.

FORE'HEAD (Ez. ix. 4). It was (and is now in India) the custom in the East to mark or color the forehead, to distinguish the holy from the profane (Rev. xiii. 16), the devotees of certain idols, and also slaves. "Jewels for the forehead" (Ez. xvi. 12), means nose-rings, or, it may be, strings of coins.

FOREST (Heb. yaar, abundance, forest; choresh, thick wood; pardes, orchard). Since the historical era, Palestine has had few forests, the trees being mostly fruit or ornamental. The highlands were probably once well wooded. Several forests are mentioned: of Lebanon, which must have been one of great extent (see Cedar, Fir); of Hareth; of Carmel; of Ephraim, etc. There are now extensive forests in Persia, of oak, terebinth (Is. ii. 13; Ez. xxvii. 6). "The house of the forest of Lebanon" was built of cedar and fir from Lebanon, with many pillars like a forest, in Jerusalem (1 K. vii. 2). The forest supplies the poets and prophets with many fine figures.

FORKS (1 Sam. xiii. 21). Hay-forks with three or more prongs; used, also, in winnowing grain.

FORNICA'TION Adultery.

FORTIFICA'TION. Fenced Cities (Micah vii. 12).

FOR'TRESS (2 Sam. xxii. 2; Ps. xviii. 2; Is. xxv. 12). Fenced Cities.

FORTUNA'TUS. Disciple at Ephesus, native of Corinth (1 Cor. xvi. 17). He is also mentioned in Clement's Epistle.

FOUNDA'TION, GATE OF THE (2 Chr. xxiii. 5). Jerusalem.

FOUN'DER (Judg. xvii. 4; Jer. vi. 29). Metals.

FOUN'TAIN (Heb. ayin, to flow; mayan, a gushing; bor, a cistern; mabbua, to bubble out; makor, to dig). These several words are translated fountain, but only one, ayin, really means a spring of water. The springs of Palestine are remarkable for their great number, and some of them for their immense volume. Water there is fertility and life, and the whole land is full of great fountains, such as those of the Dog River; of the River of Beirut; Damur; Owely; Zahrany; Litany at Baalbek; Zahleh; Ainjar, and Mushgarah; Ras el Ain at Tyre; Kabery and Naamany near Acre; of the Kishon at Janin, Lejjun, and Wady Kusaby; Zerka near Cæsarea; Aujeh at Antipatris, and the Ras in Sharon. And so we might go all through Palestine, on both sides of the Jordan. Some are hot, as at Tiberias, Gadara, and Callirrhoë; others are intermittent as the Fuarr, the source of the Sabbatic River, and the Menbej, east of Beit Jenn, Mt. Hermon (Land and Book, i. 405). The fountain at Nazareth has a traditional antiquity and importance. Wealthy men in the East build handsome structures over fountains for their preservation, and the benefit of residents and travelers.

FOUNTAIN-GATE. JERUSALEM (Neh. xii. 37).

FOWL (Heb. BARBURIM (1 K. iv. 23) fatted fowl). Barn-door fowl, or geese. The Egyptian paintings represent catching, keeping, feeding, killing, salting, cooking, and eating of fowl.

FOX (Heb. SHUAL, to dig through). The Arab name for jackal is shĭkal, but a little different from the Hebrew SHUAL, and it is evident from the habits of the animal referred to that the jackal is meant. They are plenty now in Palestine, and are night-prowlers, lying concealed in the day-time, in caves, holes, or among the ruins. They go in packs of hundreds. They eat any carcase of either animal or man (Ps. lxiii. 9, 10). The Orientals never spare pain in men or animals, and Samson, who was revengeful and unscrupulous, tied a firebrand between two jackals and sent them into the dry wheat-fields of the Philistines, destroying vast fields probably. (See FIRE.) Jackals are very fond of grapes. (Matt. viii. 20; Luke ix. 58).

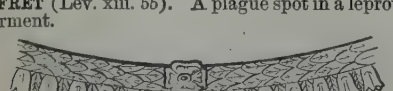
FRANK'INCENSE (Heb. LEBONAH). Resin of the Boswellia tree, which grows 40 feet high in India and Arabia Felix. It has a balsamic smell, and burns with a white flame and fragrant odor. Its burning was symbolical of the holiness of Jehovah (1 Chr. ix. 29) and of prayer (Ps. cxli. 2; Luke i. 10; Rev. viii. 3).

FRÂY (Deut. xxviii. 26, etc.). To terrify. Not used now.

FREEDOM. CITIZEN. SLAVE.

FREE-WILL OFFERING (Lev. xxii. 18). Free gifts. SACRIFICE.

FRET (Lev. xiii. 55). A plague spot in a leprous garment.



FRINGE.

FRINGES (Heb. ZITHZITH, flourish). Bobs, tassels or fringes (Num. xv. 38). They are shown on many ancient figures. ASSYRIA; DRESS; EMBROIDERY.

FROG (Heb. ZEPHARDEA, marsh leaper). Mentioned but three or four times in the Bible (always of the plague), but very common in Palestine and Egypt (Ex. viii. 2–14; Ps. lxxviii. 45; cv. 30; Wisdom xix. 10). It is believed that the frogs of the plague were the edible variety. Their noise is heard from one end of the land to the other (L. & B. i. 368). In Egypt they were regarded as a type of the Creator (Pthah).

FRONT'LET (Heb. TOTAPHOTH). Something bound on the forehead, "between the eyes," and as a sign or token in the hand (a ring?). Originally the meaning of the law or direction was to keep in memory, as in Prov. vi. 21: "Bind them on the heart, and tie them on the neck." But after the return from captivity the Jews made the law literal, and wrote it out (Ex. xiii. 2–10, 11–16; Deut. vi. 5–9; xi. 13–21) on bits of parchment, called Phylacteries, which were put in little cases of leather (metal in our day), and tied on the forehead and left arm. The ribbon for tying them was colored purple by the Pharisees, and made showy and broad (Mark vii. 3, 4), and were worn by all Jews except Karaites, women and slaves. The Rabbis made many rules about their uses. They were not worn on the Sabbath, because the Sabbath was itself a sign; the person reading them in the morning must stand; in the evening he may sit; the color of the thread might be changed to red in times of persecution; both hands must be used in writing them; the parchment must not have a hole in it; only one blot or error was permitted; a person wearing them must keep six feet off from a cemetery—and many others. They were a means of religious vanity, hypocrisy and display, and were so denounced by Jesus. The Rabbis said (by a kind of pious fraud) that God wore them, arguing from Is. xlix. 16; lxii. 8; Deut. xxxiii. 2. They were a kind of amulet, such as the modern Arabs use. AMULET.

FROST (Heb. HANAMAL, hail-stones, Ps. lxxviii. 47); KERACH, ice (Gen. xxxi. 40); KEPHOR, hoar-frost (Ex. xvi. 40). There is a great difference between the temperature of the day and night in the East. CLIMATE.

FRŪIT (Heb. PERI, fruit in general; KAYITS, summer fruits). Their great variety and excellence would fill a volume.

FRYING-PAN. BREAD.

FŪEL. DUNG.

FULLER. Business of cleaning and whitening cloth. It was carried on outside the city of Jerusalem, where was the Fuller's Field, mentioned three times in the Bible (2 K. viii. 17; Is. vii. 3; xxxvi. 2), so close, that one speaking in the field could be heard by one standing on the city wall. Perhaps near the pool of Gihon, or it might have been at En Rogel. Rabshakeh and his great host must have come on the north side.

FUNERAL. BURIAL. See cuts on pages 4 and 61.

FURLONG. The stadium; Roman, 201 $\frac{45}{100}$ yards; English, 220 yards (Luke xxiv. 13).

FURNACE. Several kinds are mentioned: 1. TANNER, oven (Gen. xv. 17); KIBSHAN, lime-kiln (Gen. xix. 28); KUR, furnace for smelting metals; ATTUN, furnace (Dan. iii. 6); Gr. kaminos, baker's oven (Matt. xiii. 42).

FUR'NITURE (Heb. KELI, apparatus, Ex. xxxi. 7). The furniture of Eastern dwellings is very simple. Many articles deemed necessary with us would find no place there.—2. Heb. KAR, a camel's saddle and its canopy (Gen. xxxi. 34)

G

GA'AL (loathing). Son of Ebed (Judg. ix). A brigand who was ready to sell his services to the highest bidder.

GA'ASH (earthquake). Mount Gaash on the north side of which was Timnathcheres, the city given to Joshua at his request (Josh. xix. 49, 50), and where he resided and was buried (Josh. xxiv. 30; Judg. ii. 9). Lost.

GA'BA. GEBA.

GAB'AEL (God's highest). 1. Descendant of Tobit (Tob. i. 1).—2. A poor Jew (Tob. i. 17), to whom Tobit lent money.

GABBAI (tax-gatherer). An important person in the family of Benjamin (Neh. xi. 8).

GAB'BATHA. Pavement (John xix. 13). Outside the Prætorium (judgment hall), where Pilate delivered Jesus to death. The bema was an elevated pavement, the usual place of justice.

GABDES. GABA (1 Esd. v. 20).

GA'BRIAS (man of Jehovah, Tob. i. 14). Brother of Gabael.

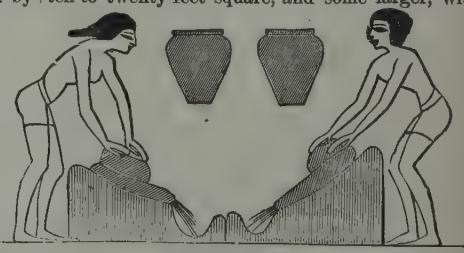
GABRIEL (man of God). Angel (Dan. viii. 16; Luke i. 19). In Jewish and Christian traditions the archangel of God.

GAD (troop). Jacob's seventh son, first-born of Zilpah, Leah's maid; brother to Asher (Gen. xxx. 11–13; xlvi. 16, 18). The country given to the tribe was the centre of the east of Jordan (Deut. iii. 12), from Heshbon to Mahanaim. On the east was Aroer, that faces Rabbah (Josh. xiii. 25); west was Jordan (v. 27), and including the Arabah, from the Jabbok to the Sea of Chinnereth. The most beautiful district in Syria. It is a high range of purple-tinted mountains, cut down by deep ravines, partially clothed with forests of oak, terebinths, sycamores, ilex, beech, fig, and evergreen shrubs. The climate is fine and soil fertile, affording the best pasturage. At one time the tribe possessed the land as far east as Salcah (1 Chr. v. 11, 16). Jephthah was a Gadite of Mizpah (Judg. xi. 34). Carried into captivity, and its cities inhabited by Ammonites (1 Chr. v. 26; Jer. xlix. 1).

GAD'ARA. Five miles southeast of the Sea of Galilee, three miles from the river Hieromax. There were warm springs near the river, called Amatha. Josephus says it was a Greek city, and the capital of Peræa (Jos. B. J. iv. 7, § 3; Mark v. 1; Luke viii. 26–37). Here the Lord healed the demoniacs (Matt. viii. 28–34; Mark v. 1–21; Luke viii. 26–40). The most interesting ruins at Gadara are the tombs, which are very numerous in the cliffs around the city, cut in the solid rock, being rooms ten to twenty feet square, and some larger, with small recesses out of them for bodies, the doors being stone, turning on stone hinges. The space over which the ruins are scattered is about two miles, on a narrow, high ridge, sloping east, anciently walled all around. There was a straight street from end to end, with a colonade on each side, and two very large theatres, now in ruins. Not a house or a column is standing.



EGYPTIAN FULLER.

GADARENES'. People of Gadara.

GAD'DI (fortunate). Son of Susi (Num. xiii. 11).

GAD'DIAL (fortune of God). A Zebulonite spy.

GA'DI. A Gadite. Father of King Menahem (2 K. xv. 14, 17).

GADITES. Of the tribe of Gad.

GA'HAM (swarthy). Son of Nahor, brother of Abraham (Gen. xvii. 24), son of Reumah.

GA'HAR (hiding-place). Ancestor of Nethinim (Ezr. ii. 47).

GĀ'IUS. A common Roman name.

GAL'AAD (1 Macc. v. 9, 56; Jud. i. 8).

GA'LAL (worthy). 1. A Levite (1. Chr. ix. 15).—2. Son of Jeduthun (ix. 16; Neh. xi. 17).

GAL'ATIA (country of the Galli, Asia). Used in two senses.—1. Some suppose France (Gaul) is meant in 2 Tim. iv. 10, and 1 Macc. viii. 2. France (Gaul) may have been the origin of the people who invaded Greece and Asia Minor in the 4th century, B. C., and were first checked by Antiochus, who was called Soter (saviour) for the success, and were finally subdued by the Roman Manlius, B. C. 189, when they gathered into a district in the central region of Asia Minor. Visited twice by Paul (Acts xviii. 23). The Epistle to the Galatians was written after the second visit.

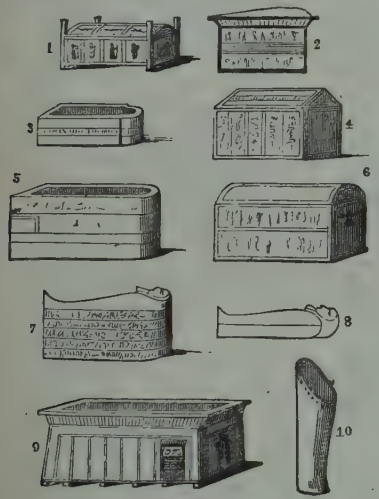
GALA'TIANS (1 Macc. viii. 2; 2 Macc. viii. 20; Gal iii. 1). People of any race, or Jews, or Gauls from France, living in Galatia. For Epistle to the Galatians, see HISTORY OF THE BOOKS.

GAL'BANUM (HELBENAH). A perfume used in the preparation of the sacred incense (Ex. xxx. 34). Resinous, yellow-brown, but it is not known from what plant or tree it is derived.

GAL'EED (heap of witness). The name which Jacob gave to the heap which he and Laban made on Mount Gilead (Gen. xxxi. 47, 48, xxiii. 25). JEGAR-SAHADUTHA.

GALGALA (1 Macc. ix. 2). MAGDALA?

GALILE'AN. Native of Galilee (Mark xiv. 70).



COFFINS.

GALILEE (GALIL, a circle). At first applied to a small district about Kedesh, on the N. W. shore of the Sea of Galilee (Is. ix. 1). Afterward, during the Roman rule, the name of the whole country north of the Kishon river and Mount Gilboa, to the Leontes and Hermon, from the Jordan to the sea (Josephus Life, 12, Wars, iii.). Divided into Upper, as far as the N. W. angle of the Sea of Galilee, and Lower, as far south as Ginea (Jenin), including the great plain of Esdraëlon. The hills are now wooded, with gentle slopes, and are fruitful of all that man uses, and luxuriant in flowers of every variety (Deut. xxxiii. 18; Gen. xlix. 20). The chief towns were Capernaum, Kedesh, Bethsaida, Tiberias, Nazareth, Cana, besides many other smaller, the ruins of which are scattered over nearly every hill-top or hill-side. Here was the scene of the greater part of the works and life of Jesus, which are the subject of the first three Gospels almost wholly. THE SEA OF GALILEE, GENNESARET.

GALL (Heb. MERERAH, bitter; ROSH, poison-hemlock, or poppies). Gall means the bitter nature of the drink offered Jesus (Matt. xxvii. 34).

GAL'LERY (Heb. RAHIT, ceiling; rafters in Cant. i. 17; RAHAT, braided, in Gen. xxx. 28, gutters; ATTIK, pillar for the support of a house, Ez. xli. 15).

GAL'LEY. SHIP.

GAL'LIM (heaps). Twice mentioned (1 Sam. xxv. 44; Is. x. 30). It was probably near Dan, Laish, but is lost.

GAL'LIO, JUNIUS ANNÆUS. Elder brother of the philosopher Seneca, who dedicated to him his treatise De Vita Beta, and in another work describes him as a man universally loved, and who especially abhorred flattery. He was the proconsul of Achaia, and by his prudent course much assisted Paul (Acts xviv. 12-17). He was a victim to Nero's cruelty.

GAMĀ'LA (camel). Built on a hill, near the middle of the E. shore of the Sea of Galilee. Described by Josephus as an important town.

GAMA'LIEL (benefit of God). 1. Son of Padahzur (Num. i. 10, ii. 20), head of the tribe of Manasseh, in the Exodus.—2. A Pharisee, and a celebrated doctor (Acts v. 34; xxii. 3); a Rabbi, teacher of Paul. He was grandson of the famous Hillel, and son of Rabbi Simeon, and president of the Sanhedrin during the time of Tiberius, Caligula, and Claudius. He lived 18 years after the destruction of Jerusalem.

GĀMES. The ancient (and modern) Orientals are represented as very fond of games of many kinds, private and public, frequently mentioned in Scripture. The sculptures and paintings of antiquity exhibit these in every variety. Job alludes to one in xli. 5, and Jeremiah in xxx. 19, and Jesus, in Matt. xi. 16. Music, dancing, and song were always enjoyed on festive occasions (Ps. xxx. 11; Luke xv. 25). Armed men jousted (2 Sam. ii. 14); they played with single-stick; with the cestus; wrestled; quoits; at leaping; running; and all Grecian games. The rewards in the Grecian games were of several kinds: A chaplet of wild olive; palm branches; and the honors freely given him by his friends and fellow-citizens, of sacrifices to the gods, and poems in his praise, exemption from public service, and a pension. There were four more celebrated; Olympic, Pythian, Nemean, and Isthmian, among the Greeks, in which the most eminent men contended for the prizes, which fact made them a fitting illustration of the Christian life. Temperance in eating and drinking was the rule, and severe exercise at stated times. The Romans added brutality and cruelty, and men were required to fight each other, and wild beasts also. Paul witnessed the games, in various cities where he preached, and is the only one in the N. T. who makes use of them as illustrations of the strife for good against evil in the theatre of life.

GAM'MADINE (Ez. xxvii. 11). Hired soldiers. Mercenaries.

GAR. "Sons of Gar," servants of Solomon (1 Esd. v. 34).

GAR'DEN (Heb. GAN, GINNAH; Gr. keros). The garden was essential in Egypt. They made constant and general use of fruits and flowers at the table, which required careful cultivation. Their residences were surrounded with gardens, laid out with skilful care, with ornamental beds of curious devices, arbors of trellis-work, basins and rills of water with fish, and paved walks. The Israelites remembered the gardens when they were in the desert, and did not neglect them when in Palestine. Everywhere we find traces of such cultivation: in terraces, cisterns for water, springs cared for, and names of places compounded with Gan or Gen (Engannim, Gennesaret). The garden was often away from the village or house a half a mile perhaps, in some favored spot for water and good soil. The summer-house was decorated with handsome designs and showy colors. It was a place of retirement (John xxviii. 1), and also of merry-making (Is. li. 3). They were inclosed with walls, hedges, and had watch-towers; and even the poorest a booth to shelter the watchman (Is. i. 8; Mark xii. 1; Job. xxvii. 18). A family tomb was sometimes built in the garden (2 K. xxi. 18, 26; John xix. 41, 42).

GARDEN-HOUSE. Place where king Ahaziah II fled from Jehu (2 K. xix. 27); the modern Jenin (Engannim).

GĀ'REB, THE ITHRITE. A hero of David's army, from Jattir (2 Sam. xxiii. 38).

GĀ'REB, THE HILL. Near Jerusalem (Jer. xxxi. 39). Now occupied by the new and fine buildings of the Russian mission.

GAR'LIC (SHUM). A vegetable, something like the onion, found in Egypt (Num. xi. 5). The Egyptians have always made use of it as a stimulant, for it quickens the circulation.

GAR'MITE (bony), (1 Chr. iv. 9). Keilah, from Gerem.

GARNER. BARN.

GAR'RISON (Heb. MAZZAH, garrison; NEZIB, a garrison, or also a column (1 Sam. xiii. 3); MAZZEBAH, a pillar (Ez. xxvi. 11); Gr. phoureo, to keep watch (2 Cor. xi. 32). The garrison at Jerusalem was a citadel, or the tower of Antonia (Acts xxi. 34, 37). Another, in Damascus, was used to prevent Paul's escape.

GĀ'TAM (burnt valley). Fourth son of Eliphaz (Gen. xxxvi. 11); head of an Edomite tribe. Jethema is a modern town in Arabia.

GĀTE (Heb. SHAAR, gate; PETHAH, entry; SAPH, threshhold, door-post; DELETH, door, two leaved gate; Chal. tera, gate, door; Gr. thura, pule, pulon). An entrance into a camp, a house, a tent, a temple, a city, etc. "To possess the gate," was a term meaning power and wealth (Gen. xxii. 17). It was the place of assembly (Prov. i. 21) for social (Ps. lxix. 12) and legal purposes (Ruth iv. 1). Daniel sat in the gate of the king of Babylon (iv. 49); for attracting the notice of the king (Esth. ii. 19), and for marketing (2 K. vii. 1). The gate was spoken of as meaning the city (Gen. xiv. 60; Ps. lxxxvii. 2) or the people of the city (2 Sam. xv. 2). There was (and is) generally an open place both outside and inside the gate. In such a one the king of Ai was buried (Josh. viii. 29), and Jeremiah the prophet was set in the stocks (Jer. xx. 2).

GATE.

The Assyrian palaces furnish many illustrations of Scripture, and especially in the architecture, paintings and sculptures of the gates. They were lofty, magnificent, built for the ages, guarded by symbolic figures, never used inside of buildings, who present to the visitor the fir-cone, a symbol of life. In the floor of the door-way are usually found concealed curious, small images of baked clay, with animal heads on human (or lion) bodies and bull's legs and tail, which were the guardian divinities of the gate (TERAPHIM, Arabic tarf, boundary).

RUINED GRANARY. GATH.

GATH (wine-press). One of the five royal cities of Philistia. The residence of the Anakim giants (Josh. xi. 22). The ark was carried there by the Philistines (1 Sam. v.). David was in danger of his life at Gath, and saved it by a ruse of madness (ib. xxi. 10–15). Many of the people were attached to David all his life (2 Sam. vi. 10, xv. 18). The site has been lost for ages, and is now located by Robinson at Deir Dubban; by Thomson at Beit Jibrin; and by Porter at Tell es Safieh.

GATH-HE'PHER (wine-press of the well). Zebulon, near Japhia (Josh. xix. 13). Gittah-hepher. Benjamin of Tudela says that in his time (A. D. 1140) the tomb of Jonah was shown on a hill near Sepphoris.

GATH-RIM'MON. Dan, in the plain (Josh. xxi. 24). Lost.—2. Manasseh, west of Jordon (ib. 25). Probably Bethshan.

GA'ZA (strong). AZ'ZAH (desert). The last town in the southwest of Palestine, on the coast toward Egypt. On the high road between Egypt and Syria. Mentioned in Genesis (x. 19), one of the oldest cities in the world (Gen. x. 17), and is a town now. Joshua could not subdue it (x. 41). Held by Judah a short time (Judg. i. 18; iii; xii. 1). Samson carried off its gates (xvi. 1–31). Gaza is mentioned in the inscriptions at Nineveh (Layard, p. 144). The Ethiopian was baptized by Philip on the way to Gaza. There are deep wells of good water, orchards of varieties of fruit, and palm trees and olive groves. Settled by Avim or Hivites, who were driven out by the Caphtorim from Egypt. Became one of the five royal Philistine cities, the last home of the giant Anakim (Josh. xi. 22). Taken by Alexander the Great, who was wounded there (Arrian ii. 26). A church was established there early, but idolatry was only abandoned publicly when the last eight temples were destoyed, A. D. 406. Taken by the Saracens A. D. 634. The Crusaders built a fort in 1152. The ancient harbor is covered by the sands. Now called Guzzeh.

GAZA.

GAZ'ARA. Near Azotus, Philistia (1 Macc. xiv. 34; Strabo xvi. 2). A very strong hold (2 Macc. x. 32). Supposed the same as Gazer—Gezer of 2 Sam. v. 25. Taken by Pharaoh, father-in-law to Solomon. 1 K. ix. 16; Josh. x. 33, xxi. 12, xvi. 3 point to a site between Bethhoron the nether and the sea, probably at the foot of the hills in the border of the Shefelah. There may have been two cities of the same name. Neither is located.

GA'ZATHITES. People of Gaza (Josh. xiii. 3).

GA'ZER (2 Sam. v. 25). GEZER.

GA'ZEZ (shearer). 1. Son of Caleb.—2. Son of Haran (1 Chr ii. 46).

GA'ZITES (Judg. xvi. 2). GAZA.

GAZ ZAM (devouring). Ancestor of Nethinim (Exr. ii. 48).

GĒBA (the hill). Benjamin (Josh. xxi. 17; 1 Chr. vi. 60). Was held by the Philistines (1 Sam. xiii. 3), who were expelled by Jonathan (1 Sam. xiv. 5). Isaiah (x. 28) describes the march of the Assyrians, and their halt at Geba.—2. (Judith iii. 10), where Holofernes is said to have encamped.

GĒ'BAL (a line, or mountain ridge). (Ps. lxxxiii. 7). A district S. of Moab, from W. el Ahsy S. to Shobek, near W. Shuweir. The cities were Arindela, Bozrah, Shobek, Tophel, and others smaller.—2. A very ancient city on a spur of Lebanon, close to the shore, anciently having a fine harbor, which is now choked up with sand and ruins of buildings, quays, etc. The castle is one of the best specimens of ancient masonry, having stones 20 feet long and beveled. The columns and walls, and their great extent especially, prove the splendor and importance of the city (Ez. xxvii. 9; Joshua xiii. 5). Workers in stone from G. were employed on Solomon's temple (1 K. v. 18—stone-squarers being a translation of Giblites—people of Gebal). Jebail.

GE'BER (a man). 1. Son of Geber (1 K. iv. 13).—2. Son of Uri (iv. 19).

GE'BIM (ditches). Village N. of Jerusalem, near Anathoth (2 K. iii. 16; Is. x. 31). Now El Isawiyeh.

GEDALI'AH (Jehovah made him great). 1. Son of Ahikam (Jer. xl. 5), the secretary of King Josiah. He was appointed the executive officer of Nebuchadnezzar, after the Captivity, and was popular for his piety and gentleness, but was murdered soon after his appointment by Baalis and Ishmael. 2. A Levite, one of the musicians of Jehovah (1 Chr. xxv. 3, 9).—3. A priest (Ezr. x. 18).—4. Son of Pashur (Jer. xxxviii. 1).—5. Grandfather of Zephaniah (Zeph. i. 1).

GED'DUR (1 Esd. v. 30). GAHAR.

GED'EON. GIDEON. 1. Ancestor of Judith (Jud. xiii. 1).—2. Gideon (Heb. xi. 32). Greek form of the Hebrew Gideon.

GE'DER. Judah, extreme S. (Josh. xii. 13). Lost.

GED'ERAH (sheep-cote). Judah, in the Shefelah (Josh. xv. 36). Lost.

GEDERASHITE. The natives of Gederah (1 Chr. xii. 4).

GEDERITE. Inhabitants of Geder (1 Chr. xxvii. 28).

GED'EROTH (sheep-cotes). GEDEROTHAIM (two sheep-cotes), Lost.

GE'DOR. Judah, in the Mts. (Josh. xv. 58), near Hebron, or half-way to Bethlehem. The modern name is Jedur.—2. Benj. (1 Chr. xii. 7).—3. (1 Chr. iv. 39). A place from whence Simeon expelled the Hamites, dwellers in tents, and the Maonites. Probably on the way to Petra. Lost.

GEHA'ZI (valley of vision). Servant of Elisha. An unfaithful messenger of the good Shunammite (2 K. iv., v.).

GEHEN'NA. The Greek name of Hinnom.

GELIL'OTH (to roll or wind as a river). Benj., near Adummim, the same as Gilgal (Josh. xviii. 17).

GEMAL'LE (camel-driver). Father of Ammiel. A spy (Num. xiii. 12).

GEMARIAH (Jehovah has made perfect). 1. Son of Shophan, a noble of Judah, who had a chamber in the house of the Lord (Jer. xxxvi.).—2. Son of Hilkiah (xxix.).

GEMS. PRECIOUS STONES.

GENEALOGY. The Orientals are peculiar in keeping genealogies of their families, and also of horses and camels. They made them the means of proving titles to property and offices. No list is so long or complete as that of Jesus.

GEN'ERAL (1 Chr. xxvii. 34). ARMY.

GENERATION (Heb. DOR, a period of time). Now about thirty years. The Hebrews had no fixed limit. One term is mentioned as 86 years (Gen. xv. 16), another 130 (v. 3), and one 500 years (v. 32). Its average was 30 to 40, probably, as now.

GEN'ESIS. HISTORY OF THE BOOKS.

GENNES'ARET, SEA OF (the garden). The Sea of Tiberias; the Sea of Chinnereth; the Sea of Galilee (Num. xxxiv. 11; Josh. xii. 3). Named from a town of the same name (Josh. xix. 35), which is lost, if it is not the site between Tiberias and the hot baths (Josh. xi. 2; Deut. iii. 17). Most of the life of Jesus was passed near this lake. Capernaum was on its shore, "His own city" (Matt. iv. 13). He called his first disciples from among its fishermen (Luke v.). Near it were spoken many of his parables, the Sermon on the Mount, and a number of the miracles were performed. There were 9 cities on its shores, and many others near. It is about 13 ms. long and 6 ms. wide, and the surface is 700 feet below the level of the ocean. The water is, in some places, 250 feet deep. The E. shore is 2,000 feet high, bare of trees, and cut down by deep ravines, quite flat and uniform on the summits. The W. banks are similar, but not so regular in hight, and being opened for the plain of G. The whole basin has a scathed, volcanic look. The climate is quite tropical. Palms and all kinds of trees and vegetables grow luxuriantly, and indigo is cultivated. The beach is pebbly everywhere, and is covered by small, twisted shells, purplish grey. Only one of the 9 cities now remains, Tiberias, almost in ruins, and even the sites of the others are disputed and in doubt.

GENNI'US (high-born). Father of Apollonius IV (2 Macc. xii. 2).

GENTILES (Heb. GOYIM, foreigners, not Jews; Gr. ethnos, people; hellene, Greeks). Any people not Hebrews, and who do not worship Jehovah.

GENUBATH (theft). Son of Hadad IV, a member of Pharaoh's court (1 K. xi. 20).

GE'ON. GIHON. One of the four rivers of Paradise (Gen. ii. 13). Perhaps only used as a poetic figure (Eccl. xxiv. 27).

GERA (a grain). Descendant of Benjamin (Gen. xlvi. 21). Son of Bela (1 Chr. viii. 3).

GE'RAH (berry). WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

GE'RAR. A very ancient city S. of Gaza (Gen. x. 19; xx. 1; xxvi. 1). Near Kedesh in Shur; peopled by pastoral Philistines. Isaac was born there (xxi. 2, 3), and found it a very fertile land (xxvi. 12), and grew so rich that the Philistines envied him (14).

GER'ASA. In Matt. viii. 28, mistaken for Gadarenes. On the E. border of Peræa (Jos. Wars iii. 3, § 3), in the Mts. of Gilead, 20 ms. E. of the Jordan, 25 N. of Rabbath Ammon, Philadelphia. It was once one of the proudest cities of Syria, as its abundant ruins testify. The Saracens have never occupied it. Built in a narrow valley, on both the sloping sides, 5 miles from the Jabbok. Through it a small creek winds, fringed with many trees and shrubs. There was a colonnade from end to end of the city, with a circular forum at one end. Hundreds of columns are still standing.

It was one of the cities of the Decapolis, but is not mentioned by name in the Bible. The present people are active and prosperous.

GERGESENES. People of Gergesa on the E. of the Sea of Galilee (Matt. viii. 28). GADARENES.

GERIZ'IM (desert or shorn). S. of Shechem. The law was given on Mt. Sinai, and the blessing and cursing on the two mountains Ebal and Gerizim. (See EBAL). Jotham stood on G. when he denounced Abimelech (Judg. ix.). When Alexander took Palestine he gave Sanballat (the Persian governor under Darius) permission to build a temple on Mt. G.; and Manasseh, brother of Jaddua the high priest at Jerusalem, was made high priest at Shechem, about 420 B. C. This temple was destroyed by the Jews, 129 B. C. The ruins are still shown. The Samaritans worship here yet, without temple or altar. The view from the summit is one of the finest in Palestine, commanding the deep blue of the Great Sea, snowy Mt. Hermon, purple Gilead and Moab, and the lovely green valley of Mokhna at its foot.

DIVAN.

GER'IZITES (dwelling in a desert land). GERZITES.

GERRHĒ'NIANS, THE (2 Macc. xiii. 24). Inhabitants of Gerar.

GER'SHOM. 1. Son of Moses (Ex. ii. 22, xviii. 3).—2. Son of Levi (1 Chr. vi. 16, 17, 20).—3. A member of the family of Phinehas (Ezr. viii. 2. GERSON.

GER'SHON (expulsion). Son of Levi (Gen. xlvi. 11).

GERSHO'NITES, THE. Descendants of Gershom (1 Chr. xxvi. 21). They had charge of the coverings, curtains, hangings, cords, etc., of the Tabernacle, and of transporting them.

GER'SON (1 Esd. viii. 29). Error for Gershon.

GER'ZITES (dwelling in a desert), people who occupied the land S. of Palestine and Egypt (1 Sam. xxvii. 8).

GE'SEM. GOSHEN. (Jud. i. 9).

GE'SHAM (filthy). Son of Jahdai (1 Chr. ii. 47).

GĒS'HEM (carcase). An Arabian (Neh. ii. 19, vi. 2). An inveterate enemy of the Jews in the time of Nehemiah.

GĒSH'UR (bridge). N.E. in Bashan (Deut. iii. 14). David married Maachah, the daughter of Talmai, king of G. (2 Sam. iii. 3), mother of Absalom. Joab found Absalom in this place (2 Sam. xiii. 37, xv. 8). It is supposed to be the district now called El Lejah.

GĒSHURI and GESHURITES. People of Geshur (Deut. iii. 14).—2. Ancient tribe, in the desert between Arabia and Philistia (Josh. xiii. 2).

GETH'ER (fear). Son of Aram (Gen. x. 23).

GETHSEM'ANE (oil-press garden—wine-press, GATH, wine). "A small farm." In the Kidron valley, on the lower slope of Olivet, 850 feet from St. Stephen's Gate, and 800 feet from the closed Gate, at the angle between the direct road up Olivet and that leading to the right around the hill (both leading to Bethany). Tradition only locates the "garden" (John xviii. 1) here; the "place" (Matt. xxvi. 36; Mark xiv. 32) was "over the brook Kidron, on Olivet somewhere, perhaps nearer Bethany on the road to the right; or rather away from any road. From the days of Eusebius, Jerome, and Adamnanus, some such place has been spoken of as "a place of prayer for the faithful" (Jerome), and having a church built on it. The place might have been selected by the Empress Helena (as many others were), to represent that mentioned in the Gospels. It is now walled in, enclosing eight very old olive-trees, and ornamented with beds of flowers. One of the trees is 25 feet in girth. The city walls and the top of the dome on the Great Mosque are in plain view. The Turks have pleasure-grounds, or gardens, further up the valley, where they resort to enjoy the cool shade of the olive-trees, some of which are quite as large as those in "Gethsemane." The antiquity of these trees is argued from the tax of one medina for each tree, which rate was fixed for trees that stood at the time of the conquest; all those planted since being taxed one-half their produce (Chateaubriand). This would carry the date back to A. D. 634, when Omar took Jerusalem; or, if the tax was decreed after the Turks took the city, to A. D. 1087. Pilgrims pay the guide for showing this place, with others at the Holy City.

GEU'EL (God's majesty). Son of Machi; a spy (Num. xiii. 15).

GEZ'ER. City of Canaan, not far from Bethhoron, the west limit of the tribe of Ephraim, (1 Chr. vii. 28). Horam, king of Gezer, came up to help Lachish, and was killed by Joshua (x. 33). David smote the Philistines from Geba to Gezer (2 Sam. v. 25). Site lost.

GEZ'RITES. Inhabitants of Gezer (1 Sam. xxvii. 8).

GHOST (Spirit). HOLY SPIRIT.

GI'AH (breaking forth) (2 Sam. ii. 24). To distinguish the position of the hill Ammah.

GIANTS. (Heb. NEPHILIM, REPHAIM). Persons of great strength. The Nephilim were living in Canaan at the time of the Exodus (Num. xiii. 33). The sons of Anak were afterwards identified with the same race, living at Hebron. The Rephaim were a tribe living in Canaan, Og being a king of the branch on the east of Jordan (Deut. iii. 11). The same name was in later times given to any large and strong people. The Emim and Zamzummim were also of the giants (ii. 10, 20). These merely strong men gave way before the skilful, and disappear from the history of the cultivated people. Goliath and his brother are the last mentioned.

GETHSEMANE.

GIB'BAR (hero). 95 of this family returned with Zerubbabel (Ezr. ii. 20). Gibeon in Neh. vii.

GIB'BETHON (hill). Town in Dan (Josh. xix. 44). Levitical.

GIBEAH (rounded—a hill). 1. G. OF SAUL (1 Sam. xv. 34). The native place of Saul (1 Sam. x. 26; 2 Sam. xxi. 6), where he was a farmer. He made it his capital (xxii. 6). Seven of his descendants were hanged by the Amorites (Is. x. 29). The site is pointed out, four miles north of Jerusalem, at Tuleil el Ful (little hill of beans, where there is an ancient ruin on the top of a conical hill.—2. G. OF JUDAH (Josh. xv. 57). Jeba, in Wady Masurr, near Hebron.—3. G. IN BENJAMIN (Josh. xviii. 28), near to Kirjath Jearim, where the Ark of God was kept for a while (2 Sam. vi. 3), in the time of Saul.—4. G. OF PHINEAS (Josh. xxiv. 33). Where Eleazar, son of Aaron, was buried, in Mt. Ephraim, 12 miles north of Jerusalem, near a glen of the same name.—5. G. OF BENJAMIN (Judg. xix., xx.). A city, having a square, and 700 "chosen men," near Bethel; mentioned during the Philistine wars of Saul and Jonathan (1 Sam. xiii., xiv.). Jeba in the Wady Suweinit.—6. G. IN THE FIELD (Judg. xx. 31). On one of the highways leading from Gibeah of Benjamin. Lost.—7. Several other places are also called Gibeah. 1. (Josh. xv. 5), called afterward Gilgal.—2. The hill of Moreh (Judg. vii. 1).—3. Gibeath-ha-Elohim, the hill of God (1 Sam. x. 5). Lost.—4. G. of Hachilah (1 Sam. xxiii. 19, xxvi. 1).—5. G. of Ammah (2 Sam. ii. 24).—6. G. of Gareb (Jer. xxxi. 39).

GIB'EATH (Josh. xviii. 28). GIB'EATHITE (1 Chr. xii. 3).

GIBEON (belonging to a hill). (Josh. ix. 3–15). One of the 4 cities of the HIVITES, the people who made a league with Joshua by an artifice, and so escaped the fate of Jericho and Ai. It was in Benjamin (xviii. 25). TULEIL EL FUL (hill of beans). The contest of the two parties of 12, of David and of Ishbosheth, was by the pool of Gibeon. Joab killed Amasa (2 Sam. xx. 10) at the great stone in Gibeon; and Joab himself fled to Gibeon for sanctuary, when condemned by Solomon, and was killed by Benaiah (1 K. ii. 34).

GIB'EONITES (Josh. ix. 17). Hivites who played a trick on Joshua, saving their lives, but accepting a life of servitude (v. 23, 27). Saul attempted their destruction (2 Sam. xxi.), and his sons were "crucified" to appease them.

GIB'LITES. Natives of Gebal (Josh. xiii. 5). The "land of the Giblites" was, among the Promised Land, to be governed by Joshua. They were noted as ship-carpenters in Solomon's time, and as stone-masons. Their chief city, Byblus, was the seat of the worship of Adonis (Ez. viii. 14).

GIDDAL'TI (I have made great). Son of Heman (1 Chr. xxv. 4).

GID'DEH (giant). 1. Children of G., returned with Zerubbabel (Ezr. ii. 47).—2. Children of G. were "servants of Solomon" (Ezr. ii. 56).

GIDEON (destroyer), also, JERUBBAAL (striver against Baal). The 5th Judge. He destroyed the Midianite host, with the "300 men that lapped" (Judg. viii. 10).

GIDEŌ'NI (cutting down). Father of Abidan (Num. i. 11).

GI'DOM. Near Rimmon (Josh. xx. 45).

GIFT. This is a formal business in the East. You are compelled by custom to accept and to return a gift from any person, or take the consequences of an insult by refusing. There are 15 names for gift: MINHAH, is a gift from one to a superior (Judg. iii. 15); MASOTH, from a king or any superior (Esth. ii. 18); NISSETH, is similar (2 Sam. xiv. 42); BERACHAH (blessing), complimentary; SHOCHAD, bribe; MATTAN, MATTANAH, present (Gen. xxv. 6); METTATH, false gift (Prov. xxv. 14); Greek doma, gift (Matt. vii. 11); dorea, do- rema, doron, gift or offering; anathema, devoted; chariema, gift; charis, grace; and several others. It was no less an insult to neglect to give a present when custom led one to expect such a mark of respect (1 Sam. x. 27).

GI'HON. The second river of Paradise (Gen. ii. 13).—2. Near Jerusalem, where Solomon was anointed and proclaimed king (1 K. i. 33, 38, 45). The waters of Gihon were "stopped" by Hezekiah; that is, were conducted "straight down to the west side of the city of David" (2 Chr. xxxii. 30). See JERUSALEM.

GIL'ALAI (heavy). The son of a priest at the consecration of the wall of Jerusalem (Neh. xii. 36).

GIL'BOA (bubbling fountain). A mountain range between the plain of Esdraelon and the Jordan, near which is the city of Jezreel (1 Sam. xxviii. 4; xxix. 1). Mentioned only in connection with the death of Saul and Jonathan (xxxi. 1; 2 Sam. i. 6, xxi. 12; 1 Chr. x. 1, 8). The fountain from which it was named is at its northern base, and was called the well of Harod (Judg. vii. 1), and the spring of Jezreel (1 Sam. xxix. 1). The modern name is Jebel Fukuah, and it is 600 feet high above the plain, and there is on its highest summit a village and ruin called Gelbus by Eusebius, and Wezar by the Arabs.

BALM OF GILEAD.

GIL'EAD (rugged), MOUNT, THE LAND OF (Gen. xxxi. 21). First known in Jacob's time. It next appears when the Israelites were on the march from Egypt, as divided in two sections and governed by Og and Sihon. It is rich in pastures and forests, well watered, and the great number of ruins bear witness of a former numerous population. It was occupied by Reuben and Gad. The whole extent, from Rabbath Ammon to the Hieromax, is one broad, elevated region or mountain (Deut. iii. 12). The same elevation is called Bashan, north of that river. The Lord showed Moses, from the top of Pisgah, all the land of Gilead unto Dan. Probably a popular phrase, as was "from Dan to Beersheba" (Josh. xx. 8). The Gadites are supposed to have imitated the habits of the people they displaced, which are now preserved by the Bedawins in the same district. Thus Jephthah appears like an Arab sheikh of our day (Judg. xi.); and some of David's captains were trained there (1 Chr. xii. 8, 15). RAMOTH GILEAD was its chief city (1 K. xxii. 4). Gilead first fell before the Assyrians (2 K. xv. 29). It was an asylum for refugees (2 Sam. ii. 8), David fleeing there from Absalom. It is now known south of the Jabbok as Jebel Jilad, and north of that river as Jebel Ajlun, and the capital is Es Salt, on the site of the ancient Ramoth Gilead. The whole country is like a fine park. Graceful hills, rich vales, luxuriant herbage, bright wild-flowers, noble forests, wooded heights, and winding glens clothed with tangled shrubbery, open glades and flat meadows of richest green, all so strongly in contrast with the general barren aspect of Western Palestine.

GIL'EADITE, THE (Judg. x. 3). A branch of the tribe of Manasseh.

GIL'GAL (circle), (Josh. iv. 19). Near Jericho; the first encampment of the Israelites in Palestine, where they set up twelve stones as a memorial of the passage of the Jordan. An ancient city (Deut. xi. 30). It was for centuries the great place of the nation's assembly (ix. 6, x. 6, 43). The Tabernacle was pitched here until it was removed to Shiloh (xviii. 1). It was visited by Samuel and Saul and David (1 Sam. x. 8, xi. 14, xiii. 4, xv. 12, xix. 15). There was a high place there for idolaters (Hos. iv. 15; Amos iv. 4, v. 5). As prophesied, the place is utterly desolated. It is impossible now to find where the city was. It was probably not far from Jericho.—2. A royal city of the Canaanites, near Dor (Josh. xii. 23). Jiljuleh (?) 4 miles south of Antipatris.—3. G. IN THE MOUNTAINS (2 K. ii. 1), Jiljulia, 6 miles north of Bethel.

GI'LONITE (2 Sam. xv. 12).

GIM'ZO (2 Chr. xxviii. 18). Judah, near Dan. Jimzu, a large village on a hill, well shaded with trees, 3 miles S. W. of Lydda, where the two roads from Jerusalem (by the Beth-horons and by the Wady Suleiman, which parted at Gibeon) join and go on to Jaffa. There are some large underground granaries here.

GIN. A trap for birds and beasts (Is. viii. 14; Amos iii. 5).

GI'NATH (protection). Father of Tibni (1 K. xvi. 21, 22). He disputed the throne with OMRI.

GIN'NETHO. A priest who returned with Zerubbabel (Neh. xii. 4).

GIN'NETHON (gardener). A priest (Neh. x. 6).

GIR'DLE (Heb. HAGOR, EZOR, MEZAH, ABNET; Gr. zone). DRESS.

GIR'GASHITES, THE (Gen. x. 16, xv. 21). The descendants of the fifth son of Canaan, who settled on the east of the Sea of Galilee. Called Gergesenes in Matt. viii. 28.

GIS'PA (caress). An overseer of Nethinim (Neh. xi. 21).

GIT'TAHHEPHER—GATH-HEPHER. (Josh. xix. 13).

GIT'TAIM (two wine-presses). (2 Sam. iv. 3). A place built by the Gibeonites after they had been expelled from Beeroth (Josh. ix. 17). Inhabited by Benjamites, after the return from captivity.

GIT'TITES. People of Gath. 600 men who went with David from Gath (2 Sam. xv. 18, 19).

GIT'TITH. A musical instrument. (Ps. viii., lxxvi., iv.).

GI'ZONITE (pass, ford) (1 Chr. xi. 34). Gouni. GUNI.

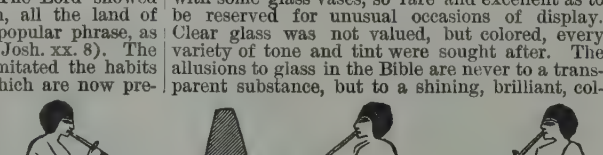
GLASS. So many specimens of ancient glass vessels have been found lately, there is no longer any doubt as to the remote antiquity of the manufacture of glass. It was practiced in Egypt, where the ancient paintings represent men at work over the furnaces, and in the laboratory blowing vessels of glass, at least 1400 B. C. Images, beads, cups, vases, bottles, even coffins, and a great variety of useful and ornamental articles, were made of this material, which are now shown in the Museums at New York and in Europe. The emperor Hadrian was presented by an Egyptian priest with some glass vases, so rare and excellent as to be reserved for unusual occasions of display. Clear glass was not valued, but colored, every variety of tone and tint were sought after. The allusions to glass in the Bible are never to a transparent substance, but to a shining, brilliant, colored mass (Rev. iv. 4). But two colorless, transparent drinking cups were bought by Nero, at a great price. Glass was not used in windows; a thin stone, mica, or talc being used until long after our era. Mirrors (looking-glasses in Ex. xxxviii. 8) were made of metal, not of glass. (MIRROR). The Egyptians (and other ancients) practiced the art of grinding, engraving, and inlaying it with gold enamel, and of working elaborate designs in colors (as an image of a duck with the feathers imitated in form and color) in the midst of masses of clear glass. Precious stones were very successfully imitated by colored glass.



GLASS BLOWERS.

GLEAN'ING. CORNER. The poor had rights of gleaning fruit and grain-fields.

GLĒDE (RAAH). Kite. Probably the buzzard. (Deut. xiv. 13).

GLŌRY. The heart, soul, intelligence, feeling, will, and so the glory of a man as a living, rational being. Of God, it is the manifestation of the divine attributes and perfections, or such a visible effulgence of light as indicates these (Ex. xxxii. 18; John i. 14). The chief end of the Christian is, to live "to the glory of God." "Give God the glory," is to confess the truth (Josh. viii. 19; John ix. 24). "My glory" is my soul, in Ps. xvi. 9, xxx. 12, etc.

GLŌSS. Explanation. A glossary is a collection of notes intended to illustrate or explain the text. Many words in the Scriptures and the Gospels were obscure to the common people, and needed to be explained, in a theological, historical, geographical, or biographical, allegorical and mystical manner. Some glosses were written in the margin (marginal notes), or between the lines in a smaller letter. These were sometimes transferred into the body of the text by ignorant or careless copyists, a few instances being pointed out. Only the most competent scholars can detect these errors. The great exegetical thesaurus of the middle ages was collected by Walafrid Strabo from Augustine, Ambrose, Jerome, Gregory, Isidore, Beda, Alcuin, Rhabanus Maurus, and his own writings.

GNAT (NAT, Greek konops). Mosquito. One of the smallest of insects (Matt. xxiii. 24). The bite in the East often produces sores, with fever. Sleeping on high ground, away from water or trees, is one way of avoiding them.

GOAD (Heb. MALMAD, a pole (Judg. iii. 31) DORBAN, the spike point (1 Sam. xiii. 12). AGRICULTURE.

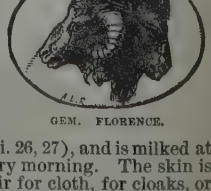
GOAT.

GOAT (AKKO, YEELIM, AZELAH, wild goat, ATTUD, ZAFIR, SAIR, hairy, he-goat (Greek satyr), EZ, she-goat, or goat, TAISH, GEDI, kid, Gr. eriphion (Matt. xxv. 33). Goats are an important part of pastoral wealth in the East. Neither Abraham or Job had them, unless they were included in the "flocks." Jacob tended them (ATTUDIM, he-goats, is rendered rams in Gen. xxxi. 10, 12). The goat was used in sacrifice as the type of the Christ, and the paschal-lamb could be from the sheep or the goats (Ex. xii. 5), as also the burnt-offering (Lev. i. 10), the peace-offering (iii. 12), the sin-offering (iv. 23), and the trespass-offering (ver. 6); the scapegoat (see ATONEMENT) was a peculiar type of Christ as the sin-bearer (xvi). The flesh of the kid is excellent; of the old goat not very palatable. An old Karaite gloss says: "The idolaters seethed a kid in its mother's milk, and sprinkled the broth on their trees, gardens, etc., and Moses therefore condemned the practice." Goat's milk is very valuable (PROV. xxvii. 26, 27), and is milked at the door of customers every morning. The skin is used for bottles. The hair for cloth, for cloaks, or tents (Cant. i. 5; Ex. xxxvi. 14), or pillows (1 Sam.



GEM. FLORENCE.

xix. 13). The Angora goat has the longest and best hair for cloth. The long-eared Syrian goat is peculiar to Syria. (The ears are sometimes 2 ft. long). A delicate grey wool under the long hair is the valued stuff for cloth, only three ounces being had from each goat, but of extreme fineness. The goat was a symbol of Macedonia. It is used often by the prophets, poets, and evangelists, as a symbol or type.

GOAT, SCAPE. ATONEMENT.

GO'ATH (to low, as a cow). Goath, (heifer's pool). (Jer. xxxi. 39). Near the hill Gareb.

GOB (pit). (2 Sam. xxi. 18, 19). The scene of two battles between David's soldiers and the Philistines. GE'ZER, in 1 Chr. xx. 4.

GOB'LET (Heb. AGGAN). A vessel for wine or other liquid (Cant. vii. 2). BASIN, CUP.

GODLINESS, MYSTERY OF (1 Tim. iii. 16). Jesus, the Christ.

GOD-SPEED (2 John 10, 11). Good speed.

GŌG (mountain). 1. Son of Shemaiah, of Reuben (1 Chr. v. 4).—2. MAGOG.—3. In the Septuagint of Num. xiv. 9, Gog is instead of Agag. Gog, as used by Ezekiel (xxxviii. xxxix), means the head or chief of Magog; and also John (Rev. xx. 8–10), making Gog and Magog persons.

GO'LAN (Deut. iv. 43). A Levitical city of Bashan in Manasseh (Josh. xxi. 27). One of the cities of refuge (xx. 8). The site is lost. The city is not mentioned after the time of Joshua in the Scriptures, but the city and the district of the same name is often mentioned by Josephus. Gamala (El Husn), on the east shore of the Sea of Galilee, was in the district (B. J. iv. i. 1). Its principal cities were Golan, Hippos, Gamala, Julias or Bethsaida, Seleucia, and Sogane (Josephus), and about 121 others, nearly all of which are unknown. The country is high (2500 feet), flat, and fertile, well watered, with good pasture. This is the MISHOR of 1 K. xx. 23, 25, where the Syrians were defeated near Aphek (now called Fik). The low, rounded hills, called Tells, extending south from Hermon for about 20 miles, are partly covered with forests or groves of oak and terebinth. The wandering Bedawins (Anazeh) visit the Jaulan every year in May, with their flocks and herds.

GOLD (Heb. ZAHAB; Gr. chrusion, chrusos). Gold has been known from the earliest times, and seems to have been very abundant among the ancients. It was a representative of wealth, and much used for ornaments and for the decoration and utensils of public buildings. Coined money of gold is not mentioned very early. (See MONEY).

GOLDSMITH. Alluded to in Prov. xvii. 3; Is. xlvi. 6; Judg. xvii. 4; Neh. iii. 8, etc.

GOL'GOTHA (a skull), (Matt. xxvii. 33, etc.). Where Jesus was crucified, outside of the city gate (Heb. xiii. 12), but near the city (John xix. 20), and a road leading from the country, where there were passers-by (Matt. xxvii. 39); and there was a garden or orchard at the place (Mark xv. 46). The place is not mentioned again until A. D. 355, when a church was built to honor the spot.

The city at that time had a wall about Zion, and another about Acra. Beyond these, to the north, the suburbs were enclosed by another wall by Agrippa. This seems to leave no place for the site on that side, and therefore denies the claim of the present Church of the Holy Sepulchre, in the centre of the modern city. Another theory places the site on Mt. Moriah, where now stands the great mosque called the Dome of the Rock, which is claimed to be the real church built by Constantine. There is a cave in a rock under this building, which is claimed to be the tomb; and also that it was Araunah's threshing-floor. Another theory is, that the site was not far from St. Stephen's gate. Wm. C. Prime has discovered (1871) a wall which he thinks is a part of the ancient 2d wall so long in question, and found it in the right position and direction to exclude the Holy Sepulchre Church, and so arguing for that as the site which was accepted by Constantine (or Helena) as the true one. JERUSALEM.

GOLI'ATH (exile). A giant of Gath, who defied the armies of Israel, "morning and evening for forty days," and whose defeat (1 Sam. xvii.) threw such glory around the youthful career of David.

GO'MER (Gen. x. 2, 3; Ezek. xxxviii. 6). Eldest son of Japheth. Progenitor of the Cimmerians, whose traces are found in the Cimmerian Bosporus, C. Isthmus, Mt. Cimmerium, Cimmeria, and the C. walls (Herodotus, iv. 12, 45, 100), and also in the modern name Crimea. The Cymri of Wales, Cambria, and Cumberland in England are assigned to the same origin.

GOMOR'RAH (submersion). One of the 5 cities of the plain or vale of Siddim, whose kings joined battle against four kings (Chedorlaomer and his allies, Gen. xiv. 2–8), when Abram came to the rescue. Four of them were destroyed, leaving only Zoar or Bela, which was spared at Lot's request (xix. 23–29). Their fate is alluded to by the prophets as a warning to Israel (Deut. xxix. 23; Is. xiii. 19); to Edom (Jer. xlix. 18; l. 40), to Moab (Zeph. ii. 9); and again to Israel by Amos (iv. 11); and by Peter (2 Pet. ii. 6); and by Jude (verses 4–7), as a warning to those who should "deny Christ."

The site of these cities is a question that it has been impossible to solve. They were said to be in the vale of Siddim, which became (is) the Salt Sea (Gen. xiv. 3), or sea of the plain (Josh. xii. 3). Josephus says the region was not submerged (B. J. iv. 8, 4), but remained visible, and parched. It is now known that the Dead Sea was a lake from the creation, being a natural formation which has been undisturbed, not even by a volcano, and the water being very deep (500 to 2,300 feet), leaves no place for sites of cities; and although the south bog (below Lisan) is shallow (3 to 12 feet), its bed has been elevated by the rivers which flow north from the Arabah. Not one of the cities has ever been found, except it may be Zoar. GOMORRHA in the Apocrypha.

GO'PHER (pitch). A hard, strong tree, from the wood of which Noah's ark was made (Gen. vi. 14). Cypress or pine.

GOR'GIAS. General of Antiochus Epiphanes (1 Macc. iii. 38).

GORTY'NA. In Crete (1 Macc. xv. 23). It was the capital of the Island under the Romans. The famous Cretan labyrinth was here, the ruins of which are found at the foot of Mt. Ida. Paul may have preached here, while his vessel was at Fair Havens, where "much time" was spent (Acts xxvii. 9).

GO'SHEN. That part of Egypt, east of the Delta, near the way of the land of the Philistines (Ex. xiii. 17), where there was pasture-land, suited to the habits of Joseph's brethren. The only limits that can be indicated from the ancient accounts are the present Wady El Tumeylat, and the desert lakes, Temsah and Bitter Lakes. This region is still very productive wherever it is watered, either from the Nile or from wells (Gen. xlv. 10, xlvi. 28, xlvii. 27, l. 8; Ex. viii. 22, ix. 26). The plagues of Egypt did not effect this land. The soil is capable of tillage to an indefinite extent.

GOS'PELS. Good news. See HISTORY.

GOTHO'NIEL. Othniel, father of Chabris (Judith vi. 15).

GOURD (Heb. KIKAYON; Jonah iv. 6–10). Perhaps the castor-oil plant, which grows like a tree in the East. Some think it was a pumpkin, which grows very large and rapid. The PAKKUOTH (2 K. iv. 39) was a poisonous fruit, gathered by the pupils of Elisha. Thought to be the colocynth. Knops in 1 K. vii. 24.

GOV'ERNOR (Heb. ALLSEPH). A sheikh (Zech. ix. 7); duke in some places.—2. HOKEK, cadi, a justice (Judg. v. 9).—3. MEHOKEK (v. 14).—4. MOSHEL, pasha, judge (Gen. xlv. 26; ruler in Josh. xii. 2).—5. NAGID.—6. NASI.—7. PECHAH.—8. PAKIA.—9. SHALLIT.—10. SAR.—11. SEGAN.—12. Gr. ethnarches, ruler.—13. hegemon, leader.—14. oikonomos, steward.—15. architriklinos, ruler of the feast (Eccl. xxxii).

GOZAN (quarry). (1 Chr. v. 26). The Gauzanites of Ptolemy, watered by the Habor, in Assyria, where the Israelites were carried captive. Mygdonia.

GRACE (favor). (Heb. CHEN; Gr. charis.) Kindness towards mankind shown by the Lord Jesus (John i. 14, 16, etc.).

GRASS. (Heb. HATZIO; herbage). (1 K. xviii. 5); DASHA, first-shoots, in Jer. l. 11; YEREK, green (Num. xxii. 4); ESEB, herbs (Gen. i. 30). Gr. chortos (Matt. vi. 30); blade in Mark iv. 28.

GRASSHOPPER. LOCUST.

GRAY'HOUND. GREY-HOUND. Alluded to in Prov. xxx. 31, as one of "four things which are comely in going." Some prefer "horse," and others "cock."

GRE'CIAN. Believing Greeks from Greece (Acts vi. 1, etc.). Also such Jews as had been born in other lands, as well as in Palestine, but who had been educated abroad.

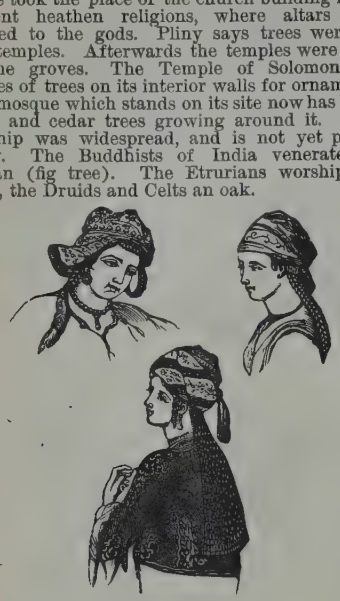
GREECE (Greek Hellas; Heb. JAVAN). Greece included the four provinces of Macedonia, Epirus, Achaia (Hellas) and Peloponnesus (Morea). Generally only Hellas and Peloponnesus are meant. The grand features are mountain and sea, which exerted a strong influence on the character of the people, as appears in their poetry, religion, and history. The climate is very temperate, the air salubrious, and the soil fertile. Its history extends back to B. C 776, in authentic records, and beyond that in traditions and myths, such as that of Ægialus, who founded Sicyon B. C. 2089, and of Uranus, who settled there B. C. 2042. The Greeks said they received from Asia Minor, Phœnicia, and Egypt letters and laws, and certain tenets in religion. The Egyptian Inachus founded Argos B. C. 1856, and Cecrops led a colony 300 years earlier to Attica, carrying with him the worship of the goddess Neith (Athenæ). The Phœnician Cadmus founded Thebes in Bœotia, and taught the Greeks letters. (See MOABITE STONE.) The Phrygian Pelops took possession of the south, B. C. 1283, naming it after himself. The famous expedition of Jason and the Argonauts in search of the golden fleece, is dated B. C. 1263, and the siege of Troy, 1193. From the First Olympiad, B. C. 776, to B. C. 300, Greece was a leader power in politics and religion. It is chiefly from Alexander's time down, that the Bible has to do with Greece. First known to the Jews in the slave-market of Tyre, where the prophet Joel charges the Tyrians with selling Hebrew children to the Grecians (Joel iii. 6), B. C. 800; and Ezekiel says, "traded the persons of men and vessels of brass in thy market" (Ez. xxvii. 13). Greek slaves were highly valued in all the East (Bochart i., c. iii. 175). Daniel mentions Greece (viii. 21, etc.) in his sketch of Alexander and his successors. Alexander visited Jerusalem, and respected its religion (Ant. xi. 8, 3). The Lacedæmonians sent an embassy and a letter to the Jews, B. C. 300 (Ant. xii. 4, 10), when king Areus claims kinship for his people with the Jews. Paul visited Greece (Acts xx. 2), staying there three months. The Greeks, and their language, were so influential in Paul's time that the name Greek stands in the N. T. as Gentile does in the O. T. Their influence on the spread of the Gospel by a peculiar preparation of the mind for the Gospel teachings was very great, in quickening thought and destroying indifference to religion. (See GOSPELS in the HISTORY). The arts of war, and the fine-arts of peace were carried to a great perfection. Their Asiatic empire spread their institutions, and filled half of Asia Minor with temples, theatres, aqueducts, and well-built cities. The Church did not flourish in Athens, but was more eminent in Corinth.

GREEK. Educated in the religion and language of Greece. Barbarian was any one who was not a Greek.

GREEK VERSIONS OF THE O. T. See HISTORY, p. iv.

GRINDING. MILL.

GROVE (Heb. ASHERAH, an image worshiped in the grove), (2 K. viii. 6). A wood dedicated to idolatry. The sacred symbolic tree of Assyria refers to the same idea. The Hebrew word ELON also means grove (translated oak of Mamre, in Gen. xiii. 18, and of Moreh, in xii. 6, etc.). The grove took the place of the church building in the ancient heathen religions, where altars were erected to the gods. Pliny says trees were the first temples. Afterwards the temples were built in the groves. The Temple of Solomon had figures of trees on its interior walls for ornaments. The mosque which stands on its site now has olive, palm and cedar trees growing around it. Tree-worship was widespread, and is not yet passed away. The Buddhists of India venerate the banian (fig tree). The Etrurians worshiped a palm, the Druids and Celts an oak.



HEAD DRESSES.

GUARD (Heb. 1. TABBACH, a cook, afterwards an executioner), (Gen. xxxvii. 36).—2. RAZ, a runner (2 Sam. xv. 1). They also carried dispatches. "Guard-chamber" (1 K. xiv. 28).—3. MISHMERETH, watching (Neh. iv. 9). "Which goeth at thy bidding," in 1 Sam. xxii. 14, should be "captain of the body-guard."

GUD'GODAH (thunder), (Deut. x. 7). HAGIDGAD.

GUEST. HOSPITALITY. Guest-chamber. HOUSE.

GUILTY. Bound by his oath (Matt. xxiii. 1). Deserving death (Num. xxxv. 31).

GUL'LOTH (Josh. xv. 19). Springs, upper and lower, added by Caleb to his daughter Achsah's dower. They were near Debir, but cannot now be identified. Possibly Ain Nunkar, and Dewir Ban, east of Hebron.

GŪ'NI (colored). 1. Son of Naphtali (Gen. xlvi. 24).—2. Descendants of Gael (1 Chr. v. 15), father of Abdiel.

GŪ'NITES, THE. Sons of Naphtali (Num. xxvi. 48).

GUR (ascent). Where Ahaziah was wounded (2 K. ix. 27) at Ibleam, between Jezreel and Bethhaggan (garden-house), which is now said to be Jenin. The pass may be the very steep place on the road from Jezreel to the plain of Esdraelon, near Megiddo.

GUR'BA'AL (ascent of Baal), (2 Chr. xxvi. 7). "And God helped him (Uzziah) against the Arabians that dwelt in Gur-baal." Supposed to mean Gerar.

GUTTER (correctly, a water-course). 2 Sam. v. 6, should read "but the blind and the lame will turn thee away;" and verse 8, "Any one that smites a Jebusite, and gets to the water-course."

H

HAAHASH'TARI (Heb. the Ahashtarite messenger). Father (builder) of Tekoa (1 Chr. iv. 6).

HABA'IAH (Jehovah protects), (Ezr. ii. 61; Neh. vii. 63). Sons of Chebaijah were among the returned from captivity.

HABAK'KUK. See HISTORY OF THE BOOKS.

HABAZINI'AH (light of Jah.) Ancestor of Jaazaniah (Jer. xxxv. 3).

HABERGEON. A coat of mail covering the neck and breast. See ARMS.

HABOR (1 Chr. v. 26). A river and district in Assyria, where Tiglath Pileser placed some of the Jews of the tribes of Reuben and Gad, during the First Captivity; and where, 17 years after, Shalmaneser, his successor, settled captives from Samaria and Israel (2 K. xvii. 6, xxviii. 11). The Khabur (name of a river) is found in an Assyrian inscription of the date of 900 B. C.

HACHILI'AH (Jehovah enlivens). Father of Nehemiah (Neh. i. 1, x. 1).

HACHI'LAH, THE HILL (1 Sam. xxiii. 13, 19). On the S. of Jeshimon (the barren district), near Ziph, in a forest, where David and his 600 men hid from Saul, and David in the night took away Saul's spear and bottle of water from his couch, and showed them to Abner, the captain of Saul's guard, next morning from the opposite bank of the ravine (xxvi. 5-20). See DAVID.

HACHMŌ'NI (wise). Son of and The Hachmonite (1 Chr. xxvii. 32, xi. 11). Head of a large family. TACHMONITE.

HADAD, CHADAD (mighty). 1. Son of Ishmael (Gen. xxv. 15).—2. A king of Edom (Gen. xxxvi. 35).—3. The last king of Edom at Pai (1 Chr. i. 50).—4. Member of the royal house of Edom (1 K. xi. 14). He married the sister-in-law of the Pharaoh of Egypt. After David died, he attempted to recover his lost dominion from Solomon.

HADAD'EZER (Hadad is his help) (2 Sam. viii. 3, 12). HADAREZER.

HĀ'DAD RIM'MON (both words are names of Syrian idols). The city was a stronghold before Abraham's time. Here king Josiah "went against" Pharaoh Necho, was wounded, and died at Jerusalem (2 K. xxiii. 29; 2 Chr. xxxv. 20-23). Mentioned by the prophet Zechariah (xii. 11). Four or five miles south of Lejjun is a ruin on a hill, which (Rumana) is supposed to be the ancient site.

HA'DAR (chamber). Hadad, in 1 Chr. i. 30. Eighth son of Ishmael. The Mt. Hadad on the borders of the Syrian desert north of El Medineh, is supposed to mark the locality of this branch of Ishmael's family.

HA'DAREZER. Son of Rehob (2 Sam. viii. 3). King of ZOBAH (1 Chr. xviii. 3, ff). David captured from him 1000 "shields of gold" besides other great spoil.

HAD'ASHAH (new) (Josh. xv. 37). Judah, in the Shefelah. Adasa (1 Macc. vii. 40), where Nicanor was killed by Judas Maccabæus. Lost.

HADAS'SAH (myrtle) (Esth. ii. 7).

HĀDAT'TAH (new) (Josh. xv. 25). Judah, between Beersheba and Kedesh. Hazor-Hadattah; New Hazor.

HEAD DRESS.

HĀDES, HELL (covered) Heb. SHEOL (hollow). The unseen world, the state (and condition) of the dead, both good and bad; Greek gehenna, from the Hebrew GE-HINNOM, the valley of Hinnom (Josh. xv. 8). This place became infamous because of the sacrifice of infants there by Manasseh, to the god Moloch (2 Chr. xxxiii. 6), at a spot called Topheth (Is. xxx. 33), and a type of torment in the spirit world. The Jews held a belief in a condition of the souls after death, in SHEOL, in reward or in punishment, and this they thought was in the bowels of the earth. Hades was the place (or condition) where the soul of Jesus went, and it was not Hell in the modern sense of that term—the place of the damned—but rather Abraham's bosom, or Paradise. There will be no fire, or brimstone, or gnawing worm, in hell, any more than thrones of gold, crowns of precious stones, gates, streets, rivers, etc., in heaven; these are only ideas of certain conditions of character in each case (Matt. xxiii. 15; Luke xii. 47, 48). The duration, so far as each soul is concerned is limited, and spiritual evil, sin and death and hell will be destroyed (Rev. xx.), but as the human race will be perpetual, always renewing by birth, always ending by death, so will hades be eternal; so long as there are living men to die there will be an underworld to receive the dead.

HĀ'DID (sharp). (Ez. ii. 33; Neh. vii. 37, xi. 34). Three ms. from Lydda, 10 ms. from Joppa (1 Macc. xii. 38). Alexander was defeated here by Aretas (Ant. xiii. 15, 2), and Vespasian made it an outpost during his siege of Jerusalem. ADIDA. ADITHAIM.

HAD'LAI (resting). Father of Amasa 2 (2 Chr. xxviii. 12).

HĀD'ŌRAM. Fifth son of Joktan (Gen. x. 27; 1 Chr. i. 21). Probably located, with Joktan's other descendants, in South Arabia, but not yet identified. The Adramitæ, and Hadramaut have been suggested, but rejected on philological grounds.

HĀ'DRACH (Zech. ix. 1). A district somewhere in the vicinity of Damascus. Lost.

HĀ'GAB (locust). Ancester of Nethinim who returned with Zerubbabel (Ezr. ii. 41.)

HAG'ABA. Ancestor of Nethinim who came with Zerubbabel. (Neh. vii. 48). HAGABAH (Ezr. xi. 45).

HA'GAR (stranger). An Egyptian slave (Gen. xii. 16, xvi. 1), presented to Abraham by Pharaoh. Mother of Ishmael. The Hagarites settled in Paran (Gen. xxi. 21; Gal. iv. 22). They are mentioned in 1 Chr. xi. 38, where Mibhar, a Hagarite, is one of David's captains. Jaziz, a Hagarite, had charge of David's flocks, and an Ishmaelite of his camels, because they had experience in the care of such animals (1 Chr. xxvii. 31). The HAGARITES occupied the country south of Palestine, from the sea to the Euphrates, as the Bedawins do now. Hejer is the capital of a district in the province of El Bahreyn, in N. Arabia, near the Persian Gulf.

HAG'GAI (festive). The 9th in order of the minor prophets, who returned with Zerubbabel from captivity. See HISTORY OF THE BOOKS.

HAG'GERI. Descendant of Hagar. Mibhar, son of Haggeri, was an officer of David's guard (1 Chr. xi. 38).

HAG'GI. Son of Gad (Gen. xlvi. 16). Haggites (Num. xxvi. 15).

HAGGI'AH (festival of Jah). A Levite (1 Chr. 30).

HAG'GITH (festive). Mother of Adonijah (2 Sam. iii. 4).

HAIL. Was one of the plagues of Egypt. Hail is more common than snow in the hill country of Palestine (Ps. cxlviii. 8). God smote the Amorites with "hail-stones" (Josh. x. 11). RAIN.

HAIR. The Egyptians were very uniform in their habits of dressing the hair. Herodotus says that they let their hair and beard grow only in mourning. The priests, who were to be clean to the highest possible degree, had to shave their whole bodies every third day. Other men shaved the head only—or the beard also. The women wore their hair natural, but braided, and dressed with strings of silk with ornaments. The Assyrian men wore the hair combed and curled, falling quite low about the neck; wearing the whiskers curled also. Among the Greeks and Romans, the fashion of wearing the hair passed through many changes. One style is shown on p. 42. The Hebrews cut the men's hair quite short, almost to the ears (Ez. xliv. 20), and to keep the beard a proper length by trimming it, but not to shave either head or beard. The NAZARITE was an exception, who let both hair and beard grow uncut or uncombed.

HAK'KATAN (little). Father of Johanan, who was a chief, and returned with Ezra from Babylon (Ezr. viii. 12).

HAK'KOZ (thorn). A priest in the service of David (1 Chr. xxiv. 10).

HAKU'PHA (bent). Ancestor of Nethinim; came from Babylon with Zerubbabel (Ezr. ii. 51).

HA'LAH (2 K. xvii. 6). In Assyria, where Tiglath Pileser planted some of the captive Jews. Now called Kalah, an ancient ruin on the side of the upper Khabur.

HA'LAK, THE MOUNT (the smooth, bald mountain). (Josh. xi. 17, xii. 7). The south limit of Joshua's conquests near Mt. Seir. The name of the east end of Akrabbim.

HAL'HUL (Josh. xv. 58). Judah. Four miles north of Hebron, on the top of a hill, is a ruin, and at its foot is a village bearing the ancient name.

HA'LI (Josh. xix. 25). On the border of Asher. May be Alia, 5 ms. N. E. of Acre.

HALICARNAS'SUS (1 Macc. xv. 25). In Caria, on the Ceramian gulf. The birth-place of Herodotus, and of Dionysius. The Jews residing here were, by a decree of the Romans, allowed the exercise of all their sacred rites. Alexander destroyed the city by fire.

HALL. Court of the high-priest's house (Luke xxii. 55; in Matt. xxvii. 27, and Mark xv. 16). Hall, in John xviii. 28, "judgment-hall." A covered space, surrounded by rooms opening into it; or, perhaps, a large audience chamber. The court of a dwelling-house is not covered.

HALLELŪ'JAH (praise ye Jah). Praise ye the Lord. Alleluia in Rev. xix. 1–6; Ps. cxiii.-cxviii., were called hallel (praise), and were used on special occasions.

HALLŌ'HESH (enchanter). A chief, who signed the covenant with Nehemiah (Neh. x. 24).

HALŌ'HESH. Son of Halohesh, ruler of half of Jerusalem (Neh. iii. 12).

HAM (warm), (Egyptian chem, dark). One of the sons of Noah (Gen. vi. 10), perhaps the third, if Japheth was the elder brother (x. 21). Settled in Africa (Ps. lxxviii. 51, cv. 23, cvi. 22), and also sent many branches into Asia (Canaanites). There is no ancient name so well preserved and located. Ham is identified with JUPITER AMMON, and also ZEUS, because both words are derived from a root meaning hot, fervent, or sunburnt. For the last 3000 years the world has been mainly indebted for its advancement to the Semitic races; but before this period the descendants of Ham—Egypt and Babylon—led the way as the pioneers in art, literature and science. Mankind at the present day lies under infinite obligations to the genius and industry of those early ages, more especially for alphabetic writing, weaving cloth, architecture, astronomy, plastic art, sculpture, navigation and agriculture. The art of painting is also represented, and music indirectly, by drawings of instruments.

		Zemarite,	Sumrah (ruin).
		Hamathite,	Hamath.

HĀ'MAN (magnificent). Prime minister of King Ahasuerus (Esth. iii. 1). After he failed in his conspiracy he was hanged on the same gallows he had made for Mordecai. He is called a Macedonian in Esther xvi. 10 (Apoc.).

HAMATH (to defend). The principal city of North Syria and capital of a district of the same name (Gen. x. 18). In the centre of the Orontes valley. Toi, king of Hamath, paid tribute to David (2. Sam. viii). Hamath was conquered by Solomon (2 Chr. viii. 3). Alexander took it and changed its name to Epiphania, in honor of Antiochus Epiphanes. It has now 30,000 people, in a well-built city, in a narrow and rich valley. Four bridges span the rapid river. The chief trade is in silk, woollen, and cotton. "The entrance to Hamath," so often used as a landmark in the O. T. (Land and Book i. 354), and Tristram (Land of Israel, 621), the entrance into the valley as you look north from Baalbek.

HAMATHZOBAH (fortress of Zobah). (2 Chr. viii. 3).

HAMATHITE (from Hamath). A family descended from Canaan (Gen. x. 18).

HAM'MATH (warm baths). One of the fenced cities of Naphtali (Josh. xix. 35). Josephus mentions a city called Ammaus (warm water), one mile from Tiberias, on the shore of the Sea of Galilee. Ibrahim Pacha built spacious baths over these four warm springs. The water is 144° Fahr., very salt and bitter, with a strong sulphurous odor. There are ancient ruins for a mile or more around.

HAMMEDĀ'THA (double). Father of Haman (Esth. iii. 1, 10).

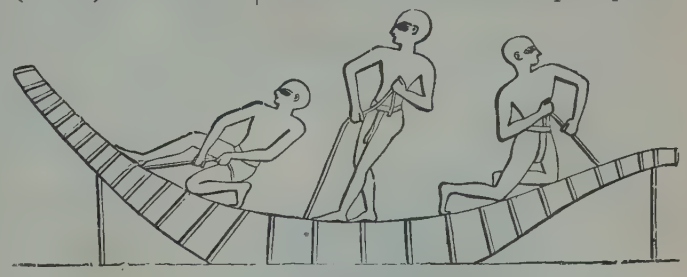
HAM'MELECH (Jer. xxxvi. 26; xxxviii. 6). Hebrew term for "the king."

HAM'MER. 1. A tool used by the gold-beaters (Is. xli. 7). Carpenter (Jer. xxiii. 29).—2. A tool for hollowing (1 K. vi. 7); a weapon of war (Prov. xxv. 18). See ARMS. The Maccabees were so named from Hammer (MACBEH).

HAMMOL'EKETH (the queen). Daughter of Machir (1 Chr. vii. 17, 18).

HAM'MON (hot). In Asher (Josh. xix. 28). Hamul, near Zidon.—2. Levitical, in Naphtali (1 Chr. vi. 76); the same a HAMMOTH DOR, (Josh. xxi. 32). Levitical city in Naph. HAMMATH.

HAMŌ'NAH (multitude). A city in which the people of Gog will be buried (Ez. xxxix. 16).



BOAT-BUILDING.

HA'MONGOG, THE VALLEY OF (Gog's multitude). Name to be given to a glen on the east of the sea (Ez. xxxix. 11, 15).

HA'MOR (a he-ass). Father of Shechem (Gen. xxxiii. 19).

HAM'UEL (God's wrath). Son of Mishma (1 Chr. iv. 26).

HA'MUL (pillered). Son of Pharez, son of Judah by Tamar (Gen. xlvi. 12).

HA'MULITES. The descendants of Hamul of Judah (Num. xxvi. 21).

HAMŪ'TAL (dew's brother). Daughter of Jeremiah (2 K. xxiii. 31).

HAN'AMEEL (safety). Son of Shallum (Jer. xxxii. 7–9, 12, 44).

HA'NAN (merciful). A chief of Benjamin (1 Chr. viii. 23). There are eight others of this name, but none famous.

HAN'ANEEL, THE TOWER OF. In the wall of Jerusalem (Neh. iii. 1). Between the sheep-gate and the fish-gate, on the N. E. corner of the city.

HANĀ'NI. 1. Son of Heman (1 Chr. xxv. 4, 25).—2. A seer (B. C. 941), king of Judah (2 Chr. xvi. 7).—3. A priest (Ezr. x. 20).—4. Brother of Nehemiah (Neh. i. 2). Governor of Jerusalem B. C. 445 (vii. 2).—5. A priest (xii. 36).

HANANI'AH (Jah is kind). 1. Son of Heman (1 Chr. xxv. 4, v. 23).—2. Captain in King Uzziah's army (2 Chr. xxvi. 11).—3. Father of Zedekiah (Jer. xxxvi. 12).—4. Son of Azur, a false prophet (Jer. xxvii. xxviii.). He opposed Jeremiah in predicting a return from Babylon in 2 years, when the time had been fixed at 70.—5. Grandfather of Irijah (Jer. xxxvii. 13).—6. Head of a Benjamite house (1 Chr. viii. 24).—7. Shadrach, of the house of David (Dan. i. 3, 6, 7, 11).—8. Son of Zerubbabel (1 Chr. iii. 19).—9. Son of Bebai (Ezr. x. 28).—10. A priest (Neh. iii. 8)—11. Head of Jeremiah's priestly course (xii. 12).—12. Steward of the palace at Jerusalem vii. 2, 3).—13. A chief who signed the covenant with Nehemiah (x. 23).

HAND (YAD, power, agency). Laying on of hands, sign of authority, or of a blessing conferred (Num. xxvii. 18). Sitting at the right hand of power, man of my right hand.

HAN'DICRAFT. Special workmen were among the great benefactors of ancient times, and were honored as the chief favorites. God is honored for his "handiwork" (Ps. viii. 3; xix. 1; Gen. ii. 2; Job xxxiv. 19). Several men are honored in the O. T. for their work, as Tubal-Cain, Jabal, Jubal, and Bezaleel. The Hebrews were more agricultural than scientific or artistic, and invented little, yet their skill is recorded in the cases of the tabernacle and the temple. Among the metal workers were goldsmiths, silversmiths, coppersmiths, and ironworkers, whose work is often mentioned. The tools noticed are forceps (tongs, in Is. vi. 6), hammer, anvil, bellows. The carpenters, (woodcarvers) were skilful (Is. xli. 7). Their implements were the rule (chalk-pencil), measuring-line, compasses, plane or smoothing instrument, saw, hatchet, knife, awl, nail, hone, drill, mallet, chisel, etc. There were boat-builders also. Spinners, weavers, fullers, dyers, tent-makers, embroiderers. Tanning and dressing leather. Masons, bakers, butchers, cheese-makers, shoemakers, barbers, are mentioned in the Bible, and drawn on the monuments engaged in their proper avocations.

HANDKERCHIEF, (napkin, apron). (Luke xix. 20). Larger and longer than ours, and of stronger cloth, fit for various uses, as a girdle or turban.

HĀ'NES. In Egypt (Is. xxx. 4). ANASIEH on the W. branch of the Nile. Perhaps Tahpanhes.

HANGINGS. (Heb. MASACH, Curtain, Ex. xxvi. 10). KELAIM, tapestry (xxvii. 9).

HAN'NIEL. Son of Ulla (1 Chr. vii. 39).

HAN'NAH (grace). Wife of Elkanah, and mother of Samuel (1 Sam. i. 2.).

HAN'NATHON (graceful). Zebulon (Josh. xix. 14). Lost.

HAN'NIEL (grace of God). Son of Ephod. A prince (Num. xxxiv. 23).

HA'NOCH (initiated). ENOCH and HENOCH. 1. Children of Midian (Gen. xxv. 4).—2. Son of Reuben (Gen. xlvi. 9).

HA'NOCHITES, THE. Descendants of Hanoch (Num. xxvi. 5).

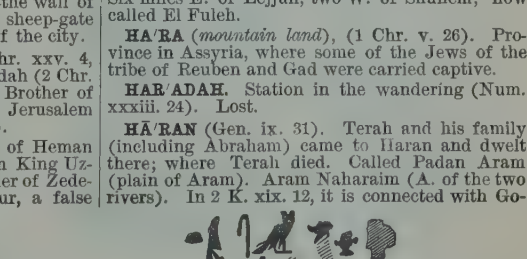
HA'NUN (favored). 1. Son of Nahash (2 Sam. x. 1, 2).—2. A man who repaired the wall of Jerusalem (Neh. iii. 13).—3. Son of Zalaph, who also assisted in the repairs (iii. 30).

HAPH'RAIM (two pits), (Josh. xix. 19). Issa. Six miles E. of Lejjun, two W. of Shunem; now called El Fuleh.

HA'RA (mountain land), (1 Chr. v. 26). Province in Assyria, where some of the Jews of the tribe of Reuben and Gad were carried captive.

HAR'ADAH. Station in the wandering (Num. xxxiii. 24). Lost.

HĀ'RAN (Gen. ix. 31). Terah and his family (including Abraham) came to Haran and dwelt there; where Terah died. Called Padan Aram (plain of Aram). Aram Naharaim (A. of the two rivers). In 2 K. xix. 12, it is connected with Gozan, Mesopotamia, taken by the Assyrians. Ezekiel groups it with Canneh, Eden, and other cities in Assyria (xxvii. 23). Harran (of the Arabs) stands on the banks of the small river Belîk, a branch of the Euphrates. From it a number of roads radiate to the great fords of the Tigris and Euphrates. Being in the route of the trade between Central and Western Asia it attracted Terah, and explains the allusion of the prophet Ezekiel. There is a Harran el Awamid 10 ms. east of Damascus, on the shore of the lake Ateibeh, between "the two rivers" Abana and Pharpar. In 1861 Dr. Beke made a journey to Palestine especially to follow the route of Laban and Jacob from Haran, and walked over the ground in about 5 days, which agrees with the Bible narrative. The flocks, herds, and little children could not have been driven across the desert, 300 miles, 25 days without water. The route in the Hauran is well watered, and has good pasture all the way.



SILVERSMITHS.

HAR'ĂRITE (mountain). One of David's men. 1. Father of Shammah (2 Sam. xxiii. 11).—2. Shammah, the Hararite (xxiii. 33.)—3. Sharar (xxiii. 33); father of Ahiam.

HARBONA (ass-driver). A eunuch in the service of King Ahasuerus (Esth. i. 10). Harbonah in Esth. vii. 9.

HARE (ARNEBETH). Unclean under the law, "because he cheweth the cud but divideth not the hoof." It is of the squirrel kind, and does not chew the cud, but moves the jaw as though it did. There are two kinds in Palestine, the Syrian and Egyptian, and are very plentiful in some parts, and afford good returns to the hunter. There are no rabbits.

HAR'EL (the mountain of), (Ez. xliii. 15).

HA'REPH (early-born). Son of Caleb, and father of Beth-gader (1 Chr. ii. 51).

HA'RETH, THE FOREST OF (1 Sam. xxii.5). Forest in Judah, to which David fled after leaving the cave of Adullam. See DAVID.

ARABIAN HAWK.

HARHAĪ'AH (dry). Father of Uzziel 6 (Neh. iii. 8).

HAR'HAS (poverty). Ancestor of Shallum (2 K. xxii. 14).

HAR'HUR (inflammation). The sons of Harhur returned with Zerubbabel (Ezr. ii. 51).

HA'RIEL. HADID (Ezr. ii. 33).

HA'RIM (flat-nosed). 1. A priest in the house of God (1 Chr. xxiv. 8).—2. 1,017 "children of Harim, returned from captivity (Ez. ii. 39).—3.—4. Families of the children of Harim, 320 in number, who came from the Captivity (Ezr. ii. 32). REHUM.

HA'RIPH (autumnal rain.) 112 "children of Hariph," who returned with Zerubbabel (Neh. vii. 24). People who sealed the covenant (x. 19).

HAR'LOT (ZONAH, NOCHRIYAH, KEDHISHA, set apart for a sacred use). They had a certain way of wearing their dress, and sometimes sat in a public place (Prov. vii. 10; Gen. xxxviii. 14), and might have been foreign women, not Hebrews. They sung in the streets (Is. xxiii. 16; Eccles. ix. 4). Some had houses (1 K. iii. 16). Jephthah's mother was a harlot, or "strange woman" (Judg. xi. 2). Gods were anciently, and are now actually worshiped in brothels (see Herodotus). This licentious worship was found at Baal-Peor, and among the Samaritans who came from Assyria (2 K. xvii. 30). The law of Moses was very strong against the practice, not even allowing the money earned by such a trade to come into the treasury (Lev. xix. 29), and made very severe laws in some cases (xxi. 9), which were sometimes carried out (Gen. xxxviii. 24), and neglected at others (Micah i. 7), as in the case of Samaria.

HAR'NĔPHER (panting). Son of Zophah (1 Chr. vii. 36).

HAR'NESS (armor), (1 K. xx. 11). See HORSE.

HAR'NESSED (Josh. i. 14, iv. 12). Armed men.

HA'ROD, THE WELL OF. Correctly, the fountain (Judg. vi. 33). The fountain by which Gideon pitched, having the Hill of Moreh on the north, in the valley of Jezreel (vii. 1). Now called Ain Jalud, at the foot of Mount Gilboa. It is a very large spring, and is visited constantly by a great number of flocks and herds (Judg. vi. 5).

HA'RŌEH (the seer). Son of Shobel (1 Chr. ii. 52).

HĀ'RORITE, THE. One of David's guard (1 Chr. xi. 27).

HARŌ'SHETH OF THE GENTILES (Judg. iv. 2). In the north of Palestine, the home of Sisera. Tell Harothieh is an immense double hill, covered with the ruins of old walls and buildings, commanding a narrow pass where the Kishon flows close to the foot of Carmel. Barak and Deborah chased Sisera and his scattered host as far as this pass, after their terrible defeat and slaughter along the plain of Esdraelon. (Thomson, Land and Book).

HARP (Heb. KINNOR; Gr. kithara). A stringed instrument of music. Josephus says it had 10 strings, and was played with a plectrum; others say it had 24 or 47 (1 Sam. xvi. 23, xviii. 10).

HARROW (1 Chr. xx. 3). See AGRICULTURE.

HAR'SHA (worker). Ancestor of Nethinim, who returned with Zerubbabel (Ezr. ii. 52).

HART. A clean animal (Deut. xii. 15). Permitted by the law for food. See FALLOW-DEER.

HĀ'RUM (exalted). Father of Aharhel (1 Chr. iv. 8).

HARŪ'MAPH (snub-nosed). Father of Jedaiah 2 (Neh. iii. 10).

HARŪ'PHITE (strong). A Korhite, who joined David at Ziklag (1 Chr. xii. 5).

HĀ'RUZ (active). Father of Meshullemeth (2 K. xxi. 19).

HAR'VEST. AGRICULTURE.

HASHADI'AH (whom Jah loves). A descendant of Judah (1 Chr. iii. 20).

HASENŪ'AH (bristling). A Benjaminite 1 Chr. ix. 7).

HASHABI'AH (Jah regards). Son of Amaziah (1 Chr. v. 45). There are 13 of this name, but none of them were noted.

HASHAB'NAH. Chief of the people who signed the covenant with Nehemiah (Neh. x. 25).

HASHABNĪ'AH. 1. Father of Hattush 2 (Neh. iii. 10).—2. A Levite (ix. 5).

HASHBĂD'ANA (thoughtful judge). One who stood with Ezra when he read the law to the people of Jerusalem (Neh. viii. 4).

HĀ'SHEM (fat). The sons of Hashim were among David's strong men (1 Chr. xi. 34). Joshen.

HASHMAN'MIN (opulent nobles). (Ps. lxviii. 31).

HASHMŌ'NAH (fatness). (Num. xxxiii. 29). Near Mt. Hor. HESHMON(?)

HĀ'SHUB. HASSHUB. 1. Son of Pahath-moab (Neh. iii. 11).—2. Another, who assisted in the repairs of the Jerusalem wall (iii. 23).—3. One of the heads of the people who signed the covenant (x. 23).—4. A Levite (xi. 15).

HASHŪ'BAH (esteemed). Part of the family of Zerubbabel (1 Chr. iii. 20). HASADIAH.

HĀ'SHUM (rich). 1. 1,023 "children of Hashum," returned with Zerubbabel (Ezr. ii. 19; x. 33).—2. One who stood on Ezra's left, when he read the law to the people (viii. 4).

HASHŪ'PHA. Ancestor of Nethinim (Neh. vii. 46).

HAS'RAH. Harhas (2 Chr. xxxiv. 22).

HASSENĀ'AH (thorny). "Sons of Hassenaah" rebuilt the fish-gate in the wall of Jerusalem (Neh. iii. 3).

HASŪ'PHA (stripped). Ancestor of Nethinim (Ezr. ii. 43).

HĀ'TACH (verity). Eunuch in Ahasuerus' court (Esth. iv. 5, 6 9, 10).

HĀ'THATH (terror). Son of Othniel (1 Chr. iv. 13).

HĂT'IPHA (captive). Ancestor of Nethinim (Ezr. ii. 54).

HĂT'ITA (exploring). Ancestor of the gatekeepers who returned with Zerubbabel (Ezr. ii. 42).

HĂT'TEL (wavering). Ancestor of the "children of Solomon's servants," who returned with Zerubbabel (Ezr. ii. 57).

HĂT'SIHAMMENŪ'CHOTH (midst of resting-places).

HAT'TUSH (assembled). 1. Son of Shechaniah (1 Chr. iii. 22; Ezr. viii. 2).—2. A priest (Neh. x. 4, xii. 2).—3. Son of Hashabnia (Neh. iii. 10).

HAU'RAN. Part of the district of Bashan. Ezekiel (xlvii. 16, 18) probably meant a region including the Lejah, Batanæa in the mountains (where the oaks of Bashan still grow around the ruins of ancient cities), and what is now Hauran. The Hauran is a vast fertile plain, the "granary of Damascus." Not a rock or stone encumbers its soil. More than a hundred ruined cities are found—though only deserted, not ruined; for the houses are quite perfect and habitable still, being built of stone, even to the doors and window-shutters, hinges and all, and roofs—of fine solid stone. Some of the dates are before our era, and it is quite probable that these cities are the very same that Moses described (Deut. iii. 5).—Porter's Five Years in Damascus.

HĀVĪ'LAH (sand). 1. Son of Cush (Gen. x. 7); and, 2. A son of Joktan (x. 29).—1. On the Red Sea, in Arabia, between Mecca and Sanaa. It is a fertile region, abounding in fruit, gum and myrrh; mountainous, well watered, and has a numerous population. The people were called by Eratosthenes (in Strabo), Chaulanitæ.—2. A district southeast of Sanaa. A third district of the same name is sought for in answer to Gen. ii. 11, which was compassed by one of the rivers of Eden. In Gen. xxv. 18, it is stated that the tribes of Ishmael dwelt from "Havilah unto Shur;" and this seems to call for a locality on the Persian Gulf or the Euphrates.

HĀ'VOTH JĀIR (Num. xxxii. 41). Jair took a number of small towns in Gilead, in the mountain district south of the Hieromax, and named them "Jair's villages." A descendant of his, of the same name, was a judge of Israel, and lived here in 30 cities (Judg. x. 3, 4.) Bashan-havoth-jair were among the 60 cities of Argob (Deut. iii. 14, etc.).

HAWK (NEZ; Arabic nez). In Job xxxix. 26 "does the nez fly by thy wisdom?" It was migratory, as are 10 or 12 kinds now. The sak'r is used to catch partridges, grouse, quail, herons, hares and gazelles.

HAY (CHATZIR, Gr. herba; Prov. xxvii. 25; Is. xv. 6). The modern Orientals do not make hay for such uses as we do, but the ancients mowed grass, and used the dried hay (Ps. lxxii. 6) for burning, or perhaps for feeding (Ps. xxvii. 2).

HĀ'ZAEL (El is seeing). A king of Damascus, B. C. 886–840 (see ELISHA). The Assyrian inscriptions furnish some accounts of wars in Syria in his day, which are also mentioned in Scripture. Hazael fulfiled a prophesy of Elisha in ravaging Gilead, etc. (2 K. x. 32, 33).

HĀ'ZAEL, THE HOUSE OF (Amos i. 4). Damascus, or Hazael's palace, or perhaps his family.

HAZAI'AH (Jah beholds). Son of Judah (Neh. xi. 5).

HĀZ'AR AD'DAR (walled space for a camp, named Addar). (Num. xxxiv. 4). A south boundary of the promised land, near Kadesh-Barnea. There are walled-in places all over this district, but without names known to history.

HĀZARMĀVETH. Third son of Joktan (Gen. x. 26). Located in the south of Arabia, on the Indian Ocean. Now called Hadramaut. Capital city Shibam. Chief ports Mirbat, Zafari (SEPHAR), Kisheem. The native name of a person is Hadramee—very similar to their name in ancient history, Adramitæ. The country is well cultivated, and exports frankincense, myrrh, aloes (from Socotra), gum arabic, and dragon's blood. North of Hadramaut, the Great Red Desert of Arabia, called DAHNA (red sand), extends to Nejed and the Persian Gulf, occupying a third of the whole peninsula.

HA'ZEL (Gen. xxx. 37). (Heb. LUZ.) The hazel or the wild almond tree, the cultivated being named SHAKED. The Heb. for hazel is EGOZ.

HAZELELPŌ'NI (shade upon me). Sister of the sons of Etam (1 Chr. iv. 3). The Zelelpo'nite.

HA'ZER (enclosed, as a court-yard or camp). These walls are found in many parts of Palestine and Arabia. Sometimes they are roofed in with a tent and become a dwelling for a short time (Is. xxxviii. 12) by shepherds. The name is used with others for several places: 1. H. addar (which see). 2. H. enan (village of springs). The north boundary of the promised land (Num. xxxiv. 9), the N. E. corner (ver. 10). Kuryetein (village of fountains), 40 ms. east of Riblah, and 60 north of Damascus. It is a large place, and has the only fountains in the region. There are ruined columns, probably of the city called by the Greeks Coradæa. 3. H. gaddah (Josh. xv. 27). In the south of Judah, between Moladah and Beersheba, now Jerah. 4. H. shual (1 Chr. iv. 28). A city near the last named, now called Saweh. Both of these places are in ruins, on low hills. 5. H. hatticon (Ez. xlvii. 16). On the boundary in Hauran. Lost. 6. H. Susah (horse village). (Josh. xix. 5). Allotted to Simeon, near Ziklag. 7. H. susim (village of horses). Probably the same as the last. 8 Hazeroth. Station in the wilderness on the route from Sinai to Ezion-geber. See WANDERINGS.

HAZERE. 4 ms. W. of Bint Jebeil, has extensive ruins, and the right location (Land and Book, i. 439).—2. (Josh. xix. 37). 10 ms. S. W. of Safed, Hazur, near El Mughar.

HAZĒ ROTH (Num. xi. 35). A place 25 ms. N. of Sinai.

HAZEZON TAMAR (palm forest). ENGEDI.

HĀ'ZIEL (vision of God). A Levite (1 Chr. xxiii. 9).

HA'ZIRIM. Hazer (Deut. ii. 3). Villages.

HA'ZO (Gen. xxii. 22). Azon of Nahor, settled on the Euphrates, in Chazene (Strabo).

HA'ZOR (Josh. xi. 1-12). An ancient, royal city, fortified, near Lake Merom. "The head of all those kingdoms," i. e., the chief city in North Canaan. Taken by Joshua, and given to Naphtali. In after-times, a king Jabin, of Hazor, held the Israelites in subjection 20 years. Jabin's army, including 600 chariots of iron, led by Sisera (perhaps intending to conquer all Palestine), were routed by Barak and Deborah (Judg. iv.). Fortified by Solomon (1 K. ix. 15.) Referred to by Josephus, and in Macc. xi. 67.—2. (Josh. xv. 23). Judah, south. Lost.—3. (Neh. xi. 33. Benjamin, after the Captivity. Tell Azur. 5 ms. N. E. of Bethel.—4. (Jer. xlix. 28). Some noted camping-ground of the Arabs. Lost. There are two or three Hazors named in Josh. xv. 23–25; one of them a new village (Hadattah); and one changed to Hezron. There were also BAAL HAZOR and EN HAZOR.

HEAD (Heb. ROSH, Gr. kephale). Used for the top of anything, as the summit of a mountain, top of a tree.

HEAD-DRESS. The head-dress is a very important matter in the hot climate of the East, besides its use "for glory and for beauty" (Ex. xxviii. 40) There are several names of different articles used by different persons, or at various times. 1. ZANIPH, (to roll or wind) worn by nobles (Job xxix. 14), and ladies (Is. iii. 23), and kings (lxii. 3; mitre in Zech iii. 5), was a turban, intended for display. 2. PEER, modern name tarbush (or kaook) the red cap. The Bedawin head-dress (keffieh) is formed by folding a square cloth across from the corners, and tying it on the head, so as to have one (double) corner behind and one on each side of the neck. The Assyrian was probably made of bright and mingled colors (Ez. xxiii. 15). See cuts on pps. 13, 42 and 66.

EGYPTIAN HEAD-DRESS.

HEART (Heb. LEB, Gr. kardia). The supposed seat of the intellect, soul, etc. (Judg. xvi. 17).

HEARTH (Heb. AH, ACH, MOKED, KIYOR). A floor of stones on which a fire is made. Used for the whole house. Jehoiakim's was probably a brazier of charcoal (Jer. xxxvi. 23).

HEATH (AROER, ARAR). A shrub used in thatch, for brooms, beds, etc., probably juniper or savin (Jer. xvii. 6, xlviii. 6).

HEATHEN (GOI, GOYIM). All nations have a term for distinguishing other people from their own. The Hebrews were very particular in this matter, because they were forbidden to marry out of their own nation, or even to mingle in society with them. The heathen were worshipers of false gods. After the Greeks came into power their name meant the same as heathen (Greek hēthen), and is the same or similar to "uncircumcised." Goyim also meant wicked as opposed to the righteous Jews.

HEAVEN. 1. RAKIA, firmament, expanse.—2. SHAMAYIM, the high, the heavens (and earth). Always plural in the Hebrew of the O. T.—3. MAROM (mountain), hight, high region; SHAHAKIM, expanse, skies.—4. ARABAH (the desert), the heaven; ARIPHIM (distilling), clouds; Greek, ouranos (air), heaven; hupsos (hight), on high; another (from above) heaven. The "third heaven" of Paul, in 2 Cor. xii. 2, is explained from the Jewish way of naming three parts in heaven, as: 1. The place of clouds in the air; 2. The place of the sun, moon and stars; 3. The place of God and his angels. Heavens and earth meant the entire universe. Once heaven, earth, and under the earth (Phil. ii. 10).

HĒ'BER (society). 1. Grandson of Asher (Gen. xlvi. 17).—2. Father of Socho, of Judah (1 Chr. iv. 18).—3. Gadite (v. 13).—4. Son of Elpaal, a Benjamite (viii. 17).—5. Son of Shashak (xxii.).—6. Husband of Jael, a Kenite (Judg. iv. 11–17).—7. The patriarch Eber (Luke iii. 35). Heberites (Num. xxvi. 45).

HEBREW. This name was first used of Abraham in Gen. xiv. 13. Four sources have been offered: 1. From Abram; 2. From ABAR; 3. From EBER (country beyond); and 4. From EBER, the patriarch (this would have been IBRI). Hebrew of the Hebrews; a pure-minded Jew.

HEBREWS, EPISTLE TO THE. See HISTORY OF THE BOOKS.

HE'BRON (the friend). Third son of Kohath, who was second son of Levi (Ex. vi. 18). The clan is mentioned in the time of David (1 Chr. xv. 9, xxiii. 19), as of the sons of Levi, who only ought to carry the ark of God; and also mighty men of valor of Jazer, in Gilead (xxvi. 31), who were officers in David's government; and another branch held the same rank on the west side of Jordan. There was a Hebron among the sons of Caleb. The CITY OF HEBRON is one of the most ancient, built 7 years before Zoan (Num. xiii. 22), and even older than Damascus (Gen. xii. 18). See cut of Hebron on page 2. Its original name was Arba, or Kirjath Arba (city of Arba), from Arba, the father of Anak (xxxiii. 2; Josh. xiv. 15, xv. 13). It was also called MAMRE (Gen. xxiii. 19, xxxv. 27). The ancient city was in a valley, and its pools help fix its site and identity (2 Sam. iv. 12). Many years of the lifetime of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob were spent here, where they were all buried; and from Hebron Jacob and his family set out for Egypt, by way of Beersheba. The city was given to Caleb by Joshua, who drove out the Anakim. One of the CITIES OF REFUGE. It was David's royal residence for 7 years and a half; where most of his sons were born; and here he was crowned king over all Israel (2 Sam. ii.), when David changed the royal residence to Jerusalem. Fortified by Rehoboam. It was occupied after the Captivity; but fell into the hands of the Edomites, from whom it was recovered by Judas Maccabæus (1 Macc. v. 65). It was called Hebron or Castle of Abraham during the Crusades. The modern town is called Khulil (the friend "of God"), by the Arabs, and lies on the eastern and southern side of a beautiful valley. The houses are all of stone, well built, having flat roofs with many domes. The streets are only a few feet wide, and the bazaars are covered either by awnings or arches. Glass is the only manufacture; lamps, and the bracelets and rings worn by women. The court in which the mosque over the tombs of the patriarchs is built is surrounded by an extensive and lofty wall, formed of large stones, strengthened by square buttresses, the greatest antiquity in Hebron, and probably the same as that seen and described by Josephus (Ant. i. 14; B. J. iv. 9, 7). The only other antiquities are the two cisterns for rain-water (pools). The one close to the south gate of the city is 133 feet square, 22 feet deep, and built of hewn limestone, with steps at each corner, down to the water. The other pool at the north end of the town is 85 by 55 feet, and 19 feet deep. The surrounding country is productive, and the many ruins show a once dense population and high state of cultivation. Population 5000.—2. In Asher (Josh. xix. 28). ABDON?

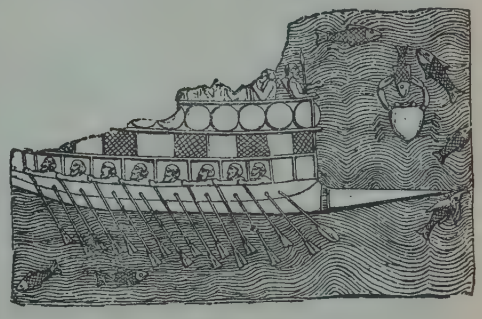
HE'BRONITES, THE. Descendants of Hebron, son of Kehath (Num. iii. 27).

HEDGE (GADER, GEDER, a stone wall, or other fence; MESUKAH, hedge of thorns or cactus). Besides stones, walls are made of sun-dried mud, (especially in Egypt); and the nukb thorn tree makes an impassable hedge, as well as the cactus.

HE'GAI or HEG'AI. Eunuch (prime-minister) of the court of Ahasuerus (Esth. ii. 8–15).

HE'GE. HEGAI (Esth. ii. 3). Aja or Aga in Sanscrit. Name of a modern Turkish officer.

HEIFER (AGLAH, the young of kine). They worked with other cattle, in treading out grain (Hosea x. 11), and in plowing (Judg. xiv. 18). Egypt was "a fair heifer" (Jer. xlv. 20), in allusion to the bull Apis worshiped there. Several names are made from it, as Eglah, En-eglaim, and Parah (young mother cow). Heifers are used at the plow now as anciently.



ASSYRIAN GALLEY.

THE ORDINANCE OF THE RED HEIFER (Num. xix.), is a very peculiar item in the ancient religion, concerning cleansing rather than atonement. It was intended to cleanse from the ceremonial defilement which followed from touching a dead body, or a bone of a dead man, or entering a house where there was a person dead. Purification in the usual way required 7 days of time. A son of the high priest sprinkled the blood of a red heifer before the tabernacle (temple, not on the altar), and the carcase was to be burned entire, outside of the camp, in a clean place (with a bit of cedar wood, and of scarlet cloth), reserving nothing; the ashes were to be kept for use. Mixed with fresh water they were sprinkled on the unclean, on the third, and on the seventh day, with a bunch of hyssop. After changing his clothes and bathing he was clean. His house or tent was also to be sprinkled, with all its furniture, etc.

HE'LAH (rust). Wife of Ashur (1 Chr. iv. 5).

HE'LAM. On the west bank of the Euphrates, where David met and defeated the army of Hadarezer (2 Sam. x. 16). Alamatha of Ptolemy.

HEL'BAH (Judg. i. 31). Asher, not far from Sidon.

HEL'BON (Ezek. xxvii. 18). "In the wine of Helbon." A village 10 miles north of Damascus, in a wild and beautiful glen, which is clothed in vineyards. There are many ruins of temples, some with Greek inscriptions, and many other marks of ancient wealth.

HĒL'DAI (long-lived). 1. Captain for the temple-service (1 Chr. xxvii. 15).—2. An Israelite (Zech. vi. 10).

HĒ'LEB (fat). Son of Baanah (2 Sam. xxiii. 29). Heled.

HĒ'LED (strength), (1 Chr. xi. 30). HELDAI 1.

HE'LEK (possession). Son of Gilead (Num. xxvi. 30).

HĒ'LEKITES, THE. Family from Helek (Num. xxvi. 30).

HE'LEM (stroke). 1. A descendant of Asher (1 Chr. vii. 35). Hotham?—2. (strength), (Neh. vi. 14). HELDAI 2.

HĒ'LEPH (Josh. xix. 33.) Where the north boundary of Naphtali began. Beit Lif, east of Ras Abyad and west of Kades.

HĒ'LEZ (loin). 1. One of David's guard (2 Sam. xxxii. 26; xxvii. 10).—2. Son of Azariah (ii. 39).

HĒ'LI, ELI. 1. Father of Joseph, the husband of the Virgin Mary (Luke iii. 23).—2. (2 Esd. i. 2; Ezr. vii. 2, 3).

HĒLIODŌ'RUS (given by the sun). The treasurer of Seleucus Philopator (2 Macc. iii. ff). He was appointed to carry away the private treasures in the Temple at Jerusalem, but fell down speechless and was restored by the high priest Onias.

HEL'KAI (Jah, his portion). A priest (Neh. xii. 15).

HEL'KATH (Josh. xix. 25). Boundary of Asher. Lost. Ikkrith? Hukkok in 1 Chronicles vi. 75.

HEL'KATH HAZZURIM (2 Sam. ii. 16). Near the pool of Gibeon, where 12 of Joab's men and 12 of Abner's killed each other and brought on a general battle.

HĒ'NOCH. 1. Enoch 2 (1 Chr. i. 3).—2. Hanoch 1 (i. 33).

HĒ'PHER (Josh. vii. 17). West of Jordan, as was also the land of Hepher. Lost.

HĒ'PHER (a well). 1. Son of Gilead (Num. xxvi. 32).—2. Son of Ashur (1 Chr. iv. 6.)—3. One of David's men (xii. 36).

HEPHERITES. The family of Hepher (Num. xxvi. 32).

HEPH'ZIBAH (my delight in her). 1. Name given to the new Jerusalem (Is. lxiii. 4).—2. Queen to Hezekiah and mother of Manasseh (2 K. xxi. 1).

HĒ'RA. HERCULES.

HER'ALD (Chal. karoza). An officer (Dan. iii. 4).

HERBS. Bitter herbs. FOOD.

HER'CULES (Hera's glory). The national god of Tyre, called MELKART (king of the city). The worship extended to all colonies of Tyre, especially to Carthage. This was the Baal also. The Greeks make him the most famous hero of their fabulous history, remarkable for his great strength (SAMSON), and especially for 12 "labors" which were connected with the health and safety of men. Hera was the Greek name of Juno, who was the guardian deity of married women. In Assyria she was Astarte, "Queen of Heaven;" and as such is sculptured at Hierapolis, in Asia Minor.

HERA.

HERD. Herdman. The herd was one of the chief sources of wealth, and the ox the most precious, next to the horse and mule. The herd yielded the most esteemed sacrifice. Its supply for sustenance was most important, in flesh, milk, butter and cheese. The cattle were broken to service in the third year, after which they were rarely killed. The ox eats grass and browses on foliage also. The harvest is gathered and threshed by the help of cattle. Pharaoh made some of Joseph's brothers overseers of herds, and David's herdsmen were among the chief officers of his court.

HE'RES (the sun), (Is. xix. 18)—Irhaheres, for Mount Heres. See Judg. i. 35. IRSHEMESH.

HĒ'RESH. A Levite (1 Chr. ix. 15).

HER'MAS. HERMES. A disciple of Rome (Rom. xvi. 14). Tradition says he was the author of "The Shepherd of Hermas."

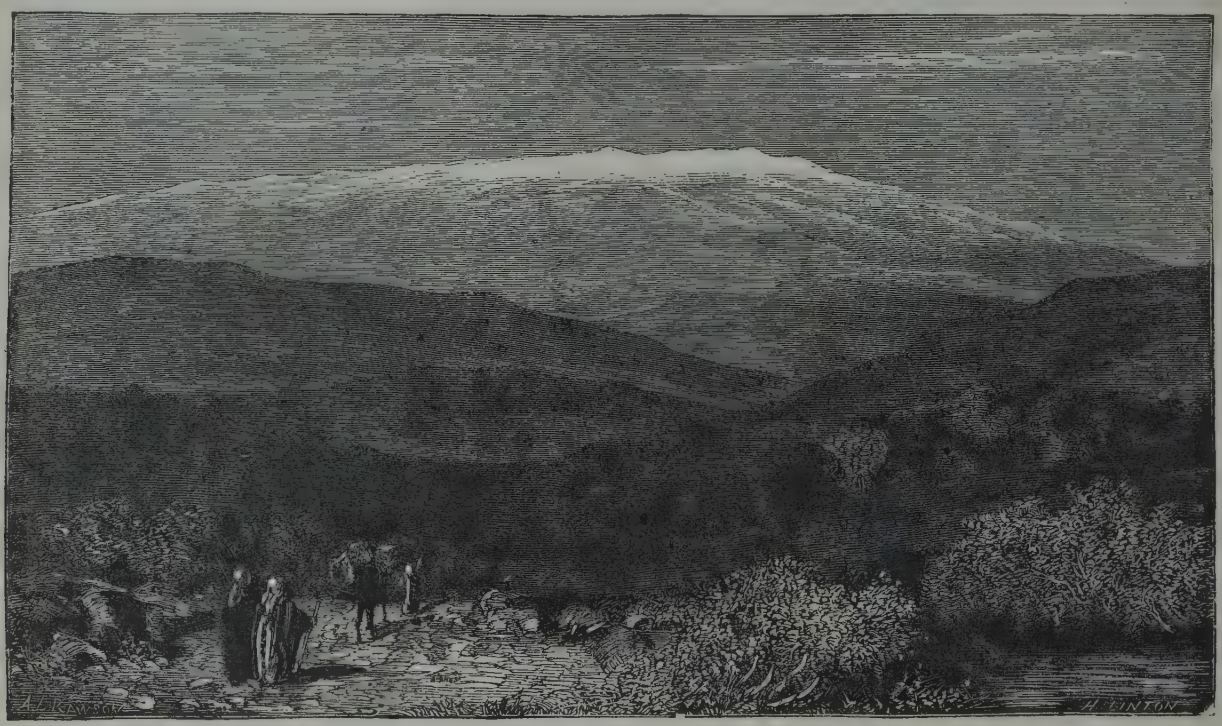
HĔRMĒS. One of the seventy disciples, afterward Bishop of Dalmatia (Rom. xvi. 14).

HERMŌG'ENES (2 Tim. i. 15). A disciple who deserted Paul without cause.

HER'MON (nose of mountain). The highest peak of Anti-Lebanon, on or beyond the north border of the land (Josh. xi. 17; Deut. xxxiv. 1; 1 Sam. iii. 20). The Amorites called it Shenir (to shine, as a coat of mail); the Sidonians, Sirion (to glitter); also called Sion (elevated); and now by the Arabs Jebel esh Sheikh (chief mountain), and Jebel eth Thelj (snowy mountain). Its head is crowned with perpetual snow; and when the whole lowland country is burnt by the summer sun, long lines of snow streak down the sides of Hermon, like the white locks of an old man about his shoulders. There are three summits, about a quarter of a mile from each other in a triangular position, and 10,000 feet high. They are visible (at a distance as one peak) from every part of Palestine north of Shiloh, from the Jordan valley near the Dead Sea, and from the Moab mountains as far south as Nebo. Its rivers are Jordan, Abana, Pharpar, Orontes, and Leontes. It was the religious centre of pagan Syria, and the temples of Baal gave it a name. The ruins of these temples are now found on many of its lower shoulders, as at Rakleh, Sed Dan, Bustra, Mutaleih, Kefr Kuk, Burkush, Aiba, Hibariyeh, Tilthatha, Ain Hersha, Asheir, Bekkeh, Munseh, and Paneas. At Rakleh there is a god's face, 40 inches in diameter, surrounded by a wreath, all well cut in bold relief, and set in the wall of the temple, which is a ruin, and one of a circle of temples all around, facing the summit of Hermon. The temple at Asheir is on an elevated platform (which is ornamented with a frieze and cornice), 126 by 69 feet, and itself 89 by 40 feet, and 54 feet high. In the Ionic style, with cup and ball ornaments. On the very highest peak are the foundations of a circular wall of large stones, enclosing hewn stones (some beveled), in heaps, disclosing the plan of a small temple (Deut. xii. 2; 2 K. xvii. 10). The central peak is a bald cone of gray limestone, 2,000 feet higher than the surrounding ridges. These lower ridges are thinly clothed with evergreen oaks. The whole of Palestine can be seen from the summit.

HERMONITES, THE. "The Hermons," (Ps. xlii. 6).

HERMONS (Ps. xlii. 6). The three summits of Hermon.



MT. HERMON.

HELL. HADES.

HELLENIST. GRECIAN.

HEL'MET. ARMS.

HELPS (Gr. antilepseis). Care of the poor and sick, by the deacons and deaconesses, by a gift of the spirit. "From time to time God raises up heroes of Christian charity, angels of mercy, for the benefit of humanity."

HĒ'LON (strong). Father of Eliab, prince of Zebulon (Num. i. 9.; ii. 7).

HEM OF THE GAR'MENT. The Jews attached a symbolical importance to the hem or fringe, because of the regulation in Num. xv. 38. See FRINGE.

HĒ'MAM. HOMAM. Son of Lotan (Gen. xxxvi. 22).

HEMAN (faithful). 1. Son of Zerah (1 Chr. ii. 6).—2. Son of Joel, a Levite and musician (1 Chr. vi. 33), to whom the vocal and instrumental music of the temple service, in the reign of David, was committed (xv. 16–22). He was also connected with the family of Zerah, the Ezrahite, and his name is in the title to Ps. lxxxviii.

HĒ'MATH. HAMATH (Amos vi. 14).

HE'MATH. HAMMATH. A person or place named as the origin of the Kenites (1 Chr. ii. 55), and the house of Rechab.

HEM'DAN (Gen. xxxvi. 26). East of Akaba there is an Arab tribe of the name of Hamran.

HEMLOCK (LAANAH and ROSH, gall).

HEN (grace). Son of Zephaniah (Neh. vi. 14). TOBIJAH 2.

HEN (Gr. ornis, fowl), (Matt. xxiii. 37; Luke xiii. 34), also (2 Esd. i. 30). Nowhere noticed besides in these passages, but were always kept as now, in every village or farm house.

HĒ'NA (2 K. xix. 13). Some ancient ruins, called Ana, are found on the Euphrates, near Mosaib. (Sippara).

HEN'ADAD (favor of Hadad). A chief Levite who helped rebuild the temple (Ezr. iii. 9; Neh. iii. 18, 24).

Josephus says the Herods were Edomites (xiv. 15 § 2), but Nicolaus of Damascus, a historian of the times, says they returned from exile with other Jews (a story invented to please Herod). Antipater (1.) gained power, first in Idumea, and then by fomenting the divisions between Hyrcanus, the high priest and his brother Aristobulus. He also came into power in Judæa, although Hyrcanus was nominal ruler. Herod (4.) the Great was only 15 years (20?) when he began to rule, and soon won a popular enthusiasm by good measures of public safety and quiet. Being summoned before the Sanhedrin, he appeared robed in purple, with a strong guard of soldiers, and was not sentenced. Not long after receiving favor from Sextus, president of Syria, and Cassius, he punished Malichus his father's murderer. He was made governor of Judæa jointly with his brother Phasael, B. C. 41. Antigonus being driven out of Judæa, joined the Parthians and got possession of Judæa, 40 B. C., Herod flying to Rome, while Phasael killed himself. Octavius Cæsar confirmed Herod in his office and Herod returned to Judæa, where he tried to gain the favor of the Jews by rebuilding and ornamenting the temple (commenced B. C. 24), and restoring such cities as Cæsarea, Antipatris, Sebaste (Samaria), and others, besides public buildings in Damascus, Tripoli, Ptolemais, Tyre, Sidon, Askelon and Antioch (a large open space, paved with marble, having a cloister), and also frequent public games and feasts, all at his own expense. He also made costly presents to Cæsar and Agrippa. He is said to have destroyed the genealogies of the Jewish priestly families. These deeds were prompted by the ambition to connect his name with the prosperity of his country, like Solomon's. The close of his career was stained with many cruel and barbarous crimes. His wives and children plotted against each other. (He had ten wives, two of whom were his own nieces.) Three of his sons (9, 10, 11) he had killed, with the mother of two (10, 11). In the midst of these family troubles, and of seditions in the city, he was seized with a terrible disorder in the bowels, and tried to kill himself, after giving orders for a magnificent funeral. He attempted to destroy the infant Jesus by killing all the children in Bethlehem (about 12), to get rid of an object of jealousy, for Jesus was spoken of as born king of the Jews. He died B. C. 4. He maintained peace at home and abroad by his vigor and timely generosity, and conciliated the good-will of the Romans. Many coins of his reign are still extant. (See Money.)

Herod Antipas (15) had been destined as his father's successor, but was appointed "tetrarch of Galilee and Peræa." He first married a daughter of Aretas (king of Arabia Petræa), and afterwards Herodias, his half-brother "Herod-Philip's" wife. This Herodias caused the death of John the Baptist. Aretas, in revenge for the slight put on his daughter, invaded Herod's territory and defeated him. He went to Rome, at the suggestion of Herodias, to ask for the title of a king, but being there opposed by the friends of Agrippa, he was banished to Lugdununi, A. D. 39, where he died, his wife being with him. It was to this Herod that Jesus was sent for examination by Pilate. He built Tiberias, and restored Sepphoris, and Betharem in Peræa, naming it Julias after the emperor's wife.

Archelaus (16). The kingdom which had been once intended for his brother Antipas, was left to Archelaus, who was educated in Rome, and Augustus confirmed the choice, giving him Idumea, Judæa, Samaria, Cæserea, Joppa, and Jerusalem, with the title of Ethnarch. He broke the Mosaic law by marrying his brother's widow, Glaphyra; was denounced by his subjects, appealed to Cæsar, and was banished to Vienne, in Gaul, where he died (A. D. 39).

Herod Philip I (14). His mother was daughter of the high-priest Simon. He married Herodias, sister of Agrippa I, and their daughter was Salome (31). Herodias left him for his half-brother Antipas (Matt. xiv. 3). He was excluded from all share in his father's possessions because of his mother's treachery, and lived a private life.

Herod Philip II (19). He was brought up at Rome, and after his father's death was appointed governor (tetrarch) of Batanæa, Trachonitis, Auranitis, and Jamnia, which he ruled with justice and moderation, without taking part in the intrigues of the rest of his family. He rebuilt Paneas, and named it Cæsarea Philippi, and raised Bethsaida beyond Jordan to a city, naming it Julias after the daughter of the emperor, and died there (A. D. 31). He married Salome (31), but left no children.

Herod Agrippa I (26)—Was educated in Rome with Claudius and Drusus, where Tiberius imprisoned him for an unguarded speech. Caius Caligula, the succeeding emperor, liberated him, and made him tetrarch of Galilee and Peræa (Lysanias). Herod Antipas and Herodias tried in vain to have him deposed, but he defeated their plans by a counter-charge of treason with the Parthians. Agrippa rendered important service to Claudius, and had his dominions enlarged by Samaria and Judæa, so that they equaled in extent those of Herod the Great. He was a strict keeper of the law, and was respected by the Jews. It is supposed that it was to increase their favor that he put to death James the Less, and put Peter in prison (Acts xii). In the fourth year of his reign over Judæa (A. D. 44), he attended some games in honor of the emperor. Appearing in a robe ornamented with silver embroidery, his flatterers saluted him as a god, when he was seized with a sudden illness, and died in five days (eaten of worms).

HEAD OF TITUS. COIN OF HEROD AGRIPPA II.

Herod Agrippa II (36). He was educated at Rome, and was only 17 at his father's death. His first appointment was the kingdom of Chalcis, and afterwards the tetrarchies of Philip and Lysanias, with the title of king (Acts xxv). Nero added several cities. He built many splendid public buildings in Jerusalem and Berytus. Juvenal in his satires notices his relation to his sister Berenice. He died at Rome in the 3d year of Trajan, A. D. 100, the last of the Herods.

HERODIANS. Formed a party very keenly opposed to the claims of Jesus, who favored the Herod family and watched its interests. They "watched him, and sent forth spies, which should feign themselves just men, that they might take hold of his words, so that they might deliver him unto the power and authority of the governor" (Luke xx. 20). Herodias, daughter of Aristobulus, son of Herod the Great (4), and wife first of Herod Philip, and then, contrary to the law of Moses, of Herod Antipas, who had a wife, the daughter of the king of Arabia (Aretas). John the Baptist reproved her, and she in revenge caused his death (Matt. xiv. 8) at Machærus. She went with her husband Antipas into exile (see Herod Antipas), at a place now called St. Bertrand de Comminges, in France, near Spain, on the Garonne river, anciently Lugdunum Converarum, at the foot of the Pyrenees.

HERODION. A relative of Paul at Rome (Rom. xvi. 11). Tradition says he was bishop of Tarsus, or of Patræa.

HERON, OR WHITE IBIS.

HERON (anaphah). An unclean bird (Lev. xi. 19; Deut. xiv. 18). There are several species "after its kind" in Palestine, one of which is called the White Ibis, which are found in immense flocks about the Huleh lake and marsh. The flesh is excellent.

HE'SED (favor). Commissary for Solomon in the Aruboth (1 K. iv. 10).

HESH'BON (Num. xxi. 26). Capital city of Sihon, king of the Amorites, on the western border of the Mishor (Josh. xiii. 17), and on the boundary between Reuben and Gad. The ruins are 20 miles east of Jordan, opposite the north end of the Dead Sea, on an insulated hill, scattering over a space more than a mile in circuit, with not a single edifice entire. Many cisterns are whole, and a large reservior near the base of a hill recalls the text in Cant. vii. 4, "Thine eyes are like the fish-pools of Heshbon." The view from the summit is very extensive over the great undulating plateau, embracing the ruins of a great number of cities, whose names resemble those of the Scriptures. (See Tristram's Land of Israel).

HESH'MON (Josh xv. 27). On the south border of Palestine. Lost. Azmon? (Num. xxxiv. 4).

HES'RON (enclosed). Son of Reuben (Num. xxvi. 6). Hezron. Hesronites.

HÈTH (terror). Cheth. Ancestor of the Hittites, son of Canaan (Gen. x.) In Abraham's time they were called Bene Cheth, sons of Cheth. The name Chat is found on the Egyptian monuments for Palestine.

HETH'LON (stronghold). On the N. border of Palestine (Ez. xlvii. 15), at the north end of Lebanon.

HEZ'EKI. A Benjamite, son of Elpaal (1 Chr. viii. 17). Hezekiah.

HEZEKI'AH (hizekiyah, strength of Jah). 12th king of Judah, son of the idolator Ahaz. Made king at 25 (or 20), B. C. 726. He destroyed the images and the instruments of idol worship, even the image of the brazen serpent, which had been preserved to his time as a precious relic of the wilderness, and repaired the temple and its furniture. He then held a solemn assembly, and after that a feast of the Passover, to which a great many came, and others sent gifts, and the seven days were fully honored, so much so that another seven days were added "with gladness" (2 Chr. xxx. 23). He refused submission and tribute to the king of Assyria, which brought the Assyrian army to Samaria in the fourth year of his reign, and in the 14th year the assault on Judæa was made (2 K. xviii. 13), when Hezekiah made peace, being compelled to rob the temple to pay the tax. A strong confirmation of the leading facts in the Bible narrative has lately been discovered at Nineveh, sculptured in stone, with the names of Hezekiah and others familiar, which leave no doubt in the matter. Sennacherib insisted on an unconditional surrender, in the most offensive manner. Hezekiah humbled himself before God, and being assured by Isaiah of the favor of Jehovah, he called his army together and prayed for help, which came as a plague upon the hosts of the Assyrians (2 K. xix. 35). Sennacherib was killed soon after his return home, in the house of his idol, by two of his sons. Hezekiah only lived a year longer, dying in his 54th year. He was one of the best kings of both Israel and Judah.—2. Son of Neariah, in the royal line of Judah (1 Chr. iii. 23).—3. Hizkiah in Zeph. i. 1.

HĒ'ZION (vision). King of Aram, father of Tabrimon (1 K. xv. 18).

HE'ZOR (swine). 1. A priest (1 Chr. xxiv. 15).—2. Head of the layman who signed the covenant (Neh. x. 20).

HEZ'RĀI (enclosed). One of David's strong men (2 Sam. xxiii. 35.) Hezro (1 Chr. xi. 37).

HEZ'RON. Hezrai. 1. Son of Reuben (Gen. xlvi. 9).—2. Son of Pharez (2 Gen. xlvi. 12).—3. Hazor (Josh. xv. 25).

HEZRONITES, THE. 1. Descendants of Hezron (Num. xxvi. 6).—2. Part of the tribe of Judah. Son of Pharez (xxvi. 31).

HID'DAI (mighty). One of David's guard (2 Sam. xxiii. 30). Hurai.

HID'DEKEL (Gen. ii. 14). One of the rivers of Eden—the 3d, "flowing toward the E. of Assyria." Daniel saw one of his poetic visions near its banks (Dan. x. 4). The Aramæan name of the river Tigris is Digla—Arabic, Diklah; and the Hebrew name seems to be compounded of the ancient name with the prefix for active, Hiddiklah or Hiddekel. Pliny writes it Diglito, "an arrow;" Josephus, Diglath, "swift" (Ant. i. 1, 3), all of which refer to the great swiftness of its current. (See Tigris).

HI'EL. Jehiel (El is animation). Native of Bethel (1 K. xvi. 34; Josh. vi. 26).

HIERAP'OLIS (Col. iv. 13). Five miles north of Laodicea. There are mineral springs, whose waters form stalactites, which gave it an ancient celebrity (Strabo xiii. 629). A great number of sepulchres are found in its vicinity. The ruins show its ancient greatness, and traces are still distinct of a temple of Apollo, a theatre (346 feet), a gymnasium (400 feet sq.), and three Christian churches (one 300 feet).

HIERON'YMUS (hallowed). A general of Syria (2 Macc. xii. 2).

HIGGAI'ON (Ps. ix. 17). Meditation. Soft music. A direction for singing.

HIGH PLACES (bāmoth). From the top of Hermon to the crest of the low hills, all over the land, there are evidences that they were used for religious rites, both in idolatrous and in pure worship. The temple on Moriah was intended to supersede all other high places, and no other worship was allowed, except on special occasions.

HIGH PRIEST. The office of the (cohen, priest) high priest was legal, theological and historical. The legal included all the law of Moses alluding to it, as the substitute for the first-born. He alone was consecrated by the anointing oil, the underpriests being sprinkled only (Ps. cxxxiii.). His dress was symbolical. (See Dress). He alone could enter the Holy of Holies, which he did but once a year (Day of Atonement) clothed in pure white. The accidental man-slayer was safe in the City of Refuge during his life-time, and at his death could return to his friends. He could not follow a funeral, nor disfigure himself by mourning. There was an assistant, called sagan (second priest), who could act in his stead (Luke iii. 2). The elders or Sanhedrin appointed him before the monarchy. No one could hold the office who was blemished, or was under 20 years (2 Chr. xxxi. 17), and it ended only at death, although one could be, or was deposed for ill-conduct. Theologically he was a type of Jesus the Christ. Historically his office concerns the history of the Jews for 1370 years, including nearly 80 different persons, from Aaron to Phannias. See pages 5, 10.

HIGHWAY. Roads or paths were used in ancient times, but the Romans made the first paved ways, traces of which still remain.

HI'LEN (1 Chr. vi. 58). Judah. Levitical.

HILKĪ'AH (Jah's portion). Son of Shallum, ancestor of Ezra the scribe (Ezr. vii. 1). Josiah effected the great reformation in his time, when the book of the law of Moses (see Deuteronomy in History of the Books) was found in the temple, where it had been hidden for centuries. Six others of this name were of little note.

HILL (gibeah, knoll; har mountain; maaleh, hight, ascent; Gr. bounos, mount; heoreine, mountain.

HIL'LEL (praise), Judge of Israel, father of Abdon (Judg. xii. 13-15).

HIN. Weights and Measures.

HIND (Heb. ayyalah, ayyeleth). Female stag. (Hart). (Gen. xlix. 21). See Fallow Deer.

HINGE (poth, tsir). Stone hinges are peculiar to Palestine and Assyria. See Door.

HIN'NOM, THE VALLEY OF (Josh. xviii. 16). On the S. and W. of Mt. Zion. The origin of the name is unknown (Jer. vii. 31). An idol of bronze of great size was set up in the valley, facing Olivet, where children were sacrificed in the fire, which seems to have been kindled inside the idol. Josiah abolished the worship, and strewed human bones over the place, making it unclean, and thus prevented the renewal of worship there (2 K. xxiii. 10). These inhuman practices gave the place a horrible character, and caused its name to be detested and used as a figure for a place of torment.

HIPPOPOT'AMUS (river horse). Behemoth. See p. 20.

HI'RAH (noble birth). The friend of Judah (Gen. xxxviii. 1, 12).

HIRAM or HURAM (high-minded). 1. King of Tyre (2 Sam. v. 11; 1 Chr. xiv. 1). He built a palace for David (1 K. v. 1), also a temple for Solomon (1 K. vi. 1)—2. An artificer (vii. 13, 40, 45).

HIRCĀ'NUS. Son of Tobias (2 Macc. iii. 11).

HITTITES. Children of Heth. See Ham. The name is found in the Egyptian hieroglyphics, where are also found the names of their gods, Ashtoreth and others.

HI'VITES. Of the sons of Canaan. See Ham. They lived under Hermon, in the land of Mizpeh (Josh. xi. 3), and in Lebanon as far as Hamath (Judg. iii. 3). Jacob bought a small field of Hamor, the Hivite, at Shalem near Shechem (Gen xxxiii. 18, xxxiv. 2). Esau married Aholibamah, a Hivite. The Hivites of Gibeon made a treaty with Joshua by a deceit (Josh. ix. 3); and for this act they were condemned to the temple service. Avim.

HIZKI'AH. Hezekiah. Ancestor of Zepahniah (Zeph. i. 1).

HIZKI'JAH (Neh. x. 17). "Ater of Hizkijah."

HO'BAB (beloved). The father-in-law of Moses, or, more probably, his brother-in-law (Num. x. 29–32). He was an experienced sheikh, and valuable as a guide. See Exodus.

HO'BAH (hidden; Gen. xiv. 15). Where Abraham's pursuit of the kings he defeated at Dan ended, north of Damascus. Three miles northeast of Damascus is a village called Jobar, where there is a synagogue dedicated to Elijah; and another village, Buzeh, near, in which there is a very ancient sanctuary of Abraham. Both places are offered as the site of Hobah.

HOD (splendor). Son of Zophah (1 Chr. vii. 37), of Asher.

HODAI'AH (praise ye Jah). Son of Elioenai (1 Chr. iii. 24).

HODAVI'AH. Hodaiah. 1. A man of Manasseh (1 Chr. v. 24).—2. Son of Hassenuah (1 Chr. ix. 7).—3. A Levite (Ezr. ii. 40). Hodevah.

HO'DESH (new moon). Wife of Shaharaim (1 Chr. viii. 9).

HODE'VAH (Neh. vii. 4, 3). Hodijah.

HODI'AH. Wife of Ezra (1 Chr. iv. 19).

HODI'JAH (splendor of Jehovah). 1. A Levite (Neh. viii. 7).—2. A Levite (x. 13).—3. Layman (x. 18).

HOG'LAH (partridge). Daughter of Zelophehad (Num. xxvi. 33). Heir.

HO'HAM (Jah impels). Canaanite. King of Hebron (Josh. x. 3).

HOLD. Place held by a garrison (Judg. ix., 46, 49).

HOLM-TREE. A species of oak. (History of Susanna, 58 v).

HŌLŌFER'NĒS (symbolical), (Jud. ii. 4). King over the Assyrians.

HO'LON (abode), (Josh. xv. 51). Judah, between Goshen and Giloh. Lost.—2. In Moab, in the Mishnor. Hilen. Lost.

HO'LY CHIL'DREN, THE SONG OF THE THREE. See History of the Books.

HOMAM (extermination), (1 Chr. i. 39). Homaima, a ruin south of Petra, half-way to Ailath, on the ancient Roman road. The native city of the Abassides (Rob., B. R., ii. 572).

HO'MER (a heap). Weights and Measures.

HON'EY (debash, yaar, nophet). The product of bees, of sweet gum bearing trees, of dates, of grapes, and other vegetables or fruit. Butter and honey mingled are eaten with bread in the morning.

HOOD. Dress. Head dress.

EGYPTIAN PRIESTS.

HOOK, Hooks. Fishing hooks (haccah, Am. iv. 2); ring for the nose (choach, Job xli. 2). (See page 16, for ring in the lips of prisoners). Hooks in the pillars of the tabernacle (vavim, Ex. xxvi. 32); pruning-hook (mazmerah, Is. ii. 4); pot-hook for a cook (mazleg, 1 Sam. ii. 13); butcher's hooks (shephattayim, Ez. xl. 43).

HOPH'NI (fighter), and Phin'eas. Two sons of Eli, priests at Shiloh.

HOR, MOUNT (har, mountain), (Num. xx. 25). On the edge of Edom, not far from Kadesh and Zalmonah. Aaron was buried here (22–29). The ascent is very steep and difficult—rocky; and on its summit is a rude building called Aaron's tomb. (See page 1.) Juniper grows almost to the top.

The view from the summit is very extensive in every direction; on the north the passes of Akrabbim, where the Jews were defeated, and the mountains around the Dead Sea; on the east, the rugged range of Edom (with the Deir, or convent of Petra, in sight), red, bare, and desolate; southward, the wide downs of Mt. Seir; and westward the Arabah, with its hundred water-courses; and above it the great white wilderness, fading into the hot and trembling distance. 5,000 feet high.

HŌ'RAM (hight). King of Gezer (Josh. x. 33).

HŌ'REB (dried up). SINAI. EXODUS.

HŌ'REM (Josh. xix. 38). Naphtali. Hurah, a ruin on a low tell in Wady Ain, west of and near Merom.

HORHAGID'GAD. GUDGODAH. (Num. xxxiii. 32).

HŌRI (lives in caverns). 1. Son of Lotan (Gen. xxxvi. 22).—2. (Gen. xxxvi. 30) "Hori."—3. Father of Shaphet (Num. xiii. 5).

HORITE. HORITES. Inhabitants of Mount Seir. (Gen. xiv. 6).

HORMAH (destruction, cursed), (Judg. i. 17). Zephath. City of a king, in the south of Palestine (Josh. xii. 14). El Sufa, S. E. of the Dead Sea. See EXODUS.

HORN (KEREN). Horns on cattle; often used as weapons—for which see ARMS—and for trumpets for calling workmen to dinner, the soldiers to the field, and for announcing religious ceremonies. Used also for bottles. The elephant's tusks were called horns (from their shape), as also trumpets of metal. The summit of a hill was a horn, as also the corners of the altar for burnt-offerings. The modern Druses wear a horn on the head for ornament, but it was not an ancient custom of the Hebrews. In poetry the horn is strength, and also a nation, or a king, or a god.

HORNET (ZIRAH). A winged insect, used as a figure by the poets and prophets (Ex. xxiii. 27, 28; Deut. vii. 20; Josh. xxiv. 11, 12) of a persistent warrior. There are four kinds in Palestine, all different from the European varieties. ZOREAH, hornet-town.

HORONA IM (two caverns), (Is. xv. 5; Jer. xlviii. 3, 5). Near Zoar, Luhith, Nimrim, on a declivity, beside a noted road. Lost.

HŌR ŌNITE, or HŌ'RŌNITE One from Horonaim. Sanballat (Neh. ii. 10)

HORSE (SUS). Not mentioned among Abraham's cattle, but first as coming from Egypt (Gen. xlvii. 17). The horse is almost exclusively used in war in Scripture, and is so sculptured on the monuments both of Egypt and Assyria. Job gives a most elegant description of a war-horse in ch. xxxix. 19–25. "An horse is a vain thing for safety" (Ps. xxxiii. 17), said the poet and the prophet also (Deut. xvii. 16). Solomon disobeyed the letter and spirit of the prohibition not to multiply horses, and his successors also. Horses are used as symbols by the prophets, as in Zech. i. 8, "a man riding on a red horse;" and he also mentions speckled (or bay) and white horses. John, in Rev. vi., saw four horses go forth: white, red, black and livid (green), indicating the spiritual condition of the nations. White horses are an emblem of triumph and power. Successful generals rode in triumph on white horses (Rev. xix. 11–15).

HORSE-LEECH (ALUKAH). Very common in all the stagnant waters and in the running brooks, clinging to stones. Used as a figure in Prov. xxx. 15.

HO'SAH (refuge), (Josh. xix. 29). Asher, not far from Tyre.—2. A Levite (1 Chr. xxvi. 10, 38).

HO'SAI (seer), (2 Chr. xxxiii. 19). CHOZAI.

HŌSAN'NA (save now). Ps. cxviii. was sung on joyful occasions, such as the feast of Tabernacles. Verses 25 and 26 were sung with loud acclamation. "Hosanna to the Son of David" in Matt. xxi. 9.

HOSĒ'A (salvation). A prophet, called of God, with Amos, to declare his word to Israel. See HISTORY OF THE BOOKS.

HOSHA'IAH (Jah helps). A leader of the princes of Judah to the wall of Jerusalem (Neh. xii. 32).—2. Father of Azariah (Jer. xlii. 1).

HOSH'AMA (Jah hears). A son of king Jeconiah (1 Chr. iii. 18).

HOSHE'A (safety). Hosea I, son of Nur (Deut. xxxii. 44). OSHEA, the prophet.—2. The last king of Israel (Is. vii. 16). Shalmanezer, king of Assyria, besieged and ended the kingdom of Israel B. C. 721 (2 K. xvii).—3. Son of Azaziah (1 Chr. xxvii. 30), and ruler of Ephraim.—4. One of the people who signed the covenant (Neh. x. 23).

HOSPITAL'ITY. One of the chief virtues among the Orientals, and it is most highly esteemed on the desert, being less needed and less valued in the towns. The ancient Egyptians limited their practice to their own people, having a superstitious dread of all foreigners. The O. T. is full of allusions to the rites and the divine commands for their practice, and instances of the national belief of the Hebrews in their value. The laws of Moses give many directions for special cases, as with the stranger, "for ye were strangers in the land of Egypt" (Lev. xix. 34), the poor, and the traveler. To break the law was a very great offense, as in the case of Benjamin at Gibeah (Judg. xiii 15, xix. 17–21). The good Samaritan stands for all ages as an example of Christian hospitality. The account of Abraham entertaining the three angels is a perfect picture of how a modern Bedawin sheikh would treat a traveler in our day. (See ABRAHAM). Oriental respect for the covenant of salt (and bread) is a part of the law of hospitality. To taste another's salt is to make yourself his friend for the time. In every village there is a mewsil, inn, for the use of travelers, where they are supplied with food by certain families near it. No money is paid, but presents may be made equivalent to the value of the articles used.

HOS'TAGES (2 K. xiv. 14; 2 Chr. xxv. 24).

HOTHAM (a seal). Son of Heber (1 Chr. vii. 32). HELEM 1.

HO'THAN. HOTHAM. Father of Shama (1 Chr. xi. 44).

HO'THIR (superior). Son of Heman (1 Chr. xxv. 4, 28).

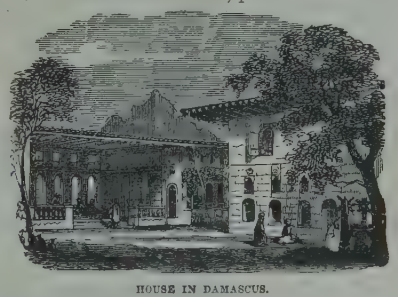
HOUR. See CHRONOLOGY, p. 31.



HOUSE IN DAMASCUS.

HOUSE (BETH, to pass the night). A dwelling for man or cattle. House, tent, palace, tomb, tabernacle, temple; heaven; family. The houses of the rich are made of stone with two or more stories arched over the rooms and passage-ways, with fine stair-ways, supplied with wide galleries or verandahs, and open places for light and air, generally built around two or three sides of a court, in which is a fountain or pool of water. The wall next to the street is usually blank, with a small door, and a window or two, high up, and latticed. (See WINDOW). The door often has an inscription, seldom the name of the resident. The poor live in houses of mud, sun-dried, usually of one story, roofed with mud laid on poles which are covered with grass or palm-leaves. In the rainy season the rain leaks through (see DROPPING), if not prevented by rolling the mud with a stone roller. When of two storys the lower is for the use of animals and for storage. In hot countries people sleep on the roofs under tents of cloth, or booths of branches. The cool of the evening is also passed on the roof, when proclamation is made by the public crier of any command of the ruler, or news of any public kind. It is also a place for prayer. Some roofs have vines so trained as to form a shelter from the sun or neighbors. The space is found useful for drying grain, fruit, and clothing from the wash. Stairways lead from the roof to the ground in the court without passing into the house. It is quite usual to build pigeon-houses of bottles on the battlements, and sparrows build their own nests in any corner or hole, even plugging up the chimneys (Ps. lxxxiv., cii. 7), and are caught in great numbers, being almost worthless (Matt. x. 29.) Very large houses, convents, and inns, have several courts, connected by passages. South of Nablus (Shechem) the roof is supplied with domes for lighting and enlarging the rooms below. The upper room or chamber is the choice place, given only to strangers or friends of distinction. The sculptures in Egypt and Assyria present houses of more than one story. The guest room, or divan, is provided with seats all around the room, except by the doors, like wide, low sofas; no chairs are used. The Romans and Greeks used chairs and reclining seats or sofas around the table at banquets. (See p. 19). The walls are often ornamented with carvings of wood, and sometimes painted in beautiful patterns. (See CARPENTER). The furniture is much more simple than ours, and less expensive, except in the houses of the rich. (See CORNERSTONE, BRICK, ROOF.

HUK'KOK (incision), (Josh. xix. 34). On the south border of Asher and Naphtali. Yakuk, in the Wady el Amud. An ancient Jewish tradition locates the tomb of Habakkuk here (Benj. of Tudela, ii. 421).

HUL (region), (Gen. x. 23). Second son of Aram, grandson of Shem. The plain or valley of the Jordan north of Lake Merom is called Ard el Huleh, and the lake's most ancient name is Huleh, and it is still so called by the Arabs.

HUL'DAH (weasel), a prophetess (2 K. xxii. 14; 2 Chr. xxxiv. 22), whose husband, Shallum, was master of the wardrobe to king Josiah)2 K. xxii. 14). Huldah was famous as an oracle when Jeremiah was a boy in the school at Anathoth.

HUM'TAH (lizards) (Josh. xv. 54). Judah, in the hill country.

HUNTING. The Hebrews were not given to hunting, except for the protection of their fields or families from wild beasts. The names of many places indicate that wild game was plentiful, even to a degree of danger. Thomson (Land and Book) says it is still plenty in some places, especially in Galilee.

HU'PHAM (coast-man). Son of Benjamin (Num. xxvi. 39). HUPPIM.

HU'PHAMITES. Descendants of Hupham (Num. xxvi. 39).

HUP'PAH (covering) A priest (1 Chr. xxiv. 13), of the 13th course.

HUP'PIM (screen). A Benjamite (1 Chr. vii. 12).

HUR. A man with Moses and Aaron in the battle with Amalek (Ex. xvii. 10); husband of Miriam.—2. Son of Hur (Ex. xxxi. 2).—3. One of the 5 kings of Midian (Num. xxxi. 8).—4. Father of Rephaiah (Neh. iii. 9).—5. Son of Hur; an officer for Solomon (1 K. iv. 8).

HŪ'RAI (noble). One of David's guard (1 Chr. xi. 32). HIDDAI.

HŪRAM (high-born). 1. Son of Bela (1 Chr. xiii. 5).—2. King of Tyre (1 Chr. xiv. 1).—3. Hiram, the artificer (ii. 13). He was called Ab (father), a title of respect, used now in the East, and the origin of the title of the Bishop of Rome (pope, father).

HŪ'RI. Father of Abihail (1 Chr. v. 14).

HŪ'SHAH (haste), (1 Chr. iv. 4) A town built by Ezer

HŪ'SHAI (hasting). An Archite (2 Sam. xv. 32 ff.). A friend of David (xv. 37). Probably the father of Baanah 3. (1 K. iv. 16).

HŪ'SHAM (haste). King of Edom (Gen. xxxvi. 34, 35).

HŪ'SHATHITES. One from Husha. Two of David's guard. 1. Sibbechai (Hittite?), (2 Sam. xxi. 18).—2. Mebunnai (2 Sam. xxiii. 27).

HŪ'SHIM. 1. Children of Dan (Gen. xlvi. 23).—2. A Benjamite (1 Chr. vii. 12).—3. One of the wives of Shaharaim (viii. 8).

HUSKS (Gr. keratia). The fruit of the carob tree, which is very common in the East, and the Greek islands, where it is in great request for fattening hogs. It has a sweetish pulp when tender. The ripe pods (10 inches long) are dry and have seeds like beans. See HONEY. The leaves are like our ash, but dark and glossy. It blossoms in February and the pods are ripe in May.

HUZ. Nahor's elder son (Gen. xxii. 21) "And Buz his brother." There is a district of Kaseem, in Arabia, which some suppose to be the land of Uz (Job i. 1). See Palgrave's Journey in Arabia.

HUZ'ZAB (fixed). Queen of Nineveh? (Nah. ii. 7). Country of Zab, that is, the river.

HYDAS'PES. A river (Judith i. 6), in connection with the Euphrates and Tigris. Choaspes of Susiana.

CAROB FRUIT.

HY ĒNA. Not mentioned by name in the O. T. as translated, but meant in the original by the word ZEBUA (Ar. dabba), which is rendered streaked bird in Jer. xii. 9 (Hyena in the Sept.). Valley of Zeboim (hyenas in 1 Sam. xiii. 18). It is still found in numbers, ready to attack wounded, dying, or dead animals, eating all, even the very bones, its jaws being most powerful. Their flesh is not eaten, having a bad odor.

HYSSOP.

HYMENĒ'US One of the earliest Gnostics, who argued that the resurrection was passed already (1 Tim. i. 20; 2 Tim. ii. 17, 18).

HYMN. "In psalms, and hymns, and spiritual songs." The Greek word "Umnos, or humnos, means a song (in praise of Deity), as a part of worship, and there are several collections of such as were used in ancient times, written by Callimachus, Orpheus, Homer, Linus, Sappho, and others. Jesus and his disciples sang a hymn before going out, on the eve of the last supper (Matt. xxvi. 30). The words used are supposed to have been Ps. cxv; cxviii, called the Hallel. Paul and Silas sang hymns in prison at Philippi (Acts xvi. 25; Gr. humnoun, praises); and Paul commends their use in his epistles (Eph. v. 19; Col. iii. 16). The hymn differs from the psalm in thought and composition. The different meters were adopted from the Greek models.

HYSSOP (EZOR; Gr. hussopos). The Arabic zufā is a plant growing on a slender square stem, free from thorns, or spreading branches, ending in a cluster of heads, having a pleasant aromatic odor, growing on the walls in Palestine. No plant in the East is better fitted for purposes of sprinkling. Its leaves are often eaten (like summer savory) with bread.

I

I AM, and I AM THAT I AM. JAH.

IB'HAR (chosen). Son of David (2 Sam. v. 15).

IB'LEAM. Bil'eam (1 Chr. vi. 70; Josh. xvii. 11). Given to Manasseh, but in Asher. Jelama, north of Jenin, is perhaps the site. Ahaziah was wounded here by Jehu's soldiers (2 K. ix. 27).

IBNEI'AH (Jah will build). Son of Jehoram (1 Chr. ix. 8).

IBNI'JAH. IBNEIAH. A Benjamite (1 Chr. ix. 8).

IB'RI. HEBREW. A Levite (1 Chr. xxiv. 27).

IB'ZAN (of tin). A native of Bethlehem. Judge of Israel for seven years (Judg. xii. 8, 10). He had thirty sons and thirty daughters. BOAZ.

ICE. FROST. Ice is very rare in the plains and hills, and only familiar on the highest mountains.

ICHABOD (wo, or departed glory). Son of Phinehas (1 Sam. iv. 21). So named by his mother, who died at hearing of the loss of the Ark of God, her husband, and father-in-law, at the battle of Aphek.

ICO'NIUM (Acts xiii. 51). Konieh, a large city; is on a table-land, a fertile plain, near a semicircle of snow-capped mountains in Asia Minor. This level district was Lycaonia, of which Cicero says it was the capital. It was on the route leading from Ephesus to Tarsus, Antioch, and the Euphrates. Here Paul was stoned, and left for dead (xiv. 19). The city is built out of the ruins of the ancient structures, and pieces of marble columns, capitals, and carved cornices appear everywhere in the masonry. It is now quite large, the residence of a pasha, surrounded with beautiful groves and gardens, well watered, and the resort of pilgrims who visit a saint's tomb. In the middle ages it was the capital of the Seljukian Sultans, and is called the cradle of the Ottoman empire. The traditional story of Paul and Thecla is located here. (See Conybeare and Howson's Life of Paul).

ID'ALAH (Josh. xix. 15). Zebulon. Semuniyeh, 3 ms. S. of Beit-lahur, was near it.

ID'BASH (honeyed). Son of "the father of Elam," (1 Chr. iv. 3).

ID'DO (timely). 1. Father of Ahinadab (1 K. iv. 14).—2. Descendant of Gershom, son of Levi (1 Chr. vi. 21). ADAIAH.—3. Son of Zechariah (xxvii. 21).—4. YEDOI, (born on a festival). A seer who had a "vision" which concerned Jeroboam and alluded to Solomon (2 Chr. ix. 29). He wrote a history and a genealogy, which are lost, but are probably preserved in part in "Chronicles."—5. Son of Id'do (Ezr. v. 1).—6. A chief; one of the Nethinim (Ezr. viii. 17, 20).

ICONIUM.

IDOL. There are 21 Hebrew words for idols or images for worship. 1. AVEN, nought (Bethel, house of God, Bethaven, house of vanity), nothing, iniquity; 2. ELIL, no god, as contrasted with ELOHIM, God; 3. EMAH, terror; 4. MIPHLETSETH, horror (Phallus, the productive power of nature and the nature-goddess Ashera; Priapus); 5. BOSHETH, shameful; 6. GILLULIM, filthy gods; 7. SHIKKUZ, impurity; 8. SEMEL, likeness; 9. ZELEM, shadow; 10. TEMUNAH, model; 11. ATSAB, shape; 12. EZAB, fashion; 13. OTSEB, figure; 14. ZIR, a shape; 15. MAZZEBAH, statue; 16. CHAMMANIM, sun-images; 17. MASCHITH, device; 18. TERAPHIM, idols (see TERAPHIM); 19. PESEL, carved image; 20. PESILIM, graven images (quarries, in Judg. iii. 19, 26); 21. NESEC, molten image; MASSEKAH, shaped in a mould. These various terms are obscure, because very little material has come down to us from antiquity which fixes the form of these images. Jeremiah described in a sarcastic way how these so-called gods were made, but he did not give an idea of the particular shape. All of these terms expressed worthlessness and vanity, contempt and abhorrence.

IDOLATRY (TERAPHIM; Gr. idolatreia). The worship of deity made visible, whether of true or false ideas, in images, pictures, stars, fire, or ideal statements, as shown in business pursuits or in pleasure, or for honor, where self is preferred above the honor and glory of God. Nearly three in four of all the human race are open idolaters; and if judged by the strict moral sense of the term, very many of the other fourth worship self rather than God (Col. iii. 5). By the Jewish law the idolater was to be stoned to death, and a city given up to it was to be wholly destroyed, with all it contained (Deut. xiii. 12, xvii. 2). The laws of Moses imply that idolatry was known to him, and the paintings and sculptures of Egypt prove its existence there before the time of Moses, but the earliest mention in the Bible is in the incident of Rachel stealing her father's teraphim (images in Gen. xxxi. 19), by which he was guided, as some who consult the clairvoyant or other "fortune-tellers" of our day (a species of idolatry very prevalent among the ignorant and superstitious). The story of Micah and his images shows how widespread the custom was in the age succeeding Joshua and the elders. Solomon did much to encourage idolatry of many kinds, which were brought into the country by his foreign wives (1 K. xi. 7; 2 K. xxiii. 13). It has been a question whether the Hebrews did not so lapse into idolatry as to lose all knowledge of the true God. They lost the true sound of his name, for which we now substitute Jehovah. They may have only mingled foreign rites with the true worship, as many pagan ideas are now adopted into some branches of the Christian Church. We know that the Hebrews worshiped the sun (Baal), moon (Astarte, Diana), the stars (Ashtoreth, Mazzaloth in Job), planets Chiun or Remphan (Saturn, Acts vii. 40-43), and made representations of celestial bodies or ideas, in human form, for worship, as of the sun, moon and stars (Hera, Diana, see HERA, Cybele, Apollo, Adonis [Tammuz, in 2 K. xxi. 3], Venus, etc.); of KEN, in Egypt, and MYLITTA, in Nineveh; and also images of beasts, as the ox (Ps. cvi. 20); Aaron's and Jeroboam's bull-calf; and of a goat (Ashima); fly (Beelzebub); a cock (Nergal); and fish (Dagon); the dog (Nibhaz); the mule and peacock (Adrammelech); the horse, and pheasant (Anammelech). The Assyrians (Samaritans also) had a system of ancestor-worship (Asshur and others), and also a lower nature-worship, including the elements, trees, etc. The scape-goat of the Day of Atonement is a recognition of the existence of Satan (Typhon in Egyptian system), but was not a worship of that being, for only sins were sent to Azazel, nothing choice or precious.

The Christian Church now holds that God has sanctioned but one image, which was made by himself, for man's worship, which is the intelligent, rational, holy nature of man, which appears in all completeness and perfection in Jesus the Christ, and is reflected in his followers as they have more or less received the spirit of the gospel. "God is a spirit, and they that worship him must worship in spirit and in truth" (John iv. 24).

IDUME'A. Greek form of EDOM.

IDUME'ANS. EDOMITES. People of Idumea (2 Macc. x. 15, 16).

I'GAL (El will avenge). 1. A spy, son of Joseph (Num. xiii. 7).—2. One of David's men, son of Nathan (2 Sam. xxiii. 36; Joel 8).

IGDALI'AH (Jah will make great). Father of Hanan (Jer. xxxv. 4).

I'GĒAL—IGAL. Son of Shemaiah (1 Chr. iii. 22).

I'IM (ruins). Ije Abarim (Num. xxxiii. 45). Lost.—2. Judah, south; near Beersheba (Josh. xv. 28). Lost. AZEM?

I'IM. JIM (Is. xiii. 22). BEAST.

IJE-AB'ARIM (heaps, or ruins of Abarim), (Num

xxi. 11). This region, east of the Dead Sea, is still unexplored by any Christian traveler in our day, and therefore it is impossible to say whether the stations of the Israelites can be located or not.

I'JON (ruin), (1 K. xv. 20; 2 K. xv. 29). In the N. Jordan valley, now called Tell Dibbin. The hill is a favorable site for a city, overlooking the whole plain of Merj Aiyun, and on the road leading from the coast into the interior.

IK'KESH (perverse). Father of Ira (2 Sam. xxiii. 26).

I'LAI (supreme). An Ahohite (1 Chr. xi. 29). ZALMON.

ILLYR'ICUM (Rom. xv. 19). Paul preached the gospel of Christ "from Jerusalem round about unto Illyricum." A country on the east shore of the Adriatic Sea, north of Epirus. Illyricum was at one time one of the four great divisions of the Roman empire, and included the whole country between the Adriatic, the Danube, the Black Sea, and Macedonia (Gibbon, c. i).

IM'LA (full). Father of Micaiah (2 Chr. xviii. 7, 8). Im'lah in 1 K. xxii. 8, 9.

IMMAN'UEL (with us El, or God with us). The name of the child (prophetic) which was to be given to the house of David (Is. vii. 14). Isaiah bids Ahaz ask a sign of Jehovah, which he, with pretended humility, refused to do, when this sign of a child by a virgin (virgin is a young woman), was given, and, as some think, the prophesy was fulfilled within a few years, and others look on the child as a type of Jesus the Christ, as seems to be the meaning in Matt. i. 23.

IM'MER (talkative). 1. Head of a family of priests (1 Chr. ix. 12; Ezr. ii. 37, x. 20).—2. A place in Babylonia (Ezr. ii. 59; Neh. vii. 61).

IMMORTAL'ITY (Gr. athanasia, deathless, not mortal). The Christian believes that the human soul will never die. Some hold the doctrine that only those who believe on Christ will be blessed with immortality, while those who deny him will die (Rom. ii. 7; 2 Tim. i. 10). The same Greek word is also rendered incorruption in 1 Cor. xv. 42, etc., and sincerity in Eph. vi. 24, etc.

IM'NA (whom God keeps back). Son of Helem (1 Chr. vii. 35).

IM'NAH (good fortune) (JIMNA, JIMNAH). 1. First born of Asher (1 Chr. vii. 30).—2. Father of Kore (2 Chr. xxxi. 14).

IMPUTE' (to reckon to one what does not belong to him). (Heb. HASHAB Lev. vii. 18; Ps. xxxii. 2); and rendered "to think" in Gen. l. 20; and "to count" in Lev. xxv. 27, etc., "to reckon," "to esteem," "to devise," and "to imagine," in other places.—SUM, in 1 Sam. xxii. 15; "to put" in Gen. ii. 8; "to make" in xxi. 13.—3. Greek ellegeo in Rom. v. 13; "to put on account" in Philemon 18.—4. logizomai, in Rom. iv. 6, etc.; "to reason" in Mark xi. 31; and by several other terms.

IM'RAH (refractory). A chief of Asher (1 Chr. vii. 36).

IM'RI (eloquent). 1. A man of the family of Pharez (1 Chr. ix. 4).—2. Father of Zaccur 4 (Neh. iii. 2).

IN'CENSE (Heb. KETORAH, LEBONAH; Gr. thumiama). A compound of sweet-smelling gums used in acts of worship, and forbidden in private life (Ex. xxx. 27). The mixture is said to have been equal parts of stacte, onycha, frankincense, galbanum. The altar of incense was placed in front of the veil, from which on the great Day of Atonement the high-priest could raise a cloud of perfume which covered the mercy-seat (entered within and filled the holy of holies). It was a type of Christian prayer.

IN'DIA (Esth. i. 1, viii. 9). The extent of the kingdom of Ahasuerus was from India to Ethiopia, 127 provinces. Acts ii. 9, instead of Judæa read India. The country around the river Indus, now the Punjaub, which Herodotus describes as part of Darius' empire (iii. 98). At a later period it was conquered by Alexander. The name is found in the inscriptions at Persepolis (1 Macc. viii. 8). Modern India, or Hindostan, is more extensive than the ancient. The articles obtained by Solomon from the East were Indian, such as horns of ivory, ebony, broidered work and rich apparel, sandal-wood, apes, peacocks, and tin.

IN'GATHERING, FEAST OF (Ex. xxiii. 16). TABERNACLES, FEAST OF.

INN (Heb. MALON). A lodging-place for the night. Only a room is to be had, the traveler must supply himself with furniture, bed, etc. They were built generally two stories high, and near water. One is mentioned in the history of Joseph (Gen. xlii. 27), and by Moses in his day (Ex. iv. 24), by Jeremiah; the habitation (inn) of Chimham (xli. 17), and the same by Luke, where Jesus was born (ii. 7). The Good Samaritan is said to have left money (in our standard about $2.50) to pay charges at the inn (Luke xxii). The inn is usually built around a yard, having a well or fountain, and entered by a gate which can be closed against intruders at night. The baggage and animals occupy the lower rooms and the people the upper and better chambers. When the upper rooms were full of crowds at feast times, the late comers would be obliged to take a lower room, among the animals ("in the manger").

FIG.

INSPIRA'TION (from the Latin, in-breathing). The supernatural influence of God's spirit on the human mind, by which prophets, apostles, and other sacred writers were qualified to record divine truth without error. Others hold that is only a divine impression on the mind, by which the understanding is informed. "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God" (2 Tim. iii. 16).

INSTANT. IN'STANTLY (Luke xii. 4; xxiii. 23). Pressing, at once.

INTERCES'SION. Prayer for (or against) others (Jer. vii. 16; Rom. xi. 2).

INTERPRETATION (explanation). Making known clearly.

IŌ'NIA. That part of the coast of Asia Minor which is between Doris and Æolis. Ionia was celebrated for its 13 cities and its islands. The chief cities were Ephesus, Smyrna, Samos, Chios and Miletus (Jos. Ant. xvi. 2, 3). India in 1 Macc. viii. 8.

IPHEDEI'AH (Jah sets free). Son of Shashak (1 Chr. viii. 25).

IR (city). IRI (1 Chr. vii. 12).

I'RA (wakeful). 1. "The JAIRITE," one of David's officers (2 Sam. xx. 26).—2. "The ITHRITE," one of David's guard (xxiii. 38; 1 Chr. xi. 40).—3. Son of Ikkesh, captain of the 6th monthly course (2 Sam. xxiii. 26).

I'RAD. ARAD? JARED. Son of Enoch (Gen. iv. 18).

I'RAM (duke, sheikh), (Gen. xxxvi. 43). Where Iram was is not known. Probably either in or near Edom, if not an original component of Idumea.

IRHA'HERES (the city of the sun). The sacred city Heliopolis (its Greek name), or On, in Egypt (Is. xix. 18). Beth Shemesh, in Jer. xliii. 13. (See ON).

I'RI. IRAM. 1. Son of Bela (1 Chr. vii. 7). IR.—2. URIAH.—3. (1 Esd. viii. 62).

IRI'JAH (founded). Son of Shelemiah (Jer. xxxvii. 13, 14).

IR'NAHASH (serpent city). BETHLEHEM? (1 Chr. iv. 12). NAHASH.

I'RON (Josh. xix. 38). Naphtali. Sarun.

I'RON (Heb. BARZEL; Chal parzlah. The references are many to iron, and as early as the time of Tubal-Cain (Gen. iv. 22). A furnace of iron is taken as the image of the bondage in Egypt (Deut. iv. 28). Iron knives (or steel) are drawn on the monuments in Egypt. The remains of ancient Nineveh furnish articles of iron coated with bronze, which has preserved them. Tin melts at 470°, copper, silver and gold at 1800°, and cast iron at 3000°, while malleable iron requires a higher degree, but furnaces of clay, fed with charcoal and supplied with a blast of air from two skin-bellows, are used successfully in the East.

IR'PEEL (restored by God), (Josh. xviii. 27). Benjamin. Lost.

IR'SHEMESH (mount of the sun), (Josh. xix. 41). Danite city. MOUNT HERES. BETHSHEMESH?

I'RU (IRAM?). Son of CALEB (1 Chr. iv. 15).

I'SAAC (Heb. YIZHAK, laughing). Born at Gerar, B. C. 1896, of Sarah (who was 90) and Abraham (who was 100), in fulfilment of a divine promise (Gen. xxi. 17; Gal. iv. 29). When three years old, at the feast made on the day he was weaned, he was mocked by Ishmael with pretended homage (as the child of the promise and type of the Messiah) which so offended his mother that his half-brother and his mother Hagar were sent away (Heb. xi. 17; James ii. 20). At maturity he almost fell a victim to his father's faith on the altar as a burnt-offering. He was married at the age of 40 to his beautiful cousin Rebekah, but was tormented with jealous fear (as his father was) that some powerful chief would carry her off for her beauty. In his old age he was deceived by his wife and her favorite son Jacob, who got from him the patriarchal blessing which belonged to Esau by birth-right. At the age of 60 his two sons, Esau and Jacob were born. In his 75th year he and his brother Ishmael buried their father Abraham, who died at Mamre, in the cave of Machpelah, beside Isaac's mother, Sarah. He lived in tents, and mostly in the south-country (Negeb), where several places are mentioned as his residence for a time. When his father died he was at Beer-lahai-roi, from which the famine drove him to Gerar, where Abimelech put him in fear of losing his wife, when he practiced the same deception that his father did in the same place a few years before. The Philistines envied his prosperity, and jealous of his increasing power (and disliking his religion?), tried to drive him out by filling up his wells; but he dug new ones. One of those which he was permitted to use in peace, quite a distance from Gerar, he named Rehoboth (room, i. e., room enough at last). The promise to Abraham was repeated to Isaac at Beersheba, where he sunk a well as a memorial, and built an altar. The well remains, but the altar has disappeared. He made peace with Abimelech there also, and dug another well as a memorial (well of the oath). His first great grief was the undutiful conduct of his son Esau in marrying two young Canaanite women. His eyesight failed many years before his death; but he lived to enjoy the return to him at Hebron of Jacob, with his large family and great wealth in flocks and herds. He died at the age of 180, and was buried beside his father, in the cave of Machpelah, by his sons Esau and Jacob. His character is very severely criticised, especially for the denial of his wife at Gerar, and so exposing her to danger; and in allowing Jacob to enjoy the fruit of his deception. He was a gentle and dutiful son, and a faithful and constant husband of one wife.

INK BOTTLE.

ISĀ'IAH (Jah is helper). See HISTORY OF THE BOOKS.

ISCAH (she looks forth). Niece of Abraham, daughter of Haran, and sister of Milcah and Lot. A Jewish tradition identifies her with Sarah. Abraham said she was the daughter of his father, but not of his mother (Gen. xx. 12). She might have been a grandchild, or any degree of descent (see DAUGHTER.)

ISH'BAH (praising). In the line of Judah, father of Eshtemoa (1 Chr. iv. 17).

ISH'BAK (leaving). Son of Abraham and Keturah (Gen. xxv. 2), progenitor of a tribe in N. Arabia, called Sabak or Sebak, an extensive and fertile tract in Nejed, inhabited by the Beni Temeem. Shobek is the name of a ruined castle on a hill 12 ms. N. of Petra, which was a stronghold of the Crusaders, and called by them Mons Regalis.

ISH'BIBENOB (his seat at Nob). Son of Rapha, a Philistine giant, killed by Abishai (2 Sam. xxi. 16).

ISHBO'SHETH (of shame). Youngest of Saul's 4 sons, and his legal successor. His name was originally Esh'baal. He was 40 years old when he began to reign, and reigned two years at Mahanaim, while Abner was contending with David's generals (2 Sam. iii. 10). He fell a victim to revenge for some crime of his father, but David punished the murderers.

ISH'I (saving). 1. A descendant of Judah, son of Appaim (1 Chr. ii. 31).—2. Son of Zoheth (iv. 20).—3. Head of a family of Simeon (iv. 42).—4. A chief of Manasseh E. of Jordan (v. 24).

ISH'I (my husband), (Hos. ii. 16). Symbolical name.

ISHI'AH (whom Jah lends). The last one of Izrahiah's five sons, a chief in David's time (1 Chr. vii. 3).

ISHI'JAH. ISHIAH. One of the sons of Harim (Ezr. x. 31).

ISH'MA (waste). A descendant of Etam (1 Chr. iv. 3), in the line of Judah.

ISH'MAEL (whom God hears). Son of Abraham and Hagar (Gen. xvi. 15, 16). First-born of the patriarch. Born at Mamre, but was sent into the wilderness south of Beersheba, Paran, when he was 16 years old. He had a wife from Egypt (xxi. 21), who was mother of his 12 sons, besides a daughter. Esau married his daughter. His sons were Nebajoth, Kedar, Abdeel, Mibsam, Mishma, Dumah, Massa, Hadar, Tema, Jetur, Naphish, and Kedema. The Arabic historians divide the Arabs into two races: 1. Pure Arabs, descendants of Joktan; and 2. Mixed Arabs, descendants of Ishmael. Like the sons of Isaac his brother, or rather Jacob, Ishmael's sons were founders of tribes, some of which are known in history by their names; and "they dwelt from Havilah unto Shur that is before Egypt" (Gen. xxv. 18). Their language is spoken all over Arabia, with very few exceptions, and is the same in all rules and idioms now as in most ancient times; and the poetical, or rhyming, and the current language, are one and the same, with a different arrangement of words only. The prophesy, "He shall be a wild ass of a man, his hand against every man, and every man's hand against him," is now and ever has been true; and also the other saying, Ishmael "shall dwell in the presence of all his brethren," for they have always been free. The desert is called in Arabic, Bedu, and the genuine Arab calls himself Bedawee (desert-man), Bedawin (desert-men). 4000 years have not changed their disposition, manners, habits, occupation, government, or dress.

ISHMĀI'AH (Jah hears). Son of Obadiah (1 Chr. xxvii. 19).

ISH'MEELITE (1 Chr. ii. 17), and Ishmelites (Gen. xxxvii. 25, 27, 28). Descendants of Ishmael.

I'SHOD (man of glory). Son of Hammoleketh (1 Chr. vii. 18).

ISH'PAN (bald). A Benjamite (1 Chr. viii. 22).

ISH'TOB (2 Sam. x. 6, 8). A small kingdom on the east of Jordan, in Aram.

ISH'ŬAH (even). Son of Asher (Gen. xlvi. 17).

ISH'UĀI. (ISHUAH.) Son of Asher (1 Chr. vii. 30).

ISH'UI. (ISHUAI.) Son of Saul (1 Sam. xiv. 49), by Ahinoam.

ISLE (Heb. IYIM; Greek nesion, nesos, a habitable place). Dry land (Is. xlii. 15); islands, coasts of the sea, or land in the sea, which were far away, and to be reached by crossing the sea (Ps. lxxii. 10).

ISHMACHI'AH (Jah upholds). An overseer of offerings under King Hezekiah (2 Chr xxxi. 13).

ISHMAI'AH or ISMAIAH. A chief (1 Chr. xii. 4).

IS'PAH. ISHPAN. A Benjamite chief (1 Chr. viii. 16).

IS'RAEL (soldier of God). The name given to Jacob at the time he wrestled with the angel at Peniel.—2. It was also used as the name of the Hebrew nation.—3. The north kingdom, not including Judah.

ISRAEL, KINGDOM OF. The ten tribes which were divided to Jeroboam by the prophet Ahijah of Shiloh (1 K. xi. 31, 35), leaving Judah alone to the house of David; Benjamin, Simeon, and Dan joining Judah afterward. SHECHEM was the first capital (1 K. xii. 25); TIRZAH the second (xiv. 17); and SAMARIA the third. Jezreel was occasionally a royal residence. The holy cities were Dan (Paneas) and Bethel. The population was at one time over 3 millions, if the number in the armies is correct as given in 2 Chr. xiii. 3. The area of the whole country, in the time of Solomon, occupied by the twelve tribes, was 12,810 sq. ms., of which 9,375 belonged to Israel and 3,435 to Judah. New Hampshire has about 9,000 sq. ms. Ephraim and Judah had always been rivals, and were nearly matched in numbers from the first, and the two largest of the twelve. For three, or, perhaps, nearly four centuries, the ark was in the territory of Ephraim, at Shiloh, until the time of Eli. But when the theocracy was superseded by the kingdom, Saul, the king, was a Benjamite, and Solomon, the son of David, of Judah; but Jeroboam, the leader of the revolt, was an Ephraimite, and, before Solomon's death was accused of treason, and fled to Egypt. The burdensome taxes of Solomon's reign probably hastened, if it did not cause the revolt of the ten tribes; and the death of Solomon was the notice for Jeroboam's return, and the establishment of the new kingdom of Israel, B. C. 975. This was the most important event, and the greatest misfortune, since Joshua crossed the Jordan. Some of the mistakes which were fatal were: The driving out of the Levites from their possessions, for they carried with them their sacred character and powerful support of the king; the alliance with the kings of Egypt and Damascus; the marriage of Ahab with Jezebel, of Phœnicia. The want of a system of union among the tribes composing the kingdom, and the presence of a large number of slaves, were other elements of weakness. The Philistines took some towns; Damascus took its chances for plunder and revenge; Edom and Moab rescued themselves; and Assyria, after many visits to the once rich and prosperous country, finally carried away the gleanings of so many years of religious decline, moral debasement, national degradation, anarchy, bloodshed, and deportation.

IS'RAELITE. Descendant of ISRAEL. HEBREW. JEW (2 Sam. xvii. 25).

IS'SACHAR (hire), (Gen. xxx. 17), (Heb. ISASCAR). Ninth son of Jacob and fifth son of Leah. He is not mentioned again as a person—his name only, as the name of a tribe. In the order of march in the desert, Issachar's place was on the east of the tabernacle, with Judah and Zebulon. Only the tribes of Judah and Dan outnumbered them at the passage of the Jordan, Issachar having 64,300 fighting men. (For location, see map of the Twelve Tribes). Its location and boundaries are recorded in Josh. xix. 17–23. Its land was and is now the richest in Palestine. Esdraëlon, the plain (called Jezreel, the seed-plot of God, on account of its rich soil), Mt. Tabor, and Gilboa were in its border, and the river Kishon ran through it. Jacob blessed Issachar in the image of "a strong-boned he-ass, couching down between two hedge-rows," which is a picture of contented ease and quiet. When David took the census, near the close of his reign, Issachar had 87,000, of whom 36,000 were mercenary "bands." Shalmaneser carried the tribe captive to Assyria. It was not known as a tribe after the return. We are left to suppose that the tribe fell into idolatry, because there is nothing recorded in favor of its religious history.—2. The seventh son of Obed Edom (1 Chr. xxvi. 5).

ISSHĪ'AH (Jah lends). ISHIAH. JESIAH. 1. Descendant of Moses (1 Chr. xxiv. 21).—2. A Levite (xxiv. 25). JESIAH 2.

IS'SUE, RUNNING. The law for males is in Lev. xv. 1–15; that for females in verses 19–31. It is supposed that the disease intended in men (gonorrhœa) arose from over-use or impure connection; and that in woman, the natural monthly purification of nature.

IS'UAH. ISHUAH. Son of Asher (1 Chr. vii. 30). ISUI (Gen. xlvi. 17).

ĪTAL'IAN (from Italy), (Acts x. 1).

IT'ALY. In the time of Paul the whole peninsula south of the Alps was included under this name (Acts x. 1). The ITALIAN BAND were soldiers recruited in Italy. Rome was the capital of the Roman Empire. The church was planted in Italy very early, since the Epistle to the Romans was written only about 25 years after the crucifixion, when a large number of Jews must have been there. From that day to this it has been the seat of civil and religious power, with many fortunes of revolution and persecution, the church always profiting, in all ages, so far as increasing in influence and power.

ITCH (HERES). A disease inflicted on the Israelites as a punishment (Deut. xxviii. 27). MEDICINE.

I'THAI or ITH'AĪ. (ITTAI.) Son of Ribai (1 Chr. xi. 31).

ITH'AMAR. Youngest son of Aaron (Ex. vi. 23). After the death of Nadab and Abihu, he and Eleazar were appointed to their places in the priestly office (Ex. xxviii. 1). The high priesthood passed into Ithamar's line by Eli.

ITH'IEL (God with me). 1. Son of Jesaiah (Neh. xi. 7).—2. Ithiel and Ucal, to whom Agur delivered his lecture (Prov. xxxi. 1).

ITH'MAH (orphanage). One of David's guard (1 Chr. xi. 46).

ITH'NAN (given). A town in the south of Judah (Josh. xv. 23).

ITHRA. JETHER. An Israelite (2 Sam. xvii. 25). Father of AMASA.

ITHRAN. JETHER. 1. Son of DISHON (Gen. xxxi. 26).—2. A descendant of Asher (1 Chr. vii. 37).

ITH'REAM (residue of the people). Son of David (2 Sam. iii. 5; 1 Chr. iii. 3), born in Bethlehem.

ITH'RITE, THE. Descendant of Jether. Two of David's guard (2 Sam. xxiii. 38) were Ithrites.

IT'TAH KAZIN (people of a judge), (Josh. xix. 13). Boundary of Zebulon. Lost.

ITTAI, the Gittite. Native of Gath; a Philistine in David's army, in the revolution of Absalom; commander of the 600 who were with David in his wanderings. He seems to have had equal command afterwards with Joab and Abishai, at Mahanaim (2 Sam. xviii. 2). Tradition says Ittai took the crown from the head of the idol Milcom.—2. Son of Ribai, one of David's guard. Ithai in 1 Chr. xi.

ITURÆ'A (from Jetur, the son of Ishmael). (Gen. xxv. 15). N. E. of Palestine, along the base of Hermon (Luke iii. 1). Philip was "tetrarch of Iturœa and the region of Trachonitis." Now Jedur. It is table-land, with conical hills at intervals, well watered, rich soil, and excellent pasture. The rock is basalt, and the houses are built of it. Its ancient cities are deserted, but standing. Bedawins still pitch their tents there.

I'VAH (2 K. xviii. 34). Hit, on the Euphrates. Ahava of Ezra (viii. 15). The ancient city was dedicated to Iva, the god of air. Shalmaneser brought people from it to Samaria, who carried their gods with them, according to custom among all ancient people.

IVORY (SHEN, a tooth). The tusks of the elephant are called teeth, and also horns (Ez. xxvii.

15). Solomon made use of it (Ps. xlv. 8), and had a throne of ivory (1 K. v. 18), overlaid (inlaid) with gold. The tusk of the African elephant sometimes weighs 120 pounds, and measures 10 feet long. There are many beautiful relics of carved ivory that were found in the ruins of Nineveh, and from Egypt, of figures on boxes, and various toilet ornaments—works of art of a high order.

I'VY (Hederah helix). A creeping plant, sacred to Bacchus (2 Macc. vi. 7). It grows wild in Palestine.

IZ'EHAR. IZHAR. (Num. iii. 19).

IZ'EHARITES, THE. The Izharites (Num. iii. 27).

IZ'HAR (anointed with oil). Son of Kohath (Ex. vi. 18, 21; Num. iii. 19).

IZ'HARITES. Descendants of Izhar (1 Chr. xxiv. 22).

IZRAHI'AH (Jah brings forth). Son of Uzzi (1 Chr. vii. 3).

IZ'RAHITE, THE. Descendant of Zerahi (1 Chr. xxvii. 8).

IZ'RI. Descendant of Jezer. A Levite (1 Chr. xxv. 11—in verse 3, ZERI).

J

There is no distinction in the Hebrew between j and i. The proper sound is that of y when placed before a vowel, as jah, yäh; Jonah, yōnah.

JĀ'ĀKAN (intelligent). The Israelites encamped around the wells of the tribe "of the sons" (Bene) Jaakan (Deut. x. 6). Tayibeh (Rob).

JĀ'ĀKOBAH (1 Chr. iv. 36). JACOB. Simeonite chief.

JĀ'ĀLA (wild goat). Sons of his were among the returned from captivity (Neh. vii. 58).

JĀ'ALAH (Ezra ii. 56) JAALA. Jeelin in Esdras.

JĀ'ALAM (God hides). Son of Aholibamah, wife of Esau (Gen. xxxvi. 5). and a sheikh in Edom. He was a phylarch (duke in Genesis).

JĀ'ANAI (answers). Chief in Gad (1 Chr. v. 12).

JĀ'ARE-ORE'GIM (Jair, the weaver?). The Targum says. "And David, the son of Jesse, weaver of the veils of the house of the sanctuary, who was of Bethlehem, slew Goliath the Gittite." In 1 Chr. xx. 5, the account is "Elhanan, the son of Jair, slew Lahmi, the brother of Goliath," etc. JAIR.

JĀ'ASAU (made by Jah). A son of Bani, who had to put away his Gentile wife (Ezr. x. 37).

JĀ'ASIEL (made by El). Judge in Benjamin in David's time (1 Chr. xxvii. 21).

JĀAZANĪ'AH (Jah hears), (Heb. YA'AZANYA'HU) Captain under Johanan (2 K. xxv. 3). Son of Hoshaiah (xlii. 1), the Maachathite (Jer. xl. 8).—2. Son of Shaphan (Ez. viii. 11), leader of seventy elders, seen by Ezekiel worshiping idols.—3. Son of Azur, a chief, subject of Ezekiel's prophesy (Ez. xi. 1).—4. A Rechabite (Jer. xxxv. 3).

JĀ'AZER (Jah helps) Amorite town, E. of Jordan in Gilead (Num. xxxii. 1). Rebuilt by Gad, and assigned to the Levites (Merarites, v. 35). Famous for its vineyards (Is. xvi. 8, 9). The land of Jazer; Seir, west of Ammon, north of Heshbon.

JĀAZĪ'AH (Jah consoles). 3d son of Merari, the Levite (1 Chr. xxiv. 26).

LOCUST.

JĀĀ'ZĪEL (El consoles). Musician in David's time (1 Chr. xv. 18). AZIEL.

JĀ'BAL (stream). Son of Lamech, "father" of dwellers in tents and graziers (Gen. iv. 20).

JAB'BOK (flowing). River in Gilead, falling into the Jordan about mid-way between the Sea of Tiberias and the Dead Sea (Josh. xii. 2). The border of the Ammon was strong (Num. xxi. 24), the river running in a deep defile, deep, narrow and wild, fringed by willows, cane, and oleanders, evergreen oak, pine and arbutus. Wady Zurka. Some think it was the Hieromax, Wady Yarmuk.

JĀ'BESH (dry). 1. Father of Shallum, 15th king of Israel (2 K. xv. 10).—2. Short form of JĀ'BESH GIL'EAD. Jabeth, in Gilead, the largest city in the half-tribe of Manasseh, 6 miles from Pella, now called Ed Deir, on Wady Yabis. It did not send its contingent against Benjamin (Judg. xxi. 8), and was punished by the destruction of all its people but 400 young women, who were given to the Benjamites for wives. Nahash attacked it (1 Sam. xi.), but Saul came to the rescue. When the bodies of Saul and his sons hung on the walls of Bethshan, the valiant men of Jabesh Gilead made a raid at night and carried them off, and buried them honorably (1 Sam. xxxi. 11–13).

JĀ'BEZ (causes sorrow). 1. Town in Judah, where the Kenite scribes resided (1 Chr. ii. 55).—2. In the minute genealogy of Judah (iv. 9, 10) Jabez was more honorable than his brethren, who are not recorded.

JĀ BIN (intelligent). King of N. Canaan, at Hazor, who headed a most powerful army against Joshua (xi. 1–4), and was surprised and defeated near the waters of Merom (7). Joshua afterwards burnt Jabin's city.—2. King of Hazor, in the time of the Judges, who lived in the same city of Hazor (rebuilt), raised an army against Israel, and was defeated, etc. Some have thought that the two accounts were of one event, or of two victories over one Jabin: one by Joshua and another by Barak, but it is more probable that there were two kings of that name, as recorded, and there were 150 years between the two kings.

JAB'NEEL (El builds). In Judah, near the sea, north (Josh. xv. 11), held at one time by the Philistines (2 Chr. xxvi. 6), who were driven out by Uzziah. Jamnia, in 1 Macc. iv. 15, and a strong place. Now called Yebna or Ibna, on a little hill, near the Rubin river, 11 miles S. of Joppa, where the Crusaders built the castle of Ibelin, and a church, whose ruins are still visible.—2. In Naphtali. Lost. Josephus mentions Iamnith, in Upper Galilee.

JAB'NEH. JABNEEL.

JĀ'CHAN (afflicted). A chief in Gad (1 Chr. v. 13).

JĀ'CHAN (he will establish). Name of one of the pillars in the porch of Solomon's temple (1 K. vii. 21).

JĀ'CHIN. 1. 4th son of Simeon (Gen. xlvi. 10). Jachinites (Num. xxvi. 12).—2. Head of the 21st course of priests (1 Chr. ix. 10); some of this course returned from captivity (Neh. xi. 10).

JĀ'CHINITES. Family founded by Jachin.

JĀ'CINTH (Gr. yacinth). 1. A dark purple flower.—2. PRECIOUS STONES.

JĀ'COB (supplanter). Esau and Jacob were twins, sons of Rebekah, wife of Isaac, born B. C. 1836, at the well Lahai-roi. Jacob was the favorite of his mother, and was a shepherd. He bought the birthright of his elder brother Esau (at an unfair price in his brother's distress) and got the patriarchal blessing from his father by a stratagem, in which he was aided by his mother. This blessing was material only, and did not include the spiritual promises. His quiet life ended when, at the age of 78 he was obliged to leave home, and was sent to Padan-Aram to find a wife among his mother's relatives. On the way there he had the dream of the ladder reaching from earth to heaven, at Bethel. Isaac had repeated his blessing when he left home, with the addition of the spiritual promises made to Abraham, and they were confirmed in the dream at Bethel. (Jacob seems to have thought only of a local God who lived at Bethel, with whom he was disposed to make a bargain for service on conditions). The beautiful incident of the meeting of Jacob with Rebekah at the well exhibits the pure and simple habits of the time, and the courtesy and kindness so native to those who follow the shepherd's life. Laban drove a very hard and shrewd bargain with Jacob, compelling him to serve 14 years for Rachel and marry Leah besides, but this was repaid by Jacob in his sharp practice in making himself rich in "much cattle," by skilful management. At the age of nearly 100 he returned to Canaan, and on the way his name was changed from Jacob to Israel (God's soldier) at Peniel, where he met his brother Esau, who was then a kind of Bedawin wanderer, such as now roam over the same district, although Esau appeared to be much the better man of the two.

The images (gods) that Rachel stole from her father's house, were small figures of certain designs, (TERAPHIM), such as are often found buried among the ruins in Palestine, and were used in Pagan worship. The value put on them by Laban shows how little real knowledge he had of the true God. Jacob stayed awhile at Shechem, where he buried under a sacred tree the stolen images; and also at Bethel where he built an altar. While on the way to Hebron, where his father was, his son Benjamin was born, and the mother, Rachel, died and was buried near Bethlehem, where a tomb preserves her memory to this day.

Esau and Jacob met again at Hebron, when they buried their father Isaac.

Soon after this Joseph was sold into Egypt.

Jacob was living at Hebron with his eleven sons, when a famine brought about the migration to Egypt (see JOSEPH), where he was assigned a home in the pasture land of Goshen, by the Pharaoh, and where he died, aged 130 (147). His body was borne to the cave of Machpelah, and laid in the tomb with those of Abraham, Sarah and Isaac. The blessing that Jacob gave his sons was a proof that his faith in God's promise was strong—had increased—and that his idea of the true God had become clearer and more elevated. It is full of fine thoughts, poetic language, and abounds in the most beautiful images.

JACOB'S WELL. Is in a low spur of Mt. Gerizim, at the mouth of the valley of Shechem. "Formerly there was a square hole opening into a carefully built vaulted chamber, 10 ft. sq., in the floor of which was the true mouth of the well. Now a part of the vault has fallen in, and completely covered up the mouth, so that it looks like a shallow pit." The well is 9 feet diameter, circular, cut through limestone rock nearly 100 feet deep. It sometimes has water in it, but is often quite dry. There was a small church over it in the 4th century, and to the south-west there are a few shapeless ruins still left.

JĀ'DA (skilful). Son of Onam by Atarah (1 Chr. ii. 28).

JĀ'DAU. IDDO. A son of Nebo, who married a Gentile (Ezr. x. 43).

JAD'DUA (known). 1. A layman, who signed the covenant with Nehemiah (x. 21).—2. Son(?) and successor of Jonathan, high-priest, the last whose name is recorded in the O. T. Josephus relates of him a ceremonious reception of Alexander (Ant. xi. 8, § 7).

JĀ'DON (judge). The Meronothite who assisted in repairing the wall of Jerusalem (Neh. iii. 7).—2. A man of God, from Judah, who withstood Jeroboam at Bethel, as said by Josephus, in error for Iddo (2 Chr. ix. 29).

JĀ'EL (climber, Ibex). Wife of Heber (of the family of Hobab), the Kenite, a sheikh of a Bedawin tribe, who had pitched his tent under an oak, called on that account "oak of the wanderers" (plain of Zaanaim in Judg. iv. 11), near Kedesh-Naphtali (HEBER, ELON). When his army was routed, Sisera fled in another direction, away from the flying host, and sought safety in the woman's private tent, where he would have been safe, under Jael's cloak, if the woman herself had not betrayed him, which she did do, killing him with one of the tent-pins. God's judgment on Sisera was celebrated in the song of Deborah, but not Jael's treacherous and violent method.—2. A judge of Israel (Judg. v. 6).

JĀ'GUR (lodging-place). Town in the south of Judah (Josh. xv. 21). KINAH.

JĀH (yāh). The shorter form of Jehovah. Used in forming such names as Eli-jah, Isa-jah, Jerem-jah (Jeremiah). GOD (German Gott). The Hebrew names are: 1. EL, might, as EL-SHADDAI, God almighty (Gen. xiv.); EL-ELOHIM, God mightier than all gods, God of gods; EL-BETH-EL, the place of the mighty God; also in compounds, as AREZE-EL, the cedars of God, that is tall and strong; and peculiarly in poetry.—2. ELOAH, strong; ELOHIM, the plural. ELOAH is used only in poetry, and ELOHIM in both poetry and prose. The plural is used in Hebrew to enlarge and intensify the idea expressed by the singular. ELOHIM is not the gods, but is the strongest of all strong beings, the fullness of divine perfections, the sum of all the powers of all imaginable gods. There is nothing in this name either for against the idea of a trinity. That belongs to the New Testament age. The unity of God was guarded with the utmost jealousy against idolatrous polytheists (Deut. vi. 4, xxxii. 39; Is. xliv. 6). The word was often used for the heathen gods and other ideas of divinity (Ps. viii. 6, xcvii. 7), as angels; and also to the rulers and judges of Israel (Ex. xxii. 9, 28), and God (Elohim) is said to judge among the rulers (Elohim in Ps. lxxxii. 1). All true sons of Israel were called sons of God (Elohim, John x. 35). The Cainites claimed to be "sons of God" in distinction from the Sethites, who took the more humble name of "sons of Adam," or "sons of the Man" (Gen. vi. 4). The peculiar name of God in relation to the covenant, is—3. JEHOVAH; but in reading the Scriptures the Jews always pronounced the word ADONAI, which is Lord. The vowel points now in use were not invented for centuries after the Hebrew ceased to be a living language, so that the true pronounciation of the name Jehovah was lost, and the word was written YHVH, and pronounced Adonai or Elohim. The vowel points of Adonai (ADONAI) were placed in Jehovah (JEHOVAH), but this is not found in the old copies, and not older than about 1500 A. D. Diodorus Siculus gives the Greek IAO for the Hebrew JHVH. The meaning of Jehovah is underived existence, HE IS, or I AM BECAUSE I AM, the God of Abraham, of grace, and truth, and love; self-existence, eternity. Elohim is God in nature, Jehovah is God in grace. (The temple of Isis, at Sais, had this inscription: "I am all that has been, that is, and that will be," meaning Isis, the universal mother.) The word Jehovah is supposed to mean YAHU, joy; VAH, pain—the God of good and evil. See HISTORY, page xiv. In Greek, the word is—4. THEOS, any deity, idol, or the true God (Matt. i. 23), and Satan (God of this world).—5. KURIOS, Lord in Matt. i. 20; and in the Septuagint as the translation of Jehovah; also of a man, a lord.

JĀ'HATH (union). 1. Son of Libni (1 Chr. vi. 20). Ancestor of Asaph.—2. Head of a family in the line of Gershom (1 Chr. xxiii. 10).—3. In the line of Judah (1 Chr. iv. 2).—4. A Levite, son of Shelomoth (xxiv. 2).—5. Merarite Levite in Josiah's time (xxxiv. 12); an overseer of repairs in the temple.

JĀ'HAZ. JAHA'ZA (Josh. xiii. 18). JAHA'ZAH. JAH'ZAH (Num. xxi. 23). A place where the battle was fought between the Israelites and Sihon, king of the Amorites. Jeremiah mentions it (xlviii. 21) as in Moab. Not yet identified.

JAHĀZI'AH (seen by Jah). Son of Tikvah, and assistant to Ezra (x. 15). Ezechias in Esdras.

JAHĂ'ZIEL (seen by El, that is, made strong). 1. Deserted Saul for David at Ziklag (1 Chr. xii. 4).—2. Priest in David's time, who blew the trumpet at ceremonials (1 Chr. xvi. 6).—3. 3d son of Hebron a Levite. The family is mentioned in David's time (1 Chr. xxiii. 19).—4. Levite of the sons of Asaph who prophesied the destruction of the army that was coming to attack Jerusalem (2 Chr. xx. 14).—5. A son of Jehaziel returned from captivity as chief of the Bene-Shecariah (Ezr. viii. 5). Zattu (for Shecariah) in 1 Esdras viii. 32 (Bene Zathoe). JEZELUS.

JAH'DAI (led by Jah). In Caleb's line, father of 6 sons (1 Chr. ii. 47).

JAH'DIEL (made joyful by El). Chief in Manasseh, E. of Jordan (1 Chr. v. 24).

JAH'DO (united). Son of Buz, a Gadite (1 Chr. v. 14).

JAH'LEĔL (hope in El). 3d son of Zebulon (Gen. xlvi. 14). JAHLEELITES (Num. xxvi. 26).

JAH'MAI (Jah guards). Chief in the house of Tola, Issachar (1 Chr. vii. 2).

JAH'ZAH (threshing-floor). JAHAZ (1 Chr. vi. 78).

JAH'ZEĔL (El divides). 1st son of Naphtali (Gen. xlvi. 24). Jahzeelites (Num. xxvi. 48). Jahziel in 1 Chr. vii. 13. JAHZEEL.

JAH'ZERAH (led back by Jah). Priest of the family of Immer (1 Chr. ix. 12).

JĀ'IR (splendid). 1. Descended from both Judah and Manasseh. Leader in the conquest of Bashan, B. C. 1451. See HAVOTH-JAIR.—2. 8th judge of Israel, B. C. 1210, a Gileadite. Buried in Camon.—3. 2 Sam. xxi. 19.

WILLOW BOAT

JAIRITE, IRA, THE (2 Sam. xx. 26). (Pasha?)

JAI'RUS (Gr. for the Heb. JAIR). Ruler in a synagogue in Galilee, whose daughter Jesus restored to life and health (Luke viii. 14).

JĀ'KAN. JAAKAN. Akan.

JĀ'KEH (pious). Father of Agur (Prov. xxx. 1). Supposed by some to be a name for David, father of Solomon, but without evidence.

JĀ'KIM (lifted by Jah). Chief of the 12th course of priests in David's reign (1 Chr. xxiv. 12). JACHIN?—2. One of the Bene Shimhi (1 Chr. viii. 19).

JĀ'LON (abiding). A son of Ezra, in the line of Judah (1 Chr. iv. 17).

JAM'BRI, children of (i. e. some of the tribe) attacked the Maccabees, and suffered reprisals (1 Macc. ix. 36). Amorites?

JAMES. Three persons are mentioned by this name in the N. T. The original form of the name in Hebrew is Jacob, and is so called now by the church in the East; St. Jacob (Mar Yacoob). The name has passed through several changes, through many languages. It was in Greek, Iakobos; Latin, Jacobus; Italian, Iacomo, or Giacomo, and Jacopo; Spanish, Iago (Diego), and Xayme, or Jayme (hayme); French, Jacques, and Jame, which is in English James. (See Robertson's Becket, p. 139).

The modern derivatives are framed on the original form, as Jacobin, and Jacobite.

1. JAMES, THE SON OF ZEBEDEE. He first appears as a fisherman, A. D. 27, when he, with his brother John, was called by Jesus to be his disciple (Mark i. 20). His father owned a boat (ship) and employed help. On another occasion he, his brother John, with Simon and Andrew, were directed by Jesus, and caught a very large number of fish at one haul, which was explained by the Great Teacher to mean that they all should become successful fishers of men. James was numbered with the 12, among the first 4. He was always selected for any special duty. He was present at the raising of Jairus' daughter (Mark i. 29); one of the three on the Mt. of Transfiguration (Matt. xviii. 1); one of the 4 who heard the sermon on the last days (Mark xiii. 3); and one of 3 in Gethsemane (Matt. xxvi. 37). He joined his brother John in the request that fire should be called down on the Samaritans (Luke ix. 54); and in the ambitious request, with their mother, to sit nearest to Christ in his kingdom (Matt. xx. 20). These requests were refused with indignation by Jesus, and they were named Boanerges (Mark ii. 17). They were at the Feast of Pentecost. He was a man of very resolute purpose and determined action, and was given a high position among the apostles (Acts xii. 2); and he is the only one of the 12 whose death is recorded, which took place about 10 years after the crucifixion.

2. JAMES THE LORD'S BROTHER. The children of Joseph and Mary were Jesus, James, Joses, Jude (Judas), Simon, and three daughters whose names are not given (Matt. xiii. 55, 56; Gal. i. 19, ii. 9, 12). His brethren did not believe in Jesus as the Christ at the first (John vii. 5), and some of them not until a few days before the Day of Pentecost (1 Cor. xv. 7). James occupied a prominent position among the apostles, and was surnamed "the Just." James and Peter seem to have been in authority on equal terms when Paul was admitted to the fellowship of the apostles on the word of Barnabas (Acts ix. 27; Gal. i. 18), and after that time he acts as the president of the council in Jerusalem (Acts xii. 17, xv. 13), whose decrees he delivered formally, a position recognized and recorded by Paul (Gal. ii. 9), and honored by a formal visit of ceremony in the presence of all the presbyters (Acts xxi. 18). He is believed to have been appointed Bishop of Jerusalem by Jesus in a vision, as is reported by Epiphanius and others of the early historians of the Church, only that Eusebius says the appointment was by the apostles. Hegesippus, a Jewish disciple in the 2d century, gives the most minute and interesting account, in which he is described as the brother of Jesus, holy from the womb, drinking neither wine nor spirits, nor eating animal food, and wearing both his hair and whiskers without shaving (but with trimming), and he avoided the use of perfumes and ceremonious bathing, and wore only linen clothes. He was a very constant attendant on the services in the temple, and prayed "on his knees" for the salvation of the people, so that he was looked upon as the "bulwark of the church," and it is said that "all who became believers believed through James." This same authority relates that he was thrown from the gable of the temple to the ground, and then stoned to death, shortly before the siege of Jerusalem. See the HISTORY for the EPISTLE OF JAMES. The question of the relation of James to Jesus is referred to the article MARY.

3. JAMES THE SON OF ALPHÆUS (Clopas), and Mary (John xix. 25), one of the apostles (Matt. x. 3; Mark iii. 18, etc.), (Matt. xxvii. 56; Mark xv. 40), and is also called James the Less. He had a brother named Joses, and a sister Salome. The occurrence of the same name in the mother and children of two families does not argue a relation, rather the contrary, and it is not likely that these were relatives of Jesus. See MARY.

JĀ'MIN (right hand). Son of Simeon, founder of the Jaminites (Gen. xlvi. 10).—2. Son of Ram of Hezron in Judah (1 Chr. ii. 27).—3. Reader under Ezra (Neh. viii. 7).

JAM'LECH (Jah makes the king). Chief in Simeon in the time of Hezekiah (1 Chr. iv. 34, 41).

JAM'NIA for JABNEEL in the Apocrypha.

JANGLING (Gr. mataiologia). Babbling, idle talk. "Jangling is whan a man spekith to moche biforn folk, and clappith as a mille, and taketh no keep what he saith." (Chaucer. Parson's Tale).

JAN'NA. Father of Melechi in the line of Jesus. JOHN?

JAN'NES and JAM'BRES. The two Egyptian magicians who imitated Moses. Their names were given by Paul only (2 Tim. iii. 8, 9). The origin of the names is obscure. Jannes may be Greek for the Egyptian AAN (Ian), two kings having that name (meaning valley), one of which lived before Joseph. It is supposed that Paul found the names in some history (or tradition), now lost.

JANŌ'AH (quiet). In Naphtali, taken by Tiglath-Pileser (2 K. xv. 29). Janohah in Eusebius and Jerome.

JANŌ'HAH (into rest). On the N. boundary of Egypt (12 ms. E. of Neapolis—Eusebius). YANUN is in that locality (Van de Velde, ii. 303), in a valley which slopes toward the Jordan, a small village among extensive ancient ruins. Khirbet Yanun, N. E. of Yanun, may be the more ancient (Rob. 297).

JĀ'NUM (slumber). Judah in the mts., near Hebron (Josh. xv. 53). Jā'nus.

JĀ'PHETH (extent). Second son of Noah (Gen. x. 2, 6). YAPHAH (fair) may be the root-wood, in allusion to the light complexion of the people of the Japhetic races who occupied the Isles of Greece (shores and islands), coasts of the Great Sea, and Asia Minor, Asia and Europe.

JAPHĪ'A (fair). Zebulon's boundary ran from Daberath to Japhia, and Gath-hepher (Josh. xix. 12). YAFA is two miles S. of Nazareth. A tradition says Zebedee was born here, and therefore the Latins call it San Giacomo (St. James).

JAPHĪ'A (shining). 1. King of Lachish (Josh. x. 3).—2. Son of David born in Jerusalem. Nephia in the Peshito. See DAVID.

JAPH'LET. In the line of Asher, through Beriah (1 Chr. vii. 32).

JAPH'LETI. Boundary of the Japhletite on the S. of Ephraim (Josh. xvi. 3). Probably an ancient Canaanite tribe.

JĀ'PHO (beauty). JOPPA. (Josh. xix. 46).

JĀ'RAH (honey). Son of Micah (1 Chr. ix. 42). Jehoadah in ch. viii. 36.

JĀ'REB (hostile). A king of Assyria (Hos. v. 13; x. 6). The title of "avenger" (YAREB), was assumed by him, as "defender of the faith" was by Henry VIII.

JĀ'RED (low ground). A patriarch, son of Mā-hā'lal'ēel, father of Enoch (Gen. v. 15).

JĀRESĪ'AH (Jah nourishes). Chief in Benjamin (1 Chr. viii. 27).

JAR'HA. Egyptian servant of Sheshan, husband of his daughter Ahlai (1 Chr. ii. 34).

JĀ'RIB (adhering). 1. Jachin in Gen. xlvi.; Ex. vi.; Num. xxvi.—2. Chief with Ezra (Ezr. viii. 16).—3. A priest, son of Jozadak (x. 18).—4. Joarib.

JAR'MUTH (hill). In the Shefelah near Socoh (Josh. xv. 35). Its king, Piram, was routed (with the 5 kings) at Beth-horon by Joshua (Josh. x. 3, 25). Yarmuth, about 9 miles N. E. of Beit Jibrin.—2. City in Issa. (Josh. xix. 17). Remeth in verse 21, and in 1 Chr. vi. 73, Ramoth.

JARŌ'AH (moon). Chief in Gad (1 Chr. v. 14).

JĀ'SHEN (sleeping). Sons of J. were in David's guard (2 Sam. xxiii. 32). Sons of Hashem in 1 Chr. xi. 34.

JĀ'SHER, THE BOOK OF (book of the upright). A book of heroic poetry and history mentioned in two places in the O. T. (Josh. x. 13, and 2 Sam. i. 18), and probably a book of songs and eulogies of distinguished men in Israel. The Vulgate has "the book of the just one;" the Septuagint, "the book of the upright one;" the Syriac, "the book of praises," or "psalms." There is an English forgery of 1751 (Bristol, 1829). The original was probably published first in the time of Joshua, and again in David's reign with additions. A scheme was started for gathering the supposed fragments of this work from the various books of the O. T. The supposed plan of the work is that it was written to supply a popular demand in Solomon's time, and its object was to show that God made man upright, but carnal wisdom led him away from the law (spiritual wisdom), when the Hebrews were chosen to keep the law; David was made (perpetual) king for his religious integrity. The compiler named is the prophet Nathan, and it contained the pith, or marrow of the religious system of the Hebrews. This is only a conjecture.

ORANGEE.

JASHŌ'BEAM (return). Son of Zabdiel (1 Chr. xxvii. 2), a Korhite (xii. 6), or a Hachmonite (xi. 11). He slew 800 at one time (2 Sam. xxiii. 8). Chief in David's guard, over the 1st monthly course of 24,000 men.

JĀ'SHUB (who returns). 1. 3d son of Issachar (1 Chr. vii. 1). Job in Gen. xlvi.—2. son of Bani (Ezr. x. 29).

JASH'UBI-LĒ'HEM (returns to bread). Son of Judah by Bathshua (1 Chr. iv. 22). It may also be the name of a place—Chozeba, Chezib, or Achzib. The Targum (or Chronicles) says Chozeba is Elimelech; Joash and Saraph are Mahlon and Chilion, who had the dominion in Moab from marrying the two girls; Jashubi-Lehem is Noomi and Ruth who returned (jashub, return) to Beth-lehem (lehem, bread), after the famine. A poem derived from the book of Ruth.

JĀ'SHUBITES. Family of Jashub (Num. xxvi. 24).

JĀ'SIEL (made by El). One of David's guard (1 Chr. xi. 47). A Mesobaite.

JĀ'SON. Greek form of the name Jesus; Hebrew, Joshua.—1. Son of Eleazer, sent by Judas Macc. to treat with the Romans, B. C. 161 (1 Macc. viii. 17).—2. Father of Antipater, an envoy to Rome (1 Macc. xii. 16), perhaps the same as No. 1.—3. Of Cyrene, a Jewish author of "Five Books of the War of Jewish Liberation," from which the 2d book of Maccabees was compiled. (See MACCABEES in the HISTORY).—4. Jason the high-priest, 2d son of Simon 2, and brother of Onias 3. He got his office by fraud, and attempted to Hellenize the Jews by building a gymnasium on the Greek model in Jerusalem, which even the priests attended to the neglect of their duties (2 Macc. iv. 9), and by sending a deputation to the games in honor of Hercules at Tyre. Menelaus supplanted him by fraud and a bribe.—5. The Thessalonian who entertained Paul and Silas, for which the Jewish mob attacked him (Acts xvii. 5). He was a companion of Paul (Rom. xvi. 21). SECUNDUS? (Acts xx. 4).

JAS'PER (YASHEFEH). PRECIOUS STONES.

JATH'NIEL (whom El gives). Door-keeper in the temple (1 Chr. xxvi. 2). Of the family of Meshelemiah.

JAT'TIR (eminent). Judah in the mts. (Josh. xv. 48). David sent a part of the spoils of Ziklag to this place (1 Sam. xxx. 27). 12 ms. S. of Hebron is Attir, in ruins, on a hill.

JA'VAN. 4th son of Japheth, father (settler) of Elisha, Tarshish, Kittim, and Dodanim. The Hebrew name of Greece. In the Cuneatic it is Yanun. Homer says that early settlers of Greece were Iaonas (Iliad xiii. 685).—2. The Javan of Ez. xxvii. 19 is an error for UZAL in Arabia (Yemen).

JĀ'ZER. JAAZER.

JĀ'ZIZ (shining). A Hagarite shepherd in David's employ (1 Chr. xxvii. 31). Perhaps stationed in the country of his ancestors, east of Jordan (verses 19–22).

JĒ'ARIM, MOUNT. Chesalon (Kesîu), is on a steep ridge, between Wady Ghurab and Wady Ismail, 7. ms W. of Jerusalem.

JĒAT'ERAI (following one). Son of Zerah, a Levite (1 Chr. vi. 21). Ethni?

JEBERECHĪ'AH (Jah blesses). Father of Zechariah, in Ahaz's time (Is. viii. 2). Berechia?

JĒ'BUS (trodden down). JERUSALEM. JEBUSI.

JEB'USITE. Third son of Canaan (Gen. x. 16). First mentioned in the account of the spies (Num. xiii. 29). Jabin's army contained men from the Amorites, Hittites, Perizzites and Jebusites (Josh. xi. 3). The king was killed at Bethhoron (x. 1, 5, xii. 10); a part of it was taken and burned by Judah (Judg. i. 21), but the citadel held out for 300 years, until David's time (2 Sam. v. 6). Araunah, the Jebusite, is made immortal by his dealing with David. The remnant of the tribe was made tributary to Solomon (1 K. ix. 20), and are heard of as late as the captivity (Ezr. ix. 1).

JĒCAMĪ'AH (Jah assembles the people). Son of Neri, of the line of Nathan and of Jesus (Luke iii. 27).

JECHOLĪ'AH (Jah is mighty). Wife of Amaziah, king of Judah (2 K. xv. 2). Jecoliah in Chr. She was a native of Jerusalem.

JECHONI'AS. Greek form of Jechonī'ah.

JECONI'AH (Jah builds). Jehoiachin, the last but one of the kings of Judah.

JEDA'IAH (Jah knows). Head of the 2d course of priests (1 Chr. xxiv. 7). Some of this course returned from captivity (Ezr. ii. 36), and there were two priestly families (Neh. xii. 6, etc.).—2. A priest in the time of Joshua, the high-priest (Zech. vi. 10).

SHEKEL.

JEDA'IAH (Jah's praise). The Hebrew differs in these two names, but it is not easy to show the difference in English letters. 1. Ancestor of Ziza, of Simeon (1 Chr. iv. 37).—2. Son of Harumaph, who assisted in rebuilding the wall (Neh. iii. 10).

JEDĪ'AEL (El knows). Chief in Benjamin (1 Chr. vii. 6), whose family, with its branches, numbered 17,200 fighting men in David's time.—2. Son of Meshelemiah, a Levite, a doorkeeper in the temple (1 Chr. xxvi.).—3. Son of Shimri, of David's guard (1 Chr. xii. 45).—4. A "head" of 1000, who joined David near Ziklag (1 Chr. xii. 20).

JEDĪ'DAH (only one). Queen of Amon, mother of Josiah (2 K. xxii. 1). She was a native of Bozkath.

JEDIDĪ'AH (Jah's darling). The name given to Solomon by the prophet Nathan. David named him Shelomoh, peaceful.

JEDŪ'THUN (praising). One of the conductors of the temple music in the time of David (1 Chr. xv. 17; xxiii. 6). The three were ETHAN, the son of Kushaiah, the Merarite; HEMAN, the Kohathite; and ASAPH, the Gershonite. He played on cymbals in the procession, when the ark was brought to Zion, but he was appointed to duty at Gibeon (Ps. cl. 5). His name is in the titles of several psalms (xxxix.; lxii.; lxxvii.), as choir leader.

JĒ'ĒZER (Num. xxvi. 20). ABIEZER. JEEZERITES.

JĒ'GAR-SAHADŪ'THA (witness heap). Name in Aramaic of the pillar, or heap of stones set up by Laban and Jacob. There are two accounts of the same heap (Gen. xxxi. 47), Jacob naming it Galēēd.

JEHALĒ'LĒEL (who praises El). Four sons of his are named in Judah's line (1 Chr. iv. 16).

JEHALE'LEEL (who praises El). Father of Azariah who assisted in restoring the temple in Hezekiah's time (2 Chr. xxix. 12).

JEHDĒ'IAH (Jah makes joyful). Descendant of Gershom, in David's time (1 Chr. xxiv. 20). Shubael was head of the house in xxvi. 24.—2. A Meronothite who took care of David's she-asses (xxvii. 30).

JEHEZ'EKEL (El makes strong). Priest in charge of the 20th course (1 Chr. xxiv. 16).

JEHĪ'AH (Jah lives). Door-keeper with Obed-edom for the ark (1 Chr. xv. 24).

JEHĪ'EL (El lives). 1. A Levite assistant in the temple (1 Chr. xv. 18).—2. Son of Jehoshaphat (2 Chr. xxi. 2).—3. Ruler in the temple in Josiah's time (xxxv. 8).—4. Levite, head of Laadan's sons (1 Chr. xxiii. 8).—5. Son of Hachmoni, in David's guard (xxvii. 32). Jerome says Jehiel was David's son Chileab (Daniel), and Achamoni David himself.—6. Levite in the time of Hezekiah (2 Chr. xxix. 14).—7. A Levite and an overseer of the sacrifices (xxxi. 13).—8. Father of Obadiah, who returned from captivity at the head of 218 sons of Joab (Ezr. viii. 9).—9. Father of Shekaniah, who assisted Ezra (x. 2).—10. Another of the same family who had to part with his Gentile wife (Ezr. x. 26). —11. A priest of the sons of Harim, who also put away his wife (x. 21).

JEHI'EL (different from the last in the Hebrew). Father of Gibeon in the line of Saul the king (1 Chr. ix. 35).—2. Son of Hotham the Aroerite, in David's guard (1 Chr. xi. 44).

JEHIE'LI. The Bene-Jehieli were treasurers of the temple (1 Chr. xxvi. 21).

DOME OF THE ROCK, JERUSALEM.

JEHIZKI'AH (Jah strengthens). Son of Shallum, Chief in Ephraim in the time of Ahaz. He saved a large number of captives, and had them clothed, fed, tended, and returned to Jericho (2 Chr. xxviii. 12).

JEHŌ'ADAH (Jah adorns). Great-grandson of Merib-baal, in the time of Saul (1 Chr. viii. 36).

JEHŌAD'DAN of Jerusalem, Josiah's queen, and mother of Amaziah of Judah (2 K. xiv. 2).

JEHŌ'AHAZ (Jah holds). Son and successor of Jehu, who reigned 17 years, B. C. 856–840, in Samaria (2 K. xiii. 1-9).—2. Shallum, 4th son of Josiah, whom he succeeded as king of Judah, being chosen over his elder brother, B. C. 610, but after a short reign he was deposed (2 K. xxiii. 32; Jer. xxii. 10), by Pharaoh Necho, taken to Riblah, put in chains, and taken to Egypt, where he died. The people lamented for him, and he was the first king of Judah who died in exile.—3. Youngest son of king Jehoram. His name as king of Judah was Ahaziah.

JEHŌ'ASH (Jah's gift). Joash, 8th king of Judah.—2. 12th king of Israel.

JEHOHA'NAN (Jah's gift). Johanan (John). 1. Levite and doorkeeper in the tabernacle (1 Chr. xxvi. 3).—2. Chief of Judah, general of 280,000 under Jehoshaphat (2 Chr. xvii. 15). Father of Ishmael, a captain of 100 (xxiii. 1).—3. A Bene-Bebai who was parted from his Gentile wife (Ezr. x. 28). —5. A priest under Joiakin, h.-p. (Neh. xii. 13), after the captivity.—6. Priest and musician at the dedication of the wall (Neh. xii. 42).

JEHOI'ACHIN (appointed by Jah). Jeconiah, Coniah, Jeconias, Joiakim and Joacim. Son of Jehiakim and Nehushta, and 19th king of Judah, reigning 3 mos. 10 days. He was 18 years old (2 K. xxiv. 8), or 8 (2 Chr. xxxvi. 9), and was carried captive by Nebuchadnezzar, in revenge for the alliance that his father had made with Egypt. The best of the people, the sacred vessels of the temple, and all the treasure of the people, were taken to Babylon, leaving a poor and feeble remnant. Jehoiachin was kept a close prisoner nearly all the rest of his life, 36 years, when Evil-Merodach liberated him. (See EVIL-MERODACH). He was the last of Solomon's line, as predicted by Jeremiah (xxii. 30), the succession passing over to Nathan's line.

JEHOI'ADA (Jah favors). 1. Father of Benaiah, David's general (2 Sam. viii. 18). He was also chief-priest, and leader of 3,700 Aaronites who joined David at Hebron (1 Chr. xii. 27).—2. Son of Benaiah, who succeeded Ahithophel as counsellor to David—unless there is an error in position and Benaiah is meant.—3. High-priest at the time of Athaliah's usurpation, and in Joash's reign, B. C. 884–878. He succeeded Amariah. Married Jehosheba, daughter of king Jehoram, and sister of king Ahaziah (2 Chr. xxii. 11). He stole Joash when Athaliah killed all the other royal line of Judah, and hid him 6 years in the Temple, finally placing him on the throne.—4. 2d priest (sagan) to Seraiah the h.-p., and was deposed for friendship to the prophet Jeremiah (Jer. xxix. 25–29).—5. Son of Paseah, who repaired the Old Gate at Jerusalem (Neh. iii. 6).

JEHOI'AKIM (Jah appoints). 19th king of Judah (B. C. 609–598), 25 years old at his accession. He was first named Eliakim, and was the son of Joash and Zebudah, but Pharaoh Necho changed his name when he made him king in his brother Jehoahaz's stead (2 K. xxiii. 33), who died in Egypt, in captivity (v. 34), and he also collected a heavy fine ($200,000) from Judah for Josiah's part with Babylon against Egypt. The battle at Carchemish ended the rule of Egypt in Palestine for that time, and Nebuchadnezzar besieged and took Jerusalem, and carried some of the royal family to Babylon as hostages, among whom were Daniel and his three companions. The prophets Jeremiah and Ezekiel warned the king and people of the results of their idolatries, but instead of repenting, they burned Jeremiah's prophesy, put him in prison and drove Urijah the prophet into Egypt, where he was killed, and his corpse treated in a barbarous manner (Jer. xxvi. 21–23; xxxvi.). According to the warnings of Ezekiel (xvii.) and Jeremiah (ii. xxvii.), enemies attacked them on all sides (2 K. xxiv. 7); the king lost his life, and was buried without honor (Jer. xxii. 18, 19). The king of Babylon came in a few weeks after his death and carried his son and all the best men and their families and treasures to Babylon. This act of the king in burning Jeremiah's book was the first recorded attack on the liberty of the public press, and it did not succeed; the second edition was enlarged and improved (Jer. xxxvi. 32).

JEHOI'ARIB (Jah a defender). Head of the 1st course of priests in David's reign (1 Chr. xxiv. 7). His descendants were among the returned captives (Neh. xi. 10).

JEHŌ'NADAB (Jah incites). The son of Rechab (a Kenite), who assisted Jehu in his reforms, and in the destruction of the Baal worshipers (2 K. x. 15). Jeremiah holds up to the people the obedience of the Rechabites (pilgrims) who kept the law of abstinence from wine, and that to live only in tents, in contrast to the general disregard of the law of Moses (Jer. xxxv.), and prophesies an immortality of the house of Rechab. There is no historical trace of them after the Jewish nation went to pieces, and it is supposed that they became disciples of Jesus.

JEHON'ATHAN (Jah's gift). JONATHAN. 1. Son of Uzziah, steward to David (1 Chr. xxvii. 25).—2. A Levite instructor of the people (2 Chr. xvii. 8).—3. A priest after the return from captivity (Neh. xii. 18).

JEHŌ'RAM (Jah has exalted). JORAM. 1. Son of Ahab, king of Israel, and successor to his brother Ahaziah, B. C. 896. His reign was noted for the lives of the two great prophets Elijah and Elisha. He was killed by an arrow from Jehu's bow in Naboth's vineyard (1 K. xxi. 21). He was the last of the line of Omri.—2. Eldest son of Jehoshaphat, succeeding him as king of Judah at the age of 32, reigning 8 years, B. C. 893–885. He murdered his 6 brothers, and (by the help of his wife Athaliah, the daughter of Ahab) revived the Baal worship (see ELIJAH). The latter part of his reign was a series of calamities to the nation, and death to his family, himself dying of a painful malady, not regretted, and being buried without honor.—3. A priest sent to teach the law to the people (2 Chr. xvii. 8).

JEHOSHAB'EATH (Jah's worshiper). Jehosheba the wife of Jehoiada, the high priest.

JEHOSHA'PHAT (Jah is judge). 1. Son of Asa and Azubah; succeeded to the throne of Judah at the age of 35, and reigned 25 years, B. C. 914–889 (1 K. xv. 24; 2 K. viii. 16; 2 Chr. xvii., xxi.). "The Lord was with Jehoshaphat, because he walked in the first ways of his father David, and sought not unto Baalim; but sought to the Jehovah God of his father." * * "He took away the high-places and groves out of Judah" (2 Chr. xvii. 6; 1 K. xxii. 43). He sent out teachers among the people to instruct them in the law, set up just judges in the walled cities, forming a supreme court in Jerusalem, for references and appeals. He built castles and store-cities, and aimed to restore commerce in the Red Sea. The army was reformed in five sections; and the Arabians, Philistines, and Edomites were laid under tribute. He was saved from a very great danger by his trust in God (2 Chr. xx.; Ps. lxxxiii., xli., xlvii., xlviii.). He made a friendly alliance with the idolatrous kingdom of Israel, and to secure peace married his son Jehoram to Athaliah, the daughter of Ahab. He was saved by a miracle with his army in the desert (2 K. iii.), at the request of a prophet of Jehovah. The mutual relations between prophet and king in this reign is a sign of the high attainments which the king had made in the divine life. He was prudent enough to appoint his successor (Jehoram, 2 Chr. xxi. 3) in his life-time, as David had done to Solomon.—2. Son of Ahilud, a historian in David's reign (2 Sam. viii. 16). Such officers were attached to all eastern courts (Esther vi. 1).—3. A priest who blew a trumpet before the ark, on its way from the house of Obed-edom to Zion.—4. Son of Paruah, one of 12 commissaries (1 K. iv. 17). His district was Issachar.—5. Son of Nimshi, father of king Jehu (2 K. ix. 2).

JEHOSHA'PHAT, VALLEY OF (valley where Jah judges), (Joel iii. 12). The valley between Scopus and Olivet and Jerusalem, so named after the greatest king after Solomon (2 Chr. xx.). The nations are to assemble for judgment, where Christ will appear the second time (Acts i. 11). Kidron. The Mohammedans point out a stone in the east wall of the temple area, near the S. end, from which a bridge will be stretched across the valley to Mt. Moriah, over which all souls must pass—the just in safety, the wicked falling off into Gehenna. This valley has been used as a burial-ground from the days of Josiah (2 K. xxiii. 6); and both Jews and Mohammedans look on the place as a most sacred resting-place; but the modern name cannot be traced beyond the 4th century A. D. Joel's prophesy was a poetical and symbolical figure, intended to teach that God is always present with and defending his faithful children. See JERUSALEM.

JEHOSH'EBA (oath to Jah). Daughter to Jehoram, king of Judah, but her mother is not mentioned. She married Jehoiada, the high-priest, being the only woman of Aaron's line who married into a royal family. She assisted her husband in preserving the young Joash (see JEHOIADA), (2 K. xi. 2).

JEHOSH'UA (his help is Jah). JOSHUA. (Num xiii. 16).

JEHŌ'VAH. See JAH.

JEHŌ'VAH-JI'REH (Jah will see). The place where Abraham was about to sacrifice Isaac. Lost. (Gen. xxii. 14).

JEHŌ'VAH-NIS'SI (Jah my banner). Place of an altar built by Moses in memory of a victory over the Amalekites, on Horeb (Ex. xvii. 15).

JEHŌ'VAH-SHĀ'LOM (Jah is peace). Place of an altar built by Gideon in Ophrah, in memory of the salutation of the angel, "Peace be unto thee" (Judg. vi. 24).

JEHŌ'VAH-SHAM'MAH (Jah is there). The name of the city in Ezekiel's vision (Ez. xl., xlviii.).

JEHŌ'VAH-TSĬD'KENU (Jah our righteousness, in Jer. xxiii. 6). Supposed to be one of the titles of the Messiah. It was the prophetic name of a king to be raised up (a branch of David), who will reign and prosper, executing judgment and justice, Also, it is to be the name of the Jerusalem of the future, as the city of the great king (xxxiii. 16).

JEHOZ'ABAD (gifted by Jah). JOZABAD. There were several of this name: 1. The murderer of Joash (2 K. xii. 21), whose mother was a Moabitess.—2. A general of 180,000 in Jehoshaphat's army, a Benjamite (2 Chr. xvii. 18).—3. A porter or door-keeper of the south gate of the temple (1 Chr. xxvi. 4; Neh. xii. 25).

JEHOZ'ADAK (Jah makes just). JOZADAK. Son of Seraiah, the last high-priest before the captivity (2 K. xxv. 18), who was carried into captivity, and died there, but left a son Jeshua, who returned and revived the office (Ezr. iii. 2). JOZEDEC in the Greek, and in Haggai and in Zechariah.

JĒ'HU (Jah is he). 1. First in the 5th dynasty in Israel (see ISRAEL). He was the son of Jehoshaphat (2 K. ix. 2). His grandfather was Nimshi, who was better known than his father. Twenty years before he began to reign he was divinely singled out as the king of Israel by Elijah, and he was anointed by a servant of Elisha, when he was a general in the army, fighting against Hazael, king of Syria, at Ramoth-Gilead (vrs. 4-10). He carried out the directions of the prophesy to the very letter, and also destroyed the Baal (and Astarte) worshipers, their temple and images, but did not entirely purify the national worship, and therefore his line went to destruction in the 4th generation (2 K. xxix. 30; Hos. i. 4).—2. Son of Hanani, a prophet of Judah, whose prophesy was directed against Israel. He also wrote a life of Jehoshaphat (2 Chr. xvi. 7; xx. 34; 1 K. xvi. 1).—3. Man of the house of Hezron, in Judah (1 Chr. ii. 38).—4. Chief in Simeon (iv. 35).—5. "Jehu, the Anthothite," joined David at Ziklag (xii. 3).

JEHUB'BAH (will be hidden). Son of Shomer of Asher (1 Chr. vii. 34).

JEHU'CAL (potent). Son of Shelemiah (Jucal), "prince of the king" (Jer. xxxvii. 3, xxxviii. 1).

JE'HUD (praise). City in Dan (Josh. xix. 45). El Yehudiyeh, near Lydd, 7 miles east of Jaffa (Rob.).

SARCOPHAGUS.

JE'HŪDI (Jews). Son of Nethaniah, sent to bring Baruch with Jeremiah's denunciation to be read to the king (Jer. xxxvi. 14, 21, 23).

JEHUDĪ'JAH (Jewess). Correctly Hajehudijah, a wife of Merod, sister of Naham (1 Chr. iv. 18). Hodijah in verse 19.

JĒ'HUSH (collecting). Son of Eshek in the line of Saul (1 Chr. viii. 39).

JĒĪ'EL (El's treasure). There are eight of this name, but none are famous.

JEKAB'ZEĒL (El collects). Kabzeel was so named after the return from captivity (Neh. ix. 25).

JEKAMĒ'AM (assembler). Levite in David's time, in the line of Hebron (1 Chr. xxiii. 19).

JEKAMĪ'AH (Jah collects). Son of Shallum (in Ahab's time). Another person is called Jekamiah in 1 Chr. ii. 41.

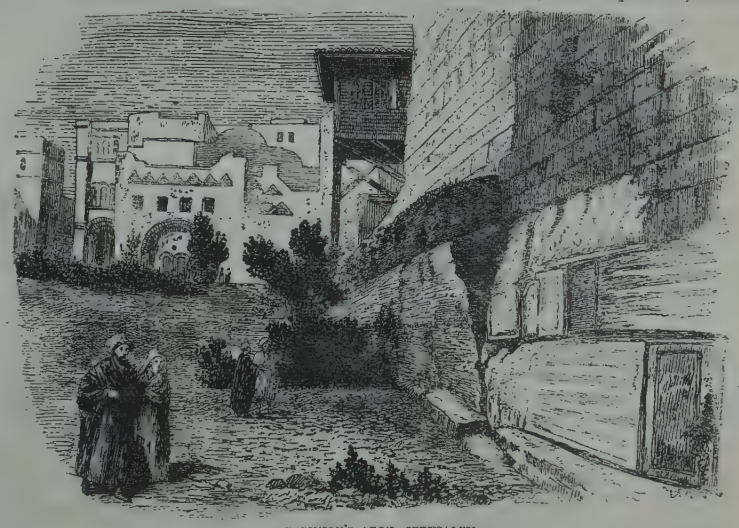
JEHŪ THIEL (piety). Son of Mered (see JEHUDIJAH), who built Zanoah, JEMĪ'MA (dove). Job's eldest daughter after his recovery (Job xlii. 14). JEMAMA is a name of a province in the centre of Arabia, said to have been named after an ancient queen of the Arabians.



ROBINSON'S ARCH, JERUSALEM

JEM'NAAN. JABNEEL. JAMNIA. (Judith ii. 28).

JEM'UEL (El's day). Son of Simeon (Gen. xlvi. 10).

JEP'THAE for JEPHTHAH, in Heb. xi. 32.

JEPH'THAH (Heb. YIFTAH, he will open, Judg. xxii). Son of Gilead and a concubine. Driven out of the family by the other children, he went to TOB, where he became a leader of a band of marauders, ready for any service but not of robbery. Samuel names him among those who were raised up by God for his people (1 Sam. xii. 11), and Paul mentions his special faith (Heb. xi. 32). The Elders of Israel not finding any one offering to lead against the Ammonites, who had been masters for 18 years, appealed to Jephthah, who solemnly accepted the position. He tried to secure the aid of Ephraim, but in vain, and also to reason with the king of Ammon; and then after making a rash vow he completely overthrew the enemy, taking 20 cities; when having punished the Ephraimites, he held his office for 6 years. The story of his daughter's sacrifice by his vow has been variously understood. Josephus says she was made a burnt-offering, but modern scholars have inclined to the notion that she was devoted to perpetual virginity, and the sacred service of God in the temple. The story of Iphgenia (doomed as a sacrifice to Diana, and made a priestess in her temple), has been cited as a parallel example of the spirit of the Greeks in that age. The vow was that the first person that came out of his house to meet him should be the Lord's, that is, should be devoted to the Lord; if a man he should serve as a priest's servant: if a woman she should be devoted to the sacred duties of religion as a holy virgin (Judg. xi. 39), a companion to the women of the Gibeonites.

Human sacrifice was contrary to the Hebrew idea of true worship of God, and is specially rebuked in the story of Abraham and Isaac. The idea of sacrifice is just as strongly brought out in the perpetual virginity of the young woman who, in common with all the daughters of Israel, might hope to become a mother, or the mother even of the Messiah. Besides, burnt-offerings must in all cases be males; and again, the vow to offer some animal would have been a small matter, unworthy of the important occasion. It is quite reasonable to suppose that Jephthah thought of his daughter when he made the vow, for he was a husband of one wife, and had but one child, who was his only hope of posterity, thus making it a real sacrifice. The Levites also were devoted in this same sense to the service of God, made dependent, sacred to the Lord, and offered as an offering. Samuel was also devoted to the Lord.

JEPHUN'NEH (for whom a way is made). The father of Caleb, a Kenezite of Edom.—2. Eldest son of Jether, in Asher (1 Chr. vii. 38).

JĒ'RAH (new moon). 4th Son of Joktan (Gen. x. 26). Yerakh in Yemen, and (more probable) the Aliloei (the moon people) of Herodotus; not those who are named from Mohammed's relative, Bene-Hilāl, living near the Red Sea, south, near Zafari. There is also a locality called El-Latt (lah), meaning the rock where a peculiar worship was offered (to the serpent?); a species of fetishism.

JERAH'MEEL (El's mercy). 1. Eldest son of Hezron (1 Chr. ii. 9).—2. A Levite of the family of Kish (xxiv. 29).—3. Son of Hammelech, or the king, the keeper of Jeremiah and Baruch in prison (Jer. xxxvi. 26).

JERAH'MEELITES. From No. 1 (1 Sam. xxvii. 10), lived in the S. of Judah.

JĒ'RED (descent). JARED. Son of Mahalaleel, father of Enoch (1 Chr. i. 2).—2. Builder of Gedor, in Judah (iv. 18).

JEREMAI (living in the hights). Son of Hashum (Ezr. x. 33).

JEREMĪ'AH (Jah throws). 1. The great Hebrew prophet. (See HISTORY OF THE BOOKS). Seven others of the same name.—2. Jeremiah of Libnah, father of Hamutal, wife of Josiah (2 K. xxiii. 31).—3, 4, 5, in David's army (1 Chr. xii. 4, 10, 13).—6. A hero in Manasseh, beyond Jordan (v. 24).—7. Priest of high rank, and head of the 3d course (Neh. x. 2-8), which assisted in the dedication of the wall of Jerusalem (xii. 34).—8. Father of Jaazaniah, the Rechabite (Jer. xxxv. 3).

JEREMIAH, LAMENTATIONS OF. See HISTORY OF THE BOOKS.

JEREMĪ'AS. Greek form of Jeremiah. JEREMAI.

JER'EMOTH (hights). 1. Chief of the House of Beriah, of Benjamin (1 Chr. viii. 14), who lived in Jerusalem.—2. A Levite, son of Mushi (xxiii. 23).—3. Son of Heman, head of the 13th choir of musicians (1 Chr. xxv. 22). Jerimoth in v. 4.—4. Son of Elam.—5. Son of Zattu, who complied with Ezra's reform in putting away his gentile wives, and sacrificed for each (Ezr. x. 26, 27).—6. Ramoth in the Hebrew in verse 29.

JEREMY. The short English form of Jeremiah.

JEREMY, THE EPISTLE OF. See Baruch in the HISTORY.

JERI'AH (built by Jah). A Levite chief of the House of Hebron (1 Chr. xxiii. 19). JERIJAH.

JER'IBAI (Jah defends). Son of Elnaan, in David's guard (1 Chr. xi. 46).

JER'ICHO (city of the moon; and another, a fragant place). (Num. xxii. 1). In the Jordan valley, 8 miles from the Dead Sea and 6 from the Jordan. When the Jews crossed the Jordan, Jericho was a large and strong city, whose origin is not recorded. Since it is not mentioned in Gen. xiii., when Abraham and Lot looked over the plain, it must have been built after that time. It was anciently surrounded by palm-trees, of which there were many kinds (Deut. xxxiv. 3; Jos. B. J., 8, § 3), thickly dotted about in pleasure gardens; besides balsam, figs, rose-plants, cypress, and many others. Josephus says, "It will not be easy to light on any climate in the habitable earth that can well be compared to it." It was the first city W. of the Jordan taken by the Israelites. Joshua cursed the city (Josh. vi. 26), and the curse was fulfilled in the person of Hiel the Bethelite (1 K. xvi. 34).

JORDAN VALLEY, LOOKING NORTH FROM JERICHO.

The Roman general Pompey camped there one night, and Gabinius made it one of the five cities of assembly. Under Herod the Great it rose to some importance; was full of treasure of all kinds and had valuable revenues. Antony gave it to Cleopatra. Herod built a fort there, which he named Cyprus, in honor of his mother; and a tower, Phasælis. He also built a new town higher up the plain, which he also called Phasælis. Norman McLeod thinks the modern village marks the site of Gilgal (Eastward, p. 198).

Near Jericho was a copious spring, which was healed by Elisha (2 K. ii. 19–21), and is now called Ain es Sultan. It is about a mile and a half from the modern village of Er Riha.

There are extensive ruins, rubbish and foundations, in several places, on both sides the Wady Kelt (Brook Cherith) and at the Ain es Sultan, marking ancient sites—the most ancient at the fountain. The city of the New Testament was on the banks of the Wady Kelt, on the direct route from Peræa to Jerusalem. It was visited several times by Jesus. Approaching it he cured one blind man (Luke xviii. 35), and leaving it he cured another (Mark x. 46). In the house of Zaccheus (probably in a garden in the suburbs) he related the parable of the Ten Pounds.

Vespasian made it the head of a toparchy. It was destroyed during the siege of Jerusalem. It revived under Saracen rule, and in the time of the Crusades was one of the most fertile regions in Palestine.

The Latins have a tradition that Jesus was baptized in the Jordan, opposite Jericho, and the Greeks point to another place, not far off. Both places are visited by great numbers of pilgrims, especially at Easter. Many bottles and cans of the water of the Jordan are carried away as mementoes of the place.

JER'ICHO, PLAINS OF. The wide valley of the Jordan around Jericho, about 8 or 10 miles across (2 K. xxv. 5; Jer. xxxix. 5).

JERI'EL (founded by El). Chief in the house of Tola, of Issachar (1 Chr. vii. 2).

JER'IMOTH (highs). 1. Son of Bela (1 Chr. vii. 7).—2. A hero who joined David at Ziklag (1 Chr. xii. 5).—3. A son of Becher (1 Chr. vii. 8).—4. Son of Musha, chief of a family of Meraites (xxiv. 30).—5. Son of Heman, head of the 15th choir of musicians (xxv. 4, 22).—6. Son of Azriel, of Naphtali (xxvii. 19). Princes in ver. 22.—7. Son of David, and of a concubine, whose daughter Mahalath was a wife of Rehoboam, her cousin, Abihail, being another (2 Chr. xi. 18).—8. A Levite, custodian of offerings, under Azariah the high-priest (xxi. 13).

JERI'OTH (curtains). Wife of Caleb (the ancient), (1 Chr. ii. 18). The Vulgate says she was Caleb's daughter by his first wife.

JEROBO'AM (Heb. YARAB'AM, many people). The founder of the Kingdom of Israel, an Ephraimite, the son of Nebat by Zeruah, a widow, (1 K. xi. 26). He was obliged to fly to Egypt for plotting against Solomon, when a young man, even after Solomon had given him an office of honor and profit (ver. 28). He found an asylum and a kind reception in Egypt, from the Pharaoh Shishak (Sesonchis), successor of the father-in-law of Solomon, who had also received kindly Hadad another enemy of Solomon. On the death of Solomon, and on the request of his friends, Rehoboam hastened to fulfil Ahijah's prophesy in forming a kingdom out of the 10 tribes, being chosen king B. C. 975. He made haste to change the religion of his people, in order to more certainly separate them from Jerusalem, and set up the calf-worship at Bethel (Bethaven), and Dan, and changed the time of holding the feasts. His hand was paralyzed because he attempted to arrest the prophet from Judah who predicted the overthrow of his idolatry, but was restored sound on the prayer of the same prophet. His political policy also was unsound, and did not perpetuate itself. He warred with Judah all his days, and died after a reign of 22 years.

JEROBO'AM II. Son of Joash, of the dynasty of Jehu, 13th king of Israel (B. C. 825). Corruptions of all kinds, political and religious, were notorious, and were condemned by the prophet Amos (vii.) He reigned 41 years, and extended his father's conquests, taking Hamath, Damascus, the Hauran, Gilead, Ammon and Moab, and advanced his kingdom to its highest point of prosperity. These successes had been predicted by Jonah (2 K. xiv. 25–28). Amos was falsely reported by Jeroboam's high-priest at Bethel as having said that the king should die by the sword, but Amos meant (vii. 9–17) the house of Jeroboam, which was the recognized idea in the N. T. times (John viii. 52; Mark xiv. 57; Acts vi. 13). Ps. xlv. may refer to Jeroboam. He was buried in state with his ancestors.

JERO'HAM (one beloved). 1. Father of Elkanah, and about the same age as Eli (1 Chr. vi. 27).—2. A Benjamite, and founder of a family (viii. 27).—3. Father of Ibneiah (ix. 8).—4. Leader of the 16th course of priests (i. 12).—5. Sons of Jeroham of Gedor joined David at Ziklag (xii. 7).—6. Father of Azareel, chief, in David's time, of Dan (xxvii. 22.)—7. Father of Azariah, a captain of hundreds, who aided in the matter of the young king Joash (2 Chr. xxiii. 1).

JERUBBA'AL (Baal pleads). Surname of Gideon, because he threw down an altar of Baal (Judg. vi. 32), and when the Abiezites complained to his father he replied, let Baal plead (his own cause).

JERUBBE'SHETH (with whom the idol contends). That is shemeth (the idol) a shameful thing. Same as Jerubbaal, and a name of Gideon.

JERU'EL (founded by El), THE WILDERNESS OF (2 Chr. xx. 16). Between Tekoa and Engedi, near Berachah, now Bereikut. There was a watch-tower (ver. 24), from which the enemy was seen, and reported to Jehoshaphat. The forces of Moab and Ammon were at the end of the brook (wady) facing the wilderness of Jeruel.

JERU'SALEM (foundation of peace). First mentioned in Gen. xiv. 18, by the name of Salem, whose king was Melchizedek (who is said by the Rabbis to be the patriarch Shem). The name Shalaim (Ps. lxxvi. 2) means two cities, and is applied to the cities or quarters on (modern) Zion and in the Tyropœon valley. At the conquest of Canaan the name of its king was Adoni-zedek (lord of justice), (Josh. x. 1. 3), almost the same as Melchizedek (king of righteousness). Joshua speaks of the city as "The Jebusite" (xv. 8), after the name of its occupiers. In the time of the Judges the name was JEBUS (xix. 10, 11). Judah could not, and Benjamin did not drive out the Jebusites (Josh. xv. 63; Judg. i. 21), and the city only became the capital of the nation after about 450 years from the time of Joshua, when David made it his royal residence, and the sanctuary, near the centre of his kingdom (Ez. v. 5); leaving Hebron, where he had reigned 7½ years. The seat of the religion had been before this at Shechem, Shiloh, Gibeah, Nob, and Gibeon. Zion was now called the CITY OF DAVID, and was soon enlarged by walls, strengthened by towers, and beautified by a palace for the king, built by the mechanics of Hiram, king of Tyre. After the ark, which had rested at Kirjath-Jearim 20 years after Eli's death, was brought to Zion, David assumed the duties of priest as well as king, offering burnt-offerings and peace-offerings under a new tent in the citadel of Zion. The ark was only removed from here to the Temple of Solomon. David's royal gardens were in the valley at En Rogel. David and most of his successors were buried in the citadel, but there are no traces of their tombs. (See p. 39). The sepulchres of David were in or near Ophel (Neh. iii. 16, xii. 37). The three great works of Solomon were the Temple, with its east wall and cloister, the Palace, and wall of Jerusalem (Josephus). Also a a palace for his Egyptian wife; which was not on Zion (1 K. vii. 8, ix. 24; 2 Chr. viii. 11). "All of these were costly stones, * * sawed with saws," just such stone as is now found in the great quarry under the city, north of the Temple area, which may be sawed almost as easy as chalk; the buildings probably required for residences by the thousand women of Solomon's house, who were of several nations and of different religions; the colleges for the several priests (very much such a state of things as is now found in the city, except that the various sects support themselves independently of each other); the 1400 chariots, and 12,000 riding-horses requiring stables; and besides all these, "all that he desired to build in Jerusalem and in Lebanon," shows the activity of his reign. And we are compelled to notice that he also built shrines for Ashtoreth, Chemosh, and Milcom, heathen divinities, on the site now occupied by the village of Siloam, on that part of Olivet called the Mt. of Corruption (1 K. xi.; 2 K. xxiii); which Josiah destroyed, together with an image of Molech in Hinnom, 360 years after.

The first relic that we have in our day of the time of Solomon is a part of the foundation wall of the Temple platform, lately uncovered, an outline sketch of which is in the margin. These are the kind of stones that were "sawed," now very much harder, after long exposure.

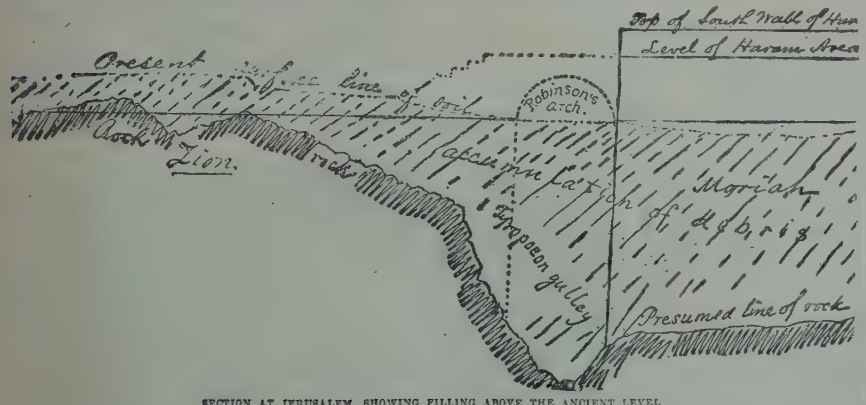
The Son of Sirach (and also Tacitus) speaks of a "sea" of waters that was under the Temple, and this was recently brought to light by Robinson and Barclay, (City of the Great King, 526). It is 736 feet in circuit, 42 in depth, and capable of holding two million gallons.

The columns were once covered with metal, but are now bare, or plastered stone. The rain from the mosque of Aksa and other buildings is drained into it. No fountain has been discovered.

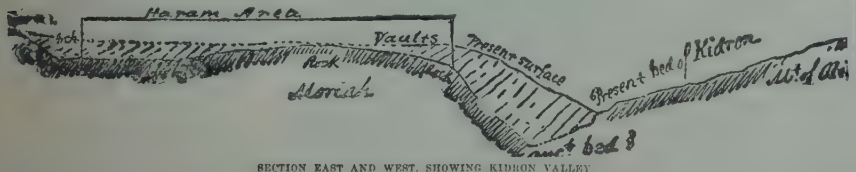
Under the S. E. corner of the Temple area are many columns, arched over, supporting the platform above at its level, resting on the uneven surface of the original hill. The piers or columns are from 3 to 8 feet in diameter, from 5 to 23 feet apart, and there are 15 rows; and opening into this place, which is called Solomon's stables, is a triple gate, under the Aksa mosque. West of these, under the actual temple site, now under the Aksa mosque, is another series of piers and vaults, which seems to have been built up from more ancient materials. Besides the citadel, now called David's tower, there are scarcely any very ancient remains in the city that have not been thrown down and built up again several times.

"Wilson's" arch is one of a series forming an approach from Zion to the temple enclosure. Solomon's aqueduct from the Pools above Etham passes over this arch, and under the street above. This arch has at one time been used as a cistern. The rock was found on sinking a shaft 51 feet 6 inches below the floor. Below this room there were found vaults, tanks, etc., and a secret passage east and west, probably connecting the Temple with Zion.

MAP OF JERUSALEM.



SECTION AT JERUSALEM, SHOWING FILLING ABOVE THE ANCIENT LEVEL



SECTION EAST AND WEST, SHOWING KIDRON VALLEY

The extent of the filling up above the original rock can be seen from this plan, where the debris is 85 feet deep at the S. W. corner of the Haram wall. The "chippings" of the stones and absence of any pieces of pottery, etc., show that this dirt close to the wall, has never been disturbed since Hiram's builders put it there. The spring of "Robinson's Arch" is seen in its place; and the stones composing the arch were found by Lieut. Warren buried under 40 feet of rubbish; one stone having broken through the roof of an aqueduct, lay on the rocky bottom at the depth of 63 feet.

This plan is of the city as it now is; with a few signs indicating ancient works, sites of ancient walls, churches, towers, and other structures in different ages; as many as could be laid down without confusing the work.

The city is small, but there is scarcely a place of any note, not even Nineveh or Babylon, that has been, to modern scholars, such a profound puzzle. The descriptions of Josephus are minute, his knowledge being exact and complete; and the hills on which the city stands are so marked and distinct from each other, that it seems almost marvelous that there could have been any difficulty, until we are reminded of the fact that during the middle ages, and especially during the Crusades, it was regarded as a peculiarly sacred city, and as such must needs have every event that is mentioned in the Bible as having happened in or near it located and honored with some monument, costly and showy in proportion to the importance of the event so honored.

One of the most extensive of these monuments is the Church of the Holy Sepulchre, a collection of buildings in a vast mass, without order, 350 ft. long by 280 wide, including 70 sacred localities, presided over by 17 different sects in separate chapels inside the edifice. To describe these various "stations" would require a volume, and it has been already done completely by Bartlett (Walks about Jerusalem: Jerusalem Revisited); Barclay (City of the Great King); Thomson (Land and Book); in Smith's Dictionary of the Bible; Kitto's Cyclopædia; by Tristram, and others. The numbers on the plan of the church indicate:—1. The entrance. 2. Chapel of the Angel; a small model of a church, 10 ft. wide and 20 ft. high, standing under the great dome, built of marble, and containing The Holy Sepulchre (3). 4. Is the centre of the world," according to the Greeks (based on Ez. v. 5). 5. Latin church. 6. 49 steps of solid rock lead down to the Chapel of the "Finding of the Cross." 7. Calvary; to which there is an ascent of marble steps from near 1. Although it is no proof of the truth of the traditions which locate the "stations" in this church, yet De Vogue and others (Sandys) give us a great mass of historical evidence that there has been a Church of the Holy Sepulchre for many ages in the city. The oldest engraved seal of the city is that here given, dated A. D. 1150; and there seems to have been a small church inside the larger one at that time, as there is now. The next one, dated 1162–'72, gives the Tower of David and the Temple, besides the Sepulchre; which would favor the opinion of Fergusson, in Smith's Dict. (article Jerusalem), that Moriah, Zion, the City of David, and the Holy Sepulchre were all on the same hill, now called the Haram. The history is continued in the seal of Baldwin IV, 1174, with the inscription "Tower of David;" and also by many others, which may be seen in De Vogue's work. The plan of the church of those ancient times is very much like that of the present day. That in Sandys, of 200 yrs. ago, is almost identical. The Knights of St. John, the ruins of whose hospital are in the next block south of the Sepulchre Church, have left a seal of their order, which gives a hint of their objects and duties also. Jerusalem is now a sort of collection of churches and hospitals, with a great many vacant places strewed with ruins. Pilate's house, where Jesus was judged, is located at the N. W. corner of the Haram area, and it probably stood on the site of the Citadel of David. The Crusaders respected the Dome of the Rock, and held sacred service in it, but used the Aksa mosque for a stable, despising it as a work of Jews, the Temple of Solomon. It was so only in location, for El Aksa was built by the Mohammedans in the seventh century, on the site of the Temple of Solomon, whom they reverence among the prophets, as well as David, and also Jesus, the son of David.

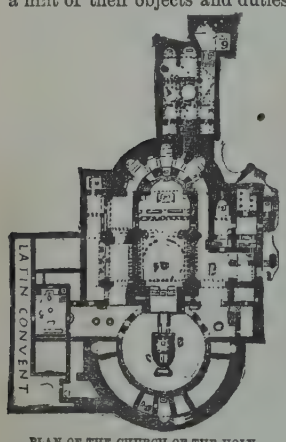
CHURCH OF THE HOLY SEPULCHRE.



PLAN OF THE CHURCH OF THE HOLY SEPULCHRE.

The twelve columns around the centre (with four square piers at equal intervals) are of porphyry, and have gilded capitals; the canopy is of crimson silk. The outside of this church is eight-sided, of marble, covered in the upper part with the finest glazed tiles, in colors, to the top of the dome, which is finished with a spire and bronze crescent. The piece of native rock, the top of which shows white in the picture, is 60 feet long by 55 feet wide, and 12 feet high above the floor at the highest point, and is hollowed out underneath—forming a large room, which is believed by many to have been the real sepulchre of Jesus, now very much enlarged.

The Temple has so entirely disappeared, that "not one stone is left on another." And, besides, its very location is still a matter of guesses and speculation. Several churches, a pagan temple, and other buildings, have occupied the platform for ages, and have disappeared, leaving very few traces.

HOLY SEPULCHRE, A. D. 1150.

The first mention of a street in the city is in 2 Chr. xxix. 4, where Hezekiah gathered the priests and Levites into the East street and his soldiers in the street of the City of David (xxxii. 5, 6). The Bakers' street is mentioned as that from which the prophet Jeremiah was to receive his daily allowance while he was in prison (Jer. xxxvii. 21). The Cheesemongers' street of Josephus is supposed to have been in the Tyropœon valley.

The circuit of the outer wall in the time of Christ was about four miles. Josephus says (Wars, v. 4) there were many towers 30 feet square (some larger), and solid for a hight of 30 feet. Above the base there were rooms for the soldiers; and over these again rooms and cisterns for water. There were on the third wall 90 towers, 300 feet apart; 40 on the middle wall, and on the old wall 60. Psephinus, the most northern, was on high ground, N. W. of the city, was 105 feet high, and eight-sided. From its top could be seen the Jordan and the Dead Sea eastward, and the Great Sea westward. The tower Hippicus was named by Herod after his friend; and Phasælus after his (Herod's) brother, and it was 135 feet high; finished inside and outside "like a royal palace." Another was named after Mariamne, Herod's queen. It was 75 feet high, and equally splendid. The Castle of Antonia, at the N. W. corner of the Temple area, was built by John Hyrcanus. Pilate's judgment-hall was in this castle, which was probably on the site of David's citadel (John xviii. 28, xix. 9). The towers of Meah and Hananeel are also mentioned in Neh. iii. 1; Jer. xxi. 38.

The ancient plans located St. Stephen's Gate on the north side of the city, at what is now called Damascus Gate. The view shows a few of the tombs and gravestones, of which there are thousands in this valley of Jehoshaphat. The lions on each side of the gateway may date from the Crusades.

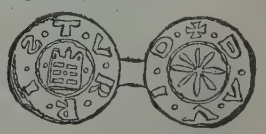
CAVITAS. REGIS REGUM OMNIUM.
HOLY SEP. TOWER OF DAVID. TEMPLE.
Amorium I. 1162–1137.

The water supply of the city has been remarkable in all ages for being sufficient in times of extreme drought, siege and famine. Hezekiah "stopped" some sources, which have remained hidden to the present; and it can only be supposed that they were north of the city (2 Chr. xxxii. 4, etc.). Nearly every house has its cistern, or several, large or small. But the one pool of all others was Bethesda, which was near the Sheep-gate.

The masonry is of large blocks of stone, 18 to 20 inches square (A). (See cut on page 21, SECTION OF POOL). The joints are hollowed out, and blocks 16 inches deep inserted half their length (B); the spaces between these blocks being filled by others 8 inches deep. Over these is a coarse plaster with gravel (D); and the inside finish is a thick coat of cement.

The identity of this pool with that mentioned in the Gospel has been the source of many and long arguments, but the conclusion that it is the real Bethesda seems to be gaining in favor.

Siloam is supplied by an underground passage from the Virgin Fountain, 1700 ft. long. Recent explorations have discovered a water supply of the Virgin Fountain from a vault in the side of Ophel above it, shown in the plan and section here given. From this and many other recent discoveries it appears that Jerusalem is undermined with a series of water-courses, which are frequently alluded to by Josephus and other ancient writers.



TURIS DAVID.
Baldwin IV. 1174—1185. A. D.

In all the accounts of the sieges of the city we read of the besiegers suffering from thirst, but of the besieged from hunger only, since there never was a scarcity of water inside of the walls.

The proof of the connection, by an underground passage, of the Fountain of the Virgin with the Pool of Siloam was obtained, with great labor and peril and imminent risk of life by Lieut. Warren, Sergeant Birtles and an Arab laborer. They were obliged to crawl along on their backs, carrying instruments, books and pencil, a lighted candle in the mouth, and in a stream of dirty water 12 inches deep, in a passage which was sometimes only 16 to 20 inches high. The passage is about 1700 feet between the two pools, crooked, and occupied the party about four hours in its exploration.

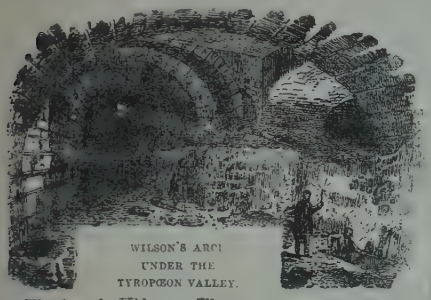
Abundance of water was required in the Jewish public worship, a part of which was a ceremonial of ablution. The many sources of supply and the means of storing it for use during the dry season, sieges, and times of drought, may be seen in the following list of fountains, pools, etc.



WILSON'S ARCH UNDER THE TYROPŒON VALLEY.

The brook Kidron. There was "a little river" in this valley, seen by Sir John Maundeville as late as 1322: the waters of Gihon were called "the brook that flowed through the land," and was brought straight down to the west side of the City of David (2 Chr. xxxii. 30). Solomon was anointed king at the lower fountain of Gihon (1 K. i. 33–45), which was located somewhere between Acra, Bezetha, and Moriah, and not in Hinnom, as now stated (Barclay); the Gihon valley would then commence north of the Damascus Gate, and end in the Tyropœon: Siloam; En Rogel; Mota (spring-head), Ain el Durrage (?), S. E. of En Rogel; Dragon's Well (in Hinnom, not far from the Jaffa Gate, the ancient Valley Gate); Aqueduct of Pilate, "whereby he brought water from a distance of 400 furlongs" (Josephus, Wars, ii. ix. 4); the Stone Aqueduct described by Aristeus; Solomon's Pools at Etham, and the aqueduct from them to the city, giving off a branch to the Great Pool, now Lower Gihon. Barclay thinks Herod brought the water from Etham by a more direct route than Solomon, and supplied the Upper Gihon Pool, the Serpent's Pool of Josephus. Pool of Hezekiah, built by Herod; a very large Pool near the Fish Gate (near St. Ann Church, Brocardus, in 1283; Lacus Quidam, not located; The Pool that was made somewhere in the Tyropœon, of which there are no traces; Ditch between Zion and Ophel—bears all the marks of having been an ancient pool; a large Pool (100 feet around, near the Absalom Pillar; the Well of Flagellation and two large tanks near Damascus Gate; the "Sea" under the Temple site, into which there are eight well-holes, from the platform above; 43 well-mouths in the Haram area lead down to wells or reservoirs; Well of the Healing, in Valley street; the Pilgrim Pool, near the Herod Gate; Helena's Cistern, in the Coptic convent; Cotton Megara Pool; Lady Mary Pool, near the St. Stephen Gate; Bath of Tiberius, on Zion, near the English Cemetery; several very large pools, or tanks, within a mile radius of the city, more or less in ruins; and the great number of cisterns, before mentioned, under private houses, into which rain-water is conducted.

INTERIOR OF THE DOME OF THE ROCK.

A picture of a siege of the city was found sculptured on a slab in the ruins of Khorsabad (see cut on page 57), in the "Retiring Chamber" of the palace, and is a concise and interesting record. At that time, it seems that the brook Kidron was full of water, and there was a plenty of olive trees on the hills about the city. There are now but a very few trees near the walls, the most interesting being those in the Garden of Gethsemane. Titus cut down all the trees around Jerusalem, and his tenth legion was camped on Olivet, building their part of the wall surrounding the city, along the bottom of the valley of Kidron. The Turks have pleasure-grounds, or gardens, farther up the valley (half a mile or so), where they resort to enjoy the cool shade of the olive-trees, some of which are quite as large as those in Gethsemane, and, it may be, as old. The antiquity of those in Gethsemane is argued from the tax, which is fixed by the Turks at one medina for each tree, which rate dates from before or at the time of their conquest; all those planted since everywhere in the empire being taxed one-half their produce. This would carry the date back to A. D. 634, when Omar took Jerusalem; or to the time when the Turks took it, A. D. 1087.

There are no level streets, and the passenger is always ascending or descending, over rough and uncared-for ways. The houses are built on heaps of rubbish, which have been gathering for ages. The foundations for the Church of St. James (English) rest on piers, built up from the rock through 40 to 50 feet of debris. The streets are often very narrow, the widest being only eight to ten feet. The houses are often built across the street on arches; and the custom of shading them with awnings of mats or boards, suspended by ropes, makes them dark and cool, which is very grateful in that hot climate. Only two or three streets have a name, except such as are being adopted lately by the Franks, generally those used by the Crusaders.

The materials used for building is the native limestone, generally broken into squares, not hewn, or sawn, except by the most wealthy. In many walls may be found fragments of ancient structures, such as cornices, columns, capitals, and mutilated sculptures, built in as raw material. Timber is only brought from other countries, and therefore very costly, and is only used for window-frames and doors, but not for floors or roofs. The windows are always small, and, if large enough to admit a thief, are barred with iron, and give the houses a jail-like appearance. Window-glass is only found in the houses of the rich. Only one door opens on the street, and there are no windows in the lower story opening on the street, secluding the houses, but making dismal streets. The interior of the rooms is pleasing, because of the arches and domes required in forming the upper stories and roof. The floors are frequently laid with colored stones, arranged in most beautiful patterns.

The principal trade is in beads, crosses, incense, crucifixes, pilgrim-shells, staffs, pressed flowers, and other keepsakes (besides relics, which are made in great quantities), with the thousands of pilgrims and other travellers, who visit the country every year. Soap-making, and weaving of coarse cotton cloth, are almost the only active manufactures in the city.

A vast number live professedly on charity. There are separate bazars, frequented by the different people: By the Jews, in the street near their great synagogue, on the east slope of Mount Zion; by the Turks, in David, Damascus, and Temple streets; by the Arabs, in Via Dolorosa (El Wad), near the St. Ann church; and by the Christians, in Patriarch street. The Cotton Bazar was once a very grand structure, but it is now abandoned to rubbish, and only used as a passage-way to the Haram area.

This short account of the "Holy City" would be still more incomplete without some brief notice of Solomon's Temple, and its successors.

Whatever we know about them is to be found in the First Book of Kings, in Jeremiah, in Ezekiel (who saw the first temple in a vision, ch. xl.), in Josephus, in Aristeas; and after these, the modern books of Williams, Robinson, Barclay, and Paine, in our language; and of those in foreign, the best is the German of Dr. Neumann, of Gotha (Die Stiftshutte). Mr. Paine's plan is copied here, because of its simplicity, and seeming fidelity to the original, as critically and clearly interpreted by the author (Solomon's Temple—T. O. Paine). Of the temple of Zerubbabel there is a very short account in Ezra, and in Hecatæus, quoted by Josephus. The size was a third larger than Solomon's, but its ornamentation was less showy. The size of either was less than the average of our churches in the country villages. Josephus is almost the only authority for all we know about the Temple of Herod, which was the one seen by Jesus. There is not a word in the New Testament about its appearance, nor even its location. But it is supposed that while the figures of Josephus are correct as to the ground-plan, his figures of the elevation are twice the real hight (Ant. xv. 11, 3.)

The bridge on which Titus stood at the siege and destruction of the city (described by Josephus), had fallen long ago, but its remains have been discovered by Robinson and Lt. Warren, and minute accounts published. The view engraved here shows the spring of the arch which rested against the temple wall (Br., in the plan of Herod's Temple). The bridge was 51 ft. wide, and extended across the valley to Zion, 350 ft.; probably resting on 5 or 6 arches (see p. 81). One of the stones, shown in the cut, is 21 ft. long, and another 29, by nearly 6 wide.

The famous "Wailing-place" of the Jews (where they go to bewail the desolation of Zion) is a few rods north of this place.

"The past of Jerusalem is overflowing with thought. But the future is equally impressive. These ruins are not always to remain. The future Temple, and the restored Israel, when "Jerusalem shall be the throne of the Lord to all nations," claim the most earnest thought. The day when "the feet" of the Lord "shall stand on the Mount of Olives, which is over against Jerusalem toward the east," is full of importance; and whether we look back or forward, we have to speak of Zion as "the joy of the whole earth," for "salvation is of the Jews." The present missionary work in Jerusalem is deeply interesting. * * But surely there is no spot on earth like Jerusalem."—(Dr. Tyng).

JERU'SHA (possessed). Daughter of Zadok, queen of Uzziah (2 K. xv. 33). In Chronicles the name is JERUSHAH (2 Chr. xxvii. 1).

JESAI'AH (Heb. ISAIAH). 1. Son of Hananiah, grandson of Zerubbabel (1 Chr. iii. 21).—2. A Benjamite whose descendants were chosen by lot to reside in Jerusalem after the return from captivity (Neh. xi. 7).

JESHA'IAH (Jah's salvation). Son of Jeduthun, choir-leader in the temple, of the 8th division (1 Chr. xxv. 3).—2. A Levite, eldest son of Rehabiah, in the line of Amram (xxvi. 25).—3. Son of Athaliah and chief of the sons of Elam, who returned with Ezra (viii. 7).—4. A Merarite who returned with Ezra (viii. 19).

JESHA'NAH (ancient). Taken by Abijah from Jeroboam (2 Chr. xiii. 19). A place of importance in Benjamin, and now Ain Sinia, a well-watered village, with vineyards, fruit-trees and gardens (Rob. iii. 80), 3 miles N. of Bethel.

JESHAREE'LAH (upright towards El). Son of Asaph, chief of the 7th choir (1 Chr. xxv. 14). Asarelah.

JESHEBE'AB (father's abode). Head of the 14th course of priests (1 Chr. xxiv. 13).

JE'SHER (upright). Son of Caleb by Azubah (1 Chr. ii. 18). JETHER.

JESH'IMON (desert). A more desolate region or place than a MIDBAR (wilderness), and applied to the plain and hillsides at the N. end and on the W. side of the Dead Sea. It consists of a level plain of nitrous earth, into which the feet sink several inches as into ashes, and hills of chalky limestone, without herbage, except a few alkaline plants and the usual fringe of the Jordan river. The Hill of Hachilah (dark red cone) may have been Sebbeh, (Masada), so well described by Josephus, as Metsadoth (strong-holds in 1 Sam. xxiii. 19), and the word CHORESH (Heb. for wood in verse 19) means a thicket, dense and thorny, such as is found along the shore there now.

JESHI'SHAI (son of the old man). Ancestor of the Gadites in Gilead (1 Chr. v. 14).

JESH'UA (Jah saves). JOSHUA or JEHOSHUA.

JESH'UA. Yeshua, S. near Moladah, occupied after the return from captivity (Neh. xi. 26).

JESH'URUN. Symbolical name for Israel in Deut. xxxii. 15, etc., meaning most upright, or to be blessed, in an endearing sense also, as little one, or dear one, therefore good little people.

JESI'AH (Jah lends). A Korhite, a hero with David at Ziklag (1 Chr. xii. 6).—2. Son of Uzziel (xxiii. 20). Jeshiah (error) in xxiv. 25.

JESIM'IEL (whom El places). A Simeonite, of Shinei's family (1 Chr. iv. 36).

JES'SE (YISHAI, manly). Son of Obed, father of David. His name is never mentioned again, not even when David took his parents to Nahash in Moab for security from Saul (1 Sam. xxii. 3).

JES'UI (Heb. ISHUAI). Son of Asher. The Jesuites were numbered in the plains of Moab (Num. xxvi. 44).

JE'SUS (Gr. and Latin form of the Heb. Joshua; or Jehoshua, the help of Jah, or Saviour). 1. The father of SIRACH, and grandfather of—2. The SON OF SIRACH (Eccles. i. 27), author of the Book of ECCLESIASTICUS, or the WISDOM OF JESUS, THE SON OF SIRACH. See HISTORY OF THE BOOKS. He was also known as Ben Sira, a writer of proverbs which closely resemble those in Wisdom.

2. JE'SUS, called JUS'TUS (the just). A disciple Paul at Rome (Col. iv. 11). Tradition makes him Bishop of Eleutheropolis.

3. JESUS CHRIST. The name Jesus means Saviour, and was a common name, derived from the ancient Hebrew Jehoshua.

The title CHRIST means anointed, consecrated, sacred, and is used only for the MESSIAH, who came in fulfilment of prophesy.

The prophets, from the time of Moses, hold up to view an illustrious person who was to appear, and should belong to the highest order of being, since the name of the Eternal One is His; and he should also be called Wonderful, Counselor, the Mighty God, the Everlasting Father; that he should assume human nature and be born of a virgin of the family of David (Is. xi. 1), in Bethlehem of Judæa, (Mic. v. 2), and his mission should be the salvation of his people and all mankind (Is. xlix. 6); that He should be despised and rejected of his people; be cut off, but not for himself; be wounded for men's transgressions, bruised for their iniquities; by His stripes men should be healed (Is. liii.); the Lord should lay on Him the iniquity of men; He should make his soul an offering for sin; and should be exalted and made very high; should see of the travail of his soul and be satisfied, and by his knowledge justify many; and Jehovah say to Him, "Sit thou at my right hand, until I make thine enemies thy footstool" (Ps. cx. 1); to Him should be given dominion, glory, and a kingdom, and all people should serve Him,—an everlasting dominion which shall not pass away (Dan. vii. 13, 14): all of which has been completely fulfilled in Jesus, the son of Mary of Nazareth, who was divinely appointed to be the Messiah, from everlasting, before the foundations of the world (Prov. viii. 23; 1 Pet. i. 20; Luke ii.).

Jesus was born in Bethlehem, and our era is dated from the event, which was, at this time of writing, 1870 (4) years ago. The very day, and even the very year, has been indefinite, but is not far from the one adopted. Joseph and Mary were espoused and had gone up from Nazareth to answer to the census-roll ordered by Augustus, for taxation; and they came to Bethlehem because they were of the house of David. The event was announced by an angel to some shepherds who were watching their flocks by night in the field near the village; and the heavenly host, who were with the angel, praised God, saying, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good-will toward men" (Luke ii. 14).

The coming of Christ was an event of general expectation, and the Gentiles were next to the shepherd Jews in rendering homage to Him, in the visit of the Wise Men from the East, who brought offerings and rich presents (Matt. ii. 1).

Herod the king, who is described as a cruel tyrant, having been made jealous of the wonderful child, who was born King of the Jews, ordered that all the children (about 12) in Bethlehem from two years old and under should be killed; and Jesus was saved only by Joseph hurrying him and his mother away to Egypt, where it is supposed that they stayed about a year.

On the way from Egypt the family avoided Bethlehem and returned to Nazareth.

When he was twelve years old, his parents took him with them to attend the annual feast of the Passover, when he was one day found in the Temple, questioning and answering the Jewish priests, and displaying astonishing wisdom (Luke ii. 47).

The account of his childhood and youth, and even maturity, up to "about thirty years of age," besides the incident in the Temple, is given in two grand sentences by Luke, indicative of the increase and development of the human powers, the spiritual being perfect from the beginning: "And the child grew, and waxed strong in spirit, filled with wisdom, and the grace of God was upon him. And Jesus increased in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and man" (ii. 40, 52).

The modesty and brevity of the Gospels on this part of the life of Jesus, is one great evidence of its truth, as compared with tales of fiction, wherein the hero is perfected in minute and wonderful details.

Joseph (the reputed father of Jesus, and so called by his mother Mary, ii. 48), is not again mentioned in the Scriptures after this event. Whether he lived to witness the wonderful events and profit by the teaching of the Saviour, does not appear.

The question of the family of Jesus, as to whether his mother Mary had any other children besides him, is unsettled, although Matthew distinctly mentions four brothers, besides sisters. Some have held that these were brothers and sisters-in-law, children of Joseph by a former wife, and others, that they were the children of the sister of Jesus' mother, who was also named Mary, and was the wife of Clopas; this would have them to be cousins of Jesus. See MARY.

The person, the life, and the work of Jesus are the subject of the whole New Testament, (and, in prophesy, of the Old), and, as a whole, are the historical and doctrinal foundation of Christianity.

His life may be studied in several sections by students, as here arranged:

1. Birth, including the appearances to Zechariah, Elizabeth, Mary, and Joseph, and the birth of John the Baptist.

2. The witnesses of the Messiah—the Shepherds, the Magi and Herod.

3. Preparation and baptism.

4. Fasting, temptation and public manifestation in Galilee, Judæa and Samaria.

5. His offered proof of his divinity in his miracles, may by classed in two groups:

(1). Of Love. { In raising the dead. Curing mental disease. Healing the body.

(2). Of Power. { In creating; destroying; overcoming men's wills.

6. The instruction in his discourses and parables.

7. Incidents showing the effect of his contact with various persons.

8. The scene of his ministry, of which details are given in the GEOGRAPHY.

Matthew, Mark and Luke's records are mainly of the events in Galilee, never mentioning his visits to Jerusalem until the time near the crucifixion, and only implying such visits and teaching by his lamentations, and the visits of the scribes, etc., besides the intimacy with the family at Bethany. John records a few acts in Galilee, and gives all the rest of his book to the events in Judæa—nearly one-half being about the last three months; and seven chapters (one-third), on the last few days. Neither writer attempted a complete chronology, but aimed at a general picture of the life. See GOSPELS, in the HISTORY OF THE BOOKS.

9. The duration of the ministry cannot be determined exactly. Those who interpret the prophesy of Isaiah literally, limit it to one year (Is. lxi. 2). But John mentions six feasts, at five of which Jesus was present. 1. (ii. 13), soon after his baptism; 2. (v. 1), a feast when he went up to Jerusalem; 3. (vi. 4), and another, from which he stayed away, in Galilee; 4. (vii. 2), the feast of Tabernacles, to which he went privately; 5. (x. 22), the feast of the dedication; 6. (xii. xiii), and the last, the Passover, at which he was crucified—extending through three years.

10. And, while on this subject of time, it may be valuable to consider, by the help of the map, tracing each movement as closely as possible, the amount of labor, traveling—mainly on foot (or on animals)—that must be compressed into a single year, if the short period is chosen.

The date of the birth of Jesus, and the month and the day, have each been the subject of much debate, without any definite settlement. The various opinions have ranged through four years of time, and have suggested nearly every month in the year. Tischendorf and Wieseler say that Jesus could hardly have been born before the first of January, A. U. C. 750; and suggest February as the latest date probable. Gresswell says that April 5 or 6 must be the day of his birth (A. U. C. 750). Dr. Robinson supposes it could not have been later than in the autumn of A. U. C. 749; while it may have occurred one or two years earlier; Lardner fixes the time about the middle of August or the middle of November, A. U. C. 748 or 749; Winer, Ideler and others say 747; Dr. Wordsworth says in the spring of 749 (B. C. 5); Clement of Alexandria says some placed the day on April 20, and others on May 20; the 25th of December as the day dates from the traditions of the 4th century.

The life of Jesus combined in a three-fold character the offices of prophet, priest and king. His prophesies pointed both to the manner and the time of the mission and work of redemption; and, as John said, were really clear light shining, his priestly office was shown in his vicarious atonement for the sins of men; and his kingly office appears in his royal power of subduing all men to his will for the good of his people. To his church he was also prophet, priest, and king above all others who had held either of those offices. He first said, "No one hath seen God at any time, the only begotten Son, who is in the bosom of the Father, he hath declared him" (John iii. 16). Jesus founded a system of ethics, revised and overruled all the old systems of morals, and so purified the system that it will stand for all the coming ages without changing. This was done among those men who thought they were learned and wise, and that they needed only to extend Phariseeism or Essenism to perfect the moral system of mankind, when Jesus showed them that such ascetic notions were born in the desert and would die there. An obscure Galilean wood carver readily and surely did what so many eminent men had failed to accomplish—he laid the foundations of a universal religion—on a perfect morality, showing how the divine and human elements can be made to appear in harmonious action in every soul. He is therefore superior to all the prophets who preceded him.

The priestly element was almost peculiar in Judaism. The Pharisees enlarged upon the hint of Moses and declared the whole people to be a nation of priests; but that the sacrifices and oblations (while so many fell short of the ceremonial purity) had to be offered by a mediating priesthood, and by them alone, as having immediate access to God, and only acceptable from them, while it was held to be blasphemy to attempt to change the institutes of Moses (Acts vi. 11, 14,) even although the prophets had so distinctly said, something higher and purer was needed, and would be given from above, being brought by the Messiah, the great spiritual king, successor of David (Ps. civ). The sufferings and glory, struggle with temptation and sin, ransom paid, and atonement made, whereby the guilt of iniquity was to be forever atoned, and sacrifice and oblation cease, and a new temple consecrated (Zech. vi. 12), in every heart, was the burden Jesus bore in his character and office of the great high-priest (Heb. x.). The necessity for his work was not seen until after it had been done, and he was gone from among men. His priesthood was more perfect than any before him.

The Jews had expected a temporal king, a King of Zion, as announed in the letter of the prophets, the spiritual meaning being overlooked. The angel said to Mary that the throne of his father David should be given to him; the Eastern Magi inquired after him, and did obedience to him as King of the Jews (Luke i. 32). Herod struck at the infant as at a pretender to his throne; John announced him as coming to set up the Kingdom of Heaven; and even when he declared before Pilate the spiritual nature of his kingdom, the Jews failed to see what sort of a King he was. However feeble and powerless he may have seemed then as a king before Pilate, and when wearing the crown of thorns and the purple robe, succeeding history has proved his actual power among men, above and beyond all other kings, moving and controlling their hearts and minds, and this power is extending throughout the world, not by force or violence, but as gently and surely as the light of the sun. As a king he is more winning, powerful, more enduring, and more holy and good than any who have reigned before him.

Christians in all ages have wished for some picture or figure of Jesus, which should represent the Saviour or the Man of Sorrows, and a great number of attempts have been made to represent one or the other of those phases of the great character: some with an expression of calm serenity and dignity, without grief; and others with the crown of thorns, purple robe, and face of sorrowful aspect. Except a few crude outlines, painted on the walls of sepulchres, (as in the Catacombs under Rome), or on tablets, or rude engravings of the early ages, no work of this kind, claiming excellence, can be dated earlier than Leonardo da Vinci's or Raphael's time, who have made the most acceptable works, from which nearly all others have been imitated; and even theirs were reproductions of the traditionary likeness, fashioned after the Greek model of the young hero-god Apollo, or the Egyptian Serapis. The story that Pilate had a likeness engraved on an emerald is a fable, and the likeness in question is a copy from Raphael's cartoon of the Miraculous Draught of Fishes. The likeness, the actual birth-place, the several places of his residence, of his crucifixion, and of the sepulchre have one and all been lost beyond all hope of authentic recovery. We know that he was born in Bethlehem, raised in Nazareth, began his work in Cana and Capernaum, was crucified and buried near Jerusalem, but the exact places have, perhaps by divine intention, been purposely forgotten.

JĒ'THER (excellence). 1. Jethro, father-in-law to Moses (Ex. iv. 18), who is also called Hobab (Num. x. 31).—2. Gideon's eldest son (Judg. viii. 20).—3. Father of Amasa, general of Absalom's army. ITHRA (2 Sam. xvii. 25). He was an Ishmaelite, or a Hebrew living among Ishmaelites. He married Abigail, David's sister (probably in the land of Moab).—4. Son of Jada (1 Chr. ii. 32). 5. Son of Ezra, in the line of Judah (1 Chr. iv. 17).—Ezra and Amram being one, this Jether may be Aaron, as some suggest.—6. Chief in Asher, father of Jephunneh (1 Chr. vii. 38).

JĒ'THETH (a tent-pin). A duke in Edom (Gen. xxxvi. 40). There is a place called El Wetidah in Nejed (in the Dahna, sandy desert), and an El Wetid range of mountains, which may preserve the name of the ancient family, for Wetedeh is stable, firm, as a tent-pin.

JETH'LAH (hanging). In Dan, near Ajalon (Josh. xix. 42). Lost.

JĒ'THRO (superiority). JETHER. Father-in-law of Moses (Ex. iv. 18, xviii. 1), and also called Hobab (Num. x. 31; Judg. iv. 11). Reuel (Raguel) was the head of the family into which Moses married (Ex. ii. 18), but was probably his wife's grandfather, for Hobab was his son (Num. x. 29). He became a convert to the worship of Jehovah, and sacrificed (Ex. xviii. 12).

JĒ'TUR (camp). Son of Ishmael (Gen. xxv. 15). ITURÆA.

JEŪ'EL (El's treasure). Chief in Judah, of the sons of Zerah, at the first occupation of Jerusalem (1 Chr. ix. 6).—2. A son of Adonikam, returned from captivity (1 Esd. viii. 39).

JĒ'USH (Jah hastens). 1. Son of Esau by Aholibamah (Gen. xxxvi. 5).—2. Benjamite chief, son of Bilhan (1 Chr. vii. 10).—3. Levite of the house of Shimei (xxiii. 10).—4. Son of king Rehoboam and Abihail (2 Chr. xi. 18).

JĒ'UZ (Jah counsels). Benjamite chief (1 Chr. viii. 10). Born in Moab, son of Shaharaim and Hodesh.

JEW. Short form of Jĕhūdï (people of Judah). First mentioned in 2 K. xvi. 6, when the king of Syria drives the (Jehudim) Jews from Elath. Jeremiah frequently uses it, perhaps because the tribe of Judah was very numerously represented in the captivity. In the N. T. the Jews are spoken of as the determined opponents of the gospel.

JEW'ESS. Born a Hebrew, of any tribe (Acts xvi. 1), as the mother of Timothy, and Drusilla the wife of Felix (xxiv. 24). See HEROD.

JEW'ISH. Paul warns Titus (i. 14) against Jewish fables. See FABLE.

JEW'RY. Judah, Judæa (Dan. v. 13; Luke xxiii. 5; John vii. 1).

JEWS' LANGUAGE. Jewishly (2 K. xviii. 26).

JEZANĪ'AH. JAAZANI'AH. AZARIAH.

JEZ'ĒBEL (chaste). Wife of king Ahab, mother of Athaliah, queen of Judah, and Ahaziah and Joram, kings of Israel. She was daughter of Ethbaal king of the Zidonians, who had proved himself a powerful and wise king. Jezebel brought her religion with her, and transplanted it into the willing hearts of the Hebrews (1 K. xvi. 31), and the king of Israel and his people adopted formally the worship of the Phœnician gods. Elijah, Carmel, Naboth, Jehu, and Jezrëël, are names that recal the main points in her history, which may be read in those articles.

JĒ'ZER (image). Son of Naphtali (Num. xxvi. 49). Jezerites.

JEZĪ'AH (Jah sprinkles). Of the family of Parosh; married a Gentile wife (Ezr. x. 25).

JEZĪ'EL (El's assembly). Benjamite with David at Ziklag (1 Chr. xii. 3).

JEZLĪ'AH (Jah preserves). Benjamite, son of Elpaal (1 Chr. viii. 18).

JEZŌ'AR (whiteness). Son of Helah, wife of Asher (1 Chr. iv. 7).

JEZRAHĪ'AH. A Levite, chief chorister at the dedication of the wall (Neh. xii. 42).

JEZRĒ'EL (El has planted). Founder of Etam (1 Chr. iv. 3). "These are the families of the father of Etaus."

JEZ'REEL (what God plants). At the west foot of Mt. Gilboa, on a hill overlooking the great plain of Jezreel (Esdraelon, Judith, iv. 5). The hill is rocky and steep on the N. E. side, and about 100 ft. high. Carmel can be seen to the west, and the Jordan valley to the east.

JIB'SAM (pleasant). Son of Tola, of Issachar (1 Chr. vii. 2).

JID'LAPH (tearful). Son of Nahor (Gen. xxii. 22).

JIM'NA. Jimnah, eldest son of Asher (Num. xxvi. 44). IMNAH.

JIMNĪ'TES. Descendants of Jimna.

JIPH'TAH (freed). Judah, in the Shefelah (Josh. xv. 43). Lost.

JIPH'THAH-EL (El opens), THE GORGE OF. Jotapata (the same city) was besieged by Vespasian, held out, and stood a long time (B. J. iii. 7). Now Jefat, 12 ms. N. W. of Nazareth. The valley (gorge) of Abilin extends from near Jefat to the plain of Acre. It is inclosed with steep, wooded hills.

JŌ'AB (Jah his father). Son of Zerŭiah, David's sister. He and his brothers Abishai and Asahel cast their lot with David (1 Sam. xxii. 3), and their history runs close to his. Joab's native power and and martial deeds made him the most famous of the three brothers, and he was ambitious and crafty, jealous and revengeful, as is shown in his history as "captain of the host." Joab earned at Jebus his title of commander-in-chief. The duel between 12 young heroes on each side, between the forces of Joab and Abner, took place at the pool of GIBEON, and brought on a general battle, which turned in favor of Joab and David's forces. Abner quarreled with Ishbosheth and went over to David, when Joab killed him, treacherously pretending it was "in blood-revenge" for his brother Asahel, whom Abner had killed. David dared not punish Joab, because he and his two brothers were so useful to him in the army. In the war against Hanun, Joab made a speech which is justly noticed as a perfect model of military address: "Be of good courage, and let us play the men for our people and for the cities of our God, and the Lord do as seemeth him good," (2 Sam. x. 12). It was in the second year of this war that Uriah was murdered by David, by the help of Joab. He also, at the close of the siege, sent for David, and gave him his share of the spoil, generously waiving his own right.

JŌ'ACHAZ. JEHOAHAZ. The son of Josiah (Matt. i. 11).

JŌ'ACHIM. 1. JEHOIAKIM, JOACIM.—2. A high-priest in the time of Baruch, at Jerusalem (Bar. i. 7).

JŌ'ACIM. 1. JEHOIAKIM.—2. JEHOIACHIM (1 Esd. i. 43).—3. Joiakim, the son of Jeshua (v. 5).—4. High-priest in Jerusalem (Judith iv. 6, 14).—5. Husband of Susanna. See HISTORY OF THE BOOKS.

JŌADĀ'MUS. GEDALIAH.

JŌ'AH (Jah is helper). 1. Son of Asaph, historian to Hezekiah. Commissioned to treat with the Assyrian general Rabshakeh (Is. xxxvi. 3).—2. Son of Zimmah (1 Chr. vi. 21), brother of Ethan (ver. 42).—3. Son of Obed-edom (xxvi. 4), doorkeeper.—4. Father of Eden, assisted in Hezekiah's reformation (2 Chr. xxix. 12).—5. Son of Joahaz, a recorder or historian to Josiah (xxxiv. 8).

JŌ'AHA (Jah sustains). Father of Joah.—5. Jō'anan. Johanan son of Eliashib.

JŌAN'NA (Jah's gift). Son of Rhesa (Luke iii. 27). Hananiah in 1 Chr. iii. 19?

JŌAN'NA (Jah's gift). Wife of Chuza, Herod's steward, contributed to the support of Jesus, and brought spices to put into the tomb where his body was laid (Luke viii. 3, xxiv. 10). Joan.

JŌAN'NAN. Jehohanan, surnamed Caddis, eldest brother of Judas Maccabæus (1 Macc. ii. 2).

JŌ'ASH. JEHOASH (Jah gave). Father of Gideon, a wealthy man of the Abiezrites, who permitted the worship of idols, but also defended his son for destroying them (Judg. vi.).—2. Son of Ahaziah and 8th king of Judah. The only child of Ahaziah who escaped the massacre by Athaliah, being saved by a pious aunt and kept in the temple 6 years (2 Chr. xxii. 11).

JŌ'ATHAM. Jotham, son of Uzziah (Matt. i. 9).

JŌAZAB'DUS. Jozabad, the Levite.

JŌB (Heb. IYOB, afflicted). The hero of the BOOK OF JOB; see HISTORY.

JŌ'BAB (YOBAB, howling). Son of Jokban (Gen. x. 29). The etymology points to a district or locality which is a howling desert, and may be anywhere in the desert region of Arabia, S.—2. King of Edom (Gen. xxxvi. 33), in the line of Esau, son of Zerah of Bozrah. The Septuagint identifies this king with Job, the suffering patriarch.—3. King of Madon, routed by Joshua at Merom (Josh. xi. 1).—4. Chief in Benjamin.

JOCH'EBED (Heb. YOKEBED, Jah's glory). The aunt and wife of Amram, and mother of Moses and Aaron (Ex. vi. 20). The Sept. says "cousin" instead of aunt.

JŌ'DA. Judah the Levite in 1 Esd. v. 38 (Ezr. iii. 19); Hodaviah (ii. 40); Hodevah (Neh. vii. 43); Hodijah (x. 10); Sudias (1 Esd. v. 26).

JŌ'ED (Jah is witness). Son of Pedaiah, a Benjamite (Neh. xi. 7).

JŌ'EL (Jah is El). The prophet. See HISTORY OF THE BOOKS.

JŌĒ'LAH (Jah helps). Son of Jeroham of Gedor, with David at Ziklag.

JŌĒ'ZER (Jah's help). With David among the Philistines (1 Chr. xii. 6).

JOG'BĒHAH (elevated). Built and fortified by the tribe of Gad (Num. xxxii. 35). Mentioned with Jaazer and Beth Himram, and now called Jebeiha, 4 ms. N. of Amman (Burck. Rob.).—2. In the account of Gideon's pursuit of the Midianites (Judg. viii. 11). Gideon's route can be traced to Nowa (KARKOR). The village of Jabieh, near Tell Jabieh, a few miles N. E. of Fik, is the ancient Jogbehah.

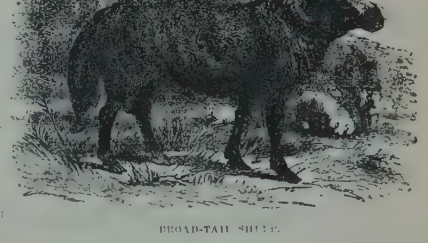
JOG'LI (exiled). Father of Bukki, chief in Dan (Num. xxxiv. 22).

JŌ'HA (Jah revives). Son of Beriah, a Benjamite (1 Chr. viii. 16).—2. One of David's guard, a Tizite, son of Shimri (xi. 45).

JOHĀ'NAN (Jah's gift). JEHOHANAN. 1. Son of Azariah in the line of Zadok (1 Chr. vi. 9), high-priest in Rehoboam's reign.—2. Son of Elioenai, in the line of Zerubbabel (1 Chr. iii. 24).—3. Son of Kareah, captain in the siege of Jerusalem, and one of the first to submit to the Chaldean governor. He arrested the murderers of this governor. (Jer. xl. 8, xli. 11). He, with others, passed a night at the Khan of Chimham (see BETHLEHEM), and settled in Egypt (2 K. xxv. 23). 8 others of this name were but little known.

JOHAN'NES (1 Esd. ix. 29). Jehohanan in Ezr. x. 28.



BROAD-TAIL SHEEP.

JOHN. Short form of Jehohanan (Jah's gift). 1. Father of Mattathias, of the Maccabees (1 Macc. ii. 1).—2. Eldest son of Mattathias; Caddis (ii. 2; ix. 36).—3. Father of Eupolemus, Envoy to Rome (viii. 17).—4. Son of Simon (xiii. 53).—5. Envoy to Lysias (2 Macc. xi. 17).—6. One of the high-priest's family who sat in judgment, with Annas and Caiaphas, on the Apostles Peter and John (Acts iv. 6). Rabbi Johanan ben Zaccai, president of the Great Synagogue at Jamnia.—7. Surname of Mark (Acts xii. 12).

8. JOHN, THE APOSTLE. Was a native of Bethsaida, on the Sea of Galilee, the son of Zebedee and Salome. He was acquainted with the character of Jesus as the Messiah before the call to be an apostle. In company with his brother James, and Peter he was specially favored by Jesus on several occasions: at the Transfiguration; the restoring of Jairus' daughter; in the garden Gethsemane; and (including Andrew) at the discourse on the fall of Jerusalem. He was mistaken, with the others of the twelve, in his idea of the temporal mission of the Messiah; and with James joined his mother in the ambitious request for places of dignity and honor. He and James were called Boanerges, for their zeal. John was called also the DIVINE and the REVELATOR, from his writings. His family could not have been poor, because they kept servants, and contributed to the support of Jesus; and he received Mary into his home at Jerusalem, after the crucifixion. He also enjoyed social privileges, and the acquaintance of the high-priest. See HISTORY OF THE BOOKS for the GOSPEL, EPISTLES and the REVELATION.

JOI'AKIM. From Jehoiakim. High-priest, son of Jeshua (Neh. xii. 10).

JOI'ARIB. From Jehoi'arib. 1. Three of this name, but little known.

JOK'DEAM (by the people). City in Judah, near Hebron (Josh. xv. 56).

JŌ'KIM. JOIAKIM. Son of Shelah son of Judah (1 Chr. iv. 22).

JOK'MEAM (Kĭtzaim in Josh. xxi. 22). In the Jordan Valley, near the east end of Esdraëlon (1 K. iv. 12).

JOK'NEAM (had by the people). City in Zebulon (Josh. xxi. 34). Tell Kaimon near the east end of Carmel.

JOK'SHAN (fowler). Son of Abraham and Keturah (Gen. xxv. 2), whose sons were Sheba and Dedan. The Arabs have a Yokshan in their literature, but there is no trace of connection with the son of Abraham.

JOK'TAN (made small). Son of Eber (Gen. x. 25), father of the Joktanite Arabs in the S. of Arabia.

JOK'THĒEL (subdued by El). City in the Shefelah of Judah (Josh. xv. 38), near Lachish, now Keitulaneh.—2. The cliff Selah, the stronghold of the Edomites (2 K. xiv. 7; 2 Chr. xxv. 11–13).

JŌNA. JOHANAN or JONAH. BAR-JONA (PETER).

JON'ADAB. JEHONADAB. 1. Son of Shimeah, nephew of David (2 Sam. xiii. 3). He was "very subtle," and a friend of his cousin Amnon, heir to the throne, and gave him the fatal advice concerning his sister Tamar, and he knew of Absalom's purpose to kill Amnon (verse 32).

JŌ'NAH (YONAH, dove). Son of Amittai, of Gath-hepher, in Zebulon. See JONAH, in the HISTORY OF THE BOOKS.

JŌ'NAN. Son of Eliakim (Luke iii. 30). JOHN.

JŌ'NAS. Greek for Jonah.

JON'ATHAN (Jah gave). JEHONATHAN. 1. Eldest son of Saul the king. He is first mentioned at the age of 30, when his father was made king (1 Sam. xiii. 2). He was married, and had one son, Mephibosheth (if no more), born about 5 years before his death (2 Sam. ii. 8; iv. 4). He was the heir to the throne.

JŌ'NATH-Ē'LEM-RĒCHŌ'KIM. The name of a musical instrument which produced soft, mellow sounds, and found only in the title of Ps. lvi., as a direction to the choir leader.

JOP'PA (YAFA, beauty). In Dan on the seashore, a sea-port in Solomon's time (Josh. xix. 46; 2 Chr. ii. 16). The cedar for the two temples, Solomon's and Zerubbabel's, and the palaces of David and Solomon was landed here (Ezr. iii. 7). Jonah embarked here when trying to escape from the unpleasant mission to Nineveh. During the wars of the Maccabees it was a stronghold (1 Macc. x. 75). Peter's "vision of tolerance" was on a house-top in this city (Acts x. 9–18). A Christian bishop resided here until the Saracens took the place. Pilgrims from all lands have landed here for many ages to go up to Jerusalem. It was taken and retaken many times during the crusades. Saladin destroyed and Richard (Lionheart) rebuilt the fortifications. In the 13th century there was not a house entire on the site. It has now 5,000 people, 3 convents, Greek, Latin, and Armenian, and several mosques. The bazaars are interesting and antique. The city is on a hill, close to the sea, and is surrounded by miles of orchards—orange, lemon and many other fruits, besides gardens, which are scarcely surpassed.

JOPPA.

The poet Ovid located here the beautiful myth of Andromeda and the sea-monster, a poetical allusion to the rocky barriers of the port, which to this day make approach to Joppa impossible by sea in a storm.

JŌ'RAH (watering). Ancestor of a family of 112 who returned from captivity (Ezr. ii. 18). Hariph in Neh. vii. 24.

JŌ'RAI (Jah teaches). A Gadite (1 Chr. v. 13).

JŌ'RAM. JEHORAM.

JOR'DAN (the descender). Heb. YARDEN; Ar. El Urdon, descender, and Esh Sheriah, the wateringplace. The largest river in Palestine. Rises in Mt. Hermon and empties into the Dead Sea. The sources are in the south, west and north-west slopes of Hermon, whose melting snows supply the fountains, some of which are so copious that each one of three forms a full stream at once. These three are: the Hasbany, the most northern, longest and muddiest; the Leddan (Ar. El-ed-Dan), the largest but shortest; and the Baniasy (of Paneas), the clearest.

There are also, a fountain and stream from Ijon; one from Belat, 3 miles N. W. of the Huleh lake, another from Ain Mellahah one mile N. W.; all of which are perennial, and large enough, each one, to turn a mill. About a mile S. of Hasbaiya the fountain of Shiba, 5 miles up the slope of Hermon, sends a stream north of the hill on which stands the Pagan temple of Hibbariyeh in ruins; another stream from the same direction is the Lūsiāny, and flows into the Jordan at El Ujar, after coursing around the ruined castle of Bostra. These streams flow in deep, rocky channels, several feet below the general level of the country. The slopes of Hermon are "alive with streams" which supply the Jordan. The Hasbany, Leddan, and Baniasy unite in the Huleh marsh, pass S. into the lake Huleh, and flowing west from its S. angle, tumbles down a rocky ravine, with cliffs on each side, full of rapids, sinking 700 feet in 9 miles, to the Sea of Galilee.

From the S. of this sea the Jordan flows in a channel 100 feet wide, rocky, winding, always descending; falling over about forty cascades and rapids, sinking 600 feet in 60 miles, in a straight line, but making nearly 200 by its windings, to the Dead Sea, where it is a shallow stream, 500 feet wide, and deep in the rainy, or shallow in the dry season. The surface is there 1300 feet below the ocean. (SEA).

The tributaries below Genessaret on the east are the Yarmuk (Jabbok?), 5 ms. S. of the sea, 120 feet wide and 4 deep; and the Jabbok, which has two outlets into the Jordan, about midway between the two seas.

There are many winter torrents, dry in summer, and several fountains, as at Pella, Wā'dy Shē'riah, Nim'rin, on the east; and on the west, Bethshan (from the well of Harod), Sā'lim, Wā'dy Fer'rāh (from Mokhua), Wā'dy Fasā'il, Wā'dy Nemāirah, Wā'dy Kelt, and the Fountain of Elisha at Jericho, besides many small and nameless fountains and streams on both sides.

This section is the only part referred to in the Bible.

Nearly the whole course is below the ocean level.

JORDAN VALLEY (ARABAH) is a long, narrow plain, N. to S., bordered by steep and nearly parallel ridges; Gilead on the east, rising 3,000 to 5,000 ft., and Samaria, on the W., rising from 2,000 to 3,000; and is about 6 ms. wide in the northern part, widening to 10 or 12 at Jericho. The sides are not regular, but are broken by ridges, or spurs, from the mountains, which run out into the plain at several places, indicated on the map, as at Bethshan, and SURTABEH (Zarthan). See GEOLOGY in PALESTINE. The surface is not level, but lifted into low hills and ridges. The map shows the course of the river through the Ghor as very winding. The upper Jordan, above the lake and marsh Huleh, is fordable in many places, the brooks being shallow, with stony beds. In the rainy season they often overflow, and are then impassable for a few days at a time. S. of the lake Huleh there is more water, and the fords are fewer. Just north of the Sea of Galilee, near Bethsaida Julias, there is a ford over sand-bars in the dry season. The road from Damascus into Galilee passes over a bridge about 2 ms. S. of the Huleh, called Jacob's Daughters (after a mythical race, said to live in oak trees), ¼ a m. S. of the Sea of Galilee there is a Roman bridge, in ruins, and a ford called SEMAKH. The bridge Mejamia is Saracenic, 5 ms. further S., but there is no ford.

There is no mention of a bridge over the Jordan in the Scriptures, and the Mejamia is the only one now in use, S. of the Sea of Galilee. Opposite Bethshan the river is fordable in the dry season. Near Succoth, just N. of Wady Yabesh (Jabesh), there is an island with sand-bars on each side, forming a ford in summer. This is probably the Bethabara of Judges vii. 24. S. from this place to the mouth of the Jabbok there are several fords at low water. 10 ms. S. of the Jabbok is the ford on the Shechem Es Salt road, and traces of a Roman bridge. There is a ford both above and below the pilgrim's bathing-place, opposite Jericho. The upper one, called El Mashrâa, is the supposed one crossed by Joshua.

The banks of the river are fringed with trees, flowering shrubs, cane and reeds; oleanders, hollyhocks, purple thistles, marigolds, anemones, willows, tamarisk, cedar, arbutus, aspen, and ghurrâh; where beasts and birds in great numbers find shelter.

JŌ'RIM. Son of Matthat (Luke iii. 29).

JOR'KOAM (people spreading). City near Hebron (1 Chr. ii. 44).

JOSA'BAD. Soldier with David at Ziklag (1 Chr. xii. 4).

JOS'APHAT for Jehoshaphat in Matt. i. 8.

JŌ'SE. Son of Eliezer (Luke iii. 29).

JOS'EDEE. JOHOZADAK.

JŌ ṢEPH (he will increase). The son of Jacob by Rachel, was born in Haran, (near Damascus?) B. C. 1726. Of his youth, up to the age of 17, we know nothing; but at that age he had so excited the envy and hate of his brothers, by simply receiving his father's gifts and attentions, and by telling his ominous dreams, and also by his acts of filial fidelity, that his brothers, prompted by Judah, sold him for a slave at Shechem, for 20 shekels of silver, to a band of Ishmaelites, who took him to Egypt (Gen. xxx. xxxvii.). Reuben had intended to rescue Joseph, and had him cast into a dry pit, from which he might be taken afterward; but he was too late. His coat (of many colors) was a long tunic with sleeves, striped or embroidered. (See DRESS). The brothers dipped this in a kid's blood, and sent it to Jacob, who was deceived by the trick, and believed Joseph had been killed by some wild beast.

The merchants sold him to Potiphar (chief of the executioners), a native of Egypt, and an officer of the Pharaoh (B. C. 1709), in the reign of Thothmes III, whose ring is engraved on page 7 (Gen. xxxix.).

In Potiphar's house he prospered, rising to the highest position of honor and confidence. Being tempted by his master's wife, and honorably denying her request, he was falsely accused by her, and thrown into prison. Here he again prospered, and was advanced to the charge of all the other prisoners (Ps. cv. 17–18).

While in the prison, two other prisoners, a butler and a baker, dreamed dreams which Joseph interpreted (Gen. xl.). These accounts are interesting, because they agree with the manners of the ancient Egyptians, as recorded on their monuments (Anc. Egypt ii. 152).

Joseph begged the butler, when he should be restored to favor, as he showed from his dream, to think of him, and speak of him to the Pharaoh; but he did not do so (Gen. xl. 13–16, 23), until the Pharaoh dreamed two prophetic dreams, which found in Joseph a successful interpreter, on the recommendation of the butler (xli.). He was then released, after two years' confinement. The dreams foreboded the approach of a seven years' famine; and on consultation with his advisers, Joseph was chosen by the Pharaoh to exercise full power over all Egypt, except the throne, as one whose wisdom was of divine origin, in token of which he put his ring on Joseph's hand, invested him with royal garments, and gave him a new name, Taphnath-paaneah (saviour of the world); and gave him for a wife Asenath, daughter of Potipherah, a priest of On.

He was now thirty years old. His two sons, Manasseh and Ephraim, were born during the seven years of plenty. His wisdom appeared when the famine was known to extend to "all lands" i. e. bordering on Egypt, and their people came to buy corn in Egypt (xli. 56–57). Among others, the ten brothers of Joseph came also, and he recognized them; but they did not know him, for he had probably adopted the dress and speech of Egypt, and besides, the boy of seventeen that they sold for a slave was now a man over thirty, and a governor.

Joseph severely tried and punished his brothers by calling them spies, putting them in prison for three days, and detaining one (Simeon) while the others returned with corn to Canaan, with orders to bring Benjamin down to Egypt. But even while pretending this severity his good heart caused him to weep; it may be as much from joy at seeing them, as from anxiety about Benjamin and his father.

As soon as Benjamin came his manner changed—with difficulty only could he act longer in a false character, and he gave orders to prepare for them to dine with him at noon (hiding himself to weep in his room). The account of the dinner agrees exactly with the monuments as to the customs of the Egyptians, which were also adopted by the Jews. Joseph was served by himself—his brethren by themselves, and the Egyptians also apart by themselves; and when each one was seated in order, according to his birthright, Simeon being released and with them, they wondered that any one should know their ages.

Joseph wished to try how far his brothers would be faithful to his father, and laid a plan to trap them and detain Benjamin by putting a cup in Benjamin's sack. On being arrested when a little way out of the city, and brought back before Joseph, with Benjamin as the detected criminal, Judah showed the deepest regard for his aged father's feelings, and offered himself a ransom, that Benjamin might return to him. This, in the Scripture, is one of the most touching passages in the whole course of literature (Gen. xliv. 18–34).

Joseph could bear it no longer, but made himself known to his brothers, and then his first question was, "Is my father alive?" and he hastens to relieve them of anxiety and fear, by showing them that it was God's providence that sent him to Egypt to prepare the way for their salvation from death by famine (xlv. xlvi.).

Pharaoh gave Joseph leave, and ordered him to bring his father and his household into Egypt; and accordingly they were brought and settled in Goshen, where Joseph met his father, honored him by presenting him before the king, and sustained him and his through the remaining years of famine (xlvii. 12).

Joseph's prudence and policy made Pharaoh absolute master and owner of all Egypt, except the priest's land, by the sale of the stores which had been laid up during the years of plenty. This is the greatest social revolution recorded in history—the reduction of an entire nation to slavery or dependence by famine (13–26).

Jacob died, and Joseph had his body embalmed and carried to the cave of Machpelah (i. 13).

Joseph's brothers feared him after his father's death, and coming near, begged his forgiveness, when he made the noble reply: "Fear not; I will nourish you and your little ones."

He lived to the age of 110 years, and saw Ephraim's children to the third generation; and Manasseh's also were brought up on his knees.

When he died, they embalmed his body, and put it in a coffin in Egypt. (B. C. 1616.)

He had reminded them of God's promise to bring them again into Canaan, and required them to carry his bones with them when they went. So they carried the body in the desert for forty years, and laid it in its final resting-place at Shechem (Josh. xxiv. 32).

Joseph is above all others the purest character known to history, (always excepting Jesus). Unlike David, Solomon, and any other, he left only good reports of his heart and hands. His trials, resistance to temptation, degradation, exaltation, saving his people, and confounding his enemies, mark him as a type of the Christ.

JŌ'SEPH. The son of Heli, the husband of Mary, and the legal father of Jesus (Matt. i.). The first fact we learn of him is his descent from David. He is then mentioned as the betrothed husband of Mary. Joseph was an artisan of some kind (the original Greek word meaning smith, or maker of articles out of any material); and it is probable that he was a carver of wood for interior decoration (a carpenter), and that his son Jesus was taught the same trade. All handicraft were held in honor, and they were learned and followed by the sons of the best men.

When Jesus was 12 years old, they went up to Jerusalem, to the annual feast of the Passover, and the incident of the child among the doctors occurred.

Joseph is not mentioned again in the gospels after this time.

It is supposed that he died before the crucifixion, from the words of Jesus when on the cross, recommending his mother to the care of the beloved disciple (John xix. 26). The question of his neighbors at Nazareth, as recorded by Mark, seems to indicate that he was then dead. See MARY.

MELON.

JOSEPH 3, of Issachar, one of the spies (Num. xiii. 7).—4. One who had married a Gentile wife (Ezr. x. 42).—5. Four of the ancestors of Jesus had this name (Luke iii. 23, 24, 26, 30).—6. Of Arimathea. All we know of him is that he had some wealth, and was a member of the Sanhedrin, a secret disciple of Jesus, and that he appeared for a time, taught one great lesson, and was heard of no more.

JOṢEPH, called BARSĀ'BAS (son of the old man, or wisdom). Nominated but not chosen to fill a vacancy in the 12 (Acts i. 23).

JŌ'SES (Jesus, or Joseph). 1. Son of Eliezer (Luke iii. 29).—2. Brother of Jesus (Matt. xiii. 55).—3. Joses Barnabas (Acts iv. 36).

JŌSĒ'PHUS (Greek-Latin form of Joseph).

JŌ'SHAH (JOSHAVIAH, Jah lets dwell). Chief in Simeon. Son of Amaziah (1 Chr. iv. 34).

JOSHA'PHAT (JEHOSHAPHAT), the Mithnite, a hero in David's guard (1 Chr. xi. 43).

JOSHAVĪ'AH (Jah lets dwell). Son of Elnaam, one of David's guard (1 Chr. xi. 46).

JOSHBEKA'SHAH (Jah sits firm). Son of Heman, leader of the 16th choir (1 Chr. xxv. 4).

JOSHEBBAS SEBET (the people turn to Jah). The Ethnite (in the margin of 2 Sam. xxiii, 9).

JOSH'UA (Jah his help). (The same in the Hebrew as the original of Jesus). The son of Nun, and successor of Moses as leader of the people. His name was first Oshea (Num. xiii. 8), and in the N. T. he is called Jesus (Acts vii. 45; Heb. iv. 8). He was of the tribe of Ephraim (1 Chr. vii. 27). See BOOK OF JOSHUA in the HISTORY OF THE BOOKS, and TIMNATH SERAH. He died at the age of 110.

JOSH'UA. JE'SHUA. The son of Josedech, who was carried away by Nebuchadnezzar (1 Chr. vi. 15), and high-priest after the return from Babylon. There are several other persons of this name, of whom very little is known.

JOSI'AH (YOSHIAHU, Jah heals). 1. Son of

EAGLE. LAMMERGEIER.

Amon, and 15th king of Judah, from B. C. 641 to 610, reigning 31 yrs., from 8 yrs. old. His history is given in 2 K. xxii., xxiv.; 2 Chr. xxxiv., xxxv., and Jeremiah i. to xii. In his day the Temple was repaired and the BOOK OF THE LAW was found (see HISTORY OF THE BOOKS). He was wounded in a battle against Pharaoh Necho, and died near Jerusalem, where he was buried with great display.—2. Son of Zephaniah (Zech. vi. 9).

JOSIBI'AH (Jah makes to dwell). Father of Jehu (1 Chr. iv. 35).

JOSIPHI'AH (Jah increase him). Ancestor of Shelomith, who returned with Ezra (viii. 10).

JOT (Heb. YOD, the hand). The smallest letter in the Hebrew alphabet. Used as a symbol of the least. Jot or tittle (Matt. v. 28); not even the finishing touch.

JOTBAH (goodness). Native town of Haruz and his daughter Meshullemeth (2 K. xxi. 19). Et Taiyibeh (see OPHRAH). Arabic, Et Tayib, good. There are three sites so named. 1. S. of Hebron; 2. W. of Hebron; 3. N. of Jerusalem.

JOTBATH. JOTBA'THAH (goodly). Wady el Athbeh, in the desert, N. W. of Akabah.

JO'THAM (Jah is upright). 1. Son of Gideon (Judg. ix. 5). His parable of the bramble is the oldest of its kind. He lived at Beer.—2. Son of king Uzziah, succeeding him to the throne of Judah B. C. 758, at the age of 25, and reigning 16 years (2 K. xv.; 2 Chr. xxvii.).—3. Son of Jahdai, in Judah's line (1 Chr. ii. 47).

JOZ'ABAD. JEHOZABAD. There were seven of this name, without special note.

JOZACHAR (Jah remembers). Son of Shimeath (2 K. xii. 2). Zabad in 2 Chr. xxiv. 26.

JU'BAL (music). Son of Lamech, by Adah (Gen. iv. 21); a teacher, and perhaps inventor of musical instruments, both for string and wind.

JU'BILEE (YOBEL, rushing sound). See CHRONOLOGY, p. 31. The year of Jubilee was the 49th, so as to count full 7's, and no more. If on the 50th, the count by 7's would be interrupted.

JU'DA (Judas). Son of Joseph, father of Simeon (Luke iii. 30).—2. Son of Joanna (Hananiah), (iii. 26). Abiud in Matt. i. 13.—3. Brother of Jesus (Mark vi. 3).—4. JUDAH.—5. Juda, for the land of Judah in Matt. ii. 6, etc.

JUDÆ'A. Latin form of Judea.

JU'DAH (YEHUDAH, praise Jah). The Jew or Hebrew. JUDA. JUDAH. 1. Fourth son of Jacob, by Leah. His brothers were Reuben, Simeon, Levi (Judah), Issachar, Zebulon. He was a leader in family matters from his youth up, and more is known of him than of any other except Joseph. Reuben advised the brothers to throw Joseph into the pit, and Judah proposed the sale to the traders, both acting honorably to themselves, wishing to save the life of Joseph (Gen. xxvii. 26). See JOSEPH for Judah's conduct in Egypt (Gen. xliv. 14, 16–34). Judah went before Jacob into Egypt (xlvi.). Jacob honors Judah first in his blessings (xlix. 8–10). He had 5 sons, 3 by a Canaanite, the daughter of Shuah—ER, ONAN and SHELAH—and 2 by the widow of Er (TAMAR), Pharez and Zerah. (See 12 TRIBES). The boundaries of Judah are more carefully noted than any of the others (Josh. xv. 20–63). The district was about 45 miles N. to S., and nearly 50 wide E. to W. See PALESTINE, GEOLOGY, CLIMATE, KINGDOM OF JUDAH.—2. A Levite ancestor of Kadmiel (Ezr. iii. 9).—3. A Levite, who had a Gentile wife (x. 23).—4. A Benjamite, son of Senuah (xi. 9).—5. Assisted in dedicating the wall (xii. 34).

JU'DAH, KINGDOM OF. The kingdom actually began with the revolt of the 10 tribes, but was really a continuation of the kingdom of Saul and David. The kingdom was an original element in the system that Moses projected, and the first elections, of Saul, David, and Solomon, were divinely directed. See list of kings in ISRAEL. Rehoboam, Solomon's son and successor, lost the ten tribes, and also suffered from the Pharaoh SHISHAK, who robbed the temple (2 Chr. xii.).

Jehoshaphat was the greatest king after David, and increased the power and wealth of his people. His ships being destroyed in a storm, his scheme for commerce was given up.

A grave error was committed in a marriage with the house of Ahab, Jehoram taking Athaliah for a wife, who introduced her mother Jezebel's image-worship.

The treasures of the temple or of the king were several times carried away from Judah. All the vast hoards of David and Solomon were lost by Rehoboam to Shishak (1 K. xiv. 26); Benhadad took from Asa the savings of 40 years. Jehoash sent to Hazael all that Jehoshaphat, Jehoram, Ahaziah, and himself had dedicated, besides his private wealth (2 K. xii. 18); Jehoash of Israel took from Amaziah all the treasures (xiv. 11–14); Ahaz surrendered to Tiglath Pileser (xvi. 8); Hezekiah to Sennacherib 300 talents of silver, and 30 of gold (xviii. 14–16); in the days of Josiah (or after he was killed) the Pharaoh could only collect 100 talents of silver, and 1 talent of gold, by taxation, there being no treasure in the temple, and (perhaps a mistake) Nebuchadnezzar carried off all the treasures of the temple, with the very vessels that Solomon had made (xxiv. 13), 5400 in number (Ezra i. 11). The royal line was twice almost destroyed, by Jehu, and by Athaliah. The real cause of decay in this power was the contest between the church and the state; the priest grew stronger as the king was weaker. Faction grew bold and fierce, and bloodshed was common (Ez. xxii). The nation grew wealthy, luxurious, superstitious, idolatrous, with only a formal show of true religion. The king appointed the high-priest, but did not dare to depose one. The high-priests gained more honor than the kings—especially it was a great honor to trace to Zadok the priest. But the nation could not be saved even by a pure high-priesthood. Society was corrupt, and full of contention, and unable to defend itself against Egypt and Babylon. The kingdom lasted 487 yrs.; 387 after Israel seceded, and 133 after Israel's captivity.

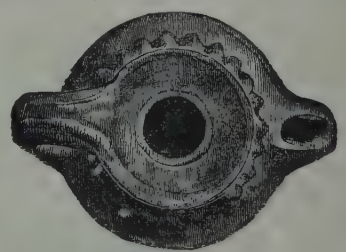
JU'DAS (Greek-Latin form of Judah). 1. In 1 Esd. ix. 23.—2. 3d son of Mattathias, the Maccabæus (1 Macc. ii. 4, etc.).—Son of Calphi (xi. 70). —4. A Jew in Jerusalem (2 Macc. i. 10).—5. Son of Simon, and brother of John Hyrcanus (1 Macc. xvi. 2).—6. The patriarch Judah, in Matt. i. 2, 3. —7. A man in Damascus, who lodged Paul (Saul) after his conversion (Acts ix. 11).—8. BAR'SABAS a leading member of the Church at Jerusalem (Acts xv. 22), a prophet (v. 32), chosen with Silas to go with Barnabas and Saul to Antioch as delegates on the Gentile convert question (v. 27).—9. Of Galilee, the leader of a revolt in the time of Quirinus (A. D. 6), mentioned by Gamaliel in his speech before the Sanhedrin (Acts v. 37). He was a religious enthusiast, whose motto was, "We have no Lord or Master but God." See Josephus. xviii. 1, § 1.

JU'DAS ISCAR'IOT (from KERIOTH, his native place). Son of Simon (John vi. 71). His early life is not recorded. He was awarded the unhappy notoriety of betraying Jesus, his Lord and Master. He must have been a useful man among the 12, because he was appointed their steward (John xii. 6). Jesus knew his character from the first (vi. 7); but no one else even suspected him up to the very last day, when Peter and John were only made to know by a private sign from the Master who was the betrayer (xiii. 26). He got from the high-priest 30 shekels, the price of a slave, but returned the money when repentance overtook him, after the crucifixion. His tender heart and quick conscience appears in the fact that he killed himself rather than live with the feeling of remorse for his crime.

It seems probable that Judas did not stay to the Lord's Supper.

JUDAS. JUDE. A disciple, writer of the Epistle (see HISTORY OF THE BOOKS). He was "brother of James" (Jude 1), "the Lord's brother" (Gal. i. 19; ii. 9, 12; Matt. xiii. 55; Mark vi. 3). He was not an apostle, for he did not believe on Jesus as the Christ until after the crucifixion (John vii. 5). Only one question of his to Jesus is all that is recorded of him (John xiv. 22). Eusebius (History iii. 20, 32), says the Lord's relatives were feared by the Emperor Domitian, and were known as late as the end of Trajan's reign.

JUDÆA. JUDE'A (Jewish). The Roman name of the territory of Judah, or the southern of the three divisions, Galilee, Samaria, Judea. (See the Map). Jewry in John vii. 1, and Dan. v. 13. Judea also in Ezra v. 8, on the return from the captivity.



EARTHEN LAMP. NO. 4.

The chief interest in Judæa is in Jerusalem and its vicinity, although there are many names of cities all over its territory, connected with interesting persons and events.

JUDÆA, THE WILDERNESS OF. Was along the W. shore of the Dead Sea.

JUDG'ES (SHOFETIM). Patriarchal seniors who administered justice, usually the chief or head of a tribe (Sheikh). Moses introduced the system on the advice of his father-in-law, Jethro (Ex. xviii). There were two distinct orders of judges. 1. The leader, or chief of the whole nation, instead of or before the kings were elected.—2. The elder princes or chiefs of families. A list of judges over all Israel is given in CHRONOLOGY, page 32. For BOOK OF JUDGES see HISTORY OF THE BOOKS.

JUDG'MENT. Judicial decision. Sentence of a judge. The Day of Judgment (Matt. x. 5; xi. 22), the great day (Jude 6), last day (John xi. 24), in which Christ will judge the world (Acts xvii. 31; John v. 22), in righteousness (Matt. xxv. 31-46; 2 Cor. v. 10; Rev. xx.). See ADVENT.

JUDG'MENT HALL (Gr. praitorion), (John xviii. 28). This has been located in Pilate's house, and in Herod's palace, and in the Castle Antonia. There was another hall at Cæsarea (Jos. Ant. xv. 9, § 6).

JŪ'DITH (YEHUDITH, Jewess). 1. Wife of Esau, dau. of Beeri; also called Aholibama (Gen. xxvi. 34, xxxvi. 2).—2. Judith the heroine of the BOOK OF JUDITH; see HISTORY.

JŪ'LIA (feminine of Julius) a disciple at Rome, wife(?) of Philologus (Rom. xvi. 15).

JŪ'LIUS. Centurion of the "Augustus Band," who conducted Paul to Rome from Cæsarea, and used him courteously (Acts xxvii. 1, 3).

JŪ'NIA. A disciple at Rome (Rom. xvi. 7).

JŪ'NIPER (ROTHEM). A white-blossomed broom, found in Spain, Barbary, Syria, and the desert of Sinai, and called Spanish broom, in Arabic Bethem. The bush is the largest in the desert, and gives shade from the sun, wind, and rain, and the Bedawins make charcoal from the twigs (illustrating Ps. cxx. 4). Job speaks of eating rothem roots (xxx. 4), as a picture of abject poverty and want. Elijah slept under a broom bush (Rob. i. 203).

JŪ'PITER (Gr. Zeus, Latin Jupiter, Divumpater, heaven-father). The son of Saturn and Ops, brother and husband of Juno, father and king of gods and men, and supreme ruler of the universe, in the Greek and Roman mythology. Jupiter Tonans, the thunderer; fulminator, the lightning-wielder; Pluvius, the rain-giver. See PAUL.

JŪ'SHABHĒ'SED (loving kindness is returned). Son of Zerubbabel (1 Chr. iii. 20).

JUSTIFICĀ'TION (Gr. dikaio). Used in the Bible to mean passing sentence or giving a decision (Deut. xxv. 1; Prov. xvii. 15; Is. v. 22; Ps. cxliii. 2). It is opposed by condemn (Gr. katakrino), in Rom. viii. 33, 34.

JUS'TIFY. The faith that justifies is a working living faith, and must so prove itself whenever occasion demands.

JUS'TUS (just). 1. Surname of Joseph Barsabas (Acts i. 23).—2. A disciple at Corinth (xviii. 7).—3. Surname of Jesus, a friend of Paul (Col. iv. 11).

JUT'TAH (YUTAH, inclined). An ancient city of Judah, allotted to the priests (Josh. xv. 55). The residence of Zacharias, a priest, the father of John the Baptist. It is now a large village, five miles south of Hebron. (See Luke i.). It is found on the Egyptian monuments as tah-n-nu, a fort of the Anakim, near Hebron. Called "a city of Juda" in Luke i. 39.

K

KAB'ZĒL (gathered by El). Judah in the S. E. (Josh. xv. 21). The native place of Benaiah, one of David's "mighty men" (2 Sam. xxiii. 20; 1 Chr. xi. 22).

KAB'BALAH. Reception; doctrine received orally. The teachings are: 1. God is above everything; even above being and thinking. Therefore it cannot be said truly that he has either a will, desire, thought, action—language, because these belong to finite man. He cannot be comprehended by the intellect, nor described with words. He is in a peculiar sense without life, for He cannot die, and He in a certain sense does not exist, because that which is incomprehensible does not exist to us. He therefore made known some properties of his existence to us.

The will to create implies limit, therefore the imperfect world, limited and finite, is no work of the infinite; but since there cannot be any accident or chance where infinite wisdom resides, the world (and universe) must have been indirectly created by the 10 intelligences (SEFIROTH), which emanate from the One original emanation, the infinite intelligence (EN SEF). These 10 powers have bodies, the one original emanation (not created) has a form also. They are divided into 3 groups; which operate on the 3 worlds, of intellect, of souls, and of matter.

KĀDES (Judith, i. 9). Summoned to aid him by Nebuchadnezzar. Kadesh Naphtali (Josh. xv. 23).

KĀDĒS. Greek form of Kadesh (Judg. i. 9.)

KĀ'DESH. K. BARNEA (holy places). El Mishpat (spring of judgment), which is Kadesh (Gen. xiv. 7). The most northern place reached by the Israelites in their direct road to Canaan. Located at Ain el Weibeh, on the western side of the Arabah, N. W. of Petra, where there is the most copious fountain and the most important watering-place in that valley. There are no ruins of any "city" (v. 16), nor of the tomb of Miriam (Jerome, Onom.). See EXODUS.

KAD'MĪEL (one stands before El). A Levite who returned with Zerubbabel (Ezr. ii. 40, iii. 9; Neh. vii. 43).

PISTACHIO.

KAD'MONITES THE. Children of the East (Gen. xv. 19).

KĀ'IN. CAIN (Num. xxiv. 22).

KAL'LAI (swift messenger of Jehovah?) A priest (Neh. xii. 20).

KĀ'NAH (reed) (Josh. xix. 28). Asher. Seven miles S. E. of Tyre, a village of 300 families. A mile north of it is the ancient site (Em el Awamid, mother of columns), with ruins, some of which are colossal—foundations, oil-presses, cisterns, and posts of houses, and great numbers of columns (L. and B. 298). AIN KANAH, five miles S. E. of Sidon, is also claimed as the true site.

KĀ'NAH, THE RIVER. Boundary between Ephraim and Manasseh, flowing into the Mediterranean two miles S. of Cæsarea (Josh. xvi. 8, xvii. 9), now called Nar Ahkar.

KA'RĒAH (bald-head). Father of Johanan and Jonathan (Jer. xl. 8), called CAREAH.

KAR'KĀA (flat). On the boundary, next to Azmon, on the south side of Judah (Josh. xv. 3). Lost.

KAR'KOR (level place). Where Zeba and Zalmunna felt "secure" with their host, and Gideon smote them (Judg. viii. 10, 11). Somewhere on the level Mishor, but not identified.

KAR'TAH (city). (Josh. xxi. 34). In Zebulon. Lost.

KAR'TAN (two towns). Naphtali (Josh. xxi. 32). Kirjathaim?

KATT'ATH (small). Zebulon (Josh. xix. 13). Lost.

KĒ'DAR (black). Second son of Ishmael (Gen. xxv. 13). Settled his tribe in the N. W. of Medina, in Arabia, bordering Palestine.

KEDE'MAH (eastward). Son of Ishmael (Gen. xxv. 15).

KĒD'EMOTH (beginnings). Reuben, east of the Dead Sea, near the Arnon (Deut. ii. 26). Name of a city and a wilderness (i. e. the pasture-land) near it. Lost. This district has not been explored.

KĒ'DESH (sanctuary). 1. Kēdesh in Galilee, one of the Cities of Refuge. A fortified city in Naphtali (Josh. xix. 37). The residence of Barak (Judg. iv. 6), where he and Deborah assembled their army.

KĒ'DRON. KIDRON.

KEHĒ'LATHAH (assembly). (Num. xxxiii. 22). Between Sinai and Kadesh. Lost.

KĒI'LAH (fort). Judah, in the Shefelah (Josh. xv. 44). David rescued it from the Philistines in harvest-time (1 Sam. xxiii. 1). It was then fortified (ver. 7). After the return from Babylon the people of Keilah assisted Nehemiah in rebuilding the walls of Jerusalem (Neh. iii. 17, 18).

KEÏ'LAH, the Garmite, descendant of Caleb (1 Chr. iv. 19).

KELAÏ'AH (assemblg). KELITA (Ezr. x. 23).

KEL'ITA (dwarf). A Levite who returned with Ezra (Ezr. x. 23), KELAIAH.

KEM'UEL (assembly of El?). 1. A son of Nahor (Gen. xxii. 21).—2. Son of Shiptan, appointed by Moses to assist in dividing the land of Canaan (Num. xxxiv. 24).—3. Father of Hashabiah (1 Chr. xxvii. 17).

KĒ'NAN. CAINAN. Son of Enos (1 Chr. i. 2; Gen. v. 9).

KĒ'NATH (possession). A strong city of Bashan, or rather Argob. Taken by Nobah, who changed its name to Nobah (Num. xxxiii. 42).

KĒ'NAZ (hunting). One of the "dukes" (sheikhs) of Edom (Gen. xxxvi. 15; 1 Chr. i. 53). Caleb and Othniel were of this race.

KĒ'NEZITE (Gen. xv. 19.) An ancient tribe of unknown origin, inhabiting the land promised to Abraham, east of Palestine.

KĒ'NITE (smith). A tribe much mentioned, but whose origin is not recorded. They may have been a branch of Midian, for Jethro is a Kenite, and lived in Midian when first known by Moses. The RECHABITES are the most noted of this people. Jael, who killed Sisera, was a Kenite (Judg. iv. 11).

KEN'IZZITES (hunter). (Gen. xv. 19). Lost.

KĒ'RENHAP'PUCH (paint-horn). Daughter of Job (Job. xlii. 14). Horn of plenty. See EYES.

KER'CHIEFS (Ez. xiii. 18, 21). DRESS.

KĒ'RIOTH (cities). (Josh. xv. 25). Judah, south. Kuryetein (two cities), 15 miles S. of Hebron. The town from which Judas Iscariot was named.—2. A town in Moab, mentioned with Dibon, Bozrah and others (Jer. xlviii. 24). Now Kureiyeh, six miles east of Busrah, on the west slope of the Hauran. There are many ruined columns; and a cistern having a stone roof supported on a triple row of columns, under which are benches, rising like a theatre. A Greek inscription on one of the benches dates the cistern A. D. 296. The houses had walls four to eight feet thick, of solid basalt, with roofs of slabs of stone reaching across from wall to wall. In Amos ii. 2, Kirioth means the "cities of Moab."

KĒ'ROS (weaver's comb). A Nethinim, who returned with Zerubbabel (Ezr. ii. 44).

KET'TLE (dud). A vessel used for sacrifices or cooking (1 Sam. ii. 14).

KETU'RAH (incense). Wife of Abraham (Gen. xxv. 1). See ABRAHAM. The sons of Keturah were Zimran, Jokshan, Medan, Midian, Ishbak and Shuah. Keturah herself is lost to history.

KEY (mafteah). Keys are sometimes very large in the East, two feet or more long (see page 46). It is a symbol of authority (Is. xxii. 22, etc.).

KEZĪ'A (cassia). Daughter of Job (Job xlii. 14).

EARTHEN LAMP. NO. 5.

KĒ'ZIZ, THE VALLEY OF (destruction). A city of Benjamin, named Emekkeziz, and mistranslated in Josh. xvii. 21. Near Jericho. Lost.

KIB'ROTH HATTĀ'AVAH (graves of lust). Station of the wandering.

KIBZĀ'IM (two heaps). In Ephraim (Josh. xxi. 22). Jokmeam.

KID. Young goat. MILK.

KID'RON (turbid). In the original Hebrew it is always called a dry water-course or wady (nachal. See RIVER). East of the walls of Jerusalem, at the foot of Olivet (2 Sam. xv. 23; John xviii. 1). Now called the Valley of Jehoshaphat.

KILN. KIL. Brick.

KĪ'NAH (lamentation). Judah, next to Edom (Josh. xv. 22). Lost.

KIN'DRED. Relatives.

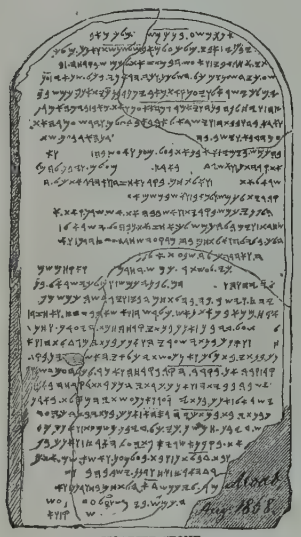
KING (MELECH; Gr. basileus). A title applied to men. Sometimes it is used of men who were only leaders or rulers of one city, as the king of Sodom, etc.

KINGDOM OF GOD. The divine kingdom of Jesus the Christ. Matthew only says "kingdom of the heavens" for the state of things to be expected at the coming of the Messiah, as soon as converted sinners become citizens of the heavenly kingdom (Rev. i. 6). For BOOK OF KINGS see HISTORY.

KING'S DALE (Gen. xiv. 17; 2 Sam. xviii. 18). (SHAVEH, level place). The Plain of Rephaim. Absalom's pillar, a name given to a modern structure (of the later Roman age in style), is a mistake, for his pillar was reared up in a plain or broad valley (Emek. See PLAIN). See cut of Absalom's Tomb, page 1.

KIR (a wall). Where the people of Damascus were carried by the king of Assyria (2 K. xvi. 9). Elam and Kir are mentioned together by Isaiah (xxii. 6).

KIR HA'RESH, KIR HAR'ASETH, KIR HAR'ESETH, KIR HE'RES (brick fort) and KIR MO'AB (2 K. iii. 25; Is. xvi. 7; Jer. xlviii. 31, 36). One of the chief fortified cities of Moab (built of brick —heres). When Joram, king of Israel, invaded Moab, Kir was the only city not taken, and this was saved by the sacrifice by the king of Moab of his eldest son, on the wall (2 K. iii. 27). Kerak (the modern name) stands on the top of a rocky hill, about 10 miles from the Dead Sea, and 3,000 feet above its level.



MOABITE STONE.

Rev. Mr. Klein (of the Palestine Exploration) in 1868 found a Semitic monument in Moab, on which there is an inscription (translated by Mr. Deutsch, of the British Museum), giving an account of many cities named in the Bible, which king Mesha built, among which is Karkha (Kerak). This is the oldest monument in the Phœnician language that is known. It adds to our knowledge of that day. In 2 K. i. 1, is a mention of a rebellion of Moab, which was put down by Israel and Judah. This stone gives particulars, not in the Bible, of the acts of the king of Moab; his conquest of cities; rebuilding others; his religious wars; and that he believed himself divinely guided by the god Chemosh.

Almost the whole of the Greek alphabet is found on this stone, such as is in use now, and identical with the Phœnician, even including those letters which were supposed to have been added during the Trojan war; and also the Greek letter ŭpsĭlon, which was supposed to have been added later. The most ancient letters are here shown to be the most simple—mere outlines.

KIR'IAH (town). Kerioth, Kartah, Kartan, Kiriathaim (Ez. xxv. 9). In Moab. One of the "glories of the country," named among the denunciations of Jeremiah (xlviii. i. 23).

KIR'JATH (Josh. xviii. 28). In Benjamin. Lost. —2. KIRJATHAIM, KIRIATHAIM (double city). Reuben, a little south of Heshbon (Num. xxxii. 27). It was a large Christian village in the time of Eusebius and Jerome. Kureiyat is a ruin near Jebel Attarus, south of Wady Zurka Main, south of which is a level plateau called el Koura (plain), which may be the Plain of Moab. It is one of the oldest of Bible cities (Gen. xiv. 5). It was on the "Plain" (shaveh) Kiriathaim that the Emims were smitten by the eastern kings who plundered Sodom. —3. A town of Naphtali (1 Chr. vi. 76). Kartan.— 4. KIRJATH ARBA. Hebron. It is supposed that Hebron was the ancient name, the Canaanites calling it Kirjath Arba on their taking possession, when the Israelites restored the ancient name. A tradition says the city was called Arba, or four, because Adam, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob were buried there. But Joshua says Arba was a great man (xiv. 15).—5. KIRJATH BAAL (Baal's city), (Josh. xv. 60, xviii. 14). Kirjath Jearim.—6. KIRJATH HUZOTH. Where Balaam was conducted by Balak to offer sacrifice (Num. xxii. 30). Kureiyat. —7. KIRJATH JEARIM (city of forests), (Josh. ix. 17). One of the 4 cities of the Gibeonites, who tricked Joshua. Also Kirjath Arim, peopled after the Captivity (Ezr. ii. 25).—8. KIRJATH SANNAH (city of palms), (Josh. xv. 49). KIRJATH SEPHER (city of the book). Judah. Called also Debir.

KISH (a bow? see ARMS, i. 3). Father of Saul 2 (1 Sam. x. 21).—2. Son of Jehiel (1 Chr. viii. 30; ix. 36).—3. Great-grandfather of Mordecai (Esth. ii. 5).—4. Levite (1 Chr. xxiii. 21).

KISH'I (KUSHAIAH). A Merarite, ancestor of Ethan (1 Chr. vi. 44). KISH 4.

KISH'ION (hard). Issachar, in Esdraëlon (Josh. xix. 20). Kedesh (1 Chr. vi. 72).

KISH'ON, THE RIVER (Judg. iv. 7). Drains Esdraëlon and neighboring hills.

KI'SON. KISH'ON (Ps. lxxxiii. 9).

KISS (NASHAK; Gr. phileo). The kiss is used to denote: 1. on the lips, affection; 2. on the cheek, respect, or salutation; 3. a symbol of charity in the early Church (Rom. xvi. 6; 1 Cor. xvi. 20; 2 Cor. xiii. 12, etc.); 4. on the beard, respect to age or authority; 5. on the forehead, condescension; 6. on the back, or palm, of the hand, submission; as also to kiss the feet; 7. on the ground near, a mark of respect; 8. to kiss the hand to an idol, worship (1 K. xix. 18; Hos. xiii. 2).

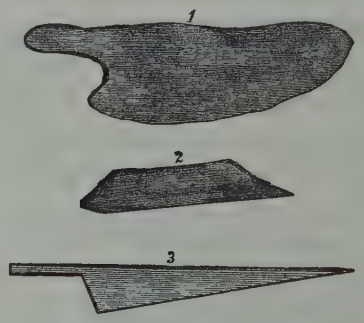
KITE (AYAH, vulture, in Job xxviii. 7). See page 68 for cut. A bird of prey (Lev. xi. 14; Deut. xiv. 13). The word AYAH was probably the name of the species, and is well translated kite.

KITH'LISH (Josh. xv. 40). Judah, in the Shefelah, near Eglon. Lost.

KIT'RON (Judg. i. 30). The Canaanites were not driven out, but remained as tributaries. Lost.

KIT'TIM (Gen. x. 4; 1 Chr. i. 7). CHITTIM.

KNIFE (CHEREB), (Josh. v. 2), sword; MAAK'ELETH (Judg. xix. 29) table-knife; MACHALAPHIM (Ezr. i. 9) slaughter-knives; SAKKIN, knife (Prov. xxiii. 2). The most ancient historians mention knives of stone and of iron. The Easterns make little use of the knive at the table. Jeremiah speaks of a pen-knife (xxxvi. 23). The razor was used to shave the head of the Nazarite (Num. vi.



KNIVES.

5, etc.), and the bodies of priests in Egypt (Herodotus ii. 86).

KNOP (CAPTOR, crown, Ex. xxv. 31). Imitation of the blossom of an almond tree; and a small gourd or cucumber (PEKAIM, cucumbers, in 1 K. vi. 18; vii. 24). See FRINGE, on page 60. Fringes, tassels and borders were symbolical in the dress of the high priest and of the Jews generally.

KO'A (Ez. xxiii. 23). Lost.

KO'HATH (assembly). Son of Levi (Gen. xlvi. 11). KEHATH. He died aged 133 (Ex. vi. 18). Moses and Aaron were of his line. The posterity of Kohath in the Exodus numbered 8600 males, 2750 being over 30. They (except Aaron and his sons) bore the ark and its furniture (Num. iii. 31).

KO'HATHITES. Descendants of KOHATH (Num. iii. 27, 30).

KOLI'AH (voice of Jah). 1. A Benjamite (Neh. xi. 7).—2. Father of Ahab (Jer. xxix. 21).

KOPH (back of the head), (Ps. cxix.). WRITING.

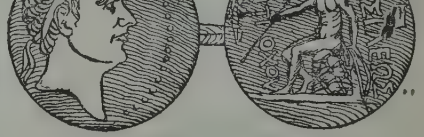
LAMP STAND.

KO'RAH (bald). 1. Son of Esau (Gen. xxxvi. 5, 14, 18), one of the "dukes" of Edom.—2. Another duke, son of Esau (xxxvi. 16).—3. Son of Hebron (1 Chr. ii. 43).—4. Son of Izhar, a Levite, and ringleader of a rebellion against Moses and Aaron; the only person of note in it. His sons were not guilty, and escaped his doom. Samuel the prophet was of this family (1 Chr. vi. 22.). Ten psalms bear their names in the titles, as choristers in the temple.

KO'RAHITE (1 Chr. ix. 19, 31). Kōr'hite, or Kō'rathite, descendant of Korah.

KO'RAHITES, THE. Descendants of Korah 4 (Num. xxvi. 58). KORAHITE.

KO'RE (partridge). 1. A Korahite, ancestor of Shallum (1 Chr. ix. 19, xxvi. 1).—2. Son of Imnah, an overseer of offerings (2 Chr. xxxi. 14).—3. (1. Chr. xxvi. 19). "Sons of Kore."



COIN OF ANTIOCHUS III.

KOR'HITES, THE. Descendants of Korah 4 (Ex. vi. 24). KORAHITE.

KOZ (thorn). ACCOZ, COZ, HAKKOZ (Ezr. ii. 61).

KUSHAI'AH (rainbow). KISH, father of Ethan (1 Chr. xv. 17).

L

LA'ADAH (order). Son of Shelah (1 Chr. iv. 21).

LA'ADAN (put in order). 1. Ancestor of Joshua (1 Chr. vii. 26).—2. Son of Gershon; Libni (xxiii. 7, 9; xxxi. 21).

LA'BAN (white). (Deut. i. 1). Libnah? (Num. xxxiii. 20). Ptolemy mentions an Auara; the Peutinger tables a Hauarra; and the Arabs have a place called Ain Howara—all of which mean white, and may refer to the same locality.

LA'BAN (white). Son of Bethuel, brother of Rebekah, father of Leah and Rachel.

LAB'ANA. LEBANA (1 Esd. v. 29)

LACE (thread, cord), (Ex. xxviii. 28, 37).

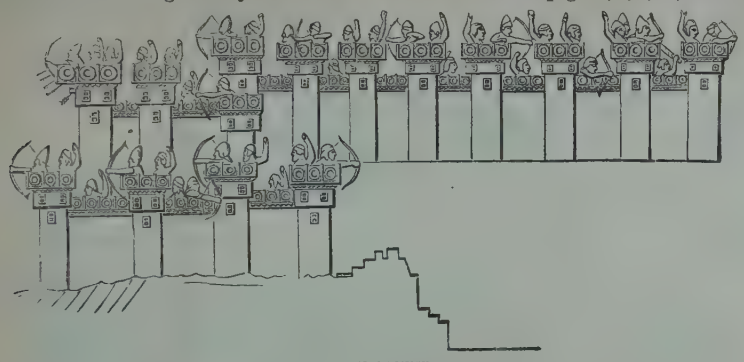
LACEDEMO'NIANS. Inhabitants of Sparta (1 Macc. xii. 2, 5, 6, 20, 21).

LA'CHISH (obstinate). An ancient royal Amorite city (Josh. x. 3), whose king, Japhia, joined the alliance with Adonizedec, king of Jerusalem, to smite Gibeon for making a treaty with Joshua.



SIEGE OF LACHISH.

LACU'NUS. Son of Addi (1 Esd. ix. 31). CHEHAL.

LADDER OF TYRE. A high mountain, 10 ms. north of Acre, which stands out into the deep sea without a beach, and is only passed by a zigzag road cut in its face.

LA'EL (of God). Father of Eliasaph (Num. iii. 24).

LA'HAD (oppression). Son of Jahath (1 Chr. iv. 2).

LAHA'IROI, THE WELL (the well where God was seen by one who still lives). Where Hagar took refuge from her imperious mistress, in the desert, between Kadesh and Bered, in the way to Shur (Gen. xvi. 14). It was afterward a favorite camping-ground of Isaac (xxiv. 62; xxv. 11).

LAH'MAM (place of contest). In the Shefelah (Josh. xv. 40). Lahmas?

LAH'MI (Bethlehemite). Brother of Goliath (1 Chr. xx. 5).

LA'ISH (strong, lion). An ancient Phœnician city, occupied by a colony of Sidonians, in the valley between Hermon and Lebanon, at one of the great fountains of the Jordan. Its ancient name was Leshem (Josh. xix. 47), and it was an ancient sanctuary.

The LAISH of Isaiah x. 30 was near Jerusalem. Another (Laisa) is mentioned, where Judas encamped, in 1 Macc. ix. 5.

LA'ISH. Father of Phaltiel (1 Sam. xxv. 44).

LA'KUM (to stop up a way). In Naphtali (Josh. xix. 33). Perhaps near the bridge of the "Daughters of Jacob."

LAMB (Chal. Immar), Heb. 1. KEBES, (Ez. vi. 9), a male, and KIBSAH, female of the first year.—2. TALEH (1 Sam. vii. 9), the young of any animal, especially a sucking lamb.—3. KAR (2 K. iii. 4), a fat ram.—4. TSON (Ex. xii. 26), flock of lambs.—5. SEH (ib. 3), the individuals of the flock.—6. Greek Amnos (John i. 29, 36; Acts viii. 32; 1 Pet. i. 19), a lamb, and, figuratively, of Christ as the lamb for sacrifice.—7. Gr. Aren (Luke x. 3), Arnion, little lamb. See PASSOVER.

LA'MECH (powerful). 1. A descendant of Cain (Gen. iv. 18, 24). He is the only one except Enoch whose history is sketched with a few particulars, before the flood, and is the first recorded polygamist, having two wives, Adah and Zillah.

LA'MED (ox-goad). Twelfth letter of the Hebrew alphabet (Ps. cxix.). WRITING.

LAMENTATIONS OF JEREMIAH, THE. See HISTORY OF THE BOOKS.

EARTHEN LAMP. NO. 6.

LAMP. NER, light, (Ex. xxv. 37; 1 K. vii. 49, etc.). The lamp used in the tabernacle, and the ten in the temple. The ancient lamps were rude in design, small, and were supplied with olive oil, and trimmed with a wick of flax. Many specimens have been found lately in Palestine, among ancient ruins. See cuts on pages 4, 7, 9, 15, etc.

LAN'CET (1 K. xviii. 28). ARMS.

LAN'TERN (light), (John xviii. 3).

LAODICE'A (Rev. i. 11, iii. 14; Col. iv. 13, 15). There were four of the same name: 1. In Phrygia, near Hierapolis;—2. In the east of Phrygia;—3. On the coast of Syria, the port of Aleppo;—4. East of Lebanon. The first is the only one mentioned in Scripture, as one of the SEVEN CHURCHES (which see).

LAODICEA.

LAODICE'ANS. People of Laodicea (Col. iv. 16; Rev. iii. 14).

LAP'IDOTH (torches). Husband of Deborah (Judg. iv. 4).

LAP'WING (Lev. xi. 19). An unclean bird. Its feathers are long and very beautiful. The hoopoe (Solomon's bird with the golden crown) is supposed by some to be the one. The Sadducees supposed it was the common hen (DUKIFATH), and others that it was the cock of the woods. There are many legends about the hoopoe, one of which is that a vast flock flew over King Solomon's head, while on a desert journey, shadowing him from the sun, in reward for which he gave them a crown of golden feathers.

LASÆ'A (Acts xxvii. 8). City in Crete, identified in 1856 by Rev. G. Brown, 5 miles inland from Fair Havens. A Venitian MS. of the 16th century describes Lapsæa, with a temple in ruins, and other remains in the harbor. This city is one proof of the accuracy of Luke's account, even in minute details. 16 miles east of Gortyna.

LA'SHA (fissure). Southeast in Palestine, the limit of the country (Gen. x. 19). Callirhoë answers to the text in its position and character. Herod built a residence there; and recently there have been found on the site tiles, pottery and coins. En Englaim? See MACHAERUS.

LAS'THENES (strength). An officer of nobility (1 Macc. xi. 31, 32; xiii. 4).

LATCH'ET. The fastening used to hold the sandal on the foot (Luke iii. 16).

LAT'IN (John xix. 20; Luke xxiii. 38). The language of the Romans.

LAT'TICE. A window (Judg. v. 28; Prov. vii. 6).

LAUGH (Job ix. 23; 2 K. xix. 21; Ps. lxxx. 6), LAAG; TASHAK in Gen. xvii. 17, to mock; SACHAK (Ps. ii. 4), to play, to make sport; SEHOK, laughter in several passages, and derision in others; Gr. Gelos; in James iv. 9, laughter; katagelao, to laugh to scorn (Matt. ix. 24, etc.).

LAVER (KIYOR). A vessel containing water for washing hands and feet before offering sacrifice, and standing between the altar and the tabernacle (Ex. xxx. 19).

LAW (TORAH). The Mosaic Law. A guide in the way of moral conduct. Greek nomos. The term law is used for the Old Testament as a whole in John x. 34, etc.

The Law of Moses depended on the Abrahamic covenant, which concerned the temporal promises, which were conditional on the keeping of the spiritual laws. Its principles were universal, but it had special rules for the Jews also.

LAW'YER (Gr. nomikos). Scribe was the official title, and lawyer meant one learned in the law (Matt. xxii. 35; Luke x. 25; Tit. iii. 13).

LAZ'ARUS (ancient ELEAZAR, God is his helper). 1. Lazarus of Bethany, brother of Martha and Mary (John xi. 1).—2. Lazarus in the parable of the rich man and Lazarus (Luke xvi. 19–31). This is the only instance of a proper name in any of the parables.

LEAD (OFERETH; Gr. molibdos). Was known very early to the ancient Hebrews, being found in Sinai and Egypt (Ez. xxvii. 13). It was used for weights (Ex. xv. 10; Eccles. xxii. 14). Oxide of lead was used to glaze pottery then as now.

LEAF (ALEH, to grow up; TEREF, to pluck off; ZELAIM, two-leaved doors), (DELETH). Leaves of a book or roll.

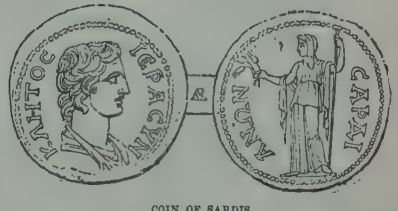
LE'AH (wearied). Daughter of Laban, 1st wife of Jacob, mother of Reuben, Simeon, Levi, Judah, Issachar, Zebulon, Dinah.



COIN OF SARDIS.

LEAS'ING (falsehood), (Ps. iv. 2; v. 6). Lies, in Ps. xl. 4; lviii. 3.

LEATH'ER (2 K. i. 8; Matt. iii. 4). There are very few notices of leather, unless the word skin means leather in use, as in Lev. xi. 32; xiii. 48; Num. xxxi. 20, etc. TANNER.

LEAVEN (SEOR, fermentation). There was also besides fermented (KAMEZ), sharpened (MAZZOTH) bread, unleavened (Ex. xii. 7).

LEB'ANA (white). A Nethinim, who returned with Zerubbabel (Neh. vii. 48).

LEB'ANAH. LEBANA (Ez. ii. 45).

LEBANON (white). The white mountain of Palestine, on the north of the country given to the Israelites (Deut. i. 7; xi. 24; Josh. i. 4). There are two ranges, Lebanon on the west, and Anti-Lebanon on the east, almost parallel, extending from near Tyre to Hamath, about 110 miles. See GEOLOGY and HERMON.

LEB'AOTH (lioness). Judah in the south (Josh. xv. 32). Given to Simeon out of Judah's lot. Beth Lebaoth (place of lions). The place may have been invested by wild beasts, and therefore so named.

LEBBÆ'US (courageous), (Matt. x. 3). THADDEUS.

LEBO'NAH (frankincense). Three miles west of Shiloh, now El Lubban.

LĒ'CAH (journey), (1 Chr. iv. 21). A town built by Er. Lost.

LENTILES.

LEEKS (CHAZIR, grass). There are several plants offered in explanation of the 20 allusions in the O. T. to "leeks."

LEES (SHEMER, preservation). Wine was left standing on the lees to give it color and body (Is. xxv. 6). The wine undisturbed was thick, and before it was used it was necessary to strain off the lees.

LE'GION (Matt. xxvi. 53; Luke viii. 30). A portion of the Roman army, about 6,000 infantry.

LEHA'BIM (Gen. x. 13). Mizraim's third son, perhaps the ancestor of the Lubim, allies of the Egyptians, mentioned in the inscriptions on their monuments at Medinet Habu (dated 1250 B. C.); and also of the Libyans.

that Levi should be scattered among his brothers, which was fulfilled in the distribution of the tribe among the 48 Levitical cities, which were scattered throughout the whole country. The tribe displaced the earlier priesthood of the first-born as representatives of the holiness of the people.

LEVI'ATHAN (LIVYATHAN, an animal wreathed). The crocodile.

LEV'IRATE (husband's brother). The law by which a younger brother married the widow of the elder brother, and raised children in his name.

LE'VIS. Corruption of "the Levite" in Ezr. x. 13.

LIB'ANUS. LEBANON (1 Esd. iv. 48, v. 55).

LIB'ERTINES (Acts vi. 9). Two explanations of this difficult text are offered: 1. People or disciples from Libertum near Cyrene, Africa.—2. That the Libertines were Jews who had been made prisoners in various wars, reduced to slavery, and afterward liberated, converted, and received into the synagogues with disciples from other cities (Jos. Ant. xviii. 3, § 5).

LIB'NAH (whiteness). Station in the desert (Num. xxxiii. 20), between Sinai and Kadesh, near Rissah, perhaps on the Red Sea. "Laban Deut. i. 1).—2. A city in the S. W. of Palestine, taken by Joshua next after Makkedah, on the day that "the sun stood still."

SHIP.

LIB'NI (white). 1. Son of Gershom (Ex. vi. 17).—2. Son of Mahli (vi. 29).

LIB'NITES, THE. Descendants of LIBNI.

LIB'YA (Acts ii. 10). Libya about Cyrene. LUBIM.

LIB'YANS. People of LIBYA (Jer. xlvi. 9).

LICE (KINNIM). Only in Ex. viii. 16–18, and Ps. cv. 31; both references applying to the plague in Egypt.

LĒ'HI. The place where Samson slew a thousand men with a jaw-bone (Judg. xv. 9-19).

LE'MECH. LAMECH 2 (Gen. v. 25).

LEM'UEL (devoted), (Prov. xxxi. 1–9).

LEN'TILES (ADASHIM). A bean-like plant much esteemed in the East as an article of food.

LEOPARD (NAMER; spotted). Mentioned in 7 passages. The word was compounded into several of towns as Beth-nimrah, Nimrah, Nimrim (Leopard-town, etc.), (Is. xi. 6; Jer. v. 6, etc.)

LĒPER (ZARUA; leprosy, ZARAATH; Gr. lepra, lepros). Supposed to be the peculiar scourge of an offended deity. The white variety was more common (if there is more than one) covering the entire body, or the most of it, and was called the leprosy of Moses. This was the "clean" kind.

LE'SHEM (glancing—the stone jacinth). The city Laish (Josh. xix. 47; Rev. xxi. 20).

LĒ'THECH (pouring). A measure for grain (Hos. iii. 2). WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

LET'US. HATTUSH (1 Esd. viii. 29).

LETU'SHIM. Second son of Dedan (Gen. xxv. 3), who founded a tribe in Arabia called by Ptolemy Allumæoti (Heb. LEUMMIM). There was a city called Luma in Arabia Deserta.

LEUM'MIM (nations). Sons of Dedan (Gen. xxv. 3).

LĒ'VI (to adhere). Third son of Leah, wife of Jacob. Born in Mesopotamia, B. C. 1750 (Gen. xxix. 34). When Dinah went out to see the young women of Shechem, as Josephus says, at an annual festival of nature-worship, such as that mentioned in Numbers xxv. 2, of the people in Moab, she was taken by Shechem as a wife; which was resented as an insult by her brothers, Jacob, Simeon, and Levi, who executed their revenge on the city in a fearful manner (Gen. xxxiv.), destroying the whole city for the error of one man. This is an early instance of a blood feud, which are so common in the East now. Levi plotted with others against Joseph. He went into Egypt with his three sons, Gershon, Kohath, and Merari, and as one of the eldest, was presented to Pharaoh. The descendants of Levi, among whom were Moses and Aaron, were made the ministers of religion and the representatives of the national faith; Jacob prophesied

LIEUTENANTS. The official title of one who governed the Persian empire (Esth. iii. 12, viii. 9).

LIFE (HAY, or CHAY), living thing (Gen. i. 20); NEPHESH, soul (xii. 5; Ps. xi. 1); mind (xxiii. 8); person (xiv. 21); heart (Ex. xxiii. 9); Greek bios, present life (Luke viii. 14); zoe, (Matt. vii. 14); zao, to live; pneuma, spirit, ghost (Rev. xiii. 19); psuche, soul (Matt. ii. 20). Life and to live used of the existence of men and animals, and of the enjoyment of what makes life valuable, as happiness (Ps. xvi. 11), and the favor of God (Rom. vi. 4). The true life is immortality in blessedness and glory, and it is believed by some that Jesus taught that such a life was only to be won by a pure life of faith and deeds, believing on him who is the Lord of Life (Matt. xix. 16, 17, 29; Rom. ii. 7, v. 17, vi. 23.

LIGHT (OR; Gr. phos). The element light; that which enables us to see. Also, figuratively, the intellectual, moral, and spiritual element by which we may see (Matt. vi. 23; John i. 4, v. 35).

LI'GURE (LESHEM). PRECIOUS STONES.

LIK'HI (learned). Son of Shemida (1 Chr. vii. 19).

LIL'Y (SHUSHAH, SHOSHANNAH; Gr. Krinon). There is a great difference of opinion on this question as to what flower was meant by the Hebrews, or by Jesus, which appears in our translation as the lily. Dr. Thomson, (Land and Book, i. 394), says, "The Huleh lily is very large, and the three inner petals meet above and form a gorgeous canopy, such as art never approached, and king never sat under, even in his utmost glory. Nothing can be in higher contrast than the luxuriant, velvety softness of this lily, and the crabbed, tangled hedge of thorns about it."

LILIES.

LIME. Limestone is the common rock of Palestine (Deut. xxvii. 2, 4). Lime-kilns are frequent, and where limestone is not easily accessible, as in Asia Minor, the Turks are in the habit of breaking up the marble columns, capitals, handsomely carved entablatures, and even statues of the gods, to be burnt into lime.

LINEN. Heb. 1. SHESH, fine linen (Gen. xli. 42); 2. BAD, linen used for the under clothes of the priests (Ex. xxviii. 42; Lev. vi. 10); 3. BUTS, fine linen, perhaps from the Greek Bussos (2 Chr. v. 12), of which the vail of the temple was made (iii. 14), and Mordecai was arrayed (colored purple), and the rich man arrayed in the parable (Luke xvi. 19); 4. ETUN, made of fine flax (Prov. vii. 16); 5. MIKVE, linen yarn (1 K. x. 28); 6. SADIN, linen garments (Judg. xiv. 12); 7. Gr. sindōn.

LIN'TEL. The upper framework of a door (1 K. vi. 31) correctly "upper door-post" (Ex. xii. 7).

LI'NUS (flax). A disciple at Rome (2 Tim. iv. 21).

LI'ON. There are no lions now in Palestine, but they abound in the deserts, and the swamps of the Euphrates. There are several names of places compounded of the name of lion which show that the animal was known there anciently, as Leboath, Laish (Josh. xv. 32; Judg. xvii. 7).

These seven names for lion, indicating different ages: 1. GUR, or GOR, a cub (Gen. xlix. 9); 2. KEFIR, a young lion (Judg. xiv. 5); 3. ARI, ARYEH, full grown lion (Gen. xlix. 9); 4. SHAKHAL, (the roarer) large, strong lion (Job iv. 10); 5. SHAKHAZ, in full vigor (xviii. 8); 6. LABI, or LEBBIYA, an old lion (Gen. xlix. 9), (Coptic, labai, lioness); 7. LAISH, old, decrepit, feeble (Job iv. 11).

LITTER. A couch or sedan chair, borne by men, between mules or on camels, now in use by the Egyptians (Num. vii. 3; Is. lxvi. 20). They are shown in use on the ancient sculptures and paintings.

LIV'ER. Internal organ of the body (Prov. vii. 23).

LIZ'ARD (Heb. LETAAH). The fan-foot lizard is reddish brown, spotted with white, and lives on insects and worms. It is named from its note which sounds like "Gecko." They lay small, round eggs. Their feet cling to the wall like a fly's, and they run around the house without noise, always at night.

LOAM'MI (not my people). Second (symbolical) son of Hosea (Hos. i. 9).

LOAN. The law of Moses required the rich to lend to the poor without interest, only taking security against loss. Foreigners were not included in this rule.

LITTER.

LOCK. The common wooden lock of the East is a clumsy wooden bolt kept in place by a few loose pins which may be lifted by a key with pegs fitted to match (see KEY). Bolts and locks were used (Judg. iii. 23; Cant. v. 5; Neh. iii. 3).

LO'CUST. Heb. ARBEH (multitude) locust in Ex. x. 4, and many other passages; CHAGAB (locust generally) grasshopper in Num. xiii. 33, and others; CHARGOL (locust) grasshopper; beetle in Lev. xi. 22; SALAM (bald locust) locust in Lev. xi. 22; GAZAM (palmer-worm); GOB (great grasshopper) in Nahum iii. 17; Is. xxiii. 4; CHANAMAL (hail or frost? locust in Ps. lxxviii. 47; YELEK (rough) canker-worm in Nahum iii. 15; caterpillar in Ps. cv. 34; CHASIL (caterpillar); ZELAZAL, locust in Deut. xxviii. 42. The clouds of locusts sometimes obscure the sun, and they are very destructive, eating every green thing in their way. See cuts on pages 29, 77.

LOD. Built by Shamer (1 Chr. viii. 12). Always connected with Ono. It is called Lydda in the Acts (ix. 32), where Peter healed Æneas of palsy.

LODE'BAR (without pasture). The native place Machir ben Ammiel, in whose house Mephibosheth found a home, after his father's death, on the E. of Jordan (2 Sam. xvii. 27, ix. 4, 5). This same Machir was one of the first to supply the wants of David when he fled from Absalom. It was near Mahanaim. Lost.

LODGE. (Is. i. 8). COTTAGE. Shelter made of boughs.

LODGE, to. To "tarry all night" (Gen. xix. 2; Judg. xix. 10; Matt. xxi. 17). HOSPITALITY. INN.

LOINS. The lower region of the back, the seat of strength (Gen. xxxv. 11, xxxvii. 34). Figuratively the source of progeny.

LO'IS (better). Grandmother of TIMOTHY, (2 Tim. i. 5, iii. 15).

LORD. See JAH.

LORD'S DAY, THE. (Greek, He kuriakē hēmera, in Rev. i. 10). The first day of the week, the weekly festival in memory of the ressurrection of the Lord on that day. Some of the "fathers of the early Church" understand it to mean Easter day.

LORD'S PRAYER, THE. The name (not in the Scriptures) of the prayer spoken by Jesus as a model to his disciples, given in Matt. vi. 9–13; Luke xi. 2–4.

LOCUST.

LORD'S SUPPER, (Gr. kuriakon deipnon, 1 Cor. xi. 20). The great central act of Christian worship, described by Paul (verses 23–26), as having been instituted on the night of the betrayal. It was a continuation or a substitute for the Passover (Matt. xxvi. 19, etc.). See AGAPE.

LORUHA'MAH (the uncompassionated). Daughter of HOSEA (Hos. i. 6). ROHAMAH.

LOT. Son of Haran, nephew of Abraham (Gen. xi. 27), born in Ur of the Chaldees, and settled in Canaan. He took refuge in Egypt with Abram during the famine (xii. 4, xiii. 1), and returned with him into the south of Palestine. He chose the Arabah for his pasture-land, leaving Abram on the hills of Benjamin and Judah.

Ammon and Moab were the children of Lot (Deut. ii. 9, 19), and as such were exempted from conquest by Moses. (See Ps. lxxxiii.) The Arabs have traditions of Lot (Koran, ch. vii., xi.), in which he is described as a preacher sent to the cities of the plain, which they call Lot's cities. The Dead Sea is also called the Sea of Lot (Bahr Loot).

LO'TAN (covering). Son of Seir (Gen. xxxvi. 20).

LOVE (Heb. AHABA, Gr. agape). Natural affection. Also spiritual affection for holy things (Rom. xiii. 10; 1 John. iv. 7, etc.), which is a fruit of the Spirit, opposed to all evil, and only satisfied with a likeness to Jesus Christ and God.

LOVE-FEAST. See AGAPE.

LOW COUN'TRY (2 Chr. xxvi. 10). PLAIN. Ar. abah?

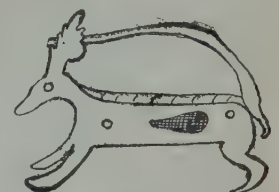
LŌ'ZON. Ancestors of Solomon's servants, who returned with Zerubbabel (1 Esd. v. 33). DARKON.

LU'BIM (people of a dry land). LEHABIM. In Shishak's army (2 Chr. xii. 3).

LU'CAS. LUKE. Companion of Paul at Rome (Col. iv. 14).

LU'CIFER (light bearing). Son of the morning, morning star (Is. xiv. 12), a symbol of the king of Babylon. Since the time of Jerome it is a name for Satan. See DEMON, DEVIL.

LU'CIUS (born in the day-time). 1. A Roman consul (1 Macc. xv. 10), and uncertain whether 1. L. Furius, B. C. 136; 2. L. Cæcilius Metellus Calvus, B. C. 142; or 3. L. Calpurnius Piso, B. C. 139, who is probably the one referred to. —2. A kinsman of Paul (Rom. xvi. 21), afterwards bishop of Cenchræa.—3. Lucius of Cyrene, was probably at the Feast of Pentecost, if not one of the 70, and also one of the "men of Cyrene," who preached in Antioch (Acts xi. 20). Different traditions make him bishop of Cenchræa, Cyrene and Laodicea in Syria.



BRONZE LOCK. FULL-SIZE. FOUND AT JERUSALEM.

LU'CRE. That which is gained unworthily (1 Sam. viii. 3; 1 Tim. iii. 8).

LUD. Fourth son of Shem (Gen. x. 22), from whom descended the Lydians; who first settled north of Palestine, and afterward in Asia Minor. The name is found on the Egyptian monuments of the 13th, 14th and 15th centuries B. C. as a powerful people called Luden. (See LYDIA).

LU'DIM (Gen. x. 13). Allies of the Egyptians (2 Chr. xii. 3, xvi. 8; Nahum iii. 9). Probably the same people as the Lehabim.

LU'HITH, THE ASCENT OF (Is. xv. 5; Jer. xlviii. 5). A famous pass somewhere in Moab, not yet identified.

LUKE (Gr. Loukas; Latin Lucas, born at daylight). A common name among Romans. A Gentile born at Antioch in Syria, educated a physician, and an artist (Nicephorus ii. 43). Some have supposed him one of the 70, and also one of the two who saw Jesus at Emmaus, but without good reason. He first appears historically at Troas with Paul, going with him into Macedonia (Acts xvi. 9, 10), and writing his history after that as an eye witness. See GOSPEL and ACTS in the HISTORY.

It is supposed that he died a martyr between A. D. 75 and 100, but no locality is given.

LU'NATIC (moon-struck), (Matt. iv. 24, xvii. 15). Disease of the body and mind. MADNESS.

LUST. Desire (Ps. lxxviii. 18, 30), inordinate and sensual (Rom. i. 27).

LUZ. LUZAH (almond-tree). An ancient city of Canaan, named Bethel by Jacob (Gen. xxviii. 19).

LYCAO'NIA (Lucos, a wolf, wolf-country). An undulating plain, 20 miles by 13, among the mountains in Asia Minor, north of Cilicia.

LY'CIA (LI'KEA). A province and peninsula southwest in Asia Minor, opposite the island of Rhodes; mountainous and well watered with small creeks.

LYDDA.

LYD'DA. Greek form of Lod. The first historical notice of this city, since Christ, is the signature of Ætius Lyddensis to the acts of the Council of Nicæa (A. D. 325); after which it is frequently mentioned, especially during the Crusades. The Arabs have a tradition that the final contest between Christ and Antichrist will be at Lydda. (Sale's Koran, c. 43, note).

LY'DIA (from king Lydus). A province in Asia Minor, on the Sea, south of Mysia, and north of Caria. Taken by the Romans from Antiochus the Great, after the battle of Magnesia, B C. 190, and given to the king of Pergamus, Eumenes II (1 Macc. viii. 8). The India and Media of this passage in Maccabees should be corrected to read Ionia and Mysia.

LYD'IA (from Lydia?). The first convert in Europe, by Paul, and his hostess at Phillippi (Acts xvi. 14, 15, 40). She was a Jewess and was found by Paul attending Jewish Sabbath worship by the side of a stream.

LYD'IANS. People of Lydia (Jer. xlvi. 9).

LYSA'NIAS (ending sorrow). Tetrarch of Abilene, in the 15th year of Tiberius, when Herod Antipas was tetrarch of Galilee, and Herod Philip was tetrarch of Ituræa and Trachonitis.

LYS'IAS (relaxing). 1. A nobleman who was intrusted with the government of Syria, B. C. 166 (1 Macc. iii. 32.)—2. Clau'dius Lys'ias, a military tribune who commanded Roman troops at Jerusalem under Felix.

LYSIM'ACHUS (ending strife). 1. Son of Ptolemæus (Esth. xi. 1).—2. Brother of Menelaus, the high-priest, and his deputy at the court of Antiochus (2 Macc. iv. 29–42). He was killed by a mob, B. C. 170, on account of his tyranny and sacrilege.

LYS'TRA. In Lycaonia. Where divine honors, after the Greek manner, were offered to Paul, and where he was at once stoned. It was the home of Paul's companion, Timothy. The extensive ruins of Bin bir Kilissi (one thousand and one churches) lie along the eastern declivity of the Karadagh (black mountain), where are to be seen the remains of about 40 churches, some 25 of which are quite entire (Hamilton, Asia Minor)

M

MA'ACAH. 1. Mother of Absalom (2 Sam. iii. 3).—2. Daughter of Nahor (Gen. xxii. 24).—3. Father of Achish, king of Gath (1 K. ii. 39).—4. Grand-daughter of Abishalom (1 K. xv. 2, 10, 13).—5. Second wife of Caleb, mother of five of his children (1 Chr. ii. 48).—6. Daughter of Talmai and mother of Absalom (iii. 2).—7. Wife of Jehiel (1 Chr. viii. 29, ix. 35).—8. Wife of Machir (1 Chr. vii. 15, 16).—9. Father of Hanan (xi. 43).—9. Father of Shephatiah (xxvii. 16).

MA'ACAH (oppression). MAACHAH. A small kingdom on the N. E. of Palestine, near Argob (Deut. iii. 14), and Bashan (Josh. xii. 5), founded by a son of Nahor, Abraham's brother (Gen. xxii. 24). The people were not expelled, but mingled with the Jews. Eliphelet, of this nation, was one of David's 30 captains (2 Sam. xxiii. 34), and Jaazaniah was a captain in the army of Israel at the time of the Captivity.

MAACH'ATHI, MAACHATHITES, THE. People of Maachah (Deut. iii. 14).

MA'ADAI. Son of Bani (Ezr. x. 34).

MACHMAD'EBAI (gift of the noble). Son of Bani (Ezr. x. 40).

LYSIMACHUS.

MACH'PELAH. The district in which was the field of Ephron the Hittite, containing the cave which was bought by Abraham, and became the burial-place of Abraham himself, Sarah, Isaac, Rebekah, Leah and Jacob. This cave and the field around it was the only spot which belonged to Abraham in the country. The Haram at Hebron (see view of Hebron) is said to stand over this cave. It is a massive stone structure, in the ancient style, of dark gray stone, 200 ft. long, 115 wide, and 50 high. Some of the stones are 12 to 20 ft. long, by 4 to 5 thick, with beveled edges, like the temple wall at Jerusalem, and must be as old as Solomon's time.

MA'CRON (long head). Son of Dorymenes (1 Macc. iii. 38), governor of Cyprus (2 Macc. x. 12).

MAD'AI (Gen. x. 2). Third son of Japheth, from whom descended the Medes. See 2 K. xvii. 6; Dan. xi. 1; Esth. i. 3, in all of which passages the same original word is found, although differently translated in each.

MADI'ABUN. The son of Madiabun assisted at the Temple dedication (1 Esd. v. 58).

MA'DIAN. MIDIAN (Judg. ii. 26).

MADMAN'NAH (dunghill). South in Judah, not far from Gaza (Josh. xv. 21, 31). Beth Marcaboth?

MAD'MEN (Jer. xlviii. 2). Included in the curse of Moab. Near Heshbon.

MADME'NAH (Is. x. 31). A small village between Anathoth and Nob. The prophet said Madmenah flies (before the Assyrian).

MAD'NESS (SHAGA, to be stirred or excited), (1 Sam. xxi. 13); HALEL, to flash out, as light or sound (Prov. xxvi. 18); MAINOMAI or mania (John x. 20). Among Oriental nations madmen were looked upon with reverence, as possessed of a sacred character. LUNATICS.

MA'DON. City of Canaan before the conquest, whose king, Jobab, was killed at the waters of Merom by Joshua (xi. 1–9). Somewhere in the north.

MAĒ'LUS (Esd. ix. 26). MIAMIN.

MAG'BISH (freezing). One hundred and fifty-six of the children of Magbish returned from captivity (Ezr. ii. 30). In Benjamin. Lost.

MAG'DALA (tower). In most of the MSS. the name is MAGADAN. Christ came into the limits of Magdala after the miracle of feeding the 4,000 on the other side of the lake (Matt. xv. 39). Now called El Mejdel, on the west shore of the Sea of Galilee, close to the water, about three miles north of Tiberias, at the southeast corner of the plain of Gennesaret. There was a watch-tower here that guarded the entrance to the plain. Here was the home of Mary Magdalene. Dalmanutha in Mark viii. 10.

MAGDALE'NE, MARY OF. MAGDALA (Mark xvi. 9).

MAG'DIEL (praise of El). A Duke of Edom (Gen. xxxvi. 43).

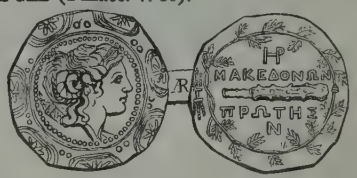
MA'GED (1 Macc. v. 36).



COIN OF MACEDONIA.

MA'GI (Heb. CHARTUMIM; Gr. Magoi). Wise men, magicians, magians. They are credited all over the East with certain secret learning which in remote antiquity distinguished Egypt and Chaldæa. Among the Jews they were considered a sort of sacred scribes, skilled in divining, and interpreting the hidden meaning of certain passages of the Scriptures. In Egypt and Chaldæa they seem to have been the sole interpreters of secret things, the past and the future, but in Palestine they never ranked with the prophets, unless among the idolatrous people. The Books of Exodus and Daniel show their eminent position and influence, and pretense to occult knowledge. Some among them were probably free from superstition; men of sound minds, and finding in their books sounder views of the Divine government of the world than the great body of their associates were capable of understanding. The exiled Jews carried to such as these the welcome knowledge of the true Jehovah. Of this class were the three who, as "wise men from the East," came to see him who was born king of the Jews.

MAGIC. Wonder-working, in some way beyond the ordinary powers of man. This is only a pretense, and has nothing to do with Natural Philosophy. The belief in magic as a reality is very wide-spread in the East, and is simply an undue exercise of certain mental faculties, which take the place of religion in undeveloped persons. Some races in Africa have no higher conception of God and religion than the supposed magical powers of the air, minerals, etc., and worship by incantations. Even the Shemites were not exempt, as appears in the notices of Laban's images, but with them it took a kind of second rank to the true religion, being considered unlawful, but still very valuable as an aid to men in various selfish desires (Gen. xxxi. 19, 30, 32–35). This is the first notice of that superstition which in after time worked so much mischief in the Hebrew community. The name TERAPHIM has been derived from Egypt, TER, a shape, figure, or rather, in Coptic, to change figure.

MAGNIF'ICAL (1 Chr. xxii. 5). Grand, splendid.

MA'GOG. Second son of Japheth (Gen. x. 2), and founder of a race (Rev. xx. 8), the great Scythian tribe, now called Russian.

MA'GOR-MIS'SABIB (terror on every side). Name given to Pashur by Jeremiah (Jer. xx. 3). The same words are found in other passages, but not as a name (vi. 25, xx. 10, xlvi. 5; xlix. 29; Lam. ii. 22; Ps. xxxi. 13).

NAGPĪ-ASH (moth-killer). A chief who signed the covenant (Neh. x. 20). Magabish in Ezra ii. 30.

MA'HALAH (sickness), one of the children of Hammoleketh (1 Chr. vii. 18).

MAHALA'LEEL (praise of God). 1. Son of Cainan (Gen. v. 12, 13, 15, 17).—2. Descendant of Perez, son of Judah (Neh. xi. 4).

TEMPLE.

MĀ'HĂLATH (a lyre). 1. Daughter of Ishmael (Gen. xxviii. 9).—2. First wife of King Rehoboam (2 Chr. xi. 18).—3. Mahalath, a stringed instrument like the kithara, (harp), and used in the sacred chant (Ps. liii. title; Gen. iv. 21).—4. Ma'halath Lean'noth, the beginning of a song (Ps. lxxxviii. 1).

MA'HALI (Ex. vi. 19). MAHLI (sick, infirm).

MA'KAZ (end. 1 K. iv. 9). In Dan.

MA'KED (1 Macc. v. 26). A strong and great city in Gilead. Where Judas Maccabæus delivered the Jews from the Ammonites. Lost.

MAK'HELOTH (assemblies). Desert camp (Num. xxxiii. 25).

MAK'KEDAH (shepherd camp). An ancient royal city of Canaan taken by Joshua after the defeat of the allied kings at Gibeon (Josh. x. 28, xii. 16). This stronghold was the first one taken in this region. El Klediah, in Wady es Sumt. There are many caves in this part of the country, but no one has been identified as the cave.

MAK'TESH (mortar). A quarter, or part of Jerusalem (Zeph. i. 11). The merchants and mechanics gathered their shops in and around the Tyropœon valley. The Bazaar is now in the same ancient place.

MAL'ACHI. HISTORY OF THE BOOKS.

MAL'CHAM. 1. Son of Shaharaim (1 Chr. viii. 9).—2. An idol invested with honors by its worshipers (Zeph. i. 5).

MAL'CHIA (Jah's king). There were eight of this name, but none were noted.

MAL'CHIEL (God's king). Son of Beriah (Gen. xlvi. 17). Founder of Birzavith (1 Chr. vii. 31).

MALCHIELITES. The descendants of Malchiel (Num. xxvi. 45).

MALCHI'JAH. There were six of this name, without special note.

MALCHI'RAM (king of altitude). Son of Jeconiah (1 Chr. iii. 18).

MAL'CHISHU'A (king of help). Son of Saul (1 Sam. xiv. 49).

MAL'CHUS. Servant of the high-priest maimed by Peter and restored by Jesus (John xviii. 10; Luke xxii. 51).

MALE'LEĔL. Son of Cainan (Luke iii. 37).

MAL'LOS (a lock of wool), (2 Macc. iv. 30). A city of Cilicia, 20 ms. from Tarsus, at the mouth of the river Pyramus.

MAL'LOWS (MALLUAH). The leaves and pods used as a pot-herb, eaten in Arabia and Palestine (Job. xxx. 4).

MAL'LUCH (reigning). 1. Ancestor of Ethan (1 Chr. vi. 44).—2. Son of Bani (Ezr. x. 29).—3. Descendant of Harim (32).—4. A priest (Neh. x. 4).—5. A chief who signed the covenant (x. 27).—6. A priest who returned from captivity (xii. 2).

MAMA'IAS (1 Esd. viii. 44).

MAM'MON (riches), (Matt. vi. 24).

MAM'RE (fruitfulness). An ancient Amorite in alliance with Abram (Gen. xiv. 13–24); his name was given to the site on which HEBRON was built (xxiii. 17, 19).

MAM'RE. Faces Machpelah (Gen. xxiii. 17, etc). One of Abraham's favorite camping-grounds. In its grove he had a sanctuary, which he called his Bethel (house of God). Here Abraham entertained the 3 angels, and Isaac was promised. The name has not been preserved in any locality.

MAM'UCHUS (1 Esd. ix. 30).

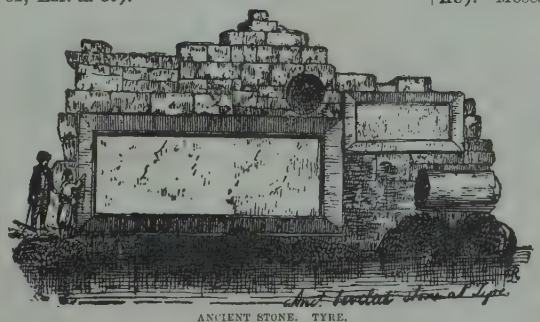
MAN. 4 Hebrew words are rendered man: 1. ADAM, ruddy, like Edom.—2. ISH, a man; ENESH, a woman.—3. GEBER, to be strong.—4. METHIM, (mortal) men (as in Methusael, Methuselah).

MAN'AEN. Teacher in the church at Antioch (Acts xiii. 1). Josephus says he was in high repute among the Essenes for wisdom and piety. He foretold to Herod the Great that he was to attain royal honors.

MAN'AHATH (offering). MAN'AHETHITES. A place called Manocho in a list of eleven towns given in the Septuagint, but omitted in the A. V., as not far from Bethlehem.

MAN'AHATH. Son of Shobal (Gen. xxxvi. 23).

MANASSE'AS. Son of Pahath-moab (1 Esd. ix. 31; Ezr. x. 30).



ANCIENT STONE. TYRE.

MANASSE. There is no reason given for depriving Manasseh of his birthright, as there was in the case of his grand-uncle Esau. On leaving Egypt at the Exode this was the least of the twelve tribes, numbering at Sinai only 32,200, but at the census, just before the crossing of the Jordan, they had increased to 52,700 men over 20 years old, at which Manasseh is honored with a first mention before Ephraim. The division of the tribe is one of the singular facts in the history of the Israelites, and seems to be at variance with the national feeling and laws. Some of this tribe were warriors, and made entensive conquests: as Machir, who took Gilead and Bashan; Jair, who took 60 cities in Argob; and Nobah, who captured Kenath and its vicinity, a tract of country the most difficult in the whole land, being full of fortified cities, and in the possession of Og and Sihon. (See HAURAN, BASHAN, HESHBON, ARGOB, KENATH, NOBAH, etc.).

MANAS'SES. 1. (1 Esd. ix. 33).—2. King of Judah (Matt. i. 10). See HISTORY OF THE BOOKS.—3. Son of Joseph (Rev. vii. 6).—4. Husband of Judith (Jud. viii. 2, 7). See BOOK OF JUDITH.

MANASS'ITES, THE. Members of the tribe of Manasseh (Deut. iv. 43).

MANDRAKE.

MAN'DRAKES (Cant. vii. 13). The mandrake is now called ATROPA MANDRAGORA.

MAN'GER (Gr. phatne). The feeding-place for animals, or a trough made of mortar or cut out of single stones. See INN.

MA'NI (1 Esd. ix. 30).

MAN'LIUS, TITUS (born early in the morning). Ambassador of the Romans (2 Macc. xi. 34–38).

MAN'NA (Heb. MAN). A month after leaving Egypt the people were in want of food, and murmured against their leaders, when the quails were sent in the evening and the manna appeared in the morning, after the "dew was gone up." It was a small round thing, like hoar-frost or corriander-seed, and the people said "what is this?" (MANHU). Moses answered that it was the bread that the Lord had given them to eat (Ex. xvi. 1–3, 11–15).

MANO'AH (rest). Father of SAMSON (Judg. xiii. 2).

MAN-SLAYER. Not an intentional murderer.

MAN'TLE (Heb. SEMICHAH). See cloak in DRESS.

MA'OCH (breast-band). Father of ACHISH. King of Gath (1 Sam. xxvii. 2).

MA'ON. In the mts. of Judah (Josh. xv. 55), near Juttah. It was in the wilderness near this place (bleak and hilly pasture-lands) that David hid himself from Saul. Main 7 ms. S. E. of Hebron (Rob.). On a conical hill, 200 ft. high, are ruins of foundations of hewn stone, a square enclosure, towers, and cisterns. The people use the caves near for dwellings, as of old.

MA'ONITES (Judg. x. 12). An ancient and powerful nomad tribe, allied to the Phœnicians, first settled with the Amalekites in the vale of Sodom, and afterward migrated eastward into Arabia. They named Maon in Judah, Beth-Maon in Moab, and Maan in Edom, 15 ms. E. of Petra. This last is now an important pilgrim station, on the caravan route to Mecca. A castle and other antiquities mark its ancient strength. Mehunim (2 Chr. xxvi. 7). Among the descendants of Caleb, the son of Shammai, the builder of Beth-zur (1 Chr. ii. 45).

MA'RA (bitter). The name given to NOOMI at Bethlehem (Ruth i. 20).

MA'RAH (bitter). Well, on the route of the Exodus. See EXODUS.

MAR'ALAH (trembling). On the border of Zebulon (Josh. xix. 11). 4 ms. S. W. of Nazareth, the little village of Malul stands on a hill, and contains the ruins of a temple and other antiquities.

MARANATH'A (our lord cometh), (1 Cor. xvi. 22). See ANATHEMA.

MAR'BLE. Called by Josephus white stone, quarried from under Jerusalem (Esth. i. 6).

MAR'CUS (a large hammer). Both a first and a surname (Col. iv. 10).

MARDOCHI'US. MORDECAI. 1. Uncle of Esther (Esth. x. 1).—2. (1 Esd. v. 8).

WASHING HANDS BEFORE MEALS.

MARE'SHAH (head-town). 1. A city of Judah (Josh. xv. 44). Hebron was founded by Mareshah (1 Chr. ii. 42).

MAR'ISA (2 Macc. xii. 35).

MARK. HISTORY OF THE BOOK.

MAR'KET (MAARAB). An open place, where people came for business or to converse (Ez. xxvii. 13, 17).

MAR'MOTH. A priest (1 Esd. viii. 62).

MA'ROTH (bitterness). Mentioned by the prophet Micah (i. 12), and probably near Jerusalem.

MARRIAGE. Instituted in the garden of Eden (Gen. i. 27, 28; ii. 18, 24). The Saviour advocated the divine character of marriage apart from civil laws. He opposed divorces except for one cause (Matt. v. 32, xix. 3, 6, 9), and all breaches of the marriage vow (Matt. v. 28). Betrothal preceded the marriage rite and was a binding engagement (Matt. i. 18–25). Groomsman referred to as "the friend of the bridegroom" in John iii. 29. A procession formed part of the ceremony, and took place at night accompanied by young unmarried women bearing lamps (Matt. xxv.).

There were three kinds of legal marriage: 1. By written contract; 2. By payment of a sum of money (or an equivalent) before witnesses; and 3. By force—as a man compelling a woman to submit to him, or by seduction.

The wife's rights were food, raiment (including house), and conjugal privileges (Ex. xxi. 10). Her duties were as extensive as the entire household, as shown in Prov. xxxi.

Marriage is used as a type in both the Old and New Testaments of true religious union with God in many beautiful passages.

MAR'S HILL. AREOPAGUS.

MAR'SENA (worthy man). A prince of Persia (Esth. i. 14).

MAR'THA. Daughter of Simon the leper, and sister of LAZARUS and MARY of BETHANY. She was the elder sister, the head and manager of the household. She was present at the supper at Bethany (John xii. 2).

MAR'TYR (Gr. martus). "Witnesses" in Matt. xviii. 16. Simply witness. Witnesses of the gospel, suffering persecution, became martyrs in the modern sense.

MAS'ALOTH (terraces). Near Arbela: the great caverns in the Wady al Humam (pigeon valley), which were fortified by Josephus (Josephus, Life, 37). Kulaet Ibu Maan. Herod drove a band of robbers out of them by letting soldiers down the face of the cliff to the mouth of the caves in large boxes.

MAS'CHIL. A musical term denoting a melody requiring great skill in execution (Ps. xxxii., xlii.).

MASH (Gen. x. 23). 4th son of Aram; settled in Mesopotamia. Mt. Masius (between the Euphrates and the Tigris, in the N.), and the river Mafche flowing at its base, preserve the name. A prince of Masou was taken by Rameses II on the Orontes, at Kedesh.

MASH'EL. City of Asher (1 Chr. vi. 74). Misheal (Josh. xix. 26).

MASI'AS. Servant of Solomon (1 Esd. v. 34).

MAS'MAN (1 Esd. viii. 43).

MAS'PHA (1 Macc. iii. 46). Massepha, or Mizpeh?—2. A city taken by Judas Maccabæus, E. of Jordan (1 Macc. v. 35). It may be the same as Mizpeh of Gilead, or Mizpeh of Moab.

MASRE'KAH (vineyard). Native city of Samlah, king of Edom (Gen. xxxvi. 36). The region called Jebal, N. of Edom, is now famous for its vineyards (owned by the Refaya tribe), and this place may have been located there, as Eusebius and Jerome say.

MAS'SA (burden). Son of Ishmael (Gen. xxv. 14).

MAS'SAH (temptation). In the Sinai desert (Ex. xvii. 2, 7). REPHIDIM. (See WANDERING.)

MAS'SIAS (1 Esd. ix. 22.)

MAS'TICH-TREE. The gum is used to strengthen the teeth and gums. It was prized by the ancients on this account, and for its medical properties. It is used in the preparation of spirits, as a sweetmeat, and in varnishes. The trees are very wide, and circular, 10 or 12 ft. high, and are found on the shores of the Mediterranean.

MATHANI'AS. A descendant of Pahath-Moab (1 Esd. ix. 31).

MATHU'SALA. Son of Enoch (Luke iii. 37).

MA'TRED (propelling). Daughter of Mezahab (Gen. xxxvi. 39).

MA'TRI (rain of Jah). Family of Benjamin (1 Sam. x. 21).

MAT'TAN (a gift). 1. Priest of Baal (2 K. xi. 18).—2. Father of Shephatiah (Jer. xxxviii. 1).

MAT'TANAH (gift.) Station S. E. of the Dead Sea (Num. xxi. 18).

MATTANI'AH (gift of Jah). Ten persons of this name of little note.

MAT'TATHA. Son of Zathan (Luke iii. 31).

MAT'TATHAH. A descendant of Hashum (Ezr. x. 33).

MATTATHI'AS. 1. An assistant to Ezra (1 Esd. ix. 43).—2. Father of MACCABEES (1 Macc. ii. 1).—3. Son of Absalom (xi. 70; xiii. 11).—4. Son of Simon Maccabæus (xvi. 14).—5. Nicanor's envoy (2 Macc. xiv. 19).—6. Son of Amos (Luke iii. 25).—7. Son of Semei (26).

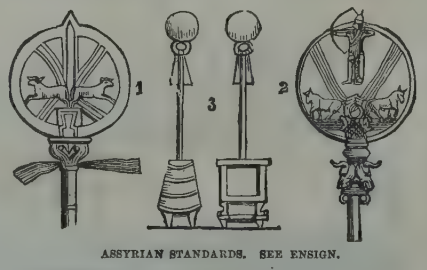
MAT'TENAI. 1. Of the family of Hashum (Ezr. xi. 33).—2. Descendant of Bani (37).—3. A priest (Neh. xii. 19).

MAT'THAN. Son of Eleazer (Matt. i. 15).

MAT'THANI'AS. Descendant of Elam (1 Esd. ix. 27).

MAT'THAT. 1. Son of Levi (Luke iii. 24).—2. Son of Levi (29).

MATTHE'LAS (1 Esd. ix. 19).



ASSYRIAN STANDARDS. SEE ENSIGN.

MATTHEW (Mattathias, the gift of Jehovah). Is only mentioned at the time of his call to be an apostle, when he was in "the receipt of custom," (Matt. ix. 9). Mark gives him another name—Levi, the son of Alphæus (Mark ii. 14; iii. 18) who has been supposed to have been the same as the Alpheus the father of James the Less, but without reason. On his call he gave a feast by way of a farewell to his friends, to which Jesus was invited (Luke v. 27). His humility is seen in his styling himself "the publican" (Matt. x. 3). He was with the other apostles after the resurrection (Acts i. 13). After this there is no record of him or his acts. It is not known how or where he died. There is a tradition that he lived in Jerusalem 15 years after the crucifixion, and that he became a martyr in Persia. See HISTORY OF THE BOOKS for the GOSPEL.

MATTHI'AS. 1. MATTATHAH (1 Esd. ix. 33).—2. An apostle chosen to succeed Judas (Acts i. 26). Tradition says he preached in Cappadocia.

MATTITHI'AH (gift). 1. First born of Shallum (1 Chr. ix. 31).—2. A musician of David's choir (1 Chr. xvi. 5).—3. Of the family of Zebo (Ezr. x. 43).—4. A priest who assisted Ezra (viii. 4).—5. Son, or pupil of Jeduthun, leader of the 14th Temple choir (1 Chr. xxv. 3, 21).

MAT'LOCK (CHEREB). A single-headed pick-axe. The Egyptian hoe was of wood, and answered for hoe, spade and pick (1 Sam. xiii. 20, 21). See cut on page 6.

MAUL (MEPHITS). A heavy, war-like instrument (Prov. xxv. 18). See ARMS.

AT DINNER.

MĀUZ'ZIM (forts). Layard (Nin. ii. 456) after describing Hera, the Assyrian Venus, as "standing erect on a lion, and crowned with a tower or mural coronet, which, we learn from Lucian, was peculiar to the Semetic figure of the goddess," adds, "May she be connected with the 'El Maozem,' the deity presiding over bulwarks and fortresses, the 'god of forces' of Dan. xi. 38." See cut, page 70.

MAZITI'AS (1 Esd. ix. 35).

MAZ'ZAROTH. See ASTRONOMY.

MEAD'OW (Heb. ACHU), (Gen. xli. 2, 18). Translated meadow. Rendered cave in the Peshito-Syriac.

ME'AH (a hundred). The tower of Meah was on the city wall north of the sheep-gate, when rebuilt by Nehemiah (iii. 1, xii. 39). Located by some at the N. W. corner of the Temple area, where the fortress of Antonia was afterwards built, and now called Pilate's house. Porter locates it at the N. E. corner of the Harem area, where there are massive foundations.

MEALS. The Jews generally eat their dinner before noon, and their supper after sundown. The chief meal of the Jews was in the evening; of the Egyptians it was at noon. The early Hebrews sat or squatted round a low table upon which the meal was served, but in later times couches were used to recline upon before the tables. The guests were ranged in order of rank side by side (Gen. xliii. 33), resting upon the left elbow, the right arm being free—this posture explains the text "leaning on Jesus's bosom (John xiii. 23, xxi. 20). The dishes, as they are to this day, were generally stews of rice, beans, and burgal (cracked wheat), with soups or sauces. The meats were so cooked that when served they fell to pieces. Knives and forks were not used at the table, but spoons, and generally thin slices of bread, were doubled up and dipped into the dishes, all eating from the same dish. These pieces of bread also served the purpose of napkins. It was after this manner that Judas eat of the sauce or sop at the Last Supper (John xiii. 26). Washing of the hands, from being a necessity, was elevated to a form and ceremony.

MEA'NI (1 Esd. v. 31).

MEA'RAH (cave). Boundary of the unconquered land near Zidon (Josh. xiii. 4). Half way between Tyre and Sidon are ruins called Adlan, and in the cliffs near are many caves and grottos (Rob.). William of Tyre mentions a fortified cave near Sidon, occupied by the Crusaders.

MEAT. LEHEM, bread (1 Sam. xx. 24); TEREF, spoil (Ps. cxi. 5); Gr. bromu and brosis (Matt. iii. 4; Acts xxvii. 33; Heb. v. 12). Anything that may be eaten. This word was never used for flesh-meat, unless it was included in a general sense, as we now say food.

MEAT-OFFERING. See SACRIFICE.

MEBUN'NAI (strong one). One of David's guard (2 Sam. xxiii. 27). Called SIBBECHAI (xxi. 18; 1 Chr. xx. 4).

MECHE BATHITE, THE. "The Maachathite (2 Sam. xxiii. 34).

MED'ABA. Greek form of Medeba (1 Macc. ix. 36).

ME'DAN (strife). Son of Abraham by Keturah (Gen. xxv. 2). Traces of this people are supposed to be found in the village of Madan, on the Euphrates, and the city Maadan in Hejaz, Arabia. Maadan, mines.

ME'DEBA (quiet waters). In Moab (Num. xxi. 30). Name of the Mishor south of Heshbon (Josh. xiii. 9, 16).

MEDES. Media (Gen. x. 2, Madia; 2 K. xvii. 6, Medes; Esth. i. 3, Media; Dan xi. 1, Mede). 3d son of Japhet, and founder of a great race. 1500 years of their history is a blank, from their first mention to the time when Isaiah threatened to stir them up against Babylon (xiii. 7, B. C. 72).

ME'DIAN. Citizen of MEDIA (Dan. ix. 1).

MEDIATOR (interpreter). Moses was the Mediator between Jehovah and the Isralites (Gal. iii. 19, 20). JESUS CHRIST is the one Mediator between God and men (1 Tim. ii. 5).

MED'ICINE. The Egyptian physicians (barbers?) were skilled, and perhaps also educated, if we may believe the Greeks, before the Exodus. The first mention of a physician was of the "servants of Joseph" who embalmed his father (Gen. l. 2); they were probably regular attendants on the royal house. Specialists are mentioned by Herodotus (ii. 84), "each physician is for one kind of sickness, such as for the eyes, teeth, head, stomach, etc. The practice of medicine was largely superstitious. The medicines mostly used were salves, balms, (Jer. viii. 22), plasters or poultices (2 K. xx. 7); bathing (2 K. v. 10), oils, and mineral baths. Charms and amulets were used by the Jews, also charming by the hand, as in 2 K. v. 11. Knowledge of anatomy is suggested in Job x. 11, and also shown in monumental figures. Physicians received public salaries, and their office was held in high esteem. The Jews at a later period, overcame much of their abhorrence of uncleanness, and of their reverence for human remains, in the pursuit of medical knowledge. Alexandria became the centre for medical study. (See ALEXANDRIA.) Luke is referred to as "the beloved physician," and his medical education was probably Greek.

MEE'DA (1 Esd. v. 32).

MEEK. Heb. ANAV, oppressed, afflicted, humble. Applied to those who rather suffer wrong than do wrong, and therefore enjoy God's favor (Num. xii. 3). The word translated meek in Num. xii. 3, in reference to Moses, means "disinterested."

MEGIDDO (place of troops). An ancient royal city of the Canaanites, on the south border of the plain of Esdraëlon, commanding a pass leading from the plain to the Samarian hills (Josh. xii. 21). In the territory of Issachar, but belonging to Manasseh.

MEGID'DON (Zech. xii. 11). PLAIN OF.

MEHETA'BEEL. Ancestor of Shemaiah (Neh. vi. 10).

MEHET'ABEL (El benefits). Daughter of Matred (Gen. xxxvi. 39).

MEHI'DA (junction). Ancestor of Nethinim, returned from Captivity (Ex. ii. 52; Neh. vii. 54).

ME'HIR (price). Son of Chelub (1 Chr. iv. 11).

ME'HŌLATHITE, THE. (1 Sam. xviii. 19). See ABEL MEHOLAH. This place was called Meadow of the Whirlpool, and was near some rapid or whirlpool in the river Jordan.

MEHU'JAEL (smitten by El). Son of Irad, and fourth in descent from Cain (Gen. iv. 18).

MEHU'MAN (faithful). A chamberlain of Ahasuerus (Esth. i. 10).

MEHU'NIMS. Maonites. (See MAON). Josephus speaks of a city built by king Uzziah on the Red Sea to overawe the Arabs, who adjoined Egypt (Ant. ix. 10, 3). Probably near or in the valley of Gerar. One of the three friends of Job was Sophar, king of the Minæans, who is also called Zophar the Naamathite. (See NAAMAH).

MEJARKON (yellow waters). In Dan (Josh. xix. 46), near Joppa. Torrent?

MEKO'NAH (a place). A city of some size, having suburbs, in the south, near Ziklag; occupied after the return from captivity (Neh. xi. 28).

MELATIAH (Jah delivers). A Gibeonite who assisted in building the wall (Neh. iii. 7).

MEL'CHI (my king). 1. Son of Jamra (Luke iii. 24).—2. Son of Addi (iii. 21).

MELCHI'AH. Father of Pashur (Jer. xxi. 1).

MELCHI'AS. 1. MALCHIAH 2 (1 Esd. ix. 26).

MEL'CHIEL. Son of Melchiel, governor of Bethulia (Judg. vi. 15).

MELCHIS'EDEC (Heb. v., vi., vii.).

MEL'CHISHU'A. Son of Saul (1 Sam. xiv. 49; xxxi. 2).

MELCHIZ'EDEK (king of righteousness). He lived in the time of Abraham, worshiped God, and was "a priest of the most high God," perhaps a first-born, and a patriarch or elder in the city of Salem (Gen. xiv.). He received Abraham's homage and presents or tithes, and gave him a blessing, and gave bread and wine to his tired and hungry army.

Some have thought that the bread and wine were sacrificial, and that Melchizedek was a type of Christ. Others have strangely imagined that it was an appearance of Christ himself in the disguise of the priest.

He really was both a king and a priest—and so far typical of the spiritual king and priest, Jesus the Christ.

MEL'COM (Heb. MALCAM), (Jer. xlix. 1, 3).

ME'LEA (full). Son of Menan (Luke iii. 31).

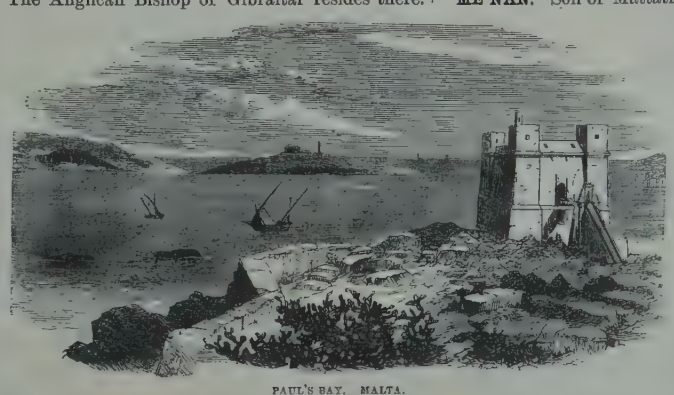
ME'LECH (king). Son of Micah (1 Chr. viii. 35, ix. 41).

MEL'ICU (Neh. xii. 14). MALLUCH.

MEL'ITA. MALTA. A small island, 20 by 12 miles in extent, and 60 miles south of Sicily, where Paul was wrecked when on his way to Rome (Acts xxvii. xxviii.). The island is full of mementoes of Paul, who is its tutelary saint. The bay where the shipwreck occurred is called St. Paul's, and is a deep inlet on the north side of the island, 5 miles from the port of Malta, and is one mile wide and two miles long, inland, having the small island Salmonetta on the western side of the entrance. The whole island is a barren rock, but has been made fertile to some extent by great labor. The Phœnicians colonized it, from whom the Greeks took it about 736 B. C.; and in turn the Carthaginians became its masters in the Second Punic War, 528 B. C., and the Romans in 242 B. C., whose officer, Publius, governed it when Paul was there. Its history since then has been full of changes in its masters, in which we read of Vandals, Greeks (A. D. 553), Arabs, Normans (A. D. 1090), Germans (1530, by whom it was given to the Knights of St. John, of Jerusalem), the French (1798), and finally the English, who hold it now. The Anglican Bishop of Gibraltar resides there.



PAUL'S BAY. MALTA.

The island is a station for several lines of steamers and submarine telegraph cables. The island of Meleda, in the Adriatic Sea, on the coast of Dalmatia, 125 miles southeast of Venice, was once supposed to be the one on which Paul was wrecked; but a more careful examination of all the facts, and of the course of the prevailing winds, and position of the islands and places mentioned, both before and after the shipwreck, have determined the question in favor of Malta. The "barbarous people" of Acts xxviii. 2, were simply not Greeks. The Greeks called every nation or tribe barbarians who did not speak the Greek language.

MEL'ONS (Heb. ABATICHIM). Melons are extensively cultivated in the East, and used as a common article of diet; here we make a luxury of them. Thomson says "Nothing could be regretted in the burning desert more than these delicious (water) melons, whose exuberant juice is so refreshing to the thirsty pilgrim," (Num. xi. 5).

MEL'IZAR (Heb. MELZAR, steward), (Dan. i., ii. 16).

MEM (Heb. MEYM). The thirteenth letter of the Hebrew alphabet (Ps. cxix.).

MEM'MIUS, QUIN'TUS. A common first name among the Romans (2 Macc. xi. 34).

MEMPHIS (the abode of the good one). In Hebrew MOPH or NOPH (Hosea ix. 6). The ancient Egyptian name was Men-nefru, the pyramid city. On the west bank of the Nile, just south of the junction of the three branches, Canopic, Sebennytic and Pelusiac. It was built on a district which was reclaimed by Menes from a marsh, by turning the Nile into a new channel, east of the ancient one which ran close to the Libyan mountains; and in a position which commanded both the Delta and Upper Egypt. Of all the temples, palaces, walls, and houses which the ancient historians describe, not one stone is left on another—the pyramids only remaining. The necropolis in the vicinity witnesses the ancient importance of the city.

MEMU'CAN (in authority). A privy council of the king (Esth. i. 14, 16, 21). They were "wise men who knew the times" (skilled in the planets, according to Aben Ezra) and appeared to have formed a council of state, interpreting the laws.

MEN'AHEM (consoler). Son of Gadi, king of Israel from B. C. 772 to 761. He continued the idolatrous calf-worship of Jeroboam.

ME'NAN. Son of Mattatha (Luke iii. 31).

MĒ'NES. MENA, (numbered). The first word in the mysterious writing on the wall in Belshazzar's palace, interpreted by Daniel (v. 25–28).

MENELĀ'US. A high-priest, appointed to the office from Antiochus Epiphanes by a bribe, B. C. 172 (2 Macc. iv. 23–25).

MENES'THEUS (one who abides). The father of APOLLONIUS (2 Macc. iv. 21).

MĒNI (destiny). An object of idolatrous worship, the moon goddess, LUNA (Is. lxv. 11).

MEN-STEALERS were put to death (Ex. xxi. 16).

MENU'CHA (place of rest), (Jer. li. 59). SERAIAH II.

MENŪ'CHAH (without noise or tumult). With ease in Judg. xx. 43.

MENŪ'CHITES (1 Chr. ii. 52).

MEON'ENIM, THE PLAIN OF. Correctly, The OAK of Meonenim (the enchanters); (Judg. ix. 37).

MEON'OTHAI (my dwellings). Son of OTHNIEL (1 Chr. iv. 14).

MEPHA'ATH (sightly). Moabite city in Reuben, near Heshbon (Josh. xiii. 18; Jer. xlviii. 21), given to the Merarite Levites. The Romans had a garrison here in the time of Eusebius. Lost.

MEPHIB'OSHETH (shame-destroyer, or image-breaker). The name is given in Chr. as Meribbaal—Baal and Bosheth being synonymous. (See IDOL.) 1. Son of Saul by Rizpah (2 Sam. xxi. 8).

He was crucified, with six others by the Gibeonites (as an offering to the god of Famine?), and hung on the cross for five months. Their bones were buried by David in the cave of Kish, at Zelah, when the famine, which had continued for three years, ended.—2. Son of Jonathan, Saul's son. His life was full of trial and suffering. He was but an infant of 5 yrs. when his father and grandfather were killed on Mt. Gilboa, living at Gibeah, when he was dropped from the arms of his nurse, both of his feet being permanently injured (2 Sam. iv. 4). He was taken to Lodebar, where he was cared for by Machir, the sheikh.

LANNER FALCON.

ME'RAB (increase). Eldest daughter of king Saul (1 Sam. xiv. 49). She was betrothed to David (xviii. 17), but married Adriel, to whom she bore five sons (2 Sam. xxi. 8). See DAVID.

MERAI'AH (rebellion). A priest of the family of Seraiah (Neh. xii. 12).

MERĀI'OTH (rebellious). 1. He was the immediate predecessor of Eli in the office of HIGH PRIEST (1 Chr. ix. 11).—2. Another priest in the time of Joiakim (Neh. xii. 15).

ME'RAN. A place mentioned with Theman as famous for its merchants and wise men (Baruch iii. 23). In Arabia, but not identified. MEDAN?

MERĀ'RI (sorrowful). Third son of Levi, head of the great division. For their position and duties in the service, see LEVI. The history of the family is traced from Exodus to after the Captivity. —2. Father of Judith (Jud viii. 1).

MERA'RI (unhappy). Head of the 3d division of the tribe of Levi. The Merarites carried the boards, bars, pillars, sockets, pins, and cords of the Tabernacle, by the help of oxen and carts (Num. iii. 20, etc.). In the division of the land they had 12 cities, in Reuben, Gad, and Zebulon (Josh. xxi. 7). They furnished a third part of the musicians, and a third of the doorkeepers. They are frequently mentioned in the history until the return from captivity (Ezr. viii. 18).

MERATHA'IM (bitter affliction). A name given by Jeremiah to Babylon (l. 21).

MERCU'RIUS. In Greek and Roman mythology, the son of JUPITER and Maia (Acts xiv. 12).

MER'CY (Heb. CHESED). In the Scriptures it is a development of benevolence, a feeling of kindness or compassion toward the needy and helpless, and an attribute of God toward mankind (Ex. xx. 6).

MER'CY-SEAT (Heb. KAPPÔRETH). The lid of the Ark of the Covenant. See ARK.

ME'RED (rebellion). Son of Ezra (1 Chr. iv. 17). He took for a wife BITHIAH a daughter of Pharaoh. Perhaps a poetical or Kenite name of Moses. Others say of Caleb instead.

MERE'MOTH (heights). Son of Uriah, of the family of Hakkoz (Ezr. viii. 33), and appointed a register of gifts and treasure in the Temple. He worked on the repairs of the wall (Neh. iii. 4, 21).—2. Layman, son of Bani (Ezr. x. 36).—3. Family of priests who signed the covenant (Neh. x. 5). Mentioned a century before in ch. xii. 3.

ME'RES (worthy). Counselor to Ahasuerus (Esth. i. 14).

MER'IBAH (strife). A fountain in the desert of Sin, which flowed at the command of Moses (Ex. xii. 1–7). The place was called Massah (temptation), and Meribah (chiding).—2. Another fountain of the same character was near Kadesh (Num. xx. 13; Deut. xxxiii. 8). This is also called the Waters of Meribah (Ps. lxxxi. 7, cvi. 32). It was here that Moses sinned in impatience and assumption of power, for which offense he was not permitted to cross over Jordan (Num. xx. 12).

MERIBBA'AL (against Baal). MEPHIBOSHETH.

MERŌ'DACH (bold). The Babylonian Bel, a gilded image of which was worshiped at Babylon. The planet Jupiter.

MERO'DACH BAL'ADAN. BALADAN. Berodach is an error. Reigned twice over Babylon, B. C. 721 to 709, and in 702 six months.

ME'ROM, THE WATERS OF (Josh. xi. 5, 7). Where Jabin, king of Hazor, and his allies were defeated by Joshua. The lake El Huleh or Samochonitis (Jos. Ant. v. 5, 1).

MERO'NOTHITE, THE. Native of Meronoth (1 Chr. xxvii. 30).

ME'ROZ (asylum), (Judg. v. 23). Whose people refused to help Deborah and Barak against Sisera. El Murussus, north of Bethshan 4 miles (Rob. ii. 356).

ME'RUTH (1 Esd. v. 24). A corruption of IMMER.

MES'ECH. The sixth son of Japheth (Gen. x. 2), and founder of a nation (Ps. cxx. v.), which traded with Tyre (Ez. xxvii. 13), and was ruined with Egypt (xxxii. 26), and a neighbor of Gog and Magog (xxxviii. 2).

ME'SHA. The Joktanites dwelt from Mesha unto Mt. Sephar (Gen. x. 30). The mountain range of Zamos (Mesha) runs from near the Persian Gulf S. W., nearly across Arabia. There is a mount Zafara on the Indian Ocean. Here is now, and has been from remote times, the country of the Beni Kahtan (Joktanite Arabs), inhabiting Yemen, Hadramaut and Oman, separated from the Ishmaelites by the Nejed mountain range.

ME'SHA (safety). 1. King of MOAB (2 K. iii. 4), who revolted from the 10 tribes after the death of Ahab, against whom Jehoshaphat and Jehoram led their armies. He was a great sheep-breeder. A monument erected by him is mentioned in the article KIR HARESH, with an engraving of "THE MOABITE STONE," on page 94.—2. Son of Caleb, who founded Ziph (1 Chr. ii. 42).—3 (retreat). Son of Shaharaim (1 Chr. viii. 9).

ME'SHACH (ram). The name given to MISHAEL 3, companion of Daniel (Dan. i. 4). It was a name of the sun-god of the Chaldæans.

ME'SHECH (drawing out). 1. Son of Japheth (Gen. x. 2), and of the race in connection with Tubal, Magog and other northern nations.—2. MASH (1 Chr. i. 17).

MESHELEMI'AH (whom Jah repays as a friend). Son of Kore, a porter in the house of Jehovah (1 Chr. ix. 21). Shelemiah in 1 Chr. xxvi. 1.

MESHEZ'ABEEL (delivered). 1. Ancestor of MESHULLAM 13 (Neh. iii. iv.).—2. A family who sealed the covenant (x. 21).—3. Father of Pethahiah (xi. 24).

MESHIL'EMITH. Son of Immer, a priest (Neh xi. 13).

MESHIL'EMOTH (requital). 1. A chief under Pekah, ancestor of Berechiah (2 Chr. xxviii. 12). —2. MESHILLEMITH (Neh. xi. 13).

MESHO'BAB (returned). A prince in Hezekiah's reign (1 Chr. iv. 34).

MESHUL'LAM (friend). 21 of this name, but not one in any way famous.

MESHUL'LEMETH (friend). Daughter of Haruz, wife of Manasseh (2 K. xxi. 19).

MESO'BAITE (MEZOBAYAH, gathering-place of Jah). A title of JASIEL (1 Chr. xi. 47).

MESOPOTA'MIA (between the rivers). Between the Tigris and Euphrates, 700 miles long by 20 to 250 wide. The Aram Naharaim (in the Hebrew) of Gen. xxiv. 10, and Padan Aram of xxv. 20. It is a plain, but is crossed by the Sinjar hills east to west, near its centre, not far from Mosul. The nomade tribes are the only people, and they are driven to the hills in the hot season, when the pastures become dry, dusty and parched, except near the streams. (See Assyria.) It is becoming the belief among scholars that the Mesopotamia (the city of Nahor) of Terah and Haran of Abraham were near Damascus (Dr. Beke), where Bethuel and Laban lived, and Abraham sent a servant to fetch Rebekah to be Isaac's wife; and a hundred years after that Jacob earned his two wives in 21 years. It was also the residence of Balaam (Deut. xxiii. 4). All of these references may apply to the region around Damascus, between the rivers Pharpar and Abana.

MESSI'AH. CHRIST. The anointed (as a king). The word is found in the original Hebrew many times, in all of which it is translated anointed, except in Daniel ix. 25, 26. The ceremony of ANOINTING was intended to mark what God had set apart for his own purposes. It was His royal stamp, which was to be applied to the high priest (Ex. xxviii. 41), the offerings, the tabernacle, table, ark, candlestick, altar of incense, laver and vessels attached to them, "to sanctify them, and they shall be most holy; whatsoever toucheth them shall be holy."

METALS. The earliest record of the production and manufacture of metals is in the reference to Tubal Cain, a Cainite, the son of Lamech (Gen. iv. 22). The first mention of metal as money is in Gen. xxiii. 16. The gold and silver possessed by the Jews was of vast amount even allowing for over statements (1 Chr. xxii. 14, xxix. 4). The trade in metals was mostly held by the Phœnicians (Ez. xvii. 7). Metals were also supplied worked in thin plates (Jer. x. 9). The holy vessels used in the Temple were mostly gold (Ezr. v. 14). Tin is mentioned among the spoils of the Midianites (Num. xxxi. 22), and lead in Ez. xv. 10. In the earliest times copper (NOCOSHETH) and bronze were used for many purposes in the place of iron introduced at a later period.

METE'RUS. Sons of Meterus returned from captivity (1 Esd. v. 17).

ME'THEGAM'MAH (bridle of the mother city). A place David took from the Philistines (2 Sam. viii. 1).

BOAT OF THE NILE.

METHU'SAEL (man of God). Son of Mehujael, and father of LAMECH 1 (Gen. iv. 18).

METHU'SELAH (man of offspring). Son of Enoch (Gen. v. 25–27). He lived 969 years, longer than any other PATRIARCH, and died the year of the flood.

MEU'NIM (Neh. vii. 52).

MEU'ZAL (Ez. xxvii. 19).

MEZA'HAB (water). Father of Matred (Gen. xxxvi. 39).

MIA'MIN (from the right hand). 1. A layman (Ezr. x. 25).—2. A priest who returned from captivity (Neh. xii. 5).

MIB'HAR (choice). Son of Haggeri, one of David's men (1 Chr. xi. 38).

MIB'SAM (sweet odor). 1. Son of Ishmael (Gen. xxv. 13).—2. Son of Simeon (1 Chr. iv. 25).

MIB'ZAR (fort). A duke of Edom (1 Chr. i. 53).

MI'CHA. 1. Son of Mephibosheth (2 Sam. ix. 12).—2. A Levite who signed the covenant (Neh. x. 11).—3. Father of Mattaniah (xi. 17, 22).—Father of Ozias, governor of Bethulia (Jud. vi. 15). See MICAH, in HISTORY OF THE BOOKS.

MI'CHAEL (like God). Ten of this name who were without note.

MI'CHAH. Eldest son of Uzziel (1 Chr. xxiv. 24).

MI'CHAIAH (like Jah). Six of this name, but none famous.

MI'CHAL (who like El?). The youngest daughter of Saul, espoused to David. Saul had intended to make her a party to his designs, but was foiled by her devotion to David. This was especially illustrated in the incident in 1 Sam. xix. 11–17, by which she assisted the escape of David. Saul afterwards cancelled the marriage, but a reunion followed through the mission of Abner (2 Sam. iii. 12–21). Through her conduct on meeting David, after his return from celebrating the entry of the ark into Jerusalem, she was punished with the curse of barrenness (2 Sam. vi. 16–23). Thus it was that the races of Saul and David were not united.

MICHE'AS. The prophet Micah 7 (2 Esd. i. 39).

MICH'MAS (Ezr. ii. 27). MICHMASH.

MICH'MASH (something hidden). In Benjamin. A pass celebrated by the exploit of Jonathan, Saul's son (1 Sam. xiii., xiv. 4, 16). Jonathan Maccabæus also resided there (1 Macc. ix. 73), on account of the military strength of the pass (Ant. xiii. 1, 6). Mukhmas, in the Wady Es Suweinit, has ruins of many foundations of hewn stones, columns, cisterns, etc., indicating a once strong place, perhaps a city devoted to the heathen deity Chemosh (the two names being similar). The two rocks (see BOZEZ and SENEH), may still be seen; one on each side of the narrow and precipitous valley (Rob.). Isaiah, in speaking of the invasion of Judah by Sennacherib, says he laid up his carriages at Michmash (x. 28), which agrees with the character of the place, it being too steep for wheels.

MICH'METHAH (hiding-place). Boundary of Ephraim and Manasseh, west of Jordan, facing Shechem (Josh. xvii. 7).—2. Between Ephraim and Benjamin (xvi. 6), toward the Great Sea.

SPHINX.

MICH'RI (price of Jah). Ancestor of Elah, a chief after the Captivity (1 Chr. ix. 8).

MICH'TAM. A musical term applied to three Psalms (xvi., lvi., lx).

MID'DIN (measures). Judah, in the wilderness. Um el Bedun, S. W. of the Dead Sea? (Velde).

MID'IAN (strife). Fourth son of Abraham by Keturah, and founder of a nation (Gen. xxv. 2; Num. xxii.), the rulers of Northern Arabia for a long time; inhabiting the peninsula of Sinai, where Moses fled after killing the Egyptian (Ex. ii. 15), and the country east of Edom and Palestine (xxxvii. 28).

MID'IANITE. One from MIDIAN (Gen. xxxvii. 28, 36).

MID'IANITISH. Belonging to MIDIAN (Num. xxv. 6 ff).

MID'RIFF. CAUL (Ex. xxix. 13).

MID'WIFE. Childbirth in the East, on account of open-air living, is usually easy. The office of midwife, when necessary, is performed by relatives, and sometimes by a professional. Two or three days before the time of delivery, the midwife carried to the house a chair, of peculiar form, upon which the patient is seated during birth (Ex. i. 16). CHILD. The modern Egyptian practice explains that alluded to in Exodus. See MEDICINE.

MIG'DAL E'DAR. Translated "O tower of the flock," in Micah iv. 8. A poetic name of Zion, because of its strength and watchfulness over Israel (Jer. xiii. 17).

MIG'DAL EL (tower of God). A fenced city in Naphtali (Josh. xix. 38). A place is mentioned in the Wady Kerkerah, 8 ms. E. of Nakura, called Mujeidel. But it is supposed Magdala is referred to in the text.

AIN KAREM.

MIG'DAL GAD (tower of God). Judah, in the Shefelah (Josh. xv. 37), near Lachish and Eglon.

MIG'DOL (tower). 1. A place between which and the Red Sea the Israelites were directed to camp on leaving Egypt (Ex. xiv. 2).—2. A boundary town mentioned by Jeremiah and Ezekiel, on the N. as Syene was on the S. of Egypt. Hecatæus of Miletus places Magdolo 12 ms. S. of Pelusium.

MIG'RON (precipice). Near Saul's city (1 Sam. xiv. 2), where there was a pomegranate tree, under which Saul and the remnant of his host "tarried" while Jonathan went on his famous exploit against the Philistines. Isaiah (x. 28) names it in the list of places passed by Sennacherib, on the S. side of the Wady Suweinit. Whether it was a rock or a town is not known.

MIJ'AMIN. 1. Chief of the 6th course of priests (1 Chr. xxiv. 9).—2. A priest who signed the covenant with Nehemiah (Neh. x. 7).

MIK'LOTH (staves). 1. Son of Jehiel (1 Chr. viii. 32).—2. A leader of the 2d division of David's army (xxvii. 4).

MIKNE'IAH (possession of Jah). One of the gatekeepers of the Ark (1 Chr. xv. 18, 21).

MIL'ALAI (eloquent). A priest who assisted at the wall of Jerusalem (Neh. xii. 36).

MIL'CAH (queen). 1. Daughter of Haran (Gen. xi. 29).—2. Fourth daughter of Zelophehad (Num. xxvi. 33).

MIL'COM (little Molech). The abomination of the children of Ammon (1 K. xi. 7).

MIL'DEW (pale). Blasting and turning yellow from disease (Deut. xxviii. 22).

MILE. The Roman measure of a mile was equal to 1618 English yards. (The English is 1760 yds.). "To go a mile" (Matt. v. 41). The Jewish mile was of two kinds, long or short, according to the length of pace. The Roman measurement was ultimately introduced into Palestine.

MILE'TUS. Seaport and the ancient capital of Ionia, Asia Minor, 36 ms. S. of Ephesus. The presbyters of the Church of Ephesus met Paul at this place on his return from his third missionary journey (Acts xx. 6).

MILK. There are two Hebrew terms for milk, one (CHELEB), meaning fresh milk, the other (CHEMAH) curdled. Both are frequently used in Scripture; fresh milk is figuratively used to mean abundance (Gen. xlix. 12; Ez. xxv. 4; Joel iii. 18, etc.). It is often mentioned with honey, as a "land flowing with milk and honey," applied to describe Egypt as well as Palestine (Num. xvi. 13). As a term of simplicity it occurs in 1 Cor. iii. 2; Heb. v. 12, 13; 1. Pet. ii. 3; Is. lv. 1). The milk was from goats, cows, sheep and camels (Prov. xxvii. 27; Deut. xxxii. 14). "Thirty milch camels" were given by Jacob to Esau (Gen. xxxii. 15).

MILL (RECHAIM, the two mill-stones, Ex. xi. 5); also in the preparation of manna for food in Num. xi. 8. The ordinary mill was a household machine of two stones two feet in diameter and six inches thick, the lower one hollowed out a little, and the upper fitted to it, and turned from right to left around by a wooden handle. This is the work of women or slaves. Captives (as Samson) were often forced to grind (Judg. xvi. 21); but more generally women were thus employed, as in Ex. xi. 5 and Matt. xxiv. 41.

MIL'LET (DOCHAN). Mentioned only in Ez. iv. 9. There was the "common millet" (Panicum Miliacum), and the "Turkish millet." It was probably the latter. Millet produced a bread of inferior quality.

MIL'LO (fulness). An ancient Jebusite name of a part of the citadel of Jerusalem (2 Sam. v. 9). Solomon raised a levy to build or enlarge this work (and others, 1 K. ix. 15). Hezekiah repaired Millo, the City of David (2 Chr. xxxii. 5). The HOUSE OF MILLO was a chief clan of Shechem (Judg. ix. 6, 20). King Joash was murdered by his slaves at "the house of Millo that goeth down to Silla" (2 K. xii. 20), which is supposed to have been the place mentioned first.

MI'NA (Luke xix. 13).

MIN'CING (Heb. TAFOF). Short, quick step; refers to an affectation of gait (Is. iii. 16).

MINES. MINING. (See METALS). The ancients were skilful miners, and their operations are alluded to by Job (xxviii. 1–11). Evidences remain of Egyptian copper mining in the Sinai desert. Palestine produced iron and copper. The Phœnicians brought tin from Spain, and possibly Cornwall, in England. There were lead mines bordering the coast of the Red Sea. Iron mining is referred to in Deut. iv. 20. See cut, p. 67. SILVERSMITH.

MIN'GLED PEOPLE (Heb. HAEREB). Mixed population (Jer. xxv. 20; Ez. xxx. 5). Rulers over mingled tribes (1 K. x. 15) and mercenaries.

MIN'IAMIN. 1. A Levite (2 Chr. xxxi. 15).—2. A priest (Neh. xii. 17).—3. A priest at the dedication of the wall (xii. 41).

MINNI (division). Armenia (Jer. li. 27). The Minnai of the Assyrian inscriptions were located near lake Urumieh. (See ARMENIA).

MIN'ISTER (Heb. MESHARETH). One who serves another; the term to distinguish from master; Solomon's servants and ministers (1 K. x. 5). "Moses rose up and his minister Joshua" (Ex. xxiv. 13). He who administers an office. "God's ministers" (Rom. xiii. 4, 6). "Ministers of Christ" (1 Cor. iv. 1). "Christ came not to be ministered unto, but to minister." Minister "of the circumcision" (Rom. xv. 8).

MIN'NITH (given). A town east of Jordan (Judg. xi. 33), celebrated for its wheat (Ez. xxvii. 17), which was exported at Tyre. Menjah, a ruin, 4 ms. N. E. of Heshbon (Velde).

RINGS.

MIN'STREL. In the A. V. the word minstrel only occurs twice in 2 K. iii. 15. "But now bring me a minstrel;" and in Matt. xix. 23, "When Jesus saw the minstrel." The Hebrew in the first text means a player upon a stringed instrument, as David was (1 Sam. xvi. 23; also 1 Sam. x. 5). In Matthew minstrel means pipe-player. Pipe-playing was used by professional mourners. See MUSIC and MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.

MINT (Gr. hedusmon). One of those herbs, the tithe of which the Jews were most exact in paying. Mint was used by the Greeks and Romans in medicine and cookery. The horse-mint (Mentha sylvestris) is common in Syria. Mint is only mentioned in Matt. xxiii. 23, and Luke xi. 42, as a tithe. Probably the horse-mint (Mentha sylvestris).

MIPH'KAD, THE GATE (number). A gate of Jerusalem in the time of Nehemiah (iii. 31); perhaps in the City of David.

MIRACLES. Two Hebrew words, OTH, sign, and MOFETH, wonder, (plural NIFLAOTH, wonders), and three Greek words, terata, wonders; semeia, signs; dunameis, powers, mighty works, are translated miracles. None of these words imply supernatural power, or religious purpose, because those points are always left to be inferred from the simple narrative of the event, for many wonderful events are recorded which were not supernatural, as in the case of Isaiah who walked naked and barefoot for three years, for a sign (Is. xx. 3). Natural and common events may be used for signs, and do indicate the miracle if they were predicted.

The meaning of miracle in our day is a work or sign that is above and beyond nature. A miracle may be defined as a violation of a law of nature by a particular volition of the Deity, or by the interposition of some visible agent. This is not quite correct, for the miracle is the result of a new power, or new law, which produces effects not included in our ordinary experience. It is simply one law operating on another so far as to neutralize it, and produce unexpected results.

In the case of healing sickness, the word, or touch, or gesture, is the prediction of the cure, and the supernatural is seen in the prediction, or seeing before time what will come to pass. The prediction and the fulfilment may occur near together, or at a great length of time apart, and two sets of independent witnesses depose to the prediction and the fulfilment, leaving no room for doubt or fraud.

MIR'IAM (bitter). Sister of Moses, who it is supposed watched her infant brother when he was exposed in the Nile (Ex. ii. 4). Upon the flight of the Israelites from Egypt, Miriam is called prophetess (Ex. xv. 20), where she celebrates the passage of the Red Sea with music. The arrival of Zipporah, Moses' Ethiopian wife, excited the enmity of Miriam, who incited Aaron to sedition (Num. xii.); for this conduct Miriam was stricken with leprosy, and was recovered by the intercession of Moses. She died in the 1st month of the 40th year after the Exodus, at Kadesh-Barnea (Num. xx. 1). See EXODUS, HISTORY OF THE BOOKS.

MIR'MA (deceit). Son of Shaharaim (1 Chr. viii. 10).

MIR'ROR (Heb. MARAH, REI). Mirrors were of polished metal. The Israelitish women probably brought Egyptian-made mirrors out of Egypt. These were given to make the "laver of brass and the foot of it" for the Temple (Ex. xxxviii. 8). Figuratively mentioned in Job xxxvii. 18.

MIS'AEL. 1. MISHAEL 2 (1 Esd. ix. 44).—2. MISHAEL 3. (SONG OF THE THREE HOLY CHILDREN.)

MIS'GAB (lofty fort). City of Moab (Jer. xlviii. 1). Mizpeh (1 Sam. xxiii. 3).

MISH'AEL (who is what God is). 1. Son of Uzziel (Ex. vi. 22). He assisted in removing the bodies of Nadab and Abihu from the sanctuary (Lev. x. 4, 5).—2. One who stood with Ezra (Neh. viii. 4).—3. Companion of Daniel (Dan. i. 6, 7, 11, 19).

MI'SHAL (Josh. xxi. 30).

MI'SHAM (swift-going). Son of Elpaal (1 Chr. viii. 12).

MISHEAL (entreaty). A city of Asher (Josh. xix. 26).

MISH'MA (hearing). 1. Son of Ishmael (Gen. xxv. 14).—2. Son of Simeon (1 Chr. iv. 25).

MISHMAN'NAH (fatness). A Gadite, who joined David at Ziklag (1 Chr. xii. 10).

MISH'RAITES (slippery place). People from Mishra (1 Chr. ii. 53).

MIS'PERETH (number). One who returned from captivity (Neh. vii. 7).

MIS'REPHOTH-MAIM (burnings of waters). Near Sidon (Josh. xi. 8); not conquered at Joshua's death (xiii. 6). Zarephath. Sarepta.

MIST (Heb. ED). Vapor rising from the earth, and forming clouds (Gen. ii. 6).

MITE (Gr. lepton). See MONEY.

MITH'CAH (sweetness). Desert station. Lost. (Num. xxxiii. 28).

MITH'NITE, THE (extension). The native place of JOSHAPHAT (1 Chr. xi. 43).

MITH'REDATH (given by Mithra). 1. Treasurer of Cyrus (Ez. i. 8).—2. An officer at Samaria (Ezr. iv. 7).

MITHRIDA'TES. 1. MITHRIDATH 1 (1 Esd. ii. 11).—2. MITHREDATH 2 (ii. 16).

MITYLE'NE. Chief town in Lesbos (Acts xx. 14, 15). The Romans called it "the beautiful," from its fine buildings. It was a free city in Paul's time. It is a city now, and gives its name to the whole island.

MIXED MULTITUDE (a medley of people). Mentioned as amongst the Israelites in their journey from Rameses to Succoth (Ex. xii. 38). See Num. xi. 4. In the return from the Babylonish Captivity, mixed multitude refers to Arabians (Neh. xii. 4), which is probably the meaning in the other references.

MIZ'AR, THE HILL (little). From which the Psalmist uttered the pathetic appeal recorded in Ps. xlii. E. of Jordan. Lost. (Not Little Hermon).

MIZPAH, MIZPEH, (watch-tower, or look-out). 6 places of this name: 1. Mispah (also Galeed), where Jacob and Laban set up a memorial stone-heap (Gen. xxxi. 45), saying, The Lord watch between us. Mizpah was the Hebrew form of the ancient name of the place. N. of Mahanaim, on some hill-top. Jebel Osha, near Es Salt? The top is broad and flat—a fine place for an assembly—and on the N. slope is a ruin, called Jilad (Gilead). (Grove, in Smith's Dict.).—2. THE LAND OF MISPAH. The Hivites of this land helped Jabin against the Israelites (Josh. xi. 3).—3. THE VALLEY OF MISPEH. Where Joshua chased Jabin and his multitude (ver. 8). Cœle-Syria, or Bukaa? Perhaps the reference is to the Hauran, "eastward" from the waters of Merom.—4 (Ib. xv. 38). In the Shefelah. Tell es Safieh (Velde).—5. A city of Benjamin (Ib. xviii. 26), on Neby Samwil, 4 ms. N. W. of Jerusalem. Here the whole nation assembled to avenge the Levite (Judg. xx.); and to sacrifice before attacking the Philistines by order of Samuel (1 Sam. vii.); and again to elect Saul king (x.): the city of Gibeon was about 1 m. N. of the hill; and perhaps on this very hight Solomon offered sacrifice, and was endowed with wisdom (1 K. iii. 4). It was fortified by Asa, who took the materials from Ramah, 3 ms. N. E. Gedaliah, Nebuchadnezzar's governor, lived here when he was killed by the fanatic Ishmael (Jer. xl. 7, 8). After the destruction of the Temple it was held as a holy place, where sacrifice was made (xli. 5) in a house of the Lord. This character continued as late as the time of the Maccabees (1 Macc. iii. 46). There is a village and a mosque (formerly a church) on the summit of Neby Samwil. The hill rises steeply 600 ft. above the plain, and commands a very extensive view, especially E., as far as Kerak, in Moab, and W. to the Mediterranean.—6. MIZPEH OF MOAB (1 Sam. xxii. 3). Where David sought an asylum for his father and mother, with the king of Moab (among the relatives of Ruth?).

MIZ'RAIM (the two Egypts). EGYPT (Gen. x. 6). This name (not of a man but of a country) represents a centre from which colonies went out from the remotest antiquity. Egypt is now called Misr in Arabic. See EGYPT.

MIZ'ZAH (fear). Son of Reuel (Gen. xxxvi. 13, 17).

MNA'SON (remembering). An old disciple, a resident of Jerusalem, and a native of Cyprus (Acts iv. 36, xxi. 16).

MO'AB (from father). Son of Lot, and founder of a tribe, located E. of the Dead Sea (Gen. xix. 37), in the district once occupied by the Emims (Gen. xiv. 5; Deut. ii. 11). Zoar, the city of this tribe, was most probably N. E. of the Dead Sea, from which the Amorites drove them, and which was given to Reuben. The whole region is undulating, without any high ridges or sudden hills, except near the Dead Sea and Jordan, is covered with sites of ruined towns, on every hill or other convenient place, and its soil is rich. The country must, when prosperous, have presented a scene of plenty and happiness scarcely equalled. The Roman roads have not entirely disappeared, on which there are still milestones of the time of Trajan, Marcus Aurelius, and Severus, with the numbers yet readable.

MO'ABITE. Descendant of MOAB (Deut. ii. 9).

MO'ABITESS. A female of MOAB (Ruth i. 22).

MOADI'AH (festival of Jah). One who returned from captivity (Neh. xii. 17).

MOCH'MUR (foaming). Probably the Wady Ahmur.

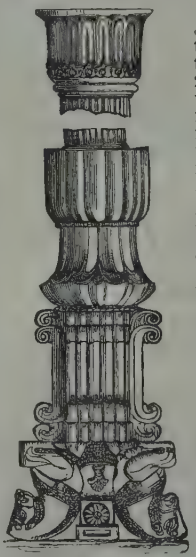
MO'DIN. The native city of the Maccabees, who were of the race of the priests (1 Macc. ii. 1, xiii. 25), where their ancestral sepulchre was located (Jos. Ant. xiii. 6, 6; 1 Macc. xiii. 27–30, ii. 70; ix. 19). Here the resistance to Antioch was begun by Mattathias; and here the Jewish armies encamped on the eve of two of their most noted victories—that of Simon over Cendebæus (1 Macc. xvi. 4), and that of Judas over Eupator (2 Macc. xiii. 14). The site of Modin is located at Latrun, on the road from Jerusalem to Ramleh, 12 miles from the former, where there are ancient remains of importance (Rob.).

MO'ETH. Son of Sabban (Ezr. viii. 33).



COLUMN AT PERSEPOLIS.

MO'LADAH. South, in Judah (Josh. xv. 26); given to Simeon. Reoccupied after the Captivity (Neh. xi. 26). Herod retired to a tower in Malatha of Idumæa (Josephus). El Milh is a ruin of great extent, with two large wells, and is on the regular road from Petra to Hebron.

MOLE (TINSHEMETH). Mentioned in Lev. xi. 18, as the name of a bird (swan) or in Lev. xi. 30, as mole—amongst "creeping things" that are unclean. Probably a chameleon on a general allusion. In Is. ii. 20 it is more likely to mean a mole (CHEFOR PEROTH).

MOLECH (MELEK, king). The chief god of the Phœnicians—mentioned as the god of the Ammonites. Probably known to the Israelites before the time of Solomon. Human sacrifices (infants) were offered up to this idol, the victims being slowly burnt to death in the arms of the idol, which were of metel, hollow, and could be heated on the inside.

MO'LI. Son of Merari (1 Esd. viii. 47).

MO'LID (begetter). Son of Abishur (1 Chr. ii. 29).

MO'LOCH (Amos v. 26; Acts vii. 43). MOLECH.

MOM'DIS. Son of Bani (1 Esd. ix. 34).

MON'EY. The most ancient notices of money refer to certain weights of precious metals, but not to coins. The first mention of wealth in the Bible is of the wealth of Abraham when he left Egypt to return to Canaan; and of the 1000 pieces of silver that the Abimelech gave Abraham for Sarah's use (Gen. xiii. 2, xx. 16), unless Job lived before his time, when the "kesitah and ring of gold," which each of his friends gave him after his recovery, would belong to an earlier age.

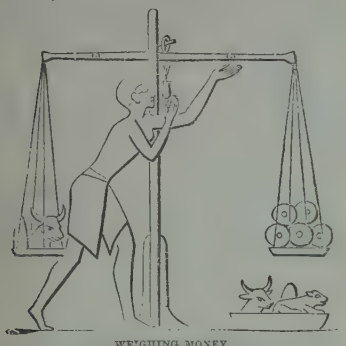
Abraham bought the cave of Machpelah and weighed to Ephron 400 shekels of silver, current with the merchant (xxiii. 6). Jacob paid 100 kesitahs for a field at Shalem; Achan stole 200 shekels of silver, and a tongue of gold weighing 50 shekels (Josh. vii.)



WEIGHING MONEY.

Jewels in the East have in all ages been a convenient and recognized means of keeping property, the precious metals being always weighed, as in the case of the presents to Rebekah (Gen. xxiv. 22). Egyptian (and perhaps also other) money was made into rings, for convenience, as when the sons of Jacob carried bundles of money of certain weight to Egypt to buy corn (xlii. 35, xliii. 21). The Midianites were "spoiled" of jewels of gold, chains and bracelets, rings, ear-rings, and tablets, of 16,750 shekels' weight.

Jehoiada "took a chest, and bored a hole in the lid of it, and set it beside the altar, on the right side, and the priests put therein all the money" (2 K. xii. 9.) This is the first mention of a contribution box, 850 B. C. These small pieces may have been coins.

Saul's servants said that they had only the fourth part of a shekel to give the prophet, and it seems to have been customary to give more (1 Sam. ix. 8). A half-shekel was the yearly temple dues (Ex. xxx. 13, 15).

HALF SHEKEL.

The credit for making the first coins, is given to the Lydians, Asia Minor, by Herodotus (i. 94), which were of gold; and to Phidra of Argos, in the island of Ægina, 860 B. C., of silver, by the Parian chronicle (a series of inscriptions, or records, on marble, dated 200 B. C.).

The earliest coins used in Palestine were Persian, and called Daric (king's money, from Darius), 450 B. C. (Ezr. ii. 69; Neh. vii. 70; 1 Chr. xxix. 7). (See cut on page 38). The stater (standard) was another Persian coin, of silver and of gold, and also the siglos (Greek for shekel?).

There are still to be found in the museums of Paris, Gotha, London, and in some private collections, coins of Sardis (see cut on page 95), Scythopolis (Bethshan), Joppa, Tarsus, Sycamina, Ascalon, Ephesus, Philadelphia, and several other cities of Palestine, of the date of Alexander, 350 B. C.

Antiochus VII, 139 B. C. granted the privilege of coining money among the Jews to Simon Maccabæus, and the various pieces are dated "In the first, or second, year of Simon (see cut on page 79), benefactor of the Jews, High-Priest" (1 Macc. xiii. 34, 42; Ant. xiii. 6). The date was always given in letters. (See NUMBER). Some coins have "ethnarch." There are some shekels with the inscription SHEKEL HAKODESH, shekel of the Sanctuary, that is the Temple.

Eleazar, son of Simon, struck coins both of silver and bronze (see cut on page 56). Jehonathan, high-priest, struck coins, B. C. 105–78, of which some are still extant.

The money of Herod is less interesting, because of its Greek character, and being of bronze only. The farthing of the New Testament was the smallest of Herod's coins, unless the mite was smaller. The text in Mark xii. 42, is explained, "she threw in two leptra, (mites) which is a quadrans" (farthing), (see page 56), as though we should say two mills, which are a quarter of a cent (nearly). Such very small coins are often found buried, with others, among the ancient ruins of Palestine. The modern Arabs also use small pieces which look very much like fish scales, in size and thickness.

The coin which Peter found in the mouth of the fish, was probably the stater, or tetradrachm, the only Greek silver coin in use at that time, equal in value to the shekel, which was not then coined, or in use, unless for Temple dues (see pages 8 and 11 for cuts of tetradrachm). The tribute money (Matt. xxii. 15–21) bore the head of a Cæsar, Tiberius or some earlier one, and was a day's wages of a soldier, and such as was paid the laborers in the vineyard (Matt. xviii. 28, xx. 2, 9, 13, xxii. 19; Mark vi. 37, xii. 15, xiv. 5; Luke vii. 41, x. 35, xx. 24; John vi. 7, xii. 15; Rev. vi. 6).

The piece of money paid Judas is represented by the tetradrachm of Antiochus III (cut on page 99), which was equal to the shekel. As there were money-changers in the Temple, who changed Gentile coins for the Temple money (shekel of the sanctuary), the thirty pieces may have been Jewish shekels of Simon or Eleazar (pages 56, 79).

The last coins struck by the Jews are those of Barkokab, A. D. 130. (This is doubted by some numismatists).

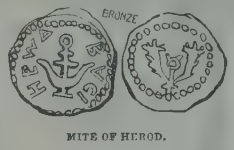
The Romans struck several coins and medals in memory of the fall of Jerusalem, one of which is given on page 78. Herod Agrippa also gives a head of Titus, when Emperor, on one of his coins. The Aretas who ruled Damascus when Paul was there struck coins, one of which is now well known. The coin of Ephesus bears a model of the temple of Diana, and a head of Nero.

MITE OF HEROD.

There is a curious medal with a head of Christ on a cross, which was found at Urfa, Syria (by Rev. G. B. Nutting, missionary, who loaned it to me), and is engraved on page 22. It is very ancient, but cannot be dated, except that it is probably later than the time of Constantine.

A coin if genuine is often the very best evidence concerning ancient persons and places, which cannot be denied or explained away. Even if they were forged, in some age near the true date, they have still a value according to their antiquity. It is often found that ancient records are confirmed by coins, as for instance in the case of the port of Cenchræa, where the coin of Corinth explains the text. See page 65.

The frequent allusions to burying money and treasure was confirmed as true records a few years ago by the discovery of some earthen jars in a garden at Sidon, containing nearly 8000 pieces of gold, the coinage of Philip of Macedon, and Alexander, his son. There were no banks or places of secure deposit, and the only safety was in burying money or treasure in some secret place, as alluded to in Prov. ii. 4; and also in Jer. xli. 8, where the treasures hid were produced.



MITE OF HEROD.

MONTH (HODESH or CHODESH, YERAH or YERACH). The Hebrew months were divided into twenty-nine and thirty days alternately. The period of New Moon marked the first day called New Moon day or New-Month. (See CHRONOLOGY). The months were numbered, as first, second; and also named in the calendar (Gen. vii. 11; 2 Kings xxv. 3; Esth. viii. 9). The Hebrew month does not run even with ours, being regulated by the moon, and having about 29 days, while ours has an arbitrary number given it, varying from 28 to 31 days.

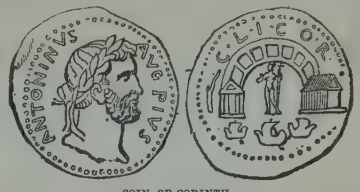
MONUMENT (Is. lxv. 4). Various terms used, as preserved in Is. xlix. 6; hidden (xlviii. 6); besieged (i. 8, and Ez. vi. 12). It is a general reference to retired places.

MOON. Three names of the moon were used by the Hebrews: YAREAH, paleness; LEBONAH, white; and HODESH (renewing) new moon. The hodesh moon was the means of reckoning the months and fixing the feasts, etc. In the account of the festivals it appears that the authorities set a watch on the hills about Jerusalem, who looked for the new moon, and when it was seen they were to report to the Sanhedrin. (See NEW MOON). The new moon regulated the month, and if any cloud or other cause prevented the discovery, the month would vary by a day.

The names of the moon in the account of the creation were framed on its light-giving property and color.

It is (and was anciently) a common superstition in Palestine that the moon has a powerful effect on both animal and vegetable life. That sleeping in the open air, exposed to the light of the moon, produces serious ills, blindness (Ps. cxxi. 6), etc. That as dew fell most abundantly on clear cool nights, the moon was the cause of its falling; and also the cause of all fertility.

The moon was worshiped (as also the sun) as a power, and was personified, several moon-goddesses being recorded. Some nations directly addressed the moon itself in their ceremonies, as the Pelasgians, Carthaginians, Teutons, Celts and others made images of women in certain drapery and attitude, called by the Armenians, Anaitis; by the Phœnicians, Astarte (Job xxxi. 26; 2 K.



COIN OF CORINTH.

xxiii. 13; Jer. vii. 18; viii. 2; xix. 13; xliv. 17–19). Queen of heaven; Syrians, Ashtoreth; Babylonians, Sin; Egyptians, Isis or Neith; Greeks, Artemis; Romans, Diana. The Chaldæans called the moon (and the woman-image) Queen of Heaven. See cut on page 70.

The worship was very widely known and practiced, and was specialy denounced by Moses (Deut. iv. 19; xvii. 3), but in spite of his laws it was introduced with other idolatries by Manasseh, B. C. 698. Josiah reformed the Church in his day, but not permanently (2 K. xxiii. 5). The moon was worshiped as the power to which women were peculiarly subject; and women offered incense, drink-offerings and cakes, and by the kissing of the hand towards the bright orb.

MOR'DECAI (little man), (Esth. ii. iii. iv. v.). He was the guardian of Esther, who was selected to succeed Vashti as queen of Ahasuerus, king of Persia, her Jewish descent remaining unknown to the king.

MO'REH (a teacher). THE OAK OF MOREH (not plain), was the first halting-place of Abram in Canaan (Gen. xii. 6), and was near Shechem. (Land of Moriah?) The field which Jacob bought probably included this sacred grove. The name Morthia is found on some ancient coins as a title of Neopolis—Shechem. Josephus has a Mamortha, or Mabortha, which he says was a local name (B. J. v. 8, 1). THE HILL OF MOREH. At the base of this hill the Midianites encamped on the night when Gideon attacked them with his 300 (Judg. vii. 1). Now called Little Hermon or Jabel ed Duhy.

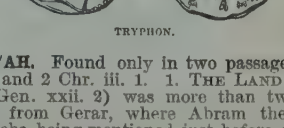
MORESH'ETH GATH (possession of the winepress), (Micah i. 14). In the Shefelah, near Lachish. The prophet Micah was a native of a Moresheth, but whether this is the one is not certain.



TRYPHON.

MORI'AH. Found only in two passages—Gen. xxii. 2, and 2 Chr. iii. 1. 1. THE LAND OF MORIAH (Gen. xxii. 2) was more than two days' journey from Gerar, where Abram then lived (Beersheba being mentioned just before and just after the event of the journey), and probably in the same region with the oak of Moreh, Shechem.—

2. MOUNT MORIAH would in that case be Mt. Gerizim, according to the tradition of the Samaritans; but it is said, in 2 Chr. iii. 1, that Solomon began to build the house of the Lord at Jerusalem, in Mount Moriah. There must have been two mountains of that name, or the one at Jerusalem is the only one. This mount, then, has witnessed the offered sacrifice of Isaac, the vision of God's judgment and mercy, the presence of His temple and worship, and the crucifixion.

MOR'TAR (MEDOKAH). Mill or mortar, in which grain was pounded for domestic use (Num. xi. 8).

ROMAN MEDAL.

The Arabs use the same simple machine now. They were made of stone or hard wood. (See MILL). The mortar for olives (KUTTASH) was made expressly for that use, of a heavy stone roller or wheel, which rolled around in a circular trough or tub, of stone also, moved by a long handle of wood. This squeezed or bruised the pulp, but did not crush the pits.

MO'SERAH (bond). Station in the Arabah, near Mt. Hor (Deut. x. 6). Moseroth (bonds), in Num. xxxiii. 30. Wady Mousa is supposed to be a remnant of the name Moserah. Aaron died while the people were encamped here.

MO'SES (MOSHEH, drawn out of the water). The son of Amram and Jochebed, of the tribe of Levi. Aaron was his brother, and Miriam his sister. He was saved from the Pharaoh's decree, of death to all male infants born to the Hebrews, by being laid in an ark (boat) of papyrus (A. V. bulrushes), and left among the reeds near the Nile bank, where the daughter of the Pharaoh was in the habit of bathing, where she found and drew him out of the water. He was educated as an Egyptian in the priest's college at Heliopolis, and was probably initiated into the sacred order of the priests (Acts vii. 22), and named Osarsiph, or Tisithen (Strabo, Ant. ii. 9, 7). It is probable, also, that he became acquainted in that seat of learning with Greek, Chaldæan, and Assyrian literature.

The great importance of selecting proper nurses may be learned from the history of Moses, whose mother, a Hebrew woman, nursed him, although he was brought up by the Egyptians; and when he became of age he chose the religion and people of his own race, although he was offered a place in the Pharaoh's family as an adopted son.

He became the champion of his people from the first, and showed his compassion for their sufferings by killing one of the task-masters who was abusing a Hebrew. Pharaoh would have punished him with death for the murder, if he had not fled into Arabia, and "sat down by a well" in the land of Midian, where his first act was to defend the daughters of Reuel (Jethro), a priest of Midian, against their oppressors, the shepherds. (See MIDIAN). He became a shepherd in the service of Jethro, and married Zipporah, his daughter, by whom he had two sons, Gershom and Eliezer. During the seclusion of his shepherd life, in the valley of Shoayb (or Hobab), he received a divine commission to deliver his people Israel from the Egyptian bondage, and at the same time the divine name Jehovah (Heb. YEHEVEH = self-existence), which was explained to him, and a confirmation of his mission in the three miracles of the burning bush, the serpent rod, and the leprous hand. Supported by his brother Aaron, sustained in a wonderful way by the miracles of the ten plagues, the last of which was the most terrible, in the death of the first-born in all Egypt, Moses led out the Israelites to the E. side of the Red Sea, blessed with liberty, and a large tribute from their late oppressors.

On this occasion Moses wrote his first recorded poem (Ex. xv.). His sister Miriam also sang a song, the title, or subject only, of which is known.

Moses was at this time 80 years old. His life during the next 40 years is a part of the history of the Israelites, inseparable, and for 38 years entirely unknown. He died at the age of 120, and was not careful of his memory, leaving no monument of stone to mark his grave, which is unknown (Deut. xxiv.).

MOTE (a twig or mote). The emblem of lesser faults (Matt. vii. 3–5).

MOTH (Heb. ASH; Gr. sēs). A destructive insect. Nearly every instance where this insect is mentioned it is in reference to its destroying garments (Job. xiii. 28).

MOTHER (Heb. EM; Gr. mētēr). The mother was honored and esteemed in the Hebrew system, and far above the station given her in any other system of the age (1 K. ii. 19; Ex. xx. 12; Lev. xix. 3; Deut. v. 16; Prov. x. 1, xv. 20, xvii. 25, xxix. 15, xxxi. 30). See WOMEN.

MOULD'Y (Heb. MIKKUDIM), (Josh. ix. 5, 12).

MOUNTAIN. The Hebrew words are, HAR, HARER, or HARAR, and the Chaldee, tur; which are translated mount, mountain, and hill. The various parts of a mountain were described by the names of parts of the human body: 1. Head (ROSH, Gen. viii. 5), meaning tops or summits.—2. Ears (AZNOTH, Josh. xix. 34); projections or spurs. Uzzen Sherah.—3. Shoulder (KATHEF, Deut. xxxiii. 12), meaning side or slope.—4. Side, (ZAD, 1 Sam. xxiii. 26).—5. Loins (KISLOTH, Josh. xix. 12): Ha-Cesulloth (loins-village).—6. Rib (ZELA, 2 Sam. xvi. 13).—7. Back (SHEKEM), the origin of the name Shechem, which is on the back of Gerizim.—8. Thigh (JARKAH, Judg. xix. 1, 18).—9. In Chaldee tur is mountain, and this is borrowed in the modern name of Olivet, Jebel et Tur.

MOUNTAIN OF THE AMMONITES (Deut. i. 19, 20). On the plateau of Et Tyh, from Jebel Araif en-Nakah to Jebel el Mukrah, but also extended in lower ranges as far as Hebron.

MOURN'ING. There are a great many allusions to mourning in the Bible. Its customs include: Beating the breast and body; weeping and screaming in an excessive manner; wearing dark-colored garments; songs and shouts of lamentation; funeral feasts; hired mourners; the disuse of perfumes, oil, and fine food, and the use of ashes, and coarse food and clothes. The time of mourning lasted from 7 to 30 days.

MOUSE (AKBAR, field-ravager). An unclean animal (Lev. xi. 29), forbidden as food. Five golden mice were made for a trespass offering (1 Sam. vi. 4, 5). It is not known what they were, and some think jerboas answer the meaning of the original.

MOUTH (PEH). Is used in the Scriptures both literally of men and beasts (Gen. viii. 11).

MOW'ING. The heat of the climate in Palestine is so great it soon dries up the herbage so that hay-making is not in use (Amos vii. 1). Grass and green grain were cut for immediate use (Ps. cxxix. 7; Amos vii. 1).

MO'ZAH (spring-head). Benjamin (Josh. xviii. 26), near Cephirah, the modern Kefir.—2. Son of Zimri, and in the line of Saul—Mephibosbeth—Micah (1 Chr. ix. 42).

MUF'FLERS (veils). A female ornament (Is. xii. 19).

MULBERRY.

MUL'BERRY TREES (BACA, BEKAIM). It is not certain that mulberry trees are meant in 2 Sam. v. 23, 24; 1 Chr. xiv. 14. Some think it was a species of poplar. See cut on p. 48.

MULE (PERED, mule; REKESH, dromedary; and YEMIM, warm springs; are all translated mule. First mentioned in David's time, when horses became common, and they appear to have become favorites all at once, being mentioned in hundreds (Neh. vii. 68). The king's sons rode on mules. The law forbid he Jews from raising mules, and they either imported them or broke the law (Lev. xix. 19). Yemim, warm springs, were found by Anah (and not mules as in Gen. xxxvi. 24), east of the Dead Sea, now called Machærus or Callirrhoe.

MUP'PIM (sorrow). A descendant of Rachel (Gen. xlvi. 21).

MURDER. Was an outrage on the likeness of God in man, and also a damage to society in the loss of a member. There was to be no reprieve of the murderer, for money, as the pagans allowed. The accidental man-slayer might escape to the City of Refuge.

MUR'RAIN (DEBER). A plague among cattle.

MU'SHI (forsaken). Son of MERARI (Ex. vi. 19).

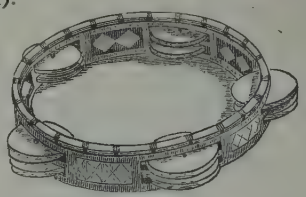
MU'SHITES. Descendants of Mushi (Num. iii. 33).

MUSIC. The first record of music is in Gen. iv. 21, referring to Jubal (brother of Tubal-Cain) as as the father (teacher?) of musicians upon the harp and organ; probably the lyre and the Pandean pipes. Music was used socially from an early date, as in Gen. xxxi. 27, both as an accompaniment to song and dance. Music was an especial employment of women, and, at a later period, "foreign girls" visited Palestine as musicians (Is. xxiii. 16). David was an accomplished musician, and gave much attention to its cultivation, and introduction into the Temple worship (1 Chr. xxv. 1). It is probable that in this service were female choirs (Ezr. ii. 65).

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS. There were three kinds in use. 1. Stringed, (harp, viol, sackbut). 2. Wind, (trumpet, horn, cornet, pipe, flute, organ, dulcimer). 3. Of percussion, (bells, cymbals, timbrel).



TIMBREL.

MUSTARD, (sinapis nigra). Is found abundantly in Palestine both in a wild and cultivated state. The mustard plant grows to a very large size on the banks of the Jordan. In comparison with any other "garden herb" it would be a "tree."

MUTH-LAB'BEN. Occurs in the title of Ps. ix. Muthlab'ben either referred to the instrument or the tune to which the Psalm was to be sung.

MYN'DUS. Between Miletus and Halicarnassus, the residence of Jews for convenience in trade (1 Macc. xv. 23). Mentioned by Herodotus and Strabo for its ships and harbor. There is an ancient pier and other ruins at the site.

MY'RA. In Lycia, where Paul changed vessels on the way to Rome (Acts xxvii. 5). The city was on a hill, at the foot of which flowed a navigable stream, with a good harbor at its mouth (Pliny). There are ruins of various periods of its history; ornamented tombs, with inscriptions in the Lycian character; a very large theatre, of the Greek age; and a Byzantine church.

MYRRH (MOR). One of the ingredients in the "oil of holy ointment," and used as a perfume (Prov. vii. 17). It was one of the gifts brought to the infant Jesus (Matt. ii. 11). Myrrh was used for EMBALMING (John xix. 39).

MYR'TLE-TREE (Heb. HADAS). It is a shrub or tree common in Southern Europe, North Africa and Syria. Its berries are used as a substitute for spices. The Jews use it in their adornments at the Feast of Tabernacles (Neh. viii. 15).

MY'SIA. Province in the N. W. of Asia Minor, west of Bithynia, north of Eolis, or Lydia. It was celebrated for its corn and wine. Paul passed through it on his first journey (Acts xvi. 7, 8). Assos and Adramyttium were in Mysia, but Troas was independent.

MYS'TERY (Gr. mustēriŏn). One initiated. Truths hidden from the natural sense and from the merely natural reason (1 Cor. xiii. 2). The New Testament idea is a hidden truth to the natural sense, but seen by the spiritual sense, as Paul says to the Colossians (ii. 2), and Jesus to his disciples (Matt. xiii. 11; Mark v. 11).

The word was used of those doctrines and facts which had been hidden, and were then unveiled both by outward facts and spiritual experience, as the kingdom of heaven, the doctrine of the cross, the resurrection, and the entire life of Jesus, which was the mystery of Godliness. It also refers to the meaning of parables and symbols.

N

NA'AM (grace). A Son of Caleb.

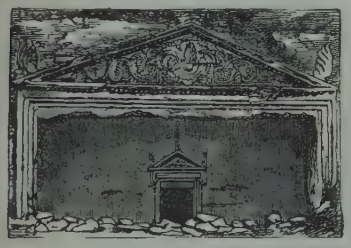
NA'AMAH (pleasing). 1. Daughter of Lamech, by Zillah.—2. Wife of Solomon and mother of king Rehoboam; she was an Ammonite.

NA'AMAH. Judah in the Shefelah (Josh. xv. 41), in the group with Lachish, etc. Lost.

NA'AMAN (pleasantness). 1. "Na'aman, the Syrian," Aramite warrior, cured of leprosy by Elisha (2 K. v.). See LEPROSY. This incident is referred to by Jesus (Luke iv. 27).—2. One of the family of Benjamin, who came down to Egypt with Jacob (Gen. xlvi. 21).

NA'AMATHITE (Job ii. 11, etc.). Zophar, one of Job's friends, was from NAAMAH; but it is supposed that it must be looked for in Arabia, where the Temanite and Shuhite, his other two friends, lived. Lost.

NA'AMITES. The descendants of Na'aman 2, mentioned in Num. xxvi. 40.



DOOR OF A TOMB.

NA'ARAH (a girl). Second wife of Ashur, a descendant of Judah (1 Chr. iv. 5, 6).

NA'ARAI. Son of Ezbai, one of David's "valient men" (1 Chr. xi. 37).

NA'ARAN (boyish). An eastern limit of Ephraim (1 Chr. vii. 28. See GEZER). Naarath in Josh. xvi. 7. Perhaps Neara, from which Archelaus conducted water to irrigate the royal gardens at Jericho (Ant. xvii. 13, 1). It was between Ataroth and Jericho. There are large ruins at the foot of the hills and in the deep ravines a few miles north of Jericho, where there are also ruins; but no place has been pointed out as the site in question. Wady Nawaimeh, 3 miles N. of Jericho?

NAASH'ON or NA'ASHON (Heb. NAHSHON) (Ex. vi. 23).

NAAS'SON (Gr. Naasson), (Matt. i. 4; Luke iii. 32).

NA'ATHUS. Of the family of Addi (1 Esd. ix. 31).

NA'AZUZ. The name of a tree, translated thorn, in Isaiah vii. 18, 19, lv. 13, a thorn tree.

NA'BAL (fool). A large owner of sheep and goats, near Carmel of Judah, descended from Caleb. He refused to supply provisions requested by David, through his young men, whom he insulted (1 Sam. xxv. 10, 11). His wife Abigail saved his life by appeasing the wrath of David. The excitement caused by the danger and rescue of Na'bal hastened his death, after which David married Abigail (1 Sam. xxv.). See ABIGAIL.

NA'BOTH (fruit produce). A Jezreelite who was the owner of a vineyard coveted by king Ahab (see AHAB), near whose palace it was (1 K. xxi. 1, 2). Naboth declined to part with his land. Through the order of Jezebel, Ahab's wife, Naboth was publicly accused of blasphemy, conveyed beyond the walls and stoned to death with his children (2 K. ix. 26), the punishment for that crime (Lev. xxiv. 16; Num. xv. 30). Ahab then took possession. Elijah uttered the prophetic curse "In the place where the dogs licked the blood of Naboth, shall dogs lick thy blood even thine" (1 K. xxi.).

The trial of Naboth was a fearful mockery of justice. He, as an Elder, was set "on high," that is, in the seat of honor, at the head of the divan among the rulers, and then false witnesses, hired for the business, swore away his life. The prophet denounced the crime, and retribution followed the judicial murder. The same crime was planned against Jesus, and carried out. The retribution in this case being a total loss of judicial power, which had been so grossly abused.

Tristram thinks the site of the vineyard can be identified on the rocky slope near the ruins of ancient Jezreel, where "not a shrub now clothes the bare hillside. A watch tower there would have given a view of the country for many miles over the route of Jehu" (Land of Israel, page 130).

NA'CHON'S. Threshing floor (2 Sam. vi. 6). Called also Chiden's (1 Chr. xiii. 9), and after the sad event of Uzzah's death by the ark, it was named Perez Uzzah (perez, broken). (Ant. vii. 4, 2). Between Kirjath Jearim and Jerusalem.

NACHOR. NAHOR. 1. Mother of Abraham (Josh. xxiv. 2). Also spelled Nahor. The Hebrew H is a strong breathing, and is often written CH.—2. Grand father of Abraham (Luke iii. 34).

NA'DAB (spontaneous). 1. Eldest son of Aaron and Elisheba (Ex. vi. 23; Num. iii. 2).

NADAB'ATHA (1 Macc. ix. 3; Ant. xiii. 1, 4). GABATHA. From which the children of Jambi were escorting a bride with great pomp and music, when they were attacked by Jonathan and Simon. On the east of Jordan, near Es Salt? Josephus says the bride was the daughter of an illustrious Arabian.

NAG'GE (Heb. NOGAH, splendor). An ancestor of Jesus Christ (Luke iii. 25), who lived in the time of Onias I.

NA'HALAL (pasture). In Zebulon (Josh. xxi. 35). Na'hallal (error in xix. 15). Na'halol (Judg. i. 30). Malul, 4 miles southwest of Nazareth, in the plain of Esdraëlon.

NAHA'LIEL (torrent of El). One of the latest halting places; N. of the Arnon (Num. xxi. 19). Wady Encheyle, a branch of the Mojeb (Arnon).

NA'HAM (consolation). Brother of Hodiah, or Jehudijah, wife of Ezra (1 Chr. iv. 19).

NAHAMA'NI (compassionate). Returned with Zerubbabel and Jeshua from Babylon (Neh. vii. 7).

NA'HARAI (Heb. SNORER). Joab's armor-bearer (2 Sam. xxiii. 37).

NA'HASH (serpent). 1. King of the Ammonites (see AMMON). He treated the people of Jabesh-Gilead with the utmost cruelty, at which Saul attacked and destroyed the Ammonite force (1 Sam. xi. 1, 2–11). He retained the favor of David.—2. Mentioned only once (2 Sam. xvii. 16). The first husband of Jesse's wife; not Na'hash, the Ammonite.

NA'HATH (rest). 1. A duke, or sheikh, of Edom, eldest son of Reuel, the son of Esau (Gen. xxxvi. 13, 17; 1 Chr. i. 37).—2. A Kohathite Levite, son of Zophai (1 Chr. vi. 26).—3. A Levite in Hezekiah's reign: a collector of taxes, etc. (2 Chr. xxxi. 13).

NAH'BI (hidden). The son of Vophsi; a Naphtalite, one of the 12 spies (Num. xiii. 14).

SWIFT.

NA'HOR (snorting, snoring). 1. Abraham's grand-father, the son of Serug (Gen. xi. 22–25).—2. Grand-son of Na'hor, called Na'hor, brother to Abraham. He married Milcah. Eight of his sons were by this wife (Gen. xxii. 20–24). Na'hor remained in the land of his birth.

NAHOR, THE CITY OF (Gen. xxiv. 10).

NAH'SHON (enchanter). Also written Naason and Naashon; son of Amminadab, and prince of the children of Judah (1 Chr. ii. 10), at the numbering in the wilderness (Ex. vi. 23; Num. i. 7, etc.). Elisheba, the wife of Aaron, was his sister. His son Talmon became the husband of Rahab after the fall of Jericho.

NA'HUM (consolation). See HISTORY OF THE BOOKS.

NAIL.—1. (T'FAR). A nail or claw of man or animal (Deut. xxi. 12; Dan. iv. 33, vii. 19). A point used in writing, as signets are engraved on gems or hard stones (Jer. xvii. 1). The captive wife was "to make herself neat," that is, to stain her nails (not pare), with the henna dye (Deut. xxi. 12). A nail (Is. xxii. 23–25, xxxiii. 20), a stake (xxxiii. 20). Tent peg (Judg. iv. 21, etc.). See JAEL—TENT. Tent pegs of wood and iron. Nails of the cross (John xx. 25, and Col. ii. 14).

NA'IN (pleasant). The scene of one of the greatest miracles of Jesus, the raising of the widow's son (Luke xii. 12). It is now a small village, of 20 huts, on a rocky slope, in the midst of extensive ruins of an ancient place, on the northwestern end of Little Hermon (Jebel ed Duhy). There are sepulchral caves along the steep eastern approach from the plain, and also on the other side of the town (Rob.).

NAI'OTH (college buildings). Where Samuel and his disciples lived (1 Sam. xix. 18, etc.). Where David fled for refuge from Saul. Samuel had a school here. Verse 20 is rendered by the Targum—Jonathan, "They saw the company of scribes singing praises, and Samuel teaching, standing over them." As Naioth was in Ramah (ver. 19), it was probably a dwelling used for a school in the town of Ramah. See 2 K. xxii. 14. Huldah lived in a college in Jerusalem.

NAME (Heb. SHEM). The root GNA, to know, has given rise to the Sanscrit naman, Greek ŏnŏma, Latin nomen, Gothic nama, and our name.

No monuments are more enduring than names. Sometimes they are the most ancient records of persons, places and things. They are fossils of thought. Bible names have almost always a meaning, which is often given by the writer for a purpose. The meaning of a name being known, we are able to get a better knowledge of persons and their history, especially if the name was given for some special reason or act. This work is very difficult because men's names are so constantly changing with the growth or decay of language, and the substitution of one language for another.

The Hebrews gave but one name to a child, except in peculiar cases (as Solomon, Jedidjah), or where it was necessary to add the father's or mother's name, if the mother was the more noted. There is but one David, but there are several named Jesus, as the Son of Sirach, etc. The ancient custom was more simple than the modern, which (among the Arabs) exalts a man's external affairs by giving him names and titles carrying terms of flattery and display. The custom of naming—simple, compound, or ornamental—indicates very nearly the age of the person so named.

NANE'A, THE TEMPLE OF. At Elymais, rich with the trophies of Alexander, and plundered by Antiochus Epiphanes (1 Macc. vi. 1–4; 2 Macc. i. 13–16).

NA'OMI (my pleasantness). Wife of Elimelech, mother-in-law of Ruth (Ruth i. 2, iii. 1, iv. 3). She buried her husband and sons, Mahlon and Chilion, in the land of Moab. She returned to Bethlehem with Ruth. Correctly, NOOMI.

NA'PHISH (refreshment). (1 Chr. v. 19). A tribe descended from the last but one of the sons of Ishmael; settled in the Hauran and Gilead; allies of Jetur (who was in Ituræa). Traces of this tribe may be looked for in Arabia, for they were driven out by Reuben, Gad, and Manasseh. They were wealthy when dispossessed, having lost to the Israelites 50,000 camels, 250,000 sheep, and 2,000 asses. Ptolemy says the Agræi were a people of N. Arabia.

NAPH'ISI (1 Esd. v. 31). NEPHUSIM.

NAPH'TALI (NIPHTALI, wrestled). 5th son of Jacob, 2d-born of Bilhah (Gen. xxx. 8). He had 4 sons when Jacob went into Egypt (xlvi. 24). There is not a word said about him personally in the Scriptures. See EXODUS, TWELVE TRIBES.

NAPHTALI, MOUNT. The high land of the district occupied by the tribe (Josh. xx. 7).

NAPH'THAR (a cleaning). The name given to the substance said to have been found in the pit in which the sacred fire of the altar had been concealed at the destruction of the temple. This fable is related in 2 Macc. i. 19–36.

NAZARETH.

NAPH'TUHIM. Called on the Egyptian monuments Na-Petu, the people of (Nine) bows. The chief city of this nation (Naputa) is now in ruins, on the island of Meroë, on the Upper Nile, where there are found pyramids, temples (one of Osiris and Ammon), sphinxes, and many beautiful sculptures. In the British Museum are two lions, sculptured in red granite, fine works of art, brought from this ruined city.

NAPKIN. (See HANDKERCHIEF). As a wrapper to fold up money (Luke xix. 20). As a cloth bound round the head of a corpse (John xi. 44, xx. 7). As an article of dress; probably as a turban, or as the Bedawin keffish (Acts xix. 12). Possibly the napkin was a cloth adapted to a variety of uses, such as described; also for a girdle; worn over the face, etc.

NARCIS'SUS (the Narcissus plant). One of a family of Christians in Rome, alluded to by Paul in Rom. xvi. 11.

NARD. (See SPIKENARD).

NAS'BAS. Tobit's nephew, who, with Achiacharus, attended the wedding of Tobias (Tob. xi. 18).

NASITH. NEZIAH (1 Esd. v. 32).

NASOR, THE PLAIN OF. Near Kedesh Naphtali, the scene of a battle between Jonathan and Demetrius (1 Macc. xi. 67). HAZOR.

NA'THAN (gift). 1. Hebrew prophet in the reign of David and Solomon. In the consultation with David upon the building of the Temple (2 Sam. vii. 2, 3, 17) Nathan reproves David for his sin with Bath-sheba, and prophesies in the form of a parable of "the rich man and the ewe-lamb" (2 Sam. xii. 1–12). Nathan was the educator of Solomon (2 Sam. xii. 25). In the last days of David Nathan assisted the cause of Solomon. He assisted in the inauguration of Solomon (1 K. i. 8). He had a son, Zabud, who was the "king's friend." He wrote a Life of David (1 Chr. xxix. 29) and a Life of Solomon (2 Chr. ix. 29). The loss of his biography of David is a heavy one to history.—2. Son of David by Bath-sheba (1 Chr. iii. 5, xiv. 4, and 2 Sam. v. 14). He appears as one of the forefathers of Joseph in Christ's genealogy (Luke iii. 31).—3. Related to one of David's "valiant men" (2 Sam. xxiii. 36; 1 Chr. xi. 38).—4. One of the chief men who returned from Babylon with Ezra on his second expedition (Ezr. viii. 16; 1 Esd. viii. 44).

NATHAN'AEL (given of God). Born at Cana of Galilee. One of the Twelve, under the name of Bartholomew (son of Talmai). (See BARTHOLOMEW). He was one of the seven Apostles to whom Jesus appeared after the resurrection at the Sea of Tiberias. When introduced to Jesus by Philip, Jesus said, "Behold an Israelite indeed, in whom there is no deceit," thus making his name almost a synonym for sincerity. Tradition says he preached in Arabia Felix, having Matthew's gospel, and was crucified in Armenia or Cilicia.

NATHANI'AS. Nathan, of the sons of Bani (1 Esd. ix. 34; Ezr. x. 39).

NA'THAN-ME'LECH (placed by the king). Steward in the court of Josiah (2 K. xxiii. 11).

NATION. Genesis x. gives the descendants of Noah. A record of primitive geography and ethnology of the utmost importance. By this record the geographical distribution of Noah's descendants can be ascertained, as also the origin of the earliest nations. The dispersion of these nations and the circumstances related to that important event, are recorded in Gen. xi. The date of this event of the dispersion can be fixed from the genealogy of Shem, here recorded. (See BABEL). Many nations and countries have been named after Shem, whose descendants wandered and divided into distinct tribes. This tendency is still a characteristic of the Arabs. See HAM. JAPHETH.

NA'UM. Son of Esli (Luke iii. 25).

NAVE (Heb. GAV). The central part of a wheel.

NA'VE (Gr. Nauê). Joshua's father NUN (Eccl. xlvi. 1); so called in the Septuagint.

NAZARENE. An inhabitant of NAZARETH. Especially associated with the name of Christ and his followers, who were called Nazarenes (Acts xxiv. 5). It was used as a name of contempt to Christ's followers. In Christ's family making their home in Nazareth, the prophesy of Isaiah was fulfilled (Is. xi. 1; Jer. xxiii. 5), Christ being the young branch from the royal family of David.

NAZ'ARETH (the branch). First mentioned in Matt. ii. 23, or rather, in the order of time, in Luke i. 26, as the scene of the Annunciation to Mary of the birth and character of Jesus (v. 31–33). Before this event the place was unknown to history, but since then its name has become a household word through all the Christian world, equally reverenced with Bethlehem and Jerusalem.

A low, undulating ridge of hills encloses the green plain that lies like a lake, with Nazareth built on one of its shores. The valley runs nearly east and west, is about a mile long, and a quarter of a mile wide; the hills vary in hight from 100 to 500 ft. above its level; the highest, Neby Ismail, being 1800 feet above the ocean. The soil is rich, and well cultivated, producing a great variety of fruit, grain, vegetables, and flowers, which ripen early and in rare perfection. Population about 4,000, nearly all Christians (Latin and Greeks), except a few Arabs, and not one Jew.

MAP OF NAZARETH.

NAZ'ARITE (Heb. NAZIR). Either a man or woman who, under ancient Hebrew law, bound himself or herself to abstain from wine and all products of the grape; to wear the hair long and uncut, and to observe purification in abstaining from contact with the dead. If they witnessed death or otherwise approached death, their consecration had to be entirely recommenced. The period of observance of this vow varied from eight days to a month, or even a life time. When this period had concluded, offerings were made, the hair was cut off and burnt, and the Nazarite was discharged from his vow (Num vi.; Amos ii. 11, 12). Paul assisted four Christian Jews in this ceremony (Acts xxi. 20–26).

NEAH (the shaking). Landmark on Zebulon's west border (Josh. xix. 13). El Ain, 3 miles N. W. of Nazareth.

NEAP'OLIS (new city). The first place visited by Paul in Macedonia (Acts xvi. 11). On a rocky promontory, in a wide and beautiful bay, stands the Turkish village Kavala (5,000 inhab.), in the midst of the ruins of the ancient city. There was an aqueduct for bringing water from a distance of 12 miles; near the city, it passed a ravine over a double tier of arches, 80 feet above the brook below, in Roman style, hewn and cemented; fine sarcophagi, with inscriptions, of the age of Claudius, Ionic columns, and sculptured figures, besides foundations of ancient houses, etc., are witnesses of its ancient importance.

2. Shechem was also called Neapolis in Vespasian's time.

3. The bishops of Neapolis in Arabia were present at the councils of Chalcedon and Constantinople; a place now called Suleim, on Jebel Hauran (Porter, Damascus, ii. 85).

NEARI'AH (servant of Jah). 1. Son of Shemaiah (1 Chr. iii. 22, 23).—2. Son of Ishi, captain of 500 Simeonites (iv. 42).

NE'BAI (fruit-bearer). One who sealed the covenant (Neh. x. 19).

NEBAI'OTH. NEBA'JOTH. Ishmael's first-born (Gen. xxv. 13). Esau married Mahalath, the sister of Nebajoth (xxviii. 9). The country from the Euphrates to the Red Sea was called in Josephus' time Nabatene (Ant. i. 13, 4; Gen. xxv. 18). They were called by the Arabs Nibat (or Nabeet), and were celebrated for their agriculture, astronomy, magic and medicine, accounts of which have been recently discovered in some ancient books of theirs, written from 2500 to 600 B. C., consisting of a book of agriculture, one of poisons, the works of Tenkelоosha, the Babylonian, and the Book of the Secrets of the Sun and Moon; all of which were translated in A. D. 904 by Ibn Washiyeh (Keysee). The rock-temples of Petra, in Edom, were the works of this people, who are thus proved to have been a highly cultivated race many ages before the Greeks.

NEBAL'LAT (secret folly). Benjamite town, after the Captivity (Neh. xi. 34). Beit Nebala, 4 miles N. E. of Lydda (Rob.).

NE'BAT (look). Father of JEROBOAM (1 K. xi. 26).

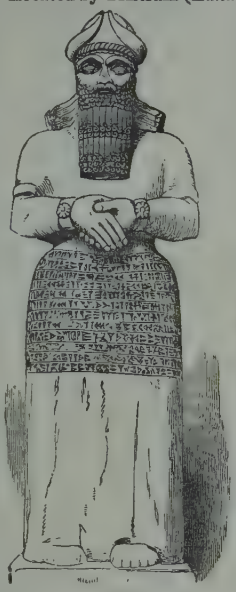
NE'BO, MOUNT. From which Moses took his first and last view of the Promised Land (Deut. xxxii. 49), and where he died and was buried in one of its ravines (xxxiv. 6). Located by Tristram (Land of Israel, 535) 3 miles S. W. of Heshbon; overlooking the mouth of the Jordan, over against Jericho, meeting every condition of the text.



NEBO.

NE'BO (interpreter of the gods). A Babylonish god. Nebo was the god of learning and letters among the Chaldæans, Babylonians and Assyrians (Is. xlvi. 1; Jer. xlviii. 1). Nebo was the Babylonian name of the planet Mercury. This word is in the formation of several names, such as Nebuchadnezzar, Nebuzaradan, Nebushasban, etc. The cut represents the statue of the god set up by Pul, king of Assyria, in the British Museum, London.

NEBUCHADNEZ'ZAR, or NEBUCHADREZ'ZAR (NEBO THE MIGHTY). The son of Nabopolassar, king of Chaldæa and founder of the Babylonian Empire. Nebuchadnez'zar, after having succeeded in recovering Carchemish, by defeating Necho, king of Egypt (Jer. xlvi. 2–12), and conquering Phœnicia, Palestine and Jerusalem, marched into Egypt, when he was informed of the death of his father. He hurried back, accompanied by his light troops, to secure his succession to the throne, which he ascended B. C. 604; the main army and captives (amongst whom were Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael and Azariah) following him by a longer route. These captives were of royal lineage, and the king had them educated in the language and learning of the Chaldæans, with a view to their employment in court (2 K. xxiv. 1; 2 Chr. xxxvi. 6; Dan. i. 1). Nebuchadnez'zar had left the conquered Jehoiakim, king of Judah, upon the throne as a tributary prince, but he soon after rebelled, probably anticipating support from Egypt (2 K. xxiv. 1). Phœnicia followed in the rebellion, and Nebuchadnez'zar, after having invested Tyre, advanced upon Jerusalem, which immediately submitted. He punished Jehoiakim with death, placing that king's son, Jehoiachin, upon the throne of Judah.. This king soon after revolting, caused Nebuchadnez'zar for a third time to march to Jerusalem; he took Jehoiachin captive, together with ten thousand, amongst whom were Ezekiel the prophet, and Mordecai, the uncle of Esther (Esth. ii. 6). He also stripped the Temple and the treasury of riches, and placed the king's uncle, Zedekiah, upon the throne. After nine years, Zedekiah rebelled, the neighboring princes assisting him. The king of Babylon again marched to Judah, and after an obstinate siege of nearly a year, during which time he repelled an incursion of the Egyptians, he entered Jerusalem, seized Zedekiah, whose children he put to death before his eyes, and sent him, fettered, to Babylon, after having put out his eyes (2 K. xxiv. 25; 2 Chr. xxxvi.). Nebuchadnezzar raised his kingdom and city to the greatest splendor; the marvellous hanging gardens are ascribed to him, erected to please Amytis, his queen, by imitating the groves of her native country, Media. The ruins of Birs Nimroud attest the magnificence of his works; these are situated a few miles from the site of the city of Babylon. He died about B. C. 562, after reigning forty years.

NEBUSHAS'BAN (adherent of Nebo); an officer at the capture of Jerusalem. He was chief of the eunuchs (Jer. xxxix. 13).

NEBUZAR'ADAN (favors). Captain of the GUARD, an officer of high rank in the court of Nebuchadnezzar, especially engaged in the sieges of Jerusalem (1 K. xxv. 8–20; Jer. xxxix. 9, xl. 1, lii. 12, 30).

NECHO. PHARAOH 9 (2 Chr. xxxv. 20, 22).

NECH'OSHETH. Sometimes translated brass, but properly means copper—sometimes bronze. See METALS, p. 102. (Job xxviii. 2).

NECK. Used both literally (Gen. xxvii. 16) and figuratively (Luke xiv. 20). Burdens were borne on the neck (Gen. xxvii. 40). The neck was used figuratively for several ideas: To denote subjection, by placing the foot on it (Josh. x. 24); seizing a person by the neck securely (Job xvi. 12). To be stiff-necked was to be stubborn, rebellious.

NECO'DAN (1 Esd. v. 37).

NEC'ROMANCER (Deut. xviii. 11). DIVINATION.

NEDABI'AH (whom Jah impels). A son of Jeconiah (1 Chr. iii. 18).

NEEANI'AS. Son of Hachaliah (Ecclus. xlix. 13).

NEEDLE'S EYE. Supposed to mean a narrow door, or gateway, too low for a camel to pass through, standing. They are unloaded, and forced to creep through on their knees.

CAMEL AND NEEDLE'S EYE.

NE'GEB (south). The country S. of Beersheba. Its character is that of wide-rolling downs, green in winter, but bare in summer, affording pasturage, but not grain-crops.

NEG'INAH. (Heb.) A term by which all stringed-instruments are described (Ps. lxi.; Job xxx. 9): is the singular form of the next word.

NEG'INOTH. A general term for stringed-instruments: Ps. iv., vi., xlv., liv., lv. lxxvi., are addressed to leaders of stringed-instruments. See MUSIC, and MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.

NEHEL'AMITE (strong one) THE. A false prophet (Jer. xxix. 24, 31, 32).

NEHEMIAH (comforter of Jah). His genealogy is not known, although he was perhaps of the tribe of Judah. He was the son of Hachaliah (Neh. i. 1). His brother was Hanani (Neh. vii. 2); most probably of royal descent and not of the priesthood as supposed from Neh. x. 1–8, but as a prince in Neh. ix. 38. His office was that of cupbearer to King Artaxerxes Longimanus. At his own request he was appointed governor of Jerusalem about B. C. 444, when he relieved the people from the oppression of the Samaritans. In this good work he was assisted by Ezra (Neh. viii. 1, 9, 13, xii. 36). See HISTORY OF THE BOOKS.

NE'HILOTH (Heb. CHALAL). A term for perforated wind instruments of all kinds (1 Sam. x. 5).

NE'HUM (comfort). One who returned from captivity (Neh. vii. 7).

NEHUSH'TA (brass). Daughter of Elnathan (2 K. xxiv. 8).

NEHUSH'TAN (brazen), (Num. xxi. 8). The brazen serpent which Moses set up in the wilderness. It was destroyed by Hezekiah as it had become debased to the service of idolatry in the reign of Ahaz his father. Hezekiah gave the name Nehushtan to it as a term of derision, implying it to be mere brass (2 K. xviii. 4).

NE'IEL (treasure of God). Landmark of Asher, now Miar, on a lofty hight 10 ms. N. W. of Nazareth (Josh. xix. 27).

NEK'EB (cavern). On the N. border of Naphtali (Judg. iv. 11). Lost.

NE'KODA (distinguished). 1. The children of Nekoda who returned from captivity (Ezr. ii. 48).—2. The same who were unable to prove their descent from Israel (Ezr. ii. 60).

NEM'UEL (Heb. JEMUEL). 1. Son of Eliab (Num. xxvi. 9).—2. Son of Simeon (xxvi. 12).

NEM'UELITES, THE. Descendants of NEMUEL (Num. xxvi. 12).

NE'PHEG (sprout). 1. Son of Izhar (Ex. vi. 21).—2. Son of David (2 Sam. vi. 15).

NEPH'EW (Heb. NECHED), (progeny). Has various meanings, as in Judg. xii. 14, Job xviii. 19. In Gen. xxi. 23, son's son.

NE'PHI (NAPHTHAR), (2 Macc. i. 36).

NE'PHIS. Children of Nebo (Ezr. ii. 29).

NE'PHISH (NAPHISH), (1 Chr. v. 19).

NEPHISH'ESIM. Those who returned from captivity (Neh. vii. 52).

NEPH'THALI (Tob. i. 1, 2, 4, 5).

NEPH'THALIM (Tob. vii. 3).

NEPHTO'AH, THE WATER OF. Landmark between Judah and Benjamin (Josh. xv. 9). Ain Lifta, 2½ miles N. W. of Jerusalem. Another fountain, Ain Yalo, in Wady el Werd (roses), is urged as the site by some, on account of the text in 1 Sam. x. 2.

NEPHU'SIM (expansions), (Ezr. ii. 50).

NER (light). Son of Jehiel (1 Chr. ix. 36).

NERD or NARD. See SPIKENARD.

NE'REUS. Name of an ancient sea-god. A Christian at Rome (Rom. xvi. 15).

NER'GAL (Heb.). An Assyrian deity (2 K. xvii. 30) represented in the Hellenic mythology by Mars. He presided over wars. In the monuments he is entitled "the storm ruler," "the king of battle," "the champion of the gods," "the god of the chase," etc. The allusion to Nergal in the Scriptures is in 2 K. xvii. 30, equivalent to the man-lion of Nineveh.

NER'GAL SHAREZ'ER. 1. One of Nebuchadnezzar's military chiefs,(Jer. xxix. 3).—2. The chief magi under the same king (Jer. xxxix. 3, 13) with the title Rab-Mag. Babylonian inscriptions suggest the identification of 2 with Neriglissar, who murdered Evil Merodach and became king of Babylon.

NE'RI. Son of Melchi (Luke iii. 27).

NERI'AH (lamp of Jah). Son of Maaseiah (Jer. xxxii. 12).

NERI'AS. NERIAH (Bar. i. 1).

NE'RO (brave). The Roman emperor (Lucius Domitius Ahenobardus) born A. D. 37. He was named Nero Claudius, etc., by his grand uncle Claudius, who had adopted him. Made emperor, A. D. 54. Accused of having burnt Rome, but Nero tortured and burnt Christians charging them with the crime. Both Paul and Peter suffered martyrdom during his reign. He committed suicide A. D. 68, to avoid retribution. The Cæsar mentioned in Acts xxv. 8, xxvi. 32, xxviii. 19; Phil. iv. 22, is Nero; also Augustus in Acts xxv. 21, 25.

NEST (KEN). As in Job xxxix. 27; Matt. viii. 20: also as a dwelling as in Num. xxiv. 21. In Gen. vi. 14, rooms mean nests or cribs.

NET. The terms for net in the Bible are numerous, and refer to its application or construction. In the N. T. there appears sagênê, denoting a large, hauling-net (Matt. xiii. 47); amphiblestron, a casting-net (Matt. iv. 20; Mark i. 16); and diktuon, a similar kind of net (Matt. iv. 20; Mark i. 18; Luke v. 2). Nets were used for hunting, as well as fishing. The Egyptians made their nets of flax, with wooden needles. In Egypt bird and animal nets were used, which last also appear on the Nineveh marbles. These nets were so constructed that the sides closed in upon the prey, or with movable frames. Net has frequently a figurative use, as in Ps. ix. 15, xxv. 15, xxxi. 4, as expressing God's vengeance, as in Ez. xii. 13; Hos. vii. 12.

NETHAN'EEL (given of God). 1. Son of Zuar (Num. 1, 8).—2. Son of Jesse (1 Chr. ii. 14).—3. A priest in David's reign (xv. 24).—4. Father of Shemaiah (xxiv. 6).—5. Son of Obed-edom (xxvi. 4).—6. A prince of Judah (2 Chr. xvii. 7).—7. A chief Levite (xxxv. 9).—8. A priest of Pashur (Ezr. x. 22).—9. Another priest (Neh. xii. 21).—10. A Levite (ver. 36).

VICTORY.

NETHANI'AH (given of Jah). 1. Son of Elishama (2 K. xxv. 23), of the royal family of Judah.—2. Son of Asaph, a chief in the course of the Temple-choir (1 Chr. xxv. 2, 12).—3. One of the Levites who taught the law in Judah (2 Chr. xvii. 8).—4. Father of Jehudi (Jer. xxxvi. 14).

NETH'INIM (dedicated). A body of men given to assist the Levites in the performance of the rites of the Temple (Ezr. vii. 24) as the Levites were given to Aaron (Num. ii. 9, viii. 19). The Nethinim performed the menial offices of the Temple, living near it. They assisted in rebuilding the Temple walls, etc., after the return from captivity.

NET'OPHAH (a dropping). Peopled after the return from captivity (Ezr. ii. 22). Two of David's captains were natives of this place (2 Sam. xxiii. 28). At the dedication of the wall built by Nehemiah, the singers were found residing in the villages of this people; so there were more than one town, perhaps a district, near Bethlehem. Seraiah (warrior of Jehovah), a native of this place, was an accomplice of Ishmael in the murder of Gedaliah (2 K. xxv. 23). Um Tuba, 2 ms. N. E. of Bethlehem. Beit Nettif, in the Wady Sumt, is mentioned in the Jewish traditions as famous for "oil of Netopha" (Rob. ii. 17).

NETOPH'ATHI (Neh. xii. 28).

NETO'PHATHITE (Heb. NETOPHATHI) THE. One from NETOPHAH (2 Sam. xxiii. 28, 29).

NET'TLE (Heb. CHARUL), (Job xxx. 7). A plant of rapid growth, and well known for its power of stinging. They have minute tubular hairs, which emit a poisonous fluid when pressed.

NEW MOON. Marked the commencement of each month (see MONTH), and was celebrated as a holy-day. Offerings were made as ordained (Num. xxviii. 11, 15). All business was suspended (Amos viii. 5). The Day of the N. M. was recognized as a family festival with religious observances, although not especially ordained. It was proclaimed by the trumpet-sound (Ps. lxxxi. 3). After the establishment of Christianity the observance was discontinued.

NEW TESTAMENT. See HISTORY OF THE BOOKS.

NE'ZIAH (illustrious). Ancestor of Nethinim (Ezr. ii. 54).

NE'ZIB (Josh. xx. 43). Beit Nusib, in the low, hilly district between Beit Jibrin and Hebron. There are ruins of a building, 120×30 ft., and a tower 60 ft. sq., of ancient, massive masonry, besides broken columns.

NIB'HAZ (Heb. NABACH), (to bark). A deity of the Avites; the figure of a dog, or dog-headed man (2 K. xvii. 31).

NIB'SHAN (light-soil). A city on the W. shore of the Dead Sea (Josh. xv. 62). DESERT. 2. EN-GEDI.

NICA'NOR. 1. Son of Patroclus (2 Macc. viii. 9). A general under Antiochus Epiphanes and Demetrius I. He assisted in the first expedition of Lysias, B. C. 166 (1 Macc. iii. 38). He was defeated, but, after the death of Antiochus, Demetrius made him Governor of Judæa (2 Macc. xiv. 12).

NICODE'MUS (NAKDIMON, innocent of blood). A Pharisee, ruler of the Jews, teacher of the law (John ii. 23, iii. 1, 10), a member of the Sanhedrin. He was probably wealthy, as his valuable tribute to the tomb of the Lord indicates. His timidity was shown in his night visit to the Great Teacher, where he received divine instruction, and a prediction of the crucifixion. When that prediction had been fulfilled and Joseph of Arimathea had begged for and was permitted by Pilate to take the body from the cross, Nicodemus assisted. Tradition says that he lived in intimacy with Gamaliel, and was buried near the grave of Stephen.

NICOLAI'TANS. A sect of heretics of the Apostolic period. They held it lawful to eat food sacrificed to idols; to join in idolatrous worship; and that God did not create the universe. They held their women in common. John's Gospel and also his Apocalypse opposes their teaching. (See HISTORY OF THE BOOKS). These doctrines have been supposed to have originated with the prophet Balaam. They are sometimes called Shuaibites, from the Midianite Shuaib, which is Balaam.

NIC'OLAS, NICH'OLAS, NICO'LAUS. One of the first seven deacons of the Church of Jerusalem (Acts vi. 5). He was a native of Antioch.

NICOP'OLIS (city of victory). Built by Augustus, in Epirus, on the site where his army encamped the night before the battle of Actium. The Temple of Neptune was placed on the spot occupied by his own tent. Paul requested Titus (iii. 12), to come to him from Crete, or from Dalmatia (2 Tim. iv. 10), to Nicopolis. He also urged Timothy in the same manner (v. 21). There are on the peninsula, N. W. of the Bay of Actium (Gulf of Arta), ruins of a temple, a theatre, walls, and other structures, on the hill and the low marshy plain; now deserted. It is possible that Paul was arrested here, and taken to Rome for his final trial (Conybeare and Howson).

NI'GER (black). A name given to SIMEON 6 (Acts xiii. 1).

NIGHT ((Heb. TO SINK; THE SINKING OF THE DAY). See CHRONOLOGY, p. 31.

NIGHT-HAWK (Heb. TACHMAS). In the enumeration of unclean animals in Lev. xi. 16, and in Deut. xiv. 15, this word appears. There is much controversy as to its meaning, whether the night-hawk or the white owl.

NILE. The Hebrew names of the river were SHICHOR (black); Yeor (the river); Sihor, in Jer. ii. 18. The Sanscrit Nîlah means dark blue; and one of the upper branches of the river is now called the Blue Nile. The name Yeor is Egyptian, and is written AUR on the monuments. It is also called HAPEE MU (the abyss). Dr. Livingstone's late accounts show this to be the longest river in the world; rising in or beyond the lake Victoria Nyanza, south of the equator, and emptying into the Mediterranean at N. lat. 31°; its course running through 36 degrees, having been traced more than 2700 ms., while it is quite certain that it will be found to be 1000 ms. longer. (The Amazon extends through 30 degrees, and the Missouri and Mississippi together about 35 degrees).

NILE EMBLEM.

NIM'RAH (pure water). In the "land of Jazer," afterward called Beth Nimrah (Num. xxxii. 3, 36); in the tribe of Gad. The name Nimrim (panthers) is found in several localities east of Jordan (Porter). Two miles east of the Jordan, on the road from Jericho to Es Salt, are ruins near copious fountains (Is. xv. 6; Jer. xlviii. 34). Eusebius says it was a village north of Zoar. If our location of Nimrah is correct, Zoar must have been north of the Dead Sea.

NIM'ROD (the extremely impious rebel). Son of Cush (Gen. x. 8, 9). He established an empire in Shinar (Babylonia), the chief cities of which were Babel, Erech, Accad, and Calneh; and extended it northward over Assyria, including the cities Nineveh, Rehoboth, Calah, and Resen. There is no authentic account of his life. The tales of Ctesias, and others, except that in the Bible, are guesses or inventions; and of the great cities which he built very little has been known until within the last twenty-five years, when Layard exhumed the palaces, sculptures and inscriptions of Nimroud. See NINEVEH.

NIM'SHI (drawn out). Grandfather of Jehu, generally called the SON of Nimshi (1 K. xix. 16).

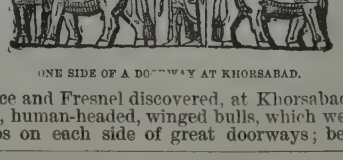
NIN'EVEH (Nin-navah=Nin-town). The ancient capital of Assyria. First mentioned in Gen. x. 11). The country was also called the land of Nimrod by Micah (v. 6). Balaam prophesied the captivity of Israel by Assyria (Num. xxiv. 22), and Asaph sings of their alliance with Moab (Ps. lxxxiii. 8). Jonah was sent to the city about 800 B. C., and Nahum devotes the whole of his book to "the burden of Nineveh," about 725 B. C. Isaiah says that Sennacherib resided in the city; and it was probably the scene of his death (Is. xxxvii. 37), while worshiping in the temple of Nisroch, his god. The last notice of it is by Zephaniah, B. C. 630 (ii. 13). Assyria is alluded to as having been destroyed, according to prophesy by Ezekiel (xxxi.), and Jeremiah omits it from his catalogue of all nations (xxv.). The city is not mentioned in the inscriptions of the Persian dynasty. Heredotus passed very near, if not over, the site of the city, about 200 years after its destruction, but does not mention it, except as having once been there. Xenophon, with his 10,000 Greeks, encamped near the site (B. C. 401), but does not mention its name (Anab. iii. 4, 7), although he describes the mounds as they appear now. Alexander marched over the very place, and won a great victory at Arbela, in sight of it, but his historians make no note of it. The Emperor Claudius planted a colony there, and restored the name Nineve. Tacitus calls it Ninos, when taken by Meherdates. On the coins of Trajan it is Ninus, and on those of Maximinus it is Niniva; Claudeopolis being added on both coins. Many relics of the Romans have been found; vases, sculptures, figures in bronze and marble, terra-cottas, and coins. The site was again deserted when Heraclius gained a victory over the Persians, A. D. 627.

The Arabs named their fort, on the east bank of the Tigris, Nînawi (A. D. 637). The accounts of its immense extent are various, and not very reliable. Diodorus Siculus says the dimensions were (according as we estimate his figures, from 32 to 60, or even) 74 miles in circuit. The walls were 100 feet high, and wide enough for three chariots to drive abreast; flanked by 1500 towers, each 200 feet high (accounts which have not yet been verified). Layard says: "If we take the four great mounds of Nimrud, Koyunjik, Khorsabad, and Karamles, as the corners of a square, it will be found to agree pretty accurately with the 60 miles of Herodotus, which make the three days' journey of Jonah." Within this space there are many mounds, and remains of pottery, bricks, etc.

The name of Nineveh is found on the Egyptian monuments of the date of Thothmes III, about 1400 B. C.

The first notice in modern times of the ruins were by Mr. Rich, in 1820, who brought to London a few bricks, with inscriptions, some cylinders, gems, and other remains. Layard next visited them, in 1840; but Botta, a French consul at Mosul, found the first Assyrian monument, which was of value as a confirmation of Scripture. It was soon followed by a great variety of works of art, in 1844, at Khorsabad, the results of which exploration are in the Assyrian room at the Louvre, Paris. The great work of disentombing the remains of ancient Nineveh was performed by Layard, from 1845 to 1850.

The accounts of Layard's discoveries are published in minute detail, filling volumes, and will repay the time spent in reading them; for, besides giving undoubted and truthful glimpses of antiquity, in almost every phase of society, they are as startling and exciting as the wildest romance, both in text and illustration. But far beyond these in value to us are their uses in confirmation of the Scriptures.



ONE SIDE OF A DOORWAY AT KHORSABAD.

Place and Fresnel discovered, at Khorsabad, colossal, human-headed, winged bulls, which were in groups on each side of great doorways; besides other mythic figures. The most important inscription that has been brought to light, is that on two of the human-headed bulls from Koyunjik (now in the British Museum), giving an account of Sennacherib; his wars with Hezekiah, and the capture of Lachish, with pictures illustrating it (See LACHISH). Nearly equal in value is the Black Obelisk of Nimroud; a piece of black marble, 6 ft. 6 in. high, 1 ft. 6½ in. sq. at the top, and 2 ft. sq. at the bottom, the upper half covered with 5 panels of figures, with inscriptions between each panel, and also many lines below the lower one: altogether 210 lines. One side, only, is engraved here: the four may be seen in the work on "Nineveh and its Palaces," by Bonomi. The story may be inferred from the text in 2 K. xvii., xviii. The first panel, at the top, exhibits the king, attended by his eunuch, and a bearded officer (perhaps the returned conqueror); a captive kisses his foot, and two officers wait the king's orders. The image of Baal, and a circle enclosing a star (the sun?) are similar to those on the rocks at Nahr el Kelb. The same images, reversed in position, are in the second panel. One may mean Morning, and the other Evening; and both, with the figures in the other panels bringing and presenting tribute, indicate that the captives were so many, and the tribute so vast, that they consumed the whole day in their presentation. Some of the figures on the obelisk resemble those on the wall of the small temple of Kalabshe, who are enemies of Raamses II, and are understood to represent Jews in both cases. The inscription, as interpreted by Rawlinson, mentions the receiving by the king of tribute from the cities of Tyre, Sidon, and Gebal, in his 21st year; defeating the king of Hamath, and 12 other kings of the upper and lower country (Canaan, lower). Dr. Hincks reads the names of Jehu, king of Israel, and dates the obelisk 875 B. C. Dr. Grotefend reads the names of Tiglath Pileser, Pul, and Shalmanassar, and refers to the accounts in Isaiah (xx.), and Nahum (iii.).

Sargon's name was found in another inscription, with his title, Shalmaneser, and the account of the capture of Samaria (which in Assyrian is SAMARINA). He carried off 27,280 families, and placed colonies, in their stead, of people from Assyria (2 K. xviii.). The king of Egypt is called PIRHU (Pharaoh), and Heliopolis is RABEK (Ra—sun, bek—city). Ashdod, Jamnia, Hamath, Beræa, Damascus, Bambyce, and Charchemish, are mentioned among his captures. He is also styled the conqueror of remote Judæa. He had a statue and inscription in his honor on the island of Cypress. The son of this king was Sennacherib, who built Koyunjik; and in the great palace there were found inscriptions in honor of his capture of Babylon from Merodach-Baladan (2 K. xx. 12; Is. xxxix. 1); and of Sidon, under King Luliya; and of his expedition into Judæa, in which occur the names KHAZAKIYAHU (Hezekiah), URSALIMA (Jerusalem), and YAHUDA (Jews). The king of Pelusium is mentioned. The tribute of Hezekiah, as recorded, consisted of 30 talents of gold, 300 talents of silver, the vessels and ornaments of the temple, slaves, both boys and girls, maid-servants and men-servants—confirming the Scripture account (2 K. xviii. 13–16).

The tells or mounds (see Ezr. ii. 59; Ez. iii. 15; 2 K. xix. 12) which are scattered all over the region watered by the Euphrates and Tigris and their confluents, contain the remains of Assyrian, Babylonian, and Persian occupation. They vary in size from 50 to 150 feet high, and also much more in length, being from a few rods to several miles in extent. Those forming what is now called Nineveh are Koyunjik, which is 3,900 feet long by 1500 wide and 96 high; Neby Yunas (traditional tomb of Jonah), about 40 acres in extent; Khorsabad, 6,000 feet square; Selamieh, 410 acres; Nimrud, 1,000 acres: and in this group of mounds (called Nimroud) there are indications of more than 100 towers, at regular intervals. On the S. W. of this group there is a mound 2,100 feet by 1,200, with a cone at one corner (N. W.) 140 feet high.

A treasure-house of records, such as is alluded to by Ezra (v. 17, vi. 2), was found at Koyunjik, filled with the archives of the empire, written on tablets of terra-cotta, and in perfect order and preservation, piled from the floor to the ceiling, most of which were sent to the British Museum.

NIN'EVITES. Inhabitants of Nineveh (Luke xi. 30).

NI'SAN (Esth. xi. 2).

NIS'ROCH (Heb.). The name of an idol of Nineveh (2 K. xix. 37).

NI'TRE. (Heb. NETHER). Used as a wash (Jer. ii. 22). This substance is not the same as our nitrate of potassa. Natron was and is now used by the Egyptians for washing clothes, for yeast and for soap; also as a cure for toothache mixed with vinegar. It is found in the soda lakes of Egypt, 50 miles W. of Cairo.

NOADI'AH (with whom Jah convenes). 1. Son of Binnui (Ezr. viii. 33).—2. Noadiah the prophetess (Neh. vi. 14).

NO'AH (NOACH, to rest, or give comfort.) The second head of the human race, as Adam was the first. From his birth to the age of 500 years there is a blank in his history. Society in his day had become sadly corrupted by the custom of intermarriage of different races, especially of two distinct religious communities, called "The sons of God" (Elohim) and "The Sons of the Man" (Ha-Adam). There were also Nephilim, men of violence, who turned peaceable society upside down. The "Sons of God" (BENE-ELOHIM) were the descendants of Seth, and worshipers of God; the "Sons of the Man" were descendants of Cain, and probably idolaters. The union of the two families or races produced a mixed condition of religion, which could not be pure.

NO'AH (motion). Daughter of ZELOPHEHAD (Num. xxvi. 33).

NO-A'MON (populous No). (Nahum iii. 8; Ez. xxx. 14, 15). Identical with Thebes. Multitude of No (Jer. xlvi. 25). See Thebes.

BAAL.

NOB (high). David fled from Saul and came to Nob (1 Sam. xxi. 1), which was near Anathoth (Neh. xi. 32). There are on a conical hill, 2¾ miles N. of Jerusalem, traces of a small, but very ancient city—cisterns hewn in the rock, large hewn stones, and ruins of a small tower, besides other indications. From the summit, Zion is in plain view (Is. x. 32).

NO'BAH (a barking). (See KENATH). Most of the chief towns of the Hauran have traces of the architectural magnificence that Rome lavished on her colonies. The tanks, bridges, and many houses are solidly built, and even at this late day nearly as good as new.

NO'BAH. An Israelite warrior (Num. xxxii. 42).

NO'BLEMAN. A man of high rank (John iv. 46, 49).

NOD (flight).

NO'DAB (nobility). The name of an Arab tribe (1 Chr. v. 19).

NO'E. The patriarch NOAH (Job iv. 12).

NO'EBA. NEKODA 1 (1 Esd. v. 31).

NO'GAH (bright). Son of David (1 Chr. iii. 7).

NO'HAH (rest). Son of Benjamin (1 Chr. viii. 2).

NON. NUN. Father of Joshua (1 Chr. vii. 27).

NOPH. Moph, Memphis. (Is. xix. 13). See MEMPHIS.

NO'PHAH (blast). Only mentioned in the fragment of an ode, composed by the Amorites after their capture of Heshbon from the Moabites (Num. xxi. 30), and quoted by Moses. A city between Heshbon and Medeba. Lost.

DETAILS AT NOBAH.

NORTH (Heb. ZAPHON; Gr. borrhas). As denoting the northern quarter (Gen. xiii. 14; Ex. xxvi. 20, 35; Luke xiii. 29); "Land of the North" (Jer. iii. 18). Also expressed, relatively, to the direction of the hand.

NOSE (Heb. AF, the organ of smell), (Prov. xxx. 33). Figuratively, as "anger" in Gen. xxvii. 45, or "wrath," (Gen. xxxix. 19) suggested by hard breathing. Heb. APPAYIM (two breathing holes), is translated "nostrils" in Gen. ii. 70.

NOSE-JEWEL (Heb. NEZEM). A ring of metal—gold or silver—passed through the right nostril, worn for ornament by women in the East (Gen. xxiv. 22). It is usually from 1 to 3½ ins. in diameter. Beads, corals, and jewels, are strung upon it. ORNAMENTS. (See Cut, p. 45.)

NOV'ICE (Gr. neophutos). A new convert (1 Tim. iii. 6).

NUM'BER. Hebraic numerals were denoted by letters. At a later period this was the mode of notation, as seen in the Maccabæan coins. Certain numbers were used as figurative representations, and not actual quantities, such as, 7, 10, 40, 100, which represent completeness. 7 is thus used as "seven-fold" in Gen. iv. 24; seven times (meaning completely) in Lev. xxv. 24, and Ps. xii. 6; as also the general use of the number 7. 10 was a number of especial selection. The number 12 was specially mystical, and is found in many instances; as 12 months, 12 tribes, 12 loaves of shewbread, 12 disciples or apostles. 40 was also very mystical; as 40 days of Moses; 40 years in the wilderness; 40 days and nights of Elijah in the wilderness, and of Jesus on the mount; 40 years each the life of several kings and judges. Seventy-fold, as in Gen. iv. 24, Matt. xviii. 22, etc. The mystic number 666, in Rev. xiii. 18, still remains the subject of controversy. One theory suggests the numerals to mean Lx., in Gr. lateinos (Lat. latinus), beast, or kingdom.

NUMBERING. See POPULATION.

NUMBERS. See HISTORY OF THE BOOKS.

NUME'NIUS (new moon). Son of Antiochus. He was sent on an embassy to Rome and Sparta to renew the friendly connections with the Jews, B. C. 144 (1 Macc. xii. 16, 17). He was again sent, B. C. 141 (xiv. 24)

NUN (a fish). 1. Father of JOSHUA (Ex. xxxiii. 11).—2. The fourteenth letter of the Hebrew alphabet (Ps. cxix). WRITING.

NURSE. The position of the nurse when one was wanted, was one of much honor and importance (Gen. xxiv. 59). CHILD.

NUTS (Botnim and Egoz). Spoken of as among the good things of the land to be taken by Jacob's sons to propitiate the governor of Egypt. This nut was most likely the Pistachio. BOTNIM (Pistachio Town), a town of Gad (Josh. xiii. 26), probably derives its name therefrom. The word EGOZ occurs in Cant. vi. 11, and probably means walnut. One Arabic term (derived from the Persian) for walnut is jawz; another is chusf, which means tall tree. Walnuts were anciently very plenty around the Sea of Galilee. They are still cultivated near Sidon as an article of commerce.

NYM'PHAS (bridegroom). A rich and devoted Christian in Laodicea. His house was used as a chapel (Col. iv. 15). Some ancient manuscripts say Nymphas was a woman, a view which is adopted by the Greek Church.

O

OAK. There are several Hebrew words which are rendered oak in the A. V., as EL, to be strong (Gen. xiv. 6); ELAH, terebinth (Is. vi. 13); ELON, oak (Gen. xii. 6); ILAN, strong tree (Dan. iv.); ALLAH, an oak (Josh. xxiv. 26); ALLON, evergreen oak (Hos. iv. 13). The most noted trees were Abraham's oak at Mamre, the oak at Shechem, of Deborah, Rebekah's nurse, of the wanderers. 1. EL (AEL), to be strong (Gen. xiv. 6); the plural of EL is ELIM, also ELOTH and ELATH. Elim is the name of the place where there were 70 palm trees, the word EL, instead of meaning oak, is used in that instance for grove, ELIM, groves (Ex. xv. 27). There was also a palm grove at Akabah. In Is. i. 29, ELIM means oaks, the same word in Is. lxi. 3, and Ez. xxxi. 14, means any thrifty, large tree.—2. ALAH, the terebinth. The most noted one was Abraham's Oak at Mamre, where the three angels appeared to him. It is now represented by an oak (Thomson thinks it was an oak and not the terebinth) of the species Quercus-pseudo-coccifera. (See cut on page 2).—3. ELON, some kind of oak. Translated plain in the A. V. and in the Targum.—4. ILAN, strong tree (Dan. iv., only), and possibly an oak.—5. ALLAH, an oak (Josh. xxiv. 26, only).—6. ALLON, evergreen oak (Hos. iv. 13), and also the Holly-leaved oak; the Hairy-cupped oak; the prickly-cupped; the Kermes, which furnishes the insect used in dyes (Is. i. 18, scarlet).

OATH. An appeal to Divine authority to ratify the truth of an assertion (Heb. vi. 16). Calling God to witness, as, "God do so to me, and more, also, if," etc. (Ruth i. 17; 1 Sam. ii. 17). Idolators swore by their false gods. Many frivolous forms were used, as, "By the blood of Abel;" "By my head;" "By the Temple," etc. Jesus was asked by the high-priest to swear, "By the living God," to the truth of what he was teaching of himself (Matt. xxvi. 63). Jesus is believed to have prohibited profane, and careless, or false swearing—not telling the truth under oath.

OBADI'AH (servant of Jah), also written ABADIAS and ABDIAS. There were 12 persons without note, except the prophet, for which see HISTORY OF THE BOOKS.

O'BAL (bare district). Son of Joktan (Gen. x. 28). EBAL.

O'BED (serving). 1. Son of Boaz and Ruth (Ruth iv. 17). The Book of Ruth gives an interesting account of his birth and the social and religious life of the Israelites at that time.—2. A descendant of Jarha (1 Chr. ii. 37, 38).—3. One of David's men (xi. 47).—4. Son of Shemaiah, firstborn of Obed-edom (xxvi. 7).—5. Father of Azariah. A captain (2 Chr. xxiii. 1).

O'BED-E'DOM (serving Edom). 1. A member of the family of Kohath (2 Sam. vi. 10, 11). After the death of Uzzah, the ark which was being taken to the city of David was carried into the house of Obed-edom, where it remained three months (1 Chr. xv. 25).—2. Son of Jeduthun (1 Chr. xvi. 38).—3. Treasurer of the Temple (2 Chr. xxv. 24).

O'BIL (chief of the camels). An Ishmaelite who had charge of a herd of camels (1 Chr. xxvii. 30).

O'BOTH (bottles). Encampment in Moab. Lost. (Num. xxi. 10).

JERUSALEM FROM OLIVET.

O'CHIM. Heb. translated "doleful creatures" in Is. xiii. 21. Some creature uttering doleful screeches, perhaps an owl.

OC'RAN (afflicted). Father of Pagiel (Num. i. 13).

O'DED (erecting). 1. Father of Azariah (2 Chr. xv. 1, 8).—2. A prophet who secured the release of the captives from Judah (xxviii. 9). This incident in the history of the Kingdom of Israel is in pleasant contrast to many others. A whole army were liberated, clothed and fed.

ODOL'LAM. ADULLAM. Beit Ula.

ODONAR'KES. Chief of a tribe slain by Jonathan (1 Macc. ix. 66).

OFFENCE. The Heb. HET or CHET (Eccl. x. 4), is translated sin (Lev. xix. 17; xx. 20, etc.), also fault in Gen. xli. 9. MICHSHOL (1 Sam. xxv. 31; Is. viii. 14), "stumbling block," Gr. skandalon in Matt. xvi. 23; xviii. 7; Luke xvii. 1. To eat with offence is to eat so as to be an occasion of sin in another (Rom. xiv. 20). "A temptation to sin," "perplexity," "danger," "that which produces disgust," etc.

OFFEND, TO (from Lat. offendo). Offence, as a breach of the law, is alluded to in Rom. v. 15, 17; as an offered excuse for sin in Matt. xv. 12; John vi. 61.

OFFERING. (See SACRIFICE).

OF'FICER (Heb. NEZIB, SARIS, PEKAH, PEKUDDAH, PAKID, RAB, SHOTER), and others, are terms conveying various meanings, from a commander of an army to a simple messenger of a court of justice (John vii. 32, 45, etc.). In Luke xii. 58, there appears prakter (a doer)—Revenue officers, (1 Macc. x. 41, xiii. 37). Huperites, bailiff or some inferior officer (Matt. v. 25).

OG (crooked). King of BASHAN, ruler over sixty cities. He was one of the giant (violent, strong) race of Rephaim (Josh. xiii. 12). This race was probably Shemite in origin, dating earlier than the Canaanites. Og's couch (palanquin, Amos iii. 12), is described as of iron, 15 ft. 9 in. long, and 6 ft. wide (Deut. iii. 11). This would indicate Og's hight at 9 feet at least.

O'HAD (union). Son of Simeon (Gen. xlvi. 10).

O'HEL (house). Son of Zerubbabel (1 Chr. iii. 20). HASADIAH.

OIL. The Olive was the chief source of oil (See OLIVES). (Ez. xvi. 13). It was used in the preparation of meat offerings in the Temple (Lev. v. 11, vi. 21). The second pressing was used for lamps. Oil was an important article of merchandise (1 Chr. xxvii. 28; Ez. xxvii. 17). See OINTMENT. OLIVE.

OIL-TREE (Heb. 'EZ SHEMEN). A tree bearing fruit resembling that of the olive (Is. xli. 19). OLIVE.

OINT'MENT (Heb. SHAMAN, to be fat; ROKAH, to anoint; MIRKAHATH, the vessel for holding the perfume, or ointment; MISHAH, oil. Ointment was a general term for perfumes, cosmetics, for substances used for medicinal, sacred, and ceremonial purposes. Olive oil formed the body of these ointments. A particular ointment was appointed for use in consecration (Ex. xxx. 23, 33, xxix. 7, xxxvii. 29, xl. 9, 15), of myrrh, cassia, sweet cinnamon, sweet calamus and olive oil. With this, also, the furniture of the Tabernacle was anointed. Dead bodies were anointed with both ointment and oil. Christ refers to this in Matt. xxvi. 12; Mark xiv. 38; Luke xxiii. 56. It was largely used in medical treatment, alluded to by Christ in curing the blind man (Is. i. 6; John ix. 6; Jer. viii. 22; Rev. iii. 18). As a cosmetic for the face, so common with the Greeks and Romans, it was also used by the Egyptians and Jews, and is now by the inhabitants of Palestine to this day. Allusion is made to the use of ointments in Ruth iii. 3; Eccl. vii. 1, ix. 8; Prov. xxvii. 9, 16; Matt. xxvi. 7; Luke vii. 42; Rev. xviii. 13.

OL'AMUS. Son of Bani (1 Esd. ix. 30).

OLD-GATE. A gate of JERUSALEM (Neh. iii. 6).

OLD TES'TAMENT. See HISTORY OF THE BOOKS.

OL'IVE. (Heb. ZAYITH, or ZAIT). A tree from 15 to 30 ft. high, bearing berries, smooth, like an oval plum, violet color when ripe, having an oily pulp, and a hard, rough stone. The leaves are like the willow, and of a dull, olive green, on the smooth, upper surface, and silvery pale on the downy, under surface. The flowers are small and white. See cut, p. 21.

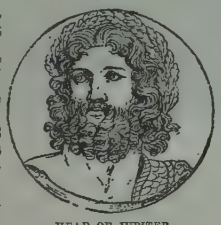
The body of the tree dies at the heart and stands up on several legs (see cut on page 63). The bark of old trees is very rough, like that on old willow trees. They live to a great age. (See GETHSEMANE). A sacred olive tree was kept in the court of the Temple of Pandrosus, on the Acropolis, Athens; and the allusion in Ps. lii. 8, would imply that they were grown in the Temple Court on Zion.

OLIVES, MOUNT OF (HAR-HAZZATHIM, Zech. xiv. 4). "Before Jerusalem, on the east." Referred to as the "ascent of Olivet" in other places (2 Sam. xv. 30, etc.) in the Old Testament, and the various changes of the same in the New (Luke xix. 29; Acts i. 12). The first mention of the mount is at the time David fled over it, and the last is the triumphal progress of the Son of David over its slopes. The description, written, perhaps over 2,500 years ago, is now a good one. It is near Jerusalem—a ravine between them—olive-trees (Neh. viii. 15; Mark xi. 8), and gives a very distinct view of the Temple site and the city from its summit, where there is now a chapel (2 Sam. xv. 23, 32). Solomon built chapels for the worship of Ashtoreth, Chemosh, and Milcom, heathen divinities, on a part of Olivet called the "Mount of Corruption" (2 K. xxiii. 13), which some believe to be the highest summit, where the chapel of the Ascension now stands—the same spot that was held sacred by David.

Olivet is a ridge, 300 feet higher than the Temple site, and a mile long, north and south, divided into three or four summits, which are named—commencing at the north—1. Viri Galilæi, also Vineyard of the Sportsman; 2. Ascension, by the Arabs Jebel et Tur; 3. Prophets; and 4, Offense, Arab Baten el Hawa, Belly of the Winds.

OLYM'PAS (Gr. given by heaven). A disciple at Rome (Rom. xvi. 15). Tradition says he was of the 70, and died A. D. 69.

OLYM'PIUS. A title given to the Greek deity, Zeus (JUPITER), (2 Macc. vi. 2), from his residence on Mt. Olympus, in Greece.



HEAD OF JUPITER.

O'MAR (eloquent). Son of Eliphaz (Gen. xxxvi. 11, 15). The name now found in the Amir tribe of Arabs, in Gilead.

Ō'MEGA (Gr. ō). The last letter of the Greek alphabet (Rev. i. 8, 11). Symbol of "the last," as A is of "the first."

O'MER (handful). See WEIGHTS and MEASURES.

OM'RI (servant of Jah). 1. "Captain of the host" to Elah, also the 6th king of Israel, a vigorous and unscrupulous ruler (1 K. xvi. 21), in Tirzah, his capital. He transferred his residence to the hill Shomron, (Samaria), which he bought of Shemer, where he reigned 6 years more.—2. Son of Becher (1 Chr. vii. 8).—3. Son of Judah, a descendant of Pharez (ix. 4).—4. Son of Michael (xxvi. 18).

ON (power). Son of Peleth. A chief who revolted against Moses (Num. xvi. 1).

ON. (Heliopolis). BETHSHEMESH (Jer. xliii. 13). Egyptian sacred name ha-ra (the city of the sun), and common name an. It was on the E. bank of the Nile, 20 miles N. E. of Memphis; once the capital of the district. Joseph's wife was a daughter of a priest of On (Gen. xli. 45).

O'NAM (strong). 1. Son of Shobal (Gen. xxxvi. 23).—2. Son of Jerahmeël (1 Chr. ii. 26, 28), by Atarah.

O'NAN. Son of Judah (Gen. xxxviii. 4). It was Onan's duty to marry his brother's widow, and perpetuate the race; but he took means to prevent the consequences of marriage. Jehovah was angry with him, and slew him as he had slain his brother (ver. 9).

ONĒ'SIMUS. A slave who had escaped from his master Philemon of Colossæ, and had fled to Rome, where Paul converted him and recommended his forgiveness by his master in an epistle (Philemon). (See HISTORY OF THE BOOKS). Onesimus left Rome in the company of Tychicus, carrying the epistles to Philemon, to the Colossians, and Ephesians (Col. iv. 9). There is a tradition that Onesimus became Bishop of Berœa, where he is said to have been martyred.

ONĒSIPH'ORUS (profit-bringing). An Ephesian mentioned in 2 Tim. i. 16–18, who rendered Paul generous service during his second captivity in Rome, in acknowledging which, the apostle alludes to the "house of Onesiphorus," and in 2 Tim. iv. 19, to "the household of Onesiphorus," which suggests that the family might have shared in rendering services to Paul.

ONI'AS (Heb. ONIYAH, strength of Jah). The name of five high priests; two only are mentioned in the A. V., I and III.

JADDUA

JADDUA 1. ONIAS I - - - - B. C. 330.
1. ONIAS 2. SIMON the Just.
2. SIMON 3. ONIAS II.
3. ONIAS 4. SIMON II.
4. SIMON 5. ONIAS III - - - B. C. 198.
" " 6. ONIAS IV (Menelaus).
5. ONIAS 7. ONIAS V.

Onias IV assumed the Greek name Menelaus to gain the favor of the Greek party. He had been reproved by his eldest brother, Onias III, for appropriating the sacred treasures, at which he murdered his brother through an assassin (Andronicus) about 171 B. C. (2 Macc. iii. 4).

ONI'AS, THE CITY OF. Where stood a temple built by Onias V, and the Jewish settlements in Egypt. The site of the city of Onias was in the district north of Heliopolis.

ONIONS (Heb. BETSALIM). A bulbous plant; a favorite article of food with the Egyptians. They are very mild in Egypt, and grow to a large size.

Ō'NO (strong). Built by the sons of Elpaal. In Benjamin (1 Chr. viii. 12). 725 of the people of Lod, Hadid, and Ono returned from Babylon (Ez. ii. 33). There was a plain near the city (Neh. vi. 2), where Nehemiah was invited (but he declined) five times to come to a village in it to meet Sanballat. Beit Anna, 4¼ ms. N. of Lud.

ONY'CHA (Heb. SHEHELETH, or SHECHELETH). The origin of our word shell. The Hebrew word is only mentioned in Ex. xxx. 34, as an ingredient of the sacred perfume. This word has been variously rendered—As the horny lid closing the open part of a shell, a kind of mollusk. Gosse thinks it was some gum resin, as all marine animals, except fish with fins and scales, were unclean.

O'NYX (Heb. SHOHAM). See PRECIOUS STONES.

O'PHEL. A part of ancient Jerusalem, first mentioned as having its wall built "much" upon by Jotham (2 Chr. xxvii. 3). Manasseh enclosed it with a wall (xxxiii. 14). It was near the watergate (Neh. iii. 26), and a great corner-tower (v. 27). Josephus calls it Ophla (Ant. ix. 11, 2; B. J. ii. 17, 9). The prophet Micah (iv. 8) calls Ophel the daughter of Zion, which would indicate that Zion was the Temple-site, for Ophel is the hill S. of the S. wall of the Temple.—2. The Ophel of 2 K. v. 24, was the residence of the prophet Elisha, to which Gehazi returned after begging a present from Naaman, near Samaria.

O'PHIR (dust—red dust?). In the Himyarite language ofir is red, and the people of Mahra call their country red, and the Red Sea Bahr Ofir. Ophir was a region from which Solomon obtained gold in Tyrian ships, by the way of Eziongeber. It was in Arabia (Gen. x. 29), where several sons of Joktan settled, giving their names to regions or tribes. Sophir is the form of the name in the Septuagint and Josephus. The gold, silver, precious stones, ivory, apes, peacocks, and almug-wood are Indian articles, but may have been imported there. Jeremiah (x. 9) and Daniel (x. 5), say gold of Uphaz, probably meaning Ophir. On the shore of the Red Sea, in Arabia.

OPH'RAH (a fawn). Two places of this name. 1. In Benjamin (Josh. xviii. 23), 5 ms. E. of Bethel, now called Et Taiyibeh a small village on a conical hill, containing ancient ruins. Jesus retired to this obscure place, after the miracle of raising Lazarus, with his disciples (John xi. 54). (See cut on page 52). 2. In Manasseh, the native place of Gideon (Judg. vi. 11, viii. 27), and where he was buried. The prophet Micah calls it Aphrah (dust, i. 10).

OR. Used in the now obsolete sense of ere or before (Ps. xc. 2).

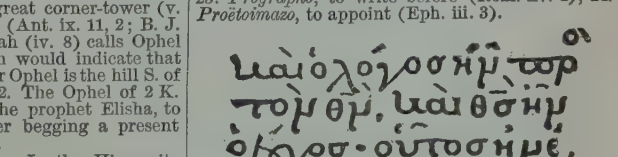
OR'ACLE (Heb. DEBIR). The inner sanctuary of the Temple (1 K. vi. 5, 16 ff.).

OR'ATOR (a speaker). The title given to TERTULLUS, the advocate of the Jews against Paul (Acts xxiv. 1). TRIAL.

OR'CHARD. See GARDEN. The East is naturally a country of orchards. Of oranges, lemons, pomegranates, apples, olives, cherries, dates, apricots, figs, and other fruits. Nearly the whole support of a family can be had from the orchard. Trees are taxed very heavily, whether bearing or not, and from the time they are planted, which prevents enterprise.

ORDAIN. To order, constitute, appoint, found, or establish, as a priest or a deacon over a church. Heb. YASAD, founded in 1 Chr. ix. 22; 2. KUN, to establish (Ps. viii. 3); 3. MENAH, to set, or to number (Dan. v. 26; MENE in v. 25); 4. NATHAN to give (2 K. xxiii. 5); 5. AMAD, to raise up (Ex. ix. 16); 6. ARACA, to set in order (Ps. cxxxii. 17); 7. PAAL, work (Job xi. 8); 8. KUM, to confirm (Esth. ix. 27); 9. SUM, to appoint (1 Chr. xvii. 9); 10. SHAFATH, to set (Is. xxvi. 12); 11. ASAH, to make (1 K. xi. 31); 12. Greek, diatasso, to arrange (1 Cor. vii. 17); 13. Kathistemi, to place (Heb. v. 1); 14. Kataskouazo, to prepare fully (Heb. ix. 6); 15. Krino, to separate (Acts xvi. 4), and "to judge" over 80 times; 16. Horizo, to bound, limit (Acts x. 42); 17. Poieo, to make (Mark iii. 14); 18. Proorizo, predetermine (1 Cor. ii. 17); 19. Tasso, to set in order (Acts xiii. 48); 20. Tithemi, to lay (John xv. 16); 21. Cheirotoneo, to stretch (Acts xiv. 23); 22. Ginomai, to begin to be (Acts i. 22), this word is repeated 700 times in the N. T.; 23. Prographo, to write before (Rom. xv. 4); 24. Proetoimazo, to appoint (Eph. iii. 3).

ON.



GREEK MS. A. D. 1000.—St. John i. 1, 2.

O'REB (raven). A chief of the Midianites who invaded Israel and was defeated by GIDEON. The disaster in which Oreb and Zeeb lost their lives (by the hands of Ephraimites), was one of the most awful on record. Two large rocks, near the scene, were named in memory of the event.

O'REB, THE ROCK (the raven's crag). (Judg. vii. 25; Is. x. 26). Not far from Bethshemesh, on the east (or west) side of Jordan. The Jews have a tradition that the prophet Elijah was fed by the people of Oreb (ravens). (See Reland).

O'REN (pine). Son of Jerahmeël (1 Chr. ii. 25).

OR'GAN. A musical instrument consisting of a combination of metal and reed pipes of different lengths and sizes. MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.

ORI'ON. "God who made Arcturus, Orion and the Pleiades" (Job ix. 9; xxxviii. 31, 32; Amos v. 8). KESIL in Hebrew. Called the giant by the Arabs, which was Nimrod among the Chaldæans. Aben Ezra says Orion means the constellation now called Scorpion, or the bright star in it called Antares.

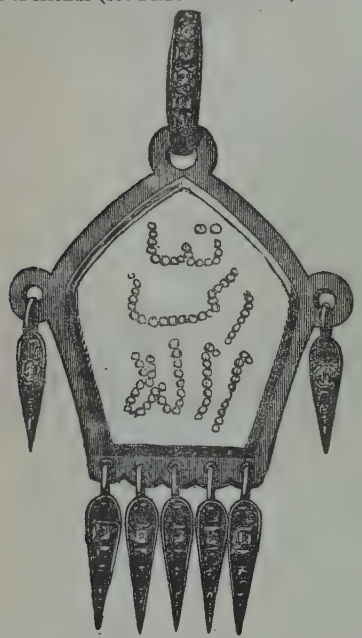
ORNAMENTS. The ancient monuments show that ornaments were used in great variety in ancient as well as modern times. Every rank uses them, rich or poor, and as many as their means permit. If gold cannot be had, then silver, or brass, or tin, or glass, is used. Engraved gems were in use only by the most wealthy and educated. These bore besides the words or letters, figures of gods or mythical animals, or the portraits of relatives or friends (see PRECIOUS STONES).



EAR-RING, NATURAL SIZE.

OR'NAN (active). ARAUNAH the Jebusite (1 Chr. xxi. 15, 18, 20, 25, 28).

OR'PAH (forelock). Wife of Chilion, son of Nŏomi. She accompanied her sister-in-law on the road to Bethlehem, but went back to her people and her gods (Ruth i. 4, 14).

ORTHO'SIAS. Described by Pliny (v. 17) as near Tripolis, south of the river Eleutherus (which was the northern boundary of Phœnicia), in a strong pass; and a city of great importance, as commanding the route between Phœnicia and Syria. Tryphon fled there when besieged by Antiochus in Dora (1 Macc. xv. 37). The ruins are on the south bank of the Nahr el Barid (cold river).

OSHE'A. The original name of Joshua, son of Nun (Num. xiii. 8, 16).

OS'PRAY (Heb. OZNIYAH). An unclean bird. Very powerful; often weighing five pounds. It plunges under the water to catch fish. It belongs to the Falconidæ, or falcon family, and is found in Europe, North America, and occasionally in Egypt, (Deut. xiv. 12).

OS'SIFRAGE (Heb. PERES), (bone-breaker). The Lammergeier. An unclean bird (Lev. xi. 13). It attacks the wild goat, young deer, sheep, calves, etc. It is found in the highest mountains of Europe, Asia and Africa, and is frequently seen in the sky flying alone. See EAGLE, page 92.

OS'TRICH (Heb. BATH HAYYA'ANAH, daughters of the wilderness—female ostriches. YA'ENIM, ostriches, and RANAN, to wail—sometimes rendered peacocks). The words are generally accepted to mean the ostrich. In Lam. iv. 3, appears the word YA'ENIM (plural) which rightly translates ostrich. NOTSEH, feathers, in Job. xxix. 13.

OTH'NI (lion of Jah). Son of Shemaiah (1 Chr. xxvi. 7). OTHEN (lion).

OTH'NIEL (lion of El). Descendant of Kenaz, and brother of CALEB 1 (Josh. xv. 17).

OTHONI'AS. Error for Mattaniah (Ezr. x. 27), in 1 Esdr. ix. 28.

OUCHES. Sockets in which the precious stones of the breast-place were set. (Nouches in Chaucer). (Ex. xxviii. 11, 13, xxxix. 6, etc.).

OV'EN (Heb. TANNUR). The ovens in the East are of two kinds. The stationary ones are found only in towns, where regular bakers are employed (Hos. vii. 4). The portable ones consist of a large jar made of clay, three feet high, larger at the bottom, with a hole for removing the ashes. Every house possesses such an article (Ex. viii. 3). It was heated with twigs, grass or wood (Matt. vi. 30), sometimes with dung, and the loaves were placed both inside and outside of it. FIRE.

OVERSEERS. A ministerial title, perhaps elder, or bishop (Acts xx. 28).

OWL. Heb. 1. BATH HAYYA'ANAH (daughters of the waste places). (See OSTRICH). 2. YANSHUF or YANSHOF. The Ibis, an unclean bird, as in Lev. xi. 17 and Deut. xiv. 16. Probably not known in Palestine, but a native of Egypt. In Is. xxxiv. 11 it is mentioned in the desolation of Idumæa (Edom). 3. COS (cup), little owl (Lev. xi. 17, etc.) 4. KIPPOZ, the owl, which is common in the vicinity (and even in the city) of Jerusalem. LILITH, screech-owl, in Is. xxxiv. 14. The lilith was to the Hebrews what the ghost or ghoul is to the Arab, a "night-monster," and so they called the screech-owl by that name.

OSTRICHES.

OX. Heb. 1. BAKAR, horned cattle, of full age (Is. lv. 25).—2. FAR, BEN-BAKAR, calf.—3. SHOR, one of a drove of full grown cattle. THOR (the Chaldee form) in Ezr. vi. 9.—4. AGAL, calf of the first year; EGLAH, a heifer (Hos. x. 11), giving milk (Is. vii. 21), or plowing (Judg. xiv. 18).—5. AGIL, a bull two (7) years old (vi. 25).—6. ABARIM (strong) bulls.—7. TEO, wild bull (Is. li. 20); possibly the ORYX. Stall-fed cattle are alluded to in Prov. xv. 17, and 1 K. iv. 23. The cattle on the monuments are long-horned, short-horned, polled, or muley, besides the Abyssinian; and of every variety in color, as ours are. (See p. 6).

O'ZEM (strength). 1. Son of Jesse (1 Chr. ii. 15).—2. Son of Jerahmeël (ii. 25).

OZI'AS. 1. Son of Micha, one of the governor's of Bethulia (Judg. vi. 15).—2. UZZI, ancestor of Ezra (2 Esd. ii. 2).—3. UZZIAH, king of Judah (Matt. i. 8, 9).

O'ZIEL. Ancester of Judith (Jud. viii. 1). UZZIEL.

OZ'NI (attentive). Son of Gad (Num. xxvi. 16). EZBON.

OZ'NITES. Descendants of OZNI (Num. xxvi. 16).

OZO'RA. Nathan, Adaiah, Machnadebai, are corrupted into the sons of Ozora (1 Esd. ix. 34).

P

PA'ARAI (open). NAARAI, son of Ezbai (1 Chr. xi. 37).

PA'DAN (Heb. PODDAN, a plain). (Gen. xlviii. 7).

PA'DAN A'RAM. The family of the founder of the Jewish race settled here, with whom the descendants of Abraham married, as with an aristocratic people. (See HARAN.) Padan is Arabic for field, or ploughed land. The wife of the heir of the promise was sought here; and it was, probably, near Damascus, only a few days' journey from where Abraham was living, and not many weeks' (or months') travel, far away in Mesopotamia (Gen. xxxviii. xxxix).

PA'DON (deliverance). Ancestor of Nethinim, who returned from captivity (Ezr. ii. 44).

PAG'IEL (event of El). Son of Ocran (Num. i. 13).

PA'HATH-MOAB (Governor of Moab). Head of one of the principal houses of the tribe of Judah. This title is obscure, but in 1 Chr. iv. 22 allusion is made to a family of Shilonites, of the tribe of Judah, who once had dominion in Moab. The family was of exalted rank, as is shown by its appearing fourth in the lists of both Ezr. ii. 6, and Neh. vii. 11. Among the lay princes PA'HATH-MOAB signs second (Neh. x. 14)

PAINTS. The only reference to paint is that of its universal use among women as a cosmetic to paint the eyes. (See EYE, p. 55).

PAL'ACE. The buildings, court-yards, etc., enclosed within the walls of a royal residence. The particular allusion to palace is that by the Herods, which was afterwards the residence of the Roman governor or prætor, hence it was called in Greek Pretorium. Christ was brought before the Roman procurator, Pontius Pilate, in this palace (Mark. xv. 16). The most celebrated palace mentioned in the Scriptures, is that of Solomon, a detailed description of which occurs in 1 K. vii. 1–12, and in Josephus (Ant. viii. 5, 1, 2).

OWL.

PA'LAL (judge). Son of Uzai, who assisted at the Jerusalem walls (Neh. iii. 25).

PAL'ESTINE, PALÆSTI'NA. The translation of the Heb. PELESHETH, which is found only four times, and always in poetical passages in the O. T. (Ex. xv. 14; Is. xiv. 29, 31; Joel iii. 4). The same word is translated "Philistia" in Ps. lx. 8, lxxxiii. 7, lxxxvii. 4, cviii. 9. The two words were synonymous at the time our version was made, and Palestine in the Scriptures means only so much of the country as we now call Philistia.

On the Assyrian monuments there is a country described as PALAZTU on the West Sea, separate from Tyre, Damascus, Samaria and Edom. The Egyptians wrote it at Karnak PULUSATU. The Greeks called it Philistine Syria. Jerome (A. D. 400), also restricts the name to Philistia, and is followed by Procopius.

In our day the name is used of the whole country, including all that the Jews or Hebrews ever occupied.

It was originally called The Land of Canaan, low land (as compared to the high plateaus of Bashan and Gilead, Ps. cv. 11). The land of the Hebrews in Gen. xl. 15, only. The land of the Hittites in Josh. i. 4, and CHETU or CHITA on the Egyptian monuments.

The name HOLY LAND (TA-NETR) is as old as the Pharaoh Rameses II, and Thothmes III. The Phœnicians called their own country Holy Land, and the Egyptians may have borrowed the term, which argues that the idea of Holy Land belonged to the country before the Hebrews took possession, and is the most generally known now.

The Land of Israel (1 Sam. xiii. 19), land of Jah (Hos. ix. 3), the holy land (Zech. ii. 12), and the glorious land (Dan. xi. 41), were names in use during the monarchy.

There is no record of any division of the land, except the names of the several peoples inhabiting it, until the 12 tribes took possession, when the several divisions were known by the names of the tribes.

After the Captivity (if not before, 2 Chr. ix. 11), it was called Judæa, meaning the land of the Jews. The Romans divided it into Galilee, Samaria, Judæa, Perea, and gave names and limits to the surrounding country; as Phœnicia, Cœle-Syria, Lysania, Hauran, Edom, etc.

The land is about 140 ms. (Dan to Beersheba) long, and 40 ms. average width, between the Jordan valley and the West Sea; fenced in by this valley on the east, the Lebanon on the north, the desert on the south, and the Great Sea on the west. The whole of this district is high land, from 100 to 3000 feet above the sea level. The divisions are into Plain, Hill Country, Jordan Valley, and Mountains; each almost a strip from north to south, with a distinct history as well as structure.

GEOLOGY. The great masses of rock under the country are limestone, having few fossils. Over that there is a white cretaceous deposit, full of fossils, flints, ammonites, echinites (cidaris, petrified olives), fish, and others. This deposit is most noticeable on the western slopes of Lebanon, and the eastern slopes of Anti-Lebanon. Geodes of chalcedony, from an oz. weight to a 100 lbs., are numerous in Galilee, besides jasper and agate. Soft, friable, sandstone, is found in extensive beds in both ranges. Coal is found near Beirut, in thin veins, and of poor quality. Iron and copper mines were worked anciently (Deut. viii. 9, xxxiii. 25; Eusebius viii. 15, 17). There are two kinds of limestone, the lower, white, and the upper, creamy, with streaks. The great quarry under Jerusalem (cut on p. 89), affords both kinds. The white (Arabic melekeh) is chalky, and may be easily cut, and sawed into blocks; the dark (Ar. mezzeh) is much harder, and takes a fine polish. Many of the caves are in limestone, some of which, as those in the north, at Paneas, and on the Dog river, are immense fountains. Many are used for storing grain, etc., and some for dwellings. The chalk deposits are found on summits only, N. of Hebron, as at Olivet, Bethlehem, Carmel, etc.; S. of Hebron it is more abundant, and near the surface, especially on the E. side of the Arabah, where the Romans named one place Gypsaria (Chalk-town). Flints are very abundant in the chalk on the W. shore of the Dead Sea. Sandstone is the under-stratum, in two layers, or series: one dusky-red, twisted, full of caverns, and colored with iron and other minerals, the other is dark grey, compact, bearing fossils—the chief underlying rock of the whole region E. of Jordan. The chalk is of not so recent a deposit on the E. of Jordan, and is capped with a soft, friable, sandstone, without fossils. The Abarim mountains are different, being sandstone, capped with chalk, bearing fossils. The red sandstone appears at Kerak. Both the sandstone and the limestone, on the E. are of an earlier age than those on the W. of Jordan. At Zurka Main, and at Wady Mojib, they form cliffs 400 ft. high. From Hermon to Kerak the whole region is limestone; 1000 ft. higher than Canaan, W. of Jordan.

EARTHQUAKES have been frequent, even in the historical period, the most noted, since that in the days of Uzziah, being those at Aleppo, in 1616—1812; Antioch, 1737; Laodicea, Beirut, Sidon, Tyre, Safed, and Tiberias, 1837.

The shores of the Dead Sea are cut down on all sides, through crystalline rocks, into ravines, 600 to 1200 feet deep, with traces of extinct waterfalls and other evidences of remote antiquity. At Wady Derejeh there are eight terraces of gravel, marking different beaches, one above another—the highest 44 feet above the present level. There is no evidence that the Dead Sea was ever connected with either the Mediterranean or the Red Sea; but it was at one time 350 feet higher than at present, if not 540, as we may learn from the chalky deposits at Wady Hasasah. The ocean level is marked very distinctly all around the sea, indicating that there has been no general disturbance since the present arrangement of strata was completed. See MT. SEIR, MT. SINAI, RED SEA; also, CLIMATE, FLOWERS, TREES.

Mr. Tristam described 322 species of birds gathered by him and his party, and now safely deposited by him in a museum in London. Swimmers and waders were not well represented; 27 species are native to Palestine. He caught an ostrich in the Belka, east of the Dead Sea. (See the articles on the name of each bird). The whole country abounds in birds of every kind known in the temperate zone. Caged birds are found in almost every house.

Fish are caught in great plenty on the Great Sea and in Galilee; and one at least of its varieties is painted on the monuments in Egypt.

Reptiles are abundant, especially lizards, tortoises, geckos and chameleons. The common frog and tree-toad abound in wet places. Snakes are not very numerous, and none large. There are 3 species of scorpion. Mollusks are very numerous, in more than a hundred varieties. Butterflies are as numerous, in proportion, as the flowers.

MAR (Gen. xxxviii; also in 2 Sam. xiii. 1, and xiv. 27). Its form used in decoration in the Temple (2 Chr. iii. 5; 1 K. vi. 29, 32, 35, vii. 36), and in Ezekiel's vision (Ez. xl. 16, xli. 18). "The righteous shall flourish like the palm-tree" (Ps. xcii. 12). Its grace—the lofty and ever-green foliage, cresting the top of the tree, near to heaven—all suggest abundant illustration. The Jews commemorated victories by carrying palms (1 Macc. xiii. 51; Esd. ii. 44–47), etc. Also, the glorified are mentioned in Rev. vii. 9, as "clothed with white robes, and palms in their hands. See DATES.

WADY FARAN.

PAL'SY, (Gr. paralusis, relaxation). An abolition of function, whether of intellect, special sensation, or voluntary motion.

To destroy action or energy; a disabling of the nerves of a part of a body, afterward also of the whole body (Matt. iv. 24). The withered hand was an instance, cured by Jesus (Mark iii. 1).

PAL'TI (deliverance of Jah). Son of Raphu, a spy (Num. xiii. 9).

PAL'TIEL (deliverance of God). Son of Azzan and prince of Issachar (Num. xxiv. 26).

PAL'TITE (descendants of Pelet, the). One of David's men (2 Sam. xxiii. 26).

PAMPHY'LIA. A province of Asia (Minor), on the south coast, bordering the same sea as, and west of Cilicia (Acts xx. v. ii. 5). The sea is now called Adalia, from the ancient Attalia. The region was only 20 ms. wide, inland, between Taurus and the sea. Paul here first entered Asia, having just left Cyprus, landing at Perga (Acts xiii. 13), where John Mark left him and Barnabas. The language seems from Luke's account (Acts ii. 10), to have been corrupted to some local dialect. The region is now thinly peopled, with a few towns along the coast, in the midst of fine orchards, surrounded by fertile fields. Ruins here and there mark ancient sites.

PAN'NAG. Some kind of spice, or aromatic plant exported from Palestine at Tyre (Ezr. xxvii. 17). It may possibly have been a flavoring substance used in bread. The Syriac renders it millet.

PAPER-REEDS. PAPYRUS. "Paper reeds by the brooks" in Is. xix. 7, should read "meadows by the river" (Nile).

PANE'AS. (See CÆSAREA PHILIPPI.)

PA'PHOS. In Cyprus at the west end of the island (Salamis being at the east end and a road between); the seat of the Roman governor, Sergius Paulus, who "believed" after hearing Paul and Barnabas (Acts xiii. 12). Elymas (magician, sorcerer), was struck with blindness (for a season), as a punishment for deceiving people with his magic. They had a fine temple in honor of Aphrodite (Venus), who was worshiped, and was fabled to have risen from the sea at this place (Homer, Od. viii. 362). The temple was at a place now called Kuklia, some distance from the new town called Baffa.

PAPY'RUS (Reed). (Heb. names: AGMON, GOME, AROTH, KANEH). A tall reed (3 to 6 ft., angular), with a broom-shape head, formerly lining the Nile banks, and growing elsewhere in marshes in Egypt and Palestine. Its lower part was used for food, after cooking. It is without leaves, and the pulp was used for making paper. Some ancient specimens of the papyrus (covered with writing and drawings), are to be found in the Abbott Museum, New York, (and in several museums in Europe). See page 59.

PAR'ABLE (Heb. MASHAL; Greek parabole; Latin parabola). A similitude, a comparison. See FABLE. The Hebrews used the term mashal (similitude) for the Proverbs (1 Sam. x. 12, xiv. 13), prophesy (Num. xxiii. 7), enigmas (Ps. lxxviii. 2), and narrative (Ez. xii. 22). The parable was used by the Hebrew teachers from the earliest times, and especially by Hillel, Shammai and other great Rabbis just before the Christian era. The parable is a low form of speech, adapted to the ignorance of the great mass of mankind. The Scribes had a kind of parable that was understood by the few only, and therefore it is said that the Sermon on the Mount was open and plain instruction, and "not as the Scribes." Jesus chose this form of teaching the people, who were spiritually blind and deaf (Matt. xiii 13). The parable attracts, and if understood, is remembered, yet sometimes the meaning is lost. There were probably many spoken which were not recorded (ib. 34). The number is about 30 or 31.

PA'RAH (cow). Five miles N. E. of Jerusalem. The name is continued in Wady Farah (mouse), the Arabs keeping the sound only of the ancient name, as they have done in many other cases. Dr. Barclay claims this wady for the ancient locality of ÆNON, where John was baptizing; for there is a large intermitting fountain there (John iii. 23; City of the Great King, 558). Khurbet Farah (ruin of) lies on the fork between Wady Tuwar and Wady Farah (Josh. xviii. 23).

PA'RAN (place of caves). Name of a mountain and a wilderness. The mountain is only mentioned in two poetical passages (Deut. xxxiii. 2; Hab. iii. 3). This name is preserved in Wady FARAN (faran), in Sinai; and the mountain is probably that now called Serbal, one of the grandest in the region (Bartlett, Forty Days; Stanley). The wilderness is described minutely in the Scriptures; and had Palestine on the north, Arabah on the east, and Sinai on the south; corresponding to the desert E't Tyh (the wandering) of the present (see SINAI). This region is not a desert, or a wilderness, but is called by the Hebrews Midbar (pasture-land).

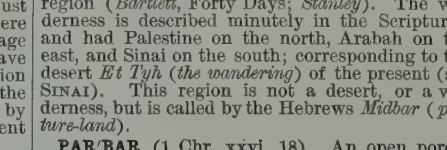
PAR'BAR (1 Chr. xxvi. 18). An open porch, or some structure on the west side of the Temple court.



PAPYRUS, 1ST CENTURY.

PARCHED GROUND. In Is. xxxv. 7. Heb. SHARAB, should be read "mirage," a peculiar deceptive appearance of the heated air, by which you are led to think you see trees, houses, water, etc., at a distance.

PAR'LOR. The king's audience chamber (Judg. iii. 20–25).

PARMASH'TA (superior). Son of Haman (Esth. ix. 9).

PAR'MENAS (abiding). A deacon (Acts vi. 5).

PAR'NACH (delicate). Ancestor of Elizaphan (Num. xxxiv. 25).

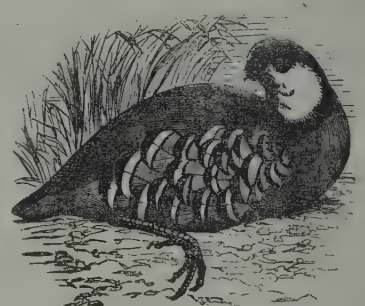
PA'ROSH (a flea). 2,172 descendants of Parosh who returned from captivity (Ezr. ii. 3). Another 150 males accompanied Ezra (Ezr. viii. 3). They assisted in building the wall of Jerusalem (Neh. iii. 25), and sealed the covenant (x. 14).

PARSHAN'DATHA (interpreter). Eldest of Haman's sons, slain by the Jews (Esth ix. 7).

PART. (Heb. PELECH, circuit or district). Used in reference to Jerusalem, Beth-haccerem, Mizpah, Beth-zur and Keilah (Neh. iii. 9).

PAR'THIA (Acts ii. 9). The Parthians here meant were Jews only, who were present at Jerusalem on the day of Pentecost. Originally it was a small mountainous district N. E. of Media, between Aria and Hyrcania, but afterward included a large district. The country is mountainous, climate pleasant, soil fertile, well watered by many small streams (which do not reach the seas, but are absorbed in the ground), and has many ruins of ancient cities, such as Ctesiphon, Akker-kuf, El Hammam and Takt-i-Bostan, some of the most remarkable Oriental remains, which are evidence of a former state of prosperity and wealth. It is now a part of Persia. The first known of this Scythian people is of the time of Darius Hystaspis; although it is supposed that Cyrus annexed their territory to his empire (B. C. 550). They were in Xerxes' great army in Greece. Alexander gave their country to Eumenes. The Parthian Empire began under Arsaces, B. C. 256, and extended from the Tigris to India, and from the Chorasmian desert to the Southern Ocean. It was the only power that opposed Rome with final success. The Roman general, Crassus, was defeated by them at Carrhæ (Harran). (R. K. Porter).

PAR'TRIDGE (KORE). The desert partridge, used as a simile by David when pursued by Saul (Sam. xxvi. 20), and as a simile of a man who reaps what he does not sow (Jer. xvii. 11). They are very prolific, laying 20 or more eggs. There are several species in Palestine. The word KORE may also include the black partridge of India and the sand grouse, which latter is very common in Syria.



GREEK PARTRIDGE.

PARU'AH (blossoming). Father of Jehoshaphat (1 K. iv. 17).

PARVA'IM. From whence gold was brought for the ornamentation of the Temple (2 Chr. iii. 6). The Sephar of Gen. x. 30, which was a mountain, and probably the same as Ophir. Others hold that Parvaim means Eastern, as the modern Levant does, and therefore say that the text means only eastern gold. Pliny mentions a Barbatia on the Tigris (vi. 32).

PA'SACH (cut up). Son of Japhlet (1 Chr. vii. 33).

PASDAM'MIM (hand of confusion). Ephes Dammim (1 Chr. xi. 13). Where a fierce conflict with the Philistines occurred. Damun is a ruin, 3 miles east of Socho, but it is not identified beyond dispute.

PASE'AH (lame). 1. Son of Eshton (1 Chr. iv. 12).—2. Ancestor of Nethinim, who returned from captivity (Ezr. ii. 49). PHASEAH.—3. Ancestor of the Jehoiada who assisted in repairs of the "old gate" (Neh. iii. 6).

PASH'UR (prosperity). 1. Son of Malchiah, one of the princes in the court (Jer. xxxviii. 1). The name of a family of priests of the house of Malchijah (Jer. xxi. 1).—2. Another priest, son of IMMER, and governor of the house of the Lord. He was opposed to Jeremiah in Jehoiakim's reign, and for this indignity his name was changed to MAGOR-MISSABIB (terror on every side), (xx. 1–6).—3. Father of GEDALIAH 4 (XXXVIII. 1).

PAS'SAGE (Heb. EBER, MAABAR, MAEBARAH). A river ford or mountain pass (1 Sam. xiii. 23). See JORDAN.

PAS'SENGERS (Heb. OBERIM). Those who go right on their ways. "The valley of the passengers" means the valley where Gog's multitude were to be buried (Ez. xxxix. 11).

PASSION. Suffering of the LORD JESUS CHRIST on the cross (Acts i. 3).

PASS'OVER (Heb. PESACH; Greek Pascha). The first of the three great annual festivals of the Hebrews, held in Nisan, 14th to 21st. There are several distinct passages relating to the Passover in Exodus and Deuteronomy, where its original intention, the unleavened bread, the first-born sanctified, are mentioned, and the paschal lamb. In Ex. xxiii. 14–19, the paschal lamb is mentioned as PATMOS.

My Sacrifice, and the feast is called "of unleavened bread." The redemption of the first-born is noticed in xxiv. 18–26. In Deut. xvi. 1–8, the command is given to keep the passover in Jerusalem. A lamb was roasted whole—not a bone of it to be broken—and eaten entirely, the same night, with bitter herbs; if not all eaten, the remnant to be burnt. The blood of the victim was to be sprinkled on the door-post.

PAS'TOR (Heb. ROEH, a shepherd), (Jer. ii. 8); also applied to CHRIST, the Great "Shepherd" (Jer. xxvi. 31), and to the spiritual ministers of a church (Eph. iv. 11). BISHOP. ELDERS.

PAS'TURE. To those who had large flocks and herds, an abundance of pasturage and water were of great importance. ABRAHAM, ISAAC, and JACOB, moved from place to place in order to obtain these essentials. Palestine is well adapted to grazing. Figuratively it is applied to the spiritual wants of the people of God (Ps. xxiii. 2). PASTOR.

PAT'ARA. The seaport of Xanthus, near the coast, in Lycia. It was devoted to the worship of Apollo (Hor. Odes, iii. 4, 64), and the coins of the district exhibit traces of the respect paid to the divinity. Some of the ruins—among which are a triple arch of a gate of the city, and a ruined theatre, baths, temples, etc.—indicate a once populous and important city; such as it probably was at the time of Paul's visit (Acts xxi. 1, 2), when it was an emporium of commerce between the east and west coasts of the Levant (see Livy, xxxvii. 16; Beaufort's Karamania, Ionian Ant. of the Dilettanti Soc., and Fellows).

PATHE'US. PETHAHIAH, the Levite (1 Esd. ix. 23).

PATH'ROS. A district in Egypt, and a Mizraite tribe.

COIN OF TARSUS.

PA'TRIARCH (Greek patriarches). Head of a family or tribe (Heb. vii. 4; Acts vii. 8, ii. 29). It is a title of many of the ancestors of the Hebrews, as David, Abraham, Noah.

They were the head of the religious faith and practice, as well as leader and judge in civil affairs, and represented God who is the great father of all men. When the Temple worship took the place of family worship the patriarch became a sheikh, and was no longer a priest.

The Arabs still keep up this form of government in civil affairs, but not in religious.

PAT'MOS (Rev. i. 9). A rocky island, S. of Samos—one of the Sporades, in the Icarian Sea, a part of the Ægean Sea—15 ms. around; divided almost in two by a narrow isthmus, on the E. side of which are the town and harbor, and near them, on a hill, to the S. is the monastery of "St. John the Divine" (built by Alexius Comnenus). In the library of this church are many ancient MSS., two of which contain an account of John after the Ascension. There are no forest-trees, but many flowering shrubs and plants. Walnut and fruit-trees are grown in orchards; and the wine is famous for its strength and flavor. Now called Patina, and Palmosa. Pop. 4,000. (See Patmos and the Seven Churches).

PAT'ROBAS. A Christian at Rome (Rom. xvi. 14).

PATRO'CLUS (famous from his father). Father of Nicanor (2 Macc. viii. 9).

PA'U (bleating). The capital of Hadar (Gen. xxxvi. 39).

PAUL. Saul of Tarsus, afterward called Paul, was a Hebrew of the tribe of Benjamin, of a poor family, and after having been taught the trade of weaving tent-cloth, was destined for the duties of a Rabbi, and sent to the school of the celebrated Gamaliel, after a short preparation in his native city.

His scholarship may be discovered in his many references and quotations from the Scriptures, the philosophers, and poets.

His zeal for the Jewish church was displayed when Stephen was stoned, in holding the clothes of the executioners.

Tradition describes him as having a long face, high forehead, aquiline nose, and heavy eyebrows; a dark, but clear complexion, blue eyes, thin hair. The portrait engraved here was found in an ancient tomb, and was engraved on copper, in the 5th century. It is probably only an artist's ideal, and not a likeness, but interesting as a work of early Christian art.

PAUL.
Engraved on copper, an ideal portrait, found in a cemetery, dated 480, A. D.

He is one of the most wonderful characters in ancient history. Being called to a peculiar work, he was most peculiarly adapted to that work from nature, education, and circumstances. His labor in establishing the Church, occupied nearly thirty years of constant application, in traveling, preaching, writing, and working with his own hands at his trade; sometimes while in prison, chained to a guard, or in a cell, ending when he was "ready to be offered" at the age of nearly 70.

The table of events will give an idea of the extent and importance of his work.

68	In prison at Rome. Writes Second Epistle to Timothy.
	Beheaded in May or June.

The date of the beheading of Paul is placed in the 14th of Nero's reign. Dionysius, bishop of Corinth, A. D. 170, says that Peter and Paul went to Italy, preached together there, and suffered martyrdom about the same time. Caius of Rome, in the 2d century, names the grave of Peter on the Vatican, and of Paul on the Ostian way, and others, as Eusebius, Tertullian, and Jerome, agree in this account. The locality around Paul's grave is now used as a cemetery for strangers who die in Rome.

The principle which harmonizes all the acts, and preaching, and letters of Paul, was a belief in Jesus as the Divine Spirit—a living Master, intimately related to every living soul, of whose Gospel he was the special Messenger. This purified his love of his own people, and opened his heart toward all mankind.

PAVIL'ION. A general term for an awning or tent. Three different words are thus translated in the Scriptures: "He shall hide me in his pavilion," in Ps. xxvii. The Heb. סוֹךְ means a hut. In Jer. xliii. 10, Nebuchadnezzar is alluded to as "spreading his royal pavilion"—the word SHAFRUR or SHAFRIR is the one used—meaning bright, or rich tapestry, famed in Babylonian times.

PE (PE, mouth). The 17th letter of the Hebrew alphabet (Ps. cxix). WRITING.

PEACE (Heb. SHALOM, soundness, health, welfare, prosperity). "Peace be unto thee" (Judg. vi. 23; 1 K. ii. 33; Ps. xxxvii. 11, 37, etc.). Peace as the opposite of war: "And I will give peace in the land" (Lev. xxvi. 6; Judg. iv. 17, etc.). Peace, as friendship, in Ps. xxviii. 3, xli. 9. "Peace be unto you," was a common form of Eastern salutation (John xx. 19, 21, 26, etc.); "Your peace!" (Matt. x. 13). See SALUTATION.

PEACE-OFFERING (Heb. SHELEM); (Lev. iii.–vii. 11). There were three kinds: 1. Praise or thanksgiving. 2. Votive. 3. Voluntary or free-will offerings. The sacrifice was accompanied by an offering of "unleavened cakes mingled with oil, and unleavened wafers anointed with oil, of fine flour, fried" (Lev. vii. 12–13). From the peace-offering the fat was burned on the altar; the right shoulder of the animal sacrificed was given to the priest; the breast was a wave-offering. The rest was to be eaten by the offerer upon the day of offering. This was the characteristic of the peace-offering, suggesting, figuratively, peace with God. See OFFERING; SACRIFICE.

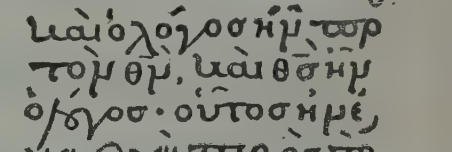
PEA'COCK (Heb. TUKIIM). Imported into Palestine through the Tarshish navies of King Solomon (1 K. x. 22; 2 Chr. ix. 21). The importation of peacocks is named with that of ivory and apes. The birds were probably brought from India or Ceylon, where there is reason to believe the navies visited. (See TARSHISH.) The Cingalese word (tokei) for peacock, bears a close resemblance to the Hebraic.

PEARL (Heb. GABISH). They are formed inside the shells of several species of mollusca, and consist of carbonate of lime and animal matter; are hard and smooth, and have a silvery-white lustre. Pearls were held among the most precious stones in the ancient world. Their beauty is due to Nature, alone, as they are not improved by Art. The "pearl of great price" is a fine specimen yielded by the pearl oyster, which is found in the Persian Gulf (Matt. xiii. 45, 46).



GREEK MS. A. D 1000.—John i. 1, 2.

PED'AHEL (God delivers). Son of Ammihud (Num. xxxiv. 28).

PEDAH'ZUR (God delivers). Father of Gamaliel (Num. i. 10).

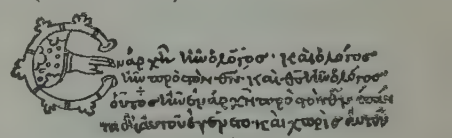
PEDAI'AH (Jah delivers). 1 Father of Zebudah (2 K. xxiii. 36).—2. Father of ZERUBBABEL, brother of SALATHIEL (1 Chr. iii. 17–19).—3. Descendant of Parosh (Neh. iii. 25).—4. A priest who assisted Ezra (viii. 4).—5. Ancestors of Sallu (xi. 7).—6. A treasurer (xiii. 13).—7. Father of Joel (1 Chr. xxvii. 20).



GREEK MS., A. D. 960.—John i. 1–3.

PEDIGREE. GENEALOGY (Num. i. 18).

PEEL, TO (Heb MARAT). "Peeled" in Ezr. xxix. 18, translates literally that the skin of the shoulder was peeled by the carrying of earth to form earth-works at the siege of Tyre. In Is. xviii. 2, 7, "a nation scattered and peeled" is variously rendered. Gesenius suggests "a people drawn out and smoothed."

PE'KAH (open-eyed). Son of Remaliah, captain of Pekahiah whom he assassinated, and succeeded to his throne B. C. 758, and thus became eighteenth king of Israel. He reigned twenty years, in the seventeenth of which he combined with Rezin, king of Damascus, against Ahaz, king of Judah, (2 K. xvi. and 2 Chr. xxviii.).

PEKAHI'AH (Jah has opened his eyes). Son and successor of MENAHEM; was the seventeenth king of Israel. He reigned two years, and was killed by Pekah, his general, who succeeded him. His death took place B. C. 758 (2 K. xv. 22–25).

PE'KOD. A name given to the Chaldæans in Jer. l. 21 and Ez. xxiii. 23. The meaning of this word is uncertain; in one sense it would appear to be to visit, to punish. In another it means a prefect (officer).

PELAI'AH (whom Jah distinguished). 1. Son of Elioenai (1 Chr. iii. 24).—2. A Levite who assisted Ezra (Neh. viii. 7), and also sealed the covenant (x. 10).

PELALI'AH (whom Jah judges). Son of Amzi, a priest (Neh. xi. 12).

PELATI'AH (whom Jah delivers). 1. Son of Hananiah (1 Chr. iii. 21).—2. A captain of the Simeonites (iv. 42).—3. One who sealed the covenant (Neh. x. 22).—4. Son of Benaiah (Ez. xi. 5–12, 13).

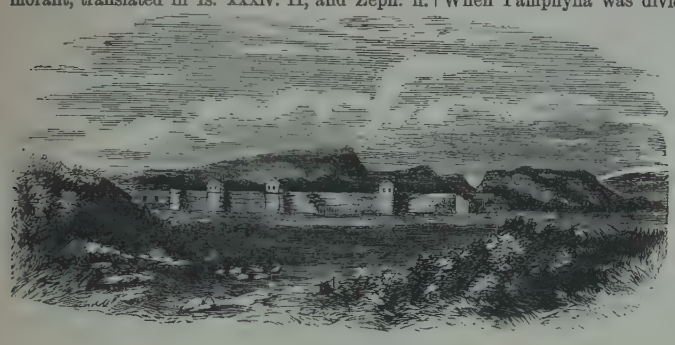
PE'LEG (division). Son of EBER; brother of JOKTAN (Gen. x. 25). CHRONOLOGY.

PE'LET (deliverance). 1. Son of Jahdai (1 Chr. ii. 47).—2. Son of AZMAVETH 3 (xii. 3).

PE'LETH (swiftness). 1. Father of On who joined in the Rebellion (Num. xvi. 1).—2. Son of Jonathan (1 Chr. ii. 33).

PEL'ETHITES (Heb. PELETHI, courier). Mentioned with the Cherethites: they were the body-guard of King David (2 Sam. viii. 18; xxii. 23). See CHERETHITES.

PEL'ICAN (Heb. KAATH, to vomit). The bird is supposed to be so named from its habit of emptying the pouch under the beak to feed its young. Cormorant, translated in Is. xxxiv. 11, and Zeph. ii. 14, means pelican. It is mentioned as among unclean birds in Lev. xi. 18, and Deut. xiv. 17. "A pelican in the wilderness" (Ps. cii. 6) as a sign of desolation for the solitary habits of the bird and its inhabiting desolated spots.



PERGA.

PEL'ONITE, THE. Two of David's strong men are called Pelonites; Helez and Ahijah (1 Chr. xi. 27, 36). "Mr. So-and-so."

PELU'SIUM. A city of EGYPT (Ez. xxx. 15).

PEN'IEL, PENUEL (face of El—God). (Gen. xxxii. 30). Where Jacob wrestled with a man, who changed Jacob's name to ISRAEL. It does not appear again until after 500 yrs. when Gideon, on his way from Succoth, on the Jordan, chasing Zeba and Zalmunna, being faint from want of food, asked the people of this place for bread for his soldiers, and was denied (Judg. viii. 8). He destroyed the tower of the city on his return (ver. 17). Jeroboam rebuilt the place (1 K. xii. 25). It has never been mentioned since, and is now lost.

PENIN'NAH (coral). Wife of ELKANAH (1 Sam. i. 2). HANNAH.

PEN'NY, PENNY-WORTH. Refer to MONEY. Gr. denarion; Roman denarius.

PEN'TATEUCH. See HISTORY OF THE BOOKS.

PEN'TECOST. See FESTIVALS.

PENU'EL. 1. Founder of GEDOR (1 Chr. iv. 4). —2. A chief, son of Shashak (viii. 25).

PE'OR (the opening). A mountain in Moab, from the top of which Balaam saw Israel encamped in the plain below (Num. xxiii. 28). There was a shrine, or holy high-place, on the summit, and the town of Beth Peor at its foot (Deut. iii. 29). Baal Peor was named from this mountain.—2. There is a Beit Fughur, 5 ms. S. W. of Bethlehem, in Wady Biar, which is included in the list of towns in Judah, in the Septuagint, as Phagor (Josh. xv. 59).

PERA'ZIM, MOUNT (of divisions). Isaiah refers to it in his warnings of the divine vengeance which was threatened (xxviii. 21). It must have been on some of the hights bordering the plain of Rephaim; and on its top a high place to Baal (Baal Perazim, 2 Sam. v. 20).

PERDITION. DAMNATION.

PE'RES (a breach), (Dan. v. 28). Phā'rez, a fragment.

PE'RESH (dung). Son of Machir (1 Chr. vii. 16).

PE'REZ. Son of Judah. The children of Perez were of importance for several centuries (1 Chr. xxvii. 3).

PEREZ-UZZAH (Uzzah—broken). (See NACHON'S threshing-floor).

PER'FECT. Ten different words are translated perfect in the Old and the New Testament.

PERFUMES. Were used freely by the Orientals (Prov. xxvii. 9). The Hebrews made their perfumes from SPICES imported from Arabia, and from aromatic plants of their own country. Perfumes were used in the Temple-service in INCENSE and OINTMENT (Ex. xxx. 22–38). They were used in private life both on the person and on garments (Ps. xlv. 8), and beds (Prov. vii. 17). When a royal person went abroad "pillars of smoke" were thrown about his path (Cant. iii. 6). Perfume was not used in times of mourning (Is. iii. 24). See OINTMENT.

PER'GA. The ancient capital of Pamphylia, on the river Cestrus, 7 ms. from the sea. Diana (Artemis) was worshiped there, in a fine temple near the town. The coins of the city bear figures of Diana and the temple. Paul landed here from Paphos (Acts xiii. 13), and visited the city a second time on his return from the interior (xiv. 25). When Pamphylia was divided, Perga was made the capital of one section, and Side of the other. Called by the Turks Eski-Kalessi.

PERGA'MOS. In Mysia 3 ms. N. of the ancient Caicus. (See SEVEN CHURCHES).

PERI'DA (kernel). Ancestor of children of Solomon's servants who returned from captivity (Neh. vii. 57). PERUDA.

PER'IZZITE, THE (rustic). Ancient inhabitants of Canaan (Gen. xv. 20); of the six tribes (Canaanites, Hittites, Amorites, Perizzites, Hivites, and Jebusites), who inhabited the lands west of Jordan previous to the conquest of Joshua (Josh. xvii. 15). They were scattered, not concentrating around cities. They were subdued by Joshua but not dispersed, as they appear in the history of Solomon (1 K. ix. 20, and in Ezr. ix. 1).

PERSEP'OLIS. The capital of Persia, and partly burnt by Alexander, the temples—built of stone—only escaping. Antiochus Epiphanes attempted to capture and rob the temples, but was defeated (1 Macc. vi. 1, 2; 2 Macc. ix. 2). This city has been supposed to be identical with Passargadæ, the capital of Cyrus; but that city was 42 ms. N. of Persepolis, at a place now called Murgaub, where there is shown a tomb of Cyrus. The site of Persepolis is called Chehl-Minar (forty pillars, or minarets), from the remaining pillars of the palace built by Darius and Xerxes.

PERSEPOLIS.

PER'SEUS. Son of Philip V and last king of Macedonia. He continued the war with Rome after his father's death (B. C. 179). He was defeated B. C. 168 and died at Alba (1 Macc. viii. 5).

PER'SIA (pure). The province of Fars—Farsistan; is now not very large; and north of the Persian Gulf. The ancient empire extended north to Media, south to the Persian Gulf, east to Caramania, and west to Susiana; and in its greatest prosperity, from India to Egypt and Thrace (Ez. xxxviii. 5). The north country is mountainous, with very few valleys or plains, but very picturesque, and generally fertile, among which is the famous Shiraz of Arabian poetry. That part bordering the Gulf is sandy, like Arabia, and not very productive.

PER'SIAN (Heb. PARSI). The Persians were probably of the same race as the Medes, both of the Aryan root. Their mention only occurs in the later periods of biblical history. In Daniel, Esther, Nehemiah and Ezra, a very complete idea of the Persian court and administration is presented. The vizier or secretary of state was invested with great power as illustrated in the cases of Haman and Mordecai. (See MORDECAI). The royal signet was the badge of this office. The remarkable influence which Esther and Mordecai exercised over Xerxes was the result of the noble qualities of mind and body, for which the Hebrew race was, and still is, conspicuous.

PER'SIS (Gr. destroying). A Christian woman at Rome (Rom. xvi. 12).

PERU'DA (kernel), (Ezr. ii. 55).

PES'TLE, PESTILS. MORTAR (2 Chr. xxvi. 14; Prov. xxvii. 22).

KING AND QUEEN OF PERSIA.

PE'TER. Originally SIMEON, or SIMON, heard. (Cephas, a stone—Peter, a rock). The son of Jonas, and a native of Bethsaida, in Galilee. He was married (his wife's name was Concordia?) at the time of his call to follow Jesus; and lived with his mother-in-law, at Capernaum. He was a fisherman, and was fishing with his father and brother, Andrew, when Jesus found him. Peter and his brother Andrew were, probably, disciples of John the Baptist. Peter, James, and John, only, of the twelve, were witnesses of the transfiguration and the agony in Gethsemane. It seems that Peter was more intimate than any of the other apostles with Jesus, for the tax-collector asked him if his Master paid tribute; and to him and John was given the duty of providing the lamb for the paschal supper, although Judas carried the purse. Peter walked on the Sea of Galilee, but his heart failed, and he cried for help. He frequently declared his faith in Jesus, although he was disappointed that the Christ was not the temporal prince that the Jews had looked for. He first refused to have Jesus wash his feet; but when he learned that it was a symbol, he wished to have his hands and head washed also. He boldly and vauntingly avowed his attachment to Jesus, and offered to lay down his life for Him, and then disgracefully denied Him the same day, and wept bitterly when conscious of what he had done. Jesus forgave him, accepted his renewed professions, and gave him a new commission to work in his cause. After this time his character changed. Instead of a hasty zeal, he showed a sober dignity. He first proclaimed salvation through a crucified Saviour, and, when arrested with the others, boldly declared his faith and purpose before the Sanhedrin. He, by a miracle, punished with death two who tried an experiment on the omniscience of the Holy Ghost; and rebuked Simon the magician, at Samaria, who wished to buy the secret of working miracles. At Joppa he was taught, in a vision, that the ancient ritual distinctions of clean and unclean were abolished. Herod put him in prison, at Jerusalem, and he was released by an angel. He first advocated an exemption from the ceremonial law of Moses. Paul rebuked him for timidly dissembling on the question of the equality of the Jews and Gentiles, at Antioch. Here the Gospel history ends, and we have tradition only for the rest of his life, which says that he traveled (as Paul did) among the cities and churches to which his epistles are addressed, in Pontus, Galatia, Bithynia, Cappadocia, and Asia; that he visited Rome, and was made bishop of the church there, and suffered martyrdom under Nero, being crucified with his head downward.

COIN OF PERSEUS.

PETHAHI'AH (Jah sets free). 1. A priest of the nineteenth course (1 Chr. xxiv. 16).—2. A Levite (Neh. ix. 5).—3. Son of Meshezabeel (xi. 24).

PE'THOR (a table). A town where Balaam resided (Num. xxii. 5).

PETHU'EL (man of God). Father of Joel the prophet (Joel i. 1).

PE'TRA (Gr. rock). The Greek translation of Sela, a celebrated Edomite city (Is. xvi. 1).

PETRA. EDOM.

PEUL'THAI (wages of Jah). Son of Obed-edom (1 Chr. xxvi. 5).

PHA'LEC. PELEG (Luke iii. 35).

PHAL'LU. PALLU (Gen. xlvi. 9).

PHAL'TI. PALTI, son of Laish, to whom Saul gave Michal (1 Sam. xxv. 44).

PHANU'EL. Father of Anna (Luke ii. 36).

PHA'RAOH (Heb. PAR'OH, the king; from PHRA, the sun). The title of the kings of Egypt. The Egyptian king represents the sun-god. 1. The earliest mention of Pharaoh is in the history of Abraham (Gen. xii. 10–20); probably one of the shepherd-kings.—2. The Pharaoh of Joseph (Gen. xxxvii. 36.)—3. The Pharaoh of the oppression, "who knew not Joseph".—4. The Pharaoh who enslaved the Israelites is supposed by some to have been Rameses II: by others, as of Assyrian descent, from Is. lii. 4. The Exodus is dated in his time. 5. Pharaoh the father-in-law of Mered (1 Chr. iv. 18).—6. Pharaoh the father-in-law of Hadad (1 K. xi. 18) (see HADAD); perhaps Osochor.—7. Pharaoh father-in-law of Solomon, PSUSENNES II (1 K. iii. 1).—8. Pharaoh, the ally of the Jews against Sennacherib (Is. xxxvi. 6)—9. PHARAOH-NECHO (Jer. xlvi. 2). This and the Pharaoh which follows are the only two mentioned with proper names. He appears to have been an enterprising king, and to have reigned 16 years. He opposed the Assyrians; defeating and fatally wounding Josiah, King of Judah (2 K. xxiii. 29, 30). See, also, 2 K. xxiii. 30–34; 2 Chr. xxxvi. 1–4. This battle lost to Pharaoh all his Asiatic dominions (2 K. xxiv. 7).—10 PHARAOH-HOPHRA (son of the sun) was the second successor of Necho, and mounted the throne B. C. 589.

PHARAOH, WIFE OF. Named Tahpenes; wife of the 6th Pharaoh.

PHARAOH'S DAUGHTER. Three daughters of Pharaoh appear in the Scriptures: 1. As the discoverer of the infant Moses, daughter of 3d Pharaoh (Ex. ii. 5-10).—2. Daughter of 5th Pharaoh—named Bithiah; she was wife of Mena, an Israelite (1 Chr. iv. 18).—3. Daughter of 7th Pharaoh; married to Solomon (1 K. iii. 1, viii. 8, ix. 24). A house was built for her (1 K. vii. 8, ix. 24).

PHAR'ATHONI (1 Macc. ix. 50). In the S. of Judæa? Lost.

PHA'RES. Son of Judah (Matt. i. 3).

PHAREZ (a breach). 1. Twin son with ZERAH 1 of Judah. The first-born of the twin sons of Judah by his daughter-in-law Tamar (Gen. xxxviii. 29). 2. In the line of David. In Ruth iv. 12 occurs the passage—"Let thy house be like the house of Phares, whom Tamar bare unto Judah!"—3. PHARAZITES (Num. xxvi. 60).

PHARI'RA (1 Esd. v. 33). PERUDA.

PHARISEES (Heb. PERUSHIM). One of the three sects of Judaism in the time of Christ. The name means separated by special works. The sect included all Hebrews who separated themselves from every kind of Levitical impurity, following the Mosaic law of purity.

They are first noticed as a sect about 150 B. C., but their origin is not recorded.

Their influence was very great, ruling, beyond question, the Sanhedrin, and all Jewish society, except the slight opposition of the Sadducees, even overawing the civil courts; and as they had gathered to themselves all the worst features of Judaism in the time of Christ, and used this against any reform, and especially against the Messiah, it was needful that Jesus should protest against them; and the contest resulting from his protest grew fiercer and more relentless on the part of the Pharisees, ending only with the crucifixion.

PHA'ROSH (PAROSH, Ezr. viii. 3).

PHAR'PAR (swift). One of the two rivers mentioned by Naaman as rivers of Damascus, better than all the waters of Israel (2 K. v. 12). The Awaj is divided from the Barada (see ABANA) by the ridge of the Jebel Aswad, which is no where less than 8 ms. wide. It has two sources in the S. E. slopes of Hermon—one near the village of Arny, and the other near Beit Jenn, the two streams uniting below Sasa—and empties into the Hijaneh, the most southerly of the lakes E. of Damascus. There are nearly 50 villages in its course, containing about 18,000 people (Porter, Five Years in Damascus).

PHAR'ZITES, THE. Descendants of PHAREZ (Num. xxvi. 20).

PHAZE'AN. PASEAH 2 (Neh. vii. 51).

PHASE'LIS. In Lycia, near Pamphylia, on the coast. It was a city of importance in the 6th century B. C., but became a resort of pirates. It was a convenient port, on account of the lofty mountain Solyma (8,000 ft.), which was only 4 ms. back of the city, affording a landmark for sailors. Homer mentions the Solyma range in the Odyssey. The Romans broke up the pirates' stronghold, under Publius Servilius Isauricus, B. C. 75, and Pompey. The Romans required all their allies to deliver up to Simon, the high-priest, all Jewish exiles, naming this city among others (1 Macc. xv. 23).

PHAS'IRON. An Arab tribe (1 Macc. ix. 66).

PHAS'SARON. PASHUR (1 Esd. v. 25).

PHE'BE (pure, bright). (Goddess of the moon). A servant of the church at CENCHREÆ (Rom. xvi. 1, 2). DEACONESS.

PHE'NICE (the date-palm). Town on the S. coast of Crete, now called Lutro. Paul was on the way there from Fair Havens when the storm drove the vessel into Adria (Acts xxvii. 12). The White Mountains rise 9,000 ft. near the bay, which is a safe harbor in winter.

PHENIC'IANS. See PHŒNICIA.

PHER'ESITES. PERIZZITES (1 Esd. viii. 69).

PHIBE'SETH (Ez. xxx. 17).

PHI'CHOL (mighty). Captain in the army of ABIMELECH (Gen. xxi. 22, 23).

PHILADELPHIA.

PHILADEL'PHIA. In Lydia, near Phrygia. (See SEVEN CHURCHES). There is a village on the ancient site called Allah Shehr—"City of God."

PHILAR'CHES. The name of an office. Commander of the cavalry (2 Macc. viii. 32).

PHILE'MON (Gr. affectionate). A Christian, probably a native of Colossæ, to whom Paul addressed the Epistle. See HISTORY OF THE BOOKS. In this Epistle Paul recommends the granting pardon to Onesimus, who conveyed the Epistle, with those to the Colossians and Ephesians, from Rome to Colossæ. See Philemon i. 2, iv. 7, 19, etc., and Col. iv. 9, 17. See ONESIMUS. Philemon was probably a man of wealth, influence and liberality.

PHILE'MON, EPISTLE TO. See HISTORY OF THE BOOKS.

PHILE'TUS. An apostate Christian, who joined with HYMENŒUS and ALEXANDER (1 Tim. i. 20, and 2 Tim. ii. 18).

PHIL'IP (fond of horses). 1. Father of Alexander the Great (1 Macc. i. 1, vi. 2). King of Macedonia, B. C. 359–336.—2. Governor at Jerusalem (B. C. 170). He was very cruel toward the Jews (2 Macc. v. 22).—3. The foster-brother (ix. 29) of Antiochus Epiphanes, regent of Syria and guardian of Antiochus V (B. C. 164), son of the king (1 Macc. vi. 14, 15, 55, 56, 63).—4. Philip V, king of Macedonia, B. C. 220–179 (1 Macc. viii. 5).

PHIL'IP. One of the twelve apostles. A native of Bethsaida, in Galilee (John i. 44). He became a disciple of John the Baptist, and was the fourth of the twelve in the order of his call. He introduced Nathanael, who was afterwards called Bartholomew, the fifth apostle. Jesus asked Philip where bread (vi. 5) was to be found for feeding the 5000, and Philip did not even suspect the real source; nor did he seem to know the spiritual character of Jesus and his teaching much later, when he said to him, "Lord, show us the Father," (xiv. 8), and he had heard the voice from heaven, which was sent for the special instruction of such as were so slow to perceive the light—although he was at Cana when the water was made wine. He consulted with Andrew before gratifying the request of the Jews from Greece to see Jesus (out of curiosity only?) Philip was with the other apostles in that "upper room" (Acts i. 13) at Jerusalem, after the ascension, and on the day of Pentecost.

Tradition says he preached in Phrygia. There is no account of his death.

PHILIPPIANS, EPISTLE TO. See HISTORY OF THE BOOKS.

PHILIP, THE EVANGELIST. A resident (in the latter part of his life) of Cæsarea, where he had a wife and family, of whom four daughters are mentioned as singers. He was one of the SEVEN DEACONS of the Church in Judæa (Acts vi. 5, viii. 29). After Stephen was stoned he went to Samaria, where he baptized the magician Simon. From there he was sent by Peter to Gaza, and on the way (at Ain Karem?) he baptized the Ethiopian eunuch (Acts viii. 26–40). His tour extended from Azotus to Cæsarea, where he settled, and was visited by Paul, Agabus, and others (xxi. 8, 9). His death is not recorded.

PHILIP'PI. In Macedonia, 9 miles from the sea, on the banks of the deep, rapid stream Gangites (now Angista). Paul says: "On the Sabbath we went out of the city by the river side, where prayer was wont to be made" (Acts xvi. 13). The ancient walls can be traced along the course of the river; and there are remains of a gate leading to a bridge across the stream. Philippi was a Roman military colony, originally named Krenides (springs), or Datum; and the Jews were probably not permitted to worship inside of the walls.

PHILIS'TIA (emigrant). PALESTINE (Ps. xl. 8). A region extending from Joppa, 40 miles south, to Gerar, being 10 miles wide at the north and 20 at the south, and generally called SHEFELAH in the Scriptures. The prophets describe the people as the Philistines from Caphtor (Amos ix. 7), the remnant of the maritime district (Jer. xlvii. 4); and Moses as the Caphtorim that came out of Caphtor (Deut. ii. 23) and drove out the Avim. This would require us to read Gen. x. 14, "and Caphtorim, whence came Philistim." (See CAPHTOR). The most reasonable supposition seems to be that Philistia was settled by emigrants from Egypt, dating from the time of Amenoph, B. C. 1970, up to the time of the Judges in Israel, B. C. 1200.

Their religion was similar to that of Phœnicia—nature-worship. Their name for God was Elohim; but they had other special divinites, such as Dagon, Derketo, Baal Zebub, and Ashtoreth, whose images were carried with them on their campaigns, besides charms which they wore on their persons (2 Macc. xii. 40). Josephus speaks of a council of 500 rulers at Gaza (Ant. xiii. 13, 3). Baal was a union of human (the head) and fish-like forms.

Oracles, priests, sorcerers, altars, temples, etc., were scattered all over the land.

PHIL'ISTINES (Heb. PELESHETH, wandering). See PHILISTIA.

PHILOL'OGUS (learned). A Christian at Rome (Rom. xvi. 15).

PHILOS'OPHY. There was no Hebrew system philosophy. The divine law furnished the rule, about which no speculation was needed. Facts built upon a species of divine philosophy, which led from God to man. The Greek philosophy led the mind from man up towards God. The philosophy of the Hebrews was developed in their national life; their books recording acts and not thoughts. The two books, Job and Ecclesiastes, have many philosophical thoughts. See HISTORY OF THE BOOKS.

SIDON.

The Pharisees were Stoics in their philosophy (see PHARISEES). The Sadducees advocated human freedom in its purest and widest sense (see SADDUCEES). The Essenes taught a system of mystic asceticism (see ESSENES), which, with the other two sects, completed the cycle of doctrine.

Much interesting detail on these points may be found in the fourth book of Maccabees (see HIST. OF THE BOOKS).

PHIN'EES. Gr. form of PHINEHAS. 1. PHINEHAS 1 (1 Esd. v. 5; viii. 2, 29).—2. PHINEHAS 2 (2 Esd. i. 2 a).—3. PHINEHAS 3 (1 Esd. viii. 63).—4. PASEAH 2 (v. 31).

PHINE'HAS (mouth of brass). 1. Son of ELEAZAR 1 (Ex. vi. 25) and grandson of Aaron (Ex. vi. 25). He was promised the priesthood in his family forever for his services during the plague in Egypt (Num. xxv. 7; 10–13).

PHŒ'BE. Referred to by Paul in Rom. xvi. 1, as "our sister which is a servant of the church at Cenchreæ." She was probably the bearer of the Epistle to the Romans.

PHŒNIC'IA. Phœnice (phoinix—palm tree). Phoinos, purple, another derivation of the name. Phœnix, the son of Agenor, and brother of Cadmus, is also honored as the source. This was the Greek name, while the native name was KENAAN, as may be seen on a coin of Laodicea, of the time of Antiochus Epiphanes; and from them—the strongest race—the country was called by the Hebrews the Land of Canaan. The country extended from the Ladder of Tyre, or rather the Ras el Abyad (White Cape), to the Nahr el Auly, above Sidon, 28 miles; with a width at Sidon of two miles, and at Tyre of five; and was called by Josephus the great plain of Sidon (Ant. v. 3, 1). Sidon and Tyre were 20 miles apart. (See SIDON and TYRE). Sarepta was a colony of Sidon, 8 miles south; and Tyre was either a colony of Sidon or received the honor of a change of the chief rule to it, after the war with the Philistines, because it was a stronger place than Sidon. Perhaps, at this time, the island was fortified. There were also colonies in Cyprus, the Grecian Isles, Lybia, and in Spain. Phœnicia was extended, in later times, north to the island of Aradus, and Antaradus, the boundary being the river Eleutherus, making a coast of 120 miles. Beirut is now the chief, and almost the only port of this region. Gebal was anciently famous for its ship-builders, sailors (Ez. xxvii. 9), and workers in stone. Tripolis (now Tarabulus) was colonized in three distinct districts a few rods apart, each walled in and named after the cities from whence the emigrants came—Tyre, Sidon and Aradus. Aradus (Arvad, Gen. x. 18) was on a small island, colonized from Sidon. Massive ruins are still standing there. Carthage, in Africa, was its most famous colony. (For rivers, etc., see LEBANON).

The language was Semitic (that is, from Shem), to which family belong the Arabic, Aramaic and the Hebrew, which are as nearly allied as are English and German. No other language was so widely spread, because of their mariners and colonists. The Greeks gave the honor of the invention of letters to the Phœnicians, having first received 16 letters from Cadmus (eastern or olden). (See ALPHABETS). The letters are supposed to have been originally rude pictures, in outline, of natural objects, as—Aleph, an ox's head; Beth, a house; Gimel, a camel (the hump-back); Daleth, the tent-door; Lamed, an ox-goad; Ajin, an eye; Caph, the back of the head; Reish, the head; and Tau, a cross. The Egyptian phonetic characters were made on the same principle. The names of the Greek letters which end in a, are Aramaic in form.

The religion was a nature-worship, recognizing male and female powers; whose symbols were the sun, moon and planets (7), which has been said to have been the most complete and beautiful form of idolatry ever devised.

Twice were a large number of the priests of Baal destroyed by a reformer in Israel; by Elijah, who killed 450 on Mt. Carmel, and by Jehu, who gathered all the Baal worshipers in Israel, and in true Oriental style gave each one a garment for the grand occasion, and then killed every one, and burned the images and destroyed the temple of Baal (2 K. x. 18–28).

The country has always had a great many tribes, each holding to its peculiar religion, and they now live together, but separate, without friendship or mutual trust, suspecting and hating every other faith but their own; and this want of common union is the great obstacle to their progress.

CARTHAGE.

PHI'SON. PISON (Ecclus. xxiv. 25).

PHLE'GON (burning). A Christian at Rome (Rom. xvi. 14).

PHO'ROS. PAROSH (1 Esd. v. 9).

PHRY'GIA (parched). Asia Minor. Inland, S. of Bithynia and Galatia, W. of Cappadocia and Lycaonia, N. of Lycia and Pisidia, and E. of Caria, Lydia, and Mysia. The empire once included nearly all Asia Minor. The surface is level, with few ridges, and very productive of corn, fruit, wine, cattle, sheep, and horses. Laodicea, Hierapolis, and Colossæ (and perhaps Antioch) were the chief cities, mentioned in the New Testament.

PHUD. PHUT (Judg. ii. 23).

PHU'RAH (bough). Servant of GIDEON on his visit to the camp of the Midianites (Judg. vii. 10, 11).

PHU'RIM. PURIM (Esth. xi. 1).

PHUT, PUT. Son of HAM (Gen. x. 6). For the country and people, see LEHABIM.

PHU'VAH (mouth). Son of Issachar (Gen. xlvi. 13). PUAH.

PHYGEL'LUS (fugitive). A Christian (2 Tim. i. 15), a native of Asia, who deserted Paul at Rome in a critical time.

SARCOPHAGUS AT SIDON.

PHYLAC'TERY (safeguard). FRONTLETS.

PHYSICIAN. MEDICINE.

PI-BES'ETH (Egyptian bahest). Bubastis is the Greek form. On the Pelusiac branch of the Nile. Called, also, Bubastite, and named from the goddess whom the Greeks identified with Artemis (Coptic Pascht). The city was built on an artificial elevation, raised by criminals (chiefly), from the mud taken from the canals leading from this place to Suez. Pascht was the goddess of fire, and had a grand temple in her honor, to which multitudes flocked yearly on pilgrimage. Herodotus describes the city very minutely (ii. 5–9). The only remains are a few stones of the finest red granite, and heaps of broken pottery, mud banks, etc. When Ezekiel prophesied its destruction it was in its period of greatest prosperity (xxx. 17).

PICTURE. Idolatrous representations, or images (Is. ii. 16).

PIECE OF GOLD (2 K. v. 5). See MONEY.

PIECE OF MONEY (Matt. xvii. 27). STATER.

PIECE OF SILVER. "The piece of money paid Judas is represented by the tetradrachm of Antiochus III, which was equal to a shekel. (See cut on page 8.) (Matt. xxv. 15). See MONEY.

PI'ETY (L. pietas). Dutiful conduct toward God, parents, etc., (1 Tim. v. 4).

PIG'EON. See DOVE.

PI-HAHI'ROTH (mouth of the caverns, or if Egyptian, where sedge grows). Near Suez, a camping-place during the Exodus (xiv. 2, 9). There is a place there now called Ghuweibet el boos (the bed of reeds).

PI'LATE, PON'TIUS. (L. Pilatus, probably from pilum, armed with a javelin. Pontius—probably of Gens Pontia a plebeian clan of Samnite origin) The sixth Roman procurator of Judæa, the successor of Valerius Gratus, under Tiberius Cæsar (Luke iii. 1). Tacitus writes "The author of that name (Christian) or sect was Christ, who was capitally punished in the reign of Tiberius by Pontius Pilate." The early fathers, Justin Martyr, Eusebius, Tertullian and others, say that Pilate sent to Rome an official report of the trial of Christ. Pilate oppressed the Jews, and violated the Roman law which respected the Jewish religion; of this there is the especial evidence of Josephus (Ant. xviii. 3, 1). He disregarded the law in having brought into Jerusalem effigies upon the ensigns, and by an attempt to force their introduction. Also in appropriating sacred money or treasure for the construction of an aqueduct (Luke xiii. 1). During the feasts the Roman governors resided in Jerusalem to preserve order. Thus at the feast of the Passover, Pilate was in Jerusalem in his official residence, Herod's palace. It was to the gates of this palace that the Jews brought Christ in the early morning, they not entering the house of a Gentile at the period of Passover (John xviii. 28). Pilate therefore came out to hear the indictment. (See JESUS.) Pilate assumed his office about A. D. 25. After ten years an appeal from the Samaritans (whom he had oppressed) to Vitellus, the President of Syria, caused him to be sent to Rome, to answer the charges brought against him. Tiberius died ere he reached Rome. It is generally held that he committed suicide from mortification.

PIL'DASH (flame of fire). Son of Nahor (Gen. xxii. 22).

PILE'HA (a slice). A chief who sealed the covenant (Neh. x. 24).

PIL'LAR (Heb. AMMUD; Gr. stulos). Pillars were an important feature in Oriental architecture: 1. For monuments (Gen. xxviii. 18). 2. In building (Judg. xvi. 25). 3. As objects of idolatrous worship (Deut. xii. 3). 4. Figuratively or symbolically (Ex. xxxiii. 9–10).

PILL'ED (peeled), (Gen. xxx. 37, 38). PEELED.

PIL'LON (Heb. CEBIR, braided), (1 Sam. xix. 13, 16).—2. Heb. pl. CESATHOTH, cushions (Ez. xiii. 18, 20).—3. Heb. pl. MERAASHOTH, under the head (Gen. xxviii. 11, 18).—4. Gr. proskephalaion, a cushion for the head (Mark iv. 28).

PIL'TAI. The head of the priestly house of Modiah (Neh. xii. 17).

PINE, PINE'-TREE. 1. Heb. TIDHAR (Is. xli. 19). Several varieties of pine grew upon Mt. Lebanon. 2. SHEMEN (Neh. viii. 15), rendered "oil-tree." See CEDAR.

PIN'NACLE (Matt. iv. 5). Some high part of the Temple, or of the courts or wings belonging to it. Josephus says Herod built the royal gallery on the S. part, from the top of which, if any one looked down, he would become dizzy (Wars, v. 5, Ant. xv. 11, 5, xx. 9, 7). Late explorations have discovered the actual hight of the foundation wall to be about 150 ft., and the Temple buildings must have been 50 to 75 ft. more; making over 200 ft. (287 ft. —Barclay, City of Great King, 251). Eusebius says that James, brother of Jesus, was precipitated from this hight.

PI'NON (darkness). , Founder of a tribe of Edom (Gen. xxxvi. 4).

PIPE (Heb. CHALIL). One of the simplest, but most prominent, of MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.

PI'PER (Rev. xviii. 22). MUSIC.

PI'RA (1 Esd. v. 19). Repetition of CAPHIRA.

PI'RAM (indomitable). King of Jarmuth (Josh. x. 3, 27).

PIR'ATHON (chief). Where Abdon was buried, in the land of Ephraim (Judg. xii. 13, 15). Benaiah, one of David's captains, was from this city (2 Sam. xxiii. 30). Now called Ferata, 6 ms. S. W. of Shechem, in Wada Aly, near the foot of the mountain Shekh Abraham (Rob. iii. 134).

PIRA'THONITE. Native of PIRATHON. 1. ABDON 1 (the judge), (Judg. xii. 13, 15).—2. BENAIAH 2 (2 Sam. xxiii. 30).

PIS'GAH (to divide—i. e., isolated peak). Mountain in Moab (Deut. iii. 17, xxxiv. 1; Josh. xii. 3, xiii. 20). Although minutely described in the Scriptures, yet it has been difficult to locate. The present explanation of the matter is, that Abarim was the name of the range; Nebo one of the peaks; and Pisgah the top of Nebo). The passage would then read, "Moses went up to Mount Nebo, to the top of the hill." (See NEBO). The name Ras el Feshkah (the same as Pisgah) must have been transferred across the Dead Sea, as well as the name of the Jebel Mousa, S. E. of Bethany.

PISID'IA. In Asia Minor, S. of Phrygia, E. of Lydia, W. of Cilicia, and N. of Pamphylia. It is mountainous, but has many fertile plains and valleys. The scenery is wild and grand (some cliffs rising 1000 ft. over a foaming torrent); hightened by forests of oak, pine, and other trees, orchards of fruit-trees, and vineyards. Its people, in the time that Paul travelled through it, were warlike highlanders, and probably exposed the Apostle to the "perils of robbers" that he mentions. Antioch was in Pisidia, though on the border of Phrygia.

PI'SON (overflowing). River in Eden (Gen. ii. 11).

PIS'PAH (spreading). Son of Jether (1 Chr. vii. 38).

PIT. Used with a figurative as well as literal meaning. Heb. 1. SHEOL (Num. xvi. 30, 33), hollow.—2. SHAHATH (Ps. ix. 15), a pit dug into the earth.—3. BOR (Gen. xxxvii. 30, ff), a pit for water.

PITCH. A mineral pitch or asphalt. Heb. 1. ZEPHETH (Ex. ii. 3), liquid.—2. HEMAR, solid.—3. KOFER, in reference to its use in overlaying woodwork. Its nature is mentioned in Is. xxxiv. 9.

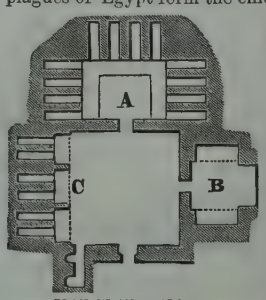
PITCH'ER (Heb. KAD, barrel). Water-jars with one or two handles, used by women for carrying water (Gen. xxiv. 15–20). They are carried on the head or shoulder. The Bedawin women use skin-bottles (Gen. xxi. 14).

PIT'DAH. One of the precious stones in the breast plate of the high priest (Ex. xxviii. 17). See PRECIOUS STONES.

PI'THOM. One of the store-cities built by the Israelites in Egypt, for the first oppressor (Ex. i. 11.) Patumus of Herodotus (ii. 158). Now called Abhaseh, at the entrance of Wady Fumilat, on the line of the ancient canal to the Red Sea.

PI'THON. A descendant of Saul, son of Micah (1 Chr. viii. 35).

PLAGUES, THE, OF EGYPT. The so-called plagues of Egypt form the chief part of the miraculous side of the great deliverance of the Israelites from Egyptian bondage. These plagues will teach essentially the same lessons that the deliverance itself teaches. Indeed, the meaning of the deliverance from Egypt will be best learned from considering these miracles, which show it not to have been a mere symbolical act—shadowing or foreshadowing by this temporal deliverance from worldly bondage a spiritual redemption from spiritual oppression—but to have been itself a conflict with the powers of evil, deep and various, and a victory over them, and so a real redemption from the oppression of spiritual wickedness. The Jewish people were not only oppressed with sore bondage in brick and mortar, but their spirits were led captive under Egyptian idolatries; and the sight and circumstances of this deliverance shook them clear of these enslaving influences, though not completely. The so-called plagues are ten in number: 1. The turning of the waters of the Nile into blood (Ex. vii. 15). 2. Bringing up frogs from the river (Ex. viii. 1). 3. The gnats or mosquitoes (Ex. viii. 16). 4. Of flies (Ex. viii. 20). 5. The murrain of beasts (Ex. ix. 6). 6. The boils upon men and beasts (Ex. ix. 8). 7. Hail, etc. (Ex. ix. 13). 8. The locusts (Ex. x.). 9. The darkness (Ex. x. 21). 10. The destruction of the first-born of man and beast (Ex. xi.). The number ten is significant, ending, as it does, with the terrible blow struck direct from heaven—the full outpouring on Egypt of the divine wrath. See EXODUS, in HISTORY OF THE BOOKS.



PLAN OF ANCIENT TOMB.

PLAIN. Eight different Hebrew words are translated by this one word plain, in our version.

PLAIT'ING. Braiding the HAIR (1 Peter iii. 3).

PLANES (Is. xliv. 13). Carving tools. HANDICRAFT.

PLANE'-TREE (Ecclus. xxiv. 14). CHESTNUT-TREE.

PLAN'ETS (2 K. xxiii. v.). ASTRONOMY.

PLAS'TER. 1. A house infected with LEPROSY was to be replastered (Lev. xiv. 42, 43, 48).—2. The law was to be engraved on Mount Ebal, on stones coated with plaster (Deut. xxvii. 2, 4).—3. (Dan. v. 5). The writing by the mystic hand was on the plaster of the wall.—4. A plaster of figs were applied to boils (Is. xxxviii. 21).

PLAT, TO (Gr. pleko). Interweaving (Matt. xxvii. 29).

PLE'IADES (Gr. pleo, to sail). A cluster of seven stars in the constellation Taurus. The sun enters Taurus about the middle of April; its appearance was a sign of Spring.

PLOW. See AGRICTLTURE.

PLUMB'-LINE (Heb. ANAK). A line with a weight attached (Amos vii. 7, 8). HANDICRAFT.

PLUM'MET (Heb. MESHKELITH). Used in leveling (Is. xxvii. 17).

POCH'ERETH (snaring). The children of Pochereth were among those who returned from captivity (Ezr. ii. 57; Neh. vii. 59).

PO'ETRY. See PSALMS, in the HISTORY OF THE BOOKS.

POI'SON. References to poison in the Scripture are very rare and no death occurring through poison is recorded. The two Heb. words, 1. CHEMAH, feverish heat, 2. ROSH, applied to some poisonous herb. The crime of poisoning never prevailed among the Hebrews. It was studied as a science in the East, and common at Rome. There were many venomous snakes and insects in Palestine. The poison of snakes was used by the Scythians and Arabs to anoint their arrows; as also alluded to by Job (Job vi. 4). It is used figuratively in poetry for anger and hate (Ps. lviii. 4).

POLL. The head (Num. i. 2, 18).

POLL. To clip (2 Sam. xiv. 26). HAIR.

POLYG'AMY. See MARRIAGE.

POMEGRANATE.

POME'GRANATE. (Heb. RIMMON). A bush with dark geen foliage and crimson flowers. The fruit is red when ripe and very juicy. The rind is used in the manufacture of leather. It is a native of Asia. The pillars in Solomon's Temple were adorned with carved figures of this fruit (1 K. vii. 18, 20). A fragment of the fruit with its pearly seeds imbedded in ruby liquid, is very beautiful. "Thy checks are like a piece of pomegranate" is the allusion of the poet to the fine transparent tint (Ca. iv. 3).

POM'MELS (little apples), (2 Chr. iv. 12, 13). BOWL.

POND (Heb. AGAM). The ponds of Egypt (Ex. vii. 19) were doubtless water left by the inundation of the Nile. Ponds for fish are mentioned in Is. xix. 10.

PON'TIUS PI'LATE. PILATE.

PON'TUS. A district on the Black Sea (Acts. ii. 9, 10).

POOL. 1. Heb. AGAM, pond.—2. Heb. BERAKAH, blessing.—3. Heb. BEREKAH, a reservoir for water. These pools in many parts of Palestine and Syria are the only resource for water in a dry season (Is. xliii. 15). Those of Solomon, 3 miles S. W. of Bethlehem, and Bethesda in Jerusalem, are the most celebrated (Eccl. ii. 6). See JERUSALEM.

ANDLESTICK.

POOR. The poor received special favors from the law (Deut. xi. 7). 1. The right of GLEANING (Lev. xix. 9, 10). 2. Their portion from the produce of the land in the SABBATICAL YEAR (Ex. xxiii. 11). 3. Possession of land in the JUBILEE year (ver. 25, 30). 4. USURY and pledges (35, 37). 5. Permanent bondage forbidden (Deut. xv. 12, 15). 6. Portions of tithes (Deut. xiv. 28). 7. Their entertainments at feasts (xvi. 11, 14). 8. Payments of WAGES (Lev. xix. 13).

POP'LAR (Heb. LIBNEH). Poplar and storax trees are common in Palestine (Hos. iv. 13).

POR'ATHA (favored). Son of Haman (Esth. ix. 8).

PORCH. 1. ULAM, a vestibule, open in front and at the sides. Sometimes closed with awnings or curtains.—2. MISDRON, a corridor, connecting the principal rooms of the house (Matt. xvi. 71).

PORCIUS, FESTUS. FESTUS.

PORT (L. Porta). Gate (Neh. ii. 13).

POR'PHYRY (purple). A hard rock of various colors, greatly prized for its beauty when polished (Esth. i. 6). MARBLE.

POR'TER (SHOER, a gate-keeper), (1 Chr. ix. 21). LEVITES.

POSIDO'NIUS. An envoy sent to Judas (2 Macc. xiv. 19).

POST. The door-case of a door (Is. vi. 4). The posts of the Temple door were of olive-wood (1 K. vi. 33).

POT. Is applied to many kinds of vessels, bowl, basin, cup, etc. 1. ASUK, an earthen jar, deep and without handles.—2. CHERES, an earthen jar, used for baking (Ez. iv. 9).—DUD, a kettle, used for cooking (1 Sam. ii. 14),—4. SIR, used for flesh (Ex. xvi. 3).

POT'IPHAR (belonging to the sun). A captain of the guard to whom Joseph was sold (Gen. xxxix. 1).

POTIPH'ERAH. A priest of On. Father of Asenath. Wife of Joseph (Gen. xli. 45, 50).

POT'SHERD (Heb. CHERES). Earthen vessel or bottle. Anything mean and contemptible, or very dry (Is. xxx. 14, xlv. 9; Job. ii. 8).

POTTER'S FIELD. Bought by the priests with the bribe of 30 pieces given to Judas (Matt. xxvii. 7). ACELDAMA.

POT'TERY. Was one of the most common and ancient of all manufactures. The clay, when wet, was trodden by the feet to form a paste, then placed on the wheel, and shaped by the hands. The wheel consisted of a wooden disc, placed on another larger one, and turned by the hand, or by a treadle (Is. xlv. 9). The vessel was then smoothed, and coated with a glaze, and burnt in a furnace (Is. xli. 25).

POUND. 1. (Heb. MANEH, a weight). See WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.—2. A piece of money (Luke xix. 12–27). MONEY. MANEH.

PRÆTO'RIUM. The head-quarters of the Roman governor. JUDGMENT-HALL.

PRAYER (Heb. TEHINNAH, supplication; TEFILLAH, to bow down). To ask God for a blessing. Men have believed in all ages that the Divine Being hears prayer (Deut. iv. 29; 1 Chr. xxviii. 9, etc.), and answers it graciously (Ps. cxlv. 18, 19; 2 Chr. vii. 1) and willingly. Prayer is also called "seeking the Lord" (1 Chr. xvi. 10), intreating the face of the Lord (see FACE), pouring out the heart or soul before Him or before His face (Ps. lxii. 8; 1 Sam. i. 15), crying (1 K. viii. 28) or calling unto God, and a beseeching of God (Ps. lv. 16; Ex. xxxii. 11).

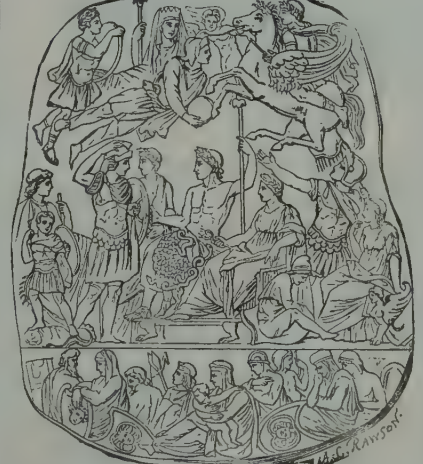
In the N. T. the approach of the soul unto God, with desire and request for help, is very distinctly stated in many passages (Matt. vi. 6, vii. 7; Luke x. 2; John xiv. 13; Eph. vi. 18; Phil. iv. 6; Col. iv. 2, 3, etc.). Nowhere in the Bible is there any word of explanation of the reason for prayer; the fact is dealt with as a fact, as plain as day and night.

The use of forms, in some cases, seems intended to secure the praise of men rather than of God (Matt. vi. 5). When the form is the most extensive and showy the true spirit is in danger of being lost.

The Lord's Prayer (Matt. vi. 9–13; Luke xi. 2–4) is the model for all Christian prayer.

In the Christian Church, Jesus the Christ takes the place of the temple and the altar and the priests and prophets in the old dispensation. He is the intercessor for His people, asking of God the Father blessings for His sake. The Christian form of prayer includes the Hebrew idea of intercession, pleading for benefits; and also adds the higher spiritual desires based on the idea of the brotherhood of all men (Matt. v. 44, ix. 38; 1 Tim. ii. 2, 8; 1 Col. iv. 13; Phil. iv. 6; James v. 14).

Prayer is the free utterance of the soul's wants to God the Father, asking benefits in the name of our Saviour, and interceding for the good of others also. Faith is quickened by prayer; and it may be said that prayer is an indication of the spiritual condition of the soul—it being to the soul what breath is to the body.



"THE GREAT CAMEO."

A Sardonyx, 13×11 inches; in five colored layers.

PREACH, TO. 1. (Heb. BASAR, to bring glad tidings (Ps. xl.).—2. KARA, to call (Gen. 1, 5).—3. Gr. dianggello, to announce fully (Luke ix. 60).—4. Gr. dialegomai, to discourse (Acts xx. 7).—5. Gr. euanggelizo, good news (Luke iii. 18).—6. Gr. katanggello, to publish (Acts iv. 2).—7. Kerusso, to proclaim (Matt. iii. 1).—8. Gr. laleo, to speak (Mark ii. 2).—9. Prokerusso, beforehand (Acts iii. 20).—10. Gr. Proeuanggellizomai, to announce glad tidings beforehand (Gal. iii. 8).—11. Parrhesiazomai, to be free, in speech or action (Acts ix. 27).—12. Gr. plero, to fulfil (Rom. xv. 19).—13. Gr. akoë, the hearing (Heb. iv. 2).

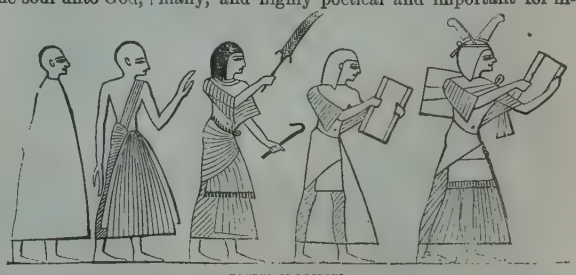
PREACH'ER (Heb. KOHELETH). A public instructor of the Gospel 1 Tim. ii. 7).

PREACH'ING (Heb. KERIAH). Public discourse of the prophets (Matt. xii. 41).

PRE'CIOUS STONES. Alluded to very often in the Scriptures, and were known, used, and valued from the earliest times. Engraved gems worn in rings (Cant. v. 14), and used for private seals (Neh. x.), are mentioned in Genesis, and all through the Bible. The twelve stones of the high-priest's breastplate were engraved with the name of one of the 12 tribes (Ex. xxviii. 17–21), and the whole when in their proper position on the breast of the high-priest were called Urim and Thummim (light and perfection).

The figurative uses of precious stones are very many, and highly poetical and important for instruction, and signify value, beauty, durability, excellence.



EGYPTIAN PRIESTS.

PREPARA'TION, THE. (Mark xv. 42). PASSOVER.

PRES'BYTERY (from Gr. meaning old, elder). A body of elders in the Christian Church (1 Tim. iv.). Also a body consisting of pastors, ruling elders, laymen, commissioned to represent the churches belonging to the presbytery. This work is subject to the revision of the synod.

PRESS (Joel iii. 13). WINE-PRESS.

PRETO'RIUM, or PRÆTO'RIUM (leader). The head-quarters of the Roman military governor. JUDGMENT-HALL (Mark xv. 16).

PREVENT, TO (Gr. prævenio, to come before). 1. (Heb. KADEM, to anticipate), (2 Sam. xxii. 6, 19). Gr. prophthano, to precede (1 Thes. iv. 15.)

PRICK (goads): "To kick against the pricks" (Acts ix. 5), should read, to kick against the goads; as an ox kicking against the goad in the hand of the driver.

PRIEST (Heb. KOHEN, to foretell? or a mediator, a messenger), Job xxxiii. 23). The word priest means one who presides over things relating to God, or, as Paul says, "Every high-priest taken from among men, is constituted on the behalf of men, with respect to their concerns with God, that he may present both gifts and sacrifices for sins" (Heb. v. 1). Adam is the first recorded priest; Noah was the first after the deluge. It is probable that the patriarchs were priests, as in Job i. 5. The prophet differed from the priest in receiving supernatural communications of knowledge, of the past, present, and future. In the patriarchal system, the first-born male was the priest of the family, and succeeded his father. The Mosaic system substituted the tribe of Levi, instead of the first-born (Ex. xxviii.). The Hebrews were promised that, if they would keep the law of Moses, they should be "a peculiar treasure," "a kingdom of priests," "a holy nation" (Ex. xix. 5, 6). [For dress of the priest, see DRESS. See cuts of priests, on pps. 10, 38, 42, 72.] The age at which they were permitted to serve was not definitely fixed, as in the case of the Levites, but was, probably, at maturity—from 20 yrs. old. The support of the high-priest was, the tithe of 1-10th of the tithes assigned to the Levites (Num. xviii. 28; Neh. x. 38). The candidate for orders must prove his descent from Aaron; be free from bodily defects (Lev. xxi. 16–23); must not mourn outwardly; must marry only a young woman.

PRINCE. Governor of districts or local magistrates. JESUS CHRIST is "the PRINCE OF LIFE" (Acts iii. 15). SATAN "the prince of this world" (John xii. 31). PROVINCE.

PRIN'CESS (noble lady). "Queen" (Is. xlix 23). Lady (Judg. v. 29).

PRINCIPALITY (rulers). The dominion of a PRINCE (Jer. xiii. 18).

PRINT, TO. (Heb. MATHAN, to give), (Gen. i. 29). See ENGRAVER; WRITING. "Printed," in Job xix. 23, should be "written" or "marked down."

PRIS'CA (ancient). PRISCILLA (2 Tim. iv. 19)

PRISCIL'LA. The wife of AQUILA (Rom. xvi. 3). The position, in several ancient MSS., of the name of Priscilla before that of her husband, indicates that she was the more active of the two in the Church, as appears in her teaching of Apollos. She is the type of the married servant of the Church, as Phebe is of the unmarried. Her assistance was asked by Timothy as of the utmost value in pointing out the actual wants and condition of the needy members of the Church.

PRIS'ON. Special places used as prisons were under the custody of a military officer (Gen. xl. 3). Private houses now sometimes used as places of confinement (Jer. xxxvii. 15). See PUNISHMENTS.

PUTEOLI. PUZZUOLI.

PRIS'ON-GATE. A gate of the JERUSALEM wall enclosing the Temple.

PROCH'ORUS (leader of the chorus). A Deacon (Acts vi. 5). DEACON.

PROCON'SUL. (Gr. anthupatos, to be deputy). A division of conquered provinces not requiring military rule, was governed by the Roman Senate by proconsuls, civil officers, and their districts were called proconsular. The term was usually one year. A coin of Ephesus gives the title ANTHUPATOS (Acts xix. 38). They did not have the power of life and death.

PROC'URATOR. Is the Latin name of the Roman ruler, translated GOVERNOR in the N. T. See PILATE. Gr. ēgemon. They were similar in power to the proconsul, and were selected from among those who had been consuls or prætors, or senators. Their term of office depended on the will of the emperor. They wore a military dress and sword, and were attended by six lictors. They had the power of life and death. The head-quarters in Judæa were at Cæsarea, but held judicial wherever they were, as Pilate at Jerusalem. The high-priest could be removed at will by him.

PROGEN'ITORS. Parents or ancestors (Gen. xlix. 26). GENEALOGY.

PROGNOS'TICATORS, MONTHLY (Is. xlvii. 13). MAGICIANS.

PROPH'ET (Heb. NABI). Signifies an inspired person, an announcer of the words of another, not from his own influence and will (Ex. vii. 1, iv. 16); to foretell the future and secret events, and who revealed the will of God.

PROPH'ETESS (Heb. NEBIAH). A female PROPHET (Ex. xv. 20). MIRIAM; DEBORAH.

PROPITIA'TION. One who makes ATONEMENT (1 John ii. 2).

PRO'REX (for the king). Viceroy (2 K. i. 17).

PROS'ELYTE (Gr. proselyti; Heb. GERIM). This word is often used in the Septuagint as the rendering of the Heb. GER, a sojourner, translated "a stranger" (Ex. xii. 48, xx.10, xxii. 21, etc.). The word from meaning "one who comes to," means, also, one "who comes over" from one faith to another. The law was liberal to strangers (GERIM); it ordained that they should be treated with forbearance and kindness (Ex. xxii. 21, xxiii. 9; Lev. xix. 33, 34). "The stranger that dwelleth with you shall be unto you as one born among you, and thou shalt love him as thyself, for ye were strangers," etc. The stranger or sojourner was ordered to be welcomed to the Passover Feast upon his observance of certain regulations (Ex. xii. 43, 45). The word in the sense of convert appears in the history and the writings of the prophets in Is. lvi. 3-8, "the sons of the stranger that join themselves to the Lord.

PROV'ERBS. See HISTORY OF THE BOOKS.

PROV'ENDER. Food for cattle (Gen. xxiv. 25). GRASS, CORN, HAY, etc.

PROV'IDENCE. Foresight (Acts xxiv. 2). GOD.

PROV'INCE. (Heb. MEDINAH). A small district ruled by a judge (1 K. xx. 14, 15, 19).

PROVIS'ION. FOOD. To lay up a supply of food, or what is desired (Rom. xiii. 14).

PRU'NING-HOOK (Is. xviii. 5). See KNIFE.

PSALM (Heb. MIZMOR, a song of praise), (1 Cor. xiv. 26). MUSIC.

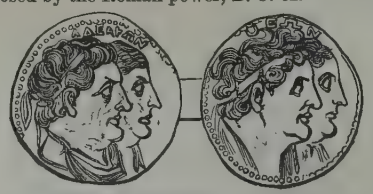
PSALMS, PSAL'TER. See HISTORY OF BOOKS.

PSAL'TERY (Heb. NEBEL). See MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.

PTOL'EMAIS (Ptolemy's city). Acho, Acre (1 Macc. v. 15, 55, x. 1, 58, 60, xii. 48; Acts xxi. 7).

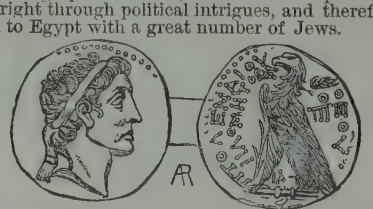
PTOL'EMEE. 1. Son of Dorymenes (1 Macc. iii. 38). He was active in the expedition which Lysias organized (1 Macc. iii. 38). He had great influence with Antiochus Epiphanes.—2. Son of Agesarchus, governor of Cyprus (2 Macc. viii. 8).—3. Son of Abubus, who married Simon's daughter. He was governor of the district of Jericho. He murdered Simon and two of his sons (1 Macc. xvi. 11).—4. Father of LYSIMACHUS I, the Greek translator of ESTHER (Esth. xi. 1).—5. PTOLEMY VI, PHILOMETOR (1 Macc. i. 18).—6. Son of DOSITHEUS (Esth. xi. 1). PTOLEMY.

PTOL'EMY (the war-like.) The Greek title of the ruler of Egypt, as Pharaoh was the Egyptian. The line was founded by Alexander the Great, B. C. 323, by making PTOLEMY I SOTER, ruler (323–285). There were fifteen of the race, who were rulers in Egypt and Syria, the last of whom was deposed by the Roman power, B. C. 81.



OCTODRACHM OF PTOLEMY II PHILADELPHUS.
Ptolemy II, Arsinoe. Ptolemy I, Berenice.

The most noted among them for their connection with Palestine were those in whose reigns the rival temple at Leontopolis was built (Is. xix. 18), and managed in almost exact imitation to the original at Jerusalem, having been founded by Onias, the son of Onias III (see ONIAS), the rightful successor to the high-priest's office, but who was deprived of his right through political intrigues, and therefore fled to Egypt with a great number of Jews.



TETRADRACHM OF PTOLEMY VI PHILOMETOR.
Bust of King. Eagle on thunderbolt. (Egyptian talent).

The history of the eight different Ptolemies who ruled in Egypt fills up a large part of the space between the books—between Malachi and Matthew, and therefore has a positive value to the student of history. The details are to be found in the Maccabees, and Josephus. In the prophesy of Daniel there is a very complete outline of even the military campaigns, marriages of the kings of Syria and the Ptolemies of Egypt, and their influence on the Jews, which can be filled up with the actual names so as to read like an account written by a historian. The king of the North is Antiochus, the king of the South is Ptolemy; the young maiden is Cleopatra, the fenced city is Sidon, etc. Alexandria was built and flourished in this age (see ALEXANDRIA, and APOCRYPHA in the HISTORY OF THE BOOKS).

PU'A. PUAH 2. Son of Issachar (Num. xxvi. 23).

PU'AH (mouth). 1. Father of Tola (Judg. x. 1).—2. Son of Issachar (1 Chr. vii, 1).—3 (splendid). One of the mid-wives whom Pharaoh ordered to kill the Hebrew male children (Ex. i. 15).

PUBAS'TUM (Ez. xxx. 17). PI'BESETH.

PUB'LICAN. Lat. publicanus; Gr. telones. Collectors of the Roman revenue. The publicans of the N. T. were regarded as traitors and classed with sinners (Matt. ix. 11), harlots (xxi. 31, 32), and with the heathen (xviii. 17). No money received from them was permitted to go into the alms-box. They were not allowed to sit in judgment or give testimony. Some of them were the earliest disciples of John the Baptist and of Christ (Luke xviii. 13).

PUB'LIUS (public). Governor of MELITA (Acts xxviii. 7, 8).

PU'DENS (bashful). A Christian friend of Timothy (2 Tim. iv. 21), at Rome. Martial, the Spanish poet, who lived at Rome about A. D. 66, mentions two or three friends, Pudens, Claudia, and Linus, who were the same as the friends of Paul and Timothy.

PU'HITES (Jah is revelation). Descendants of the family of Kirjath-Jearim.

PUL. Error for Phut or Put.

PUL (king). An Assyrian king, the first mentioned in Scripture. He made an expedition against MENAHEM, king of Israel. But we learn from the Assyrian monuments that Jehu had already paid tribute to Shalmanezer II, as recorded on the black obelisk.

Menahem reigned ten years, so that Pul's expedition could not be earlier than B. C. 751, or later than B. C. 745.

PUL'PIT (Heb. MIGDAL). An elevated stage, usually translated "tower" (Neh. viii. 4).

PULSE (Heb. ZEROHIM, ZERONIM, "to scatter, to sow"). A general name of peas, beans, and such kinds of garden sauce (Dan. i. 12, 16).

PUN'ISHMENTS. Were two fold, capital and secondary. 1. Stoning (Ex. xvii. 4). 2. Hanging (Num. xxv. 4). 3. Burning (Gen. xxxviii. 24). 4. By the sword (Ex. xix. 13). 5. Strangling (John xviii. 31). 6. Drowning (Matt. xviii. 6). 7. Sawing asunder (2 Sam. xii. 31). 8. Pounding in a mortar or beating to death (Prov. xxvii. 22). 9. Precipitation (2 Macc. vi. 10).

OF SECONDARY.—1. Retaliation (Ex. xxi. 24–25). 2. Compensation in money, or goods, or service (Ex. xxi. 18–36). 3. Stripes (Deut. xxv. 3). 4. Scourging (Judg. viii. 16).

A false accuser suffered what he proposed to inflict wrongfuly on another (Deut. xix. 19). Imprisonment was practiced for convenience rather than punishment (Lev. xxiv. 12). Debtors were shut up until they paid (Matt. xviii. 30); stocks were used (xiii. 27). See ANATHEMA.

There is no direct reference to rewards or punishments in the future life in the Old Testament. See HADES.

PU'NITES, THE. Descendants of PUA, son of Issachar, (Num. xxvi. 23).

PU'MON (darkness). Identified with Pinon, the site of the copper-mines (Num. xxxiii. 42, 43), between Petra and Zoar. Kalaat Phenan is a ruined castle on a spur of Mt. Seir, and probably marks the ancient site.

PUR (a lot), (Esth. iii. 7). PURIM.

PURIFICA'TION (L. making clean). In all cases consisted by the use of waters—by ablution or sprinkling.

PU'RIM. The annual feast in memory of Esther. See HISTORY OF THE BOOKS.

PURSE. A BAG, in which the Hebrews carried their money when on a journey (Gen. xliii. 35); the merchants carried their weights (Deut. xxv. 13). The GIRDLE was used as a purse (Matt. x. 9).

PUT (1 Chr. i. 8). See PHUT.

PUTE'OLI. 8-ms. N. W. of Naples, on the shore; once called the Bay of Cumæ (see Virgil), and also Puteolanus. It was a famous watering-place, on account of its many warm springs. Ships landed cargoes of corn, and also passengers from the Levant, at this, the best harbor near Rome. The harbor was protected by a mole, the ruins of which are still to be seen. Scipio sailed from this port to Spain; Cicero had a villa in the vicinity, and Hadrian was buried near. Now called Puzzuoli.

PU'TIEL (afflicted by God). Daughter of Putiel, and mother of Phinehas (Ex. vi. 25).

COIN OF HADRIAN.

PY'GARG. A clean animal (Deut. xiv. 5), of the antelope species.

PY'THON. A serpent slain by Apollo (Acts xvi. 16). DIVINATION. In the Greek and Roman mythology, Python was a huge serpent (darkness, or ignorance), which was born in the mud of Deucalion's Deluge, and killed near Delphi by Apollo (the sun or intelligence).

Q

QUAILS (Heb. SELAV). The quail is a bird of passage, about the size of a turtle-dove, and resembling the American partridge. They are plentiful near the shores of the Dead Sea, the Jordan, and in the deserts of Arabia. Its flight is very low, especially when fatigued, and it keeps close to the ground. They migrate in vast flocks, and at night, when they settle, they are so exhausted they may be captured by the hand (Ex. xvi. 13).

QUAR'RY (Heb. PESEL). In Judg. iii. 19, only, in 52 other places graven, or carved images. See IDOL—GEOLOGY IN PALESTINE.

QUARTUS (four, fourth). A disciple of Corinth (Rom. xvi. 23). Tradition says he became bishop of Berytus.

QUATER'NION (four). A guard of four soldiers, two were attached to the prisoner, and two kept watch outside the cell (Acts xii. 4).

QUEEN (Heb. MALCAH, wife), (Esth. i. 9). SHEGAL, consort (Neh. ii. 6), GEBIRAH, powerful (1 K. xv. 13). Queen is applied to the woman who exercises the highest authority; and this in the East, is not the wife but the mother of the master. The case of Esther is an exception.

QUEEN OF HEAV'EN (MELECHETH HASHSHAMAYIM). See MOON and HERA.

QUICK. 1. (Heb. HAY or CHAY, alive, living) (Num. xvi. 30).—2. (Heb. MIHYAH or MICHYAH, the quick), (Lev. xiii. 10).—3. (Heb. HARIHO or HARICHO, to breathe), (Is. xi. 3). Gr. zon, "the quick and the dead" (Acts x. 42).

QUICK'EN, TO (Heb. HIYAH or CHIYAH, to live), to give spirituai or eternal LIFE (John vi. 63).

QUICK'SANDS (Gr. surtis; Lat. syrtis), (Acts xxvii. 17). The sand from the great desert of Sahara is carried by the wind into the sea, along the shore, where the sluggish currents in the Syrtis Minor and Syrtis Major (two great bays on the coast of Africa) allow it to settle and form quicksand—that is sand and water in such a state as to move with a current or be tossed into waves by a storm of wind—where a vessel is in great danger. This same sand, when carried by currents to the shore of Palestine, fills up the harbors there, and creeps up inland, destroying every green thing for miles, as at Gaza, Ascalon, Acre, Tyre, etc.

QUIN'TUS MEM'MIUS (Latin), (2 Macc. xi. 34). See MEM'MIUS, QUINTUS.

QUIV'ER. 1. Heb. TELI, to hang (Gen. xxvii. 3).—2. Heb. ASHPAH (Job xxxix. 23). A case or sheath for holding arrows. See ARMS.

R

RA'AMAH (trembling). Fourth son of Cush (Gen. x. 7). Settled on the Persian Gulf (probably where we find Sheba, on the island Bahreyn), and renowned in Ezekiel's time as trading with Tyre (Ez. xxvii. 22) in spices, precious stones and gold.

RAAMI'AH. A chief who returned from captivity (Neh. vii. 7).

RAAM'SES. RAMESES (Ex. i. 10).

RAB'BAH (greatness). Several places of this name. 1. (Deut. iii. 11). A very strong place east of Jordan; almost the only city of the Ammonites. This may have been the city of the Zuzims, in Ham (Gen. xiv. 5). The sarcophagus of the giant Og was here (Deut. iii. 11). The extensive ruins of Rabbah, now called Amman, are found on both sides of a perennial stream, the banks and bed also being paved through the city, about 19 miles southeast of Es Salt, and 22 miles from the Jordan, in a long valley, a branch of the Wady Zerka. The theatre is very large and well preserved. Roman and Christian buildings are also found. Some of the columns are five feet in diameter. Ezekiel's prophesy is literally fulfilled, and the place has become a stable for camels and a couching place for flocks (xxv. 5). David took the city by his general, Joab, when Uriah the Hittite was killed (2 Sam. xi.). It was named Philadelphia by Ptolemy Philadelphus, B. C. 250. Coins of this city are extant, bearing the figure of Astarte. The Christian Church is still in excellent preservation.—2. The city of AR was also called Rabbath Moab.—3. A city of Judah (Josh. xv. 60). Lost.—4. In Josh. xi. 8, Zidon is called Zidon Rabbah, translated great Zidon.

RABBAH IN MOAB.

RAB'BATH. Of the children of Ammon (Deut. iii. 11).

RAB'BI (my master). A title of respect which the Jews gave to their teachers and physicians, and especially to our Lord (Matt. xxiii. 7, 8). EDUCATION. SCRIBES.

RAB'BITH (multitude), (Josh. xix. 20). Issachar. Lost.

RABBO'NI (great master), (John xx. 16). RABBI.

RAB'MAG (chief priest). A title borne by the king. NERGAL-SHAREZER (Jer. xxxix. 3, 13).

RAB'SACES. RABSHAKEH (Ecclus. xlviii. 18).

RAB'SARIS. 1. An officer of the king of Assyria (2 K. xviii. 17).—2. A prince who was present at the capture of Jerusalem, B. C. 588 (Jer. xxxix. 3-13).

RAB'SHA-KEH (chief cup-bearer). An officer of the king of Assyria sent against Jerusalem (2 K. xviii. xix).

RA'CA (Chal. reyka, worthless). A term of contempt used by the Jews in Christ's age (Matt. v. 22).

RACE. See GAMES.

RA'CHAB. RAHAB, the harlot (Matt. i. 5).

RA'CHAL (truffle), (1 Sam. xxx. 29). South, in Judah. "Haunted" by David. Lost.

RA'CHEL (a ewe). The youngest daughter of LABAN, wife of JACOB, mother of JOSEPH and BENJAMIN. The history of Rachel may be found in Gen. xxix., xxxiii., xxxv. See JACOB.

The so-called tomb of Rachel is about half a mile from Bethlehem, near the Jerusalem road.

RAD'DAI (treading down). Brother of David, and son of Jesse (1 Chr. ii. 14).

RA'GAU (Judg. i. 5, 15). RAGES? Mts. of R. 2. REU, in the line of CHRIST, (2 K. iii. 35).

RA'GES (Tob. i. 14, v. 5; Jud. i. 5). In Media, 5 ms. S. E. of the modern Teheren. Mentioned in the ancient inscriptions of Darius. The Zendavesta records that "the earliest settlement of the Aryans" in Media was in this city, and district of the same name. It was near the celebrated Caspian Gates, which guarded the great highway between India, Bactria, etc., to Media. The ruins cover a space of 13,500 ft. long, by 10,500 ft. broad. The walls were of great thickness, and flanked by towers, and there are immense heaps of ruins. The modern city, Teheren, was built from the ancient ruins, which are now called Rhey.

RA'GUEL (friend of God). 1. A prince-priest of Midian, father of ZIPPORAH (Ex. ii. 18, 21).—2. A pious Jew, father of Sara (Tob. iii. 7, 17).

RA'HAB (broad). A woman of Jericho, who entertained the spies sent by JOSHUA, and was saved, with her family, when the city was destroyed (Josh. ii. 1-21). She became the wife of Salmon, a prince of Judah (Ruth iv. 21), and so a mother in the royal line of David and of Jesus.

RA'HAB (Ps. lxxxvii. 4). A poetical name for Egypt. The word in Hebrew means fierceness, insolence, pride.

RA'HAM (womb). Son of Shema (1 Chr. ii. 44).

RA'HEL (RACHEL), (Jer. xxxi. 15).

RAI'MENT. DRESS.

RAIN (Heb. MALKOSH, violent rain). The "early" and the "latter" rain of Palestine is mentioned in Deut. xi. 14. See CLIMATE.

RAIN'BOW (Heb. KESHETH), (Gen. ix. 13-16). The token of the COVENANT.

RAIS'ING FROM THE DEAD. RESURRECTION.

RAI'SIN. VINE.

RA'KEM. Son of Sheresh (1 Chr. vii. 16).

RAK'KATH (shore), (Josh. xix. 35). A fortified city in Naphtali, near Hammath and Chinnereth. There is a Kerak near the outlet of Jordan, from the sea of Galilee, which may mark the site.

RAK'KON (thinness), (Josh. xix. 46). Near Joppa. Me-jarkon? Lost.

RAM (high). 1. Son of Hezron (Ruth iv. 19).—2. First born of Jehrahmeel (ii. 25, 27).—3. Son of Barachel (Job xxxii. 2).

RAM (Heb. AYIL). Male sheep (Ezr. vi. 9, 17).

RAM, BATTERING (CAR). See ARMS.

RA'MA (Matt. ii. 18). RAMAH (Jer. xxxi. 15). A city in Mt. Ephraim, or Benjamin. Matthew refers to the ancient massacre, and also at the same time to that of the innocents of Bethlehem. The name Ramah forms a part of several names, and means hight. 1. In Benjamin (Josh. xviii. 25). Five miles N. of Jerusalem, near Geba. The palm tree of Deborah (Judg. iv. 5) was near it, in a valley toward Bethel. It is now a poor village in the midst of columns, hewn stones, and other ruins of antiquity. Cirama (1 Esd. v. 20).—2. In Mt. Ephraim (1 Sam. i. 1). The home of Elkanah, Samuel's father; the birthplace of Samuel, his home and official residence, the station of his altar, and where he was buried (xv. 1). Supposed by some to be the same as the first, in Benj.—3.

(Josh. xix. 29). Boundary of Asher, 1 mile N. E. of Ras el Ain, two and a half S. E. of Tyre. There is another Rameh, 10 miles S. E. of Tyre. 4. In Naphtali (ib. v. 39), one of the fortified cities, 7 miles S. E. of Safed on the way to Acre, on a lofty hill commanding one of the finest views in Palestine. 5. RAMOTH GILEAD (2 K. viii. 29; 2 Chr. xxii. 6).—6. Ramleh (Neh. xi. 33), near Joppa.

RA'MATH LEHI (Judg. xv. 17). Where Samson slew 1,000 men with a jawbone, and named the place Wielding of the Jawbone.

RA'MATH MIZPEH (high place of the watch tower). (Josh. xiii. 26). Boundary of Gad. Where Jacob and Laban set up a monument of stones. Lost. Dr. Eli Smith found many names of places on the east of Jordan, which, when more carefully examined and their sites explored, may result in settling many points of topography in that region now wholly uncertain. The Palestine Exploration has made several discoveries, and added much to our knowledge of this region, and are still at work.

RA'MATH OF THE SOUTH (Josh. xix. 8). In Simeon, in the extreme south. Baalath Beer? South Ramoth (1 Sam. xxx. 27), or Ramoth Negeb. Lost.

RAMATHA'IM ZOPHIM (the double eminence). (1 Sam. i. 1). Supposed to have been south of Jerusalem. The same as Ramah 2?

RAM'ATHEM. Error in 1 Macc. xi. 34, for RAMATHAIM.

RAM'ATHITE, THE. Native of RAMAH. Shimei had charge of the royal vineyards of King David (1 Chr. xxvii. 27).

RAM'ESES, RAAM'SES (Gen. xlvii. 11). The land of Goshen. A city in the same land, enlarged and fortified by the Jews (Ex. i. 11, xii. 37). There were (and now are) other places of this name in Egypt. Abu Kesheyd, a modern village, has an antique monolith, on which is carved a group, Rameses II, between Tum and Ra.

RAM'IAH (Jah hath set). Son of PAROSH (Ezr. x. 25).

RA'MOTH (hights), (1 Chr. vi. 73). ISSACHAR. JARMUTH? REMOTH?

RA'MOTH (hights). A layman (Ezr. x. 29).

RA'MOTH IN GILEAD (Deut. iv. 43; Josh. xx. 8). Now Es Salt. The site is on a high and picturesque hill, almost surrounded by deep ravines, and encompassed by mountains. Jebel Osha, the highest peak ofGilead, is only 2 ms. N. Vineyards and olive-groves beautify and enrich the place; the ruins are not extensive, being a square castle with towers, and a moat, on the hight, and a great number of tombs and grottos in the ravines.

RAM'S SKINS, DYED RED. Were presented, by the Israelites, as offerings for the making of the Tabernacle (Ex. xxv. 5). They served for the inner coverings.

RAN'GES FOR POTS (Lev. xi. 35). Rack or bed for holding the egg-shaped-bottom earthern jars (pots), which will not stand alone.

RAN'SOM. 1. (Heb. KOFER, a cover), (Ex. xxxi. 12).—2. (Heb. PIDYON (Ex. xxi. 30). REDEMPTION. Gr. lutron, a ransom, (Matt. xx. 28).

RA'PHA (tall). 1. A giant, and father of a family of tall men (2 Sam. xxi. 16, ff).—2. A descendant of Benjamin (1 Chr. viii. 2).—3. Son of Binea (1 Chr. viii. 37).

RA'PHAEL (the divine healer). One of the 7 holy angels (Tob. xii. 15).

RAPH'AIM. Ancestor of Judith (Jud. viii. 1).

RA'PHON (1 Macc. i. 37). Raphana (?), one of the Decapolis. Er Rafe?

RA'PHU (healed). Father of Palti (Num. xiii. 9).

RAS'SUS, CHILDREN OF. A nation whose country was ravaged by Holofernes (Jud. ii. 23).

RATH'UMUS. The story-writer (1 Esd. ii. 16, 17, 25, 30).

RA'VEN (Heb. OREB). A bird similar to the crow, but larger. It feeds on dead bodies (Prov. xxx. 17). It drives away its young as soon as they can shift for themselves (Job xxxviii. 41). Elijah was fed by ravens (1 K. xvii. 17, 6. The raven was sent from the Ark on the subsiding of the waters (Gen. viii. 7).

RA'ZIS (destruction). An elder of Jerusalem, who killed himself rather than fall into the hands of the wicked (2 Macc. xiv. 37–46). This is the only instance of a suicide in the whole range of Jewish history, unless the cases of Samson and Saul are so considered.

RA'ZOR. The razor was very little used by the Jews (Num. vi. 9, 18).

REAI'A. Son of Micah (1 Chr. v. 5).

REAI'AH (whom Jah cares for). 1. Son of Shobal (1 Chr. iv. 2).—2. Ancestor of Nethinim, who returned from captivity (Ezr. ii. 47).

RE'BA (fourth part). A king of the Midianites (Num. xxxi. 8).

REBEK'AH. REBECCA (ensnarer). Daughter of BETHUEL (Gen. xxii. 23). Sister of LABAN, married to ISAAC. There is a beautiful and touching incident of "Rebekah at the well." This bright little picture, with its conclusion, comprises all the circumstances of a perfect marriage. The sanction of parents, the favor of God, the domestic habits of the wife, her beauty, kindness, modest consent, and her successful hold on her husband's love (even in the same tent with her mother-in-law).

RE'CHAB (horseman). 1. Ancestor of Jehonadab (2 K. x. 15, 23).—2. Captain of bands in the service of Ishbosheth (2 Sam. iv. 2).—3. Father of Malchiah (Neh. iii. 14).

RE'CHABITES (descendants of RECHAB). Ancestor of JEHONADAB (1 Chr. ii. 55). See JEHONADAB.

RE'CHAH (side). The founder of Ir-nahash (1 Chr. iv. 12).

RECORD'ER (Heb. MAZCIR). An officer of high rank of the privy council (2 Sam. viii. 16).

REDEEM'ER (Heb. GOEL). One who redeems a field by paying back what it had been sold for; this right belonged to the nearest kinsman (Lev. xxv. 25, 26); often applied to God as the redeemer of men, and especially Israel (Job xix. 25).

REDEEMER, JESUS, THE (Gal. iii. 13, iv. 5).

REDEMP'TION. 1. Heb. GEULLAH, the redemption or repurchase of a field (Lev. xxv. 24, 51, 52).—2. Heb. PEDUTH, PIDYOM, PIDYON, ransom (Num. iii. 49; Ps. xlix. 8). 3. Gr. apolutrosis, letting off for a ransom (2 K. xxi. 28). 4. Gr. lutrosis, deliverance (2 K. ii. 38).

RED HEIF'ER. PURIFICATION.

RED SEA (Num. xxi. 14). Called the sea, in Ex. xiv. 2, 9, 16, etc. The Gulf of Suez in the Exodus, and also the Gulf of Akabah later in the wandering. Called the sea of suph in Ex. x. 19, that is, the sea of reeds, or flags. A seaweed resembling wool (in whiteness) is thrown up in great quantities on the shores of the Red Sea (Diodorus iii. 19). The same word was used to name the weeds, or reeds, in which Moses was laid when an infant (Ex. ii. 3). It is thought the papyrus was meant. The Abyssinians now use papyrus boats.

It is supposed that "the tongue of the Egyptian Sea," the head of the Suez Gulf, has dried up, as predicted by Isaiah (xi. 15, xix. 5), for a distance of 50 ms. The ancient head would have been at Aboo Kesheyd, which has been identified with the ancient Hero. Necho's canal, which was wide enough for two triremes to row abreast (Herodotus ii. 158), once led from the gulf to the Nile, but it is now filled with sand. The Suez canal, just opened, leads to the Mediterranean. The sea is nearly 1400 ms. long by 100 to 200 ms. in its widest part. The deepest water is 6,324 feet, in lat. 22° 30′. It is filled with coral and other rocks and rocky islands for 40 or 50 ms. on each side, leaving a narrow and dangerous channel, which is narrowest opposite El Medeenah. The Suez Gulf is 130 ms. long and 18 wide. The Akabah Gulf is 100 ms. long by 15 wide. This is a continuation of the Arabah, and is bordered on both sides by steep and high mountains—Sinai on the west, and the spurs of Mt. Seir, Edom, on the east, from 3,000 to 6,000 feet high, the highest being to the south. The island of Graia, fortified by the crusaders, lies near the west shore, not far from the north end. The ruins of walls, castles, a church, etc., mostly of the middle ages, cover the whole rocky area. The straits at the south end of the sea are called Bab el Mandeb (Gate of Tears), from the many shipwrecks which have happened after passing them, either way.

REED. See PAPYRUS.

REELAI'AH (Jah makes tremble). One who went with Zerubbabel (Ezr. ii. 2).

REFI'NER (Heb. ZOREF. MEZAREF). Refining being the separation of the pure metal from the dross, by means of fire, suggested an apt subject for illustration, as in Is. i. 25; Zech. xiii. 9; Mal. iii. 2, 3. A full, figurative allusion to the refiner's process is in Jer. vi. 29, 30. See METALS.

REFUGE, CITIES OF. 6 out of the 48 Levitical cities were set apart as a refuge for any one who should accidentally kill another, to stay there until the death of the high-priest (Num. xxxv. 6, 13, 15; Josh. xx. 2, 7, 9). There were 3 on each side of Jordan. On the E. side were Bezer, Ramoth in Gilead, and Golan, and on the W. side were Kedesh in Galilee, Shechem, and Hebron. The right of asylum of many cities, in ancient classic nations, and of sanctuary in Christian countries (the privilege of many churches in the middle ages especially), are parallel, and show the wisdom of the law-makers, in providing a means of abating the evils of the system of blood-revenge, which are peculiarly Oriental, and very wasteful of human life. Moses abolished the custom of allowing money to be paid as a compensation for a human life, as was the case in Athens and many eastern countries, and is now among the Arabs. The cities are each described under their respective names.

RE'GEM (friend). Son of Jahdai (1 Chr. ii. 47).

RE'GEM ME'LECH (friend of the king). He, with Sherezer, was sent on behalf of some of the Captivity, to make inquiries at the Temple concerning fasting (Zech. vii. 2).

REGENERA'TION (born again). Birth into new spiritual life (John iii. 3), and thus becoming a new creature (2 Cor. v. 17), and being made partakers of the Divine Nature (2 Pet. i. 4) by means of the Holy Spirit (John iii. 4). "The washing of regeneration" alludes to the purifying by the Holy Spirit (Titus iii. 5). The especial work of the Holy Spirit in restoring man to the original image of God.

RE'GION. 1. (Heb. HEBEL, a rope), (Deut. iii. 4, 13). Once translated "the country of Argob" (iii. 14). Coast, in Zeph. ii. 5–7.—2. NOPHAH (hight). The region of Dor (1 K. iv. 11).—4. Gr. klima, climate (2 Cor. xi. 10).—4. Gr. chora, country (Matt. ii. 12).

RE'GION ROUND ABOUT, THE (Gr. he perichoros). The populous and flourishing country which contained JERICHO, in the Jordan valley, enclosed by the hills of Quarantana (Mark vi. 55).

REHABI'AH (whom Jah enlarges). Son of Eliezer (1 Chr. xxii. 17).

RE'HOB (room). 1. Father of Hadadezer, king of Zobah (2 Sam. viii. 3, 12).—2. A Levite, who sealed the covenant (Neh. x. 11).

RE'HOB. Several of this name. 1. The northern limit of the exploration of the spies (Num. xiii. 21). Toward Hamath. Dan was "by Beth-rehob." Ruhaibeh, 25 miles N. E. of Damascus, has been offered as the locality. Dr. Robinson favored Hunin, a village and castle west of Paneas.—2. In Asher (Josh. xix. 28), near Zidon.—3. Another in Asher, not identified.

REHOBO'AM (he enlarges the people). The son of Solomon, by the Ammonite princess Naamah (1 K. xiv. 21, 31), whom he succeeded. By neglecting his father's counselors he hastened the division of the tribes which had been restrained by the government of Solomon.

REHO'BOTH (room). A well dug by Isaac (Gen. xxvi. 22). The wells Sitnah, Esek and Rehoboth were west or southwest of Beersheba. Wady Ruhaibeh is 20 miles S. W. of Beersheba, and is claimed as the place by Dr. Bonar (Desert of Sinai, 316).—2. Rehoboth by the River (Gen. xxxvi. 37). On the Euphrates, just below the Khabur, stands Rahabah, in the midst of extensive ancient ruins. —3. THE CITY. One of the four built by Nimrod. As the name means in our tongue, "to be wide," or "spacious," or "streets," the passage in Gen. x. 11, 12, may describe one city, Nineveh, which was spacious, and had several quarters, as Resen, Calah, altogether forming "a great city."

RE'HUM (compassionate). 1. One who returned from captivity (Ezr. ii. 2). NEHUM.—2. One of those who wrote to Artaxerxes to stop the rebuilding of the Temple (iv. 8, 9, 17, 23).—3. A Levite, who rebuilt the wall (Neh. iii. 17).—4. A chief who sealed the covenent (x. 25).—5. Head of a priestly house (xii. 3).

RE'I (friendly). A person mentioned as loyal to David, during the rebellion (1 K. i. 8).

REINS (Gr. renes, kidneys). 1. (Heb. KELAYOTH.) In ancient physiology the kidneys are believed to be the seat of desire, and are often coupled with the heart (Ps. vii. 9).—2. (Heb. HALATSAYIM, loins, Gen. xxxv. 11; Gr. nephros, Rev. ii. 23).

RE'KEM (Heb. flower-garden). 1. One of the kings of Midian (Num. xxxi. 8).—2. Son of Hebron (1 Chr. ii. 43, 44).

RE'KEM (Josh. xviii. 27). Ain Karem, W. of Jerusalem? See page 103.

REMALI'AH (Jah decks). Father of PEKAH, king of Israel (2 K. xv. 25, 37).

REM'ETH (hight), (Josh. xix. 21). Wezar (Ar. for hight), a ruin on a hill 5 ms. N. of Jenin, at the foot of Mt. Gilboa.

REM'MON (Josh. xix. 7). In Simeon. RIMMON.

REM'MON METH'OAR (Rimmon, which reaches),

(Josh. xix. 13.) Zebulon, 6 miles N. of Nazareth.

REM'PHAN. An error for CHI'UN (in Acts vii. 43, from Amos v. 26). The Hebrew name of the Greek god Saturn. See IDOLATRY. Saturn was a king of Latium, and was, after his death, deified, and worshiped as the god of agriculture. (Gr. sotor, planter).

REND'ING, RENT. DRESS; MOURNING.

REPENT'ANCE (Heb. NOHAM). (Hos. xiii. 14). (Gr. metanoia, change of purpose), (Heb. xii. 17).—(Gr. ametameletos, unchangeable), (Rom. xi. 29). A change of mind, with sorrow for something done, and a wish that it was undone (Matt. xxvii. 3). Esau found no repentance in his father (Heb. xii. 17). God is sometimes said to repent of something he had done (Gen. vi. 6). The true Gospel repentance is sorrow for sin (Matt. xiv. 17).

RE'PHAEL (God heals). Son of Shemaiah (1 Chr. xxvi. 7).

RE'PHAH (riches). Son of Ephraim (1 Chr. vii. 25).

REPHAI'AH (whom Jah healed). 1. His sons are among the descendants of Zerubbabel (1 Chr. iii. 21).—2. A Simeonite chief (iv. 42).—3. Son of Tola (vii. 4).—4. Son of Binea (ix. 43).—5. Son of Hur and ruler of the half-part of Jerusalem (Neh. iii. 9).

REPH'AIM (Heb. REPHAIM). See GIANTS.

REPH'AIM, THE VALLEY OF (valley of the stretched=giants). On the south of a hill which borders the valley of Hinnom, on the west. David made it famous on two (or three) distinct occasions (2 Sam. v. 18, 22; Is. xvii. 5). The very interesting incident related in 2 Sam. xxiii. 13–17, took place on one of these invasions of the Philistines. This valley (or plain) is flat, fertile, is shut in on all sides by rocky hill-tops and ridges, and ends to the west of the valley of Roses (Wady el Werd).

REPHI'DIM (rests, or stays), (Ex. xvii. 1, 8, xix. 2). Station of the Exodus, between Egypt and Sinai. The people murmured for water, and Moses smote the rock in Horeb "before the people;" and therefore if Horeb and Sinai be located at Jebel Sufsafeh and its vicinity, then Rephidim would be in Wady es Sheikh. WANDERING.

REP'ROBATE (Heb. NIMAS, worthless, rejected), (Jer. vi. 30). Hardened in sin and unbelief (Rom. i. 28).

RE'SEN. The ruins called Nimrud, at Mosul, on the Euphrates, are understood to represent the ancient Calah, and those on the opposite side of the river are the remains of Nineveh; and there are remains between the two, at Selamiyeh, which answer to the locality of Resen.

RE'SHEPH (flame). Son of Ephraim (1 Chr. vii. 25).

RESURREC'TION Gr. anastasis, uprising; exanastasis, a rising up out of (Phil. iii. 11); egersis, waking up; "resurrection" in John xi. 25; and several other words, or derivatives, are rendered resurrection.

The idea is the rising again of the body from death, or its return to life in two senses; 1, of those who have been brought back to this life after death, as Lazarus, the widow's son of Nain, etc., and 2, of all true Christains, who will be raised in the future world.

This is one of the vital points in the Christian's creed. If there is no resurrection then there is no hope beyond this life. The Old Testament history prefigures the doctrine, in its records of several instances of restoration to life after death, as by Elijah (1 K. xvii. 21–24), and Elisha (2 K. iv. 20, 32–36). The vision of the dry bones may be accepted as touching on the general belief, though not a case of practical proof; the translations of Enoch and Elijah cannot argue resurrection, because death did not take place, and they are simply evidence of a continued existence after this life (Gen. v. 22; 2 K. ii.).

"Life and immortality" are "brought to light by the gospel." The New Testament idea is that it is (1) to be universal (John v. 28, 29; 2 Cor. v. 10; Rev. xx. 13), (2) and that souls will be recognizable; but whether the identity will be from physical or spiritual sources we are not instructed, unless Paul means that it will be spiritual in his argument to the Romans (vi. viii.) and to the Corinthians (1 Cor. xv. 44), where we may possibly see evidence of a belief in the rising of the identical shapes of our bodies of flesh, but changed into a spiritual substance. (3). The belief in a future life for the saints only and a second death for the impenitent is held by many, who find in the life and works of Jesus, and in Paul and John's teaching much to confirm this view. (4). It is the work of Jesus that has secured the resurrection and life of all who believe on him, and His voice will call them from the tomb, who prayed, "Father, I will that they also, whom thou hast given me, may be with me where I am." (5). The time of the resurrection is not determined. There may be two, or rather two objects or ends to be answered: one being the actual life, which is believed to have been already given to several, whose names are mentioned in the Bible; and the other the great day of judgment. SECOND ADVENT.

RE'U (friend). Son of Peleg (Gen. xi. 18, 21).

REU'BEN (REU, behold, and BEN, a son). Eldest son of Jacob (Gen. xxix. 32), son of Leah. The tribe of Reuben was located, at their own request, on the E. side of Jordan, and against the wishes of Moses (Num. xxxii. 19).

REU'BENITE. Descendants of REUBEN (Num. xxvi. 7).

REU'EL (friend of God). 1. Son of Esau (Gen. xxxvi. 4, 10, 13, 17).—2. One of the names given to Moses' father-in-law (Ex. ii. 18).—3. Father of Eliasaph (Num. ii. 14).—4. Ancestor of Elah (1 Chr. ix. 8).

REU'MAH (raised). Second wife of Nahor (Gen. xxii. 24).

REVELA'TION. Gr. apokalupsis, unveiling, or manifestation, from God, by dream or vision (2 Cor. xii. 1, 7).

REVELA'TION OF ST. JOHN. See HISTORY OF THE BOOKS.

REVEN'GER OF BLOOD. AVENGER OF BLOOD is a name given to a man who had the right (and whose duty it was), of taking revenge on him who had killed one of his relations.

RE'ZEPH (2 K. xix. 12; Is. xxxvii. 12). A day's march W. of the Euphrates, now called Rasapha. Another is mentioned as near Bagdad.

REZI'A (delight). Son of Ulla, a chief (1 Chr. vii. 39).

RE'ZIN (friend). 1. King of DAMASCUS who united with Pekah, king of Israel, to invade Judah, B. C. 742 (2 K. xv. 37).—2. Ancestor of Nethinim who returned from captivity (Neh. vii. 50).

RE'ZON (prince). Son of Eliadah, and the founder of a small kingdom in Syria-Damascus, and a great annoyance to Solomon (1 K. xi. 23, 25).

RHE'GIUM. In Italy, on the straits of Messina, opposite the city of Messina, in Sicily (Acts xxviii. 13).

RHE'SA. Father of Joanna in the genealogy of Jesus (Luke iii. 27). Supposed, by some, to be an error, the word meaning "prince," the title of Zerubbabel.

RHINOÇ'EROS (Heb. REEM, wild ox). The word is always rendered unicorn. See UNICORN.

RHODA (rose). A maid, in the house of Mary, who announced Peter's arrival (Acts xii. 13).

COIN OF RHODES.

RHODES. An island 120 miles long, by 36 wide, opposite the S. W. extremity of Asia Minor, celebrated from remote antiquity for commerce, navigation, literature and the arts; and during the middle ages as the residence of the Knights of St. John. Its maritime code was adopted by the Romans. The soil is fertile and the climate delightful. There are two cities: Rhodes (built 482 B. C.), which was celebrated by its having erected over the entrance to its harbor a brass statue of Apollo, 105 feet high (built by Chares of Lindus, B. C. 290, and thrown down by an earthquake, 224 B. C.); and Lindus and a number of villages. Population 30,000. Paul visited the island on his way to Jerusalem (Acts xxi. 1).

RHOD'OCUS. A Jew who betrayed his countrymen (2 Macc. xiii. 21).

RI'BAI. Father of Ittai (2 Sam. xxiii. 29).

RIB'AND. RIBBON (Heb. PATHIL, Num. xv. 38). See HEM, THREAD.

RIB'LAH (fertility). In the land of Hamath (2 K. xxiii. 33), on the east side of Ain (Num. xxxiv. 11). Both places are located in the Orontes valley, 35 miles N. E. of Baalbek; Riblah lying on the banks of a mountain stream, in the midst of a vast and fertile plain. Mentioned as Diblath in Ez. vi. 14. At Riblah, Pharaoh Necho deposed king Jehoahaz (2 Chr. xxxvi.), and Nebuchadnezzar put out the eyes of Zedekiah after killing his sons (2 K. xxv. 7).

RID'DLE (Heb. HIDAH, intricate). Artifice (Dan. viii. 23); a proverb (Prov. i. 6); an oracle (Num. xii. 8); a PARABLE (Ez. xvii. 2); in general, any wise or intricate sentence (Hab. ii. 6). The queen of Sheba came to ask riddles of SOLOMON (1 K. x. 1). The ancients were fond of riddles. They were generally proposed in verse. The only mention of a riddle in the N. T. is in Rev. xiii. 16–18.

RINGS.

RIGHT'EOUS (Heb. ZADDIK; sometimes YASHAR; Gr. dikaios). One who pursues the right course (Ex. ix. 27).

RIGHT'EOUSNESS (Heb. ZEDEK, ZEDAKAH; Gr. dikaiōma). Holiness, justice, rectitude; an attribute of God only (Job xxxvi. 3; Is. li. 5–8; John xvii. 25). The righteousness of Christ includes His spotless holiness and His perfect obedience to the law while on earth, and His suffering its penalty in our stead. "For the kingdom of God is not meat and drink; but righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost" (Rom. xiv. 17).

RIGHT HAND. Signifies power; the most efficient member of the body (Matt. v. 30). Figuratively the power of the Almighty (Ex. xv. 6; Ps. xxi. 8); the place of honor (Ps. xlv. 9; Matt. xxv. 34), of special benediction, paternal love, etc. It was raised in act of taking an oath, and of prayer (Gen. xiv. 22). The right hand means south in 1 Sam. xxiii. 19, as the left means north, as when facing east.

RIM'MON (pomegranate). 1. Zebulon (1 Chr. vi. 77), belonging to the Levites, Merari family.—2. Judah, in the extreme south, near Ziklag (Josh. xv. 32); afterward given to Simeon (xix. 7). Occupied after the return from Babylon (Neh. xi. 29). EN-RIMMON. UM-ER-RUMMANIM (mother of pomegranates), is a village and ruin 15 miles S. E. of Hebron. Between two hills (both covered with ruins), a mile south of the village, is a large fountain, the chief watering-place in the region.—3. THE ROCK RIMMON. A high rock or hill, 10 miles north of Jerusalem and 4 east of Bethel, on which is a modern village. The remnant of the tribe of Benjamin held this rock for four months against their enemies (Judg. xx. 47).—4. RIMMON-PAREZ (breach). The second station after Hazeroth, in the Exodus (Num. xxx. 19). Lost.

RIM'MON. Father of Rechab (2 Sam. iv. 2, 5, 9).

RIM'MON. Correctly RAMAM (exalted). The name of some idol under which the sun was represented (2 K. v. 18) in Damascus.

RING (TABBA'ATH, GALIL; Gr. daktulios). The ring, besides being an ornament, was used as a signet, or sign-manual, when its setting was engraved with some device, with or without the name of the owner, which was recognized as his personal emblem (Neh. x.). Such rings or seals were used by all persons in authority, and when stamped upon the parchment, or on a piece of wax or clay attached, stood instead of the name of the person agreeing to the compact. See SEAL.

RIN'NAH (shout). Son of Shimon (1 Chr. iv. 20).

RI'PHATH (Gen. x. 3; 1 Chr. i. 6). A northern people, descended from Gomer. We have several names derived from this source, as, the Riphæan mts.; the river Rhebas in Bithynia; the Rhibii, a people E. of the Caspian; and the Riphæans, the original Paphlagonians.

RIS'SAH (worm). Station in the wilderness (Num. xxxiii. 21). Lost.

RITH'MAH (broom, the shrub, retam). Desert station (ib. ver. 18). Lost.

RIVER. 7 distinct Hebrew words are translated by "river" in our version. By river we mean a large stream of water, flowing summer and winter, and we have names for smaller streams, as, stream, creek, brook, torrent, rill, rivulet, etc. There are such differences in the original Hebrew, which were overlooked in the translation, and it may be interesting to notice them: 1. AUBAL, YUBAL (Jer. xviii. 8; Dan. viii. 2, 3, 6), tumult, fulness. The word used for the deluge is from the same root, and is HAMMABUL (only in Genesis, and Ps. xxix. 10).—NAHAR (Gen ii. 10; Ex. vii. 19, etc.), to flow. This means a river, as we use the word. With the definite article HAN-NAHAR, (the river), the Euphrates is meant (Gen. xxxi. 21; 2 Sam. x. 16, etc.).—Incorrectly rendered "flood" in Josh. xxiv. 2, where the Euphrates is meant; and in Job xiv. 11, Ps. lxvi. 6, where the Red Sea, or the Jordan, is referred to. The Arab name of river is nahr; now used for all perennial streams.—3. Nakhal, (to receive), as, a water-course, therefore, a torrent-bed, common in Palestine, having water only in winter. This is translated "valley" in Gen. xxvi. 17, Num. xxi. 12; "brook," Deut. ii. 13, 2 K. xxiii. 6–12; "river" in Amos vi. 14; "streams" in Ps. lxxviii. 20; and, in all these cases valley is is the true meaning. The modern term is WADY for such valleys as are dry in summer.—4. PELEG (to flow, or division): "River," in Ps. i. 3, Is. xxx. 25, Job xx. 17; "stream," in Ps. xlvi. 4; "divisions," in Judg. v. 15, 16. The word means, artificial streams for irrigation.—5. APHIK (force or hold, as, the bank of a river): "River" in Cant. v. 12, Ez. vi. 3, xxxi. 12, and "streams" in Ps. cxxvi. 4; in which last passage it refers to the dry water-courses of the Negeb, or South. In 2 Sam. xxii. 16 it is translated "channels," and also in Ps. xviii. 15.—6. YEOR, (the Nile), a word adopted into the Hebrew from the Egyptian language. This is the word used for the Nile in Genesis and Exodus, and is mistranslated "flood" in Amos viii. 8, ix. 5. RIVER OF EGYPT. Two terms were used in the original—differing, as will be seen—both of which are translated "river of Egypt." 1. NAHAR MITZRAIM (Gen. xv. 18), meaning The Nile (probably before the name YEOR was known to the Hebrews). —2. NAKHAL MITZRAIM (Num. xxxiv. 5), meaning the dry water-course of El Arish. The Nile is also called SHIHOR (Josh. xiii. 3, etc.). The importance of these corrections is felt, when it is seen that we are able to prove by them that the original Hebrew text was true in every one of its references to the peculiar features of the countries referred to, even in minute particulars.

RIZ'PAH (a coal). Second wife of King Saul, memorable for the touching example of maternal affection which she displayed in watching the dead bodies of her sons (2 Sam. iii. 7, xxi. 8, 10, 11).

ROADS. There were no roads, in ancient times, in the East, only narrow tracks, which we would call bridle-paths (1 Sam. xxvii. 10). See HIGHWAY.

ROB'BERY. Has ever been one of the principal employments of the Bedawin tribes of the East (Gen. xvi. 12). For an instance of a truly Bedawin character, see 1 Sam. xxvi. 6-12.

ROCK (SELA, TSUR). Rocks were used for fortresses and strongholds. The word denotes a place of security, and, figuratively, a refuge, defense or protection (Ps. xviii. 2, 31, 46).

ROD (HOTER, MATTEH, MAKKEL, SHEBET; Gr. rhabdos). A branch or stick, such as may be used for a whip (Prov. xiv. 3); also a shepherd's staff (Ex. iv. 2 ff). The badge of authority of a ruler or king (Ps. cx. 2). An instrument for punishment or correction (Prov. x. 13).

ROD'ANIM (1 Chr. i. 7). DODANIM.

ROE. Roebuck (Heb. TSEBI, masc., ZEBIYAH, fem.). The Oriental antelope or gazelle. It is about two and a half feet in hight, of a reddish brown color, with white feet and belly, has long naked ears, and a short erect tail. The horns are black, about twelve inches long and bent like a lyre. It inhabits Barbary, Egypt, Arabia and Syria, and is about half the size of the fallow-deer. It goes in large flocks; is easily tamed, though very timid; its flesh is considered excellent food (Deut. xii. 15, 22).

RO'GEL (fuller), (1 K. i. 9). EN-ROGEL.

RO'GELIM (feet). The residence of Barzillai, the Gileadite (2 Sam. xvii. 27). East of Jordan. Lost.

ROH'GAH (outcry). A chief of the sons of Shamer (1 Chr. vii. 34).

ROLL (Heb. and Chal. MEGILLAH.) See WRITING.

ROMAM'TIE'ZER (I have exalted his help). Son of Heman, and chief in the twenty-fourth division (1 Chr. xxv. 4, 31).

RO'MAN. An inhabitant of Rome (John xi. 48); also one who had the rights of a citizen of Rome (Acts xvi. 37, 38).

ROMAN EMPIRE. Rome is first mentioned in 1 Macc. i. 10, in connection with Antiochus Epiphanes, who had been a hostage there, and was a "wicked root." Pompey made Syria a Roman province, B. C. 65, and took Jerusalem two years later (Ant. xiv. 2, 3, 4; Wars i. 6, 7). Herod was made the first king under Roman rule by Antony, B. C. 40, and was confirmed by Augustus, B. C. 30. The tribute paid to Cæsar (Julius) was a fourth part of their agricultural produce in addition to the tithes (Ant. xiv. 10, 6). After A. D. 6, Judæa was made a province of Syria at the request of the Jews, who were worn out by the cruelties of the Herods, with the capital at Cæsarea; Coponius was the first procurator, and Pilate was the fifth. Jesus was crucified during Pilate's reign (A. D. 25 to 35).

The Roman empire was but a narrow strip along the shores of the Mediterranean until Pompey addedAsia Minor, Syria, and (Antony) Egypt; Cæsar conquered Gaul; the generals of Augustus, Spain, and from the Alps to the Danube. Its population in the time of Christ was 85 millions. Gibbon says it was 120 millions in the time of Claudius, who appointed Felix procurator (A. D. 52–60). Festus succeeded him, and heard Paul (Acts xxv., etc.). Vespasian was sent into Judæa in A. D. 67, with a large army. Nero died in 68, and Vespasian was elected emperor by the legions in Judæa. Titus was sent to conduct the war in Judæa by his father A. D. 70, when he took Jerusalem after a siege of four months. Julius Cæsar allowed the Jews to live after their own customs, even in Rome; which privileges were confirmed by Augustus, who also respected their Sabbath (Ant. xiv. 10, 11, 19), and exempted them from military service; but Tiberius and Claudius banished them from Rome, as Suetonius says, because they were continually raising disturbances under the impulse of Chrestus—i. e., Christ.

ROME. THE FORUM.

ROME. The City of Rome was founded B. C. 753, on 7 hills, 15 ms. from the mouth of the Tiber (Rev. xvii. 9). The modern city lies to the N. W. of the ancient site, on what was the Campus Martius (Field of Mars), a plain north of the seven hills. It is only mentioned in Maccabees, Acts, Epistle to the Romans, and 2d Timothy. The Jews first settled in Rome after Pompey's conquests, when the Jewish king, Aristobulus, and his son were led in triumph. At the time of Paul's visit (after Augustus had "found the city of brick and left it of marble") the population was one million two hundred thousand (Gibbon)—one-half being slaves, and a large part of the freemen dependent on the rich, and living like paupers on public gratuities. Rome became the greatest repository of architecture, pictures, and sculptures that the world ever saw. The luxury, profligacy, and crime of this age is beyond the descriptive power of letters. It is believed that Paul lived here "two whole years," in his own hired house, bound by a chain to a soldier, according to the then custom of keeping certain prisoners (Acts xii. 6, xxviii. 16, 20, 30). Five of Paul's epistles were written at Rome, one of them just before his death, as is believed by beheading.

RO'MANS, EPISTLE TO THE. See HISTORY OF THE BOOKS.

ROOM (Heb. MAKONA). Place (Gen. xxiv. 23); KEN. Nest (vi. 14). Gr. anogeon or anagaion. Any thing above ground; an upper room (Mark xiv. 15). Room is sometimes synonymous with seat or place (Luke xiv. 8, 50).

ROOT (Heb. SHORESH; Gr. rhiza). The part of a tree or plant under ground (Job viii. 17). In poetry persons and nations are often compared to a plant or tree (Is. v. 24); figuratively, the lowest part, bottom (Job xxviii. 9); metaphorically, descendant, offspring (Is. xi. 10).

ROSE. 1. Heb. CHABAZZELETH (Cant. ii. 1). I am the rose of Sharon. 2. Gr. rhodon (Wis. ii. 8). Roses are greatly prized in the East, for the rose-water, which is in much request. Several varieties are still found in Palestine. The "rose of Sharon" is sacredly associated with the heavenly bridegroom (Cant. ii. 1).

The Rose of Sharon is thought by some to have been the Cistus, Rock-rose, of which there are several varieties in Palestine, and is now chiefly found on the hills, and especially on Mount Carmel, where it almost covers whole districts, tinting entire hillsides, as seen from a distance, in April.

Others, as Tristram (Nat. Hist. 476), thinks it was the Sweet-scented Narcissus, a native of Palestine, growing on Sharon, and nearly all over the country. It is very fragrant, and an especial favorite of the people, who, men and women, carry them for their perfume and fine color, vast numbers being sold in the bazaars.

Dr. Thomson suggested the Mallow, marsh-mallows, which grows into a stout bush, and bears thousands of beautiful flowers. Others again suggest the asphodel or the lily.

ROSH. In Ez. xxxviii. 2, 3, xxxix. 1, this name is translated "chief," and should read, "Magog, the prince of Rosh, Meshech, and Tubal." The Russ, or Russians, are also mentioned in the Koran. The country of the children of RASSES (Jud. ii. 23) was ravaged by Holofernes. Meshech is said to be the original Muscovy, and Rosh, the original Russia.

ROS'IN. The resin of turpentine after distillation. 1. In Ez. xxvii. 17, BALM.—2. In the Song of the Three Holy Children (23) the servants of the king are said to have "ceased not to make the oven hot with rosin (properly naphtha).

RU'BIES. See PRECIOUS STONES.

RUE (Gr. pegamon, in Luke xi. 42, only). Is doubtless, the common garden-rue (ruta graveolus), having a strong odor and a bitter taste: a shrubby plant, about 2 ft. high, and used as a medicine. In the middle ages it was used by the priests to sprinkle holy water, and was called herb of grace.

RU'FUS (L. red). Son of Simon the Cyrenian, who carried the cross on which the Saviour was to be crucified (Mark xv. 21). He is supposed to be the same person whom Paul salutes in Rom. xvi. 13.

RUHA'MAH (pitied). See HOSEA in HISTORY OF THE BOOKS.

RU'MAH (lofty), (2 K. xxiii. 36). DUMAH (Josh. xv. 52).

RUSH (Heb. AGMON). See PAPYRUS.

RUST (Gr. Brosis, Matt. v. 19, 30). A destroying substance that attacks treasures of any kind long undisturbed. In James v. 3, "rust" is the translation of Gr. ios, the tarnish which spreads silver, rather than "rust."

RUTH. See HISTORY OF THE BOOKS.

RYE (KUSSEMETH), (Ex. ix. 32). Rye is not an Egyptian or Syrian grain, but rather a northern plant. It is closely allied to wheat, which it much resembles. The sheath is coarser, and rougher, and the beard long. It is of less value, and the flour is generally mixed with that of wheat. See HARVEST.

S

SABACTHA'NI (hast thou forsaken me?). A part of our Saviour's exclamation on the cross (Matt. xxvii. 46); the whole is taken from Ps. xx. 1, where it is used prophetically.

SAB'AOTH (ZEBOTH, hosts or armies), (Joel ii. 15; 2 Sam. vi. 2; Ps. xxiv. 10; Jas. v. 4).

SAB'BATH (Heb. SHABBATH, the [day of] rest). The name given to the seventh day of the week under the old covenant. Division of time into weeks was the custom from the earliest recorded ages, among the rudest as well as the most cultivated people. (CHRONOLOGY.) It is the only ordinance besides marriage which dates from the Creation (Gen. ii. 3), and it is one of the subjects of the Decalogue (Ex. xxxiv. 21). In Leviticus the whole law is repeated (xxiii. 2, 3), and one of the finest of the Psalms was written in honor of the day (Ps. xcii.). The prophets also honor the Sabbath as a holy day (Is. lvi. 1, 2; Ez. xx. 12, xliv. 24, xlvi. 3).

The special rites and services appointed for the day show that it was to be spent in thoughts and exercises on the character and ways of God. The services of the sanctuary were peculiar to the day (Num. xxviii. 9; Lev. xxiv. 3–9); and the laws of Moses were read (Acts xv. 21), "teaching Jacob God's judgments and Israel His law" (Deut. xxxiii. 10).

Josephus alludes to the origin, design, and observance of the day in his discourse against Apion (ii. 18).

Jesus instructed His disciples, by His example as well as words, to keep the law of the Sabbath, and to works of kindness and mercy, and exercise of piety (Matt. xii. 1–13; Mark iii. 1–5; Luke iv. 16, vi. 9), and to keep the day in its true spirit, as a day of personal privilege and benevolent usefulness, for "the Sabbath was made for man, and not man for the Sabbath."

In Colossians ii. 16, Paul argues from the fact of the Sabbath having been superseded by the Lord's day.

SABBATH DAY'S JOURNEY. The distance between the tents and the ark in the camp, which was 2000 cubits. The common cubit of 18 inches would be 3000 feet, and the sacred cubit of 19.05 inches would be 4,762 feet. The English mile is 5,280 feet.

SAB'TAH. Third son of Cush (Gen. x. 7). Located in Arabia, along the southern coast. Pliny (vi. xxiii. 32) says the chief city of the region had 60 temples, and was the capital of king Elisarus.

SABTE'CAH. Fifth son of Cush (Gen. x. 7). Settled on the Persian Gulf, on the Persian shore.

SA'CAR (reward). 1. Father of Ahiam (1 Chr. xi. 35).—2. Fourth son of Obed-edom (xxvi. 4).

SACK'BUT (Chal. sabbecha). A musical instrument: a brass trumpet with a slide, like the modern trombone (Dan. xii. v. 7, 10, 15).

SACK'CLOTH (Heb. SAK; Gr. sakkos). A coarse stuff, of a dark color, often made of goats'-hair (Is. l, 3), and the coarse, black hair of the camel. In great calamities—in penitence, in trouble—the Jews wore sackcloth about their bodies (Gen. xxxvii. 34); The robe resembled a sack, and was confined by a girdle of the same material (2 Sam. iii. 31). In times of joy those who were clad in sackcloth took it off, and put on their usual clothing (Is. xxxii. 11). See DRESS.

SAC'RIFICE (Heb. MINCHAH, to give; KORBAN, to approach; ZEBACH, to slaughter animals; OLAH, whole burnt-offering; SHELEM, peace-offering; CHATTATH, sin-offering; ASHAM, trespass-offering; Gr. thusia (Matt. ix. 13); doron, gift (Matt. ii. 11); eidolothuton, idol-sacrifice (Acts xv. 29); prosphora, offering (Acts xxi. 26). The first recorded sacrifices were those of Cain and Abel (Minchah). Of Noah, after the flood (Gen. viii. 20); a burnt-offering (olah). The sacrifice of Isaac (Gen. xxii. 1–13), the only instance of human sacrifice, having been commanded by God as a test of faith, but not actually offered. In the burnt-offerings of Job (Job i. 5, xlii. 8), the offering was accompanied by repentance and prayer. The sacrifices of the Mosaic period commenced with the offering of the Passover (Ex. xxiv.). The law prescribed five kinds of sacrifices: the burnt-offering, the meat-offering (unbloody), the peace-offering (bloody), the sin-offering and the trespass-offering. In the consecration of Aaron and his sons (Lev. viii.), there was first a sin-offering, as an approach to God; next, a burnt-offering, typical of dedication to His service, and the meat-offering of thanksgiving; and further, a peace-offering for the congregation, which was accepted by the miraculous descent of fire upon the altar. This was ever afterwards the order of the sacrifices. The sacrifices regularly offered in the Temple were of burnt-offerings: first, the daily burnt-offerings (Ex. xxix. 38–42); second, the double burnt-offerings on the Sabbath (Num. xxviii. 9, 10); third, the burnt-offerings at the great feasts (Num. xxviii. 11, xxix. 39).

SAD'DUCEES (named from ZADOK, the high-priest). A religious sect of the Jews at the time of Christ, who refused to accept that the oral law was the revelation of God to the Israelites, and believed exclusively in the written law. They joined with the Pharisees in asking for a sign from heaven (Matt. xvi. 1, 4, 6), but opposed their doctrines otherwise. The Sadducees never exercised the influence that the Pharisees did, and were more tolerant. They rejected the belief in a resurrection (Matt. xxii. 23), nor did they believe in future rewards and punishments. The high-priest at the time of Christ was of this sect, and the doctrine of the resurrection preached by Christ rendered the Sadducees especially bitter against him (Acts iv. 1, v. 17), but he did not censure the Sadducees as much as the Pharisees.

SA'DOC. 1. Zadok 1 (2 Esd. i. 1).—2. A descendant of Zerubbabel in the genealogy of Jesus Christ (Matt. i. 14).

SAF'FRON (Ar. Zafran, yellow. Heb. CARCOM). A small bluish flower, whose yellow stigma is pulled out and dried, having a peculiar aromatic and penetrating odor and a bitter taste. Used as a stimulant in medicine and highly valued in the East as a perfume (Cant. iv. 14).

SAINT (Heb. HASID, KADOSH. Gr. Nagios, a holy one), (Dan. viii. 13). A title by which the disciples were known. Originally including all members of the church, afterward restricted to a few (Rom. i. 1; Acts ix. 32; 1 Thess. iii. 13).

SA'LA. SALAH (Luke iii. 35).

SA'LAH (extension), (Gen. x. 24). Father of Eber. Settled in N. Mesopotamia.

SAL'AMIS. City on the east end of the island of Cyprus. Visited by Paul and Barnabas on their first missionary journey (Acts xiii. 5). There were many Jews in Cyprus, attracted by the copper mines. The ancient city was near the modern Famagousta, by the river Pediæus, on a plain.

SALASAD'AI. ZURISHADAI (Jud. viii. 1).

SALA'THIEL or SHEALTIEL. Father of Zerubbabel (Ezr. iii. 2). One of the ancestors of Christ (Matt. i. 14; Luke iii. 27).

SAL'CAH (Deut. iii. 10; Josh. xiii. 11). A city on the extreme east limit of Bashan and Gad (1 Chr. v. 11). There was a district of the same name (Josh. xii. 5), belonging to Og. Now called Sulkhad, at the south end of Jebel Hauran. The great Euphrates desert begins near this city and extends to the Persian Gulf. About three miles in circuit. In it is a castle on a lofty (volcanic) hill, 400 feet high. An inscription on a gate is dated A. D. 246, and one on a tombstone, A. D. 196.

SA'LEM. SHALEM (peace). Jerome said Salem was 8 Roman miles from Scythopolis (Bethshean), and in his day contained the ruins of the palace of Melchizedek. Some have identified it with Jerusalem. The plain of Salem has the mountains Ebal and Gerizim, with Shechem, on its west end, and the hills on which Salem stands on its east end. In Psalm lxxvi. 2, Salem means Jerusalem.

SA'LIM (John iii. 23). Near Ænon. 6 miles south of Bethshean and 2 miles west of Jordan is a site of ruins on the Tell Redghah, with a Mohammedan tomb, called Shekh Salim. The brook in Wady Chusneh runs close by, and a copious fountain gushes out near the tomb, while rivulets wind about in all directions. "Here is much water."

SAL'LAI (basket maker). 1. One who settled in Jerusalem after the Captivity (Neh. xi. 8).—2. Head of a course of priests who went with Zerubbabel (xii. 20).

SAL'LU (weighed). Son of Meshullam (1 Chr. ix. 7).

SAL'MA (garment), or SALMON (clothed). Son of Nashon, prince of Judah, the husband of Rahab (Matt. i. 4, 5).

SAL'MAH. SALMA (Ruth iv. 20).

SALMANAS'SER. SHALMANESER (Hos. xi. 5).

SAL'MON (Judg. ix. 48). A hill near Shechem, on which Abimelech and his men cut down boughs with which they burnt the tower of Shechem. ZALMON. White as snow in Salmon (Is. lxviii. 14).

SALMO'NE. The east point of the island of CRETE (Acts xxvii. 7).

SA'LOM. 1. SHALLUM, father of Hilkiah (Bar. i. 7).—2. SALU, father of Zimri (1 Macc. ii. 26).

SALO'ME (pacific). 1. Wife of ZEBEDEE, mother of the Apostles James and John. She was a most devout and faithful disciple (Matt. xx. 20; Acts xvi. 1).—2. Salome, the daughter of Herodias; she was the cause of John Baptist's death (Matt. xiv. 6; Mark xvi. 22). She was the wife of Philip, Tetrarch of Trachonitis, and afterwards married Aristobulus, king of Chalcis (Jos. Ant. xviii. 5, 4).

SALT (MELAH; Gr. nats). See SODOM.

SALT, CITY OF (Josh. xv. 62). In the wilderness, near Engedi and the Dead Sea. It may be the site is found in the modern Nahr Maleh, which is near the Wady Amreh, which is believed to be Gomorrah. The Valley of Salt. Two memorable victories occurred here: that of David over the Edomites (2 Sam. viii. 13; Ps. lx.); and that of Amaziah over the same people (2 K. xiv. 7). The site is lost. It has been located by some in the plain at the south end of the Dead Sea.

SA'LUM. 1. SHALLUM 8 (1 Esd. v. 28).—2. SHALLUM 6 (viii. 1).

SALUTA'TION (Heb. SHALOM LEKHA). Peace be with thee (John xx. 19). By this term is meant the friendly greeting, which, in ancient as in modern times, takes place between persons when meeting or parting; also when sending letters.

SALVA'TION (Heb. YESHAH, YESHA; Gr. soteria). Deliverance from temporal evils or earthly destruction (Ex. xiv. 13). GOD is figuratively called "salvation" (Ps. xxvii. 1). JESUS CHRIST has provided the salvation of the Gospel, and is preëminently "the SAVIOUR" (Matt. i. 21).

SAM'AEL. SALAMIEL (Jud. viii. 1).

SAMAI'AS. 1. Shemaiah 23 (1 Esd. i. 9).—2. Shemaiah 11 (viii. 39).—3. The "great Samaias," father of Ananias and Jonathas (Tob. v. 13).

SAMA'RIA (watch mountain). Six miles N. W. of Shechem, on a hill which is surrounded by a broad basin-shaped valley. Here OMRI built the capital of the kingdom of Israel, on the hill which he bought (B. C. 925) of SHEMER for two talents of silver (1 K. xvi. 24). The site is singularly beautiful, and is always admired by every visitor. Ahab built a temple to Baal, with images; and that part of the city was called "the city of the house of Baal" (1 K. xvi. 22), which was destroyed by Jehu (2 K. x. 25).

SAMARITAN PRIEST.

The Syrians besieged it in 901 B. C. (1 K. xx. 1), and in 892 B. C. (ib. vi. 24, vii. 20), and in both cases without success.

Shalmanezer, king of Assyria, took it after a siege of 3 years, B. C. 721 (2 K. xviii. 9, 10), and carried the people away to Assyria. Esarhaddon repeopled the country from Assyria, and these citizens were called Samaritans. Josephus describes it as a very strong city in the time of John Hyrcanus, who took it (B. C. 109), after a year's siege (Ant. xiii. 10, 2). After this time the Jews inhabited the city, until the age of Alexander Jannæus, and until Pompey restored it to the descendants of the original inhabitants (probably the Syro-Macedonians).

Herod the Great rebuilt it with some splendor, and called it SEBASTE (Augustus), after his patron the Emperor Augustus. The wall was 20 stadia in circuit. A magnificent temple was dedicated to Cæsar. 6,000 veteran soldiers were colonized here, and a large district given them for their support (Ant. xv. 8, 5; B. J. i. 20, 3, etc.).

The remains of the ancient city are mostly colonnades of Herod's time, or older. There is a group of 16 in a recess near the bottom of the hill, another of 16 near the top, and a long line of columns running around the hill, on one side, on a broad terrace, of which 100 are now standing, and a great many others fallen. The whole hill is covered with rubbish, the remains of a large and well-built city.

The city is not mentioned in the New Testament, and it was commanded, "Into any city of the Samaritans enter ye not."

SAMARIA, THE DISTRICT OF. Was so called before the city was named (1 K. xiii. 32,) and included all the tribes who accepted Jeroboam as king, on both sides of the Jordan, and the royal residence was Shechem (1 K. xiii. 25). The name Samaritan became contracted, as the kingdom was divided from time to time. The first limitation was probably the losing of Simeon and Dan. The second, when Pul, king of Assyria (B. C. 771) carried away the Reubenites and Gadites, and the half tribe of Manasseh (1 Chr. v. 26); the third, when Galilee and Gilead were taken by the Assyrians (2 K. xv. 29); and the fourth, when just before the last king of Israel, Hoshea, was deposed, Asher, Issachar and Zebulon, and also Ephraim and Manasseh, sent men up to the Passover at Jerusalem (2 Chr. xxx. 1–26), in Hezekiah's reign. Thus, the kingdom which once extended from the sea to the desert of Syria, and from Bethel to Dan in the north, was divided, until only the city Samaria, with a few villages, remained to the name, and even these were wiped out by Shalmanezer (2 K. xvii. 5–26), who placed other people there instead of the Jews (v. 24), B. C. 721.

These new-comers were idolaters, and brought their idols with them (2 K. xvii. 29), and although instructed by Jewish priests, never became pure worshipers of Israel's God. When Judah and Benjamin returned from the Captivity and began to build the Temple, the Samaritans asked permission to assist; and on being refused they petitioned the king of Assyria and had the work stopped (Ezr. iv.). From this time the "adversaries of Judah and Benjamin" became open enemies, and the feud grew year by year more bitter. In the year B. C. 409, Manasseh, a priest who was expelled from Jerusalem for an unlawful marriage, obtained permission from the Persian king to build a temple on Mt. Gerizim, and made a copy of the law, which was the 5 books of Moses only (called the Pentateuch), and they claimed for this copy the highest antiquity, even above any copy in possession of the Jews.

The Samaritans claimed from Alexender an exemption from taxes on the Sabbatical year, on the plea that they were Jews; but on examination their claim was found to be false. The woman of Samaria also claimed to be a descendant of Jacob, when talking with Jesus (John vi. 12).

The boundaries, according to Josephus, in the time of Christ were from Jenin to Acrabatta. (See MAP). The soil, productions, etc., are described under EPHRAIM and ISSACHAR.

SAM'GAR-NE'BO (Jer. xxxix. 3). The whole name is SAMGAR-NEBO-SAMSECHIM, which is to say, the Cupbearer, Nebo-Sarsechim.

SAM'LAH (a garment). A king of Edom (Gen. xxxvi. 36, 37).

SA'MOS (hight). An island opposite the boundary between Ionia and Caria. Paul anchored for a night at Trogyllium, in the narrow strait between Samos and Mycale. The ancient Greeks fought a naval battle against the Persians in this strait, B. C. 479. Herod the Great met Marcus Agrippa in Samos, and obtained many privileges for the Jews (Jos. Ant. xvi. 2, 2).

SAMOTHRA'CIA (Acts xvi. 11). Mentioned in Paul's first voyage. It is a lofty and conspicuous island, seen at a great distance, being visible from the shore of Troas (Eothen, p. 64; Homer, Il. xiii. 12, 13). Paul anchored for a night off the island. A strong current from the Dardanelles sets southward between the island and the mainland. The mysteries of the Cabeiri (pagan divinities) were practiced here.

SAMP'SAMES. Now Samsun, on the coast of the Black Sea, between Trebizond and Sinope.

SAM'SON (Heb. SHIMSHON, strong). Son of MANOAH, in the tribe of Dan (Josh. xv. 33). The account of his birth, life and exploits is given in Judg. xiii. xvi. He was the strongest man, and celebrated for his fearless and wonderful acts, for his moral infirmities, and his tragical end. His sins brought him in great disgrace and misery (Heb. xi. 32).

SANBAL'LAT. A Moabite of HORONAIM, but a resident of Samaria (Neh. ii. 10, 19), and a great enemy of the Jews. He was an officer in the service of Artaxerxes (Neh. iv. 2). See Nehemiah in the HISTORY OF THE BOOKS. His daughter married Manasseh, the high-priest, Eliashib's grandson, son of Joiada (Tobiah, a companion of his, had "allied" himself to Eliashib's family in the same manner—Neh. xiii. 4), on account of a settled policy of Sanballat, Tobiah and Geshem, who concerted together for the injury of the Jews. Nehemiah expelled Manasseh for marrying a Gentile wife. Sanballat attempted to entice Nehemiah from Jerusalem to some village near Ono (vi.), but the scheme failed, for the Tirshatha suspected mischief. Nothing further is related of Sanballat in the Scripture, and Josephus continues the history in rather a fabulous manner.

SANCTIFICA'TION. SANCTIFY (KADASH, to sanctify), (Gen. ii. 3); (Gr. hagiazo), (Matt. xxii. 17, 19). To be holy. In the O. T. it denotes the consecration of a person to God (Ex. xxxi. 13). To make holy, or to set apart for God (Gen. ii. 3; Ex. xix. 23). The tabernacle, altar, priests, etc., were solemnly set apart and sanctified for divine service (Lev. viii. 10–12). A day was set apart for fasting and prayer (Joel i. 14), and the Sabbath was so regarded (Deut. v. 12). In the N. T. the doctrine is the making truly and perfectly holy what was before defiled and sinful, and is a progressive work of divine grace upon the soul justified by the love of Christ. After a gradual cleansing from sin the sinner is presented "unspotted before the throne of God," which is the work of the Holy Spirit (John xiv. 26, xvii. 17). The ultimate sanctification of every believer in Christ is a covenant of mercy, purchased on the cross.

SAND (Heb. HOL; Gr. ammos), (Gen. xxii. 17; Job vi. 3). See SINAI.

SANDAL (Heb. NA'AL; Gr. sandalon, little sandal), (Mark vi. 9). See DRESS.

SAN'HEDRIM, correct SANHEDRIN. Gr. sunedrion. "COUNCIL." See HISTORY OF THE BOOKS.

SAN'HERIB. SENNACHERIB (2 K. xviii. 13).

SANSAN'NAH (palm branch). One of the towns in the S. of Judah (Josh. xv. 31). Lost, unless Simsim is the site.

SAPH (threshold). Son of "the Giant" slain by Sibbechai (2 Sam. xxi. 18). called SIPPAI in 1 Chr. xx. 4.

SA'PHIR (fair). (Micah i. 11). In the hill country, 8 miles N. E. of Ascalon. Now called Es Sawafir.

SAPPHI'RA (beautiful). Wife of ANANIAS 10, and the participator in his guilt and punishment (Acts v. 1–10).

SAP'PHIRE. See PRECIOUS STONES.

SA'RA. 1. Sarah, wife of Abraham (Heb. xi. 11). See ABRAHAM. 2. SERAH. Daughter of Asher (Num. xxvi. 46).

SARABI'AS. SHEREBIAH (1 Esd. ix. 48).

SA'RAPH (fiery). Descendant of Shelah, the son of Judah (1 Chr. iv. 22).

SAR'DINE. See PRECIOUS STONES.

SAR'DIS. A city on a spur of the mountain range Tmolus, about 2 ms. from the river Hermus, the ancient residence of the kings of Lydia. Its original name, in the time of Omphale, was HYDE'. It was naturally, from its convenient position and the fertile region surrounding it, a commercial mart of importance. Chestnuts were first made an article of commerce here, and called Nuts of Sardis. Pliny says the art of dyeing wool was invented here, and Phrygia furnished the material from its vast flocks. The carpets of Sardis were very celebrated. The Spartans sent to Sardis for gold to cover the face of Apollo at Amyclæ. The sands of the Pactolus, a brook from Tmolus running near Sardis, furnished the gold. Sardis was a slave mart, in very early times, and here traders first became stationary, as distinguished from traveling merchants. It was taken by Antiochus the Great, B. C. 214, and afterward became subject to Pergamus.

CYBELE.

SARDITES, THE. Descendants of Sered, the son of Zebulun (Num. xxvi. 26).

SARDI'US. ODEM. Gr. Sardios. See PRECIOUS STONES.

SAR'DONYX. Gr. Sardius and Onyx. See PRECIOUS STONES.

SARE'A. An assistant secretary to Ezra (2 Esd. xiv. 24).

SAREP'TA. ZAREPHATH. E. of Sidon (Luke iv. 26).

SAR'GON (king in fact). One of the greatest Assyrian kings. He sent Tartan, his general, with an army against Ashdod, and took it. He built the palace at Nimroud. He was successor to Shalmanezer IV. The wars of Sargon were numerous, and he carried his victorious arms into many countries. A statue of Sargon, which is now in the Museum of Berlin, was discovered at Idalium, in Cyprus (Is. xx. 1, 4; 2 K. xviii. 9, 10).

SA'RID (Josh. xix. 10, 12). Zebulon, west of Chisloth Tabor. Lost.

SA'RON. The district in which Lydda stood (Acts ix. 25). The Sharon of the Old Testament.

SAR'SECHIM (chief of the eunuchs). A general in Nebuchadnezzar's army (Jer. xxxix. 3). RABSARIS.

SA'RUCH. SERUG (Luke iii. 35).

SA'TAN. See DEVIL.

SA'TYR (Heb. SAIR; pl. SEIRIM). "Hairy" in Gen. xxvii. 11, 23; "rough" (Dan. viii. 21); "devils" (Lev. vii. 7); shaggy animals (Is. xiii. 21). It is frequently applied he-goats (Lev. iv. 24). Satyrs, in Greek mythology, were imaginary demons, half men and half goats, believed by the superstitions to haunt forests and groves.

SAUL (Heb. SHAUL, asked for). 1. Saul of Rehoboth by the river; one of the early kings of Edom (Gen. xxxvi. 37, 38); called SHAUL in 1 Chr. i. 48.—2. Saul, the son of Kish, of the tribe of Benjamin; he was the first king of Israel; anointed by Samuel privateley (1 Sam. ix. 10). Afterwards Saul was elected in a solemn assembly at Mizpah by the determination of the miraculous lot. Saul was remarkably tall, and of a courageous disposition (1 Sam. ix. 2, x. 23). His immediate act upon his election was to head an army and oppose the invasion of the Ammonites. He found them, led by their king Nahash, at Bezek, and totally routed them (1 Sam. xi. 11). After this triumph Saul was publicly anointed at Gilgal by Samuel (1 Sam. xii.) From this period Saul's reign was marked by a series of transgressions; he assumed upon the priestly office and disregarded God's injunction by ordering the offering up of sacrifices (1 Sam. xiii. 9) during his contest with the Philistines. He rebelled against Jehovah in regard to the destruction of the Amalekites (1 Sam. xiv. 48). Saul behaved with the utmost cruelty to David—twice attempting his life (1 Sam. xviii. 10, 11.; xix. 10). He committed a great atrocity in the murder of Ahimelech, the priest (1 Sam. xxii.), and of eighty-five other priests of the house of Eli, as well as the inhabitants of Nob. He forced David into opposition, who twice mercifully spared his life (1 Sam. xxiv. 3–7, xxvi.).

Saul committed a further offense in consulting the witch of Endor (1 Sam. xxviii. 7), although he had previously expelled all practicers of magical arts (xxviii. 3). At this interview he was warned that he and his sons would die the following day. On that day he met the Philistines in Gilboa, on the plain of Esdraëlon, and after seeing the utter rout of his army and the death of his three sons (Jonathan of the number), he killed himself upon the battle-field. The bodies of Saul and his sons were exposed by the enemy upon the wall of Bethshan, but were secretly removed by the men of Jabesh-Gilead who in the remembrance of their former obligations to Saul (1 Sam. xi.), gave the bodies honorable burial. Their bones were afterwards removed by David to Zelah, and buried in the sepulchre of Kish. Saul was anointed B. C. 1791.

SA'VIOR or SA'VIOUR. See JESUS.

SAW (Heb. MEGERAH, MASSOR). Egyptian saws were single-handed, the teeth usually inclining toward the handle, instead of away from it like ours. In most cases they have bronze blades, attached to the handles by leather thongs, but some of those in the British Museum have their blades let into them like our knives. A double-handed iron saw has been found at Nimrud. Double-handed saws were used (1 K. vii. 9; 2 Sam. xii. 31).

SCALES. Heb. PELES, a balance, (Is. xl. 12); also weight (Prov. xvi. 11). See WEIGHTS and MEASURES.

SCAPE'-GOAT. See ATONEMENT.

SCAR'LET. COLORS.

SCEP'TRE (Heb. SHEBET, Gr. skeptron). ROD or STAFF. A rod or decorated staff, sometimes six feet long, borne by kings and magistrates as a symbol of authority (Gen. xlix. 10).

SCE'VA (prepared). A Jew at Ephesus and leader among the priests (Acts xix. 14, 16). His seven sons pretended to practice exorcism.

SCHISM (Gr. schisma). Division (1 Cor. i. 10; rent, Matt. ix. 16). A rent or fissure, used in the N. T. to denote a division in the Church, by contentions.

SCHOOL (Gr. schole, leisure), (Acts xix. 9). A place where a teacher and his disciples met and held discussions. See EDUCATION.

The Arab school is primitive—a room with a smooth floor (often the bare ground) and one or two windows (generally without glass or any protection), a board and piece of chalk for each boy, and one for the teacher. The teacher also has a Koran from which he reads. The pupils learn to write by imitating the writing of their teacher. They spell by reciting the names of the letters as (n) NOON, (a) ALIF, (g) GAMEL, NAG (a colt). The rules of the Church are carefully taught, also grammar Very few go beyond this in the schools. Those who are destined to the Church are educated specially for that end; and study theology, rhetoric, numbers, and other branches. Some of the priests (ulema) are very well educated, and have a good knowledge of their own and the literature of other people.

SCI'ENCE (L. scientia, knowledge; Heb. MADDA; Gr. gnosis). In Dan. i. 4, and 1 Tim. vi. 20, the original means knowledge and not science.

In Wickliffe's Bible, in Luke i. 77, there is the sentence "science of health," instead of "knowledge of salvation," in the present edition. In Col. ii. 3, is "wisdom and science" for "wisdom and knowledge," as now written, and in 1 Tim. vi. 20, for science the old edition has "kunyinge" (cunning). See TIMOTHY in HISTORY OF THE BOOKS.

SCORPION.

SCOR'PION (Heb. AKRAB; Gr. skorpios). One of the largest and most malignant of all the insect tribes. It resembles the lobster. Those found in S. Europe seldom exceed 2 ins. in length, but, in tropical climates, they are 10 or 12. They live upon other insects, but kill and devour their own species also. When it is placed in danger, and sees no way of escape, it will sting itself to death. Their sting is very poisonous; it occasions great pain and inflammation, with alternate chills and burning. The scorpion of Judæa when curled up resembles an egg; hence the comparison in Luke xi. 11, 12; Rev. ix. 3–10.

SCOURG'ING. See PUNISHMENTS.

SCRIBE. See HISTORY OF THE BOOKS.

SCRIP (Heb. YALKUT—ZIKLON; Gr. pera). A bag or sack, in which travelers carried their food, or articles of convenience (1 K. xvii. 40; Matt. x. 10).

SCRIP'TURE. See HISTORY OF THE BOOKS.

SCROLL (Heb. SEPHER; Gr. biblion). MS. roll. See WRITING.

SCUR'VY. The diseases rendered "scab" and "scurvy," in Lev. xxi. 20, xxii. 22, and Deut. xxviii. 27, may be almost any skin-disease.

SCYTHE. See SICKLE (Jer. l. 16).

SCYTH'IAN (Col. iii. 11). Barbarians, living on the N. of the Black Sea and the Caspian. Herodotus (i. 103) says the Scythians made an incursion through Palestine, into Egypt, in the time of Josiah. This may account for the name Scythopolis, which may have been given by some of those people who settled at Bethshean.

SEA. This word is used in several ways: 1. Ocean (Gen. i. 10).—2. The Mediterranean Sea (Deut. xi. 24).—3. Any inland lake or sea (Ez. xlvii. 8).—4. Any great water-course, as the Nile or Euphrates (Is. xix. 5).

SALT SEA, THE. The most ancient name for the Dead Sea (Gen. xiv. 3; Num. xxxiv. 3; Deut. iii. 17; Josh. iii. 16). It is called the Sea of the Arabah (plain) in Deut. iii. 17, and the East Sea by Joel (ii. 20), Ezekiel (xlvii. 18), and by Zechariah (xiv. 8). In 2 Esd. (v. 7) it is called the Sodomitish Sea. Josephus calls it Lake Asphaltitis. The name Dead Sea was given by the Greeks (Pausanias, v. 7, and Galen, iv. 9); and by the Latins (Justin, xxxiv. 3). The Arabic name is Bahr Lut (Sea of Lot). The Dead Sea is the 3d of the lakes in the course of the Jordan, lying deepest in the valley at its S. end. It is 46 ms. long from N. to S., and 10 ms. wide, and its surface is 1317 ft. below the ocean level (Lynch). The depression was first noticed (in our day) in 1837. The great heat of the region carries off the water by evaporation. The Jordan flows into the N. end. 12 ms. (by the path) down the E. shore there enters the Zurka Main (the ancient Callirrhoë—the En Eglaim), and, 8 ms. further down the shore, the Mojib (Arnon); 10 ms. further, the Beni Hamad; 2 ms. beyond this, the Wady Kerak entering, by several channels, just above the peninsula; and just below it, in the lower bay of the lake, there are 10 or 12 streams; large and small: the largest being the Wady el Jeib, which drains ⅔ds of the Arabah. On the W. side, the first large stream is the Kedron (Wady el Nar), 5 to 6 ms. from the N. end of the lake; 8 ms. further S. is Wady Khureitum; 5 ms. beyond is Wady Sudeir, at Ain Jidy (Engedi); 2 ms. from this, Wady Areyeh, which, near Hebron, is called Wady Dibbeh; and beyond, at intervals of 3 or 4 ms., are, Birket Halil (Khuberah), Wady Seiyal, and Wady en Nemriyeh, which last flows by the N. side of the rock Masada, and Wady Zuweirah, just N. of the salt mountain of Usdum. Besides these, there are a great number of smaller streams all around the sea, with or without names. There is no visible outlet. The sea is divided into 2 parts by the peninsula of Lisan (tongue, Heb. LASHEN), which is about 9 ms. long, from N. E. to S. W., 4 to 6 ms. wide, and joined to the E. shore by a neck 5 ms. wide. The channel of the sea is 3 to 5 ms. wide opposite the Lisan, and is said to be fordable at the time of the lowest water, in October. The water of the main basin is 1300 ft. deep in the deepest part, opposite Ain Terabeh. The S. bay (Josh. xv. 2) is very shallow, varying from 12 to 3 ft. Careful observations have found that 20 million cubic ft. of water is poured, daily, into the sea, while its evaporating capacity is 24 million in the hottest months, and less than 20 in the rainy season. (See Humboldt). It is believed that the level rises 10 to 15 ft. during the winter rains—falling again during the summer.

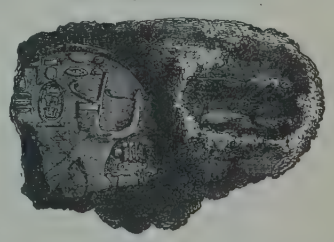
The mountains come close to the shore on both the east and west sides, and are quite uniform in hight throughout the whole length, the eastern range being much the higher, and more broken by ravines. The general color is brown or reddish brown on the east (being sandstone, red and yellow, with porphyry), and gray, with whitish tints, on the west side (being limestone over sandstone). The only vegetation is found around the springs, and in the wadies, where palms, tamarisks, mimosa, osiers, oleanders, and a variety of trees and shrubs, besides grain and flowers, form a grateful relief to the general desolation. A plateau divides the mountains on the east side, half way up, extending from the head of the sea south as far as the Zurka Main, which is visible, near sunset, from Jerusalem. The western side is divided into several strata, which are quite distinct; and there are three parallel beaches, one above the other—the highest, 50 feet above the water, extending from Wady Zuweirah north to Ain Jidy, nearly 20 miles. Above Ain Jidy there is but one beach (covered with angular bits of flint, not rounded gravel), which skirts the mountains, being widest at the mouths of the largest brooks, as at the Kidron (Wady Nar) and Ain Terabeh, where it is more than half a mile wide. Many of the headlands come down steep into the water, cutting the beach in two, and therefore cannot be passed, except by climbing. There is a line of driftwood bordering the beach and marking the high-water line, all around the sea, brought down by the Jordan and other streams, gray and bleached, and some of it of great antiquity. On the west shore of the south bay is the Salt Mountain of Sodom, called by the Arabs Khasm Usdum. (See GEOLOGY). There is an island in the sea, west of the Jordan, lying 300 feet from the shore at low water, circular and 400 feet in diameter. Stones and driftwood entirely cover the island. Some suppose the square stones found here are remains of ancient structures, because there are no similar stones on the shore. The plains at the north and south ends of the sea are flat, barren, stony, gently sloping up from the water, crusted with salt, soft and slimy to the foot, and destitute of vegetation, except a few reeds cluster round a spring. The eastern side of the south bay is an exception, where the vegetation, fed by copious streams of sweet water, is abundant, and with great variety of trees, plants, flowers and grasses.

The water of the sea is the heaviest known in all the world, being 12¼ lbs. to the gallon, distilled water weighing 9¾ lbs. This weight is due to the mineral salts held in solution. Eggs float with one-third exposed above the surface. The color is like the ocean, a greenish blue. The Jordan may be traced for several miles by its muddy color, as it flows into the clear water of the sea.

The analysis of the water of the Dead Sea by many scientific men, gives generally the same result, with but little variation, which is, that there are salts of magnesia, soda, lime, potass, manganese, ammonia, aluminium and iron; and of these there are chlorides, sulphates and bromides. The quantity averages from 13 to 26 parts in 100, according to the season of the year and the part of the sea from which the sample was taken.

Except the absence of vegetation, the appearance of the sea is that of savage and beautiful wildness. The presence of many kinds of birds and wild fowl enlivens the scenes. All along the shores, wherever a brook flows in, there the canebrakes, trees and shrubs harbor partridges, snipe, ducks, doves, hawks, larks, quails, besides many kinds not yet named, or not identified, in great flocks. Frogs are also to be seen in the marshes (not the salt marshes) and hares in the thickets.

There has been no change in the size of the sea within the historic period; except the filling up of the south bay by silt from the rivers, and the destruction of the cities of the plain is believed to have been independent of the position or character of the sea, or the bed in which it lies. (See SODOM and GEOLOGY).



SEAL OF EGYPTIAN AND ASSYRIAN KINGS.

SEAL (Heb. HOTHAM; Gr. sphragis). The seal takes the place of our signature in the East. A name or device, well known as belonging to a certain person, was engraved on a seal of a ring, or on a small cylinder, and this was stamped on the papyrus, or parchment, with ink, or was pressed on a piece of clay, or wax, which was attached to the document. Many seals and cylinders of this kind have been found among the ancient ruins in Assyria and Egypt. Seals were used by the ancient kings in signing or witnessing their treaties or decrees, and there is a piece of clay bearing the impression of both the Assyrian and Egyptian king's seals in the British Museum, deposited there by Layard, who found it in Assyria, and who thinks it the compact of Sabacho and of Sennacherib.

BAAL.

MARRIAGE RING.

Doors of tombs, or houses, or treasuries, or any place that was to be guarded from intrusion, were closed, and a piece of clay stuck over the fastening, and this was impressed with the seal of the keeper or owner, so that the least meddling with the clay would break it (Job. xxxviii. 14). The modern Orientals carry a seal hung by a string, or chain to the neck, or on the finger ring.

Specimens of engraved seals and gems are found in great numbers in the museums of antiquities, some of which are most valuable as confirmations of history. One in Alnwick museum bears the name of Osirtasen I, 3000 B. C. See the ring of Thothmes, and of Suphis, pages 46, 22. See seal of Haggai, p. 166, and Abraxas, p. 167.

SEA'MEN. See SHIP.

SEA'MONSTERS. See DRAGON.

SEASON. CLIMATE.

SE'BA. First son of Cush (Gen. x. 7). A nation in Africa included in Cush, and having a name and power in Solomon's time (Ps. lxxii. 10). Located in the island Meroe, which lies at the junction of the white and blue branches of the Nile. The chief city (Meroe) had an oracle of Jupiter Ammon (or the ram-headed Num), ruins of which are now visible, besides pyramids, and other indications of a great population. The great stature and beauty of this people was a theme of the ancients (Herod iii. 20, 114; Is. xliii. 3, xlv. 14; Ez. xxiii. 42). See Josephus, A. J. ii. 10, 2.

SECA'CAH. In the wilderness of Judah (Josh. xv. 61). Lost.

SE'CHU (eminence), (1 Sam. xix. 22). Famous for a great well or cistern. Supposed to be Bir Neballa near Neby Samwil. Five ms. N. of Jerusalem.

SECUN'DUS (second). A disciple who went with Paul in some of his journeys (Acts xx. 4).

SEDECI'AS. 1. Father of Maaseiah (Bar. i. 1), apparently identified with the false prophet in Jer. xxix. 21, 22.—2. Zedekiah, king of Judah (Bar. i. 8).

SEED. Often used figuratively in Scripture (Dan. ix. 1). The Mosaic Law would not permit a field to be sown with mingled seed of several kinds (Lev. xix. 19). The precious seed is often committed to the ground with many fears, but the harvest is a season of joy (Ps. cxxvi. 5, 6).

SEED-TIME. See SOWING.

SEER. One who sees into the future. PROPHET.

SEETHE. To boil (Ex. xvi. 23). To prepare food in hot liquor.

SE'GUB (elevated). 1. Youngest son of Hiel (1 K. xvi. 34).—2. Son of Hezron (1 Chr. 21, 22).

SEIR (rugged). MOUNT (Gen. xiv. 6), and LAND OF (Gen. xxxii. 3, xxxvi. 30). The mountain and district on the east side of the Arabah, from Akabah to the Dead Sea (Deut. ii. 1, 8). Seir, the Horite, inhabited the land (ib. 20). Called GEBALA (mountain) by Josephus; and the northern section, from Petra, is still called JEBAIL by the Arabs. Its north border was probably Mt. Halak (naked), a range of white cliffs which run across the Arabah 8 ms. south of the Dead Sea (Josh. xi. 17). Esau drove out the Horites who dwelt in rock-hewn dwellings (Deut. ii. 12), probably such as are seen now in Petra, and changed its name to EDOM. Ezekiel prophesied the desolation of Mt. Seir, which seems to have been fulfilled in the present condition of the country (Ez. xxxv.).—2. SEIR (Josh. xv. 10). In Judah, between Kirjath Jearim and Beth Shemesh. The village of SARIS, on the ridge between Wady Aly and W. Ghurab, is probably near the ancient site, which is rugged enough to bear the name.

SEI'RATH (Judg. iii. 26). In Mt. Ephraim, where Ehud gathered the army with which he destroyed the Moabites who were with Eglon, the fat king, whom he killed in his tent. Lost.

SE'LA. SELAH (the rock). Petra. See EDOM, SEIR.

SE'LA-HAM-MAH'LEKOTH (the cliff of divisions). In the wilderness of Maon. Where David escaped from Saul (1 Sam. xxiii. 28). Lost.

SE'LAH. Pause.

SE'LED (exultation). Son of Nadab (1 Chr. ii. 30).

SELEU'CIA. The seaport of Antioch in Syria. On the sea, near the mouth of the river Orontes. Paul (and Barnabas) sailed from here on his first journey (Acts xiii. 4), and probably landed there on his return (xiv. 26). Named after the first Seleucus, who built the fort and made the harbor, and was buried here, B. C. 175. It was a free city in Paul's time (Pliny, v. 18). The remains of the ancient works are still sound, and in use, especially the two piers of the harbor called Paul and Barnabas.

SELEU'CUS IV, PHILOP'ATOR (loving his father). King of ASIA (2 Macc. iii. 3), son and successor of ANTIOCHUS THE GREAT. After his father's death he ascended the throne. He was murdered after a reign of twelve years, B. C. 175, by HELIODORUS (Dan. xi. 20). His son gained the crown in 162 B. C. (1 Macc. vii. 1; 2 Macc. xiv. 1).

SEM. SHEM the patriarch (Luke iii. 36).

SEMACHI'AH (Jah sustains). Son of SHEMAIAH 9 (1 Chr. xxvi. 7).

SEM'EI. 1. SHIMEI 14 (1 Esd. ix. 32).—2. SHIMEI 16 (Esth. xi. 2).—3. Father of Mattathias, in the genealogy of Jesus (Luke iii. 26).

SEMIT'IC. SHEM. LANGUAGES. SHEMITIC.

SENA'AH (thorny). The "children of Senaah" were among the "people of Israel" who returned from captivity (Ezr. ii. 35; Neh. vii. 38).

SEN'ATE (Gr. gerousia, the elders), (Acts v. 21). ELDER.

SEN'EH (thorn), (1 Sam. xiv. 4). The south rock at the pass of Michmash, memorable in connection with the adventure of Jonathan and his armor-bearer.

SENIR' (a coat of mail). The Amorite name of MT. HERMON (1 Chr. v. 23; Ez. xxvii. 5; Deut. iii. 9); should be written without the "h," and also in Can. iv. 8.

SENNACH'ERIB (Heb. TSIN-AKKI-IRIB, the moon increases, brothers). King of Assyria. He mounted the throne B. C. 702. In the fourteenth year of Hezekiah he attacked the fenced cities of Judah, and took them (2 K. xviii. 13–16) after having successfully made various war expeditions. He attacked Babylon B. C. 699, and then made a second invasion into Palestine. Hezekiah had sought the protection of Egypt, upon which Sennacherib marched into Egypt and sent proposals to Hezekiah (2 K. ix. 7). Hezekiah not submitting, caused the king of Assyria to send him a threatening written message. Whilst Sennacherib was awaiting the result his camp received a divine visitation, by which, in one night, one hundred and eighty-five thousand of his men were destroyed (2 K. xviii. 13), at which the king fled to his capital. He reigned for twenty-two years. He appears to have been the first king who fixed the seat of government permanently at Nineveh, which he adorned. Of his closing life we read in 2 K. xix. 37; Is. xxxvii. 38.

SEN'UAH (properly HASSENUAH, bristling). Father of Judah (Neh. xi. 9), who was over the second city.

SEO'RIM (barley). Chief of the fourth course of priests in David's time (1 Chr. xiv. 8).

SE'PHAR (Gen. x. 30). A mount in the East. Now called ZAFAR, an ancient seaport town in Yemen, in the province of Hadramawt (Hazarmaveth), Arabia, between Oman and Mirbat, on the shore of the Indian Ocean, at the foot of a lofty mountain. Frankincense is only found on the mountain of Zafar. It was the capital of the Himyerite kings. There was a Christian church there in A. D. 343.

SEPHA'RAD (Obad. v. 20). Where the Jews of Jerusalem were held captive. Most probably IONIA is meant.

SEPHARVA'IM (2 K. xix. 13; Is. xxxvii. 13; 2 K. xvii. 24). A city of Assyria, from which people were brought to repeople Samaria. Now SIPPARA, on the Euphrates, above Babylon (Ptol. v. 18). A tradition affirms that Noah buried near this city the records of the antediluvian world. It was a great seat of learning. The sun was the chief object of worship, and they burnt their children in the fire to Adramelech and Anamelech, the male and female powers of the sun (2 K. xvii. 31), which pagan worship they carried with them to Samaria.

SEPHAR'VITES. People from SEPHARVAIM.

SEPH'ELA. Greek form of the Hebrew HAS SHEFELAH, the ancient name for the plains between the hills of Samaria and Judæa and the Mediterranean Sea. Its northern part is called SHARON (Deut. i. 7; Josh. ix. 1, and in many other passages). Between Ekron and Gaza there were 47 cities besides their villages. It is one of the most productive districts of Palestine, and yearly produces fine crops of grain and fruit. It was anciently the grain-producing district, and was the subject of constant contention between the Israelites and Philistines.

SEP'TUAGINT (L. septuaginta, the seventy.) The most ancient Greek version of the O. T. See HISTORY OF THE BOOKS. So named from the sacred idea attached to the number 70.

SEP'ULCHRE (a burial-place or tomb). See TOMB.

SE'RAH (abundance). Daughter of Asher (Gen. xlvi. 17).

SERAI'AH. The name of persons alluded to in the following passages: 2 Sam. viii. 17; 2 K. xxv. 18; Ezr. vii. 1; Jer. xxxvi. 26; xl. 8, li. 59. The last is termed "a quiet prince." He bore to the Jews a message from Jeremiah.

SER'APHIM (burning ones, or angels of fire). Two beings, each with 6 wings, seen by Isaiah in a vision (Is. vi. 2, 3).

SE'RED (fear). First-born of ZEBULUN, and ancestor of the SARDITES (Gen. xlvi. 14).

SER'GIUS PAU'LUS. Governor of the isle of Cyprus. He was converted under the teachings of Paul, A. D. 48 (Acts xiii. 7).

SER'JEANT (Gr. rhabdouchos, a rod-holder). An officer who attends on Roman magistrates of the higher class, and executes their orders (Acts xvi. 35, 38).

SE'RON. A general of Antiochus Epiphanes, defeated by Judas Maccabæus, B. C. 166 (1 Macc. iii., xiii. 24).

SER'PENT (Heb. NAHASH, any serpent, but especially the cobra). The serpent is alluded to in many passages in the Bible, and nearly always for its typical qualities, or habits, as intensifying similar things in the human family. Satan is called "The Old Serpent" (Rev. xii. 9; 2 Cor. xi. 1). See ADDER, ZAHAL, TANNIN, SARAF; Gr. herpeton, ophis.

SERPENT CHARMING. From the earliest times in the East certain persons have exercised a remarkable power over poisonous snakes, and this is noticed in James iii. 7. The horned cerastes, and the hooded snakes are the kinds usually handled. They do not always take out the poison fangs. The secret of the power seems to be the simple courage and confidence of the men. They use shrill flutes and drums, which seem to attract the attention of the serpents.

SE'RUG (branch). Son of Reu, ancestor of Abraham (Gen. xi. 20–23). Jewish tradition says he was the first Idolater (Josh. xxiv. 2).

SER'VANT. 1. Heb. ENOSH, "man" (1 Sam. xxiv. 7).—2. Heb. NAAR (Num. xxii. 22), boy, lad, young man (Gen. xiv. 24).—3. Heb. MESHARETH, to wait on, serve (Ex. xxxiii. 11).—4. Heb. EBED; found in the O. T. 800 times, and usually rendered servant, sometimes man-servant (Gen. ix. 25–27). This word often denotes a man who dedicates himself voluntarily to the service of another. Thus, Joshua was the servant of Moses. The servants of God are those who are devoted to His service. The word usually means in the Bible a hired servant, or one whose service was the property of his master. The households of the early patriarchs contained many servants, who were treated with kindness, justice, and they were trusted and confided in (Gen. xiv. 11–16). They shared the religious privileges of the family (Gen. xvii. 9–13), and were not transferred to other masters.

SETH. First son of Adam after the death of Abel (Gen. iv. 25, 26).

SE'THUR (hidden). A spy and son of Michael (Num. xiii. 13).

SET'TLE (Heb. AZARAH), (Ez. xliii. 14). A port settled or sunk lower. Elsewhere "Court" in 2 Chr. iv. 9. Ledge in Fairbairn.

SEVEN CHURCHES OF ASIA, AND PATMOS, THE. ASIA MINOR holds the next place to Palestine in the Christian heart, being so full of precious associations, which lend a charm to its scenery, and consecrate its venerable ruins. History, both sacred and classic, has given enduring fame to every harbor, valley, mountain, river, or brook, every city and hamlet, and peopled them with the mythological shades of the heathen gods, or the more real forms of celebrated men, from Pagan Troy to Christian Antioch.

It is the land of Homer, one of the earliest and greatest of poets; of Herodotus, the father of classic history; of Paul, the great Apostle, and chief among the founders of the Christian Church; and a host of brilliant men and women whose names are familiar in history and poetry.

Empires have been lost and won on its fields and in its harbors, by Greeks, Romans, Persians, Christians, and Moslems. During two hundred years, the Crusaders marched in countless thousands over its rugged mountains and rapid streams, inspired with the love of arms, the thirst for glory, enthusiasm for the cross, and fired by hatred of the Moslem. For six hundred years the followers of Mohammed have held the land in a humiliating bondage, aggravated by fanatical hate, intensified by persecution of the Christian people, the desecration and ruin of their churches, and the mutilation or destruction of the monumental art of its past glorious days.

In EPHESUS, desolated, Christians deplore the extinction of the first candlestick of the Revelation

The desolation is complete. The temple of Diana, or the church of Mary, will equally elude the search of the curious traveler. The populousness of SMYRNA, on a new site, is derived from Franks, Armenians, and Turks. The God of Mohammed, without a rival or a son, is invoked in the mosques of PERGAMUS and THYATIRA: SARDIS is reduced to a miserable village. PHILADELPHIA alone has been saved, by prophesy or courage. Among the Greek colonies and churches of Asia, Philadelphia only is still erect, a column in a scene of ruins; a pleasing example that the paths of honor and safety may sometimes be the same. The circus and stately theatres of LAODICEA are now peopled with wolves and foxes, and its costly marbles and beautiful sculptures quarried for lime and building materials.

Asia Minor is the natural centre of the Turkish Empire, and is a land of ruins. Its shores are indented with many good harbors, but—except one or two—without trade, shipping, and many even without a fishing-boat. Cities and villages have given place to deserts; and the richest plains are left uncultivated. The fine monuments of all ages are rapidly crumbling beneath the hammers and saws of the Moslem.

SARDIS.

It was the custom of the Romans to send exiles to the most barren and desolate islands; and it is said by Irenæus (and Eusebius, who follows him) that John beheld the visions of the Apocalypse about the close of the reign of the Emperor Domitian. Tertullian relates that John was thrown into a cask of oil (boiling), at Rome; but was saved from injury by a miracle, and then sent to Patmos. It may be as well to note, that this mode of punishment is not recorded by any other writer as having ever been used at Rome; and that the story is probably a tradition only, without foundation.

Following the New Testaments hints (for they give no direct account), we find John at Ephesus, where some persecution, or tumult (such as occurred in Paul's case), caused his flight or exile, and drove him to Patmos. While there, his greatest solicitude was for the seven churches in Asia, for whose warning and correction he wrote the Revelation. (See PATMOS.)

SEV'ENTY, THE. 1. The seventy disciples of Jesus sent out (Luke x. 17).—2. Is also used to denote the Septuagint.

SEXTA'RIUS (Gr. xestes). Nearly one pint English (Mark vii. 4). WEIGHTS, etc.

SHAAL'ABBIN (Josh. xix. 42). Dan, near Ajalon, probably the same as SHA'ALBIM (city of foxes), (Judg. i.). Now Esalin, near Sura, (ZORAH). Eliahba was one of David's 37 heroes (2 Sam. xxiii. 32), and is called THE SHAALBONITE, SHAAL'BONITE THE. One of David's 37 heroes (2 Sam. xxiii. 32), a native of Shalabon.

SHA'APH (division). 1. Son of Jahdai (1 Chr. ii. 47).—2. Son of Caleb 1 (ii. 49).

SHAB'BETHAI (Sabbath-born). 1. A Levite who assisted Ezra (Ezr. x. 15), and apparently the same who was with Jeshua (Neh. viii. 7).—2. A chief (xi. 16).

SHACHI'A (Heb. SHACHEYAH, accusation). Son of Shaharaim (1 Chr. viii. 10).

SHAD'DAI (Heb. SHADDAY). The Almighty. See JAH.

SHA'DRACH (circuit of the sun). The Chaldee name of Hananiah 7, one of the three friends of Daniel delivered from the burning furnace (Dan. i. 3). He was promoted to a high office after the appointment of Daniel as ruler of the province of Babylon. In refusing to worship the idols of Nebuchadnezzar, Shadrach, with Meshach and Abednego, were thrown into a furnace (Dan. iii.).

SHA'GE (erring). Father of Jonathan (1 Chr. xi. 34).

SHAHARA'IM (the two dawns). See 1 Chr. viii. 8. It has been proposed to remove the period from the end of verse 7, and read thus, "and Gera begat Uzza, Ahihud, and Shaharaim," etc.

SHAHAZI'MAH (heights). Issachar, between Tabor and the Jordan (Josh. xix. 22).

SHA'LEM (Gen. xxxiii. 18), The opinion seems to be that the text ought to read "Jacob came safe to the city of Shechem." If a proper name is meant, there is a place ready for it in the modern Salim. See ÆNON.

SHA'LIM, THE LAND OF. Benjamin. Between the "land of Shalisha," and the "land of Yemini," through which Saul passed on the way after his father's asses. Probably the land of Shual, 6 ms. north of Michmash (1 Sam. ix. 4).

SHAL'ISHA, THE LAND OF (1 Sam. ix. 4). Between Mt. Ephraim and the land of Shalim. Lost.

SHALLECH'ETH, THE GATE (falling or casting down). One of the gates of the house of Jehovah; now supposed to be the Bab. Silsileh, which enters the Haram wall 600 feet from the S. W. corner.

SHAL'LUM (retribution). 1. Son of Jabesh who killed Zachariah I, king of Israel, and usurped his kingdom, B. C. 772 (2 K. xv. 10–15).—2. See JEHOAHAZ 2.—3. The husband of Huldah, the prophetess (2 K. xxii. 14). Others of this name are alluded to in Num. xxvi. 49; 1 Chr. ii. 40, ix. 17, 19, 31; Ezr. ii. 42, vii. 2, x. 24, 42; Neh. iii. 12, vii. 45.

SHAL'LUN. Son of Col-hozeh. He was ruler of a district and repaired the fountain-gate and the wall (Neh. iii. 15).

SHAL'MAI (my thanks). Ancestor of Nethinim, who returned from captivity (Ezr. ii. 46).

SHAL'MAN. Shalmaneser, king of Assyria (Hos. x. 14).

SHALMANE'SER (reverential toward fire). King of Assyria. He ascended the throne, B. C. 730 (2 K. xvii. 3).

SHA'MA (hearing). Son of Hothan of Aroer (1 Chr. xi. 44). An assistant of David.

SHAMARI'AH. Son of Rehoboam (2 Chr. xi. 19).

SHAM'BLES (Gr. makellon). A meat market, or place for the sale of provisions (1 Cor. x. 25).

SHA'MED (persecution). Son of Elpaal (1 Chr. viii. 12).

SHA'MER. 1. A Levite (1 Chr. vi. 46).—2. Son of Heber (vii. 34).

SHAM'GAR (cup-bearer). Son of Anath, third Judge of Israel. It is recorded that he killed 600 Philistines with an ox-goad (Judg. iii. 31, v. 6).

SHAM'HUTH (waste). Captain in David's army (1 Chr. xxvii. 8).

SHA'MIR (a thorn), (Josh. xv. 48). In the mts. of Judah, S. of Hebron, near Jattir. Lost.—2. In Mt. Ephraim, the residence and burial-place of Tola, the judge (Judg. x. 1, 2). Supposed to be SAMMUR, a ruin 10 ms. N. E. of Shechem, on the edge of the Jordan valley.

SHA'MIR (tried). Son of Micah (1 Chr. xxiv. 24).

SHAM'MA (desolation). Son of Zophar (1 Chr. vii. 37).

SHAM'MAH. 1. One of the 3 chiefs of David's 30 heroes (2 Sam. xxiii. 11–17).—2. Brother of David (1 Sam. xvi. 9). Others of this name are mentioned in Gen. xxxvi. 13; 2 Sam. xxiii. 25, 33; 1 Chr. xi. 27, xxvii. 8.

SHAM'MAI (desolated). 1. Son of Onam, and brother of Jada (1 Chr. ii. 28, 32).—2. Son of Rekem (1 Chr. ii. 44, 45).—3. Brother of Miriam and Ishbah (1 Chr. iv. 17).

SHE'AR JA'SHUB (the remnant shall return). Son of ISAIAH (Is. vii. 3).

SHE'BA (red), (Gen. x. 7). 1. Grandson of Cush; 2. Tenth son of Joktan (ver. 28); 3. Grandson of Keturah (ib. xxv. 3). 1. The name of the kingdom in South Arabia, before Himyer took its place, a few years before Christ (24—Strabo). Here were the Sabæans of Diodorus (iii. 38, 46). A queen of Sheba visited Solomon (1 K. x.), attended by a great train, camels loaded with spices, gold, and precious stones. The chief cities were Seba, Uzal (now Sana), Sephar (now Zafar), and Mariaba (now Marib). This district had the chief riches, best country, and greatest numbers of all the four peoples of Arabia. The local history is authentic only as far back as the first century A. D. Their ancient religion was pagan.—2. Settled on the Persian Gulf. On the island of Bahreyn, in the Gulf, are the ruins of an ancient city called Seba. Its merchants are mentioned in Ezekiel xxvii. 22.—3. The sons of Keturah are charged by Job (i. 15, vi. 19), with the robber habits that are peculiar to the Bedawin of our day.

SHE'BA (Josh. xix. 2). Simeon, near Beersheba. SHEMA.

SHE'BAH. Shibeah was the fourth well dug by Isaac's people (Gen. xxvi. 33). Abraham dug a well here also (Gen. xxi. 25–32). The name is one of the most ancient known, and is interpreted variously as "seven," "an oath," "abundance," and as "a lion." BEERSHEBA.

SHEBAM' (Num. xxxii. 3). East of Jordan. Given to Reuben. It was "a land for cattle." SHIBMAH or SIBMAH.

SHEBANI'AH (Jah has made grow). 1. A Levite who sealed the covenant (Neh. x. 10; ix. 4, 5).—2. One of a priestly family who sealed the covenant (x. 4).—3. Another Levite who sealed the covenant (x. 12).—4. A priest (1 Chr. xv. 24).

SHEB'ARIM (dividing), (Josh. vii. 5). Near Ai. Lost.

SHEB'NA (youth). A steward in king Hezekiah's palace (Is. xxii. 15).

SHEB'UEL (captive of God). 1. A descendant of Gershom (1 Chr. xxiii. 16).—2. Chief in the thirteenth course in the Temple-choir (xxv. 4).

SHECANI'AH. 1. Chief of the tenth course of priests in David's time (1 Chr. xxiv. 11).—2. One who distributed portions to priests in Hezekiah's reign (2 Chr. xxxi. 15).

SHECHANI'AH (families with Jah). Seven of this name are mentioned in 1 Chr. iii. 21, 22; Ezr. viii. 3, 5, x. 2; Neh. iii. 29, vi. 18, xii. 3.

SHECH'EM (ridge). SICHEM (Gen. xxxiii. 18). It is not certain whether the city was named from Shechem, the son of Hamor, or that he was named after the city. It is on the top of the ridge between the waters of the Jordan and the Mediterranean Sea, between Ebal and Gerizim (Judg. ix. 7). Called Sychar in John iv. 5, in the story of the meeting of Jesus and the woman of Samaria. Now Nablus (Neapolis, so named by Vespasian—Jos., B. J., iv. 8, 1). Also known as Mabortha (Pliny v. 13). The situation is a favored one, and excites the admiration of all travelers, Dr. Clarke saying, that "there is nothing finer in all Palestine." The valley is sheltered by a high mountain on each side, and only about 1500 ft. wide, and elevated 1800 ft. above the sea. Water flows from the city E. and W. to the Jordan, and to the Mediterranean sea. The valley is full of gardens, orchards of all kinds of fruits, watered by fountains, and enlivened by the songs of birds.

SHECH'INAH (habitation). Indwelling of God, is properly applied to visible manifestations of God's presence. Thus, Num. v. 3, in the midst whereof I dwell is rendered by the Targum "among whom my shekinah is dwelling." Difference of opinion exists as to whether there was any continuous visible manifestations of God's presence in the Holy of Holies over the cappereth or mercy-seat. Jewish authorities hold there was, and that this shekinah did not return to the second temple. Many Christian writers deny its continuous visibility even in the first.

SHED'EUR (darting of fire). Father of Elizur (Num. i. 5).

SHEEP. Heb. AYIL, a ram (Gen. xv. 9); KAR, a lamb; KEBES, a he-lamb (xxx. 40); fem. KIBSAH, ewe-lamb (Gen. xxi. 28); ZON, ZONA, ZONAH, a flock of small cattle (Gen. iv. 4); RAHEL, RACHEL, fem. "ewe" (Gen. xxxi. 38; SEH, one of a flock, i. e. sheep or goat (Gen. xxii. 7); TALEH, a lamb, young and tender.

Of the Syrian sheep there are two varieties: the Bedaween, which have long and thick tails, but differ in no other respect from the larger kinds of sheep among us. The others have very large and broad tails, with a small end which turns back upon itself; they are of a substance between fat and marrow, which is not eaten separately, but mixed with the lean meat in many of their dishes, and also used instead of butter. A common sheep of this sort, without the head, feet, shin, and entrails, weighs from 60 to 80 pounds, of which the tail itself is usually 10 or 15 (see cut on page 89), and when fattened, twice or thrice that weight.

SHEEP-FOLD.

SHEEP-MARKET, THE (John v. 2). Supposed to have been a GATE, and at present called St. Stephen's; and the great open ruined cistern near it is called the Pool of Bethesda.

SHEHARI'AH (Jah seeks). Son of Jeroham (1 Chr. viii. 26).

SHEK'EL. See MONEY.

SHE'LAH (petition). 1. Son of Judah 1 (Gen. xxxviii. 5, 11, 14, 26).—2. Heb. missile, sprout. Salah, son of Arphaxad (1 Chr. i. 18, 24).

SHE'LANITES, THE. Descendants of Shelah 1 (Num. xxvi. 20).

SHELEMI'AH. Nine of this name are alluded to in Ezr. x. 39; Neh. iii. 30, xiii. 13; Jer. xxxvii. 3, 13; 1 Chr. xxvi. 14; Ezr. x. 41; Jer. xxxvi. 14, 26).

SHEF'ELAH (see PHILISTIA). Low country; the plains below the hills of Judæa.

SHEL'EPH (partridge chick). Second son of Joktan, and father of a tribe who settled in Yemen, in Arabia, where there is now a district called Sulaf (Gen. x. 36).

SHE'LESH (tried). Son of Helem (1 Chr. vii. 35).

SHEL'OMI (pacific). Father of Ahihud (Num. xxxiv. 27).

SHEL'OMITH (love of peace). 1. Daughter of Dibri (Lev. xxiv. 11).—2. Daughter of Zerubbabel (1 Chr. iii. 19). Five others of the name are mentioned in 1 Chr. xxiii. 18, xxvi. 25, 26, 28, xxiii. 9; Ezr. viii. 10; 2 Chr. xi. 20.

SHEL'OMOTH (1 Chr. xxiv. 22). SHELOMITH.

SHEL'UMIEL (friend of God). Son of Zurishaddai (Num. i. 6).

SHEM. Eldest son of Noah (Gen. v. 32), settled between Japheth and Ham, the country from the Mediterranean Sea to the Indian Ocean, and from Lydia to the Red Sea, including Syria (Aram), Chaldæa (Arphaxad), Assyria (Asshur), Persia (Elam), and Arabia (Joktan). A special blessing is promised Shem in Gen. ix. 27.

SHEM'A. In Judah (Josh. xv. 26). SHEBA. Given to Simeon.

SHE'MA. 1. Ancestor of Bela (1 Chr. v. 8).—2. Son of Elpaal (viii. 13).—3. One who assisted Ezra (Neh. viii. 4).

SHEMAI'AH (Jah hears). Twenty-five of this name are alluded to in 1 K. xii. 22; 2 Chr. xi. 2, xii. 5, 7, 15; 1 Chr. iii. 22; Neh. iii. 29, iv. 37, v. 4, ix. 14; Neh. xi. 15; 1 Chr. ix. 16, xv. 8, 11, xxiv. 6, xxvi. 4, 6, 7; 2 Chr. xxix. 14; Ezr. viii. 13, 16, x. 21, 31; Neh. vi. 10, x. 8, xii. 6, 18, 34, 35, 36, 42; Jer. xxix. 24, 32; 2 Chr. xvii. 8, xxxi. 15, xxxv. 9; Jer. xxvi. 20, xxxvi. 12.

SHEMAI'AH (Jah hears). 1. A prophet of Israel (1 K. xii. 22–24). He is said to have written a history of Rehoboam's reign.—2. A Levite, who made a registry of 24 priestly classes (1 Chr. xv. 8).—3. A false prophet among the exiles in Babylon, opposed to Jeremiah (xxix. 24).—4. A false prophet in the pay of Sanballat and Tobiah (Num. iii. 8; Neh. vi. 10). 21 others were of no particular note.

SHEMARI'AH (Jah keeps). 1. A warrior who assisted David (1 Chr. xii. 5).—2. A layman (Ezr. x. 32).—3. One of the family of Bani (x. 41).

SHEME'BER (lofty flight). King of Zeboïm (Gen. xiv. 2).

SHE'MER (preserved). The owner of the hill on which the city of Samaria was built (1 K. xvi. 24).

SHEM'IDA (farm of wisdom). Son of Gilead (Num. xxvi. 32).

SHEM'IDAH (1 Chr. vii. 19).

SHEM'IDAITES, THE. Descendants of Shemida (Num. xxvi. 32).

SHEM'INITH. The name of a melody in Ps. vi. xii.

SHEMIR'AMOTH (Heaven most high). 1. One in David's choir (1 Chr. xv. 18, 20).—2. A Levite, teacher of the law (2 Chr. xvii. 8).

SHEMIT'IC. The Shemitic languages (see Gen. x. 21), are also called Aryan, and Syro-Arabic. The extent of this family of languages may be indicated by the boundaries—the highlands of Armenia on the north, the Tigris and its mountain ranges on the east, the Red Sea, Levant, and Asia Minor on the west—the south is limited by the ocean. The uniform climate of this vast region has tended to keep the people to their unvarying customs from age to age, whether in the cities, or in the country, or on the trackless waste.

TABLE OF THE SHEMITIC LANGUAGES.

Living.	Dead.	Classic.
Arabic and its dialects	Ethiopic	Arabic.
Amharic	Himyaritic.
Hebrew	Biblical, Hebrew; Samaritan Pentateuch; Carthaginian, Phœnician (Inscrip'n)	Hebraic.
Neo. Syriac	Chaldee, Masora, Targum; Biblical-Chaldee, Syriac; Peshito of 2d cent. A. D.; Cuneiform of Bab. & Nin.	Aramaic.

The Old Testament has traces of the changes in the languages of Palestine and Assyria, especially in the fragments of ancient poems, which contain many Aramaic words not used anywhere else in the Scriptures. The natural tendency of the Aryans has been, in all cases, to keep their language and customs free from any mixture from their neighbors; adopting very few words and very few habits from other people. Their language, religion, and manners were all unsocial, despotic, conservative; and what treasures they borrowed from the nations around them were not assimilated, but kept entire as when first found.

The Phœnician was so closely allied to the Hebrew as to be used in common; and it was more widely distributed (by sailors and merchants) than any other ancient speech, and from this very cause it went to pieces, after having become overloaded by adopted words. (The English language is being overloaded by Latinisms in the same manner).

The successor to Aramaic is Syriac, dating from the 2d century, A. D., in which there is a wealth of foreign words, especially Greek. The Aramaic after a career of eleven centuries as the sacred language of the Israelites, has, according to a law which works the same in all cases, passed away.

Eastern Aramaic is the language of the Targums, and of the Pharisees; while the Western branch is the language of the New Testament, of the Christians of the first century. As the sacred dialect disappeared from the popular mind, the work of the scholars arose to importance, in such works as the Targums. The Talmud was the growth of the ages dating from the Captivity to A. D. 426, but there are few additions to our knowledge of the languages used in the work.

Of the Palmyrene dialect the only remains are the inscriptions dating from A. D. 49 to A. D. 250, which contain words borrowed from the Arabic, Greek, and Latin.

The sacred dialect became classic, and confined to books, after the fall of Jerusalem, the chief seat of its schools being at Edessa until A. D. 440, when it was removed to Nisibis. Since the 8th century it has declined in interest, and was but partly restored to favor by the facilities afforded by the discovery of printing. (See CANON.) Chaldaic paraphrases of the Scriptures have thrown much light on manners and customs, and on certain difficult passages of the O. T., especially those claimed by Christians to be prophesies of the Messiah, which are proved beyond a question, by the paraphrases, to have been so regarded by the Jews, in all ages, before the appearance of Jesus the Christ.

The Arabic language shows by internal evidence its great antiquity, and its local habitation from the beginning in Arabia. Palgrave says that in Central Arabia, where very little or no foreign influence has ever been felt, that the Arabic is spoken now in the same purity as when Mohammed wrote the Koran, 1200 years ago. It is said in a legend that the language was formed by the union of several dialects, of which the Koreish was the leading one, and in which the Koran was written.

The Arabic is especially rich in words and in grammatical forms, and in greater number and variety than any other language.

The language was, as we know it, first the speech of robbers and herdsmen, without religion, superstitious, uncultivated; and afterwards that of a cultivated, self-satisfied, luxurious, licentious people, whose philosophy was borrowed, and religion invented and dogmatized in the most offensive and tiresome manner.

Its chief value to the Bible student is the vast mass of words that it furnishes in illustration of obscure Hebrew words, by which many obscure passages have been explained.

SHEM'UEL. SAMUEL. 1. Son of Ammihud (Num. xxxiv. 20).—2. SAMUEL the prophet (1 Chr. vi. 33).—3. Son of Tola (vii. 2).

SHEN (1 Sam. vii. 12). Where Samuel set up the stone Ebenezer, between "the Mizpah and the Shen." Lost.

SHENA'ZAR (fiery torch). Son of SALATHIEL (1 Chr. iii. 18).

SHE'NIR (Deut. iii. 9; Cant. iv. 8). Senir, Mt. Hermon.

SHE'OL (Heb. SHEOL, hell). See HADES.

SHEPH'AM (Num. xxxiv. 10, 11). On the E. boundary of the land. Lost.

SHEPHATHI'AH. Father of Meshullam 6 (1 Chr. ix. 8).

SHEPHATI'AH. The name of 7 distinguished Jews, alluded to in the following passages: 2 Sam. iii. 34; 1 Chr. xii. 5, xxvii. 16, 2 Chr. xxi. 2; Ezr. ii. 4; 7 vii; Neh. xi. 4; Jer. xxxviii. 1.

SHEP'HERD (Heb. ROEH, shepherd, pastor). (Gen. xlix. 4; Jer. ii. 8). The wandering character of life, and the dependence upon flocks, rendered the care of sheep amongst the most important duties of life, from the earliest time in the East. (See SHEEP). "Abel was a keeper of sheep" (Gen. iv. 2). The employment of shepherd was not only followed by the chiefs (Gen. xxx. 29), but by their sons and daughters as well (Gen. xxix. 6; Ex. ii. 19). Extensive flocks fed in the wilderness of Judah (1 Sam. xxv. 2); at Bethlehem (1 Sam. xvi. 11; Luke ii. 8); at Gedor (1 Chr. iv.). As the people became more settled, agriculture became more general, and the care of sheep less important. Figurative allusion is continually made, both in the O. and N. T.: Christ applying the expression to himself, and frequently using the term figuratively (Ps. xxiii.; Is. xl. 11, xlix. 9, 10; Jer. xxiii. 3, 4; John x. 12, 14, 16; 1 Pet. v. 4; Luke ii. 8). It is the habit of the shepherd, in the East, to walk before his flock, leading by his voice (John x. 4); the dog following in the rear of it (1 Chr. xxx. 1). In leading to and from the pasturage, the mothers are led by the shepherd (Gen. xxxiii. 13), who also carries the tender lambs (Is. xi. 11). Tents and towers were erected for the shepherd as a point of observation: such was the tower of Eden (Gen. xxxv. 21). Shepherds used the sling (1 Sam. xvii. 40), both for defence and amusement; they also played upon a flute. The towers are still found in nearly every little district in Palestine. The shepherd follows the same customs of care, and watching of the flock, to-day, as in ancient times. In pleasant weather sleeping near them, in the field, under some rude hut, or under a tent; leading them to drink, and helping the young lambs, or lame sheep, by carrying or lifting them out of dangerous places by his crook. The custom of giving names to the members of the flock is still in use; the flock recognizing the shepherd's voice, and answering to their names. The shepherd is also exposed to danger of his life, in the protection of his flock against robbers and wild beasts. Many shepherds make a heavy cloak of sheep-skin, with the wool on; and others use the coarse goat's-hair, or camel's-hair cloth.

SHE'PHI (wearing away). Son of Shobal (1 Chr. i. 40), also written

SHE'PHO (smoothness), (Gen. xxxvi. 23).

SHEPHU'PHAN (serpent). A son of Bela (1 Chr. viii. 5).

SHE'RAH (kinswoman). Daughter of Ephraim (1 Chr. vii. 24).

SHERD. POTSHERD, fragment of an earthern vessel (Job ii. 8).

SHEREBI'AH (heat of Jah). An assistant of Ezra (Neh. viii. 7, ix. 4, 5; Ezr. viii. 18, 24).

SHE'RESH (root). Son of Machir (1 Chr. vii. 16).

SHERE'ZER. A messenger sent to inquire about the fasting (Zech. vii. 2).

SHER'IFFS (Heb. TIFTAYE, lawyers). The name of certain high officials among the Babylonians.

SHE'SHACH (Jer. xxv. 26, li. 41). Supposed to be Babylon by some. Others say it means Ur, the ancient capital of Babylonia, the city of Abraham.

SHE'SHAI (whitish). Son of Anak (Num. xiii. 22; Josh. xv. 14).

SHE'SHAN (lily). Descendant of Jerahmeel; father of AHLAI (1 Chr. ii. 31, 34, 35).

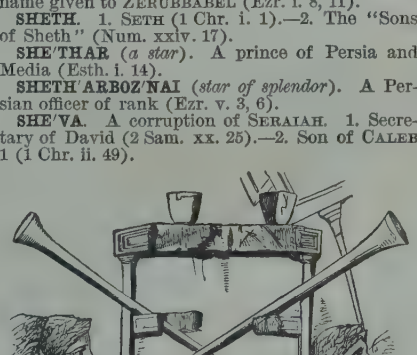
SHESHBAZ'ZAR (fire-worshiper). The Persian name given to ZERUBBABEL (Ezr. i. 8, 11).

SHETH. 1. SETH (1 Chr. i. 1).—2. The "Sons of Sheth" (Num. xxiv. 17).

SHE'THAR (a star). A prince of Persia and Media (Esth. i. 14).

SHETH'ARBOZ'NAI (star of splendor). A Persian officer of rank (Ezr. v. 3, 6).

SHE'VA. A corruption of SERAIAH. 1. Secretary of David (2 Sam. xx. 25).—2. Son of CALEB 1 (1 Chr. ii. 49).



SHEW-BREAD.

SHEW-BREAD (Heb. LEHEM, PANIM, bread of the faces, of the presence of Jehovah), (Ex. xxv. 30). On the north side in the holy place of the Tabernacle was the table of acacia wood, 3 feet 6 in. long, 1 foot 9 in. wide, and 2 feet 4 in. high; overlaid with gold; a rim and crown of gold encircling the top and another the bottom (Ex. xxv. 23–30). A figure of the table (removed by Titus from the Temple of Herod) is carved on the arch of Titus at Rome. Golden rings were attached to the corners of the table, through which poles could be passed for carrying it (as in the case of the ark). Upon it on every Sabbath were placed, in two piles, twelve freshly baked unleavened loaves of fine flour (typical of the twelve tribes), as an offering (Lev. xxiv. 7). See SACRIFICE. A golden pot filled with incense was placed on the top of each pile, and remained until the next Sabbath, when the incense was burned, the loaves were eaten by the priests in the Sanctuary, and twelve fresh ones laid for an offering (Lev. xxiv. 6, 7; 1 Chr. xxiii. 29). David, in extreme hunger, eat of the shew-bread (1 Sam. xxi. 4–6; Matt. xii. 4).

SHIB'BOLETH (a stream), (Judg. xii. 6). The Hebrew word which the Gileadites made use of at the passage of the Jordon after their victory over the Ephraimites.

SHIB'MAH (Num. xxxii. 38). Shebam, east of Jordan.

SHIC'RON (Josh. xv. 11). Boundary of Judah, near Jabneel. Lost.

SHIGGAI'ON (Ps. vii. 1). Title of a melody.

SHI'HOR OF EGYPT (1 Chr. xiii. 5; Josh. xiii. 2, 3). Wady el Arish, Arabia Petræa. SHIHOR, the Nile. See SIHOR.

SHI'HOR LIBNATH (Josh. xix. 26). Boundary of Asher, below Mt. Carmel. Lost.

SHIL'HI (armed). Father of Azubah (1 K. xxii. 42).

SHIL'HIM (Josh. xv. 32). Judah. Perhaps the same as SHARUHEN, which was given to Simeon (xix. 6).

SHIL'LEM (requital). Son of Naphtali (Gen. xlvi. 24).

SHIL'LEMITES, THE. Descendants of Shillem (Num. xxvi. 49).

SHILO'AH, THE WATERS OF (Jer. viii. 6). The prophet compares a quiet confidence in Jehovah with the waters of a brook, that "go softly," and contrasts this with the "waters of a river, strong and many, even the king of Assyria and all his glory: and he shall come up over all his channels, and go over all his banks." Supposed to refer to Siloam, near Jerusalem.

SHI'LOH (rest), (1 Sam. i. 24, iii. 21; Judg. xxi. 19). In Ephraim, north of Bethel, east of the road to Shechem, south of Lebonah. Now called Seilun. This was one of the earliest and most sacred of the Jews' sanctuaries. The ark was kept here (in a tent or tabernacle only), from the last days of Joshua (xviii. 1) to the time of Samuel (1 Sam. iv. 3). Here Joshua completed the division of the land among the tribes (xviii. 10, xix. 51). The Benjamites seized the "daughters of Shiloh," and preserved a tribe from extinction (Judg. xxi. 19), at an annual feast of the Lord." Eli resided here as judge of Israel, and died of grief at the news that the ark of God was taken (1 Sam. iv. 11, 18). The story of Hannah, Samuel's mother, is an interesting incident, as illustrating the character and life of the Hebrews (1 Sam. i., etc.). Ahijah the prophet lived here when Jeroboam sent his wife to him to inquire what should become of their sick son (1 K. xiv.).

SHILO'NI. Descendant of Shelah, the son of Judah (Neh. xi. 5).

SHI'LONITE, THE. Native of SHILOH (1 K. xi. 29).

SHI'LONITES, THE. Descendants of Judah, dwelling in Jerusalem (1 Chr. ix. 5).

SHIL'SHAH (tried). Son of Zophah (1 Chr. vii. 37).

SHIM'EA (rumor). 1. Son of David (1 Chr. iii. 5).—2. A Levite (vi. 30).—3. Ancestor of Asaph (vi. 39).—4. Brother of David (xx. 7).

SHIM'EAH. 1. Brother of David (2. Sam. xxi. 21).—2. A descendant of Jehiel (1 Chr. viii. 32).

SHIM'EAM (fame). Son of Mikloth (1 Chr. ix. 38).

SHIM'EATH. Mother of Jozachar (2 K. xii. 21).

SHIM'EATHITES (descendants of Shimeath). A family of scribes (1 Chr. ii. 55).

SHIM'EI. 1. A son of Gershom (Num. iii. 18).—2. Son of Gera, he insulted king David (2 Sam. xvi. 5–14).—3. An officer under David (1 K. i. 8). Others of this name are alluded to in the following passages: 1 K. iv. 18; 1 Chr. iii. 19, iv. 26–27, v. 4, vi. 42, xxv. 17, xxvii. 27; 2 Chr. xxix. 14, xxxi. 12, 13; Ezr. x. 23, x. 33, x. 38; Esth. ii. 5; 1 Chr. vi. 29, xxiii. 9.

SHIM'EON. A layman of the sons of Harim (Ezr. x. 31).

SHIM'HI. A Benjamite (1 Chr. viii. 21).

SHIM'I (Ex. vi. 17). SHIMEI.

SHIM'ITES, THE. Descendants of SHIMEI 1, the son of Gershom (Num. iii. 21).

SHIM'MA. Third son of Jesse (1 Chr. ii. 13).

SHI'MON (desert). The four sons of Shimon (1 Chr. iv. 20), are mentioned among the tribe of Judah.

SHIM'RATH (watch). Song of Shimhi (1 Chr. viii. 21).

SHIM'RI (watchful). Three of this name are mentioned in 1 Chr. iv, 37, xi. 45; 2 Chr. xxix. 13.

SHIM'RITH. Mother of Jehozabad (2 Chr. xxiv. 26).

SHIM'ROM. Son of Issachar (1 Chr. vii. 1).

SHIM'RON (watch, guard), (Josh. xix. 15). In Zebulon. Now Simuniyeh, west of Nazareth. The king of Shimron Meron was one of 31 vanquished by Joshua (xii. 20).

SHIM'RON. Fourth son of Issachar (Gen. xlvi. 13).

SHIM'RONITES, THE. The family of SHIMRON (Num xxvi. 24).

SHIM'SHAI (sunny). Secretary of Rehum (Ezr. iv. 8, 9, 17, 23).

SHI'NAB (father's tooth). King of ADMAH in Abraham's time (Gen. xiv. 2).

SHI'NAR, THE LAND OF (country of the two rivers), (Gen. xi. 2). Ancient name of Chaldæa and Babylonia. It is the Jewish name, and is not found in the native inscriptions. Abraham brought the name with him to Canaan.

ANCIENT SHIPS.

SHIP (Heb. ONIYAH, SEFINAH; Gr. ploion). The fullest description of ships is in the narrative of Paul's voyage to Rome (Acts xxvii. xxviii.). Paul sailed first on an Adramyttian vessel from Cæsarea to Myra—a coasting ship of moderate size (Acts xxvii. 1–6), then in a large Alexandrian corn ship, in which he was wrecked on the coast of Malta (Acts xxvii. 6, xxviii. 1), and finally in a large Alexandrian corn ship, from Malta, by Syracuse, to Puteoli (xxviii. 11–13). The ship in which Paul was wrecked held 276 persons (Acts xxvii. 37), and was laden with wheat. From this it is estimated that such ships were between 500 and 1000 tons burden. Ships are often mentioned in the Old Testament, and figuratively in Job ix. 23; Ps. xlviii. 79, civ. 26, cvii. 23. Solomon built a fleet at EZION-GEBER (1 K. ix. 26). The fleet of Jehoshaphat, built in the same place, was destroyed (1 K. xxii. 48, 49; 2 Chr. xx. 36, 37). War ships are first alluded to in Dan. xi. 40.

SHIPH'I (abundant). Father of Ziza, a prince in Hezekiah's time (1 Chr. iv. 37).

SHIPH'MITE, THE. One from Siphmoth (1 Chr. xxvii. 27).

SHIPH'RAH (beauty). One of two Hebrew women who disobeyed the command of Pharaoh (Ex. i. 15–21).

SHIPH'TAN (judicial). Father of Kemuel 2 (Num. xxxiv. 24).

SHI'SHA. Corruption of Seraiah, father of Elihoreph and Ahiah (1 K. iv. 3).

SHI'SHAK. A king of Egypt. He entered Judah, B. C. 971, and captured the strongest places in the country, and carried away the treasures. See EGYPT, page 97.

In the article on Egypt it is mentioned that Shishak invaded Judæa, and took several cities, and tribute from Rehoboam at Jerusalem, the account of which has lately been deciphered on the Egyptian monuments. Shishak's name is written SHESHONK, and he is said to have been an Ethiopian. He is shown as presenting to the gods of Thebes the prisoners taken by him in war, each name (of a king, or city, or nation) being in an oval shield. See page 46.

SHIT'RAI (Jah is arbitrator). A Sharonite who had charge of David's herds (1 Chr. xxvii. 29).

SHIT'TAH-TREE. SHIT'TIM. Understood as the Acacia tree, of which there are three or four species in the East, especially used in the construction of the tabernacle, ark, table of shew-bread, altars, etc. (Ex. xxv., xxvi., xxxvi., xxxvii., xxxviii.). "I will plant in the wilderness the cedar, the shittah-tree, and the myrtle, and the oil tree" (Is. xli. 19). It was probably the only available wood in the wilderness. This tree yields the gum arabic of commerce, from incisions cut deeply in the bark. Probably the burning-bush of Moses (Ex. iii. 2) called SENEH was the shittim (or acacia) tree. The last camping ground of Israel was on the plains of Shittim. The Arabs use the gum for food. The bark is very astringent, and used in tanning leather. The wood is very hard, close-grained, of a fine brown color, excellent for cabinet-work. It grows in dry places, where no other tree can live. It is not the Acacia of this country, which is a kind of Locust. Tristram mentions trees on the Dead Sea shore at Engedi and other places, which are four feet in diameter.

SHIT'TIM (acacia trees), (Num. xxxiii. 49). Abel Has Shittim (meadow of the acacias). In the Arboth Moab, by Jordan. Jericho (Num. xxii. 1, xxvi. 3). Under the cool shade of the acacia groves the Israelites were led into the worship of Baal Peor by the Midianites, which sin Moses, by command, avenged (xxxi. 1). Joshua sent spies to Jericho from here (ii. 1).

SHI'ZA (loved). Father of Adina (1 Chr. xi. 42).

SHO'A. A proper name which occurs only in Ezr. xxiii. 23, and signifies officer and ruler.

SHO'BAB (rebellious). 1. Son of David (2 Sam. v. 14). —2. Son of CALEB 1 (ii. 18).

SHO'BACH (pouring). A General of HADAREZER (2 Sam. x. 15–18).

SHO'BAI (taking captive). One who returned from captivity (Ezr. ii. 42; Neh. vii. 45).

SHO'BAL (flowing). 1. Son of Seir (Gen. xxxvi. 20).—2. Son of Caleb (1 Chr. ii. 50).—3. Descendant of Judah (iv. 1, 2).

SHO'BEK (forsaking). A chief who sealed the covenant (Neh. x. 24).

SHO'BI. Son of NAHASH (2 Sam. xvii. 27).

SHO'CO (2 Chr. xi. 7). See SOCOH.

SHO'CHO (2 Chr. xxviii. 18). See SOCOH.

SHO'CHOH (1 Sam. xvii. 1). See SOCOH.

SHO'HAM (onyx). Son of Jaaziah (1 Chr. xxiv. 27).

SHO'MER (a keeper). 1. An Asherite (1 Chr. vii. 32).—2. Mother of Jehozabad (2 K. xii. 21).

SHO'PHACH. SHOBACH (1 Chr. xix. 16, 18).

SHO'PHAN (Num. xxxii. 35). East of Jordan; fortified. Lost.

SHOSHAN'NIM. Title of a melody (Ps. xlv., lxix.).

SHOSHAN'NIM E'DUTH. Name of a melody called lilies of testimony (Ps. lxxx.).

SHU'A (riches). 1. Father of Judah's wife (1 Chr. ii. 3).—2. Daughter of Heber (vii. 32).

SHU'AH (pit). 1. Son of ABRAHAM by KETURAH (Gen. xxv. 2).—2. A Descendant of Judah (iv. 11).—3. SHUA, father of Judah's wife (Gen. xxxviii. 2, 12).

SHU'AL (a fox or jackal). Son of Zophah, a chief (1 Chr. vii. 36).

SHU'AL, THE LAND OF (jackal), (1 Sam. xiii. 17). North of Michmash. Lost.

SHU'BAEL. 1. Son of GERSHOM (1 Chr. xxiv. 20).—2. Son of HEMAN (xxv. 20).

SHU'HAM (pit-digger). Son of Dan (Num. xxvi. 42).

SHU'HAMITES, THE. Descendants of SHUHAM, the son of Dan (Num. xxvi. 42, 43).

SHU'HITE. Descendant of SHUAH 1. This name is frequent in the Book of Job.

SHU'LAMITE, THE (peaceful). The name given to the bride in Cant. vi. 13.

SHU'MATHITES (native). One of the 4 families who lived in Kirjath-Jearim (1 Chr. ii. 53).

SHU'NAMMITE, THE Native of SHUNEM (2 K. iv. 1); applied to two persons: ABISHAG, the nurse of David (1 K. i. 3, 15), and the nameless hostess of Elisha (2 K. iv. 12, 25, 36).

ACACIA OR SHITTAH-TREE

SHU'NEM (two resting-places), (Josh. xix. 18). Issachar. Where the Philistines encamped before the battle of Gilboa (1 Sam. xxviii. 4). Here dwelt the good Shunammite, who welcomed Elisha the prophet, who oft passed by; and fitted up a little chamber for him (2 K. iv. 8), and was rewarded (ver. 36). This pleasant village was the native place of Abishag, David's attendant (1 K. i. 3), and possibly the heroine of Solomon's Song. The modern village is on the S. W. flank of Little Hermon, Jebel Duhy, 3 ms. from Jezreel, N., in full view of Mt. Carmel, and in the midst of the finest grain-fields in the land.

SHU'NI (quiet). Son of Gad (Gen. xlvi. 16).

SHU'NITES, THE. Descendants of SHUNI (Num. xxvi. 15).

SHU'PHAM (Heb. SHEPHUPHAM). SHUPPIM.

SHU'PHAMITES, THE. Descendants of SHUPHAM (Num. xxvi. 39).

SHUP'PIM (serpents). 1. He and HUPPIM, the children of Ir, are mentioned in 1 Chr. vii. 12.—2. A porter (xxvi. 16).

SHUR (a wall), (Gen. xvi. 7). Hagar sat by a fountain in the way to Shur, when the angel sent her back with a promise of a blessing. Abraham dwelt between Kadesh and Shur, in Gerar (xx. 1). Ishmael's descendants dwelt from Havilah unto Shur that is before Egypt (xxv. 18). Called, also, Etham (Ex. xv. 22; Num. xxxiii. 8).

SHU'SHAN (lily). Shushan the palace (Esth. i. 2). One of the most important towns in the whole East. Capital of ELAM, SUSIS, or SUSIANA. Inscriptions, dated 660 B. C., record the capture of the city by Asshur-bani-pal, giving, also, its plan. Daniel saw his vision of the ram and he-goat at Shushan the palace (Dan. viii. 2). Cyrus made it a Persian city, and its metropolis (Æschylus and Herodotus), although the building of the palace is credited to Darius. Alexander found there $60,000,000, and all the regalia of the great king. After this, Susa was neglected for Babylon. Now called Sus, a vast ruin between the Eulæus and Shapur.

SHU'SHAN E'DUTH. The title of a melody; it denotes "the lily of testimony" (Ps. lx.).

SHU'THALHITES, THE. Descendants of SHUTHELAH (Num. xxvi. 35).

SHU'THELAH (noise). Head of an Ephraimite family (Num. xxvi. 35), and ancestor of Joshua (1 Chr. vii. 20–27).

SI'A (congregation). Ancestor of a family of Nethinim, who returned from captivity (Neh. vii. 47).

SIB'BECHAI (thicket of Jah). A captain in David's army for the eighth month of 24,000 men (1 Chr. xi. 29). He belonged to one of the principal families of Judah.

SIB'BOLETH. The Ephraimite word for SHIBBOLETH (Judg. xii. 6).

SIB'MAH (Josh. xiii. 19). East of Jordan, in Reuben. SHEBAM. Lost.

SIBRA'IM (Ez. xlvii. 16). A north boundary of the land. Lost.

SIC'CUTH (a tabernacle or shrine), (Amos v. 26).

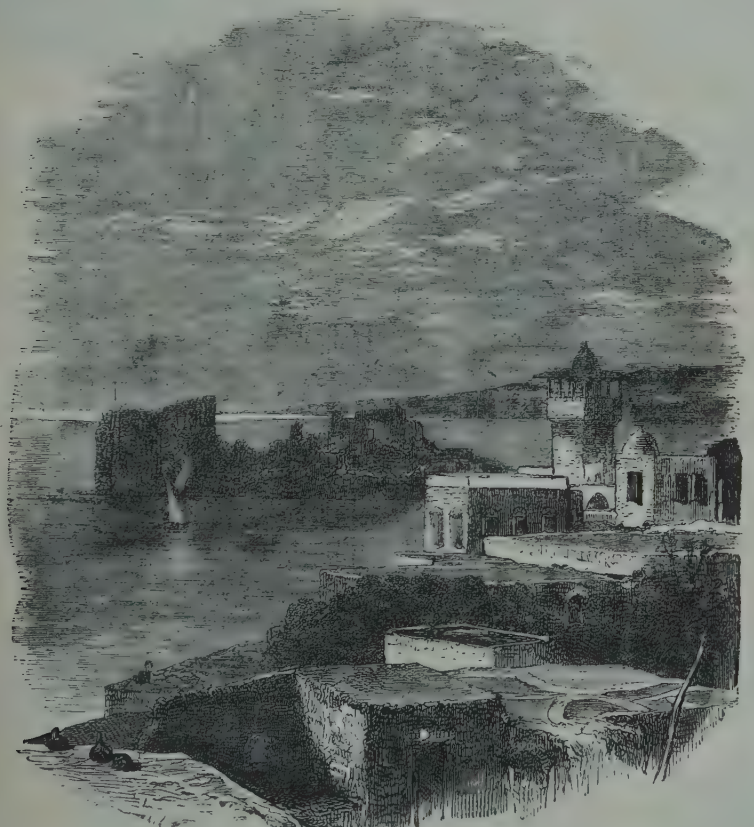
SI'CHEM. SHECHEM.

SICK'LE (HERMESH, MAGGAL; Gr. drepanon). A curved knife for reaping; a reaping-hook or scythe (Deut. xvi. 9; Joel iii. 13).

SIC'YON (market—weekly?), (1 Macc. xv. 23). A later city built on the acropolis of an ancient city of the same name, near the eastern end of the Corinthian Gulf, about two miles from the sea, near a range of mountains, which were terraced, and rent with gorges. In the time of the Maccabees it was the most important Roman possession in Greece.

SID'DIM (the vale of), (Gen. xiv. 3, 8, 10). The Hebrew words Emek has Siddim mean a plain cut up by stony channels. Located by some scholars at the north end of the Dead Sea.

SI'DE (1 Macc. xv. 23). A colony of Cumæans on the coast of Pamphylia. The navy of Antiochus was made up of ships from Side and Aradus, Tyre and Sidon, and the fleet was stationed at Side on the eve of the battle with the fleet from Rhodes (Livy 37, 23).



SIDON.

SI'DON (fishing). ZIDON (Phœnician Tsidon), (Gen. x. 15, 19). Great Zidon (Josh. xi. 8). Sidon (Matt. xi. 21; Mark iii. 8; Luke vi. 17). On the coast of the Mediterranean Sea, in the narrow Phœnician plain (2 miles), under the range of Lebanon, to which it once gave its own name (Jos. Ant. v. 3, 1). The city is built on the northern slope of a promontory that juts out into the sea, pointing S. W.; and the citadel is on the hight behind it. Zidon was the first-born of Canaan, and probably the city is an older one than Tyre, and the Phœnicians are (often) called Sidonians (never Tyrians) in Josh. xiii. 6; Judg. xviii. 7, etc. Skilled workmen were their special pride, not traders (1 K. v. 6).

It is the most northern city visited by Jesus, and is about 50 miles from Nazareth. Now called Saida. The whole neighborhood is one great garden, filled with every kind of fruit-bearing trees, nourished by streams from Lebanon. Its chief exports are silk, cotton and nutgalls. A mission-station of Americans are working among 5000 people.

There are many ancient sepulchres in the rocks at the base of the mountain east of Sidon, and sepulchal caves in the plain. In one of these caves, in 1855, was discovered one of the most beautiful and interesting Phœnician monuments in existence. It is a sarcophagus of black syenite, with a lid carved in human form, bandaged like a mummy, the face being bare. There is an inscription in Phœnician on the lid, and another on the head. The king of the Sidonians is mentioned in them, and it is said that his mother was a priestess of Ashtoreth. It is supposed to belong to the 11th century B. C. It is now in the Louvre, Paris. See p. 121.

SIEVE (Is. xxx. 28). "To sift as wheat" (Luke xxii. 31); figuratively, to agitate and prove by trials and afflictions.

SI'HON (sweeping away). King of the Amorites (Num. xxi. 21).

SIHOR (black). Correctly Shihor. The Nile. (Sanscrit, Nilah, dark-blue). The water of the Nile is dark with mud, like our Ohio or Mississippi. The Egyptian name was Yeor. (The name of Egypt was Kem, black). The present name in Arabic is Bahr el Azrak, dark-blue river. Shihor is the name of the brook of Egypt (Wady el Arish), which is mentioned as the south boundary of David's kingdom (1 Chr. xiii. 5; Josh. xiii. 2, 3). See NILE.

SI'LAS. Contraction of SILVANUS, one of the chief men among the first disciples at Jerusalem (Acts xv. 22). He is mentioned in 2 Cor. ii. 9, i. 19; 1 Pet. x. 12; Acts xvi. 19, 25; Phil. iv. 10.

SILK (Heb. MESHI), (Ez. xvi. 10, 13). Silk in the time of the Ptolemies was sold for its weight in gold. It sometimes came in skeins, and was woven into a thin light gauze. It is not known how early or extensively the Jews used it (Rev. xviii. 12; Gen. xli. 42).

SIL'LA. Where Joash, the king, was killed (2 K. xii. 20). Lost.

SILO'AH (dart). SILOAM (sent), (Heb. SILOACH), (Neh. iii. 15). Arabic, Silwan. One of the few undisputed localities around Jerusalem. The water was "sweet and abundant" in Josephus' day (B. J. v. 4, 1). It is in the Tyropœon valley, 200 ft. from the Kidron. There are no less than 40 natural springs within a circle of 10 miles around POOL OF SILOAM.

Jerusalem. The water flows out of a small artificial basin, under the cliff, into a reservoir 53 ft. long by 18 ft. wide and 19 ft. deep. It has been lately proved, by exploring, that the water flows from the Virgin's fountain to Siloam; and there is a remarkable ebb and flow, which varies in frequency with the season and supply of water (John ix. 7). The village of Siloam (Silwan) is not mentioned in Scripture, and is probably modern. It is poorly built, and occupies the site of Solomon's idol-shrines (1 K. xi. 7; 2 K. xxiii. 13).

SILOAM, TOWER IN. Mentioned by Jesus (Luke xiii. 4). Not located.

SILVER (Heb. KESEF, Chal. kesaf, Gr. argurion). One of the precious metals, and the one used most as a coin among all nations. The ancient Hebrews weighed it out, instead of having coins. It is mentioned in Gen. xiii. 2, xx. 16, xxiii. 16, and Ex. xxvi. 19, 32; 1 Chr. xxix. 4. See MONEY.

SIL'VER-LINGS (little silvers). Pieces of silver or silver coins (Is. vii. 23).

SIMALCU'E (Heb. MELECH, king). An Arabian chief who had charge of ANTIOCHUS VI (1 Macc. xi. 39).

SIM'EON (harkening). Second son of Jacob and Leah (Gen. xxix. 33).

The tribe of Simeon numbered six families (the head of one of which, Shaul, was a son of a Canaanite woman) when Jacob went down into Egypt (Gen. xlvi.), and at the Exode 59,300 men over 20, but only 22,000 at the last census by Moses.

SI'MON. One of the twelve apostles. See PETER. A name of frequent occurrence in Jewish history.

SIM'RI. Son of Hosah (1 Chr. xxvi. 10).

SIN (mire). Pelusium (pelos, Greek for mire), in Egypt. Sin, the strength of Egypt (Ez. xxx. 15). Probably a fortified city. Pompey was murdered here by order of Ptolemy, B. C. 48.

SIN, WILDERNESS OF. See WILDERNESS OF WANDERING.

SINAI. Mountain and desert forming a part of the peninsula between the gulfs of Suez and Akabah.

SINCERE' (Gr. adolos, guileless, pure, 1 Pet. ii. 2). Gr. eilikrines, judged of in sunlight (Phil. i. 10).

SINI'IM (Is. xlix. 12). The Chinese.

SIN'ITE (Gen. x. 17). The fortress of Sinna is mentioned by Strabo (xvi. 756) as in Mt. Lebanon. The ruins of Sini were known in the days of Jerome (Gen. loc. cit.).

SI'ON. A name of Mt. Hermon (Deut. iv. 48).

SIPH MOTH (bare-places). Place in the S. of Judah, which David frequented during his wandering (1 Sam. xxx. 28). Site unknown.

SIP'PAI. Son of RAPHA, or "The Giant" (1 Chr. xx. 4).

SI'RACH. See HISTORY OF THE BOOKS.

SI'RAH (a-going-off) THE WELL, (2 Sam. iii. 26), 1 m. out of Hebron.

SIRI'ON. The Sidonian name for Mt. Hermon (Deut. iii. 9; Ps. xxix. 6).

SIS'AMAI (distinguished). A descendant of Sheshan (1 Chr. ii. 40).

SIS'ERA (battle-array). 1. A general in the army of Jabin, king of Hazor (Judg. iv. 5).—2. One who returned from captivity (Ezr. ii. 53).

SISIN'NES. TATNAI (1 Esd. vi. 3).

SIS'TER (Heb. AHOTH, Gr. adelphe), used to denote one who is the daughter of the same parents (Gen. iv. 22), or the same parent (Lev. xviii. 9, 11); also, one of the same faith (Rom. xvi. 1).

SIT'NAH (hatred). The 2d of the two wells dug by Isaac (Gen. xxvi. 21). Site lost.

SI'VAN. MONTH.

SLAVE (Heb. EBED, Gr. somata). Servitude, under the Mosaic law, was more that of bondman than slave. In the patriarchal period the servitude was of two kinds: those slaves or servants born in the house, and those who were purchased or taken in war (Gen. xvii. 13). Those born in the house often enjoyed the utmost confidence and privilege. This was illustrated in the case of Abraham commissioning his servant to select a wife for Isaac. Servitude under the law was much restricted (Ex. xxi. 16; Deut. xxiv). Debt, or poverty, were causes for servitude (Lev. xxv. 39, 40); also, it was the penalty for theft (Ex. xxii. 1–14), the servitude ceasing when an equivalent of labor had been paid. All Hebrew bondmen were released in the year of Jubilee (Lev. xxv. 47–54). Foreign slaves were not so treated. They could become the property of the Hebrews, as captives of war (Deut. xx. 14), or by purchase from the dealers (Lev. xxv. 44). The slave-trade is mentioned as being carried on with Tyre by Javan (Greeks), Tubal and Meshech (Ez. xxvii. 13). Joseph was the first person recorded as having been sold into slavery (Gen. xxxvii. 27, 28). Slaves were employed upon menial work (Lev. xxv. 39) in the household, and in attendance upon the master. It was a duty of female slaves to grind corn (Ex. xi. 5; Job xxxi. 10; Is. xlvii. 2).

SLEEP. Slumber or repose of the body (Gen. xxviii. 11). Used to denote DEATH (Jer. li. 39), or spiritual torpor (Rom. xiii. 11).

SLIME. Heb. HEMAR, asphaltos and bitumen (Gen. xi. 3). Found on and near the Dead Sea. It is commonly found in a solid state, but when heated and used as a mortar, it becomes hard as the rocks it cements together.

SLING. An instrument much used before the invention of fire-arms (Judg. xx. 16; 1 Sam. xvii. 48–50).

SMITH. An artificer in brass, iron, etc., first mentioned in Gen. iv. 22. See HANDICRAFT.

SMYRNA.

SMYR'NA (Rev. ii. 8–11). Designed by Alexander the Great, and built by his successors Antigonus and Lysimachus, near the site of the ancient city of the same name (which had been destroyed by the Lydians 400 years before). It stood at the head of a gulf of the Ægean Sea, by the mouth of the river Meles, having a range of mountains on three sides of it. Tiberius granted the city permission to erect a temple in honor of the Roman emperor and senate. John (Rev. ii. 9) probably referred to the pagan rites in his letter to the church in Smyrna. See SEVEN CHURCHES.

SNAIL (Heb. SHABLUL). In Lev. xi. 30 a sort of lizard; and in Ps. lviii. 8 the common slug or snail without a shell, which consumes away and dies by depositing its slime wherever it passes.

SNARE (Heb. MOKESH, pah). A noose for catching birds (Job xl. 24).

SNOW (Heb. SHELEG; Chal. TELAG; Gr. chion). Is often alluded to for its whiteness Ex. iv. 6; Num. xii. 10; in Prov. xxv. 13, "as the cold of snow in time of Harvest" alludes to its use in cool drinks for the reapers. The snow lies deep in the ravines of Lebanon until late in the summer. The summit of Hermon perpetually glistens with snow.

SNUFFERS. (Heb. 1. MEZAMEROTH, forceps). Snuffers for lamps (1 K. vii. 50).—2. MELKAHAYIM (Ex. xxxvii. 23), tongs.

SO (Heb. SEVECH or SEVEC). A deity represented in the form of a crocodile. So, King of Egypt, made an alliance with Hosea, king of Israel, and promised him assistance, but was unable to prevent the king of Assyria from taking Samaria, B. C. 721 (2 K. xvii. 4). In the remains of Sennacherib's palace, recently disentombed, among the seals was found one of So, well known to students of Egyptian antiquities. See page 131.

SOAP (Heb. BORITH), (Jer. ii. 22). A term for any substance of cleansing qualities. The soap familiar to us was unknown to the Egyptians, and probably to the ancients generally. They used certain vegetables and their ashes for cleansing linen, etc. Numerous plants, yielding alkalies, exist in Palestine, which when pounded, serve as a substitute for soap. The gilloo or "soap-plant" of Egypt is used in the manufacture of soap at Joppa.

SO'CHO (1 Chr. iv. 18). SOCOH.

SO'CHOH (branches), (1 K. iv. 10).

SO'COH. 1. (Josh. xv. 35). In the Shefelah, now called Esh Shuweikah, in Wady Sumt, 3½ ms. S. W. of Jerusalem.—2. (ib. xv. 48). Judah, in the hill region. Now called Esh Shuweikah in Wady Khalil, 10 ms. S. W. of Hebron (1 Chr. iv. 18).

SOD. The preterite of seethe, to burn or cook.

SO'DI (confident of Jah). Father of Gaddiel (Num. xiii. 10).

SOD'OM (vineyard or burning). One of the most ancient cities of Canaan, in the Jordan valley, the chief of the five cities (Gen. x. 19). The plain was once like a garden, and was chosen by Lot, when Abram chose Canaan (ib. xiii. 10). As the two patriarchs were standing on a hight between Bethel and Ai they could see Jericho and the Jordan plain (called ciccar in the Hebrew, a term peculiar to this district alone); while they could not see the south end of the Dead Sea. But opposed to this is the event of Abraham looking toward the plain, and seeing the smoke go up as from a furnace (xix. 28). And that from no hight near Hebron can the Jordan plain near Jericho be seen, while the south end of the Dead Sea and the Lisan are distinctly visible. There is a salt-mountain called Usdum (Sodom) on the S. W. shore of the Dead Sea, which may have inherited and preserved the name of the ancient city, but the site of that city is lost. See UZDUM.

SOD'OMITE (one from Sodom). One of those who practiced their peculiar religious rite (Deut. xxiii. 17; 1 K. xiv. 24).

SOLDER. That the ancient Hebrews were acquainted with the use of solder is evident from Is. xli. 7. Nothing is known as to the composition of the solder, but, probably, lead was one of the materials used.

SOL'DIER. See ARMOR. Soldiers are first mentioned in 2 Chr. xxv. 13; and in Ezra (viii. 22), and Isaiah (xv. 4), and many times in the N. T. Paul alludes to fighting as a soldier (1 Cor. ix. 26), as also James (iv. 2), as well as nearly every writer in the Scriptures. The Christian's life is the life of a soldier, constantly in the armor of faith, fighting against evil.

SOL'OMON. In Hebrew it is Shelomoh (the peaceful). The youngest son of David and Bathsheba (1 Chr. iii. 5). He was educated under the care of Nathan, the prophet, in all that the priests, Levites, and prophets had to teach, and was named by him Jedidiah (loved of Jah), (2 Sam. xii. 25). He was only looked upon as the heir of the throne after Absalom's revolt and death; and only after Adonijah endeavored to seize the throne, Solomon was anointed by Nathan, and solemnly acknowledged as king, at the age of 19 or 20, 1015 B. C. (1 K. i. 5). David died soon after. From that time his history is nearly that of the nation.

GOAT OF SINAI

Solomon's fame was established by the building of the great Temple at Jerusalem (1 K. vi.); but besides that he built his own palace, the queen's palace, the house of the forest of Lebanon, a grand porch, and the porch of judgment (law court). He had increased the walls of the city, and fortified Millo and other strongholds in different parts of the land (2 Chr. xxxii. 5, viii.).

It is in accordance with Eastern royalty that Solomon sometimes acted as a judge in cases of oppression, as in the case of the two children; and it may be that his porch of judgment contained his stated council and judicial chamber.

SOL'OMON'S SER'VANTS, CHILDREN OF (Ezr. ii. 56, 58; Neh. vii. 57, 60). These appear in the lists of the exiles who returned from captivity. They occupy almost the lowest places in those lists.

SOL'OMON'S SONG. See HISTORY OF THE BOOKS.

SOL'OMON, WISDOM OF. See HISTORY OF THE BOOKS.

SON (Heb. BEN; Gr. huios). A male child (Gen. xvii. 16, 19) or any remote descendant (Gen. xix. 5), or a son by adoption (Gen. lxviii. 5) or by law (Ruth iv. 17), or education (1 Sam. iii. 6), or conversion (Tit. i. 4). And it also denotes a mental or moral resemblance (Judg. xix. 22). Men are sometimes called sons of God (Luke ii. 38) in a similar sense.

SON OF GOD. A peculiar appellation of Christ, expressing His eternal relationship to the Father (Ps. ii. 7). Christ always claimed to be the only-begotten son of the Father (Matt. iv. 3, viii. 29, xxvii. 54); and the Jews rightly understood him as thus making himself equal with God (John v. 18, x. 30–33).

SON OF MAN. A title of Christ, assumed by Himself in His humiliation (John i. 51). It is applied to Him more than eighty times in the N. T. See HISTORY OF THE BOOKS.

SOP'ATOR (a contraction of SOSIPATOR). The son of Pyrrhus.

SOPH'ERETH (scribe). Ancestor of children of Solomon's servants, who returned from captivity (Ezr. ii. 55).

SOPHONI'AS. ZEPHANIAH (2 Esd. i. 40).

SOUTH. Heb. DAROM, bright, sunny, region; NEGEB, dry, parched quarter; TEYMAN, on the right hand. "The South Country" is often used for the southern part of Judah (Gen. lxx. 1).

SOUTH RA'MOTH (south hights). One of the places David visited (1 Sam. xxx. 27).

SOW'ER. See AGRICULTURE.

SPAIN. The ancient name of both Spain and Portugal, and a Roman province in Paul's time, containing many Jews. It is not certain that Paul carried out his intention of visiting Spain (Rom. xx. 24, 28), since neither he nor any other writer of his time has left any evidence of such a visit.

SPAR'ROW (Heb. ZIPPOR, Gr. strouthion). (Ps.

lxxxiv. 3; Matt. x. 29, 31). A small bird, with quill and tailfeathers brown; its body gray and black; resembling the small chirping-bird: it is bold and familiar in its habits. These birds are still numerous, troublesome, and cheap, in Jerusalem (Luke xii. 6).

SPAR'TA. A celebrated city of ancient GREECE, and the capital of Laconia. It was long the rival of ATHENS. Situated in a valley, on the Eurotas, 20 ms. from the sea. The remarkable correspondence related in 2 Macc. v. 9, probably had no foundation in history.

SO'REK (noble vine), THE VALLEY OF. Samson loved a woman in the valley of Sorek (Judg. xvi. 4). Wady es Surar.

SOSIP'ATER (saving a father). 1. A general of Judas Maccabæus (2 Macc. xii. 19–24).—2. Kinsman of Paul (Rom. xvi. 21).

SOS'THENES. Chief of the synagogue at Corinth (Acts xviii. 17).

SOS'TRATUS (saving an army). A commander of the Syrian garrison, B. C. 172 (2 Macc. iv. 27, 29).

SO'TAI (one who turns aside). Ancestor of a family of Solomon's servants who returned from captivity (Ezr. ii. 55).

SOUL. Heb. 1. NEDIBAH (Job xxx. 15), elevated and happy state.—2. NEFESH, more than 500 times (Gen. ii. 7, xii. 5, 13). The meanings are: a. breath (Job. xli. 13); b. vital spirit, soul (Gen. xxxv. 18); c. life (Ex. iv. 19); d. ghost (Job xi. 20); e. pleasure (Ps. cv. 22).—3. NESHAMAH, breath; also blast (2 Sam. ii. 16; Job iv. 9); "spirit," "inspiration."—4. Gr. psuche (Matt. x. 28), the vital breath, life; properly, the soul.

The ancients supposed the soul, or rather the animating principle of life, to reside in the breath. Hence the Hebrew and Greek words where they refer to man are translated "soul" and rendered "life" or "breath" (Gen. ii. 7). The immortality of the soul is a fundamental doctrine of revealed religion. The ancient patriarch lived and died persuaded of this truth, and it was in the hope of another life that they received the promises (Gen. l. 33; Num. xxiii. 10). To save the souls of men, Christ gave himself freely to death.

SPEAR'MEN (Gr. dexiolaboi, those taking the right). 200 formed part of the escort which accompanied PAUL in his march from Jerusalem to Cæsarea (Acts xxiii. 23).

SPICE, SPI'CERY, SPI'CES. 1. (Heb. BASAM, BESEM, Cant. v. 1). Sweet spices, incense, or spices; a general term to denote those aromatic substances which were used in the preparation of the anointing oil, the incense-offerings (Ex. xxv. 6. xxxi. 11).

SPI'DER (Heb. AKKABISH), (Job viii. 14; Is. lix. 5). Both passages allude to the fragile nature of the spider's web. They are found in every habitable portion of the globe, but are largest in warm climates.

SPIKENARD.

SPIKE'NARD (Heb. NERD, Gr. nardos). A highly perfumed ointment, prepared from a plant in India growing in short spikes. Prized by the ancients, and was a favorite perfume at their baths and banquets. It was very costly (John xii. 3).

SPIN'NING. Is mentioned in Ex. xxxv. 25, 26; Matt. vi. 28; Luke xii. 27. The distaff round which the flax or wool for spinning was wound, and spindle on which the yarn or thread was wound in spinning. The spindle was held in one hand, while the other was employed in drawing out the thread.

SIPRIT. See SOUL.

SPIRIT, THE HOLY (Heb. NESHAMAH; Lat. Spiritus). The Third person of the Trinity. The Spirit of God. The character and influence of the Holy Spirit are chiefly shown in the N. T. That which was but imperfectly understood in patriarchal times became full of meaning to Christians. It is called the Holy Spirit of Jehovah in Ps. liii. 10, 11, the Good Spirit, Jehovah, in Ps. cxliii. 10. In the work of the creation the Holy Spirit is mentioned (Gen. i. 2). As the bestower and sustainer of life (Gen. ii. 7; Job xxvii. 3). From the epoch of Samuel, the work of the Spirit is manifest (1 Sam. x. 10, xvi. 14; 2 K. ii. 9; Neh. ix. 30; Is. xi. 27). In the N. T., both preceding and after the birth of Christ, the agency of the Holy Spirit was especially prominent in its manifestations. The presence of the Holy Spirit is constantly associated with the birth and life of Christ and the work of His disciples. The holy conception was of the Spirit (Matt. i. 18). The Holy Spirit openly appeared at Christ's baptism by John, and afterwards led Him into the wilderness (Luke iv. 1). In Christ's charge to the apostles are the words "For, it is not ye that speak, but the Spirit of your Father which speaketh in you" (Matt. x. 20; also in John xiv. 16; Acts i. 8). It was probably to correct the prevailing ignorance upon this subject that Christ condemned the blasphemers of the Holy Ghost (Matt. xii. 31). From the date of the Ascension commenced what is termed the "Dispensation of the Spirit" (Eph. iv. 8; John vii. 39). Christ ordained that Christians should be baptized in the name of the Holy Ghost (Matt. xxviii. 19). The rite of "laying on of hands" in its relation to the Holy Spirit is referred to in Acts vi. 6, etc.

SPONGE (Gr. sponggos). Belong to the animal kingdom. They have, when living, an apparently homogeneous jelly filling their pores and covering their surface. They come mostly from the Mediterranean and Bahama Islands. The value of the sponge was known from very early times, and was probably used by the Hebrews (Matt. xxvii. 48; Mark xv. 36).

SPOON. Heb. CAPH, palm or hollow (Ex. xxv. 29).

STA'CHYS (an ear of grain). A disciple at Rome saluted by Paul (Rom. xvi. 9).

STAC'TE (Heb. NATAF). One of the sweet spices in the holy incense (Ex. xxx. 34). From the myrrh tree, the natural gum; myrrh being artificially produced by incisions. See MYRRH.

STARS (Star of the Wise Men). A general name for any of the heavenly bodies, except the Sun and Moon (Gen. i. 16). See ASTRONOMY.

STA'TER (standard). A piece of money. See MONEY.

STEEL. See METALS.

STEPH'ANAS (crowned). A convert of Corinth (1 Cor. i. 16, xvi. 15).

STE'PHEN (Syr. Chelil, a crown). The first Christian martyr; chief of the first seven deacons of the early Church of Jerusalem. He denounced the narrowness of Jewish worship (Acts vi. 13, 14). His continual attacks upon the Jewish ritual and worship caused his being charged with blasphemy before the Sanhedrin. In this tribunal the Pharisees were in the majority. In his defense he gave a critically just and true summary of the Jewish Church: denouncing the local worship, and bringing out clearly the spiritual element in its history; and he showed that in the previous Jewish history the presence of God was not limited to the Temple at Jerusalem; and that there was among the Jews, from the earliest, a spirit of intolerance. He addressed them with calmness (Acts vi. 15), but his words were received with anger. He was sentenced to be stoned to death, and the sentence was at once executed, Saul of Tarsus (Paul) consenting and assisting (Acts vii. 58, viii. 1). He died with the greatest firmness (Acts vii. 60).

The gate now called St. Stephen at Jerusalem is on the east side of the city. In the time of the Crusades it was on the north side, at what is now called Damascus Gate, near the probable site of the crucifixion on the hillock over the so-called cave of Jeremiah, near which it is also probable that Stephen was stoned.

STOCKS (Heb. MAHPEKETH). In which the body was placed in a bent position. SAD, when the feet alone were confined. They consisted of two beams, the upper one movable, with grooves between them large enough to receive the ankles of the prisoner. They were often erected in market places, that the insults of the people might be added to the pain of confinement (Job xiii. 27; Jer. xx. 2).

STOICS. A set of fatalistic heathen philosophers, so named from the Greek word stoa, "posch," or portico, because Zeno, its founder, held his school in a porch of the city, more than three centuries before Christ (Acts xvii. 18). See EPICURUS.

STOM'ACHER. An ornament or support to the breast. Heb. PETHIGIL, a sort of girdle (Is. iii. 24). See DRESS.

STONES. Were used for building (Mark xiii. 1). Some were very large. Also for pavements (2 K. xvi. 17). Large stones were used for closing the entrances of caves (Josh. x. 18). Flint stones sometimes served for a KNIFE (Ex. iv. 25). Stones were used in slings as ammunition of war (1 Sam. xvii. 40, 49), as weights for scales (Deut. xxv. 13), and for mills (2 Sam. xi. 21). Large stones were set up to commemorate any remarkable event (Gen. xxviii. 18). Such stones were occasionally consecrated by ANOINTING (Gen. xxviii. 18). The heathens worshiped stones (Is. lvii. 6). See JERUSALEM.

STONES, PRECIOUS. See PRECIOUS STONES.

STORE. A quantity (Gen. xxvi. 14).

STORK.

STORK (Heb. HASIDAH, kindness or mercy). It has the beak and legs long and red; it feeds on field mice, lizards, snakes, frogs and insects. Its plumage is white, with the tips of its wings, and some small part of its head and thighs black.

Storks migrate to southern countries in August and return in Spring.

STRAIN AT (Gr. diulizo, strain out). There can be little doubt that this obscure phrase is due to an error, and the true reading is "strain out" (Matt. xxiii. 24).

STRANGE WOMAN (Heb. ZONAH, KEDESHAH). Used for foreign in some passages, and as being the wife of another, or, at least, one who has no business with the person whom she tempts (Prov. ii. 16, 17). An adulteress.

STRANGER (Heb. GER, TOSHAB). A foreigner; one not an Israelite, living in the Promised Land. Explained by some to be all those not members of the Jewish Church; not the "foreigner" (Heb. NOCHRI) who was merely visiting the land as a traveler. The mixed multitude that went out of Egypt with the children of Israel (Ex. xii. 38). The original Canaanites, captives of war, fugitives, hired servants, etc., were all called foreigners. They equaled one-tenth of the whole population in Solomon's time (2 Chr. ii. 17). If the stranger was a bondman he had to be circumcised (Ex. xii. 44); and without this rite, if he were even independent, he could not be admitted to full privileges. The number of strangers who were slaves in Solomon's time were very great—probably 150,000.

STRAW (TEBEN). Both wheat and barley straw were used by the ancient Hebrews chiefly as fodder for their cattle (Gen. xxiv. 25). It was used by the Egyptians in making bricks (Ex. v. 7, 16). They reaped their corn close to the ear and cut the straw close to the ground. This was the straw that Pharaoh refused to give to the Israelites, and they were therefore compelled to gather STUBBLE (Heb. KASH), the short straw left standing (Is. v. 24).

STRAW, TO. To strew, to scatter (Ex. xxxii. 20).

STREAM OF EGYPT. See SIHOR, the RIVER OF EGYPT (Is. xxvii. 12).

STREET (Heb. HUZ, REHOB, SHUK; Gr. plateia, rhume). See JERUSALEM.

STRINGED INSTRUMENTS. See MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.

STRIPES. PUNISHMENTS.

STRONG DRINK. DRINK.

STUBBLE (Heb. KASH). See STRAW.

SU'AH (a sweeping). Son of Zophah (1 Chr. vii. 36).

SU'BA. Ancestor of sons of Solomon's servants who returned from captivity (1 Chr. vii. 36).

SU'BAI. SHALMAI (1 Esd. v. 30).

SUBURBS (Heb. MIGRASH). A place where herds are driven to graze, a pasture (1 Chr. v. 16). Especially the open country round the Levitical cities (Lev. xxv. 34). According to the Talmud, and most English expositors, the space from the wall outward measured 1,500 feet (Num. xxxv. 4), and was used as a common or suburb; and the space from without the city on the east side (ver. 5) was 3,000, and used for fields and vineyards.

SUCCOTH (booths), (Gen. xxxiii. 17). Where Jacob built booths (of reeds, long grass, branches of trees, etc.), and thus gave the place a name. Sakut is a ruin 10 miles S. of Beisan, on the W. bank of the Jordan, where there is a copious spring in a fertile plain. But this is on the wrong side of the Jordan, for it belonged to Gad (Josh. xiii. 27). The name may have been transferred across the river. Succoth was mentioned as being near the clay ground where the metal work for Solomon's Temple was cast.—2. A station of the Wandering (Ex. xii. 37). Site lost.

SUCCOTH-BENOTH. Occurs only in 2 K. xvii. 30. It represents the Chaldæan goddess ZIRBANIT, the wife of MERODACH, who was especially worshiped at Babylon.

SUCHATHITES (descendants of a Suchah). A family of Scribes at Jabez (1 Chr. ii. 5).

SUD. A river near Babylon, on whose banks the Jewish captives lived.

SUD. SIA or SIAHA (1 Esd. v. 29).

SU'DIAS. HODAVIAH 3 and HODEVAH (1 Esd. v. 26).

SU'ET. FAT (Heb. YEKEB). Press-fat (Joel ii. 24).

SUKKIIM (Heb. SUKKIYIM, dwelling in booths). A nation mentioned (2 Chr. xii. 3), as supplying part of the army which came out of Egypt with Shishak.

SUMMER. CLIMATE.

SUMMER FRUIT (KAYIZ, fruit harvest). Fruit, especially figs, as harvested in summer (2 Sam. xvi. 1, 2).

There are many summer fruits in Palestine, and scarcely a month where there are not fruits of some kind to be had.

SUN (Heb. SHEMESH; Gr. helios). The great luminary of the day, which furnishes so many similitudes to the Hebrew poets, as well as those of all nations (Judg. v. 31; Prov. iv. 18; Luke i. 78, 79; John viii. 12). For the idolatrous worship of the sun, see BAAL. ANNAM'MELECH.

SUN'DIAL (Is. xxxviii. 8). DIAL.

SUPERSTITION (Gr. deisidaimonia, fear of the gods). Excessive exactness or rigor in religious opinions or practice; extreme and unnecessary scruples in the observance of religious rites not commanded (Acts xxv. 19, xvii. 22).

SU'PHAH. Translated Red Sea in Num. xxi. 14. The modern name is Yam Suf. See RED SEA.

SUR. One of the places on the seacoast of Palestine (Judg. ii. 28).

SUR, THE GATE OF (2 K. xi. 6). A gate of the Temple, called also "the gate of the foundation" (2 Chr. xxiii. 5).

SURETISHIP. One who makes himself responsible for the safe appearance of another (Gen. xliv. 32; Prov. xxii. 26), or the payment of his debts. Christ is the "surety of a better testament" (Heb. vii. 22).

SUSA. SHUSHAN (Esth. xi. 3).

SUSANCHITES, PEOPLE OF. SHUSHAN (EZR. iv. 9).

SUSAN'NA (a lily). 1. The heroine of the Judgment of Daniel, or History of Susanna, in the Apocrypha.—2. One of the women who ministered to the Lord (Luke viii. 3).

SU'SI (horseman). Father of Gaddi (Num. xiii. 11).

SWAL'LOW (Heb. DEROR and AGUR, "swallow" "crane"). The well-known bird of passage, common in our country, Europe and the East (Is. xxxviii. 14).

SWAN. The translation of the Heb. TINSHEMETH in Lev. xi. 18, and Deut. xiv. 16. Some think it the purple hen or water fowl.

SWEARING. OATH.

SWEAT, BLOODY (Luke xxii. 44). A peculiar physical accompaniment of the agony in the garden.

SWEET. HONEY.

SWINE (Heb. HAZIR; Gr. choiros, hus). A well-known animal forbidden as food to the Hebrews, who held its flesh in such detestation that they would not pronounce its name (Lev. xi. 7; Deut. xiv. 8; Is. lxv. 4, lxvi. 3, 17; Matt. viii. 32; Luke v. 14, 16; 2 Pet. ii. 22; Matt. xvii. 6.)

SYCAMORE (Heb. SHIKMAH, Gr. Sukaminos), (Luke xvii. 6). A tree of Egypt and Palestine, the fruit of which resembles the fig (1 K. x. 27). It grows to the size of a walnut tree, has wide spreading branches, and affords a delightful shade, and is planted by the way-sides. Its leaves are heart-shaped, downy on the under side and fragrant. The fruit grows from the trunk itself on little sprigs, and in clusters like the grape. To make the fruit eatable, three or four days before gathering, it is punctured with a sharp instrument (Amos vii. 14). The wood is very durable, Egyptian mummy-coffins made of it being still perfectly sound. These trees were held in great value (1 Chr. xxvii. 28), and it was one of Egypt's calamities that her sycamores were destroyed (Ps. lxxviii. 47). The sycamore of America and of England are very different from those of the Scriptures.

SYCAMINE TREE (Gr. Sukaminos). A species of the mulberry tree (morus). Both black and white mulberry trees are common in Syria and Palestine, and are largely cultivated for supplying food to the silk worm (Luke xvii. 6).

SYCHAR (falsehood), (John iv. 5). A city of Samaria. (See SHECHEM.) Named so from the false worship on Mt. Gerizim (John iv. 22; Hab. ii. 18).

SYCHEM. See SHECHEM.

SYCHEMITE, THE. Inhabitants of SHECHEM (Jud. v. 16).

SYE'LUS. JEHIEL 3 (1 Esd. i. 8).

SYE'NE. Properly Sereneh (Ez. xxix. 10, xxx. 6). From Migdol to Syene was a term for the whole extent of Egypt. Migdol was the last town in Egypt toward the E., and Syene was the last toward the S., and is now known by its ancient name. Its Egyptian name was SUN, which meant "to open," that is, the opening into Egypt from the south.

SYMEON. SIMON (2 Pet. i. 1).

SYMPHONY. A harmony of sounds (Dan. iii. 5).

SYNAGOGUE. See HISTORY OF THE BOOKS.

SYNTYCHE (happy choice). A woman, and a member of the Church of Philippi (Phil. iv. 2, 3).

SYRACUSE. On the E. coast of Sicily. A wealthy and populous place, when visited by Paul (Acts xxviii. 12). Taken by the Romans 200 yrs. B. C.

SYRIA (from TSUR, Tyre); ARAM (high) in the Hebrew. Aram was the fifth son of Shem (Gen. x. 22). Called Aram in Num. xxiii. 7. The country he settled is called Aram or Syria, and extended from the Mediterranean Sea to the Tigris, and from Canaan to Mt. Taurus, and had 6 names for its different sections, for which see ARAM. The country is divided into long, narrow sections, from N. to S. 1. Plains next to the sea, extending from the Ladder of Tyre to the Taurus, including the plains of Phœnicia, of Seleucia, and of the Issus.—2. The range of mountains called in the N. Amanus, and Bargylus, and in the S. Lebanon.—3. The valley between Lebanon and Anti-Lebanon, Cœle, or Hollow Syria.—4. The mountain range rising N. of Aleppo, and ending at Mt. Hermon.—5. The Syrian desert, extending to the Euphrates. The principal rivers are the Orontes, (El Asy, the rebellious), and the Litany. The source of the Orontes is a little N. of Baalbek, where, within a few miles, a stream from both Lebanon and Anti-Lebanon unite to form the stream, flowing N. E.: It passes through a lake, 6 ms. long by 2 wide, near Emesa (HUMS); a little below Hamath it receives a branch; being turned W. by the Amanus, it receives the Kara Su (Black river), flows by Antioch, and empties into the sea; having a course of 200 ms. The Litany rises from a small lake, 6 ms. S. W. of Baalbek, and runs S. until it is turned W. by the hills of Galilee, when it reaches the sea 5 ms. N. of Tyre, having run about 80 ms. There are many other small streams, as the Eleutherus, Lycus, Adonis, the rivers of Damascus (Abana and Pharpar), which are lost in marshy lakes, the Koweik, near Aleppo, terminating in a marsh, and the Sajur, a branch of the Euphrates. The lakes are: The Lake of Antioch; the Salt Lake, near Aleppo; Kades, on the Orontes; and the Bahr el Merj, near Damascus. The cities are: Antioch, Damascus (150,000); Apameia, Aleppo (70,000); Beirut (50,000); Hamath (30,000), (Num. xiii. 21); Hums (20,000); Tripoli (13,000); Seleucia, Tadmor, (Palmyra), and many others, mentioned in their places. Syria was settled by Canaanites and Aramæans, descendants of Ham. Damascus and Zobah were the chief cities in David's time. Assyria made it a province, and Alexander conquered it (B. C. 323); and after him the Seleucid family governed it, one of them building Antioch, which was their only capital until 114 B. C. The Romans, under Pompey, captured it, B. C. 65. The Mohammedans succeeded the Romans A. D. 634, when, for 100 yrs. after, they made Damascus their capital.

SYRIAC VERSIONS. HISTORY OF THE BOOKS.

SYRIA MACHAH (1 Chr. xix. 6).

SYRIAN. A native of Syria (Gen. xxv. 20).

SYROPHENICIAN. Is Phœnicia properly so-called, which was a part of Syria only when the Syrian kings governed Phœnicia. The Canaanitish woman is called a Syrophœnician (Mark vii. 26).

T

TAANACH (sandy soil), (Josh. xii. 21). An ancient city of Canaan, built on the end of a ridge which runs northward from the hills of Manasseh into the plains of Esdraëlon, at the base of which is the modern village of the same name (Ar. Ta'annuk). It was the headquarters of the army of Deborah and Barak, and Sisera's host was encamped between it and Megiddo (Judg. v. 19).

TAANATH-SHILOH (approach to Shiloh), (Josh. xvi. 6). Supposed to be Shiloh; Taanath being the Canaanite and Shiloh the Hebrew name of the same city.

TABITHA (a gazelle). Also called DORCAS, the name of a pious and charitable woman at Joppa, whom Peter raised from the dead (Acts ix. 36–42).

TABLE (Heb. LUAH, a table or tablet). Used especially of the tablets or slabs of stone on which were the TEN COMMANDMENTS (Ex. xxiv. 12). Also of other tablets for WRITING (Is. xxx. 8). Heb. MESAB (Cant. i. 12), "at this table." Heb. SHULHAN, a table spread with food (Ex. xxv. 23 ff.); Gr. kline, a bed (Mark vii. 4); also, a couch for resting or reclining at MEALS (Matt. ix. 2, 6).

TABLETS. 1. Heb. BOTTEYHAN-NEFESH, houses of the soul; perfume-boxes.—2. Heb. CUMAZ (Ex. xxxv. 22), (a globule of gold, or, rather, a string of gold). Drops like beads were worn round the neck, or arm, by the Israelites in the desert.

TABOR, MT. (hight). (Josh. xix. 22). On the border of Issachar and Zebulon. It is of limestone, 1800 ft. high, rounded in form, and is studded with forests of oaks, pistachios, terebinths, mock-oranges, and other trees and bushes. Wolves, boars, lynxes, and other wild animals, besides reptiles, are found. It is now called Jebel et Tur, and is one of the most favorable points for beautiful and extensive views.

TABOR, THE PLAIN OF. (Heb. ELON, properly The Oak of Tabor). Only mentioned once (1 Sam. x. 3). This plain, or oak of Tabor, was evidently somewhere between Rachel's tomb and Bethel, probably not far from Jerusalem. But its locality cannot be ascertained.

TABRI'MON, properly TAB'RIMMON (good is Rimmon). Father of Ben-hadad I, King of Syria (1 K. xv. 18).

TACHE (Heb. KEREN, hook). The small hooks by which the curtains of the tabernacle were suspended to the rings from which it hung (Ex. xxvi. 6, 11, 33).

TAD'MOR. PALMYRA. City of Palms (1 K. ix. 18). Built by Solomon on the route from Palestine to the Euphrates, about midway between Damascus and the river; the whole distance being about 240 ms. The ruins are chiefly of Corinthian colonnades and temples, and, seen at a distance, are peculiarly imposing, and seem to surpass all others in their apparent vastness and general effect. None of Solomon's buildings have been identified, and the ruins are ascribed to works of the date of the 2d or 3d century of our era. (See Wood's Palmyra).

TAH'PANHES (Daphne?). An important town in Lower Egypt, in the land of Goshen, near Pelusium (Jer. xliii. 7). Located at Tel Defenneh, in the present Delta.

TAH'PENES. An Egyptian queen, wife of Pharaoh 6 (1 K. xi. 18–20).

TAHRE'A (cunning). Son of Micah (1 Chr. ix. 41).

TAH'TIM HOD'SHI, THE LAND OF (2 Sam. xxiv. 6). Lost. Supposed by some to be Harosheth (compare Judg. iv. 2).

TAL'ENT (Heb. KIKKAR; Gr. talanton). The greatest weight of the Hebrews. See MONEY, WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

PALMYRA-TADMOR.

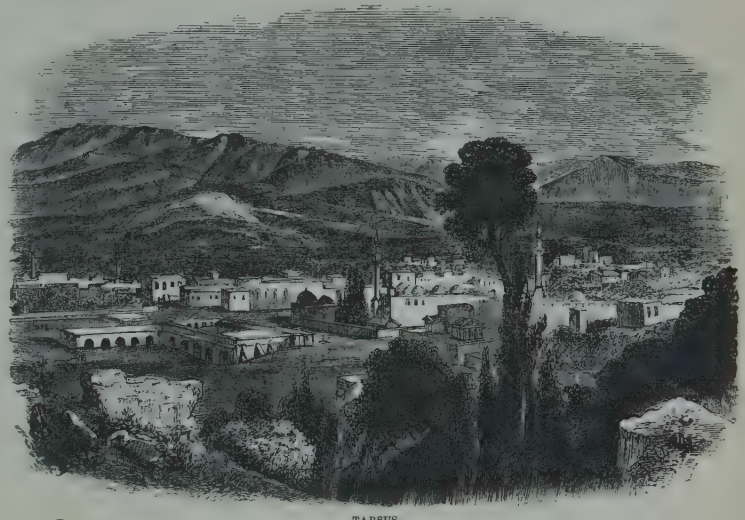
TALI'THA CU'MI. Two Syriac words, meaning damsel arise (Mark v. 41). The Chaldee or Aramaic paraphrase on Prov. ix. 3, signifies a girl. Gesenius says the same word means a lamb.

TAL'MAI (furrowed). 1. Son of ANAK (Num. xiii. 22).—2. Son of Ammihud, and king of Geshur (2 Sam. iii. 3).

TAL'MON (oppressed). Head of the porters for the camps of the sons of Levi (1 Chr. ix. 17).

TAL'MUD. Is the work which embodies the canonical and civil law of the Jews. It contains those rules, precepts and interpretations by which the Jewish people profess to be guided, in addition to the O. T., and includes not merely religion, but philosophy, medicine, jurisprudence, history and the various branches of practical duty. The Jews have been accustomed to divide their law into written and unwritten: the written contained in the Pentateuch, the unwritten handed down orally, until it was found necessary to write it. Some Jews have assigned the same antiquity to both, alleging that Moses received them on the mount.

TA'MAR (Heb. THAMAR, palm-tree). 1. Wife of Er and Onan, the two sons of Judah (Gen. xxxviii. 6–30). She practiced a deception upon Judah, in retaliation for his neglect to give her his third son Shelah for a husband.—2. Daughter of David, mother of Absalom. She was badly treated by her brother Amnon (2 Sam. xiii. 1-32).—3. Daughter of Absalom (2 Sam. xiv. 7). The mother of Maachah 3, queen of Judah (1 K. xv. 3).



TARSUS.

TA'MAR (palm-tree). (Ez. xlvii. 19). A town S. of Hebron, now called Kurnub.

TAM'MUZ. A Syrian idol mentioned in Ez. viii. 14, where the women are represented as weeping for it. It is generally supposed that Tammuz was the same deity as the Phœnician Adonis. The fabled death and restoration of Adonis, supposed to symbolize the departure and return of the sun, were celebrated at the summer solstice with lamentations first, and then rejoicings and obscene revels.

TAP'PUAH (Josh. xv. 34). In the Shefelah, 12 ms. W. of Jerusalem.—2. EN-TAPPUAH (Josh. xvi. 8, xvii. 7, 8). On the boundary of the children of Joseph—a city and a district of the same name. Supposed to be S. W. of Shechem. Perhaps in Wady Falaik.

TARES. A noxious plant, of the grass family, supposed to mean the darnel.

TAR'SHISH (Gen. x. 4; Ps. lxxii. 10; Jonah i. 3, etc.). Probably Tartassus, in Spain (Strabo, iii. 148).

TAR'SUS. Chief town of CILICIA; the birthplace of Paul the Apostle (Acts ix. 11, xxi. 39). It was an important city in the time of the Greek kings.

TAV'ERNS. Three Taverns. A station on the Appian road between Puteoli and Rome, where Paul met brethren when on his way from Jerusalem. The modern Cisteran is probably near the site of the ancient place, which was about 30 miles from Rome.

TAX'ES. Every Jew was required to pay an annual tribute or poll-tax of half a shekel, about 25 cents, in acknowledgment of God's sovereignty, and for the support of the Temple service (Ex. xxx. 12–15; Matt. xvii. 25, 26). In the N. T. passages, tribute means the tax levied by the Romans (Matt. xxii. 16–22). Christ warned them to render to all men their dues (1 Cor. x. 31; 1 Pet. ii. 9, 13).

TAX'ING (Gr. apographe). The question about the truth of Luke's record of the taxing by the Emperor of Rome is quite surely settled in Luke's favor by the best critics (Luke ii. 1; Acts 5, 37).

TEACH'ER. One that imparts instruction, and communicates knowledge of religious truth or other things.

TEARS. Drops of water from the eye (2 K. xx. 5). The ancient Romans collected the tears of mourners for the dead, and preserved them in a bottle, of thin glass or simple pottery. They used to be placed in the sepulchres of the dead, in Rome and Palestine, where they are found in great numbers, on opening ancient tombs (Ps. lvi. 8).

TEKO'A (strikers), (2 Chr. xi. 6). E. of Hebron; built by Ashur, son of Hezron (2 Chr. ii. 24). Residence of the wise woman who made peace between David and Absalom (2 Sam. xiv.). Ira, the Tekoite, was one of David's 30 "mighty men" (Ib. xxiii. 26). Rehoboam fortified it (2 Chr. xi. 6). Its people helped Nehemiah rebuild the walls of Jerusalem after the return from Babylon (Neh. iii. 5, 27). The prophet Amos was born here (Amos i., vii. 14). The modern name is Tekua, and it is a small village of Arab houses, on an elevated hill.

TEL'AIM (1 Sam. xv. 4). Saul gathered the people, and numbered them, at Telaim; and it is not certain whether a city of this name was meant, or that the numbering occurred at the time of the Passover, for the word is also translated "lambs of the Passover."

TELAS'SAR. Thelasar (hill of Asshur). In the hill-country of upper and western Mesopotamia, near Haran, and inhabited by the children of Eden (2 K. xix. 12). The name indicates the site of a temple built in honor of Asshur. The Targums locate this place, with Resen (Gen. x. 12), on the Tigris, near Nineveh and Calah.

TEL'EM (oppression). Judah (Josh. xv. 24). S. of Hebron. Now called Dhullam.

TEL'EM. A porter of the Temple (Ezr. x. 24).

TEL-HARSA. Tel-Haresha (hill of the wood). (Ezr. ii. 59; Neh. vii. 61). In the low country of Babylonia, near the Persian Gulf.

TELL HUM has recently been proved to be the site of the ancient CAPERNAUM. The original building of the synagogue, as appears by an inspection of the ruins, was 74 feet 9 inches long by 56 feet 9 inches wide; longer between north and south, with entrances at the south end. Many finely cut capitals were found in the interior, buried in the rubbish; and also several of the pedestals in their proper places. Epiphanius says there was a Christian church there A. D. 600, some of the ruins of which are found near the synagogue. The plan of the synagogue was always peculiar, and different from that adopted by the Christians, or Pagans, or Mohammedans, so that there is no difficulty in determining the nature of certain ruins. This building may have been the one built by the centurion (Luke vii. 45), and that in which Jesus delivered the discourse recorded in John vi. One of the stones has a pot of manna sculptured on it.

TE'MA (desert), (Gen. xxv. 15; Is. xxi. 14.) A small town on the border of Syria, on the pilgrim route from Damascus to Mecca. It was once a stronghold.

TE'MAN (Gen. xxxvi. 11). A city or country named after one of the dukes of Edom, in the S. of the land of Edom. Eusebius and Jerome mention it as being 15 ms. from Petra.

TEMPLE. The Tabernacle was the sacred tent where man met God in close communion, and was built after a model given to Moses by Jehovah. It was used in the Exodus, on the journey to Canaan, and in the Promised Land until Solomon built the Temple on Zion, after which it is mentioned no more. The Temple is minutely described in Kings, Jeremiah and Ezekiel, and the three accounts must be read together, for inside measures are given in one and outside in another; both being necessary for a complete description.

The form cannot be determined. Many plans and elevations have been designed to meet the requirements of text, the last of which seems to answer all of the points. (See Solomon's Temple, T. O. Paine; Die Stiftshütte, Dr. Neumann).

TEMPT TO, and TEMPTA'TION. These words denote the trying or putting one to the proof. (Heb. BAHAN MASSAH; Gr. peirazo, ekpeirazo, peirasmos, etc.). Designate the action of God or the course of His providence, or the earthly trial by which human character and feelings are brought out (Gen. xxii. 1). The Temptation may be used with reference to our first parents (Gen. iii.) or of the Jesus (Matt. iv. 1–11) in which Satan was the Tempter.

TENT (Heb. OHEL). Dwelling in tents was very general in ancient times among Eastern nations (Gen. iv. 20). The patriarchs, the Israelites from Egypt, dwelt in tents until they obtained the Promised Land, and to some extent afterwards (Judg. vii. 8; Heb. xi. 9). The people of the East live much in the open air. But those most remarkable for this unsettled and wandering life are the Arabs, who still live in tents. This kind of dwelling is not confined to the Arabs, but is used throughout Asia. Tents were usually made of canvas stretched out, and resting on poles, with cords secured to pegs driven into the ground (Is. xxxiii. 20). The house of God, and heaven, are spoken of in Scripture as the tent or tabernacle of Jah (Ps. xv. 1).

TE'RAH (station). Son of Nahor, and father of Abram (Gen. xi. 24–32). NAHOR 2, and HARAN 1, and through them the ancestor of the great families of the Israelites, Ishmaelites, Midianites, Moabites, and Amonites. He dwelt in Ur, and was an idolater (Josh. xxiv. 2). He lived 205 years, and died in Haran (xi. 31, 32).

TER'APHIM. This word is rendered "images," "idolatry," or the like. Now understood to represent small images used as household gods.

TERTUL'LUS. A Roman orator, whom the Jews employed to bring forward their accusation against Paul (Acts xxiv. 1–2).

TES'TAMENT. See HISTORY OF THE BOOKS.

TES'TIMONY (Heb. EDAH, EDUTH, TEUDAH; Gr. marturia, marturion). Witness, evidence, proof (Matt. viii. 4; John iii. 32, 33, etc.). Applied also to the precepts, law, revelation of God (Ps. xix. 7), and especially to the TEN COMMANDMENTS, or DECALOGUE (Ex. xvi. 34).

TET'RARCH. Governor of the fourth part of a country. 1. HEROD ANTIPAS (Matt. xiv. 11), who is distinguished as "Herod the tetrarch;" also the title of king is assigned to him (Matt. xiv. 9).—2. HEROD PHILIP II is called tetrarch of ITUREA (Luke iii. 1); LYSANIAS (iii. 1), tetrarch of ABILENE. This title was probably applied to petty tributary princes also.

THAD'DEUS (Heb. TADDAY, courageous). JUDE. JUDAS. Also called Lebbeus and Thaddeus (Matt. x.). One of the twelve. He is only mentioned as among those who could not see the spiritual kingdom of Jesus (John xiv. 22). Of his life, labors and death we know nothing. Tradition says he preached at Edessa, and died a martyr there (Mark iii. 18).

THAS'SI (debilitation). The surname of Simon the son of Mattathias (1 Macc. ii. 3).

THEBES. A chief city of ancient Egypt, the capital and residence of the kings during the age of its highest splendor. There were three names, Zam, Pamen (abode of Amon), and Thebes. No-Ammon (portion of Ammon), is the name in the Scriptures (Jer. xlvi. 25; Nah. iii. 8; Ez. xxx. 14).

THE'BEZ (brightness), (Judg. ix. 50). A place 13 ms. N. E. of Shechem, now called Tubas, on a gentle hill, surrounded by large groves of olives, and well-cultivated fields (Rob. iii. 305). Abimelech was killed here by a piece of a millstone (2 Sam. xi. 21).

THEOPH'ILUS (friend of God). 1. The person to whom Luke inscribes his Gospel and the Acts of the Apostles (Luke i. 3.—2. A Jewish HIGH-PRIEST, A. D. 37–41; the son of ANNAS.

THESSALO'NIANS, FIRST AND SECOND EPISTLES TO THE. See HISTORY OF THE BOOKS.

THESSALONI'CA. Named after the sister of Alexander the Great. She was wife of Cassander, who rebuilt and enlarged the city. Its original name was Therma. In Macedonia, between the rivers of the Thermaic Gulf. It is still the most important town in European Turkey, after Constantinople, having a population of 70,000, about one-third of whom are Jews.

THEU'DAS (gift of God). An insurgent Jew, mentioned by Gamaliel A. D. 33 (Acts v. 35–39), as of the preceding generation, and not to be confounded with a Theu'das of A. D. 44, mentioned by Josephus.

THIEVES, THE TWO (Gr. lestai, robbery). The men who appear in the history of the crucifixion (Matt. xxvii. 38, 44; Mark xv. 37, 42) were robbers, belonging to the lawless bands in Palestine. Against these brigands every Roman procurator had to wage war. They kept an armed police to encounter them (Luke xxii. 52).

THIMNA'THAH. Dan (Josh. xix. 43). Between Eglon and Ekron. The residence of Samson's wife. There must have been several towns of the same name. One is now known as Tibneh, ten miles south of Akir (Ekron).

THIS'BE. Naphtali (Tobit, i. 2). The birthplace of the prophet ELIJAH, THE TISHBITE (1 K. xvii. 1). The place has not been identified, but is looked for in the vicinity of Safed or Kadesh.

THISTLE, AND THORNS. There are nearly twenty Hebrew words which point to different kinds of prickly or thorny shrubs, and are variously rendered "thorns," "briers," "thistles," "brambles," etc.

THOMAS (a twin; Gr. Didymus, a twin. Lydia was his twin-sister). A native of Galilee. It has been suggested that he was a twin-brother of Jesus, but there is no proof that he was any relation to him.

THRA'CIA (2 Macc. xii. 35). Thrace anciently included the whole country north of Macedonia and the Black Sea.

THRONE (Heb. CISSE; Gr. thronos). Any elevated seat occupied by a person in authority as high-priest (1 Sam. i. 9); judge (Ps. cxxii. 5); or a military chief (Jer. i. 15).

TIBE'RIAS. A city on the W. shore of the Sea of Galilee (John vi. 23). Some have supposed that it was built on the ruins (or near) of an ancient city, Rakkath, or Chinneroth (see Land and Book). Josephus says that it was built over an ancient cemetery, and was therefore an unclean city. Jesus never visited Tiberias, and it is scarcely mentioned in the Gospels. It was the capital of Galilee from its origin to the time of Herod Agrippa II.

TIBE'RIUS. The second emperor of Rome, successor of AUGUSTUS, A. D. 14–37. He was the son of Claudius Nero and Livia. He distinguished himself in various wars. At first he was moderate and just, but soon became infamous for his vices and crimes, and died A. D. 37, after a reign of 23 years. He is several times mentioned under the title of Cæsar (Luke xx. 22–25, xxiii. 22; John xix. 12). His subjects were commanded to worship his images. See cut on page 105. PENNY.

TIG'LATH-PILE'SER (lord of the Tigris). King of Assyria; was invited by Ahaz, king of Judah, to assist him against the kings of Assyria and Israel (2 K. xvi. 7–10).

TIG'RIS (arrow). River of Mesopotamia. Called Hiddekel in Hebrew. Like the Euphrates, it has two sources; the principal one is near the high mountain-lake Golenjik, which lies in the great bend of the Euphrates, in lat. 38° 10′, long. 39° 20′, and only 2 or 3 ms. from that river.

TIM'NAH (divide). 1. In the north of Judah (Josh. xv. 10), near Bethshemesh. It may be identical with Timnatha of Samson, a city of Dan (xix. 43). There is a modern village called Tibneh 2 ms. W. of Ain Shems (Bethshemesh), which is believed to be on the site of the ancient city.—2. In the mountain district of Judah (Josh. xv. 57), south of Hebron.

TIM'NATH. TIMNAH. 1. (Gen. xxxviii. 12). Where Judah kept his flocks.—2. The residence of Samson's wife (Judg. xiv. 1, 2, 5). In Philistia. There were vineyards; but as a lion was found in one, the place must have been thinly inhabited.

TIM'NATH-HERES. The city and burial-place of Joshua (Judg. ii. 9). Also called Timnath-serah (Josh. xix. 50). In Mt. Ephraim, on the north side of Mt. Gaash.

TIM'OTHY. Is first mentioned in Acts xvi. 1, where he is described as the son of a Greek, by a Jewish mother. The father's name is unknown; his mother's was Eunice, and his grandmother's Lois (2 Tim. i. 5).

TIMOTHY, FIRST EPISTLE TO. See HISTORY OF THE BOOKS.

TIPH'SAH (ford), (1 K. iv. 24). The outpost, toward the Euphrates, of Solomon's kingdom (2 K. xv. 16). Probably Thapsacus of the Greeks and Romans, and situated in Northern Syria, where the route eastward crossed the Euphrates. It was a great and important town in the time of Xenophon.

TIR'HAKAH (exalted). King of ETHIOPIA, or Cush, and of Egypt, and the opponent of SENNACHERIB (2 K. xix. 9). He was a powerful monarch, ruling both Upper and Lower Egypt, and extending his conquests far into Asia.

TIR'ZAH. City of Canaan (Josh. xii. 24). After the separation of Israel and Judah it was the residence of Jeroboam (1 K. xiv. 17), and of his successors, Baasha, Elah and Zimri. The royal sepulchres (xvi. 6) of the first four kings of Israel were here.

TITHE (Heb. MA'ASER; Gr. dekate, a tenth). The proportion of a man's income devoted to sacred purposes (Gen. xiv. 20, xxviii. 22) prescribed by the Mosaic Law (Num. xxxi. 31). A twofold tithe was required of each Jewish citizen. The first consisted of one-tenth of the produce of his fields, trees, and herds, to be given to God (Lev. xxvii. 30–32). The Levites paid a tenth part of what they received to the priests (Num. xviii. 26–28). The second tithe required of each landholder one-tenth of the nine parts of his produce remaining after the first tithe, to be used at the Temple in entertaining the Levites (Deut. xii. 17–19, 22–29). Every third year a special provision was made for the poor, either out of this second tithe or in addition to it (Deut. xiv. 28, 29). The system of tithes was renewed both before and after the Captivity (2 Chr. xxxi. 5, 6, 12); but they were not always regularly paid, and then the Divine blessing was withheld (Mal. iii. 8–12).

TI'TUS (Gr. Titus). A Christian teacher of Greek origin (Gal. ii. 3), the companion of Paul, who converted him (Tit. i. 4; 2 Cor. viii. 23). He was one of those sent upon a mission to Jerusalem from the Church of Antioch (Acts v. 2; Gal. ii. 1). He was thence sent to Corinth, where he labored successfully (2 Cor. viii. 6; xii. 18).

TOB, THE LAND OF (good). Jephthah's refuge (Judg. xi. 3), and residence, until invited to return by the sheikhs of Gilead (v. 5). Tob was somewhere in the Hauran, but is not identified.

TONGUE (Heb. LASHON; Gr. glossa dialektos, dialect or speech). Literally the organ in the mouth, used by animals for tasting, licking, etc.; and by mankind for articulation (Ex. xi. 7); also language, nation or people, having their own language (Josh. vii. 21).

TOMB. The most extensive tombs were arranged as in the plan, and were sometimes cut in the solid rock, and had many little places for the bodies, which were laid in the loculi (places) in their dress, with the ordinary costume of the living, or grave clothes, as in some cases. See cut of TOMB, p. 122. The loculus (one place) was closed up by a stone, or several small stones, cemented into place; and the entrance to the tomb was securely closed by a heavy stone door, or by a roller (round like a millstone, without the center hole), and a door also.

TONGUES, CONFUSION OF. The Jewish historians, who wrote the original records in Genesis, evidently intended to teach, in their two distinct accounts of the origin of the families of man, in which all are derived from a single family on the two occasions, Adam's and Noah's, that there was but one original pair, who were the first parents of the races of men, and also, that there was, originally, but one language, and that the Hebrew, or Aramaic, and that the great diversity of tongues was produced miraculously, at the building of the Tower of Babel, when the races were also distinctly separated from each other in color and feature.

TO'PHETH (tabret-grove). S. E. of Jerusalem, in the Valley of Hinnom (Jer. vii. 31, xix. 2). A music-grove of the king; a part of the royal gardens. After the sacrifices to the idol Moloch, it became a place of abomination (vii. 32).

TOR'MAH (Heb. BETORMAH); "privily" Judg. ix. 31).

TOW'ER (Heb. MIGDAL, Gr. purgos). Towers were erected not only in the outer walls, and on the hights, within cities (Judg. ix. 47–49), but along the frontiers (Judg. ix. 17). A tower afforded refuge to the people in case of invasion (Prov. xviii. 10).

TOWN'-CLERK (Gr. grammateus, a scribe, secretary—clerk). The title of the magistrate at Ephesus who appeased the mob (Acts xix. 35), in the theater-tumult excited by Demetrius.

TRACHONI'TIS (heap of stones), (Luke iii. 1).

The region called, also, ARGOB, GESHUR, and now EL-LEJAH, and is S. of Damascus, consisting of a plain and the W. slope of Jebel Hauran.

TRANCE (Heb. LOPAL, falling; Gr. Ekstasis; Lat. Exbessus). The state in which a person has passed out of the usual order of its life, beyond the usual limits of consciousness and volition. The condition of seeming death. Loss of conscious perception. In medical terms, one form of catalepsy. A state in which there is a sudden suspension of thought, of sensibility, and of voluntary motion; or rather lost to all outward impressions, and absorbed in the imagination; sometimes the result of religious impressions.

The prophet is also called a SEER (Num. xii. 6; Lam. ii. 9); and received the word of the Lord (1 Sam. iii. 21). The spiritual man (Hos. ix. 7), is another term. The name prophet (NABI) means inspired person, one whom God has qualified to impart consolation, light, and strength to others; a declarer and interpreter of the divine will respecting the past, the present, and the future.

TRANSFIGURA'TION. This event occurred in that period of the life of Christ between the temptation in the wilderness and the agony in Gethsemane.

TROGYL'LIUM. Samos is exactly opposite this point of land, which lies at the boundary between Ionia and Caria.

TYRE (rock). Ar. Sur; Heb. TZOR. On a rocky peninsula which was formerly an island (Ez. xxvii. 25), before the siege of Alexander. There was probably a city on the mainland opposite the island city; but which was the more ancient is not decided. One of the places was called Palætyrus (Old Tyre). Hercules was worshiped under the name of Melkarth, and the temple in his honor on the island was said by Arrian (ii. 16) to have been the most ancient in the world.

VASH'TI (a beauty). The queen of Persia, divorced by Ahasuerus, her husband, for refusing to appear unvailed before his reveling company (Esth. i.).

VINEYARD. The vine, its fruit, the grape, and wine and vinegar produced from it, are frequently mentioned in the Scripture, as is natural from its being a native of the East (supposed to have originated in Margiana, S. of the Caspian Sea). It is mentioned in the earliest histories of all people, and has always been highly valued. Moses, Homer, and Herodotus wrote about it; and before their day, the Egyptians pictured it, and methods of preparing its products for use, on their monuments.

VIRGIN (Heb. BATHULIA, ALMAH; Lat. virgo, young woman), (Is. viii. 3, 4; Matt. i. 23; Prov. xxx. 19).

VIS'ION. A supernatural presentation of certain scenery or circumstances to the mind of a person either while awake or asleep (Is. vi.; Ez. i.; Dan. viii.; Acts xxvi. 13). See DREAM.

VOW (Heb. NEDER, vow of devotion; Heb. ESAR, vow of abstinence; and HEREM, vow of destruction). Vows, in general, are mentioned in Job xxii. 27, etc. (Gr. anath'ema, devoted). The earliest vow mentioned is Jacob's (Gen. xxviii. 18–22, xxxi. 13). The law regulated the practice of vows.

W

WA'GES (Heb. MASKORETH, SACHAR; Gr. misthos, opsonia). The law was very strict in requiring daily payment of wages (Lev. xix. 13).

WALL. 1. Walls, supporting terraces on side-hills, were made from the loose stones gathered on the side-hill, either with or without mortar. These walls, ruined or entire, are found all over the hill-country, and are especially noticeable at Bethlehem and Gibeah, N. W. of Jerusalem.

WAR. In war the custom of the Israelites resembled that of surrounding countries. See ARMY.

WASHING THE HANDS AND FEET. As no knives or forks were used at the table, washing of the hands before and after meals was necessary (Matt. xv. 2). Because of the dust and heat of the Eastern climate, washing the feet on entering a house was an act of respect to the company, and of refreshment to the traveler (Gen. xviii. 4). When done by the master of the house it was an especial mark of respect and honor to the guest.

WATCH'MEN. Are of as early a date as cities, robbers, and wars (Ex. xiv. 24). Jerusalem and other cities had regular guards night and day (Cant. iii. 1–3, 5, 7).

WA'TER (Heb. MAYIM; Gr. hudor). To the ancient Hebrews water was of inestimable value (Ex. xv. 22). It is an emblem of the spiritual blessings or SALVATION, which God bestows upon his people (Is. lv. 1). See JERUSALEM.

WELL (Heb. BEER). The necessity and demand for water in a hot climate has rendered it a possession of the greatest importance (Judg. i. 15; Gen. xxi. 30, 31). So that, in war, the wells were often filled in by the enemy (2 K. iii. 19). Wells in Palestine have generally to be sunk through limestone; sometimes they are descended by steps (Gen. xxiv. 16). A curb or low parapet-wall encircles their mouths; sometimes they were furnished with stone covers (Ex. xxi. 33).

WID'OW (Heb. ALMANAH; Gr. chera). The Mosaic dispensation made no provision for the maintenance of widows.

WIL'DERNESS. 1. SIN. See EXODUS. 2. Of the Wandering. The district over which the Israelites wandered between the two visits to KADESH, for about 38 years is not certainly known. The probability is that it was what is now called Et Tyh, the Wandering. See PARAN.

WINE. The word wine is the translation of ten Hebrew and two Greek words.

WINE-PRESS, THE (PURAH GATH). Is of the highest antiquity, and is drawn on the walls of the Egyptian temples and tombs.

WITNESS. The law was very careful to provide and enforce evidence for all its infractions and all transactions bearing on them (Num. xv. 39, 40.

WOM'AN, WOM'EN (Heb. ISHSHAH, female; Gr. gune, theleia, female), (Rom. i. 26, 27). Is mentioned in the Scriptures as the beloved and honored companion and helpmeet of man (Gen. xxii. 23, 24). In the East women have always lived in seclusion, not appearing in public unless closely vailed, not seeing the men who visit their husbands and brothers, nor even taking their meals with the men of their own family. They were chiefly engaged in domestic duties (Prov. xxxi.). The poor gleaned the remnants of the harvest (Gen. xxix. 9, xxiv. 15–20). Oriental women are never regarded or treated as equals by the men.

WORD (Heb. EMER, OMER, IMRAH, DABAR, MILLAH, etc.; Gr. logos and rema. "Word" is applied to the Lord JESUS CHRIST. See HISTORY OF THE BOOKS.

WRITING (Heb. KATHAB, to write; SEFER, a book; SOFER, a writer). The Phœnician was the most ancient alphabet that is known to us. The Egyptian writing may have been more ancient, but that was not alphabetic, being both ideographic and phonetic. Pliny (vii. 56) says the Syrians (Phœnicians) invented writing, but gives the Assyrians credit for great antiquity in the use of the art. The discovery of the Moabite Stone (see p. 94) proves the origin of the Greek letters to have been Phœnician; and it is probable that the Hebrews used the alphabet in common with the Phœnicians, as may be inferred from their names; as Aleph, ox; Gimel, camel.

TABLE OF DERIVATION OF ALPHABETS.

1 Phœnician.
2 Greek (ancient), Persian (anc.), Numidian, Hebrew (anc.), Aramæan (anc.).
3 From Greek, Etruscan, Umbrian, Oscan, Samnite, Celtiberian, Roman, Runic; Later Greek, Coptic, Gothic, Slavonian.
4 From Persian, Sassanid, Zend, Pehlvi, Armenian?
5 From Aramæan, Palmyrene, Hebrew square, Estrangelo, Nestorian, Sabian, Cufic, Nischi, Peshito, Miguric or Old Turkish.
6 From Hebrew, Samaritan.

The English is the first pure alphabet, without double letters.

The Hebrew alphabet has 22 letters. (See their names in the TABLE OF ALPHABETS). The arrangement of the letters is after the order as given in Psalm cxix. The meaning of each name as far as known is: 1. Aleph, an ox; 2. Beth, a house; the Ethiopic is like a round-top tent; 3. gimel, a camel, the Greek gamma—some say the camel's hump; 4. daleth, a door, that is, a tent-door, a triangle; Greek delta; 5. he, no name; Greek E, and also Phœnician turned round; 6. vau (wavo), a hook, or tent-peg, the Greek upsilon; 7. zain (sajin), sword, ancient Greek san; 8. CHETH, a fence, Greek ETA; 9. TET (teth), a snake, or basket, Greek theta; 10. YOD, a hand, the Phœnician and Samaritan yod has a hint of fingers; 11. CAPH, the hollow of the hand, Greek kappa; 12. LAMED, ox-goad, Greek lambda; the ancient Phœnician was curved like the modern Arabic; 13. MEM, water, or a trident and symbol of the sea; Greek mu; 14. NUN, a fish, Greek nu; 15. SAMECH, a prop, Greek sigma; 16. AIN (ajin), an eye, O in Phœnician; 17. PE, a mouth, Greek pi; 18. ZADE, a fish-hook, Greek zeta; 19. KOF, back of the head (some say ear, others a pole, or eye of a needle); the old Hebrew P became the Greek koppa, and the Roman Q; 20. RESH, the head, Greek ro; 21. SHIN and SIN, a tooth, Greek sigma; 22. TAU, a mark, or sign, perhaps a cross ⋈, Greek tau.

The form of five of the Hebrew letters was changed when the letters were final (at the end of the word), a system which was useful when sentences were written without spaces between the words; for instance IWASGLADWHENTHEYSAID UNTOMELETUSGOUPTOTHEHOUSEOFTHELORD (Ps. cxxii. 1). This writing without division into words is a more close following of speech, which is a continuous flow of sound, the mind separating the words, or ideas. The Moabite Stone (page 94) is an instance from antiquity. The spaces there show where the stone has been broken or defaced, and letters lost.

Abbreviations were common both in books, and on coins, and also in inscriptions on the monuments, as ISR for ISRAEL, YAH for JEHOVAH.

Numbers were indicated by letters and figures. Figures are found on the Phœnician coins, and monuments in Palmyra, and Egypt. The Greeks also used letters in writing numbers. Differences in certain statements of numbers can be explained in this way; the scribe, or copyist mistaking a C for a G, C being 700, and G being 7,000.

The signs used by the Babylonian writers differed from those of Tiberias, and were nearly all above the letters. The present system is uniform everywhere and dates from about A. D. 1050.

Accents were also marked, for the purpose of noting the tone-syllable (directing the reader in the synagogue), and the chief words in the sentence. There were peculiar styles of recitation for each class of books, the law, prophets, and poets, which are still in use. The metrical chants have been lost. See MUSIC.

The materials which have come down to us from antiquity are, stone, bricks, papyrus, vellum, parchment. Embossed leather is still preserved, bearing the names and date of the Pharaohs 3,300 years ago. Papyrus is alluded to in 3 Macc. iv. 20, and 2 John 12 (Gr. xartes, chartes); and in Josephus (Ant. iii. 11, 6, xii. 2, 10); and parchment in 2 Tim. iv. 13 (Gr. membranai). Skins of clean animals only could be used for the Scriptures; as KELEF (skin of the hairy side), for the tophillim, phylacteries; diksostos (Heb. DIKS), for the mezuzoth; and gĕvil (of undivided skin, dressed). The ink (DEYO, Gr. melan, black), was of lampblack wet with gall-juice, sometimes diluted with vitriol. The inkstand (KESETH HASSOFER), was carried in a case (KALMARIN), with pens, knife, etc., by a strap over the shoulder, or fastened at the girdle.

WRITING MATERIALS.

The rolls were written in columns (DELATHOTH), (one, two, or three, according to the width of the roll), with a margin above of 3 fingers, below of 4, and between the columns of an inch. The columns are about 2 fingers wide in the Herculaneum rolls; and others there are 3 in. (4 fingers).

The case in which the rolls were kept were called KEREK or KARKA.

Tablets of wood covered with wax were used for ordinary writing not intended for keeping a long time. On these the letters were impressed with a stylus (Job xix. 24), sometimes of iron (Ps. xlv. 2). For engraving on stone the point called CHERET (Ex. xxxii. 4; Is. viii. 1), and ZIPPOREN (Jer. xvii. 1), were used.

A reed pen (3 John 13; 3 Macc. iv. 20), was used on parchment and papyrus.

The oldest monument in alphabetical writing is the Moabite Stone (p. 173), which is dated as early as 900 B. C., if it does not belong to David's time (1025 B. C.). The ancient Phœnician monuments, dating later than the Moabite stone, are counted by hundreds.

No vowel points are found on the coins, in the Palmyrene inscriptions, or on the Phœnician monuments. It is probable that the vowel-points were first written by Ezra. The Arabic is the first in point of time to show the use of vowel-points, dating before A. D. 650. The present Arabic system of writing dates from about A. D. 930.

Some scholars contend that the vowel-points were not in use before A. D. 550.

In the 8th century A. D., Moses the Punctator, followed by his son Judah the Corrector, used the points for the first time that is recorded, to assist his pupils.

X—Y

XAN'THICUS. One of the Macedonian months (Neb. NISAN). MONTH.

YARN (Heb. MIKVEH, MIKVE). An error in 2 Chr. i. 16. The king's merchants from Coa took the horses from Coa at a price.

YOKE (Heb. MOT "bar"), (Nahum i. 13); MOTAH, "bands" (Ez. xxx. 18); Heb. ZEMED, a pair of oxen, so termed as being yoked together (1 Sam. xi. 7). A symbol of subjection and servitude (1 K. 12, 4). See AGRICULTURE.

Z

ZAAN'AIM, THE PLAIN OF, or probably the OAK OF. A sacred tree by Heber's tent, when Sisera took refuge in it (Judg. iv. 11). Near Kedesh Naphtali. Lost.

ZAC'CUR (mindful). There are six of this name of no particular note.

ZAD'OK (righteous). Son of AHITUB 2, and father of Ahimaaz, high-priest of the Jews (1 Chr. xxix. 3, xii. 28). Others of this name are mentioned in 2 K. xv. 33; 1 Chr. vi. 12; Ezr. vii. 2; Neh. iii. 4, xii. 13. Zadok was called the father of all faithful priests after his time (Ez. xl. 46, etc.).

ZAR'ETAN. ZARTHAN (Josh. iii. 16). Supposed to be Kurn Surtabeh, N. of Jericho, in the Ghor.

ZECHARI'AH (whom Jah remembers). 1. The 11th in order of the 12 minor prophets. See HISTORY OF THE BOOKS.

ZE'DAD (Num. xxxiv. 8; Ez. xlvii. 15). On the N. border of the land as promised by Moses. Passed through by the prophet Ezekiel on his way to Assyria as a captive. Sadud is on the N. end of Anti-Libanus, 50 ms. N. E. of Baalbek.

ZEDEKI'AH (justice of Jah) 1. The last king of Judah and Jerusalem. Son of JOSIAH and Hamutal (2 K. xxiv. 17, 19). His history is given in 2 K. xxv. 7, etc.

ZEPHANI'AH. 1. A Kohathite, in the 7th generation from Levi (1 Chr. vi. 36).—2. A priest. He was among the captives slain by the king of Babylon (2 K. xxv. 18–21).—3. A prophet of the tribe of Simeon (2 Chr. xxiv. 3; Zeph. i. 4, 5).

ZE'RED, THE BROOK OF (brook of willows), (Deut. ii. 14). Now called Wady el Ahsy, and running into the S. E. corner of the Dead Sea. Here the wanderings of the Israelites ended; or it may be they continued to the time of the death of Moses.

ZERED'ATHA (2 Chr. iv. 17). Called Zarthan. (1 K. vii. 46). The vessels for Solomon's temple were cast in the clay-ground between Succoth and this place, in the plain of Jordan. The finest clay is found on the banks of the Jordan, near Succoth, and is carried away for use in casting brass.

ZIK'LAG (Josh. xv. 31). Judah in the Negeb. It was the private property of David, and at one time his residence (1 Sam. xxx.). Supposed to be the site now called Ashluj.

ZIL'LAH (shade). Wife of LAMECH 1 (Gen. iv. 19, 22, 23), the mother of Tubal-Cain and Naamah 1.

ZIL'PAH (a dropping). The maid of LEAH, who became the second wife of Jacob and mother of Gad and Asher (Gen. xxix. 24, xxx. 9–13).

ZIM'RI (celebrated in song). 1. A prince of the tribe of Simeon, slain by Phinehas (Num. xxv. 14).—2. A general of half the cavalry of Elah, king of Israel. He rebelled against his master, killed him, usurped his kingdom, and cut off the whole family, not sparing any of his relatives or friends. He reigned but seven days; for the army of Israel made their general, Omri, king, and took the city of Tirzah. Zimri burned himself in the palace, with all its riches (1 K. xvi. 1–20; 2 K. ix. 31). Others of this name are mentioned in 1 Chr. ii. 6; viii. 33–36.

ZIN (coldness), THE WILDERNESS OF. A district between the Arabah and the Desert of Paran, or Tyh mountains, and consisting of three terraces, sloping toward the Dead Sea, by the Wady Fikreh. KADESH was in this. Josephus speaks of a hill called Sin, where Miriam was buried. This hill may be what is now Moderah, isolated, conical, and standing a little S. of Wady Fikreh.

ZO'AN (departure). Tanis, Egypt, on the E. bank of the Tanitic branch of the Nile. It was an important post on the E. of the country, and chief town of a large district of pasture-lands. Called by the Egyptians HA-AWAR, and fortified by SALATIS, the first shepherd king, who stationed here 240,000 men as a protection against the Assyrians. Hebron was built 7 years before Zoan (Num. xiii. 22). There was a great temple here, dedicated to SET (Baal), embellished by Rameses II. The Pharaohs dwelt here, both in the time of Joseph and of the Exodus (Ps. lxxxviii. 12, 43). Mentioned by Isaiah, xix. 13, xxx. 4, 14. The ruins of the temple area show its size, 1250 by 1500 ft., and its remains prove its ancient grandeur. There were 10 or 12 obelisks, all now fallen; the stone for which was originally brought from Syene. The inscriptions and figures are of the age of the shepherd kings.

ZO'AR (little), (Gen. xiv. 2, 8). One of the oldest cities of Canaan. First called BELA. When the cities of the plain were destroyed, Zoar was spared as a refuge for Lot (ib. xix. 22, 30). Zoar was seen by Moses from the top of Pisgah (Deut. xxxiv. 3). Following Josephus (Ant. i. 11, § 4), the Crusaders, and later travelers, Zoar was on the LISAN, a promontory on the E. side of the Dead Sea, and now seen in extensive ruins in the lower end of Wady Kerak. Palms once flourished here so abundantly as to give it the name of City of Palms (William of Tyre, xxii. 30). Some have supposed Zoar to have been much nearer Jericho, and on the E. of Jordan, in the Wady Seir, near Nimrin.

ZO'RAH (hornets), (Josh. xix. 45). Dan, in the Shefelah. The residence of Manoah, and the birthplace of Samson (Judg. xii. 25, xvi. 31), who was buried between Zorah and Eshtaol. It was fortified by Rehoboam (2 Chr. xi. 19), and occupied after the return from Captivity (Neh. xi. 29).

ZUPH, THE LAND OF (honey), (1 Sam. ix. 5) Not far from the tomb of Rachel, in Judah. Soba, 7 ms. W. of Jerusalem.

ZU'ZIM, THE (strong people). An ancient people, subdued by Chedorlaomer and his allies (Gen. xiv. 5).

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES. The notices of weights and measures in the Bible are few and incomplete, and we have to supply the wanting information from other sources; chiefly from the systems of ancient nations, following the chain from Rome up through Greece, Egypt, and Phœnicia, to Babylon, the origin. The system was nearly uniform everywhere, but varied from one age to another. Layard found at Nineveh the weights used by the Babylonians, which were in the form of lions and of ducks, with rings for handles, of different sizes, in a certain system, the lightest weighing about 4 oz., the heaviest about 40 lbs.

MEASURES OF LENGTH.

The names are derived from members of the human body—the CUBIT, the length of the forearm from the elbow point to the third finger-tip, was the unit, a name and custom derived from Egypt, and recorded on the monuments. There is no record of the unit in the Bible, Josephus, nor in any ancient Hebrew building.

Land was measured by the cubit and reed, but never computed by square-measure, for they had no unit such as our acre.

MEASURES OF DISTANCE.

The ordinary day's journey for one person, was 30 ms.; for a company, 10. The Sabbath-day's journey was measured by the distance fixed between the tents and the ark in the wilderness, which was 2,000 cubits (Smith's Dict.; Kitto), which was also the limit outside of the Levitical cities. The moderns reckon by hours' travel, which vary from 4 to 2½ ms., as the length of the hour varies with the length of the day in summer and winter.

MEASURES OF CAPACITY (Josephus).

There were two sets—one for dry, another for liquid things—both having a unit of the same value, the bath and the ephah (Ex. xlv. 11).

The common cubit of 18 in. would give 3,000 ft. The sacred cubit of 19.05 in. would give 4,762 ft.

TO THE READER.

AS the DEDICATION of the English translation of the BIBLE to King James the First of England seems to be wholly unnecessary for the purposes of edification, and perhaps on some accounts improper to be continued in an American edition, a short account of the translations of the Old and New Testaments from the original Hebrew and Greek in which they were written, is substituted.

To the Jews was first committed the care of the Sacred Writings, and for many ages they were in a manner confined to that chosen people. There was then no need of translations into other languages; yet was the providence of God particularly manifest in their preservation and purity. The Jews were so faithful to their important trust, that, when copies of the law or the prophets were transcribed, they observed the most scrupulous exactness; they not only diligently compared the one with the other, but even counted the number of letters in each book, and compared and recorded the numbers.

The first translations that were made of the Old Testament were after the Babylonish captivity. They are called the Targums, which word in the Chaldean language signifies Translations. They are also often called the Chaldee Paraphrases; some of them are exact translations of different parts of Scripture; others are properly paraphrases, containing enlargements, explanations, and even additions. Several of them are yet extant, and they are often mentioned by the ancient fathers of the Christian church. Some have affirmed that the five books of Moses and that of Joshua were translated into Greek before the days of Alexander the Great. But the most remarkable translation of the Old Testament into Greek is called the Septuagint, which, if the opinion of some eminent writers is to be credited, was made in the reign of Ptolemy Philadelphus, about 260 years before the Christian era. At any rate, it is undoubtedly the most ancient that is now extant, and on many accounts deserving notice, though not to be put on a level with the Hebrew text, as has been sometimes done.

The New Testament was originally written in Greek; and no sooner was the gospel spread through the nations than it was found necessary to translate the inspired writings for each into its proper tongue. Some translations of the Old Testament, different from the Septuagint, were made into Greek from the year of Christ's birth 128 to 200. It is generally believed that the church of Antioch was favoured with a Syrian translation of the Bible as early as the year 100. The Ethiopians of Abyssinia have a version of the Bible, which they ascribe to Frumentius, of the fourth century. Chrysostom, who lived in the end of the fourth, and Theodoret, who lived in the middle of the fifth century, both inform us that they had the Syrian, Indian, Persian, Armenian, Ethiopic, and Scythian versions. The ancient Egyptians had the Scriptures translated into their language. The Georgians have a version in their ancient language. The most ancient German translation is supposed to have been made by Uphilas, A. D. 360. The Old Testament of all these translations, except the Syrian, is taken from the Septuagint, and not immediately from the Hebrew text.

We will now give some account of the translations of the Bible into the English language. There have been some who have affirmed that Adelme, Bishop of Sherburn, who lived in the beginning of the eighth century, translated the Psalms into the Saxon tongue. That however is uncertain, as some of the best historians make no mention of it; yet it is possible, as he was a man of great parts, and of great learning for those times, and said to be the first Englishman who wrote in the Latin language. About the same time, or a little after, Bede, commonly called the venerable Bede, translated some parts of the New Testament, some say the whole Bible, but that is not probable. Near 200 years later, King Alfred translated the Psalms into the same language. In 1382 Wiclif finished his translation of the Bible, which is yet extant; that is to say, there are copies of it in some public and private libraries. All these translations were made from the Vulgate. In the reign of Henry the Eighth, several editions of the Old and New Testaments were published in English; one of the most remarkable is that of William Tyndal in 1530. The translation of the New Testament was made from the original Greek, but probably the Old Testament either from the Latin of the Vulgate or the Greek of the Septuagint. This was soon followed by the improvements of Coverdale and Mathews. By order of the king, Tonstal, Bishop of Durham, and Heath, Bishop of Rochester, made a new translation, which was published in 1541: but, not pleasing Henry, it was suppressed by authority. In the reign of King Edward the Sixth, another translation was made; two editions of which were published, one in 1549, and the other in 1551. In the reign of Queen Elizabeth another translation was made, which, being revised by some of the most learned of the bishops, went by the name of the Bishops' Bible. This professed to be translated from the Hebrew of the Old Testament, and the Greek of the New, though, in some instances, when there was a difference, it preferred the Septuagint to the Hebrew.

This last circumstance, with some others, induced King James the First to select fifty-four persons, eminent in learning, and particularly well acquainted with the original languages in which the Old and New Testaments were written, to make a new translation of the whole Bible. In the year 1607, forty-seven of those persons, the other seven probably having died, assembled together, and arranged themselves into committees, to each of which a portion was given to translate. They were favoured not only with the best translations, but with the most accurate copies and the various readings of the original text. After about three years' assiduous labour, they severally completed the parts assigned them. They then met together, and while one read the translation newly formed, the rest had each a copy of the original text in his hand, or some one of the ancient versions, and when any difficulty occurred they stopped, till by common consultation it was determined what was most agreeable to the inspired Original. This translation was first published A. D. 1610, and is the one which has been ever since that time printed by public authority, and generally used in the British dominions, as well as in the United States of America. It may be added with safety, that it has been generally approved by men of learning and piety of all denominations, of which its having never been superseded by any other, for two hundred years, is a sufficient proof.

Cycle of the Moon, 0007.——Indiction, 0005.——Creation from Tisri, 0001.

CHAP. I.

1 The creation of heaven and earth. 14 Of the sun, moon, and stars. 26 Of man in the image of God. 29 Also the appointment of food.

Before CHRIST 4004.

IN the [c]beginning [b]God created the heaven and the earth.

[a] John 1. 1, 2. Heb. 1. 10.
[b] Ps. 8. 3. & 33. 6. & 89. 11, 12. & 102. 25. & 136. 5. & 146. 6. Isa. 44. 24. Jer. 10. 12. & 51. 15. Zech. 12. 1. Acts 14. 15. & 17. 24. Col. 1. 16, 17. Heb. 11. 3. Rev. 4. 11. & 10. 6.
[c] Ps. 33. 6. Isa. 40. 13, 14.

2 And the earth was without form, and void; and darkness was upon the face of the deep: [c]and the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters.

3 ¶ [d]And God said, [e]Let there be light: and there was light.

[d] Ps. 33. 9.
[e] 2 Cor. 4. 6.

4 And God saw the light, that it was good: and God divided †the light from the darkness.

†Heb. between the light and between the darkness.

5 And God called the light [f]Day, and the darkness he called Night: †and the evening and the morning were the first day.

[f] Ps. 74. 16. & 104. 20.
†Heb. and the evening was, and the morning was.

6 ¶ And God said, [g]Let there be a †firmament in the midst of the waters: and let it divide the waters from the waters.

[g] Job 37. 18. Ps. 136. 5. Jer. 10. 12. & 51. 15.
†Heb. expansion.

7 And God made the firmament, [h]and divided the waters which were under the firmament from the waters which were [i]above the firmament: and it was so.

[h] Prov. 8. 28.
[i] Ps. 148. 4.

8 And God called the firmament Heaven: and the evening and the morning were the second day.

9 ¶ And God said, [k]Let the waters under the heaven be gathered together unto one place, and let the dry land appear: and it was so.

[k] Job 26. 10. & 38. 8. Ps. 33. 7. & 95. 5. & 104. 9. & 136. 6. Prov. 8. 29. Jer. 5. 22. 2 Pet. 3. 5.

10 And God called the dry land Earth; and the gathering together of the waters called he Seas: and God saw that it was good.

11 And God said, Let the earth [l]bring forth †grass, the herb yielding seed, and the fruit-tree yielding [m]fruit after his kind, whose seed is in itself, upon the earth: and it was so.

[l] Heb. 6. 7.
[m] Luke 6. 44.

12 And the earth brought forth grass, and herb yielding seed after his kind, and the tree yielding fruit, whose seed was in itself, after his kind: and God saw that it was good.

13 And the evening and the morning were the third day.

14 ¶ And God said, Let there be [n]lights in the firmament of the heaven, to divide †the day from the night; and let them be for signs, and [o]for seasons, and for days, and years.

[n] Deut. 4. 19. Ps. 74. 16. & 136. 7.
†Heb. between the day and between the night.
[o] Ps. 74. 17. & 104. 19.

15 And let them be for lights in the firmament of the heaven to give light upon the earth: and it was so.

16 And God [p]made two great lights; the greater light †to rule the day, and [q]the lesser light to rule the night: he made [r]the stars also.

[p] Ps. 136. 7, 8, 9. & 148. 3, 5.
†Heb. for the rule of the day.
[q] Ps. 8. 3.
[r] Job 38. 7.

17 And God set them in the firmament of the heaven to give light upon the earth,

[s] Jer. 31. 35.

18 And to [s]rule over the day, and over the night, and to divide the light from the darkness: and God saw that it was good.

19 And the evening and the morning were the fourth day.

20 ¶ And God said, Let the waters bring forth abundantly the ‖ moving creature that hath †life, and †fowl that may fly above the earth in the †open firmament of heaven.

†Heb. soul.
†Heb. let fowl fly.
†Heb. face of the firmament of heaven.

21 And [u]God created great whales, and every living creature that moveth, which the waters brought forth abundantly after their kind, and every winged fowl after his kind: and God saw that it was good.

[u] ch. 6. 20. & 7. 14. & 8. 19. Ps. 104. 26.

22 And God blessed them, saying, [w]Be fruitful, and multiply, and fill the waters in the seas, and let fowl multiply in the earth.

[w] ch. 8. 17.

23 And the evening and the morning were the fifth day.

24 ¶ And God said, Let the earth bring forth the living creature after his kind, cattle, and creeping thing, and beast of the earth after his kind: and it was so.

25 And God made the beast of the earth after his kind, and cattle after their kind, and every thing that creepeth upon the earth after his kind: and God saw that it was good.

26 ¶And God said, [x] Let us make man in our image, after our likeness: and [y] let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth.

27 So God created man in his own image, [z] in the image of God created he him; [a] male and female created he them.

28 And God blessed them, and God said unto them, [b] Be fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the earth, and subdue it: and have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over every living thing that †moveth upon the earth.

29 ¶And God said, Behold, I have given you every herb †bearing seed, which is upon the face of all the earth, and every tree, in the which is the fruit of a tree yielding seed; [c] to you it shall be for meat.

30 And to [d] every beast of the earth, and to every [e] fowl of the air, and to every thing that creepeth upon the earth, wherein there is †life, I have given every green herb for meat: and it was so.

31 And [f] God saw every thing that he had made: and behold, it was very good. And the evening and the morning were the sixth day.

CHAP. II.

1 The first sabbath. 4 The manner of the creation. 19, 20 The naming of the creatures. 21 The making of woman, and institution of marriage.

THUS the heavens and the earth were finished, and [a] all the host of them.

2 [b] And on the seventh day God ended his work which he had made; and he rested on the seventh day from all his work which he had made.

3 And God [c] blessed the seventh day, and sanctified it: because that in it he had rested from all his work which God †created and made.

4 ¶ [d] These are the generations of the heavens and of the earth when they were created, in the day that the LORD God made the earth and the heavens,

5 And every [e] plant of the field before it was in the earth, and every herb of the field before it grew: for the LORD God had not [f] caused it to rain upon the earth, and there was not a man [g] to till the ground.

6 But ‖there went up a mist from the earth, and watered the whole face of the ground.

7 And the LORD God formed man †of the [h] dust of the ground, and [i] breathed into his [k] nostrils the breath of life; and [l] man became a living soul.

8 ¶And the LORD God planted [m] a garden [n] eastward in [o] Eden; and there [p] he put the man whom he had formed.

9 And out of the ground made the LORD God to grow [q] every tree that is pleasant to the sight, and good for food; [r] the tree of life also in the midst of the garden, [s] and the tree of knowledge of good and evil.

10 ¶And a river went out of Eden to water the garden: and from thence it was parted, and became into four heads.

11 The name of the first is Pison: that is it which compasseth [u] the whole land of Havilah, where there is gold;

12 And the gold of that land is good: [w] there is bdellium and the onyx-stone.

13 And the name of the second river is Gihon: the same is it that compasseth the whole land of †Ethiopia.

14 And the name of the third river is [x] Hiddekel: that is it which goeth ‖toward the east of Assyria. And the fourth river is Euphrates.

15 ¶And the LORD God took ‖the man, and [y] put him into the garden of Eden, to dress it, and to keep it.

16 And the LORD God commanded the man, saying, Of every tree of the garden †thou mayest freely eat:

17 [z] But of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, [a] thou shalt not eat of it: for in the day that thou eatest thereof [b] †thou shalt surely die.

18 ¶And the LORD God said, It is not good that the man should be alone: [c] I will make him an help †meet for him.

19 [e] And out of the ground the LORD God formed every beast of the field, and every fowl of the air, and [f] brought them unto ‖Adam to see what he would call them; and whatsoever Adam called every living creature, that was the name thereof.

20 And Adam †gave names to all cattle, and to the fowl of the air, and to every beast of the field: but for Adam there was not found an help meet for him.

21 ¶And the LORD God caused a [g] deep sleep to fall upon Adam, and he slept; and he took one of his ribs, and closed up the flesh instead thereof:

22 And the rib, which the LORD God had taken from man, †made he a woman, and [h] brought her unto the man.

23 And Adam said, This is now [i] bone of my bones, and flesh of my flesh: she shall be called †Woman, because she was [k] taken out of †man.

24 [l] Therefore shall a man leave his father and his mother, and shall cleave unto his wife: and they shall be one flesh.

25 [m] And they were both naked, the man and his wife, and were not [n] ashamed.

CHAP. III.

1 The serpent deceiveth Eve. 6 Man's shameful fall. 16 The punishment of mankind. 22 Their casting out of paradise.

NOW [a]the serpent was [b]more subtile than any beast of the field which the LORD God had made: and he said unto the woman, †Yea, hath God said, Ye shall not eat of every tree of the garden?

2 And the woman said unto the serpent, We may eat of the fruit of the trees of the garden:

3 [c]But of the fruit of the tree which is in the midst of the garden, God hath said, Ye shall not eat of it, neither shall ye touch it, lest ye die.

4 [d]And the serpent said unto the woman, Ye shall not surely die:

5 For God doth know, that in the day ye eat thereof, then [e]your eyes shall be opened; and ye shall be as gods, knowing good and evil.

6 ¶And when the woman saw that the tree was good for food, and that it was †pleasant to the eyes, and a tree to be desired to make one wise; she took of the fruit thereof, [f]and did eat; and gave also unto her husband with her, [g]and he did eat.

7 And [h]the eyes of them both were opened, [i]and they knew that they were naked: and they sewed fig-leaves together, and made themselves ‖aprons.

8 And they heard [k]the voice of the LORD God walking in the garden in the †cool of the day: and Adam and his wife [l]hid themselves from the presence of the LORD God amongst the trees of the garden.

9 ¶And the LORD God called unto Adam, and said unto him, Where art thou?

10 And he said, I heard thy voice in the garden: [m]and I was afraid, because I was naked; and I hid myself.

11 And he said, Who told thee that thou wast naked? Hast thou eaten of the tree whereof I commanded thee, that thou shouldest not eat?

12 And the man said, [n]The woman whom thou gavest to be with me, she gave me of the tree, and I did eat.

13 And the LORD God said unto the woman, What is this that thou hast done? And the woman said, [o]The serpent beguiled me, and I did eat.

14 ¶And the LORD God said [p]unto the serpent, Because thou hast done this, thou art cursed above all cattle, and above every beast of the field: upon thy belly shalt thou go, and [q]dust shalt thou eat all the days of thy life:

15 And I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between [r]thy seed and [s]her seed: [t]it shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise his heel.

16 Unto the woman he said, I will greatly multiply thy sorrow and thy conception; [u]in sorrow thou shalt bring forth children: [w]and thy desire shall be ‖to thy husband, and he shall [x]rule over thee.

17 And unto Adam he said, [y]Because thou hast hearkened unto the voice of thy wife, [z]and hast eaten of the tree [a]of which I commanded thee, saying, Thou shalt not eat of it: [b]cursed is the ground for thy sake; [c]in sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life;

18 [d]Thorns also and thistles shall it †bring forth to thee; and [e]thou shalt eat the herb of the field:

19 [f]In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken: [g]for dust thou art, and [h]unto dust shalt thou return.

20 And Adam called his wife's name †‖Eve, because she was the mother of all living.

21 Unto Adam also and to his wife did the LORD God make coats of skins, and clothed them.

22 ¶And the LORD God said, [i]Behold, the man is become as one of us, to know good and evil: and now, lest he put forth his hand, [k]and take also of the tree of life, and eat, and live for ever:

23 Therefore the LORD God sent him forth from the garden of Eden, [l]to till the ground from whence he was taken.

24 So he drove out the man: and he placed [m]at the east of the garden of Eden [n]Cherubims, and a flaming sword which turned every way, to keep the way of the tree of life.

CHAP. IV.

1 The birth, trade, and religion of Cain and Abel 8 The murder of Abel. 11 The curse of Cain.

AND Adam knew Eve his wife; and she conceived, and bare ‖Cain, and said, I have gotten a man from the LORD.

2 And she again bare his brother †Abel: and Abel was †a keeper of sheep, but Cain was [a]a tiller of the ground.

3 And †in process of time it came to pass, that Cain brought [b]of the fruit of the ground an offering unto the LORD.

4 And Abel, he also brought of [c]the firstlings of his †flock, and of the fat thereof. And the LORD had [d]respect unto Abel, and to his offering:

5 But unto Cain, and to his offering, he had not respect: and Cain was very wroth, [e]and his countenance fell.

6 And the LORD said unto Cain, Why art thou wroth? and why is thy countenance fallen?

7 If thou doest well, shalt thou not ‖be accepted? and if thou doest not well, sin lieth at the door: and ‖unto thee shall be his desire, and thou shalt rule over him.

8 And Cain talked with Abel his brother: and it came to pass when they were in the field, that Cain rose up against Abel his brother, and [f] slew him.

9 ¶ And the LORD said unto Cain, [g] Where is Abel thy brother? And he said, [h] I know not: Am I my brother's keeper?

10 And he said, What hast thou done? the voice of thy brother's †blood [i] crieth unto me from the ground.

11 And now art thou cursed from the earth, which hath opened her mouth to receive thy brother's blood from thy hand.

12 When thou tillest the ground, it shall not henceforth yield unto thee her strength: A fugitive and a vagabond shalt thou be in the earth.

13 And Cain said unto the LORD, ‖My punishment is greater than I can bear.

14 [k] Behold, thou hast driven me out this day from the face of the earth; and [l] from thy face shall I be hid; and I shall be a fugitive and a vagabond in the earth; and it shall come to pass, [m] that every one that findeth me shall slay me.

15 And the LORD said unto him, Therefore whosoever slayeth Cain, vengeance shall be taken on him [n] seven-fold. And the LORD [o] set a mark upon Cain, lest any finding him should kill him.

16 ¶ And Cain [p] went out from the presence of the LORD, and dwelt in the land of Nod, on the east of Eden.

17 And Cain knew his wife, and she conceived, and bare †Enoch: and he builded a city, [q] and called the name of the city after the name of his son, Enoch.

18 And unto Enoch was born Irad: and Irad begat Mehujael: and Mehujael begat Methusael: and Methusael begat †Lamech.

19 ¶ And Lamech took unto him two wives: the name of the one was Adah, and the name of the other Zillah.

20 And Adah bare Jabal: he was the father of such as dwell in tents, and of such as have cattle.

21 And his brother's name was Jubal: he was the [r] father of all such as handle the harp and organ.

22 And Zillah, she also bare Tubal-cain, an †instructor of every artificer in brass and iron: and the sister of Tubal-cain was Naamah.

23 And Lamech said unto his wives, Adah and Zillah, Hear my voice, ye wives of Lamech, hearken unto my speech: for ‖I have slain a man to my wounding, and a young man ‖to my hurt.

24 [s] If Cain shall be avenged seven-fold, truly Lamech seventy and seven-fold.

25 ¶ And Adam knew his wife again, and she bare a son, and [t] called his name † ‖Seth: For God, said she, hath appointed me another seed instead of Abel, whom Cain slew.

26 And to Seth, [u] to him also there was born a son; and he called his name †Enos: then began men ‖[w] to call upon the name of the LORD.

CHAP. V.

1 The genealogy, age, and death of the patriarchs from Adam unto Noah.
24 The godliness and translation of Enoch.

THIS is the [a] book of the generations of Adam: In the day that God created man, in [b] the likeness of God made he him:

2 [c] Male and female created he them; and blessed them, and called their name Adam, in the day when they were created.

3 And Adam lived an hundred and thirty years, and begat a son in his own likeness, after his image; and [d] called his name Seth:

4 [e] And the days of Adam after he had begotten Seth were eight hundred years: [f] and he begat sons and daughters:

5 And all the days that Adam lived were nine hundred and thirty years: [g] and he died.

6 And Seth lived an hundred and five years, and [h] begat Enos:

7 And Seth lived after he begat Enos eight hundred and seven years, and begat sons and daughters:

8 And all the days of Seth were nine hundred and twelve years: and he died.

9 ¶ And Enos lived ninety years, and begat †Cainan:

10 And Enos lived after he begat Cainan eight hundred and fifteen years, and begat sons and daughters:

11 And all the days of Enos were nine hundred and five years: and he died.

12 ¶ And Cainan lived seventy years, and begat †Mahalaleel:

13 And Cainan lived after he begat Mahalaleel eight hundred and forty years, and begat sons and daughters:

14 And all the days of Cainan were nine hundred and ten years: and he died.

15 ¶ And Mahalaleel lived sixty and five years, and begat †Jared:

16 And Mahalaleel lived after he begat Jared eight hundred and thirty years, and begat sons and daughters:

17 And all the days of Mahalaleel were eight hundred ninety and five years: and he died.

18 ¶ And Jared lived an hundred sixty and two years, and he begat [i] Enoch:

19 And Jared lived after he begat Enoch eight hundred years, and begat sons and daughters:

20 And all the days of Jared were nine hundred sixty and two years: and he died.

21 ¶And Enoch lived sixty and five years, and begat †Methuselah:

22 And Enoch [k]walked with God after he begat Methuselah three hundred years, and begat sons and daughters:

23 And all the days of Enoch were three hundred sixty and five years:

24 And [l]Enoch walked with God, and he was not: for God took him.

25 And Methuselah lived an hundred eighty and seven years, and begat †Lamech:

26 And Methuselah lived after he begat Lamech seven hundred eighty and two years, and begat sons and daughters:

27 And all the days of Methuselah were nine hundred sixty and nine years: and he died.

28 ¶And Lamech lived an hundred eighty and two years, and begat a son:

29 And he called his name †‖ Noah, saying, This same shall comfort us concerning our work and toil of our hands, because of the ground [m]which the LORD hath curse .

30 And Lamech lived after he begat Noah five hundred ninety and five years, and begat sons and daughters:

31 And all the days of Lamech were seven hundred seventy and seven years: and he died.

32 ¶And Noah was five hundred years old: and Noah begat [n]Shem, Ham, [o]and Japheth.

CHAP. VI.

1 The wickedness of the world, which provoked God's wrath, and caused the flood. 14 The order and form of the ark.

AND it came to pass, [a]when men began to multiply on the face of the earth, and daughters were born unto them,

2 That the sons of God saw the daughters of men that they were fair; and they [b]took them wives of all which they chose.

3 And the LORD said, [c]My Spirit shall not always strive with man, [d]for that he also is flesh: yet his days shall be an hundred and twenty years.

4 There were giants in the earth in those days; and also after that, when the sons of God came in unto the daughters of men, and they bare children to them: the same became mighty men, which were of old, men of renown.

5 ¶And God saw that the wickedness of man was great in the earth, and that ‖every [e]imagination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil †continually.

6 And [f]it repented the LORD that he had made man on the earth, and it [g]grieved him at his heart.

7 And the LORD said, I will destroy man whom I have created from the face of the earth; †both man and beast, and the creeping thing, and the fowls of the air; for it repenteth me that I have made them.

8 But Noah [h]found grace in the eyes of the LORD.

9 ¶These are the generations of Noah: [i]Noah was a just man, and ‖perfect in his generations, and Noah [k]walked with God.

10 And Noah begat three sons, [l]Shem, Ham, and Japheth.

11 The earth also was corrupt [m]before God; and the earth was [n]filled with violence.

12 And God [o]looked upon the earth, and behold, it was corrupt: for all flesh had corrupted his way upon the earth.

13 And God said unto Noah, [p]The end of all flesh is come before me; for the earth is filled with violence through them: [q]and behold, I will destroy them ‖with the earth.

14 ¶Make thee an ark of gopher-wood: †rooms shalt thou make in the ark, and shalt pitch it within and without with pitch.

15 And this is the fashion which thou shalt make it of: The length of the ark shall be three hundred cubits, the breadth of it fifty cubits, and the height of it thirty cubits.

16 A window shalt thou make to the ark, and in a cubit shalt thou finish it above; and the door of the ark shalt thou set in the side thereof: with lower, second, and third stories shalt thou make it.

17 [r]And behold, I, even I, do bring a flood of waters upon the earth, to destroy all flesh, wherein is the breath of life, from under heaven: and every thing that is in the earth shall die.

18 But with thee will I establish my covenant: and [s]thou shalt come into the ark, thou, and thy sons, and thy wife, and thy sons' wives with thee.

19 And of every living thing of all flesh, [t]two of every sort shalt thou bring into the ark, to keep them alive with thee: they shall be male and female.

20 Of fowls after their kind, and of cattle after their kind, of every creeping thing of the earth after his kind; two of every sort [u]shall come unto thee, to keep them alive.

21 And take thou unto thee of all food that is eaten, and thou shalt gather it to thee; and it shall be for food for thee, and for them.

22 [w]Thus did Noah; [x]according to all that God commanded him, so did he.

CHAP. VII.

1 Noah, with his family, and the living creatures, enter the ark. 17 The beginning and continuance of the flood.

AND the LORD said unto Noah, [a]Come thou and all thy house into the ark: for [b]thee have I seen righteous before me in this generation.

4 For yet seven days, and I will cause it to rain upon the earth [e] forty days and forty nights: and every living substance that I have made will I †destroy from off the face of the earth.

5 [f] And Noah did according unto all that the LORD commanded him.

6 And Noah was six hundred years old when the flood of waters was upon the earth.

7 ¶ [g] And Noah went in, and his sons, and his wife, and his sons' wives with him, into the ark, because of the waters of the flood.

8 Of clean beasts, and of beasts that are not clean, and of fowls, and of every thing that creepeth upon the earth,

9 There went in two and two unto Noah into the ark, the male and †the female, as God had commanded Noah.

10 And it came to pass ‖ after seven days, that the waters of the flood were upon the earth.

11 ¶ In the six hundredth year of Noah's life, in the second month, the seventeenth day of the month, the same day were all [h] the fountains of the great deep broken up, and ‖ [i] the windows of heaven were opened.

12 [k] And the rain was upon the earth forty days and forty nights.

13 In the self-same day [l] entered Noah, and Shem, and Ham, and Japheth, the sons of Noah, and Noah's wife, and the three wives of his sons with them, into the ark;

14 [m] They, and every beast after his kind, and all the cattle after their kind, and every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth after his kind, and every fowl after his kind, every bird of every † sort.

15 And they [n] went in unto Noah into the ark, two and two of all flesh, wherein is the breath of life.

16 And they that went in, went in male and female of all flesh, [o] as God had commanded him: and the LORD shut him in.

17 [p] And the flood was forty days upon the earth; and the waters increased, and bare up the ark, and it was lift up above the earth.

18 And the waters prevailed, and were increased greatly upon the earth; [q] and the ark went upon the face of the waters.

19 And the waters prevailed exceedingly upon the earth; [r] and all the high hills, that were under the whole heaven, were covered.

20 Fifteen cubits upward did the waters prevail; and the mountains were covered.

21 [s] And all flesh died that moved upon the earth, both of fowl, and of cattle, and of beast, and of every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth, and every man:

22 All in [t] whose nostrils was † the breath of life, of all that was in the dry land, died.

23 And every living substance was destroyed which was upon the face of the ground, both man, and cattle, and the creeping things, and the fowl of the heaven; and they were destroyed from the earth: and [u] Noah only remained alive, and they that were with him in the ark.

24 [w] And the waters prevailed upon the earth an hundred and fifty days.

CHAP. VIII.

1 The waters assuage. 4 The ark resteth on Ararat. 18 Noah goeth forth of the ark. 20 He buildeth an altar, and offereth sacrifice.

AND God [a] remembered Noah, and every living thing, and all the cattle that was with him in the ark: [b] and God made a wind to pass over the earth, and the waters assuaged;

2 [c] The fountains also of the deep, and the windows of heaven were stopped, and [d] the rain from heaven was restrained;

3 And the waters returned from off the earth † continually: and after the end [e] of the hundred and fifty days the waters were abated.

4 ¶ And the ark rested in the seventh month, on the seventeenth day of the month, upon the mountains of Ararat.

5 And the waters † decreased continually until the tenth month: in the tenth month, on the first day of the month, were the tops of the mountains seen.

6 ¶ And it came to pass at the end of forty days, that Noah opened [f] the window of the ark which he had made:

7 And he sent forth a raven, which went forth †to and fro, until the waters were dried up from off the earth.

8 Also he sent forth a dove from him, to see if the waters were abated from off the face of the ground;

9 But the dove found no rest for the sole of her foot, and she returned unto him into the ark, for the waters were on the face of the whole earth: then he put forth his hand, and took her, and † pulled her in unto him into the ark.

10 And he stayed yet other seven days; and again he sent forth the dove out of the ark;

11 And the dove came into him in the evening; and, lo, in her mouth was an olive-leaf pluckt off:

†Heb. in going forth and returning.

†Heb. caused her to come.

So Noah knew that the waters were abated from off the earth.

12 And he stayed yet other seven days; and sent forth the dove; which returned not again unto him any more.

13 ¶And it came to pass in the six hundredth and first year, in the first month, the first day of the month, the waters were dried up from off the earth: and Noah removed the covering of the ark, and looked, and, behold, the face of the ground was dry.

14 And in the second month, on the seven and twentieth day of the month, was the earth dried.

15 ¶And God spake unto Noah, saying,

16 Go forth of the ark, [s] thou, and thy wife, and thy sons, and thy sons' wives with thee.

17 Bring forth with thee [h] every living thing that is with thee, of all flesh, both of fowl, and of cattle, and of every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth; that they may breed abundantly in the earth, and [i] be fruitful, and multiply upon the earth.

18 And Noah went forth, and his sons, and his wife, and his sons' wives with him:

19 Every beast, every creeping thing, and every fowl, and whatsoever creepeth upon the earth, after their †kinds, went forth out of the ark.

20 ¶And Noah builded an altar unto the LORD, and took of [k] every clean beast, and of every clean fowl, and offered burnt-offerings on the altar.

21 And the LORD smelled [l] a †sweet savour; and the LORD said in his heart, I will not again [m] curse the ground any more for man's sake; ‖ for the [n] imagination of man's heart is evil from his youth; [o] neither will I again smite any more every thing living, as I have done.

22 [p] †While the earth remaineth, seed-time and harvest, and cold and heat, and summer and winter, and [q] day and night shall not cease.

CHAP. IX.

1 God blesseth Noah. 4 Blood and murder are forbidden. 8 God's covenant, 13 signified by the rainbow. 18 Noah replenisheth the world, 21 is drunken, and mocked of his son, 25 curseth Canaan, 29 and dieth.

AND God blessed Noah and his sons, and said unto them, [a] Be fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the earth.

2 [b] And the fear of you, and the dread of you, shall be upon every beast of the earth, and upon every fowl of the air, upon all that moveth upon the earth, and upon all the fishes of the sea; into your hand are they delivered.

3 [c] Every moving thing that liveth shall be meat for you; even as the [d] green herb have I given you all things.

4 [f] But flesh with the life thereof, which is the blood thereof, shall ye not eat.

5 And surely your blood of your lives will I require; [g] at the hand of every beast will I require it, and [h] at the hand of man; at the hand of every [i] man's brother will I require the life of man.

6 [k] Whoso sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed: [l] for in the image of God made he man.

7 And you, [m] be ye fruitful, and multiply; bring forth abundantly in the earth, and multiply therein.

8 ¶And God spake unto Noah, and to his sons with him, saying,

9 And I, [n] behold, I establish [o] my covenant with you, and with your seed after you;

10 [p] And with every living creature that is with you, of the fowl, of the cattle, and of every beast of the earth with you, from all that go out of the ark, to every beast of the earth.

11 And [q] I will establish my covenant with you; neither shall all flesh be cut off any more by the waters of a flood; neither shall there any more be a flood to destroy the earth.

12 And God said, [r] This is the token of the covenant which I make between me and you and every living creature that is with you, for perpetual generations.

13 I do set [s] my bow in the cloud, and it shall be for a token of a covenant between me and the earth.

14 And it shall come to pass, when I bring a cloud over the earth, that the bow shall be seen in the cloud:

15 And [u] I will remember my covenant, which is between me and you and every living creature of all flesh; and the waters shall no more become a flood to destroy all flesh.

16 And the bow shall be in the cloud; and I will look upon it, that I may remember [w] the everlasting covenant between God and every living creature of all flesh that is upon the earth.

17 And God said unto Noah, This is the token of the covenant, which I have established between me and all flesh that is upon the earth.

18 ¶And the sons of Noah, that went forth of the ark, were Shem, and Ham, and Japheth: [x] and Ham is the father of †Canaan.

19 [y] These are the three sons of Noah: [z] and of them was the whole earth overspread.

20 And Noah began to be [a] an husbandman, and he planted a vineyard:

21 And he drank of the wine, [b] and was drunken; and he was uncovered within his tent.

22 And Ham, the father of Canaan, saw the nakedness of his father, and told his two brethren without.

23 [c] And Shem and Japheth took a garment, and laid it upon both their shoulders, and went backward, and covered the nakedness of their father;

CHAP. X.

1 The generations of Noah. 8 Nimrod the first monarch.

NOW these are the generations of the sons of Noah; Shem, Ham, and Japheth: [a]and unto them were sons born after the flood.

2 [b]The sons of Japheth; Gomer, and Magog, and Madai, and Javan, and Tubal, and Meshech, and Tiras.

3 And the sons of Gomer; Ashkenaz, and Riphath, and Togarmah.

4 And the sons of Javan; Elishah, and Tarshish, Kittim, and ‖Dodanim.

5 By these were [c]the isles of the Gentiles divided in their lands; every one after his tongue, after their families, in their nations.

6 ¶[d]And the sons of Ham; Cush, and Mizraim, and Phut, and Canaan.

7 And the sons of Cush; Seba, and Havilah, and Sabtah, and Raamah, and Sabtecha: and the sons of Raamah; Sheba, and Dedan.

8 And Cush begat Nimrod: he began to be a mighty one in the earth.

9 He was a mighty [e]hunter [f]before the LORD: wherefore it is said, Even as Nimrod the mighty hunter before the LORD.

10 [g]And the beginning of his kingdom was †Babel, and Erech, and Accad, and Calneh, in the land of Shinar.

11 Out of that land ‖went forth Asshur, and builded Nineveh, and ‖the city Rehoboth, and Calah, 12 And Resen bĕtween Nineveh and Calah: the same is a great city.

13 And Mizraim begat Ludim, and Anamim, and Lehabim, and Naphtuhim, 14 And Pathrusim, and Casluhim, ([h]out of whom come Philistim,) and Caphtorim.

15 ¶And Canaan begat † Sidon his first-born, and Heth,

16 And the Jebusite, and the Amorite, and the Girgasite,

17 And the Hivite, and the Arkite, and the Sinite,

18 And the Arvadite, and the Zemarite, and the Hamathite: and afterward were the families of the Canaanites spread abroad.

19 [i]And the border of the Canaanites was from Sidon, as thou comest to Gerar, unto † Gaza; as thou goest unto Sodom and Gomorrah, and Admah, and Zeboim, even unto Lasha.

20 These are the sons of Ham, after their families, after their tongues, in their countries, and in their nations.

21 ¶Unto Shem also, the father of all the children of Eber, the brother of Japheth the elder, even to him were children born.

22 The [k]children of Shem; Elam, and Asshur, and †Arphaxad, and Lud, and Aram.

23 And the children of Aram; Uz, and Hul, and Gether, and Mash.

24 And Arphaxad begat †[l]Salah; and Salah begat Eber.

25 [m]And unto Eber were born two sons: the name of one was ‖Peleg, for in his days was the earth divided; and his brother's name was Joktan.

26 And Joktan begat Almodad, and Sheleph, and Hazarmaveth, and Jerah, 27 And Hadoram, and Uzal, and Diklah,

28 And Obal, and Abimael, and Sheba,

29 And Ophir, and Havilah, and Jobab: all these were the sons of Joktan.

30 And their dwelling was from Mesha, as thou goest unto Sephar a mount of the east.

31 These are the sons of Shem, after their families, after their tongues, in their lands, after their nations.

32 [n]These are the families of the sons of Noah, after their generations, in their nations: [o]and by these were the nations divided in the earth after the flood.

CHAP. XI.

1 One language in the world. 3 The building of Babel. 5 The confusion of tongues.

AND the whole earth was of one †language, and of one †speech.

2 And it came to pass, as they journeyed ‖from the east, that they found a plain in the land of Shinar; and they dwelt there.

3 And †they said one to another, Go to, let us make brick, and †burn them thoroughly. And they had brick for stone, and slime had they for mortar.

4 And they said, Go to, let us build us a city and a tower, [a]whose top may reach unto heaven; and let us make us a name, lest we be scattered abroad upon the face of the whole earth.

1 God calleth Abram, and blesseth him with the promise of Christ. 6 He journeyeth through Canaan. 10 He is driven by a famine into Egypt.

NOW the [a]LORD had said unto Abram, Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and from thy father's house, unto a land that I will shew thee:

2 [b]And I will make of thee a great nation, [c]and I will bless thee, and make thy name great; [d]and thou shalt be a blessing:

3 [e]And I will bless them that bless thee, and curse him that curseth thee: [f]and in thee shall all families of the earth be blessed.

4 So Abram departed, as the LORD had spoken unto him; and Lot went with him: and Abram was seventy and five years old when he departed out of Haran.

5 And Abram took Sarai his wife, and Lot his brother's son, and all their substance that they had gathered, and [g]the souls that they had gotten [h]in Haran; and they went forth to go into the land of Canaan; and into the land of Canaan they came.

6 ¶ And Abram [i]passed through the land unto the place of Sichem, [k]unto the plain of Moreh. [l]And the Canaanite was then in the land.

7 [m]And the LORD appeared unto Abram, and said, [n]Unto thy seed will I give this land: and there builded he an [o]altar unto the LORD, who appeared unto him.

8 And he removed from thence unto a mountain on the east of Beth-el, and pitched his tent, having Beth-el on the west, and Hai on the east: and there he builded an altar unto the LORD, and [p]called upon the name of the LORD.

9 And Abram journeyed, †[q]going on still toward the south.

10 ¶ And there was [r]a famine in the land: and [s]Abram went down into Egypt to sojourn there; for the famine was [t]grievous in the land.

13 [x] Say, I pray thee, thou art my sister: that it may be well with me for thy sake; and my soul shall live because of thee.

14 ¶And it came to pass, that, when Abram was come into Egypt, the Egyptians [y] beheld the woman that she was very fair.

15 The princes also of Pharaoh saw her, and commended her before Pharaoh: and the woman was [z] taken into Pharaoh's house.

16 And he [a] entreated Abram well for her sake: and he had sheep, and oxen, and he-asses, and men-servants, and maid-servants, and she-asses, and camels.

17 And the LORD [b] plagued Pharaoh and his house with great plagues because of Sarai Abram's wife.

18 And Pharaoh called Abram, and said, [c] What is this that thou hast done unto me? why didst thou not tell me that she was thy wife?

19 Why saidst thou, She is my sister? so I might have taken her to me to wife: now therefore behold thy wife, take her, and go thy way.

20 [d] And Pharaoh commanded his men concerning him: and they sent him away, and his wife, and all that he had.

CHAP. XIII.

1 Abram and Lot return out of Egypt. 14 God reneweth the promise to Abram. 18 He removeth to Hebron, and there buildeth an altar.

AND Abram went up out of Egypt, he, and his wife, and all that he had, and Lot with him, [a] into the south.

2 [b] And Abram was very rich in cattle, in silver, and in gold.

3 And he went on his journeys [c] from the south even to Beth-el, unto the place where his tent had been at the beginning, between Beth-el and Hai;

4 Unto the [d] place of the altar, which he had made there at the first: and there Abram [e] called on the name of the LORD.

5 ¶And Lot also, which went with Abram, had flocks, and herds, and tents.

6 And [f] the land was not able to bear them, that they might dwell together: for their substance was great, so that they could not dwell together.

7 And there was [g] a strife between the herdmen of Abram's cattle and the herdmen of Lot's cattle: [h] and the Canaanite and the Perizzite dwelled then in the land.

8 And Abram said unto Lot, [i] Let there be no strife, I pray thee, between me and thee, and between my herdmen and thy herdmen; for we be †brethren.

9 [k] Is not the whole land before thee? Separate thyself, I pray thee, from me: [l] if thou wilt take the left hand, then I will go to the right; or if thou depart to the right hand, then I will go to the left.

10 And Lot lifted up his eyes, and beheld all [m] the plain of Jordan, that it was well watered every where, before the LORD [n] destroyed Sodom and Gomorrah, [o] even as the garden of the LORD, like the land of Egypt, as thou comest unto [p] Zoar.

11 Then Lot chose him all the plain of Jordan; and Lot journeyed east: and they separated themselves the one from the other.

12 Abram dwelled in the land of Canaan, and Lot [q] dwelled in the cities of the plain, and [r] pitched his tent toward Sodom.

13 But the men of Sodom [s] were wicked; and [t] sinners before the LORD exceedingly.

14 ¶And the LORD said unto Abram, after that Lot [u] was separated from him, Lift up now thine eyes, and look from the place where thou art [w] northward, and southward, and eastward, and westward:

15 For all the land which thou seest [x] to thee will I give it, and [y] to thy seed for ever.

16 And [z] I will make thy seed as the dust of the earth: so that if a man can number the dust of the earth, then shall thy seed also be numbered.

17 Arise, walk through the land in the length of it and in the breadth of it; for I will give it unto thee.

18 Then Abram removed his tent, and came and [a] dwelt in the †plain of Mamre, [b] which is in Hebron, and built there an altar unto the LORD.

‖ Or, the plain of Kiriathaim.

6 [l]And the Horites in their mount Seir, unto ‖El-paran, which is by the wilderness.

7 And they returned, and came to En-mishpat, which is Kadesh, and smote all the country of the Amalekites, and also the Amorites, that dwelt [m]in Hazezon-tamar.

8 And there went out the king of Sodom, and the king of Gomorrah, and the king of Admah, and the king of Zeboiim, and the king of Bela, (the same is Zoar;) and they joined battle with them in the vale of Siddim;

9 With Chedorlaomer the king of Elam, and with Tidal king of nations, and Amraphel king of Shinar, and Arioch king of Ellasar; four kings with five.

10 And the vale of Siddim was full of [n]slime-pits; and the kings of Sodom and Gomorrah fled, and fell there; and they that remained fled [o]to the mountain.

11 And they took [p]all the goods of Sodom and Gomorrah, and all their victuals, and went their way.

12 And they took Lot, Abram's [q]brother's son, [r]who dwelt in Sodom, and his goods, and departed.

13 ¶And there came one that had escaped, and told Abram the Hebrew; for [s]he dwelt in the plain of Mamre the Amorite, brother of Eshcol, and brother of Aner: [t]and these were confederate with Abram.

14 And when Abram heard that [u]his brother was taken captive, he ‖armed his ‖trained servants, [w]born in his own house, three hundred and eighteen, and pursued them [x]unto Dan.

15 And he divided himself against them, he and his servants, by night, and [y]smote them, and pursued them unto Hobah, which is on the left hand of Damascus.

16 And he brought back [z]all the goods, and also brought again his brother Lot, and his goods, and the women also, and the people.

17 ¶And the king of Sodom [a]went out to meet him, [b](after his return from the slaughter of Chedorlaomer, and of the kings that were with him,) at the valley of Shaveh, which is the [c]king's dale.

18 And [d]Melchizedek king of Salem brought forth bread and wine: and he was [e]the priest of [f]the most high God.

19 And he blessed him, and said, Blessed be Abram of the most high God, [g]possessor of heaven and earth:

20 And [h]blessed be the most high God, which hath delivered thine enemies into thy hand. And he gave him tithes [i]of all.

21 And the king of Sodom said unto Abram, Give me the †persons, and take the goods to thyself.

22 And Abram said to the king of Sodom, I [k]have lifted up mine hand unto the LORD, the most high God, the possessor of heaven and earth,

23 That [m]I will not take from a thread even to a shoe-latchet, and that I will not take any thing that is thine, lest thou shouldest say, I have made Abram rich:

24 Save only that which the young men have eaten, and the portion of the men [n]which went with me, Aner, Eshcol, and Mamre; let them take their portion.

CHAP. XV.

1 God encourageth Abram, 4 promiseth him a son, and a multiplying of his seed. 6 Abram is justified by faith. 7 Canaan is promised, and confirmed by a vision.

AFTER these things the word of the LORD came unto Abram [a]in a vision, saying, [b]Fear not, Abram: I am thy [c]shield, and thy exceeding [d]great reward.

2 And Abram said, Lord GOD, what wilt thou give me, [e]seeing I go childless, and the steward of my house is this Eliezer of Damascus?

3 And Abram said, Behold, to me thou hast given no seed: and, lo, [f]one born in my house is mine heir.

4 And behold, the word of the LORD came unto him, saying, This shall not be thine heir; but he that [g]shall come forth out of thine own bowels shall be thine heir.

5 And he brought him forth abroad, and said, Look now toward heaven, and [h]tell the [i]stars, if thou be able to number them; and he said unto him, [k]So shall thy seed be.

6 And he [l]believed in the LORD; and he [m]counted it to him for righteousness.

7 And he said unto him, I am the LORD that [n]brought thee out of [o]Ur of the Chaldees, [p]to give thee this land to inherit it.

8 And he said, Lord GOD, [q]whereby shall I know that I shall inherit it?

9 And he said unto him, Take me an heifer of three years old, and a she-goat of three years old, and a ram of three years old, and a turtle-dove, and a young pigeon.

10 And he took unto him all these, and [r]divided them in the midst, and laid each piece one against another: but [s]the birds divided he not.

11 And when the fowls came down upon the carcasses, Abram drove them away.

12 And when the sun was going down, [t]a deep sleep fell upon Abram; and, lo, a horror of great darkness fell upon him.

13 And he said unto Abram, Know of a surety [u]that thy seed shall be a stranger in a land that is not theirs, and shall serve them; and [w]they shall afflict them four hundred years;

14 And also that nation, whom they shall serve, [x]will I judge: and afterward [y]shall they come out with great substance.

CHAP. XVI.

1 Sarai being barren giveth Hagar to Abram. 15 Ishmael is born.

NOW Sarai, Abram's wife, [a]bare him no children: and she had an handmaid, [b]an Egyptian, whose name was [c]Hagar.

2 [d]And Sarai said unto Abram, Behold now, the LORD [e]hath restrained me from bearing: I pray [f]thee, go in unto my maid; it may be that I may †obtain children by her. And Abram [g]hearkened to the voice of Sarai.

3 And Sarai, Abram's wife, took Hagar her maid the Egyptian, after Abram [h]had dwelt ten years in the land of Canaan, and gave her to her husband Abram to be his wife.

4 ¶And he went in unto Hagar, and she conceived: and when she saw that she had conceived, her mistress was [i]despised in her eyes.

5 And Sarai said unto Abram, My wrong be upon thee: I have given my maid into thy bosom; and when she saw that she had conceived, I was despised in her eyes: [k]the LORD judge between me and thee.

6 [l]But Abram said unto Sarai, [m]Behold, thy maid is in thy hand; do to her †as it pleaseth thee. And when Sarai †dealt hardly with her, [n]she fled from her face.

7 ¶And the Angel of the LORD found her by a fountain of water in the wilderness, [o]by the fountain in the way to [p]Shur.

8 And he said, Hagar, Sarai's maid, whence camest thou? and whither wilt thou go? And she said, I flee from the face of my mistress Sarai.

9 And the angel of the LORD said unto her, Return to thy mistress, and [q]submit thyself under her hands.

10 And the angel of the LORD said unto her, [r]I will multiply thy seed exceedingly, that it shall not be numbered for multitude.

11 And the Angel of the LORD said unto her, Behold, thou art with child, and shalt bear a son, [s]and shalt call his name ‖Ishmael; because the LORD hath heard thy affliction.

12 [t]And he will be a wild man; his hand will be against every man, and every man's hand against him; [u]and he shall dwell in the presence of all his brethren.

13 And she called the name of the LORD that spake unto her, Thou God seest me: for she said, Have I also here looked after him [x]that seeth me?

14 Wherefore the well was called [y]‖Beer-lahai-roi; behold, it is [z]between Kadesh and Bered.

15 ¶And [a]Hagar bare Abram a son: and Abram called his son's name, which Hagar bare, [b]Ishmael.

16 And Abram was fourscore and six years old, when Hagar bare Ishmael to Abram.

1 God reneweth the covenant. 10 Circumcision is instituted. 16 Isaac is promised. 23 Abraham and Ishmael are circumcised.

AND when Abram was ninety years old and nine, the LORD [a]appeared †to Abram, and said unto him, [b]I am the Almighty God; [c]walk before me, and be thou ‖[d]perfect.

2 And I will make my covenant between me and thee, and [e]will multiply thee exceedingly.

3 And Abram [f]fell on his face: and God talked with him, saying,

4 As for me, behold, my covenant is with thee, and thou shalt be [g]a father of †many nations.

5 Neither shall thy name any more be called Abram; but [h]thy name shall be ‖Abraham: [i]for a father of many nations have I made thee.

6 And I will make thee exceeding fruitful, and I will make [k]nations of thee, and [l]kings shall come out of thee.

7 And I will [m]establish my covenant between me and thee, and thy seed after thee, in their generations, for an everlasting covenant; [n]to be a God unto thee, and to [o]thy seed after thee.

8 And [p]I will give unto thee, and to thy seed after thee, the land †[q]wherein thou art a stranger, all the land of Canaan, for an everlasting possession; and [r]I will be their God.

9 ¶And God said unto Abraham, Thou shalt keep my covenant therefore, thou, and thy seed after thee in their generations.

12 And †he that is eight days old [u] shall be circumcised among you, every man-child in your generations, he that is born in the house, or bought with money of any stranger, which is not of thy seed.

13 He that is born in thy house, and he that is bought with thy money, must needs be circumcised: and my covenant shall be in your flesh for an everlasting covenant.

14 And the uncircumcised man-child, whose flesh of his foreskin is not circumcised, that soul [w] shall be cut off from his people; he hath broken my covenant.

15 ¶And God said unto Abraham, As for Sarai thy wife, thou shalt not call her name Sarai, but ‖Sarah shall her name be.

16 And I will bless her, [x] and give thee a son also of her: yea, I will bless her, and †she shall be a mother [y] of nations; kings of people shall be of her.

17 Then Abraham fell upon his face, [z] and laughed, and said in his heart, Shall a child be born unto him that is an hundred years old? and shall Sarah, that is ninety years old, bear?

18 And Abraham said unto God, O that Ishmael might live before thee!

19 And God said, [a] Sarah thy wife shall bear thee a son indeed; and thou shalt call his name Isaac: and I will establish my covenant with him for an everlasting covenant, and with his seed after him.

20 And as for Ishmael, I have heard thee: Behold, I have blessed him, and will make him fruitful, and [b] will multiply him exceedingly; [c] twelve princes shall he beget, [d] and I will make him a great nation.

21 But my covenant will I establish with Isaac, [e] which Sarah shall bear unto thee at this set time in the next year.

22 And he left off talking with him, and God went up from Abraham.

23 ¶And Abraham took Ishmael his son, and all that were born in his house, and all that were bought with his money, every male among the men of Abraham's house; and circumcised the flesh of their foreskin, in the self-same day, as God had said unto him.

24 And Abraham was ninety years old and nine, when he was circumcised in the flesh of his foreskin.

25 And Ishmael his son was thirteen years old, when he was circumcised in the flesh of his foreskin.

27 And [f] all the men of his house, born in the house, and bought with money of the stranger, were circumcised with him.

CHAP. XVIII.

1 Abraham entertaineth three angels. 17 The destruction of Sodom is revealed to Abraham.

AND the LORD appeared unto him in the [a] plains of Mamre: and he sat in the tent-door in the heat of the day;

2 [b] And he lifted up his eyes and looked, and, lo, three men stood by him: [c] and when he saw them, he ran to meet them from the tent door, and bowed himself toward the ground,

3 And said, My Lord, if now I have found favour in thy sight, pass not away, I pray thee, from thy servant:

4 Let [d] a little water, I pray you, be fetched, and wash your feet, and rest yourselves under the tree:

5 And [e] I will fetch a morsel of bread, and †[f] comfort ye your hearts; after that ye shall pass on: [g] for therefore †are ye come to your servant. And they said, So do, as thou hast said.

6 And Abraham hastened into the tent unto Sarah, and said, †Make ready quickly three measures of fine meal, knead it, and make cakes upon the hearth.

7 And Abraham ran unto the herd, and fetched a calf tender and good, and gave it unto a young man; and he hasted to dress it.

8 And [h] he took butter, and milk, and the calf which he had dressed, and set it before them; and he stood by them under the tree, and they did eat.

9 ¶And they said unto him, Where is Sarah thy wife? And he said, Behold, [i] in the tent.

10 And he said, I [k] will certainly return unto thee [l] according to the time of life; and, lo, [m] Sarah thy wife shall have a son. And Sarah heard it in the tent-door, which was behind him.

11 Now [n] Abraham and Sarah were old and well stricken in age; and it ceased to be with Sarah [o] after the manner of women.

12 Therefore Sarah [p] laughed within herself, saying, [q] After I am waxed old shall I have pleasure, my [r] lord being old also?

13 And the LORD said unto Abraham, Wherefore did Sarah laugh, saying, Shall I of a surety bear a child, which am old?

14 [s] Is any thing too hard for the LORD? [t] At the time appointed I will return unto thee, according to the time of life, and Sarah shall have a son.

15 Then Sarah denied, saying, I laughed not, for she was afraid. And he said, Nay; but thou didst laugh.

16 ¶And the men rose up from thence, and looked toward Sodom: and Abraham went with them [u] to bring them on the way.

17 And the LORD said, [w] Shall I hide from Abraham that thing which I do;

18 Seeing that Abraham shall surely become a great and mighty nation, and all the nations of the earth shall be [x] blessed in him?

19 For I know him, [y] that he will command his children and his household after him, and they shall keep the way of the LORD, to do justice and judgment; that the LORD may bring upon Abraham that which he hath spoken of him.

20 And the LORD said, Because [z] the cry of Sodom and Gomorrah is great, and because their sin is very grievous;

21 [a] I will go down now, and see whether they have done altogether according to the cry of it, which is come unto me; and if not, [b] I will know.

22 And the men turned their faces from thence, [c] and went toward Sodom: but Abraham [d] stood yet before the LORD.

23 ¶ And Abraham [e] drew near, and said, [f] Wilt thou also destroy the righteous with the wicked?

24 [g] Peradventure there be fifty righteous within the city: wilt thou also destroy and not spare the place for the fifty righteous that are therein?

25 That be far from thee to do after this manner, to slay the righteous with the wicked: and [h] that the righteous should be as the wicked, that be far from thee: [i] Shall not the Judge of all the earth do right?

26 And the LORD said, [k] If I find in Sodom fifty righteous within the city, then I will spare all the place for their sakes.

27 And Abraham answered and said, [l] Behold now, I have taken upon me to speak unto the LORD, which am [m] but dust and ashes:

28 Peradventure there shall lack five of the fifty righteous: wilt thou destroy all the city for lack of five? And he said, If I find there forty and five, I will not destroy it.

29 And he spake unto him yet again, and said, Peradventure there shall be forty found there. And he said, I will not do it for forty's sake.

30 And he said unto him, Oh, let not the LORD be angry, and I will speak: Peradventure there shall thirty be found there. And he said, I will not do it if I find thirty there.

31 And he said, Behold now, I have taken upon me to speak unto the LORD: Peradventure there shall be twenty found there. And he said, I will not destroy it for twenty's sake.

32 And he said, [n] Oh, let not the LORD be angry, and I will speak yet but this once: Peradventure ten shall be found there. [o] And he said, I will not destroy it for ten's sake.

33 And the LORD went his way, as soon as he had left communing with Abraham: and Abraham returned unto his place.

CHAP. XIX.

1 Lot entertaineth two angels. 4 The vicious Sodomites are stricken with blindness. 24 Sodom and Gomorrah are destroyed. 26 Lot's wife is made a pillar of salt. 31 The incestuous origin of Moab and Ammon.

AND there [a] came two angels to Sodom at even; and Lot sat in the gate of Sodom: and [b] Lot, seeing them, rose up to meet them; and he bowed himself with his face toward the ground;

2 And he said, Behold now, my lords, [c] turn in, I pray you, into your servant's house, and tarry all night, and [d] wash your feet, and ye shall rise up early, and go on your ways. And they said, [e] Nay; but we will abide in the street all night.

3 And he pressed upon them greatly; and they turned in unto him, and entered into his house; [f] and he made them a feast, and did bake unleavened bread, and they did eat.

4 ¶ But before they lay down, the men of the city, even the men of Sodom, compassed the house round, both old and young, all the people from every quarter:

5 [g] And they called unto Lot, and said unto him, Where are the men which came in to thee this night? [h] bring them out unto us, that we [i] may know them.

6 And [k] Lot went out at the door unto them, and shut the door after him,

7 And said, I pray you, brethren, do not so wickedly.

8 [l] Behold now, I have two daughters which have not known man; let me, I pray you, bring them out unto you, and do ye to them as is good in your eyes: only unto these men do nothing; [m] for therefore came they under the shadow of my roof.

9 And they said, Stand back. And they said again, This one fellow [n] came in to sojourn, [o] and he will needs be a judge: now will we deal worse with thee, than with them. And they pressed sore upon the man, even Lot, and came near to break the door.

10 But the men put forth their hand, and pulled Lot into the house to them, and shut to the door.

11 And they smote the men [p] that were at the door of the house with blindness, both small and great: so that they wearied themselves to find the door.

12 ¶ And the men said unto Lot, Hast thou here any besides? son-in-law, and thy sons, and thy daughters, and whatsoever thou hast in the city, [q] bring them out of this place:

13 For we will destroy this place, because the [r] cry of them is waxen great before the face of the LORD; and [s] the LORD hath sent us to destroy it.

14 And Lot went out, and spake unto his sons-in-law, [t] which married his daughters, and said, [u] Up, get you out of this place; for the LORD will destroy this city. [x] But he seemed as one that mocked unto his sons-in-law.

15 ¶ And when the morning arose, then the angels hastened Lot, saying, [y] Arise, take thy wife, and thy two daughters, which † are here; lest thou be consumed in the ‖ iniquity of the city.

16 And while he lingered, the men laid hold upon his hand, and upon the hand of his wife, and upon the hand of his two daughters; [a] the LORD being merciful unto him: [b] and they brought him forth, and set him without the city.

17 ¶ And it came to pass, when they had brought them forth abroad, that he said, [c] Escape for thy life; [d] look not behind thee, neither stay thou in all the plain; escape to the mountain, lest thou be consumed.

18 And Lot said unto them, Oh, [e] not so, my Lord!

19 Behold now, thy servant hath found grace in thy sight, and thou hast magnified thy mercy, which thou hast shewed unto me in saving my life; and I cannot escape to the mountain, lest some evil take me, and I die:

20 Behold now, this city is near to flee unto, and it is a little one: Oh, let me escape thither! (is it not a little one?) and my soul shall live.

21 And he said unto him, See, [f] I have accepted † thee concerning this thing also, that I will not overthrow this city, for the which thou hast spoken.

22 Haste thee, escape thither; for [g] I cannot do any thing till thou be come thither. Therefore [h] the name of the city was called ‖ Zoar.

23 ¶ The sun was † risen upon the earth when Lot entered into Zoar.

24 Then [i] the LORD rained upon Sodom and upon Gomorrah brimstone and fire from the LORD out of heaven;

25 And he overthrew those cities, and all the plain, and all the inhabitants of the cities, and [k] that which grew upon the ground.

26 ¶ But his wife looked back from behind him, and she became [l] a pillar of salt.

27 ¶ And Abraham gat up early in the morning to the place where [m] he stood before the LORD:

28 And he looked toward Sodom and Gomorrah, and toward all the land of the plain, and beheld, and, lo, [n] the smoke of the country went up as the smoke of a furnace.

29 ¶ And it came to pass, when God destroyed the cities of the plain, that God [o] remembered Abraham, and sent Lot out of the midst of the overthrow, when he overthrew the cities in the which Lot dwelt.

30 ¶ And Lot went up out of Zoar, and [p] dwelt in the mountain, and his two daughters with him; for he feared to dwell in Zoar: and he dwelt in a cave, he and his two daughters.

31 And the first-born said unto the younger, Our father is old, and there is not a man in the earth [q] to come in unto us after the manner of all the earth:

32 Come, let us make our father drink wine, and we will lie with him, that we [r] may preserve seed of our father.

33 And they made their father drink wine that night: and the first-born went in, and lay with her father; and he perceived not when she lay down, nor when she arose.

34 And it came to pass on the morrow, that the first-born said unto the younger, Behold, I lay yesternight with my father: let us make him drink wine this night also; and go thou in, and lie with him, that we may preserve seed of our father.

35 And they made their father drink wine that night also: and the younger arose, and lay with him; and he perceived not when she lay down, nor when she arose.

36 Thus were both the daughters of Lot with child by their father.

37 And the first-born bare a son, and called his name Moab: [s] the same is the father of the Moabites unto this day.

38 And the younger, she also bare a son, and called his name Ben-ammi: [t] the same is the father of the children of Ammon unto this day.

CHAP. XX.

1 Abraham sojourneth at Gerar. 2 He denieth his wife, and loseth her.

AND Abraham journeyed from [a] thence toward the south country, and dwelled between [b] Kadesh and Shur, and [c] sojourned in Gerar.

2 And Abraham said of Sarah his wife, [d] She is my sister: and Abimelech king of Gerar sent, and [e] took Sarah.

3 But [f] God came to Abimelech [g] in a dream by night, and said to him, [h] Behold, thou art but a dead man, for the woman which thou hast taken; for she is † a man's wife.

4 But Abimelech had not come near her: and he said, LORD, [i] wilt thou slay also a righteous nation?

5 Said he not unto me, She is my sister? and she, even she herself said, He is my brother: [k] in the ‖ integrity of my heart and innocency of my hands have I done this.

6 And God said unto him in a dream, Yea, I know that thou didst this in the integrity of thy heart; for [l]I also withheld thee from sinning [m]against me: therefore suffered I thee not to touch her.

7 Now therefore restore the man his wife; [n]for he is a prophet, and he shall pray for thee, and thou shalt live: and if thou restore her not, [o]know thou that thou shalt surely die, thou, [p]and all that are thine.

8 Therefore Abimelech rose early in the morning, and called all his servants, and told all these things in their ears: and the men were sore afraid.

9 Then Abimelech called Abraham, and said unto him, What hast thou done unto us? and what have I offended thee, [q]that thou hast brought on me and on my kingdom a great sin? thou hast done deeds unto me [r]that ought not to be done.

10 And Abimelech said unto Abraham, What sawest thou, that thou hast done this thing?

11 And Abraham said, Because I thought, Surely [s]the fear of God is not in this place; and [t]they will slay me for my wife's sake.

12 And yet indeed [u]she is my sister; she is the daughter of my father, but not the daughter of my mother; and she became my wife.

13 And it came to pass, when [x]God caused me to wander from my father's house, that I said unto her, This is thy kindness which thou shalt shew unto me; at every place whither we shall come, [y]say of me, He is my brother.

14 And Abimelech [z]took sheep, and oxen, and men-servants, and women-servants, and gave them unto Abraham, and restored him Sarah his wife.

15 And Abimelech said, Behold, [a]my land is before thee: dwell † where it pleaseth thee.

16 And unto Sarah he said, Behold, I have given [b]thy brother a thousand pieces of silver: [c]behold, he is to thee [d]a covering of the eyes, unto all that are with thee, and with all other: thus she was reproved.

17 ¶ So Abraham [e]prayed unto God: and God healed Abimelech, and his wife, and his maid-servants; and they bare children.

18 For the LORD [f]had fast closed up all the wombs of the house of Abimelech, because of Sarah, Abraham's wife.

CHAP. XXI.

1 Isaac is born. 4 He is circumcised. 9 Hagar and Ishmael are cast forth.

AND the LORD [a]visited Sarah as he had said, and the LORD did unto Sarah [b]as he had spoken.

2 For Sarah [c]conceived, and bare Abraham a son in his old age, [d]at the set time of which God had spoken to him.

3 And Abraham called the name of his son that was born unto him, whom Sarah bare to him, [e]Isaac.

4 And Abraham [f]circumcised his son Isaac, being eight days old, [g]as God had commanded him.

5 And [h]Abraham was an hundred years old, when his son Isaac was born unto him.

6 ¶ And Sarah said, [i]God hath made me to laugh, so that all that hear [k]will laugh with me.

7 And she said, Who would have said unto Abraham, that Sarah should have given children suck? [l]for I have born him a son in his old age.

8 And the child grew, and was weaned: and Abraham made a great feast the same day that Isaac was weaned.

9 ¶ And Sarah saw the son of Hagar [m]the Egyptian, [n]which she had born unto Abraham, [o]mocking.

10 Wherefore she said unto Abraham, [p]Cast out this bond-woman and her son: for the son of this bond-woman shall not be heir with my son, even with Isaac.

11 And the thing was very grievous in Abraham's sight [q]because of his son.

12 ¶ And God said unto Abraham, Let it not be grievous in thy sight because of the lad, and because of thy bond-woman; in all that Sarah hath said unto thee, hearken unto her voice; for [r]in Isaac shall thy seed be called.

13 And also of the son of the bond-woman will I make [s]a nation, because he is thy seed.

14 And Abraham rose up early in the morning, and took bread, and a bottle of water, and gave it unto Hagar, putting it on her shoulder, and the child, and [t]sent her away: and she departed, and wandered in the wilderness of Beer-sheba.

15 And the water was spent in the bottle, and she cast the child under one of the shrubs.

16 And she went, and sat her down over against him, a good way off, as it were a bow-shot: for she said, Let me not see the death of the child. And she sat over against him, and lift up her voice, and wept.

17 And [u]God heard the voice of the lad; and the angel of God called to Hagar out of heaven, and said unto her, What aileth thee, Hagar? Fear not; for God hath heard the voice of the lad where he is.

18 Arise, lift up the lad, and hold him in thine hand; for [w]I will make him a great nation.

19 And [x]God opened her eyes, and she saw a well of water; and she went, and filled the bottle with water, and gave the lad drink.

20 And God [y]was with the lad; and he grew, and dwelt in the wilderness, [z]and became an archer.

21 And he dwelt in the wilderness of Paran: and his mother [a]took him a wife out of the land of Egypt.

22 ¶And it came to pass at that time, that [b]Abimelech and Phichol the chief captain of his host spake unto Abraham, saying, [c]God is with thee in all that thou doest:

23 Now therefore [d]swear unto me here by God †that thou wilt not deal falsely with me, nor with my son, nor with my son's son: but according to the kindness that I have done unto thee, thou shalt do unto me, and to the land wherein thou hast sojourned.

24 And Abraham said, I will swear.

25 And Abraham reproved Abimelech because of a well of water, which Abimelech's servants [e]had violently taken away.

26 And Abimelech said, I wot not who hath done this thing: neither didst thou tell me, neither yet heard I of it, but to-day.

27 And Abraham took sheep and oxen, and gave them unto Abimelech; and both of them [f]made a covenant.

28 And Abraham set seven ewe-lambs of the flock by themselves.

29 And Abimelech said unto Abraham, [g]What mean these seven ewe-lambs, which thou hast set by themselves?

30 And he said, For these seven ewe-lambs shalt thou take of my hand, that [h]they may be a witness unto me, that I have digged this well.

31 Wherefore he [i]called that place ‖Beer-sheba; because there they sware both of them.

32 Thus they made a covenant at Beer-sheba: then Abimelech rose up, and Phichol the chief captain of his host, and they returned into the land of the Philistines.

33 ¶And Abraham planted a ‖grove in Beer-sheba, and [k]called there on the name of the LORD, [l]the everlasting God.

34 And Abraham sojourned in the Philistines' land many days.

CHAP. XXII.

1 Abraham is tempted to offer Isaac. 3 He giveth proof of his faith and obedience.

AND it came to pass after these things, that [a]God did tempt Abraham, and said unto him, Abraham: and he said, †Behold, here I am.

2 And he said, Take now thy son, [b]thine only son Isaac, whom thou lovest, and get thee [c]into the land of Moriah; and offer him there for a burnt-offering upon one of the mountains which I will tell thee of.

3 ¶And Abraham rose up early in the morning, and saddled his ass, and took two of his young men with him, and Isaac his son, and clave the wood for the burnt-offering, and rose up, and went unto the place of which God had told him.

4 Then on the third day Abraham lifted up his eyes, and saw the place afar off.

5 And Abraham said unto his young men, Abide ye here with the ass; and I and the lad will go yonder and worship, and come again to you.

6 And Abraham took the wood of the burnt-offering, and [d]laid it upon Isaac his son; and he took the fire in his hand, and a knife; and they went both of them together.

7 And Isaac spake unto Abraham his father, and said, My father: and he said, †Here am I, my son. And he said, Behold the fire and the wood: but where is the ‖lamb for a burnt-offering?

8 And Abraham said, My son, God will provide himself a lamb for a burnt offering: so they went both of them together.

9 And they came to the place which God had told him of; and Abraham built an altar there, and laid the wood in order, and bound Isaac his son, and [e]laid him on the altar upon the wood.

10 And Abraham stretched forth his hand, and took the knife to slay his son.

11 And the angel of the LORD called unto him out of heaven, and said, Abraham, Abraham: and he said, Here am I.

12 And he said, [f]Lay not thine hand upon the lad, neither do thou any thing unto him: for [g]now I know that thou fearest God, seeing thou hast not withheld thy son, thine only son, from me.

13 And Abraham lifted up his eyes, and looked, and behold, behind him a ram caught in a thicket by his horns: and Abraham went and took the ram, and offered him up for a burnt-offering in the stead of his son.

14 And Abraham called the name of that place ‖Jehovah-jireh: as it is said to this day, In the mount of the LORD it shall be seen.

15 ¶And the angel of the LORD called unto Abraham out of heaven the second time,

16 And said, [h]By myself have I sworn, saith the LORD, for because thou hast done this thing, and hast not withheld thy son, thine only son:

17 That in blessing I will bless thee, and in multiplying I will multiply thy seed [i]as the stars of the heaven, [k]and as the sand which is upon the sea-†shore; and [l]thy seed shall possess [m]the gate of his enemies;

18 [n]And in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed; [o]because thou hast obeyed my voice.

19 So Abraham returned unto his young men, and they rose up and went together to [p]Beer-sheba; and Abraham dwelt at Beer-sheba.

22 And Chesed, and Hazo, and Pildash, and Jidlaph, and Bethuel.

CHAP. XXIII.

1 The age and death of Sarah. 3 The purchase of Machpelah.

AND Sarah was an hundred and seven and twenty years old: these were the years of the life of Sarah.

2 And Sarah died in [a]Kirjath-arba; the same is [b]Hebron in the land of Canaan: and Abraham came to mourn for Sarah, and to weep for her.

3 ¶And Abraham stood up from before his dead, and spake unto the sons of Heth, saying,

4 [c]I am a stranger and a sojourner with you: [d]give me a possession of a burying-place with you, that I may bury my dead out of my sight.

5 And the children of Heth answered Abraham, saying unto him,

6 Hear us, my lord: thou art †[e]a mighty prince among us: in the choice of our sepulchres bury thy dead; none of us shall withhold from thee his sepulchre, but that thou mayest bury thy dead.

7 And Abraham stood up, and bowed himself to the people of the land, even to the children of Heth.

8 And he communed with them, saying, If it be your mind that I should bury my dead out of my sight; hear me, and entreat for me to Ephron the son of Zohar,

9 That he may give me the cave of Machpelah, which he hath, which is in the end of his field; for †as much money as it is worth he shall give it me for a possession of a burying-place amongst you.

10 And Ephron dwelt among the children of Heth. And Ephron the Hittite answered Abraham in the †audience of the children of Heth, even of all that [f]went in at the gate of his city, saying,

11 [g]Nay, my lord, hear me: the field give I thee, and the cave that is therein, I give it thee; in the presence of the sons of my people give I it thee: bury thy dead.

12 And Abraham bowed down himself before the people of the land.

13 And he spake unto Ephron in the audience of the people of the land, saying, But if thou wilt give it, I pray thee, hear me: I will give thee money for the field; take it of me, and I will bury my dead there.

14 And Ephron answered Abraham, saying unto him,

15 My lord, hearken unto me: the land is worth four hundred [h]shekels of silver; what is that betwixt me and thee? bury therefore thy dead.

16 And Abraham hearkened unto Ephron; and Abraham [i]weighed to Ephron the silver which he had named in the audience of the sons of Heth, four hundred shekels of silver, current money with the merchant.

17 ¶And [k]the field of Ephron, which was in Machpelah, which was before Mamre, the field, and the cave which was therein, and all the trees that were in the field, that were in all the borders round about, were made sure

18 Unto Abraham for a possession in the presence of the children of Heth, before all that went in at the gate of his city.

19 And after this, Abraham buried Sarah his wife in the cave of the field of Machpelah before Mamre: the same is Hebron in the land of Canaan.

20 And the field, and the cave that is therein, [l]were made sure unto Abraham for a possession of a burying-place by the sons of Heth.

AND Abraham [a]was old, and †well stricken in age: and the LORD [b]had blessed Abraham in all things.

2 And Abraham said [c]unto his eldest servant of his house, that [d]ruled over all that he had, [e]Put, I pray thee, thy hand under my thigh:

3 And I will make thee [f]swear by the LORD, the God of heaven, and the God of the earth, that [g]thou shalt not take a wife unto my son of the daughters of the Canaanites, among whom I dwell:

4 [h]But thou shalt go [i]unto my country, and to my kindred, and take a wife unto my son Isaac.

5 And the servant said unto him, Peradventure the woman will not be willing to follow me unto this land: must I needs bring thy son again unto the land from whence thou camest?

9 And the servant put his hand under the thigh of Abraham his master, and sware to him concerning that matter.

10 ¶And the servant took ten camels, of the camels of his master, and departed; [o]‖ for all the goods of his master were in his hand: and he arose, and went to Mesopotamia, unto [p]the city of Nahor.

11 And he made his camels to kneel down without the city by a well of water at the time of the evening, even the time †[q]that women go out to draw water:

12 And he said, [r]O LORD God of my master Abraham, 'I pray thee, [s]send me good speed this day, and shew kindness unto my master Abraham.

13 Behold, 'I stand here by the well of water; and [u]the daughters of the men of the city come out to draw water:

15 ¶And it came to pass, before he had done speaking, that, behold, Rebekah came out, who was born to Bethuel, son of [x]Milcah, the wife of Nahor, Abraham's brother, with her pitcher upon her shoulder.

16 And the damsel [y]was † very fair to look upon, a virgin, neither had any man known her: and she went down to the well, and filled her pitcher, and came up.

17 And the servant ran to meet her, and said, Let me, I pray thee, drink a little water of thy pitcher.

18 [z]And she said, Drink, my lord: and she hasted, and let down her pitcher upon her hand, and gave him drink.

19 And when she had done giving him drink, she said, I will draw water for thy camels also, until they have done drinking.

20 And she hasted, and emptied her pitcher into the trough, and ran again unto the well to draw water, and drew for all his camels.

21 And the man, wondering at her, held his peace, to wit whether [a]the LORD had made his journey prosperous or not.

22 And it came to pass, as the camels had done drinking, that the man took a golden [b]‖ear-ring of half a shekel weight, and two bracelets for her hands of ten shekels weight of gold;

23 And said, Whose daughter art thou? tell me, I pray thee: is there room in thy father's house for us to lodge in?

24 And she said unto him, [c]I am the daughter of Bethuel the son of Milcah, which she bare unto Nahor.

25 She said, moreover, unto him, We have both straw and provender enough, and room to lodge in.

26 And the man [d]bowed down his head, and worshipped the LORD.

27 And he said, [e]Blessed be the LORD God of my master Abraham, who hath not left destitute my master of [f]his mercy and his truth: I being in the way, the LORD [g]led me to the house of my master's brethren.

28 And the damsel ran, and told them of her mother's house these things.

29 ¶And Rebekah had a brother, and his name was [h]Laban: and Laban ran out unto the man, unto the well.

30 And it came to pass, when he saw the ear-ring and bracelets upon his sister's hands, and when he heard the words of Rebekah his sister, saying, Thus spake the man unto me; that he came unto the man; and, behold, he stood by the camels at the well.

31 And he said, Come in, [i]thou blessed of the LORD; wherefore standest thou without? for I have prepared the house, and room for the camels.

32 ¶And the man came into the house: and he ungirded his camels, and [k]gave straw and provender for the camels, and water to wash his feet, and the men's feet that were with him.

33 And there was set meat before him to eat: but he said, 'I will not eat, until I have told mine errand. And he said, Speak on.

34 And he said, I am Abraham's servant.

35 And the LORD [m]hath blessed my master greatly; and he is become great: and he hath given him flocks, and herds, and silver, and gold, and menservants, and maid-servants, and camels, and asses.

36 And Sarah, my master's wife, [n]bare a son to my master when she was old: and [o]unto him hath he given all that he hath.

37 And my master [p]made me swear, saying, Thou shalt not take a wife to my son of the daughters of the Canaanites, in whose land I dwell:

38 [q]But thou shalt go unto my father's house, and to my kindred, and take a wife unto my son.

40 [s]And he said unto me, The LORD, [t]before whom I walk, will send his angel with thee, and prosper thy way; and thou shalt take a wife for my son of my kindred, and of my father's house:

41 [u]Then shalt thou be clear from this my oath, when thou comest to my kindred; and if they give not thee one, thou shalt be clear from my oath.

42 And I came this day unto the well, and said, [w]O LORD God of my master Abraham, if now thou do prosper my way which I go:

43 [x]Behold, I stand by the well of water; and it shall come to pass, that when the virgin cometh forth to draw water, and I say to her, Give me, I pray thee, a little water of thy pitcher to drink;

44 And she say to me, Both drink thou, and I will also draw for thy camels: let the same be the woman whom the LORD hath appointed out for my master's son.

45 [y]And before I had done [z]speaking in mine heart, behold, Rebekah came forth with her pitcher on her shoulder; and she went down unto the well, and drew water: and I said unto her, Let me drink, I pray thee.

46 And she made haste, and let down her pitcher from her shoulder, and said, Drink, and I will give thy camels drink also: so I drank, and she made the camels drink also.

47 And I asked her, and said, Whose daughter art thou? And she said, the daughter of Bethuel, Nahor's son, whom Milcah bare unto him: and I [a]put the ear-ring upon her face, and the bracelets upon her hands.

48 [b]And I bowed down my head, and worshipped the LORD, and blessed the LORD God of my master Abraham, which had led me in the right way to take [c]my master's brother's daughter unto his son.

49 And now if ye will [d]deal kindly and truly with my master, tell me: and if not, tell me; that I may turn to the right hand, or to the left.

50 Then Laban and Bethuel answered and said, [e]The thing proceedeth from the LORD: we cannot [f]speak unto thee bad or good.

51 Behold, Rebekah [g]is before thee, take her, and go, and let her be thy master's son's wife, as the LORD hath spoken.

52 And it came to pass, that, when Abraham's servant heard their words, he [h]worshipped the LORD, bowing himself to the earth.

53 And the servant brought forth †[i]jewels of silver, and jewels of gold, and raiment, and gave them to Rebekah: he gave also to her brother and to her mother [k]precious things.

54 And they did eat and drink, he and the men that were with him, and tarried all night; and they rose up in the morning, and he said, [l]Send me away unto my master.

55 And her brother and her mother said, Let the damsel abide with us ‖ a few days, at the least ten, after that she shall go.

56 And he said unto them, Hinder me not, seeing the LORD hath prospered my way; send me away, that I may go to my master.

57 And they said, We will call the damsel, and enquire at her mouth.

58 And they called Rebekah, and said unto her Wilt thou go with this man? And she said, I will go 59 And they sent away Rebekah their sister, and [m]her nurse, and Abraham's servant, and his men.

60 And they blessed Rebekah, and said unto her, Thou art our sister, be thou [n]the mother of thousands of millions, and [o]let thy seed possess the gate of those which hate them.

61 ¶And Rebekah arose, and her damsels, and they rode upon the camels, and followed the man: and the servant took Rebekah, and went his way.

62 And Isaac came from the way of the [p]well Lahai-roi; for he dwelt in the south country.

63 And Isaac went out ‖[q]to meditate in the field at the even-tide: and he lifted up his eyes, and saw, and, behold, the camels were coming.

64 And Rebekah lifted up her eyes, and when she saw Isaac, [r]she lighted off the camel.

65 For she had said unto the servant, What man is this that walketh in the field to meet us? And the servant had said, It is my master: therefore she took a vail and covered herself.

66 And the servant told Isaac all things that he had done.

5 ¶ And [b]Abraham gave all that he had unto Isaac.

6 But unto the sons of the concubines, which Abraham had, Abraham gave gifts, and [c]sent them away from Isaac his son, while he yet lived, eastward, unto [d]the east country.

7 And these are the days of the years of Abraham's life which he lived, an hundred threescore and fifteen years.

8 Then Abraham gave up the ghost, and [e]died in a good old age, an old man, and full of years; and [f]was gathered to his people.

9 And [g]his sons Isaac and Ishmael buried him in the cave of Machpelah, in the field of Ephron the son of Zohar the Hittite, which is before Mamre;

10 [h]The field which Abraham purchased of the sons of Heth: [i]there was Abraham buried, and Sarah his wife.

11 ¶ And it came to pass after the death of Abraham, that God blessed his son Isaac; and Isaac dwelt by the [k]well Lahai-roi.

12 ¶ Now these are the generations of Ishmael, Abraham's son, [l]whom Hagar the Egyptian, Sarah's handmaid, bare unto Abraham:

13 And [m]these are the names of the sons of Ishmael, by their names, according to their generations: the firstborn of Ishmael, Nebajoth; and Kedar, and Adbeel, and Mibsam,

14 And Mishma, and Dumah, and Massa,

15 ‖ Hadar, and Tema, Jetur, Naphish, and Kedemah:

16 These are the sons of Ishmael, and these are their names, by their towns, and by their castles; [n]twelve princes according to their nations.

17 And these are the years of the life of Ishmael, an hundred and thirty and seven years: and he [o]gave up the ghost and died; and was gathered unto his people.

18 [p]And they dwelt from Havilah unto Shur, that is before Egypt, as thou goest toward Assyria: and he † died [q]in the presence of all his brethren.

19 ¶ And these are the generations of Isaac, Abraham's son: [r]Abraham begat Isaac:

20 And Isaac was forty years old when he took Rebekah to wife, [s]the daughter of Bethuel the Syrian of Padan-aram, [t]the sister to Laban the Syrian.

21 And Isaac entreated the LORD for his wife, because she was barren: [u]and the LORD was entreated of him, and [w]Rebekah his wife conceived.

22 And the children struggled together within her; and she said, If it be so, why am I thus? [x]And she went to inquire of the LORD.

23 And the LORD said unto her, [y]Two nations are in thy womb, and two manner of people shall be separated from thy bowels: and [z]the one people shall be stronger than the other people; and [a]the elder shall serve the younger.

24 ¶ And when her days to be delivered were fulfilled, behold, there were twins in her womb.

25 And the first came out red, [b]all over like an hairy garment: and they called his name Esau.

26 And after that came his brother out, and [c]his hand took hold on Esau's heel; and [d]his name was called Jacob: and Isaac was threescore years old when she bare them.

27 And the boys grew: and Esau was [e]a cunning hunter, a man of the field; and Jacob was [f]a plain man, [g]dwelling in tents.

28 And Isaac loved Esau, because † he did [h]eat of his venison: [i]but Rebekah loved Jacob.

29 ¶ And Jacob sod pottage: and Esau came from the field, and he was faint:

30 And Esau said to Jacob, Feed me, I pray thee, † with that same red pottage; for I am faint: therefore was his name called ‖ Edom.

31 And Jacob said, Sell me this day thy birthright.

32 And Esau said, Behold, I am † at the point to die: and what profit shall this birthright do to me?

33 And Jacob said, Swear to me this day; and he sware unto him: and [k]he sold his birthright unto Jacob.

34 Then Jacob gave Esau bread and pottage of lentiles; and [l]he did eat and drink, and rose up, and went his way: thus Esau despised his birthright.

1 Isaac because of famine goeth to Gerar. 26 Abimelech's covenant with him at Beer-sheba.

AND there was a famine in the land, besides [a]the first famine that was in the days of Abraham. And Isaac went unto [b]Abimelech king of the Philistines unto Gerar.

2 And the LORD appeared unto him, and said, Go not down into Egypt; dwell in [c]the land which I shall tell thee of:

3 [d]Sojourn in this land, and [e]I will be with thee, and [f]will bless thee; for unto thee, and unto thy seed, [g]I will give all these countries, and I will perform [h]the oath which I sware unto Abraham thy father;

4 And [i]I will make thy seed to multiply as the stars of heaven, and will give unto thy seed all these countries; [k]and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed;

5 [l]Because that Abraham obeyed my voice, and kept my charge, my commandments, my statutes, and my laws.

6 ¶ And Isaac dwelt in Gerar:

7 And the men of the place asked him of his wife; and [m] he said, She is my sister: for [n] he feared to say, She is my wife; lest, said he, the men of the place should kill me for Rebekah; because she [o] was fair to look upon.

8 And it came to pass, when he had been there a long time, that Abimelech king of the Philistines looked out at a window, and saw, and, behold, Isaac was sporting with Rebekah his wife.

9 And Abimelech called Isaac, and said, Behold, of a surety she is thy wife: and how saidst thou, She is my sister? And Isaac said unto him, Because I said, Lest I die for her.

10 And Abimelech said, What is this thou hast done unto us? one of the people might lightly have lien with thy wife, and [p] thou shouldest have brought guiltiness upon us.

11 And Abimelech charged all his people, saying, He that [q] toucheth this man or his wife shall surely be put to death.

12 Then Isaac sowed in that land, and † received in the same year [r] an hundred-fold: and the LORD [s] blessed him:

13 And the man [t] waxed great, and † went forward, and grew until he became very great:

14 For he had possession of flocks, and possession of herds, and great store of ‖ servants: and the Philistines [u] envied him.

15 For all the wells [w] which his father's servants had digged in the days of Abraham his father, the Philistines had stopped them, and filled them with earth.

16 And Abimelech said unto Isaac, Go from us: for [x] thou art much mightier than we.

17 ¶ And Isaac departed thence, and pitched his tent in the valley of Gerar, and dwelt there.

18 And Isaac digged again the wells of water, which they had digged in the days of Abraham his father; for the Philistines had stopped them after the death of Abraham: [y] and he called their names after the names by which his father had called them.

19 And Isaac's servants digged in the valley, and found there a well of † springing water.

20 And the herdmen of Gerar [z] did strive with Isaac's herdmen, saying, the water is ours: and he called the name of the well ‖ Esek; because they strove with him.

21 And they digged another well, and strove for that also: and he called the name of it ‖ Sitnah.

22 And he removed from thence, and digged another well; and for that they strove not: and he called the name of it ‖ Rehoboth; and he said, For now the LORD hath made room for us, and we shall [a] be fruitful in the land.

23 And he went up from thence to Beer-sheba.

24 And the LORD appeared unto him the same night, and said, [b] I am the God of Abraham thy father: [c] fear not, for [d] I am with thee, and will bless thee, and multiply thy seed for my servant Abraham's sake.

25 And he [e] builded an altar there, and [f] called upon the name of the LORD, and pitched his tent there: and there Isaac's servants digged a well.

26 ¶ Then Abimelech went to him from Gerar, and Ahuzzath one of his friends, [g] and Phichol the chief captain of his army.

27 And Isaac said unto them, Wherefore come ye to me, seeing [h] ye hate me, and have [i] sent me away from you?

28 And they said, † We saw certainly that the LORD [k] was with thee: and we said, Let there be now an oath betwixt us, even betwixt us and thee, and let us make a covenant with thee;

29 † That thou wilt do us no hurt, as we have not touched thee, and as we have done unto thee nothing but good, and have sent thee away in peace: [l] thou art now the blessed of the LORD.

30 [m] And he made them a feast, and they did eat and drink.

31 And they rose up betimes in the morning, and [n] sware one to another: and Isaac sent them away, and they departed from him in peace.

32 And it came to pass the same day, that Isaac's servants came, and told him concerning the well which they had digged, and said unto him, We have found water.

33 And he called it ‖ Shebah: [o] therefore the name of the city is ‖ Beer-sheba unto this day.

34 ¶ [p] And Esau was forty years old when he took to wife Judith the daughter of Beeri the Hittite, and Bashemath the daughter of Elon the Hittite:

35 Which [q] were † a grief of mind unto Isaac and to Rebekah.

4 And make me savoury meat, such as I love, and bring it to me, that I may eat; that my soul [d]may bless thee before I die.

5 And Rebekah heard when Isaac spake to Esau his son. And Esau went to the field to hunt for venison, and to bring it.

6 ¶And Rebekah spake unto Jacob her son, saying, Behold, I heard thy father speak unto Esau thy brother, saying,

7 Bring me venison, and make me savoury meat, that I may eat, and bless thee before the LORD before my death.

8 Now therefore, my son, [e]obey my voice according to that which I command thee.

9 Go now to the flock, and fetch me from thence two good kids of the goats; and I will make them [f]savoury meat for thy father, such as he loveth:

10 And thou shalt bring it to thy father, that he may eat, and that he [g]may bless thee before his death.

11 And Jacob said to Rebekah his mother, Behold, [h]Esau my brother is a hairy man, and I am a smooth man:

12 My father peradventure will [i]feel me, and I shall seem to him as a deceiver; and I shall bring [k]a curse upon me, and not a blessing.

13 And his mother said unto him, [l]Upon me be thy curse, my son: only obey my voice, and go fetch me them.

14 And he went, and fetched, and brought them to his mother: and his mother [m]made savoury meat, such as his father loved.

15 And Rebekah took †[n]goodly raiment of her eldest son Esau, which were with her in the house, and put them upon Jacob her younger son:

16 And she put the skins of the kids of the goats upon his hands, and upon the smooth of his neck:

17 And she gave the savoury meat and the bread, which she had prepared, into the hand of her son Jacob.

18 ¶And he came unto his father, and said, My father: and he said, Here am I; who art thou, my son?

19 And Jacob said unto his father, I am Esau thy first-born; I have done according as thou badest me: arise, I pray thee, sit and eat of my venison, [o]that thy soul may bless me.

20 And Isaac said unto his son, How is it that thou hast found it so quickly, my son? And he said, Because the LORD thy God brought it †to me.

21 And Isaac said unto Jacob, Come near, I pray thee, that I [p]may feel thee, my son, whether thou be my very son Esau or not.

22 And Jacob went near unto Isaac his father; and he felt him, and said, The voice is Jacob's voice, but the hands are the hands of Esau.

23 And he discerned him not, because [q]his hands were hairy, as his brother Esau's hands: so he blessed him.

24 And he said, Art thou my very son Esau? And he said, I am.

25 And he said, Bring it near to me, and I will eat of my son's venison, [r]that my soul may bless thee. And he brought it near to him, and he did eat: and he brought him wine, and he drank.

26 And his father Isaac said unto him, Come near now, and kiss me, my son.

27 And he came near, and kissed him: and he smelled the smell of his raiment, and blessed him, and said, See, [s]the smell of my son is as the smell of a field which the LORD hath blessed:

28 Therefore [t]God give thee of [u]the dew of heaven, and [w]the fatness of the earth, and [x]plenty of corn and wine:

29 [y]Let people serve thee, and nations bow down to thee: be lord over thy brethren, and [z]let thy mother's sons bow down to thee: [a]cursed be every one that curseth thee, and blessed be he that blesseth thee.

30 ¶And it came to pass, as soon as Isaac had made an end of blessing Jacob, and Jacob was yet scarce gone out from the presence of Isaac his father, that Esau his brother came in from his hunting.

31 And he also had made savoury meat, and brought it unto his father, and said unto his father, Let my father arise, and [b]eat of his son's venison, that thy soul may bless me.

32 And Isaac his father said unto him, Who art thou? And he said, I am thy son, thy first-born Esau.

33 And Isaac †trembled very exceedingly, and said, Who? where is he that hath †taken venison and brought it me, and I have eaten of all before thou camest, and have blessed him? yea, [c]and he shall be blessed.

34 And when Esau heard the words of his father, [d]he cried with a great and exceeding bitter cry, and said unto his father, Bless me, even me also, O my father!

35 And he said, Thy brother came with subtilty, and hath taken away thy blessing.

36 And he said, [e]Is not he rightly named ‖Jacob? for he hath supplanted me these two times: [f]he took away my birth-right; and, behold, now he hath taken away my blessing. And he said, Hast thou not reserved a blessing for me?

46 And Rebekah said to Isaac, [s]I am weary of my life because of the daughters of Heth: if Jacob take a wife of the daughters of Heth, such as these which are of the daughters of the land, what good shall my life do me?

CHAP. XXVIII.

1 Isaac blesseth Jacob, and sendeth him to Padan-aram. 12 The vision of Jacob's ladder. 18 The stone of Beth-el. 20 Jacob's vow.

AND Isaac called Jacob, and [a]blessed him, and charged him, and said unto him, [b]Thou shalt not take a wife of the daughters of Canaan.

2 [c]Arise, go to [d]Padan-aram, to the house of [e]Bethuel thy mother's father; and take thee a wife from thence of the daughters of [f]Laban thy mother's brother.

3 [g]And God Almighty bless thee, and make thee fruitful, and multiply thee, that thou mayest be †a multitude of people;

4 And give thee [h]the blessing of Abraham, to thee, and to thy seed with thee; that thou mayest inherit the land †[i]wherein thou art a stranger, which God gave unto Abraham.

5 And Isaac sent away Jacob: and he went to Padan-aram unto Laban, son of Bethuel the Syrian, the brother of Rebekah, Jacob's and Esau's mother.

6 ¶When Esau saw that Isaac had blessed Jacob, and sent him away to Padan-aram, to take him a wife from thence; and that as he blessed him he gave him a charge, saying, Thou shalt not take a wife of the daughters of Canaan;

7 And that Jacob obeyed his father and his mother, and was gone to Padan-aram;

8 And Esau seeing [k]that the daughters of Canaan †pleased not Isaac his father

9 Then went Esau unto Ishmael, and took unto the wives which he had, [l]Mahalath the daughter of Ishmael, Abraham's son, [m]the sister of Nebajoth, to be his wife.

10 ¶And Jacob [n]went out from Beer-sheba, and went toward [o]Haran.

11 And he lighted upon a certain place, and tarried there all night, because the sun was set; and he took of the stones of that place, and put them for his pillows, and lay down in that place to sleep.

12 And he [p]dreamed, and behold a ladder set up on the earth, and the top of it reached to heaven: and behold [q]the angels of God ascending and descending on it.

13 [r]And, behold, the LORD stood above it, and said, [s]I am the LORD God of Abraham thy father, and the God of Isaac: [t]the land whereon thou liest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed;

14 And [u]thy seed shall be as the dust of the earth, and thou shalt †spread abroad [w]to the west, and to the east, and to the north, and to the south: and in thee and [x]in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed.

15 And, behold, [y]I am with thee, and will [z]keep thee in all places whither thou goest, and will [a]bring thee again into this land; for [b]I will not leave thee, [c]until I have done that which I have spoken to thee of.

16 ¶And Jacob awaked out of his sleep, and he said, Surely the LORD is in [d]this place; and I knew it not.

17 And he was afraid, and said, How dreadful is this place! this is none other but the house of God, and this is the gate of heaven.

18 And Jacob rose up early in the morning, and took the stone that he had put for his pillows, and [e]set it up for a pillar, [f]and poured oil upon the top of it.

19 And he called the name of [g]that place ‖ Beth-el: but the name of that city was called Luz at the first.

20 [h]And Jacob vowed a vow, saying, If [i]God will be with me, and will keep me in this way that I go, and will give me [k]bread to eat, and raiment to put on,

21 So that [l]I come again to my father's house in peace; [m]then shall the LORD be my God:

THEN Jacob †went on his journey, [a]and came into the land of the †people of the east.

2 And he looked, and behold a well in the field, and, lo, there were three flocks of sheep lying by it; for out of that well they watered the flocks: and a great stone was upon the well's mouth.

3 And thither were all the flocks gathered: and they rolled the stone from the well's mouth, and watered the sheep, and put the stone again upon the well's mouth in his place.

4 And Jacob said unto them, My brethren, whence be ye? And they said, Of Haran are we.

5 And he said unto them, Know ye Laban the son of Nahor? And they said, We know him.

6 And he said unto them, †[b]Is he well? And they said, He is well: and, behold, Rachel his daughter cometh with the sheep.

7 And he said, Lo, †it is yet high day, neither is it time that the cattle should be gathered together: water ye the sheep, and go and feed them.

8 And they said, We cannot, until all the flocks be gathered together, and till they roll the stone from the well's mouth; then we water the sheep.

9 ¶And while he yet spake with them, [c]Rachel came with her father's sheep: for she kept them.

10 And it came to pass, when Jacob saw Rachel the daughter of Laban his mother's brother, and the sheep of Laban his mother's brother, that Jacob went near, and [d]rolled the stone from the well's mouth, and watered the flock of Laban his mother's brother.

11 And Jacob [e]kissed Rachel, and lifted up his voice, and wept.

12 And Jacob told Rachel that he was [f]her father's brother, and that he was Rebekah's son; [g]and she ran and told her father.

13 And it came to pass, when Laban heard the †tidings of Jacob his sister's son, that [h]he ran to meet him, and embraced him, and kissed him, and brought him to his house. And he told Laban all these things.

14 And Laban said to him, [i]Surely thou art my bone and my flesh. And he abode with him †the space of a month.

15 ¶And Laban said unto Jacob, Because thou art my brother, shouldest thou therefore serve me for nought? tell me, what shall thy wages be?

16 And Laban had two daughters: the name of the elder was Leah, and the name of the younger was Rachel.

17 Leah was tender-eyed; but Rachel was beautiful and well-favoured.

18 And Jacob loved Rachel; and said, [k]I will serve thee seven years for Rachel thy younger daughter.

19 And Laban said, It is better that I give her to thee, than that I should give her to another man: abide with me.

20 And Jacob [l]served seven years for Rachel; and they seemed unto him but a few days, for the love he had to her.

21 ¶And Jacob said unto Laban, Give me my wife, for my days are fulfilled, that I may [m]go in unto her.

22 And Laban gathered together all the men of the place, and [n]made a feast.

23 And it came to pass in the evening, that he took Leah his daughter, and brought her to him; and he went in unto her.

24 And Laban gave unto his daughter Leah, Zilpah his maid, for an handmaid.

25 And it came to pass, that in the morning, behold, it was Leah: and he said to Laban, What is this thou hast done unto me? did not I serve with thee for Rachel? wherefore then hast thou beguiled me?

26 And Laban said, It must not be so done in our country, †to give the younger before the first-born.

27 [o]Fulfil her week, and we will give thee this also for the service which thou shalt serve with me yet seven other years.

28 And Jacob did so, and fulfilled her week: and he gave him Rachel his daughter to wife also.

29 And Laban gave to Rachel his daughter, Bilhah his handmaid, to be her maid.

30 And he went in also unto Rachel, and he [p]loved also Rachel more than Leah, and served with him [q]yet seven other years.

31 ¶And when the LORD [r]saw that Leah was hated, he [s]opened her womb: but Rachel was barren.

32 And Leah conceived, and bare a son, and she called his name ‖Reuben: for she said, Surely the LORD hath [t]looked upon my affliction; now therefore my husband will love me.

33 And she conceived again, and bare a son; and said, Because the LORD hath heard that I was hated, he hath therefore given me this son also: and she called his name ‖Simeon.

34 And she conceived again, and bare a son; and said, Now this time will my husband be joined unto me, because I have born him three sons: therefore was his name called ‖ Levi.

35 And she conceived again, and bare a son: and she said, Now will I praise the LORD: therefore she called his name [u] ‖ Judah; and † left bearing.

AND when Rachel saw that [a] she bare Jacob no children, Rachel [b] envied her sister; and said unto Jacob, Give me children, [c] or else I die.

2 And Jacob's anger was kindled against Rachel: and he said, [d] Am I in God's stead, who hath withheld from thee the fruit of the womb?

3 And she said, Behold [e] my maid Bilhah, go in unto her; [f] and she shall bear upon my knees, [g] that I may also † have children by her.

4 And she gave him Bilhah her handmaid [h] to wife: and Jacob went in unto her.

5 And Bilhah conceived, and bare Jacob a son.

6 And Rachel said, God hath [i] judged me, and hath also heard my voice, and hath given me a son: therefore called she his name ‖ Dan.

7 And Bilhah, Rachel's maid, conceived again, and bare Jacob a second son.

8 And Rachel said, With † great wrestlings have I wrestled with my sister, and I have prevailed: and she called his name ‖ [k] Naphtali.

9 When Leah saw that she had left bearing, she took Zilpah, her maid, and [l] gave her Jacob to wife.

10 And Zilpah, Leah's maid, bare Jacob a son.

11 And Leah said, A troop cometh: and she called his name ‖ Gad.

12 And Zilpah, Leah's maid, bare Jacob a second son.

13 And Leah said, † Happy am I, for the daughters [m] will call me blessed: and she called his name ‖ Asher.

14 ¶ And Reuben went in the days of wheat-harvest, and found mandrakes in the field, and brought them unto his mother Leah. Then Rachel said to Leah, [n] Give me, I pray thee, of thy son's mandrakes.

15 And she said unto her, [o] Is it a small matter that thou hast taken my husband? and wouldest thou take away my son's mandrakes also? And Rachel said, Therefore he shall lie with thee to-night for thy son's mandrakes.

16 And Jacob came out of the field in the evening, and Leah went out to meet him, and said, Thou must come in unto me; for surely I have hired thee with my son's mandrakes. And he lay with her that night.

17 And God hearkened unto Leah, and she conceived, and bare Jacob the fifth son.

18 And Leah said, God hath given me my hire, because I have given my maiden to my husband: and she called his name ‖ Issachar.

19 And Leah conceived again, and bare Jacob the sixth son.

20 And Leah said, God hath endued me with a good dowry; now will my husband dwell with me, because I have born him six sons: and she called his name ‖ [p] Zebulun.

21 And afterwards she bare a daughter, and called her name ‖ Dinah.

22 ¶ And God [q] remembered Rachel, and God hearkened to her, and [r] opened her womb.

23 And she conceived, and bare a son; and said, God hath taken away [s] my reproach:

24 And she called his name ‖ Joseph; and said, [t] The LORD shall add to me another son.

25 ¶ And it came to pass, when Rachel had born Joseph, that Jacob said unto Laban, [u] Send me away, that I may go unto [x] mine own place, and to my country.

26 Give me my wives and my children, [y] for whom I have served thee, and let me go: for thou knowest my service which I have done thee.

27 And Laban said unto him, I pray thee, if I have found favour in thine eyes, tarry: for [z] I have learned by experience that the LORD hath blessed me [a] for thy sake.

28 And he said, [b] Appoint me thy wages, and I will give it.

29 And he said unto him, [c] Thou knowest how I have served thee, and how thy cattle was with me.

30 For it was little which thou hadst before I came, and it is now † increased unto a multitude; and the LORD hath blessed thee † since my coming: and now, when shall I [d] provide for mine own house also?

31 And he said, What shall I give thee? And Jacob said, Thou shalt not give me any thing: if thou wilt do this thing for me, I will again feed and keep thy flock.

32 I will pass through all thy flock to-day, removing from thence all the speckled and spotted cattle, and all the brown cattle among the sheep, and the spotted and speckled among the goats: and [e] of such shall be my hire.

33 So shall my [f] righteousness answer for me † in time to come, when it shall come for my hire before thy face: every one that is not speckled and spotted among the goats, and brown among the sheep, that shall be counted stolen with me.

36 And he set three days' journey betwixt himself and Jacob: and Jacob fed the rest of Laban's flocks.

37 ¶And [g]Jacob took him rods of green poplar, and of the hazel and chesnut-tree; and pilled white streaks in them, and made the white appear which was in the rods.

38 And he set the rods which he had pilled before the flocks in the gutters in the watering-troughs when the flocks came to drink, that they should conceive when they came to drink.

39 And the flocks conceived before the rods, and brought forth cattle ring-streaked, speckled, and spotted.

40 And Jacob did separate the lambs, and set the faces of the flocks toward the ring-streaked, and all the brown in the flock of Laban; and he put his own flocks by themselves, and put them not unto Laban's cattle.

41 And it came to pass, whensoever the stronger cattle did conceive, that Jacob laid the rods before the eyes of the cattle in the gutters, that they might conceive among the rods.

42 But when the cattle were feeble, he put them not in: so the feebler were Laban's, and the stronger Jacob's.

43 And the man [h]increased exceedingly, and [i]had much cattle, and maid-servants, and men-servants, and camels, and asses.

CHAP. XXXI.

1 Jacob departeth secretly. 19 Rachel stealeth her father's images. 36 Jacob's complaint of Laban. 43 The covenant of Laban and Jacob at Galeed.

AND he heard the words of Laban's sons, saying, Jacob hath taken away all that was our father's; and of that which was our father's hath he gotten all this [a]glory.

2 And Jacob beheld [b]the countenance of Laban, and, behold, it was not [c]toward him †as before.

3 And the LORD said unto Jacob, [d]Return unto the land of thy fathers, and to thy kindred; and I will be with thee.

4 And Jacob sent and called Rachel and Leah to the field unto his flock,

5 And said unto them, [e]I see your father's countenance, that it is not toward me as before; but the God of my father [f]hath been with me.

6 And [g]ye know that with all my power I have served your father.

7 And your father hath deceived me, and [h]changed my wages [i]ten times; but God [k]suffered him not to hurt me.

8 If he said thus, [l]The speckled shall be thy wages; then all the cattle bare speckled: and if he said thus, The ring-streaked shall be thy hire; then bare all the cattle ring-streaked.

9 Thus God hath [m]taken away the cattle of your father, and given them to me.

10 And it came to pass at the time that the cattle conceived, that I lifted up mine eyes, and saw in a dream, and, behold, the ‖rams which leaped upon the cattle were ring-streaked, speckled, and grizzled.

11 And [n]the angel of God spake unto me in a dream, saying, Jacob: And I said, Here am I.

12 And he said, Lift up now thine eyes, and see, all the rams which leap upon the cattle are ring-streaked, speckled, and grizzled: for [o]I have seen all that Laban doeth unto thee.

13 I am the God of Beth-el, [p]where thou anointedst the pillar, and where thou vowedst a vow unto me: now [q]arise, get thee out from this land, and return unto the land of thy kindred.

14 And Rachel and Leah answered, and said unto him, [r]Is there yet any portion or inheritance for us in our father's house?

15 Are we not counted of him strangers? for [s]he hath sold us, and hath quite devoured also our money.

16 For all the riches which God hath taken from our father, that is ours, and our children's: now then, whatsoever God hath said unto thee, do.

17 ¶Then Jacob rose up, and set his sons and his wives upon camels;

18 And he carried away all his cattle, and all his goods which he had gotten, the cattle of his getting, which he had gotten in Padan-aram: for to go to Isaac his father in the land of Canaan.

19 And Laban went to shear his sheep: and Rachel had stolen the †[t]images that were her father's.

20 And Jacob stole away †unawares to Laban the Syrian, in that he told him not that he fled.

21 So he fled with all that he had; and he rose up, and passed over the river, and [u]set his face toward the mount Gilead.

22 And it was told Laban on the third day, that Jacob was fled.

23 And he took [x]his brethren with him, and pursued after him seven days' journey: and they overtook him in the mount Gilead.

dream by night, and said unto him, Take heed that thou [z] speak not to Jacob †either good or bad.

25 ¶ Then Laban overtook Jacob. Now Jacob had pitched his tent in the mount: and Laban with his brethren pitched in the mount of Gilead.

26 And Laban said to Jacob, What hast thou done, that thou hast stolen away unawares to me, and [a] carried away my daughters, as captives taken with the sword?

27 Wherefore didst thou flee away secretly, and †steal away from me; and didst not tell me, that I might have sent thee away with mirth, and with songs, with tabret, and with harp?

28 And hast not suffered me [b] to kiss my sons and my daughters? [c] thou hast now done foolishly in so doing.

29 It is in the power of my hand to do you hurt: but the [d] God of your father spake unto me [e] yesternight, saying, Take thou heed that thou speak not to Jacob either good or bad.

30 And now, though thou wouldest needs be gone, because thou sore longedst after thy father's house, yet wherefore hast thou [f] stolen my gods?

31 And Jacob answered and said to Laban, Because I was afraid: for I said, Peradventure thou wouldest take by force thy daughters from me.

32 With whomsoever thou findest thy gods, [g] let him not live: before our brethren discern thou what is thine with me, and take it to thee. For Jacob knew not that Rachel had stolen them.

33 And Laban went into Jacob's tent, and into Leah's tent, and into the two maid-servants' tents; but he found them not. Then went he out of Leah's tent, and entered into Rachel's tent.

34 Now Rachel had taken the images, and put them in the camel's furniture, and sat upon them. And Laban †searched all the tent, but found them not.

35 And she said to her father, Let it not displease my lord that I cannot [h] rise up before thee; for the custom of women is upon me. And he searched, but found not the images.

36 ¶ And Jacob was wroth, and chode with Laban: and Jacob answered and said to Laban, What is my trespass? what is my sin, that thou hast so hotly pursued after me?

37 Whereas thou hast searched all my stuff, what hast thou found of all thy household stuff? set it here before my brethren and thy brethren, that they may judge betwixt us both.

38 This twenty years have I been with thee; thy ewes and thy she-goats have not cast their young, and the rams of thy flock have I not eaten.

39 [i] That which was torn of beasts I brought not unto thee; I bare the loss of it; of [k] my hand didst thou require it, whether stolen by day, or stolen by night.

40 Thus I was; in the day the drought consumed me, and the frost by night; and my sleep departed from mine eyes.

41 Thus have I been twenty years in thy house; I [l] served thee fourteen years for thy two daughters, and six years for thy cattle: and [m] thou hast changed my wages ten times.

42 [n] Except the God of my father, the God of Abraham, and [o] the Fear of Isaac, had been with me, surely thou hadst sent me away now empty. [p] God hath seen mine affliction and the labour of my hands, and [q] rebuked thee yesternight.

43 ¶ And Laban answered and said unto Jacob, These daughters are my daughters, and these children are my children, and these cattle are my cattle, and all that thou seest is mine; and what can I do this day unto these my daughters, or unto their children which they have born?

44 Now therefore come thou, [r] let us make a covenant, I and thou; [s] and let it be for a witness between me and thee.

45 And Jacob [t] took a stone, and set it up for a pillar.

46 And Jacob said unto his brethren, Gather stones; and they took stones, and made an heap: and they did eat there upon the heap.

47 And Laban called it ‖ Jegar-sahadutha: but Jacob called it ‖ Galeed.

48 And Laban said, [u] This heap is a witness between me and thee this day. Therefore was the name of it called Galeed;

49 And [x] ‖ Mizpah; for he said, The LORD watch between me and thee, when we are absent one from another.

50 If thou shalt afflict my daughters, or if thou shalt take other wives besides my daughters, no man is with us; see, God is witness betwixt me and thee.

51 And Laban said to Jacob, Behold this heap, and behold this pillar, which I have cast betwixt me and thee;

52 This heap be witness, and this pillar be witness, that I will not pass over this heap to thee, and that thou shalt not pass over this heap and this pillar unto me, for harm.

AND Jacob went on his way, and [a] the angels of God met him.

2 And when Jacob saw them, he said, This is God's [b] host: and he called the name of that place ‖ Mahanaim.

3 And Jacob sent messengers before him to Esau his brother [c] unto the land of Seir, [d] the † country of Edom.

4 And he commanded them, saying, [e] Thus shall ye speak unto my lord Esau; thy servant Jacob saith thus, I have sojourned with Laban, and stayed there until now:

5 And [f] I have oxen, and asses, flocks, and men-servants, and women-servants: and I have sent to tell my lord, that [g] I may find grace in thy sight.

6 ¶ And the messengers returned to Jacob, saying, We came to thy brother Esau, and also [h] he cometh to meet thee, and four hundred men with him.

7 Then Jacob was greatly afraid, and [i] distressed: and he divided the people that was with him, and the flocks, and herds, and the camels, into two bands;

8 And said, If Esau come to the one company, and smite it, then the other company which is left shall escape.

9 ¶ [k] And Jacob said, [l] O God of my father Abraham, and God of my father Isaac, the LORD [m] which saidst unto me, Return unto thy country, and to thy kindred, and I will deal well with thee:

10 † I am not worthy of the least of all the [n] mercies, and of all the truth, which thou hast shewed unto thy servant; for with [o] my staff I passed over this Jordan; and now I am become two bands.

11 [p] Deliver me, I pray thee, from the hand of my brother, from the hand of Esau: for I fear him, lest he will come and smite me, and [q] the mother † with the children.

12 And [r] thou saidst, I will surely do thee good, and make thy seed as the sand of the sea, which cannot be numbered for multitude.

13 ¶ And he lodged there that same night; and took of that which came to his hand [s] a present for Esau his brother;

14 Two hundred she-goats and twenty he-goats, two hundred ewes and twenty rams,

15 Thirty milch camels with their colts, forty kine and ten bulls, twenty she-asses and ten foals.

16 And he delivered them into the hand of his servants, every drove by themselves; and said unto his servants, Pass over before me, and put a space betwixt drove and drove.

17 And he commanded the foremost, saying, When Esau my brother meeteth thee, and asketh thee, saying, Whose art thou? and whither goest thou? and whose are these before thee?

18 Then thou shalt say, They be thy servant Jacob's; it is a present sent unto my lord Esau: and, behold, also he is behind us.

19 And so commanded he the second, and the third, and all that followed the droves, saying, On this manner shall ye speak unto Esau, when ye find him.

20 And say ye moreover, Behold, thy servant Jacob is behind us. For he said, I will [t] appease him with the present that goeth before me, and afterward I will see his face; peradventure he will accept † of me.

21 So went the present over before him; and himself lodged that night in the company.

22 And he rose up that night, and took his two wives, and his two women-servants, and his eleven sons, [u] and passed over the ford Jabbok.

23 And he took them, and † sent them over the brook, and sent over that he had.

24 ¶ And Jacob was left alone; and there [x] wrestled a man with him, until the † breaking of the day.

25 And when he saw that he prevailed not against him, he touched the hollow of his thigh: and [y] the hollow of Jacob's thigh was out of joint, as he wrestled with him.

26 And [z] he said, Let me go, for the day breaketh: and he said, [a] I will not let thee go, except thou bless me.

27 And he said unto him, What is thy name? And he said, Jacob.

28 And he said, [b] Thy name shall be called no more Jacob, but ‖ Israel: for as a prince hast thou [c] power with God, and [d] with men, and hast prevailed.

29 And Jacob asked him, and said, Tell me, I pray thee, thy name: and he said, [e] Wherefore is it that thou dost ask after my name? And he blessed him there.

30 And Jacob called the name of the place ‖ Peniel: for [f] I have seen God face to face, and my life is preserved.

CHAP. XXXIII.

1 The kindness of Jacob and Esau at their meeting. 18 At Shalem he buyeth a field, and buildeth an altar called El-Elohe-Israel.

AND Jacob lifted up his eyes, and looked, and, behold, [a] Esau came, and with him four hundred men. And he divided the children unto Leah, and unto Rachel, and unto the two handmaids.

2 And he put the handmaids and their children foremost, and Leah and her children after, and Rachel and Joseph hindermost.

3 And he passed over before them, and [b] bowed himself to the ground seven times, until he came near to his brother.

4 [c] And Esau ran to meet him, and embraced him, [d] and fell on his neck, and kissed him: and they wept.

5 And he lifted up his eyes, and saw the women and the children; and said, Who are those †with thee? And he said, The children [e] which God hath graciously given thy servant.

6 Then the handmaidens came near, they and their children, and they bowed themselves.

7 And Leah also with her children came near, and bowed themselves; and after came Joseph near and Rachel, and they bowed themselves.

8 And he said, †What meanest thou by [f] all this drove which I met? And he said, These are [g] to find grace in the sight of my lord.

9 And Esau said, I have enough, my brother; †keep that thou hast unto thyself.

10 And Jacob said, Nay, I pray thee, if now I have found grace in thy sight, then receive my present at my hand: for therefore I [h] have seen thy face, as though I had seen the face of God, and thou wast pleased with me.

11 Take, I pray thee, [i] my blessing that is brought to thee; because God hath dealt graciously with me, and because I have †enough: [k] and he urged him, and he took it.

12 And he said, Let us take our journey, and let us go, and I will go before thee.

13 And he said unto him, My lord knoweth that the children are tender, and the flocks and herds with young are with me, and if men should overdrive them one day, all the flock will die.

14 Let my lord, I pray thee, pass over before his servant: and I will lead on softly, according †as the cattle that goeth before me and the children be able to endure; until I come unto my lord [l] unto Seir.

15 And Esau said, Let me now †leave with thee some of the folk that are with me: and he said, †What needeth it? [m] Let me find grace in the sight of my lord.

16 ¶ So Esau returned that day on his way unto Seir.

17 And Jacob journeyed to [n] Succoth, and built him an house, and made booths for his cattle: therefore the name of the place is called ‖ Succoth.

18 ¶ And Jacob came to [o] Shalem, a city of ‖ [p] Shechem, which is in the land of Canaan, when he came from Padan-aram; and pitched his tent before the city.

19 And [q] he bought a parcel of a field, where he had spread his tent, at the hand of the children of ‖ Hamor, Shechem's father, for an hundred ‖ pieces of money.

20 And he erected there an altar, and [r] called it ‖ El-Elohe-Israel.

CHAP. XXXIV.

1 Dinah is ravished by Shechem. 4 He sueth to marry her. 13 The sons of Jacob offer the condition of circumcision to the Shechemites. 30 Jacob reproveth Simeon and Levi.

AND [a] Dinah, the daughter of Leah, which she bare unto Jacob, [b] went out to see the daughters of the land.

2 And when Shechem the son of Hamor the Hivite, prince of the country, [c] saw her, he [d] took her, and lay with her, and †defiled her.

3 And his soul clave unto Dinah the daughter of Jacob, and he loved the damsel, and spake †kindly unto the damsel.

4 And Shechem [e] spake unto his father Hamor, saying, Get me this damsel to wife.

5 And Jacob heard that he had defiled Dinah his daughter: (now his sons were with his cattle in the field: and Jacob [f] held his peace until they were come.)

6 ¶ And Hamor the father of Shechem went out unto Jacob to commune with him.

7 And the sons of Jacob came out of the field when they heard it: and the men were grieved, and they [g] were very wroth, because he [h] had wrought folly in Israel, in lying with Jacob's daughter; [i] which thing ought not to be done.

8 And Hamor communed with them, saying, The soul of my son Shechem longeth for your daughter: I pray you give her him to wife.

9 And make ye marriages with us, and give your daughters unto us, and take our daughters unto you.

10 And ye shall dwell with us: and [k]the land shall be before you; dwell and [l]trade ye therein, and [m]get you possessions therein.

11 And Shechem said unto her father, and unto her brethren, Let me find grace in your eyes, and what ye shall say unto me, I will give.

12 Ask me never so much [n]dowry and gift, and I will give according as ye shall say unto me: but give me the damsel to wife.

13 And the sons of Jacob answered Shechem and Hamor his father [o]deceitfully, and said, because he had defiled Dinah their sister:

14 And they said unto them, We cannot do this thing, to give our sister to one that is uncircumcised; for [p]that were a reproach unto us:

15 But in this will we consent unto you: If ye will be as we be, that every male of you be circumcised;

16 Then will we give our daughters unto you, and we will take your daughters to us, and we will dwell with you, and we will become one people.

17 But if ye will not hearken unto us, to be circumcised; then will we take our daughter, and we will be gone.

18 And their words pleased Hamor, and Shechem, Hamor's son.

19 And the young man deferred not to do the thing, because he had delight in Jacob's daughter: and he was [q]more honourable than all the house of his father.

20 ¶And Hamor and Shechem his son came unto the gate of their city, and communed with the men of their city, saying,

21 These men are peaceable with us; therefore let them dwell in the land, and trade therein: for the land, behold, it is large enough for them: let us take their daughters to us for wives, and let us give them our daughters.

22 Only herein will the men consent unto us for to dwell with us, to be one people, if every male among us be circumcised, as they are circumcised.

23 Shall not their cattle, and their substance, and every beast of theirs be ours? only let us consent unto them, and they will dwell with us.

24 And unto Hamor, and unto Shechem his son, hearkened all that [r]went out of the gate of his city: and every male was circumcised, all that went out of the gate of his city.

25 ¶And it came to pass on the third day, when they were sore, that two of the sons of Jacob, [s]Simeon and Levi, Dinah's brethren, took each man his sword, and came upon the city boldly, and slew all the males.

26 And they slew Hamor and Shechem his son with the †edge of the sword, and took Dinah out of Shechem's house, and went out.

27 The sons of Jacob came upon the slain, and spoiled the city; because they had defiled their sister.

28 They took their sheep, and their oxen, and their asses, and that which was in the city, and that which was in the field.

29 And all their wealth, and all their little ones, and their wives took they captive, and spoiled even all that was in the house.

30 And Jacob said to Simeon and Levi, [t]Ye have [u]troubled me [x]to make me to stink among the inhabitants of the land, among the Canaanites, and the Perizzites: [y]and I being few in number, they shall gather themselves together against me, and slay me; and I shall be destroyed, I and my house.

31 And they said, Should he deal with our sister as with an harlot?

AND God said unto Jacob, Arise, go up to [a]Beth-el, and dwell there: and make there an altar unto God, [b]that appeared unto thee [c]when thou fleddest from the face of Esau thy brother.

2 Then Jacob said unto his [d]household, and to all that were with him, Put away [e]the strange gods that are among you, and [f]be clean and change your garments:

3 And let us arise, and go up to Beth-el; and I will make there an altar unto God, [g]who answered me in the day of my distress, [h]and was with me in the way which I went.

4 And they gave unto Jacob all the strange gods which were in their hand, and all their [i]ear-rings which were in their ears; and Jacob hid them under [k]the oak which was by Shechem.

5 And they journeyed: and [l]the terror of God was upon the cities that were round about them, and they did not pursue after the sons of Jacob.

6 ¶So Jacob came to [m]Luz, which is in the land of Canaan, that is Beth-el, he and all the people that were with him.

7 And he [n]built there an altar, and called the place ‖El-beth-el; because [o]there God appeared unto him, when he fled from the face of his brother.

8 But [p]Deborah, Rebekah's nurse, died, and she was buried beneath Beth-el, under an oak: and the name of it was called ‖Allon-bachuth.

9 ¶And [q]God appeared unto Jacob again when he came out of Padan-aram; and blessed him.

CHAP. XXXVI.

3 Esau's three wives. 6 His removing to mount Seir. 15 The dukes which descended of his sons.

NOW these are the generations of Esau, [a]who is Edom.

2 [b]Esau took his wives of the daughters of Canaan; Adah the daughter of Elon the Hittite, and [c]Aholibamah the daughter of Anah the daughter of Zibeon the Hivite;

3 And [d]Bashemath, Ishmael's daughter, sister of Nebajoth.

4 And [e]Adah bare to Esau, Eliphaz, and Bashemath bare Reuel;

5 And Aholibamah bare Jeush, and Jaalam, and Korah: these are the sons of Esau, which were born unto him in the land of Canaan.

6 And Esau took his wives, and his sons, and his daughters, and all the †persons of his house, and his cattle, and all his beasts, and all his substance which he had got in the land of Canaan; and went into the country from the face of his brother Jacob.

7 [f]For their riches were more than that they might dwell together: and [g]the land wherein they were strangers could not bear them, because of their cattle.

8 Thus dwelt Esau in [h]mount Seir: [i]Esau is Edom.

9 ¶And these are the generations of Esau the father of the †Edomites, in mount Seir:

10 These are the names of Esau's sons; [k]Eliphaz the son of Adah the wife of Esau; Reuel the son of Bashemath the wife of Esau.

11 And the sons of Eliphaz were, Teman, Omar, ‖Zepho, and Gatam, and Kenaz.

12 And Timna was concubine to Eliphaz, Esau's son; and she bare to Eliphaz, [l]Amalek: these were the sons of Adah, Esau's wife.

13 And these are the sons of Reuel; Nahath, and Zerah, Shammah, and Mizzah: these were the sons of Bashemath, Esau's wife.

14 ¶And these were the sons of Aholibamah, the daughter of Anah, the daughter of Zibeon, Esau's wife: and she bare to Esau, Jeush, and Jaalam, and Korah.

15 ¶These were dukes of the sons of Esau: the sons of Eliphaz, the first-born son of Esau; duke Teman, duke Omar, duke Zepho, duke Kenaz, 16 Duke Korah, duke Gatam, and duke Amalek: these are the dukes that came of Eliphaz, in the land of Edom: these were the sons of Adah.

17 ¶And these are the sons of Reuel, Esau's son; duke Nahath, duke Zerah, duke Shammah, duke

Mizzah: these are the dukes that came of Reuel, in the land of Edom: these are the sons of Bashemath, Esau's wife.

18 ¶And these are the sons of Aholibamah, Esau's wife; duke Jeush, duke Jaalam, duke Korah: these were the dukes that came of Aholibamah the daughter of Anah, Esau's wife.

19 These are the sons of Esau, who is Edom, and these are their dukes.

20 ¶[m] These are the sons of Seir [n]the Horite, who inhabited the land; Lotan, and Shobal, and Zibeon, and Anah, 21 And Dishon, and Ezer, and Dishan: these are the dukes of the Horites, the children of Seir in the land of Edom.

22 And the children of Lotan were Hori, and ‖ Heman: and Lotan's sister was Timna.

23 And the children of Shobal were these; ‖ Alvan, and Manahath, and Ebal, ‖ Shepho, and Onam.

24 And these are the children of Zibeon; both Ajah, and Anah: this was that Anah that found [o]the mules in the wilderness, as he fed the asses of Zibeon his father.

25 And the children of Anah were these; Dishon, and Aholibamah the daughter of Anah.

26 And these are the children of Dishon; ‖ Hemdán, and Eshban, and Ithran, and Cheran.

27 The children of Ezer are these; Bilhan, and Zaavan, and ‖ Akan.

28 The children of Dishan are these; Uz, and Aran.

29 These are the dukes that came of the Horites; duke Lotan, duke Shobal, duke Zibeon, duke Anah, 30 Duke Dishon, duke Ezer, duke Dishan: these are the dukes that came of Hori, among their dukes in the land of Seir.

31 ¶And [p]these are the kings that reigned in the land of Edom, before there reigned any king over the children of Israel.

32 And Bela the son of Beor reigned in Edom: and the name of his city was Dinhabah.

33 And Bela died, and Jobab the son of Zerah of Bozrah reigned in his stead.

34 And Jobab died, and Husham of the land of Temani reigned in his stead.

35 And Husham died, and Hadad the son of Bedad, who smote Midian in the field of Moab, reigned in his stead: and the name of his city was Avith.

36 And Hadad died, and Samlah of Masrekah reigned in his stead.

37 And Samlah died, and Saul of Rehoboth by the river reigned in his stead.

38 And Saul died, and Baal-hanan the son of Achbor reigned in his stead.

39 And Baal-hanan the son of Achbor died, and [q]Hadar reigned in his stead: and the name of his city was Pau; and his wife's name was Mehetabel, the daughter of Matred, the daughter of Mezahab.

40 And these are the names of [r]the dukes that came of Esau, according to their families, after their places, by their names; duke Timnah, duke ‖ Alvah, duke Jetheth,

41 Duke Aholibamah, duke Elah, duke Pinon,

42 Duke Kenaz, duke Teman, duke Mibzar,

43 Duke Magdiel, duke Iram: these be the dukes of Edom, according to their habitations, in the land of their possession: he is Esau, the father of † the Edomites.

2 Joseph is hated of his brethren. 5 His two dreams. 18 His brethren conspire his death. 21 Reuben saveth him. 26 They sell him to the Ishmaelites. 36 He is sold to Potiphar in Egypt.

AND Jacob dwelt in the land †[a] wherein his father was a stranger, in the land of Canaan.

2 These are the generations of Jacob: Joseph being seventeen years old, was feeding the flock with his brethren; and the lad was with the sons of Bilhah, and with the sons of Zilpah, his father's wives: and Joseph brought unto his father [b]their evil report.

3 Now Israel loved Joseph more than all his children, because he was [c]the son of his old age: and he made him a coat of many ‖ colours.

4 And when his brethren saw that their father loved him more than all his brethren, they [d]hated him, and could not speak peaceably unto him.

5 ¶And Joseph dreamed a dream, and he told it his brethren: and they hated him yet the more.

6 And he said unto them, Hear, I pray you, this dream which I have dreamed:

7 For, [e]behold, we were binding sheaves in the field, and, lo, my sheaf arose, and also stood upright; and, behold, your sheaves stood round about, and made obeisance to my sheaf.

8 And his brethren said to him, Shalt thou indeed reign over us? or shalt thou indeed have dominion over us? And they hated him yet the more for his dreams, and for his words.

9 ¶And he dreamed yet another dream, and told it his brethren, and said, Behold, I have dreamed a dream more: and, behold, [f]the sun and the moon and the eleven stars made obeisance to me.

10 And he told it to his father, and to his brethren: and his father rebuked him, and said unto him, What is this dream that thou hast dreamed? Shall I and thy mother and [g]thy brethren indeed come to bow down ourselves to thee to the earth?

11 And [h]his brethren envied him; but his father observed the saying.

12 ¶And his brethren went to feed their father's flock in Shechem.

13 And Israel said unto Joseph, Do not thy brethren feed the flock in Shechem? Come, and I will send thee unto them. And he said to him, Here am I.

14 And he said to him, Go, I pray thee, †see whether it be well with thy brethren, and well with the flocks; and bring me word again. So he sent him out of the vale of [k]Hebron, and he came to Shechem.

15 ¶And a certain man found him, and, behold, he was wandering in the field: and the man asked him, saying, What seekest thou?

16 And he said, I seek my brethren: [l]tell me, I pray thee, where they feed their flocks.

17 And the man said, They are departed hence: for I heard them say, Let us go to Dothan. And Joseph went after his brethren, and found them in [m]Dothan.

18 And when they saw him afar off, even before he came near unto them, [n]they conspired against him to slay him.

19 And they said one to another, Behold, this †dreamer cometh.

20 [o]Come now therefore, and let us slay him, and cast him into some pit; and we will say, Some evil beast hath devoured him: and we shall see what will become of his dreams.

21 And [p]Reuben heard it, and he delivered him out of their hands; and said, Let us not kill him.

22 And Reuben said unto them, Shed no blood, but cast him into this pit that is in the wilderness, and lay no hand upon him; that he might rid him out of their hands, to deliver him to his father again.

23 ¶And it came to pass, when Joseph was come unto his brethren, that they stript Joseph out of his coat, his coat of many ‖ colours that was on him.

24 And they took him, and cast him into a pit: and the pit was empty, there was no water in it.

25 [q]And they sat down to eat bread: and they lifted up their eyes and looked, and, behold, a company of [r]Ishmaelites came from Gilead, with their camels bearing spicery, and [s]balm, and myrrh, going to carry it down to Egypt.

26 And Judah said unto his brethren, What profit is it if we slay our brother, and [t]conceal his blood?

27 Come, and let us sell him to the Ishmaelites, and [u]let not our hand be upon him; for he is [x]our brother, and [y]our flesh: and his brethren †were content.

28 Then there passed by [z]Midianites, merchantmen; and they drew and lifted up Joseph out of the pit, [a]and sold Joseph to the Ishmaelites for [b]twenty pieces of silver: and they brought Joseph into Egypt.

29 ¶And Reuben returned unto the pit; and, behold, Joseph was not in the pit: and he [c]rent his clothes.

30 And he returned unto his brethren, and said, The child [d]is not: and I, whither shall I go?

31 And they took [e]Joseph's coat, and killed a kid of the goats, and dipped the coat in the blood:

32 And they sent the coat of many colours, and they brought it to their father; and said, This have we found: know now whether it be thy son's coat or no.

33 And he knew it, and said, It is my son's coat; an [f]evil beast hath devoured him: Joseph is without doubt rent in pieces.

34 And Jacob [g]rent his clothes, and put sackcloth upon his loins, and mourned for his son many days.

35 And all his sons and all his daughters [h]rose up to comfort him; but he refused to be comforted; and he said, For [i]I will go down into the grave unto my son mourning. Thus his father wept for him.

36 And [k]the Midianites sold him into Egypt unto Potiphar, an †officer of Pharaoh's, and †‖captain of the guard.

6 Er marrieth Tamar. 13 She deceiveth Judah. 27 She beareth twins, Pharez and Zarah.

AND it came to pass at that time, that Judah went down from his brethren, and [a]turned in to a certain Adullamite, whose name was Hirah.

2 And Judah [b]saw there a daughter of a certain Canaanite, whose name was [c]Shuah; and he took her, and went in unto her.

3 And she conceived, and bare a son; and he called his name [d]Er.

4 And she conceived again, and bare a son; and she called his name [e]Onan.

5 And she yet again conceived, and bare a son; and called his name [f]Shelah: and he was at Chezib, when she bare him.

6 And Judah [g]took a wife for Er his first-born, whose name was Tamar.

7 And [h]Er, Judah's first-born, was wicked in the sight of the LORD; [i]and the LORD slew him.

8 And Judah said unto Onan, Go in unto [k]thy brother's wife, and marry her, and raise up seed to thy brother.

9 And Onan knew that the seed should not be

[k]his: and it came to pass, when he went in unto his brother's wife, that he spilled it on the ground, lest that he should give seed to his brother.

10 And the thing which he did †displeased the LORD: wherefore he slew [m]him also.

11 Then said Judah to Tamar his daughter-in-law, [n]Remain a widow at thy father's house, till Shelah my son be grown; for he said, Lest peradventure he die also as his brethren did. And Tamar went and dwelt [o]in her father's house.

12 And †in process of time, the daughter of Shuah, Judah's wife, died: and Judah [p]was comforted, and went up unto his sheep-shearers to Timnath, he and his friend Hirah the Adullamite.

13 And it was told Tamar, saying, Behold, thy father-in-law goeth up [q]to Timnath, to shear his sheep.

14 And she put her widow's garments off from her, and covered her with a vail, and wrapped herself, and [r]sat in †an open place, which is by the way to Timnath: for she saw [t]that Shelah was grown, and she was not given unto him to wife.

15 When Judah saw her, he thought her to be an harlot; because she had covered her face.

16 And he turned unto her by the way, and said, Go to, I pray thee, let me come in unto thee; (for he knew not that she was his daughter-in-law.) And she said, What wilt thou give me, that thou mayest come in unto me?

17 And he said, [u]I will send thee †a kid from the flock: and she said, [w]Wilt thou give me a pledge, till thou send it?

18 And he said, What pledge shall I give thee? And she said, [x]Thy signet, and thy bracelets, and thy staff that is in thine hand: and he gave it her, and came in unto her, and she conceived by him.

19 And she arose, and went away, and [y]laid by her vail from her, and put on the garments of her widowhood.

20 And Judah sent the kid by the hand of his friend the Adullamite, to receive his pledge from the woman's hand: but he found her not.

21 Then he asked the men of that place, saying, Where is the harlot that was ‖openly by the wayside? And they said, There was no harlot in this place.

22 And he returned to Judah, and said, I cannot find her; and also the men of the place said, that there was no harlot in this place.

23 And Judah said, Let her take it to her, lest we †be shamed: behold, I sent this kid, and thou hast not found her.

24 ¶And it came to pass, about three months after, that it was told Judah, saying, Tamar thy daughter-in-law hath [z]played the harlot; and also, behold, she is with child by whoredom. And Judah said, bring her forth, [a]and let her be burnt.

25 When she was brought forth, she sent to her father-in-law, saying, By the man whose these are, am I with child: and she said, [b]Discern, I pray thee, whose are these, [c]the signet, and bracelets, and staff.

26 And Judah [d]acknowledged them, and said, [e]She hath been more righteous than I; because that [f]I gave her not to Shelah my son: and he knew her again [g]no more.

27 ¶And it came to pass in the time of her travail, that, behold, twins were in her womb.

28 And it came to pass, when she travailed, that the one put out his hand; and the midwife took and bound upon his hand a scarlet thread, saying, This came out first.

29 And it came to pass, as he drew back his hand, that, behold, his brother came out; and she said, ‖How hast thou broken forth? this breach be upon thee: therefore his name was called ‖[h]Pharez.

30 And afterward came out his brother, that had the scarlet thread upon his hand; and his name was called Zarah.

1 Joseph advanced in Potiphar's house. 7 He resisteth his mistress's temptation. 20 He is cast into prison.

AND Joseph was brought down to Egypt: and [a]Potiphar, an officer of Pharaoh, captain of the guard, an Egyptian, [b]bought him of the hands of the Ishmaelites, which had brought him down thither.

2 And [c]the LORD was with Joseph, and he was a prosperous man: and he was in the house of his master the Egyptian.

3 And his master saw that the LORD was with him, and that the LORD [d]made all that he did to prosper in his hand.

4 And Joseph [e]found grace in his sight, and he served him: and he made him [f]overseer over his house, and all that he had he put into his hand.

5 And it came to pass from the time that he had made him overseer in his house, and over all that he had, that [g]the LORD blessed the Egyptian's house for Joseph's sake; and the blessing of the LORD was upon all that he had in the house, and in the field.

6 And he left all that he had in Joseph's hand; and he knew not aught he had, save the bread which he did eat. And Joseph [h]was a goodly person, and well-favoured.

7 ¶And it came to pass after these things, that his master's wife cast her eyes upon Joseph: and she said, [i]Lie with me.

8 But he refused, and said unto his master's wife,

1 The butler and baker of Pharaoh in prison. 5 He interpreteth their dreams. 23 The ingratitude of the butler.

AND it came to pass after these things, that the [a]butler of the king of Egypt and his baker had offended their lord the king of Egypt.

2 And Pharaoh was [b]wroth against two of his officers, against the chief of the butlers, and against the chief of the bakers.

3 [c]And he put them in ward in the house of the captain of the guard, into the prison, the place where Joseph was bound.

4 And the captain of the guard charged Joseph with them, and he served them; and they continued a season in ward.

5 ¶ And they dreamed a dream both of them, each man his dream in one night, each man according to the interpretation of his dream; the butler and the baker of the king of Egypt, which were bound in the prison.

6 And Joseph came in unto them in the morning, and looked upon them, and, behold, they were sad.

7 And he asked Pharaoh's officers that were with him in the ward of his lord's house, saying, Wherefore †look ye so sadly to-day?

8 And they said unto him, [d]We have dreamed a dream, and there is no interpreter of it. And Joseph said unto them, [e]Do not interpretations belong to God? tell me them, I pray you.

9 And the chief butler told his dream to Joseph, and said to him, In my dream, behold, a vine was before me;

10 And in the vine were three branches: and it was as though it budded, and her blossoms shot forth; and the clusters thereof brought forth ripe grapes:

11 And Pharaoh's cup was in my hand: and I took the grapes, and pressed them into Pharaoh's cup, and I gave the cup into Pharaoh's hand.

12 And Joseph said unto him, [f]This is the interpretation of it: The three branches [g]are three days:

13 Yet within three days shall Pharaoh [h]‖ lift up thy head, and restore thee unto thy place: and thou shalt deliver Pharaoh's cup into his hand, after the former manner when thou wast his butler.

14 But †[i]think on me when it shall be well with thee, and [k]shew kindness, I pray thee, unto me, and make mention of me unto Pharaoh, and bring me out of this house:

15 For indeed I was stolen away out of the land of the Hebrews: [l]and here also have I done nothing that they should put me into the dungeon.

17 And in the uppermost basket there was of all manner of † bake-meats for Pharaoh: and the birds did eat them out of the basket upon my head.

18 And Joseph answered, and said, [m] This is the interpretation thereof: The three baskets are three days:

19 [n] Yet within three days shall Pharaoh ‖ lift up thy head from off thee, and shall hang thee on a tree; and the birds shall eat thy flesh from off thee.

20 ¶ And it came to pass the third day, which was Pharaoh's [o] birth-day, that he [p] made a feast unto all his servants: and he [q] ‖ lifted up the head of the chief butler and of the chief baker among his servants.

21 And he [r] restored the chief butler unto his butlership again; and [s] he gave the cup into Pharaoh's hand:

22 But he [t] hanged the chief baker: as Joseph had interpreted to them.

23 Yet did not the chief butler remember Joseph, but [u] forgat him.

9 ¶ Then spake the chief butler unto Pharaoh, saying, I do remember my faults this day:

10 Pharaoh was [d] wroth with his servants, [e] and put me in ward in the captain of the guard's house, both me and the chief baker:

11 And [f] we dreamed a dream in one night, I and he: we dreamed each man according to the interpretation of his dream.

12 And there was there with us a young man, an Hebrew, [g] servant to the captain of the guard; and we told him, and he [h] interpreted to us our dreams; to each man according to his dream he did interpret.

13 And it came to pass, [i] as he interpreted to us, so it was: me he restored unto mine office, and him he hanged.

14 ¶ [k] Then Pharaoh sent and called Joseph, and they [l] † brought him hastily [m] out of the dungeon: and he shaved himself, and changed his raiment, and came in unto Pharaoh.

15 And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, I have dreamed a dream, and there is none that can interpret it: [n] and I have heard say of thee, that ‖ thou canst understand a dream to interpret it.

16 And Joseph answered Pharaoh, saying, [o] It is not in me: [p] God shall give Pharaoh an answer of peace.

17 And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, [q] In my dream, behold, I stood upon the bank of the river:

18 And, behold, there came up out of the river seven kine, fat-fleshed, and well-favoured; and they fed in a meadow:

19 And, behold, seven other kine came up after them, poor, and very ill-favoured, and lean-fleshed, such as I never saw in all the land of Egypt for badness:

20 And the lean and the ill-favoured kine did eat up the first seven fat kine:

21 And when they had † eaten them up, it could not be known that they had eaten them; but they were still ill-favoured, as at the beginning. So I awoke.

22 And I saw in my dream, and, behold, seven ears came up in one stalk, full and good:

23 And, behold, seven ears, ‖ withered, thin, and blasted with the east wind, sprung up after them:

24 And the thin ears devoured the seven good ears: and [r] I told this unto the magicians; but there was none that could declare it to me.

25 ¶ And Joseph said unto Pharaoh, The dream of Pharaoh is one: [s] God hath shewed Pharaoh what he is about to do.

26 The seven good kine are seven years; and the seven good ears are seven years: the dream is one

27 And the seven thin and ill-favoured kine that came up after them are seven years; and the seven empty ears blasted with the east wind shall be [t]seven years of famine.

28 [u]This is the thing which I have spoken unto Pharaoh: what God is about to do he sheweth unto Pharaoh.

29 Behold, there come [x]seven years of great plenty throughout all the land of Egypt:

30 And there shall [y]arise after them seven years of famine; and all the plenty shall be forgotten in the land of Egypt; and the famine [z]shall consume the land;

31 And the plenty shall not be known in the land by reason of that famine following: for it shall be very †grievous.

32 And for that the dream was doubled unto Pharaoh twice; it is because the [a]thing is ‖established by God, and God will shortly bring it to pass.

33 Now therefore let Pharaoh look out a man discreet and wise, and set him over the land of Egypt.

34 Let Pharaoh do this, and let him appoint ‖officers over the land, and [b]take up the fifth part of the land of Egypt in the seven plenteous years.

35 And [c]let them gather all the food of those good years that come, and lay up corn under the hand of Pharaoh, and let them keep food in the cities.

36 And that food shall be for store to the land against the seven years of famine, which shall be in the land of Egypt; that the land †[d]perish not through the famine.

37 ¶And [e]the thing was good in the eyes of Pharaoh, and in the eyes of all his servants.

38 And Pharaoh said unto his servants, Can we find such a one as this is, a man [f]in whom the spirit of God is?

39 And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, Forasmuch as God hath shewed thee all this, there is none so discreet and wise as thou art:

40 [g]Thou shalt be over my house, and according unto thy word shall all my people †be ruled: only in the throne will I be greater than thou.

41 And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, See, I have [h]set thee over all the land of Egypt.

42 And Pharaoh [i]took off his ring from his hand, and put it upon Joseph's hand, and [k]arrayed him in vestures of ‖fine linen, [l]and put a gold chain about his neck;

43 And he made him to ride in the second chariot which he had: [m]and they cried before him, ‖†Bow the knee: and he made him ruler [n]over all the land of Egypt.

44 And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, I am Pharaoh, and without thee shall no man lift up his hand or foot in all the land of Egypt.

45 And Pharaoh called Joseph's name ‖Zaphnath-paaneah; and he gave him to wife Asenath the daughter of Poti-pherah ‖priest of On. And Joseph went out over all the land of Egypt.

46 ¶And Joseph was thirty years old when he [o]stood before Pharaoh king of Egypt. And Joseph went out from the presence of Pharaoh, and went throughout all the land of Egypt.

47 And in the seven plenteous years the earth brought forth by handfuls.

48 And he gathered up all the food of the seven years, which were in the land of Egypt, and laid up the food in the cities: the food of the field, which was round about every city, laid he up in the same.

49 And Joseph gathered corn [p]as the sand of the sea, very much, until he left numbering; for it was without number.

50 [q]And unto Joseph were born two sons before the years of famine came: which Asenath the daughter of Poti-pherah ‖priest of On bare unto him.

51 And Joseph called the name of the first-born ‖Manasseh: For God, said he, hath made me forget all my toil, and all my father's house.

52 And the name of the second called he ‖Ephraim: For God hath caused me to be [r]fruitful in the land of my affliction.

53 ¶And the seven years of plenteousness, that was in the land of Egypt, were ended.

54 [s]And the seven years of dearth began to come, [t]according as Joseph had said: and the dearth was in all lands; but in all the land of Egypt there was bread.

55 And when all the land of Egypt was famished, the people cried to Pharaoh for bread: and Pharaoh said unto all the Egyptians, Go unto Joseph; what he saith to you, do.

56 And the famine was over all the face of the earth: and Joseph opened †all the storehouses, and [u]sold unto the Egyptians; and the famine waxed sore in the land of Egypt.

57 [x]And all countries came into Egypt to Joseph for to buy corn; because that the famine was so sore in all lands.

for us from thence; that we may [b]live, and not die.

3 ¶ And Joseph's ten brethren went down to buy corn in Egypt.

4 But Benjamin, Joseph's brother, Jacob sent not with his brethren: for he said, [c]Lest peradventure mischief befall him.

5 And the sons of Israel came to buy corn among those that came: for the famine was [d]in the land of Canaan.

6 And Joseph was the governor [e]over the land, and he it was that sold to all the people of the land: and Joseph's brethren came, and [f]bowed down themselves before him with their faces to the earth.

7 And Joseph saw his brethren, and he knew them, but made himself strange unto them, and spake †roughly unto them; and he said unto them, Whence come ye? And they said, From the land of Canaan to buy food.

8 And Joseph knew his brethren, but they knew not him.

9 And Joseph [g]remembered the dreams which he dreamed of them, and said unto them, Ye are spies; to see the nakedness of the land ye are come.

10 And they said unto him, Nay, my lord, but to buy food are thy servants come.

11 We are all one man's sons; we are true men; thy servants are no spies.

12 And he said unto them, Nay, but to see the nakedness of the land ye are come.

13 And they said, Thy servants are twelve brethren, the sons of one man in the land of Canaan: and behold, the youngest is this day with our father, and one [h]is not.

14 And Joseph said unto them, That is it that I spake unto you, saying, Ye are spies:

15 Hereby ye shall be proved: [i]By the life of Pharaoh ye shall not go forth hence, except your youngest brother come hither.

16 Send one of you, and let him fetch your brother, and ye shall be †kept in prison, that your words may be proved, whether there be any truth in you: or else, by the life of Pharaoh, surely ye are spies.

17 And he †put them all together into ward three days.

18 And Joseph said unto them the third day, This do, and live; [k]for I fear God:

19 If ye be true men, let one of your brethren be bound in the house of your prison: go ye, carry corn for the famine of your houses:

20 But [l]bring your youngest brother unto me; so shall your words be verified, and ye shall not die. And they did so.

21 ¶ And they said one to another, [m]We are verily guilty concerning our brother, in that we saw the anguish of his soul, when he besought us, and we would not hear; [n]therefore is this distress come upon us.

22 And Reuben answered them, saying, [o]Spake I not unto you, saying, Do not sin against the child; and ye would not hear? therefore, behold, also his blood is [p]required.

23 And they knew not that Joseph understood them; for †he spake unto them by an interpreter.

24 And he turned himself about from them, and wept; and returned to them again, and communed with them, and took from them Simeon, and bound him before their eyes.

25 ¶ Then Joseph commanded to fill their sacks with corn, and to restore every man's money into his sack, and to give them provision for the way: and [q]thus did he unto them.

26 And they laded their asses with the corn, and departed thence.

27 And as [r]one of them opened his sack to give his ass provender in the inn, he espied his money: for, behold, it was in his sack's mouth.

28 And he said unto his brethren, My money is restored; and, lo, it is even in my sack: and their heart †failed them, and they were afraid, saying one to another, What is this that God hath done unto us?

29 ¶ And they came unto Jacob their father unto the land of Canaan, and told him all that befell unto them, saying,

30 The man, who is the lord of the land, [s]spake †roughly to us, and took us for spies of the country.

31 And we said unto him, We are true men; we are no spies:

32 We be twelve brethren, sons of our father: one is not, and the youngest is this day with our father in the land of Canaan.

33 And the man, the lord of the country, said unto us, [t]Hereby shall I know that ye are true men: leave one of your brethren here with me, and take food for the famine of your households, and be gone:

34 And bring your youngest brother unto me: then shall I know that ye are no spies, but that ye are true men: so will I deliver you your brother, and ye shall [u]traffick in the land.

35 ¶ And it came to pass as they emptied their sacks, that, behold, [x]every man's bundle of money was in his sack; and when both they and their father saw the bundles of money, they were afraid.

36 And Jacob their father said unto them, Me have ye [y]bereaved of my children: Joseph is not,

CHAP. XLIII.

1 Jacob is hardly persuaded to send Benjamin. 15 Joseph entertaineth his brethren. 31 He maketh them a feast.

AND the famine was [a]sore in the land.

2 And it came to pass, when they had eaten up the corn which they had brought out of Egypt, their father said unto them, Go again, buy us a little food.

3 And Judah spake unto him, saying, The man †did solemnly protest unto us, saying, Ye shall not see my face, except your [b]brother be with you.

4 If thou wilt send our brother with us, we will go down and buy thee food:

5 But if thou wilt not send him, we will not go down: for the man said unto us, Ye shall not see my face, except your brother be with you.

6 And Israel said, Wherefore dealt ye so ill with me, as to tell the man whether ye had yet a brother?

7 And they said, The man †asked us straitly of our state, and of our kindred, saying, Is your father yet alive? have ye another brother? and we told him according to the †tenor of these words: †could we certainly know that he would say, Bring your brother down?

8 And Judah said unto Israel his father, Send the lad with me, and we will arise and go; that we may live, and not die, both we, and thou, and also our little ones.

9 I will be surety for him; of my hand shalt thou require him: [c]if I bring him not unto thee, and set him before thee, then let me bear the blame for ever:

10 For except we had lingered, surely now we had returned ‖this second time.

11 And their father Israel said unto them, If it must be so now, do this; take of the best fruits in the land in your vessels, and [d]carry down the man a present, a little [e]balm, and a little honey, spices, and myrrh, nuts, and almonds:

12 And take double money in your hand; and the money [f]that was brought again in the mouth of your sacks, carry it again in your hand; peradventure it was an oversight:

13 Take also your brother, and arise, go again unto the man:

14 And God Almighty give you mercy before the man, that he may send away your other brother, and Benjamin. [g]‖If I be bereaved of my children, I am bereaved.

15 ¶And the men took that present, and they took double money in their hand, and Benjamin; and rose up, and went down to Egypt, and stood before Joseph.

16 And when Joseph saw Benjamin with them, he said to the [h]ruler of his house, Bring these men home, and †slay, and make ready; for these men shall †dine with me at noon.

17 And the man did as Joseph bade; and the man brought the men into Joseph's house.

18 And the men were afraid, because they were brought into Joseph's house; and they said, Because of the money that was returned in our sacks at the first time, are we brought in; that he may †seek occasion against us, and fall upon us, and take us for bondmen, and our asses.

19 And they came near to the steward of Joseph's house, and they communed with him at the door of the house,

20 And said, O sir, [i]†we came indeed down at the first time to buy food:

21 And [k]it came to pass, when we came to the inn, that we opened our sacks, and, behold, every man's money was in the mouth of his sack, our money in full weight: and we have brought it again in our hand.

22 And other money have we brought down in our hands to buy food: we cannot tell who put our money in our sacks.

23 And he said, Peace be to you, fear not: your God, and the God of your father, hath given you treasure in your sacks: †I had your money. And he brought Simeon out unto them.

24 And the man brought the men into Joseph's house, and [l]gave them water, and they washed their feet; and he gave their asses provender.

25 And they made ready the present against Joseph came at noon: for they heard that they should eat bread there.

26 ¶And when Joseph came home, they brought him the present which was in their hand into the house, and [m]bowed themselves to him to the earth.

27 And he asked them of their †welfare, and said, †Is your father well, the old man [n]of whom ye spake? Is he yet alive?

28 And they answered, Thy servant our father is in good health, he is yet alive. [o]And they bowed down their heads, and made obeisance.

o ch. 37. 7, 10.

29 And he lifted up his eyes, and saw his brother Benjamin, [p] his mother's son, and said, Is this your younger brother, [q] of whom ye spake unto me? And he said, God be gracious unto thee, my son.

30 And Joseph made haste; for [r] his bowels did yearn upon his brother: and he sought where to weep; and he entered into his chamber, and [s] wept there.

31 And he washed his face, and went out, and refrained himself, and said, Set on [t] bread.

32 And they set on for him by himself, and for them by themselves, and for the Egyptians, which did eat with him, by themselves: because the Egyptians might not eat bread with the Hebrews; for that is [u] an abomination unto the Egyptians.

33 And they sat before him, the first-born according to his birth-right, and the youngest according to his youth: and the men marvelled one at another.

34 And he took and sent messes unto them from before him: but Benjamin's mess was [x] five times so much as any of theirs. And they drank, and † were merry with him.

CHAP. XLIV.

1 Joseph's policy to stay his brethren. 14 Judah's humble supplication to Joseph.

AND he commanded † the steward of his house, saying, Fill the men's sacks with food, as much as they can carry, and put every man's money in his sack's mouth.

2 And put my cup, the silver cup, in the sack's mouth of the youngest, and his corn-money. And he did according to the word that Joseph had spoken.

3 As soon as the morning was light, the men were sent away, they, and their asses.

4 And when they were gone out of the city, and not yet far off, Joseph said unto his steward, Up, follow after the men; and when thou dost overtake them, say unto them, Wherefore have ye rewarded evil for good?

5 Is not this it in which my lord drinketh, and whereby indeed he ‖ divineth? ye have done evil in so doing.

6 ¶ And he overtook them, and he spake unto them these same words.

7 And they said unto him, Wherefore saith my lord these words? God forbid that thy servants should do according to this thing:

8 Behold, [a] the money which we found in our sacks' mouths, we brought again unto thee out of the land of Canaan: how then should we steal out of thy lord's house silver or gold?

9 With whomsoever of thy servants it be found, [b] both let him die, and we also will be my lord's bond-men.

10 And he said, Now also let it be according unto your words: he with whom it is found shall be my servant; and ye shall be blameless.

11 Then they speedily took down every man his sack to the ground, and opened every man his sack.

12 And he searched, and began at the eldest, and left at the youngest: and the cup was found in Benjamin's sack.

13 Then they [c] rent their clothes, and laded every man his ass, and returned to the city.

14 ¶ And Judah and his brethren came to Joseph's house; for he was yet there: and they [d] fell before him on the ground.

15 And Joseph said unto them, What deed is this that ye have done? wot ye not that such a man as I can certainly ‖ divine?

16 And Judah said, What shall we say unto my lord? what shall we speak? or how shall we clear ourselves? God hath found out the iniquity of thy servants: behold [e] we are my lord's servants, both we, and he also with whom the cup is found.

17 And he said, [f] God forbid that I should do so: but the man in whose hand the cup is found, he shall be my servant; and as for you, get you up in peace unto your father.

18 ¶ Then Judah came near unto him, and said, O my lord, let thy servant, I pray thee, speak a word in my lord's ears, and [g] let not thine anger burn against thy servant: for thou art even as Pharaoh.

19 My lord asked his servants, saying, Have ye a father, or a brother?

20 And we said unto my lord, We have a father, an old man, and [h] a child of his old age, a little one: and his brother is dead, and he alone is left of his mother, and his father loveth him.

21 And thou saidst unto thy servants, [i] Bring him down unto me, that I may set mine eyes upon him.

22 And we said unto my lord, The lad cannot leave his father: for if he should leave his father, his father would die.

23 And thou saidst unto thy servants, [k] Except your youngest brother come down with you, ye shall see my face no more.

24 And it came to pass, when we came up unto thy servant my father, we told him the words of my lord.

25 And [l] our father said, Go again, and buy us a little food.

26 And we said, We cannot go down: if our youngest brother be with us, then will we go down; for we may not see the man's face, except our youngest brother be with us.

27 And thy servant my father said unto us, Ye know that [m]my wife bare me two sons:

28 And the one went out from me, and I said, [n]Surely he is torn in pieces; and I saw him not since:

29 And if ye [o]take this also from me, and mischief befall him, ye shall bring down my gray hairs with sorrow to the grave.

30 Now therefore when I come to thy servant my father, and the lad be not with us; (seeing that [p]his life is bound up in the lad's life;)

31 It shall come to pass, when he seeth that the lad is not with us, that he will die: and thy servants shall bring down the gray hairs of thy servant our father with sorrow to the grave.

32 For thy servant became surety for the lad unto my father, saying, [q]If I bring him not unto thee, then I shall bear the blame to my father for ever.

33 Now therefore, I pray thee, [r]let thy servant abide instead of the lad a bondman to my lord; and let the lad go up with his brethren.

CHAP. XLV.

1 Joseph maketh himself known to his brethren. 9 He sendeth for his father. 25 Jacob is revived with the news.

THEN Joseph could not refrain himself before all them that stood by him; and he cried, Cause every man to go out from me: and there stood no man with him, while Joseph made himself known unto his brethren.

2 And he †wept aloud; and the Egyptians and the house of Pharaoh heard.

3 And Joseph said unto his brethren, [a]I am Joseph; doth my father yet live? And his brethren could not answer him; for they were ‖troubled at his presence.

4 And Joseph said unto his brethren, Come near to me, I pray you: and they came near: and he said, I am Joseph your brother, [b]whom ye sold into Egypt.

5 Now therefore [c]be not grieved, †nor angry with yourselves, that ye sold me hither: [d]for God did send me before you to preserve life.

6 For these two years hath the famine been in the land: and yet there are five years, in the which there shall neither be earing nor harvest.

7 And God sent me before you, †to preserve you a posterity in the earth, and to save your lives by a great deliverance.

8 So now it was not you that sent me hither, but God: and he hath made me [e]a father to Pharaoh, and lord of all his house, and a ruler throughout all the land of Egypt.

9 Haste ye, and go up to my father, and say unto him, Thus saith thy son Joseph, God hath made me lord of all Egypt; come down unto me, tarry not:

10 And [f]thou shalt dwell in the land of Goshen, and thou shalt be near unto me, thou, and thy children, and thy children's children, and thy flocks, and thy herds, and all that thou hast:

11 And there will I nourish thee, (for yet there are five years of famine;) lest thou, and thy household, and all that thou hast, come to poverty.

12 And, behold, your eyes see, and the eyes of my brother Benjamin, that it is [g]my mouth that speaketh unto you.

13 And ye shall tell my father of all my glory in Egypt, and of all that ye have seen: and ye shall haste, and [h]bring down my father hither.

14 And he fell upon his brother Benjamin's neck, and wept; and Benjamin wept upon his neck.

15 Moreover, he kissed all his brethren, and wept upon them: and after that his brethren talked with him.

16 ¶And the fame thereof was heard in Pharaoh's house, saying, Joseph's brethren are come: and it †pleased Pharaoh well, and his servants.

17 And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, Say unto thy brethren, This do ye; lade your beasts, and go, get you unto the land of Canaan;

18 And take your father, and your households, and come unto me: and I will give you the good of the land of Egypt, and ye shall eat [i]the fat of the land.

19 Now thou art commanded, this do ye; take you wagons out of the land of Egypt for your little ones, and for your wives, and bring your father, and come.

20 Also †regard not your stuff: for the good of all the land of Egypt is yours.

21 And the children of Israel did so: and Joseph gave them wagons, according to the †commandment of Pharaoh, and gave them provision for the way.

22 To all of them he gave each man changes of raiment: but to Benjamin he gave three hundred pieces of silver, and [k]five changes of raiment.

23 And to his father he sent after this manner; ten asses †laden with the good things of Egypt, and ten she asses laden with corn and bread and meat for his father by the way.

24 So he sent his brethren away, and they departed: and he said unto them, See that ye fall not out by the way.

CHAP. XLVI.

1 Jacob is comforted by God at Beer-sheba. 5 Thence he with his company goeth into Egypt.

AND Israel took his journey with all that he had, and came to [a]Beer-sheba, and offered sacrifices [b]unto the God of his father Isaac.

2 And God spake unto Israel [c]in the visions of the night, and said, Jacob, Jacob! and he said, Here am I.

3 And he said, I am God, [d]the God of thy father: fear not to go down into Egypt; for I will there [e]make of thee a great nation:

4 [f]I will go down with thee into Egypt; and I will also surely [g]bring thee up again: and [h]Joseph shall put his hand upon thine eyes.

5 And [i]Jacob rose up from Beer-sheba: and the sons of Israel carried Jacob their father, and their little ones, and their wives, in the wagons [k]which Pharaoh had sent to carry him.

6 And they took their cattle, and their goods, which they had gotten in the land of Canaan, and came into Egypt, [l]Jacob, and all his seed with him;

7 His sons, and his sons' sons with him, his daughters, and his sons' daughters, and all his seed brought he with him into Egypt.

8 ¶And [m]these are the names of the children of Israel, which came into Egypt, Jacob and his sons: [n]Reuben, Jacob's first-born.

9 And the sons of Reuben; Hanoch, and Phallu, and Hezron, and Carmi.

10 ¶And [o]the sons of Simeon; ‖Jemuel, and Jamin, and Ohad, and ‖Jachin, and ‖Zohah, and Shaul the son of a Canaanitish woman.

11 ¶And the sons of [p]Levi; ‖Gershon, Kohath, and Merari.

12 ¶And the sons of [q]Judah; Er, and Onan, and Shelah, and Pharez, and Zarah: but [r]Er and Onan died in the land of Canaan. And [s]the sons of Pharez were Hezron, and Hamul.

13 ¶[t]And the sons of Issachar; Tola, and ‖Phuvah, and Job, and Shimron.

14 ¶And the sons of Zebulun; Sered, and Elon, and Jahleel.

15 These be the sons of Leah, which she bare unto Jacob in Padan-aram, with his daughter Dinah: all the souls of his sons and his daughters were thirty and three.

16 ¶And the sons of Gad; [u]Ziphion, and Haggi, Shuni, and ‖Ezbon, Eri, and ‖Arodi, and Areli.

17 ¶[x]And the sons of Asher; Jimnah, and Ishuah, and Isui, and Beriah, and Serah their sister. And the sons of Beriah; Heber, and Malchiel.

18 [y]These are the sons of Zilpah, [z]whom Laban gave to Leah his daughter: and these she bare unto Jacob, even sixteen souls.

19 The sons of Rachel, [a]Jacob's wife; Joseph, and Benjamin.

20 ¶[b]And unto Joseph in the land of Egypt were born Manasseh and Ephraim, which Asenath the daughter of Poti-pherah, ‖priest of On, bare unto him.

21 ¶[c]And the sons of Benjamin were Belah, and Becher, and Ashbel, Gera, and Naaman, [d]Ehi, and Rosh, [e]Muppim, and ‖Huppim, and Ard.

22 These are the sons of Rachel, which were born to Jacob; all the souls were fourteen.

23 ¶[f]And the sons of Dan; ‖Hushim.

24 ¶[g]And the sons of Naphtali; Jahzeel, and Guni, and Jezer, and Shillem.

25 [h]These are the sons of Bilhah, [i]which Laban gave unto Rachel his daughter, and she bare these unto Jacob: all the souls were seven.

26 [k]All the souls that came with Jacob into Egypt, which came out of his †loins, besides Jacob's sons' wives, all the souls were threescore and six;

27 And the sons of Joseph, which were born him in Egypt, were two souls: [l]all the souls of the house of Jacob, which came into Egypt, were threescore and ten.

28 ¶And he sent Judah before him unto Joseph, [m]to direct his face unto Goshen; and they came [n]into the land of Goshen.

29 And Joseph made ready his chariot, and went up to meet Israel his father, to Goshen; and presented himself unto him: and he [o]fell on his neck, and wept on his neck a good while.

30 And Israel said unto Joseph, [p]Now let me die, since I have seen thy face, because thou art yet alive.

31 And Joseph said unto his brethren, and unto his father's house, [q]I will go up, and shew Pharaoh, and say unto him, My brethren, and my father's house, which were in the land of Canaan, are come unto me:

32 And the men are shepherds, for †their trade

CHAP. XLVII.

2 Joseph presenteth five of his brethren, and his father, before Pharaoh. 28 Jacob's age. 29 He sweareth Joseph to bury him with his fathers.

THEN Joseph [a] came and told Pharaoh, and said, My father and my brethren, and their flocks, and their herds, and all that they have, are come out of the land of Canaan; and, behold, they are in [b] the land of Goshen.

2 And he took some of his brethren, even five men, and [c] presented them unto Pharaoh.

3 And Pharaoh said unto his brethren, [d] What is your occupation? And they said unto Pharaoh, [e] Thy servants are shepherds, both we, and also our fathers.

4 They said moreover unto Pharaoh, [f] For to sojourn in the land are we come: for thy servants have no pasture for their flocks, [g] for the famine is sore in the land of Canaan: now therefore, we pray thee, let thy servants [h] dwell in the land of Goshen.

5 And Pharaoh spake unto Joseph, saying, Thy father and thy brethren are come unto thee:

6 [i] The land of Egypt is before thee; in the best of the land make thy father and brethren to dwell; [k] in the land of Goshen let them dwell: and if thou knowest any men of activity among them, then make them rulers over my cattle.

7 And Joseph brought in Jacob his father, and set him before Pharaoh: and Jacob blessed Pharaoh.

8 And Pharaoh said unto Jacob, †How old art thou?

9 And Jacob said unto Pharaoh, [l] The days of the years of my pilgrimage are an hundred and thirty years: [m] few and evil have the days of the years of my life been, and [n] have not attained unto the days of the years of the life of my fathers in the days of their pilgrimage.

10 And Jacob [o] blessed Pharaoh, and went out from before Pharaoh.

11 ¶ And Joseph placed his father and his brethren, and gave them a possession in the land of Egypt, in the best of the land, in the land of [p] Rameses, [q] as Pharaoh had commanded.

12 And Joseph nourished his father, and his brethren, and all his father's household, with bread ‖ †according to their families.

13 ¶ And there was no bread in all the land; for the famine was very sore, [r] so that the land of Egypt, and all the land of Canaan, fainted by reason of the famine.

14 [s] And Joseph gathered up all the money that was found in the land of Egypt, and in the land of Canaan, for the corn which they bought: and Joseph brought the money into Pharaoh's house.

15 And when money failed in the land of Egypt, and in the land of Canaan, all the Egyptians came unto Joseph, and said, Give us bread: for [t] why should we die in thy presence? for the money faileth.

16 And Joseph said, Give your cattle; and I will give you for your cattle, if money fail.

17 And they brought their cattle unto Joseph: and Joseph gave them bread in exchange for horses, and for the flocks, and for the cattle of the herds, and for the asses; and he †fed them with bread, for all their cattle, for that year.

18 When that year was ended, they came unto him the second year, and said unto him, We will not hide it from my lord, how that our money is spent; my lord also hath our herds of cattle: there is not aught left in the sight of my lord, but our bodies and our lands:

19 Wherefore shall we die before thine eyes, both we and our land? buy us and our land for bread, and we and our land will be servants unto Pharaoh: and give us seed, that we may live, and not die, that the land be not desolate.

20 And Joseph bought all the land of Egypt for Pharaoh; for the Egyptians sold every man his field, because the famine prevailed over them: so the land became Pharaoh's.

21 And as for the people, he removed them to cities from one end of the borders of Egypt even to the other end thereof.

22 [u] Only the land of the ‖priests bought he not; for the priests had a portion assigned them of Pharaoh, and did eat their portion which Pharaoh gave them: wherefore they sold not their lands.

23 Then Joseph said unto the people, Behold, I have bought you this day and your land for Pharaoh: lo, here is seed for you, and ye shall sow the land.

24 And it shall come to pass in the increase, that ye shall give the fifth part unto Pharaoh, and four parts shall be your own, for seed of the field, and for your food, and for them of your households, and for food for your little ones.

25 And they said, Thou hast saved our lives: [x] let us find grace in the sight of my lord, and we will be Pharaoh's servants.

31 And he said, Swear unto me: and he sware unto him. And [h] Israel bowed himself upon the bed's head.

CHAP. XLVIII.

1 Joseph with his sons visiteth his sick father. 2 Jacob strengtheneth himself to bless them. 3 He repeateth the promise. 21 He prophesieth their return to Canaan.

AND it came to pass after these things, that one told Joseph, Behold, thy father is sick: and he took with him his two sons, Manasseh and Ephraim.

2 And one told Jacob, and said, Behold, thy son Joseph cometh unto thee: and Israel strengthened himself, and sat upon the bed

3 And Jacob said unto Joseph, God Almighty appeared unto me at [a] Luz in the land of Canaan, and blessed me,

4 And said unto me, Behold, I will make thee fruitful, and multiply thee, and I will make of thee a multitude of people; and will give this land to thy seed after thee, [b] for an everlasting possession.

5 ¶ And now, thy [c] two sons, Ephraim and Manasseh, which were born unto thee in the land of Egypt, before I came unto thee into Egypt, are mine: as Reuben and Simeon, they shall be mine.

6 And thy issue, which thou begettest after them, shall be thine, and shall be called after the name of their brethren in their inheritance.

7 And as for me, when I came from Padan, [d] Rachel died by me in the land of Canaan, in the way, when yet there was but a little way to come unto Ephrath: and I buried her there in the way of Ephrath, the same is Beth-lehem.

8 And Israel beheld Joseph's sons, and said, Who are these?

9 And Joseph said unto his father, [e] They are my sons, whom God hath given me in this place. And he said, Bring them, I pray thee, unto me, and [f] I will bless them.

10 (Now [g] the eyes of Israel were † dim for age, so that he could not see:) and he brought them near unto him; and [h] he kissed them, and embraced them.

11 And Israel said unto Joseph, [i] I had not thought to see thy face: and lo, God hath shewed me also thy seed.

12 And Joseph brought them out from between his knees, and he bowed himself with his face to the earth.

13 And Joseph took them both, Ephraim in his right hand toward Israel's left hand, and Manasseh in his left hand toward Israel's right hand, and brought them near unto him.

14 And Israel stretched out his right hand, and laid it upon Ephraim's head, who was the younger, and his left hand upon Manasseh's head, [k] guiding his hands wittingly; for Manasseh was the firstborn.

15 ¶ And [l] he blessed Joseph, and said, God, [m] before whom my fathers Abraham and Isaac did walk, the God which fed me all my life long unto this day,

16 The Angel [n] which redeemed me from all evil, bless the lads; and let [o] my name be named on them, and the name of my fathers Abraham and Isaac: and let them † grow into a multitude in the midst of the earth.

17 And when Joseph saw that his father [p] laid his right hand upon the head of Ephraim, it ‖ displeased him: and he held up his father's hand, to remove it from Ephraim's head unto Manasseh's head.

18 And Joseph said unto his father, Not so, my father: for this is the first-born; put thy right hand upon his head.

19 And his father refused, and said, [q] I know it, my son, I know it: he also shall become a people, and he also shall be great: but truly [r] his younger brother shall be greater than he, and his seed shall become a † multitude of nations.

20 And he blessed them that day, saying, [s] In thee shall Israel bless, saying, God make thee as Ephraim and as Manasseh: and he set Ephraim before Manasseh.

21 And Israel said unto Joseph, Behold, I die; but [t] God shall be with you, and bring you again unto the land of your fathers.

22 Moreover [u] I have given to thee one portion above thy brethren, which I took out of the hand [x] of the Amorite with my sword and with my bow.

CHAP. XLIX.

1 Jacob calleth his sons together: 3 his speech to Reuben; 4 Simeon and Levi; 8 Judah; 13 Zebulun, &c. 28 He chargeth them concerning his burial. 33 His death.

AND Jacob called unto his sons, and said, Gather yourselves together, that I may [a]tell you that which shall befall you [b]in the last days.

2 Gather yourselves together, and hear, ye sons of Jacob; and [c]hearken unto Israel your father.

3 ¶ Reuben, thou art [d]my first-born, my might, [e]and the beginning of my strength, the excellency of dignity, and the excellency of power:

4 Unstable as water, †[f]thou shalt not excel; because thou [g]wentest up to thy father's bed; then defiledst thou it: ‖ he went up to my couch.

5 ¶ [h]Simeon and Levi are [i]brethren; ‖ [k]instruments of cruelty are in their habitations.

6 O my soul, [l]come not thou into their secret; [m]unto their assembly, [n]mine honour, be not thou united! for [o]in their anger they slew a man, and in their self-will they ‖ digged down a wall.

7 Cursed be their anger, for it was fierce: and their wrath, for it was cruel: [p]I will divide them in Jacob, and scatter them in Israel.

8 ¶ [q]Judah, thou art he whom thy brethren shall praise; [r]thy hand shall be in the neck of thine enemies; [s]thy father's children shall bow down before thee.

9 Judah is [t]a lion's whelp; from the prey, my son, thou art gone up: [u]he stooped down, he couched as a lion, and as an old lion: who shall rouse him up?

10 [x]The sceptre shall not depart from Judah, nor [y]a lawgiver [z]from between his feet, [a]until Shiloh come: [b]and unto him shall the gathering of the people be.

11 [c]Binding his foal unto the vine, and his ass's colt unto the choice vine; he washed his garments in wine, and his clothes in the blood of grapes:

12 His [d]eyes shall be red with wine, and his teeth white with milk.

13 ¶ [e]Zebulun shall dwell at the haven of the sea; and he shall be for an haven of ships; and his border shall be unto Zidon.

14 ¶ Issachar is a strong ass, couching down between two burdens:

15 And he saw that rest was good, and the land that it was pleasant; and bowed [f]his shoulder to bear, and became a servant unto tribute.

16 ¶ [g]Dan shall judge his people, as one of the tribes of Israel.

17 [h]Dan shall be a serpent by the way, †an adder in the path, that biteth the horse-heels, so that his rider shall fall backward.

18 [i]I have waited for thy salvation, O LORD!

19 ¶ [k]Gad, a troop shall overcome him: but he shall overcome at the last.

20 ¶ Out of Asher his bread shall be fat, and he shall yield royal dainties.

21 ¶ [m]Naphtali is a hind let loose: he giveth goodly words.

22 ¶ Joseph is a fruitful bough, even a fruitful bough by a well, whose †branches run over the wall:

23 The archers have [n]sorely grieved him, and shot at him, and hated him:

24 But his [o]bow abode in strength, and the arms of his hands were made strong by the hands of [p]the mighty God of Jacob: ([q]from thence [r]is the Shepherd, [s]the stone of Israel:)

25 [t]Even by the God of thy father, who shall help thee, [u]and by the Almighty, [x]who shall bless thee with blessings of heaven above, blessings of the deep that lieth under, blessings of the breasts and of the womb:

26 The blessings of thy father have prevailed above the blessings of my progenitors, [y]unto the utmost bound of the everlasting hills; [z]they shall be on the head of Joseph, and on the crown of the head of him that was separate from his brethren.

27 ¶ Benjamin shall [a]raven as a wolf; in the morning he shall devour the prey, [b]and at night he shall divide the spoil.

28 ¶ All these are the twelve tribes of Israel: and this is it that their father spake unto them, and blessed them: every one according to his blessing he blessed them.

29 And he charged them, and said unto them, I [c]am to be gathered unto my people: [d]bury me with my fathers [e]in the cave that is in the field of Ephron the Hittite,

30 In the cave that is in the field of Machpelah which is before Mamre, in the land of Canaan, [f]which Abraham bought with the field of Ephron the Hittite, for a possession of a burying-place.

31 [g]There they buried Abraham and Sarah his wife; [h]there they buried Isaac and Rebekah his wife; and there I buried Leah.

32 The purchase of the field and of the cave that is therein, was from the children of Heth.

33 And when Jacob had made an end of commanding his sons, he gathered up his feet into the bed, and yielded up the ghost, and [i]was gathered unto his people.

CHAP. L.

1 The mourning for Jacob. 4 Joseph getteth leave of Pharaoh to go to bury him. 24 He prophesieth unto his brethren of their return. 25 He taketh an oath of them for his bones. 26 He dieth.

AND Joseph [a]fell upon his father's face, and [b]wept upon him, and kissed him.

2 And Joseph commanded his servants the physicians to [c]embalm his father: and the physicians embalmed Israel.

3 And forty days were fulfilled for him; for so are fulfilled the days of those which are embalmed: and the Egyptians † [d]mourned for him threescore and ten days.

4 And when the days of his mourning were past, Joseph spake unto [e]the house of Pharaoh, saying, If now I have found grace in your eyes, speak, I pray you, in the ears of Pharaoh, saying,

5 [f]My father made me swear, saying, Lo, I die: in my grave [g]which I have digged for me in the land of Canaan, there shalt thou bury me. Now therefore let me go up, I pray thee, and bury my father, and I will come again.

6 And Pharaoh said, Go up, and bury thy father, according as he made thee swear.

7 ¶ And Joseph went up to bury his father: and with him went up all the servants of Pharaoh, the elders of his house, and all the elders of the land of Egypt,

8 And all the house of Joseph, and his brethren, and his father's house: only their little ones, and their flocks, and their herds, they left in the land of Goshen.

9 And there went up with him both chariots and horsemen: and it was a very great company.

10 And they came to the threshing-floor of Atad, which is beyond Jordan, and there they [h]mourned with a great and very sore lamentation: [i]and he made a mourning for his father seven days.

11 And when the inhabitants of the land, the Canaanites, saw the mourning in the floor of Atad, they said, This is a grievous mourning to the Egyptians: wherefore the name of it was called ‖ Abelmizraim, which is beyond Jordan.

12 And his sons did unto him according as he commanded them:

13 For [k]his sons carried him into the land of Canaan, and buried him in the cave of the field of Machpelah, which Abraham [l]bought with the field for a possession of a burying-place of Ephron the Hittite, before Mamre.

14 ¶ And Joseph returned into Egypt, he and his brethren, and all that went up with him to bury his father, after he had buried his father.

15 ¶ And when Joseph's brethren saw that their father was dead, [m]they said, Joseph will peradventure hate us, and will certainly requite us all the evil which we did unto him.

16 And they †sent a messenger unto Joseph, saying, Thy father did command before he died, saying,

17 So shall ye say unto Joseph, Forgive, I pray thee now, the trespass of thy brethren, and their sin; [n]for they did unto thee evil: and now, we pray thee, forgive the trespass of the servants of [o]the God of thy father. And Joseph wept when they spake unto him.

18 And his brethren also went and [p]fell down before his face: and they said, Behold, we be thy servants.

19 And Joseph said unto them, [q]Fear not: [r]for am I in the place of God?

20 [s]But as for you, ye thought evil against me; but [t]God meant it unto good, to bring to pass, as it is this day, to save much people alive.

21 Now therefore fear ye not: [u]I will nourish you, and your little ones. And he comforted them, and spake †kindly unto them.

22 ¶ And Joseph dwelt in Egypt, he, and his father's house: and Joseph lived an hundred and ten years.

23 And Joseph saw Ephraim's children [x]of the third generation: [y]the children also of Machir, the son of Manasseh, [z]were †brought up upon Joseph's knees.

24 And Joseph said unto his brethren, I die; and [a]God will surely visit you, and bring you out of this land, unto the land [b]which he sware to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob.

25 And [c]Joseph took an oath of the children of Israel, saying, God will surely visit you, and ye shall carry up my bones from hence.

26 So Joseph died, being an hundred and ten years old: and they [d]embalmed him, and he was put in a coffin in Egypt.

THE SECOND BOOK OF MOSES,

CALLED

EXODUS.

CHAP. I.

1 The children of Israel multiply. 22 Pharaoh commandeth the male children to be cast into the river.

NOW [a]these are the names of the children of Israel, which came into Egypt; every man and his household came with Jacob.

2 Reuben, Simeon, Levi, and Judah,

3 Issachar, Zebulun, and Benjamin,

4 Dan, and Naphtali, Gad, and Asher.

5 And all the souls that came out of the †loins of Jacob were [b]seventy souls: for Joseph was in Egypt already.

6 And [c]Joseph died, and all his brethren, and all that generation.

7 ¶[d]And the children of Israel were fruitful, and increased abundantly, and multiplied, and waxed exceeding mighty; and the land was filled with them.

8 Now there [e]arose up a new king over Egypt, which knew not Joseph.

9 And he said unto his people, Behold, [f]the people of the children of Israel are more and mightier than we.

10 [g]Come on, let us [h]deal wisely with them; lest they multiply, and it come to pass, that, when there falleth out any war, they join also unto our enemies, and fight against us, and so get them up out of the land.

11 Therefore they did set over them task-masters, [i]to afflict them with their [k]burdens. And they built for Pharaoh treasure-cities, Pithom, [l]and Raamses.

12 †But the more they afflicted them, the more they multiplied and grew. And they were grieved because of the children of Israel.

13 And the Egyptians made the children of Israel to serve with rigour.

14 And they [m]made their lives bitter with hard bondage, [n]in mortar, and in brick, and in all manner of service in the field: all their service wherein they made them serve was with rigour.

15 ¶And the king of Egypt spake to the Hebrew midwives (of which the name of the one was Shiphrah, and the name of the other Puah;)

16 And he said, When ye do the office of a midwife to the Hebrew women, and see them upon the stools; if it be a son, then ye shall kill him; but if it be a daughter, then she shall live.

17 But the midwives [o]feared God, and did not [p]as the king of Egypt commanded them, but saved the men-children alive.

‖ That is, drawn out.

18 And the king of Egypt called for the midwives, and said unto them, Why have you done this thing, and have saved the men-children alive?

19 And [q]the midwives said unto Pharaoh, Because the Hebrew women are not as the Egyptian women; for they are lively, and are delivered ere the midwives come in unto them.

20 [r]Therefore God dealt well with the midwives: and the people multiplied, and waxed very mighty.

21 And it came to pass, because the midwives feared God, [s]that he made them houses.

22 And Pharaoh charged all his people, saying, [t]Every son that is born ye shall cast into the river, and every daughter ye shall save alive.

CHAP. II.

2 Moses is born, 3 and in an ark cast into the flags. 11 He slayeth an Egyptian. 21 He marrieth Zipporah.

AND there went a [a]man of the house of Levi, and took to wife a daughter of Levi.

2 And the woman conceived and bare a son: and [b]when she saw him that he was a goodly child, she hid him three months.

3 And when she could not longer hide him, she took for him an ark of bulrushes, and daubed it with slime and with pitch, and put the child therein; and she laid it on the flags by the river's brink.

4 [c]And his sister stood afar off, to wit what would be done to him.

5 ¶And the [d]daughter of Pharaoh came down to wash herself at the river; and her maidens walked along by the river's side: and when she saw the ark among the flags, she sent her maid to fetch it.

6 And when she had opened it, she saw the child: and, behold, the babe wept. And she had compassion on him, and said, This is one of the Hebrews' children.

7 Then said his sister to Pharaoh's daughter, Shall I go, and call to thee a nurse of the Hebrew women, that she may nurse the child for thee?

8 And Pharaoh's daughter said to her, Go. And the maid went and called the child's mother.

9 And Pharaoh's daughter said unto her, Take this child away and nurse it for me, and I will give thee thy wages. And the woman took the child and nursed it.

10 And the child grew, and she brought him unto Pharaoh's daughter, and he became [e]her son. And she called his name ‖Moses: and she said, Because I drew him out of the water.

11 ¶And it came to pass in those days, [f]when Moses was grown, that he went out unto his brethren, and looked on their [g]burdens: and he spied an Egyptian smiting an Hebrew, one of his brethren.

12 And he looked this way and that way, and when he saw that there was no man, he [h]slew the Egyptian, and hid him in the sand.

13 And [i]when he went out the second day, behold, two men of the Hebrews strove together: and he said to him that did the wrong, Wherefore smitest thou thy fellow?

14 And he said, [k]Who made thee †a prince and a judge over us? intendest thou to kill me, as thou killedst the Egyptian? And Moses feared, and said, Surely this thing is known.

15 Now when Pharaoh heard this thing, he sought to slay Moses. But [l]Moses fled from the face of Pharaoh, and dwelt in the land of Midian: and he sat down by [m]a well.

16 [n]Now the ‖priest of Midian had seven daughters: [o]and they came and drew water, and filled the troughs to water their father's flock.

17 And the shepherds came and drove them away: but Moses stood up and helped them, and [p]watered their flock.

18 And when they came to [q]Reuel their father, he said, How is it that ye are come so soon to-day?

19 And they said, An Egyptian delivered us out of the hand of the shepherds, and also drew water enough for us, and watered the flock.

20 And he said unto his daughters, And where is he? why is it that ye have left the man? call him, that he may [r]eat bread.

21 And Moses was content to dwell with the man: and he gave Moses, [s]Zipporah his daughter.

22 And she bare him a son, and he called his name ‖[t]Gershom; for he said, I have been [u]a stranger in a strange land.

23 ¶And it came to pass, [x]in process of time, that the king of Egypt died: and the children of Israel [y]sighed by reason of the bondage, and they cried; and [z]their cry came up unto God, by reason of the bondage.

24 And God [a]heard their groaning, and God [b]remembered his [c]covenant with Abraham, with Isaac, and with Jacob.

25 And God [d]looked upon the children of Israel, and God †[e]had respect unto them.

CHAP. III.

2 God appeareth to Moses in a burning bush. 9 He sendeth him to deliver Israel. 14 The name of God. 15 His message to Israel.

NOW Moses kept the flock of Jethro his father-in-law, [a]the priest of Midian: and he led the flock to the back side of the desert, and came to [b]the mountain of God, even to Horeb.

2 And [c]the Angel of the LORD appeared unto him in a flame of fire out of the midst of a bush; and he looked, and, behold, the bush burned with fire, and the bush was not consumed.

3 And Moses said, I will now turn aside, and see this [d]great sight, why the bush is not burnt.

4 And when the LORD saw that he turned aside to see, God called [e]unto him out of the midst of the bush, and said, Moses, Moses! And he said, Here am I.

5 And he said, Draw not nigh hither: [f]put off thy shoes from off thy feet; for the place whereon thou standest is holy ground.

6 Moreover he said, [g]I am the God of thy father, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob. And Moses hid his face; for [h]he was afraid to look upon God.

7 ¶And the LORD said, I have surely seen the affliction of my people which are in Egypt, and [i]have heard their cry [k]by reason of their taskmasters; for [l]I know their sorrows:

8 And [m]I am come down to [n]deliver them out of the hand of the Egyptians, and to bring them up out of that land, [o]unto a good land, and a large, unto a land [p]flowing with milk and honey; unto the place of [q]the Canaanites, and the Hittites, and the Amorites, and the Perizzites, and the Hivites, and the Jebusites.

9 Now therefore, behold, [r]the cry of the children of Israel is come unto me: and I have also seen the [s]oppression wherewith the Egyptians oppress them.

10 [t]Come now therefore, and I will send thee unto Pharaoh, that thou mayest bring forth my people, the children of Israel, out of Egypt.

11 ¶And Moses said unto God, [u]Who am I, that I should go unto Pharaoh, and that I should bring forth the children of Israel out of Egypt?

12 And he said, [x]Certainly I will be with thee; and this shall be a token unto thee, that I have sent thee: When thou hast brought forth the people out of Egypt, ye shall serve God upon this mountain.

13 And Moses said unto God, Behold, when I come unto the children of Israel, and shall say unto them, The God of your fathers hath sent me unto you; and they shall say to me, What is his name? what shall I say unto them?

14 And God said unto Moses, I AM THAT I AM: And he said, Thus shalt thou say unto the children of Israel, [y]I AM hath sent me unto you.

15 And God said moreover unto Moses, Thus shalt thou say unto the children of Israel, The LORD God of your fathers, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, hath sent me unto you: this is [z]my name for ever, and this is my memorial unto all generations.

16 Go, and [a]gather the elders of Israel together, and say unto them, The LORD God of your fathers, the God of Abraham, of Isaac, and of Jacob, appeared unto me, saying, [b]I have surely visited you, and seen that which is done to you in Egypt:

17 And I have said, [c]I will bring you up out of the affliction of Egypt, unto the land of the Canaanites, and the Hittites, and the Amorites, and the Perizzites, and the Hivites, and the Jebusites, unto a land flowing with milk and honey.

18 And [d]they shall hearken to thy voice; and [e]thou shalt come, thou and the elders of Israel, unto the king of Egypt, and ye shall say unto him, The LORD God of the Hebrews hath [f]met with us; and now let us go, we beseech thee, three days' journey into the wilderness, that we may sacrifice to the LORD our God.

19 ¶And I am sure that the king of Egypt [g]will not let you go, ‖ no, not by a mighty hand.

20 And I will [h]stretch out my hand, and smite Egypt with [i]all my wonders which I will do in the midst thereof: and [k]after that he will let you go.

21 And [l]I will give this people favour in the sight of the Egyptians: and it shall come to pass, that, when ye go, ye shall not go empty:

22 [m]But every woman shall borrow of her neighbour, and of her that sojourneth in her house, jewels of silver, and jewels of gold, and raiment: and ye shall put them upon your sons, and upon your daughters; and [n]ye shall spoil ‖ the Egyptians.

CHAP. IV.

1 Moses' rod is turned into a serpent. 14 Aaron is appointed to assist him.
21 God's message to Pharaoh. 24 Zipporah circumciseth her son.
27 Aaron is sent to meet Moses.

AND Moses answered and said, But, behold, they will not believe me, nor hearken unto my voice: for they will say, The LORD hath not appeared unto thee.

2 And the LORD said unto him, What is that in thine hand? And he said, [a]A rod.

3 And he said, Cast it on the ground. And he cast it on the ground, and it became a serpent: and Moses fled from before it.

4 And the LORD said unto Moses, Put forth thine hand, and take it by the tail. And he put forth his hand, and caught it, and it became a rod in his hand:

5 That they may [b]believe that [c]the LORD God of their fathers, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, hath appeared unto thee.

6 ¶And the LORD said furthermore unto him, Put now thine hand into thy bosom. And he put his hand into his bosom: and when he took it out, behold, his hand was leprous [d]as snow.

7 And he said, Put thine hand into thy bosom again. And he put his hand into his bosom again, and plucked it out of his bosom, and, behold, [e]it was turned again as his other flesh.

8 And it shall come to pass, if they will not believe thee, neither hearken to the voice of the first sign, that they will believe the voice of the latter sign.

9 And it shall come to pass, if they will not believe also these two signs, neither hearken unto thy voice, that thou shalt take of the water of the river, and pour it upon the dry land: and [f]the water which thou takest out of the river † shall become blood upon the dry land.

10 ¶And Moses said unto the LORD, O my LORD, I am not † eloquent, neither † heretofore, nor since thou hast spoken unto thy servant: but [g]I am slow of speech, and of a slow tongue.

11 And the LORD said unto him, [h]Who hath made man's mouth? or who maketh the dumb, or deaf, or the seeing, or the blind? have not I the LORD?

12 Now therefore go, and I will be [i]with thy mouth, and teach thee what thou shalt say.

13 And he said, O my Lord, [k]send, I pray thee, by the hand of him whom thou ‖ wilt send.

14 And the anger of the LORD was kindled against Moses, and he said, Is not Aaron the Levite thy brother? I know that he can speak well. And also, behold, [l]he cometh forth to meet thee: and when he seeth thee, he will be glad in his heart.

15 And [m]thou shalt speak unto him, and [n]put words in his mouth: and I will be with thy mouth, and with his mouth, and [o]will teach you what ye shall do.

16 And he shall be thy spokesman unto the people: and he shall be, even he shall be to thee instead of a mouth, and [p]thou shalt be to him instead of God.

17 And thou shalt take [q]this rod in thine hand, wherewith thou shalt do signs.

18 ¶And Moses went, and returned to † Jethro his father-in-law, and said unto him, Let me go, I pray thee, and return unto my brethren which are in Egypt, and see whether they be yet alive. And Jethro said to Moses, Go in peace.

19 And the LORD said unto Moses in Midian, Go, return into Egypt: for [r]all the men are dead which sought thy life.

20 And Moses took his wife, and his sons, and set them upon an ass, and he returned to the land of Egypt. And Moses took [s]the rod of God in his hand.

22 And thou shalt say unto Pharaoh, Thus saith the LORD, [x] Israel is my son, [y] even my first-born.

23 And I say unto thee, Let my son go, that he may serve me: and if thou refuse to let him go, behold, [z] I will slay thy son, even thy first-born.

24 ¶ And it came to pass by the way in the inn, that the LORD [a] met him, and sought to [b] kill him.

25 Then Zipporah took [c] a sharp ‖stone, and cut off the foreskin of her son, and † cast it at his feet, and said, Surely a bloody husband art thou to me.

27 ¶ And the LORD said to Aaron, Go into the wilderness [d] to meet Moses. And he went, and met him in [e] the mount of God, and kissed him.

28 And Moses [f] told Aaron all the words of the LORD who had sent him, and all the [g] signs which he had commanded him.

29 ¶ And Moses and Aaron [h] went, and gathered together all the elders of the children of Israel.

30 [i] And Aaron spake all the words which the LORD had spoken unto Moses, and did the signs in the sight of the people.

31 And the people [k] believed: and when they heard that the LORD had [l] visited the children of Israel, and that he [m] had looked upon their affliction, then [n] they bowed their heads and worshipped.

CHAP. V.

1 Pharaoh chideth Moses and Aaron for their message. 5 He increaseth the Israelites' task.

AND afterward Moses and Aaron went in, and told Pharaoh, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, Let my people go, that they may hold [a] a feast unto me in the wilderness.

2 And Pharaoh said, [b] Who is the LORD, that I should obey his voice to let Israel go? I know not the LORD, [c] neither will I let Israel go.

3 And they said, [d] The God of the Hebrews hath met with us: let us go, we pray thee, three days' journey into the desert, and sacrifice unto the LORD our God; lest he fall upon us with pestilence, or with the sword.

4 And the king of Egypt said unto them, Wherefore do ye, Moses and Aaron, let the people from their works? get you unto your [e] burdens.

5 And Pharaoh said, Behold, the people of the land now are [f] many, and ye make them rest from their burdens.

6 And Pharaoh commanded the same day the [g] taskmasters of the people, and their officers, saying,

7 Ye shall no more give the people straw to make brick, as heretofore: let them go and gather straw for themselves.

8 And the tale of the bricks which they did make heretofore, ye shall lay upon them; ye shall not diminish aught thereof: for they be idle; therefore they cry, saying, Let us go and sacrifice to our God.

9 † Let there more work be laid upon the men, that they may labour therein: and let them not regard vain words.

10 ¶ And the taskmasters of the people went out, and their officers, and they spake to the people, saying, Thus saith Pharaoh, I will not give you straw.

11 Go ye, get you straw where you can find it: yet not aught of your work shall be diminished.

12 So the people were scattered abroad throughout all the land of Egypt, to gather stubble instead of straw.

13 And the taskmasters hasted them, saying, Fulfil your works, your †daily tasks, as when there was straw.

14 And the officers of the children of Israel, which Pharaoh's taskmasters had set over them, were beaten, and demanded, Wherefore have ye not fulfilled your task in making brick, both yesterday and to-day, as heretofore?

15 ¶ Then the officers of the children of Israel came and cried unto Pharaoh, saying, Wherefore dealest thou thus with thy servants?

16 There is no straw given unto thy servants, and they say to us, Make brick: and behold, thy servants are beaten; but the fault is in thine own people.

17 But he said, Ye are idle, ye are idle: therefore ye say, Let us go, and do sacrifice to the LORD.

18 Go therefore now, and work: for there shall no straw be given you, yet shall ye deliver the tale of bricks.

19 And the officers of the children of Israel did see that they were in evil case, after it was said, Ye shall not minish aught from your bricks of your daily task.

20 ¶ And they met Moses and Aaron, who stood in the way, as they came forth from Pharaoh:

21 [h] And they said unto them, The LORD look upon you, and judge; because ye have made our savour † to be abhorred in the eyes of Pharaoh, and in the eyes of his servants, to put a sword in their hand to slay us.

22 And Moses returned unto the LORD, and said, Lord, wherefore hast thou so evil-entreated this people? why is it that thou hast sent me?

CHAP. VI.

1 God reneweth his promise by his name JEHOVAH.

THEN the LORD said unto Moses, Now shalt thou see what I will do to Pharaoh: for [a] with a strong hand shall he let them go, and with a strong hand [b] shall he drive them out of his land.

2 And God spake unto Moses, and said unto him, I am ‖ the LORD:

3 And I appeared unto Abraham, unto Isaac, and unto Jacob by the name of [c] God Almighty, but by my name [d] JEHOVAH was I not known to them.

4 [e] And I have also established my covenant with them, [f] to give them the land of Canaan, the land of their pilgrimage, wherein they were strangers.

5 And [g] I have also heard the groaning of the children of Israel, whom the Egyptians keep in bondage: and I have remembered my covenant.

6 Wherefore say unto the children of Israel, [h] I am the LORD, and [i] I will bring you out from under the burdens of the Egyptians, and I will rid you out of their bondage, and I will [k] redeem you with a stretched-out arm, and with great judgments:

7 And I will [l] take you to me for a people, and [m] I will be to you a God: and ye shall know that I am the LORD your God, which bringeth you out [n] from under the burdens of the Egyptians.

8 And I will bring you in unto the land, concerning the which I did †[o] swear to give it to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob; and I will give it you for an heritage: I am the LORD.

9 ¶ And Moses spake so unto the children of Israel: [p] but they hearkened not unto Moses, for †anguish of spirit, and for cruel bondage.

10 And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

11 Go in, speak unto Pharaoh king of Egypt, that he let the children of Israel go out of his land.

12 And Moses spake before the LORD, saying, Behold, the children of Israel have [q] not hearkened unto me; how then shall Pharaoh hear me, [r] who am of uncircumcised lips?

13 And the LORD spake unto Moses, and unto Aaron, and gave them a charge unto the children of Israel, and unto Pharaoh king of Egypt, to bring the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt.

14 ¶ These be the heads of their fathers' houses: The sons of Reuben the first-born of Israel; Hanoch, and Pallu, Hezron, and Carmi: these be the families of Reuben.

15 [t] And the sons of Simeon; Jemuel, and Jamin, and Ohad, and Jachin, and Zohar, and Shaul the son of a Canaanitish woman: these are the families of Simeon.

16 ¶ And these are the names of [u] the sons of Levi, according to their generations; Gershon, and Kohath, and Merari. And the years of the life of Levi were an hundred thirty and seven years.

17 [x] The sons of Gershon; Libni, and Shimi, according to their families.

18 And [y] the sons of Kohath; Amram, and Izhar, and Hebron, and Uzziel: and the years of the life of Kohath were an hundred thirty and three years.

19 And [z] the sons of Merari; Mahali and Mushi: these are the families of Levi, according to their generations.

20 And [a] Amram took him Jochebed his father's sister to wife; and she bare him Aaron and Moses. And the years of the life of Amram were an hundred and thirty and seven years.

21 ¶ And [b] the sons of Izhar; Korah, and Nepheg, and Zichri.

22 And the [c] sons of Uzziel; Mishael, and Elzaphan, and Zithri.

23 And Aaron took him Elisheba daughter of [d] Amminadab, sister of Naashon, to wife; and she bare him [e] Nadab and Abihu, Eleazar and Ithamar.

24 And the [f] sons of Korah; Assir, and Elkanah, and Abiasaph: these are the families of the Korhites.

25 And Eleazar, Aaron's son, took him one of the daughters of Putiel to wife; and [g] she bare him Phinehas: these are the heads of the fathers of the Levites, according to their families.

26 These are that Aaron and Moses, [h] to whom the LORD said, Bring out the children of Israel from the land of Egypt according to their [i] armies.

27 These are they which [k] spake to Pharaoh king of Egypt, [l] to bring out the children of Israel from Egypt: these are that Moses and Aaron.

28 ¶ And it came to pass on the day when the LORD spake unto Moses in the land of Egypt,

29 That the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, [m] I am the LORD: [n] speak thou unto Pharaoh king of Egypt all that I say unto thee.

30 And Moses said before the LORD, Behold, [o] I am of uncircumcised lips, and how shall Pharaoh hearken unto me?

and Aaron thy brother shall speak unto Pharaoh, that he send the children of Israel out of his land.

3 And [d]I will harden Pharaoh's heart, and [e]multiply my [f]signs and my wonders in the land of Egypt.

4 But Pharaoh shall not hearken unto you, [g]that I may lay my hand upon Egypt, and bring forth mine armies, and my people the children of Israel, out of the land of Egypt, [h]by great judgments.

5 And the Egyptians [i]shall know that I am the LORD, when I [k]stretch forth mine hand upon Egypt, and bring out the children of Israel from among them.

6 And Moses and Aaron [l]did as the LORD commanded them, so did they.

7 And Moses was [m]fourscore years old, and Aaron fourscore and three years old, when they spake unto Pharaoh.

8 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, and unto Aaron, saying,

9 When Pharaoh shall speak unto you, saying, [n]Shew a miracle for you: then thou shalt say unto Aaron, [o]Take thy rod, and cast it before Pharaoh, and it shall become a serpent.

10 ¶ And Moses and Aaron went in unto Pharaoh, and they did so [p]as the LORD had commanded: and Aaron cast down his rod before Pharaoh, and before his servants, and it [q]became a serpent.

11 Then Pharaoh also [r]called the wise men, and [s]the sorcerers: now the magicians of Egypt, they also [t]did in like manner with their enchantments.

12 For they cast down every man his rod, and they became serpents: but Aaron's rod swallowed up their rods.

13 And he hardened Pharaoh's heart that he hearkened not unto them; [u]as the LORD had said.

14 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, [x]Pharaoh's heart is hardened, he refuseth to let the people go.

15 Get thee unto Pharaoh in the morning; lo, he goeth out unto the water, and thou shalt stand by the river's brink against he come: and [y]the rod which was turned to a serpent shalt thou take in thine hand.

16 And thou shalt say unto him, [z]The LORD God of the Hebrews hath sent me unto thee, saying, Let my people go, [a]that they may serve me in the wilderness: and behold, hitherto thou wouldest not hear.

17 Thus saith the LORD, In this [b]thou shalt know that I am the LORD: behold, I will smite with the rod that is in my hand upon the waters which are in the river, and [c]they shall be turned [d]to blood.

18 And the fish that is in the river shall die, and the river shall stink: and the Egyptians shall [e]loathe to drink of the water of the river.

19 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, Say unto Aaron, Take thy rod, and [f]stretch out thine hand upon the waters of Egypt, upon their streams, upon their rivers, and upon their ponds, and upon all their †pools of water, that they may become blood: and that there may be blood throughout all the land of Egypt, both in vessels of wood, and in vessels of stone.

20 And Moses and Aaron did so, as the LORD commanded; and he [g]lifted up the rod and smote the waters that were in the river, in the sight of Pharaoh, and in the sight of his servants; and all the [h]waters that were in the river were turned into blood.

21 And the fish that was in the river died; and the river stank, and the Egyptians [i]could not drink of the water of the river; and there was blood throughout all the land of Egypt.

22 [k]And the magicians of Egypt did so with their enchantments: and Pharaoh's heart was hardened, neither did he hearken unto them; [l]as the LORD had said.

23 And Pharaoh turned and went into his house, neither did he set his heart to this also.

24 And all the Egyptians digged round about the river for water to drink; for they could not drink of the water of the river.

25 And seven days were fulfilled after that the LORD had smitten the river.

1 Frogs are sent. 25 Pharaoh inclineth to let the people go, 32 but yet is hardened.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, Go unto Pharaoh, and say unto him, Thus saith the LORD, Let my people go [a]that they may serve me.

2 And if thou [b]refuse to let them go, behold, I will smite all thy borders with [c]frogs:

3 And the river shall bring forth frogs abundantly, which shall go up and come into thine house, and into [d]thy bed-chamber, and upon thy bed, and into the house of thy servants, and upon thy people, and into thine ovens, and into thy ‖kneading-troughs:

4 And the frogs shall come up both on thee, and upon thy people, and upon all thy servants.

5 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, Say unto Aaron, [e]Stretch forth thine hand with thy rod over the streams, over the rivers, and over the ponds, and cause frogs to come up upon the land of Egypt.

6 And Aaron stretched out his hand over the waters of Egypt; and [f]the frogs came up, and covered the land of Egypt.

7 [g]And the magicians did so with their enchantments, and brought up frogs upon the land of Egypt.

8 ¶ Then Pharaoh called for Moses and Aaron, and said, [h]Entreat the LORD that he may take away the frogs from me, and from my people: and I will let the people go, that they may do sacrifice unto the LORD.

9 And Moses said unto Pharaoh, ‖ Glory over me: ‖ when shall I entreat for thee and for thy servants, and for thy people, † to destroy the frogs from thee, and thy houses, that they may remain in the river only?

10 And he said, ‖ To-morrow. And he said, Be it according to thy word: that thou mayest know that [i]there is none like unto the LORD our God.

11 And the frogs shall depart from thee, and from thy houses, and from thy servants, and from thy people; they shall remain in the river only.

12 ¶ And Moses and Aaron went out from Pharaoh: and Moses [k]cried unto the LORD, because of the frogs which he had brought against Pharaoh.

13 And the LORD did according to the word of Moses: and the frogs died out of the houses, out of the villages, and out of the fields.

14 And they gathered them together upon heaps: and the land stank.

15 But when Pharaoh saw that there was [l]respite, [m]he hardened his heart, and hearkened not unto them; as the LORD had said.

16 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Say unto Aaron, Stretch out thy rod, and smite the dust of the land, that it may become lice throughout all the land of Egypt.

17 And they did so; for Aaron stretched out his hand with his rod, and smote the dust of the earth, and [n]it became lice in man and in beast: all the dust of the land became lice throughout all the land of Egypt.

18 And [o]the magicians did so with their enchantments to bring forth lice, but they [p]could not: so there were lice upon man, and upon beast.

19 Then the magicians said unto Pharaoh, This is [q]the finger of God: and Pharaoh's [r]heart was hardened, and he hearkened not unto them; as the LORD had said.

20 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, [s]Rise up early in the morning, and stand before Pharaoh; (lo, he cometh forth to the water;) and say unto him, Thus saith the LORD, [t]Let my people go, that they may serve me:

21 Else, if thou wilt not let my people go, behold, I will send ‖ swarms of flies upon thee, and upon thy servants, and upon thy people, and into thy houses: and the houses of the Egyptians shall be full of swarms of flies, and also the ground whereon they are.

22 And [u]I will sever in that day the land of Goshen, in which my people dwell, that no swarms of flies shall be there; to the end thou mayest know that I am the LORD in the midst of the earth.

23 And I will put † a division between my people and thy people: ‖ to-morrow shall this sign be.

24 And the LORD did so: and [x]there came a grievous swarm of flies into the house of Pharaoh, and into his servants' houses, and into all the land of Egypt: the land was ‖ corrupted by reason of the swarm of flies.

25 ¶ And Pharaoh called for Moses, and for Aaron, and said, Go ye, sacrifice to your God in the land.

26 And Moses said, It is not meet so to do; for we shall sacrifice [y]the abomination of the Egyptians to the LORD our God: Lo, shall we sacrifice the abomination of the Egyptians before their eyes, and will they not stone us?

27 We will go [z]three days' journey into the wilderness, and sacrifice to the LORD our God, as [a]he shall command us.

28 And Pharaoh said, I will let you go, that ye may sacrifice to the LORD your God in the wilderness; only ye shall not go very far away: [b]entreat for me.

29 And Moses said, Behold, I go out from thee, and I will entreat the LORD that the swarms of flies may depart from Pharaoh, from his servants, and from his people, to-morrow: but let not Pharaoh [c]deal deceitfully any more, in not letting the people go to sacrifice to the LORD.

30 And Moses went out from Pharaoh, and [d]entreated the LORD:

31 And the LORD did according to the word of Moses; and he removed the swarms of flies from Pharaoh, from his servants, and from his people; there remained not one.

32 And Pharaoh [e]hardened his heart at this time also, neither would he let the people go.

THEN the LORD said unto Moses, [a]Go in unto Pharaoh, and tell him, Thus saith the LORD God of the Hebrews, Let my people go, that they may serve me.

2 For if thou [b]refuse to let them go, and wilt hold them still,

3 Behold, the [c]hand of the LORD is upon thy cattle which is in the field, upon the horses, upon the asses, upon the camels, upon the oxen, and upon the sheep: there shall be a very grievous murrain.

4 And [d]the LORD shall sever between the cattle of Israel, and the cattle of Egypt: and there shall nothing die of all that is the children's of Israel.

5 And the LORD appointed a set time, saying, To-morrow the LORD shall do this thing in the land.

6 And the LORD did that thing on the morrow, and [c]all the cattle of Egypt died: but of the cattle of the children of Israel died not one.

7 And Pharaoh sent, and behold, there was not one of the cattle of the Israelites dead. And [f]the heart of Pharaoh was hardened, and he did not let the people go.

8 ¶And the LORD said unto Moses and unto Aaron, Take to you handfuls of ashes of the furnace, and let Moses sprinkle it toward the heaven in the sight of Pharaoh.

9 And it shall become small dust in all the land of Egypt, and shall be [g]a boil breaking forth with blains upon man, and upon beast, throughout all the land of Egypt.

10 And they took ashes of the furnace, and stood before Pharaoh; and Moses sprinkled it up toward heaven: and it became [h]a boil breaking forth with blains upon man, and upon beast.

11 And the [i]magicians could not stand before Moses, because of the boils: for the boil was upon the magicians, and upon all the Egyptians.

12 And the LORD hardened the heart of Pharaoh, and he hearkened not unto them; [k]as the LORD had spoken unto Moses.

13 ¶And the LORD said unto Moses, [l]Rise up early in the morning, and stand before Pharaoh, and say unto him, Thus saith the LORD God of the Hebrews, Let my people go, that they may serve me.

14 For I will at this time send all my plagues upon thine heart, and upon thy servants, and upon thy people: [m]that thou mayest know that there is none like me in all the earth.

15 For now I will [n]stretch out my hand, that I may smite thee and thy people with pestilence; and thou shalt be cut off from the earth.

16 And in very deed for [o]this cause have I †raised thee up, for to shew in thee my power; and that my name may be declared throughout all the earth.

17 As yet exaltest thou thyself against my people, that thou wilt not let them go?

18 Behold, to-morrow about this time I will cause it to rain a very grievous hail, such as hath not been in Egypt since the foundation thereof even until now.

19 Send therefore now, and gather thy cattle, and all that thou hast in the field: for upon every man and beast which shall be found in the field, and shall not be brought home, the hail shall come down upon them, and they shall die.

20 He that feared the word of the LORD among the servants of Pharaoh made his servants and his cattle flee into the houses:

21 And he that †regarded not the word of the LORD left his servants and his cattle in the field.

22 ¶And the LORD said unto Moses, Stretch forth thine hand toward heaven, that there may be [p]hail in all the land of Egypt, upon man, and upon beast, and upon every herb of the field, throughout the land of Egypt.

23 And Moses stretched forth his rod toward heaven, and [q]the LORD sent thunder and hail, and the fire ran along upon the ground: and the LORD rained hail upon the land of Egypt.

24 So there was hail, and fire mingled with the hail, very grievous, such as there was none like it in all the land of Egypt since it became a nation.

25 And the hail smote throughout all the land of Egypt all that was in the field, both man and beast, and the hail [r]smote every herb of the field and brake every tree of the field.

26 [s]Only in the land of Goshen, where the children of Israel were, was there no hail.

27 ¶And Pharaoh sent and called for Moses and Aaron, and said unto them, [t]I have sinned this time: [u]the LORD is righteous, and I and my people are wicked.

28 [x]Entreat the LORD (for it is enough) that there be no more† mighty thunderings and hail; and I will let you go, and ye shall stay no longer.

29 And Moses said unto him, As soon as I am gone out of the city, I will [y]spread abroad my hands unto the LORD; and the thunder shall cease, neither shall there be any more hail; that thou mayest know how that the [z]earth is the LORD's.

30 But as for thee and thy servants, [a]I know that ye will not yet fear the LORD God.

31 And the flax and the barley was smitten: [b]for the barley was in the ear, and the flax was bolled.

32 But the wheat and the rye were not smitten: for they were †not grown up.

33 And Moses went out of the city from Pharaoh, and [c]spread abroad his hands unto the LORD: and the thunders and hail ceased, and the rain was not poured upon the earth.

34 And when Pharaoh saw that the rain and the hail and the thunders were ceased, he sinned yet more, and hardened his heart, he and his servants.

35 And [d]the heart of Pharaoh was hardened, neither would he let the children of Israel go; as the LORD had spoken †by Moses.

3 And Moses and Aaron came in unto Pharaoh, and said unto him, Thus saith the LORD God of the Hebrews, How long wilt thou refuse to [d]humble thyself before me? Let my people go, that they may serve me.

4 Else, if thou refuse to let my people go, behold, to-morrow will I bring the [e]locusts into thy coast:

5 And they shall cover the †face of the earth, that one cannot be able to see the earth: and [f]they shall eat the residue of that which is escaped, which remaineth unto you from the hail, and shall eat every tree which groweth for you out of the field:

6 And they [g]shall fill thy houses, and the houses of all thy servants, and the houses of all the Egyptians; which neither thy fathers, nor thy fathers' fathers have seen, since the day that they were upon the earth unto this day. And he turned himself, and went out from Pharaoh.

7 And Pharaoh's servants said unto him, How long shall this man be [h]a snare unto us? Let the men go, that they may serve the LORD their God: Knowest thou not yet that Egypt is destroyed?

8 And Moses and Aaron were brought again unto Pharaoh: and he said unto them, Go, serve the LORD your God: but †who are they that shall go?

9 And Moses said, We will go with our young and with our old, with our sons and with our daughters, with our flocks and with our herds will we go: for [i]we must hold a feast unto the LORD.

10 And he said unto them, Let the LORD be so with you, as I will let you go, and your little ones: look to it; for evil is before you.

11 Not so: go now ye that are men, and serve the LORD; for that ye did desire. And they were driven out from Pharaoh's presence.

12 ¶And the LORD said unto Moses, [k]Stretch out thine hand over the land of Egypt for the locusts, that they may come up upon the land of Egypt, and [l]eat every herb of the land, even all that the hail hath left.

13 And Moses stretched forth his rod over the land of Egypt, and the LORD brought an east wind upon the land all that day, and all that night: and when it was morning, the east wind brought the locusts.

14 And [m]the locusts went up over all the land of Egypt, and rested in all the coasts of Egypt: very grievous were they; [n]before them there were no such locusts as they, neither after them shall be such.

15 For they [o]covered the face of the whole earth, so that the land was darkened; and they [p]did eat every herb of the land, and all the fruit of the trees which the hail had left: and there remained not any green thing in the trees, or in the herbs of the field, through all the land of Egypt.

16 ¶Then Pharaoh †called for Moses and Aaron in haste; and he said, [q]I have sinned against the LORD your God, and against you.

17 Now therefore forgive, I pray thee, my sin only this once, and [r]entreat the LORD your God that he may take away from me this death only.

18 And he [s]went out from Pharaoh, and entreated the LORD.

19 And the LORD turned a mighty strong west wind which took away the locusts, and †cast them [t]into the Red sea: there remained not one locust in all the coasts of Egypt.

20 But the LORD [u]hardened Pharaoh's heart, so that he would not let the children of Israel go

21 ¶And the LORD said unto Moses, [x]Stretch out thine hand toward heaven, that there may be darkness over the land of Egypt, †even darkness which may be felt.

22 And Moses stretched forth his hand toward heaven: and there was a [y]thick darkness in all the land of Egypt three days:

23 They saw not one another, neither rose any from his place for three days: [z]but all the children of Israel had light in their dwellings.

24 ¶And Pharaoh called unto Moses, and [a]said, Go ye, serve the LORD: only let your flocks and your herds be stayed: let your [b]little ones also go with you.

25 And Moses said, Thou must give †us also sacrifices, and burnt-offerings, that we may sacrifice unto the LORD our God.

26 Our cattle also shall go with us; there shall not an hoof be left behind; for thereof must we take to serve the LORD our God; and we know not with what we must serve the LORD, until we come thither.

27 ¶But the LORD [c]hardened Pharaoh's heart, and he would not let them go.

28 And Pharaoh said unto him, Get thee from me, take heed to thyself, see my face no more: for in that day thou seest my face, thou shalt die

1 God's message to the Israelites to borrow jewels of their neighbours.
4 Moses threateneth Pharaoh with the death of the first-born.

AND the LORD said unto Moses, Yet will I bring one plague more upon Pharaoh, and upon Egypt; afterwards he will let you go hence: [a]when he shall let you go, he shall surely thrust you out hence altogether.

2 Speak now in the ears of the people, and let every man borrow of his neighbour, and every woman of her neighbour, [b]jewels of silver, and jewels of gold.

3 [c]And the LORD gave the people favour in the sight of the Egyptians. Moreover, the man [d]Moses was very great in the land of Egypt, in the sight of Pharaoh's servants, and in the sight of the people.

4 And Moses said, Thus saith the LORD, [e]About midnight will I go out into the midst of Egypt:

5 And [f]all the first-born in the land of Egypt shall die, from the first-born of Pharaoh that sitteth upon his throne, even unto the first-born of the maid-servant that is behind the mill; and all the first-born of beasts.

6 [g]And there shall be a great cry throughout all the land of Egypt, such as there was none like it, nor shall be like it any more.

7 [h]But against any of the children of Israel [i]shall not a dog move his tongue, against man or beast: that ye may know how that the LORD doth put a difference between the Egyptians and Israel.

8 And [k]all these thy servants shall come down unto me, and bow down themselves unto me, saying, Get thee out, and all the people †that follow thee; and after that I will go out. And he went out from Pharaoh in †a great anger.

9 And the LORD said unto Moses, [l]Pharaoh shall not hearken unto you; that [m]my wonders may be multiplied in the land of Egypt.

10 And Moses and Aaron did all these wonders before Pharaoh; [n]and the LORD hardened Pharaoh's heart, so that he would not let the children of Israel go out of his land.

CHAP. XII.

1 The beginning of the year is changed. 3 The passover is instituted. 29 The first-born are slain. 31 The Israelites are driven out of the land. 43 The ordinance of the passover.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses and Aaron in the land of Egypt, saying,

2 [a]This month shall be unto you the beginning of months: it shall be the first month of the year to you.

3 ¶ Speak ye unto all the congregation of Israel, saying, In the tenth day of this month they shall take to them every man a ‖lamb according to the house of their fathers, a lamb for an house:

4 And if the household be too little for the lamb, let him and his neighbour next unto his house take it according to the number of the souls: every man according to his eating shall make your count for the lamb.

5 Your lamb shall be [b]without blemish, a male †of the first year: ye shall take it out from the sheep or from the goats:

6 And ye shall keep it up until the [c]fourteenth day of the same month: and the whole assembly of the congregation of Israel shall kill it †in the evening.

7 And they shall take of the blood, and strike it on the two side-posts, and on the upper door-post of the houses, wherein they shall eat it.

8 And they shall eat the flesh in that night, roast with fire, and [d]unleavened bread; and with bitter herbs they shall eat it.

9 Eat not of it raw, nor sodden at all with water, but [e]roast with fire; his head with his legs, and with the purtenance thereof.

10 [f]And ye shall let nothing of it remain until the morning: and that which remaineth of it until the morning ye shall burn with fire.

11 ¶ And thus shall ye eat it; with your loins girded, your shoes on your feet, and your staff in your hand: and ye shall eat it in haste; [g]it is the LORD'S passover.

12 For I [h]will pass through the land of Egypt this night, and will smite all the first-born in the land of Egypt, both man and beast: and [i]against all the ‖gods of Egypt I will execute judgment: [k]I am the LORD.

13 And the blood shall be to you for a token upon the houses where ye are: and when I see the blood, I will pass over you, and the plague shall not be upon you †to destroy you, when I smite the land of Egypt.

14 And this day shall be unto you [l]for a memorial; and ye shall keep it a [m]feast to the LORD throughout your generations: ye shall keep it a feast [n]by an ordinance for ever.

15 [o]Seven days shall ye eat unleavened bread; even the first day ye shall put away leaven out of your houses: for whosoever eateth leavened bread, from the first day until the seventh day, [p]that soul shall be cut off from Israel.

16 And in the first day there shall be [q]an holy convocation, and in the seventh day there shall be an holy convocation to you: no manner of work shall be done in them, save that which every †man must eat, that only may be done of you.

†Heb. soul.

17 And ye shall observe the feast of unleavened bread; for [r]in this self-same day have I brought your armies out of the land of Egypt; therefore shall ye observe this day in your generations by an ordinance for ever.

18 ¶ [s]In the first month, on the fourteenth day of the month at even, ye shall eat unleavened bread, until the one and twentieth day of the month at even.

19 [t]Seven days shall there be no leaven found in your houses: for whosoever eateth that which is leavened, [u]even that soul shall be cut off from the congregation of Israel, whether he be a stranger, or born in the land.

20 Ye shall eat nothing leavened: in all your habitations shall ye eat unleavened bread.

21 ¶ Then Moses called for all the elders of Israel, and said unto them, [x]Draw out, and take you a ‖ lamb, according to your families, and kill the passover.

22 [y]And ye shall take a bunch of hyssop, and dip it in the blood that is in the basin, and [z]strike the lintel and the two side-posts with the blood that is in the basin: and none of you shall go out at the door of his house until the morning.

23 [a]For the LORD will pass through to smite the Egyptians; and when he seeth the blood upon the lintel, and on the two side-posts, the LORD will pass over the door, and [b]will not suffer [c]the destroyer to come in unto your houses to smite you.

24 And ye shall observe this thing for an ordinance to thee and to thy sons for ever.

25 And it shall come to pass, when ye be come to the land which the LORD will give you, [d]according as he hath promised, that ye shall keep this service.

26 [e]And it shall come to pass, when your children shall say unto you, What mean ye by this service?

27 That ye shall say, [f]It is the sacrifice of the LORD'S passover, who passed over the houses of the children of Israel in Egypt, when he smote the Egyptians, and delivered our houses. And the people [g]bowed the head and worshipped.

28 And the children of Israel went away, and [h]did as the LORD had commanded Moses and Aaron, so did they.

29 ¶ [i]And it came to pass, that at midnight [k]the LORD smote all the first-born in the land of Egypt, [l]from the first-born of Pharaoh that sat on his throne, unto the first-born of the captive that was in the †dungeon; and all the first-born of cattle.

30 And Pharaoh rose up in the night, he, and all his servants, and all the Egyptians; and there was a [m]great cry in Egypt: for there was not a house where there was not one dead.

31 ¶ And [n]he called for Moses and Aaron by night, and said, Rise up, and get you forth from among my people, [o]both ye and the children of Israel: and go, serve the LORD, as ye have said.

32 [p]Also take your flocks and your herds, as ye have said, and be gone: and [q]bless me also.

33 [r]And the Egyptians were urgent upon the people, that they might send them out of the land in haste; for they said, [s]We be all dead men.

34 And the people took their dough before it was leavened, their ‖ kneading troughs being bound up in their clothes upon their shoulders.

35 And the children of Israel did according to the word of Moses: and they borrowed of the Egyptians [t]jewels of silver, and jewels of gold, and raiment.

36 [u]And the LORD gave the people favour in the sight of the Egyptians, so that they lent unto them such things as they required: and [x]they spoiled the Egyptians.

37 ¶ And [y]the children of Israel journeyed from [z]Rameses to Succoth, about [a]six hundred thousand on foot that were men, beside children.

38 And †a mixed multitude went up also with them; and flocks, and herds, even very much cattle.

39 And they baked unleavened cakes of the dough which they brought forth out of Egypt, for it was not leavened: because [b]they were thrust out of Egypt, and could not tarry, neither had they prepared for themselves any victual.

40 ¶ Now the sojourning of the children of Israel who dwelt in Egypt, was [c]four hundred and thirty years.

41 And it came to pass, at the end of the four hundred and thirty years, even the self-same day it came to pass, that all [d]the hosts of the LORD went out from the land of Egypt.

42 It is †[e]a night to be much observed unto the LORD, for bringing them out from the land of Egypt: this is that night of the LORD to be observed of all the children of Israel in their generations.

43 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses and Aaron, This is [f]the ordinance of the passover: there shall no stranger eat thereof:
